THE PRESERVES.—There is a general complaint among business men, and co-laborers of the do-been and inaction of trade. Farmers are improving the glorious sunshine, and devoting their attention to the crops, and as a consequence, business men feel the despondency and stagnation in trade which produces it. It cannot last forever. Wheat is being secured in many sections of the county, and we hear of but few complaints. On Sandy soil the wheat has been rusted, but the clay and gravel soils produce finely. The hay crop is a very large one, and is mostly secured. Corn, potatoes, &c., look well and will more than meet the most sanguine expectations of the farmer. Wool begins to move more freely and the price remains firm at 35a36 cents. We were wrong in our last issue in regard to L. D. Watkin's large clip; it was bought by Wm. M. Brown on Monday last, at the market price. The amount purchased this season is as follows:

Coon & Maxey,	20,000
J. S. Reynolds,	10,000
Anthony Coon,	25,000
Wm. M. Brown,	30,000

—J. B. Halstead of Rome, Mich. has brought up a family of 16 children, and seen them all settled in life. The curious part of the business is that not one of them was his; but all homeless orphans taken and cared for as if they were his own.

HO! FOR THE WEST.—A rare chance to purchase Groceries cheap, during the next sixty days, may be found at J. H. Miller's. He is preparing to go west and offers goods very cheap for cash or ready-pay.

REVIVAL.—Services at the Presbyterian church will be held, until further notice, at the Baptist church, at 2½ P. M. Sabbath School at 3½ P. M.

☞ The old Glasgow Meat Market is again supplying its friends with choice beef, mutton, veal, &c. They also have a large supply of ice for sale.

For the Enterprise.

MR. EDITOR.—In the last issue of the Enterprise there appears an article which to my mind, appears to be written in the interest of a political party. Now, Mr. Editor, this party is a jewel,* but the appeal made through your paper, to the Young Men, to vote the Democratic ticket is not exactly fair; not exactly honest; not exactly in accordance with your known antecedents politically speaking; still as the article appears editorially, it must be considered as embodying your sentiments upon the subject discussed. You will undoubtedly say that no criticism you in the country is so indulgent upon the liberty of speech and the press, a complaint universally made by the party in whose interests you have spoken; though our NEUTRAL village paper whatever their interests whether opinions or actions, whether loyal or disloyal, have in anywhere been questioned. There is no law in this country to suppress the freedom of speech, but on the other hand, our laws do let the people in a fair discussion of all questions pertaining to their interests. Our laws implore, they imply that every legitimate contract or agreement entered into between parties, shall be honestly carried into effect. It is this last proposition to which I desired to call your attention, without replying to anything contained in the political article referred to. For one, I shall not object to your appealing to the young men of the country to vote for the republican nomination of boards, sheriffs or any other principle of the Democratic party, when you fairly exhaustive your call from carrying out the agreement you made with the people to publish a neutral paper. We shall not object to your holding up the name of Pre-Adam Seymour Valley, nominee for Governor of Ohio, for your President, nor to object to your selling under false colors. Now, Mr. Editor, come out equitable; be honest; be fair; give us a local paper with out politics, give us a political paper outside of it, if either one I do will be better appreciated; that you are not so short in money matters. Women can do out your bread and butter honestly.

Yours Truly, RESPONDENT.

The Wickedest Man in New York.

The New York Papers say that Mr. Dayer has been studying underground life in New York in some purpose. Under the head of "The Shady side of Metropolitan Life" he begins a series of articles in PARLOR'S MAGAZINE, the first of which, entitled "The Wickedest Man in New York," is singularly interesting. The individual on whom Mr. Dayer shows this enlightening distinction boys a low dance house in Water street.

This fact would not of itself justify Mr. Dayer's epithet, but there are peculiarities connected with it, which make good the odious distinction. The man is worth between seventy and one hundred thousand dollars, so that the need of money cannot be pleaded in his behalf, nor is such a plea would be under any circumstances. Moreover, he is an educated man, was formerly a school teacher, and I repeated so once have been a minister. He has three brothers who are clergymen. By his education, connections and independent pecuniary position he would seem removed from every inducement to follow his infamous business.

If it is strange that such a man should keep a dance house, his method of keeping it is still more inexplicable. He reads the Bible to his dance-house girls, and his favorite papers are the New York Independent and Observer. He takes the Little Wanderer's Friend, and is much interested in mission work. Still more astonishing are his relations with his children, whom he loves vacantly—he has a little five year old boy of whom he is especially proud.

Into the dance house of this anomalous monster, Mr. Dyer, with two or three companions, descended, and found thirteen comely girls in the saloon, three musicians in the recesses, and seven customers paying attention to an equal number of ladies dressed gyrees. The "wickedest man" was in his glory, and called the girls to do their best. Soon he sent up for his prodigy of a boy, unseen his father took up and said: "Now, gentlemen, you are writers, philosophers and preachers; but I'll show you that my baby knows as much as any of you. He's hell on reading, writing, praying and fighting."

Thereupon he catechised the young child in history, geography, etc., with astonishing results, afterwards calling on him successively, for a song, a "breakdown" and a prayer, all of which were given with the utmost promptitude. The visitors were invited to join in the dance, but refused, when he asked them to give a song, in which the girls took part, singing "There is Rest for the Weary" with great unction. Having got them for Mr. Dayer, afterwards proposed a prayer, but the wickedest man replied:

"Well, my gentlemen, I can go that. You know that every man must have regard to his profession and the opinion of his neighbors. What will my Observer and Independent say if I pray? No, sir, there I must stop; camp-meeting hymns I am already looked upon in the neighborhood as being rather loose and unsound, and if a boy of all that, I should let you hold a prayer-meeting here I should lose what little character I've got left. What do—is to be—pray? No, sir, never!"

"Well, John," suggested Mr. Arnold, "I am going to pray here anyhow. If I don't pray, God I'll pray well. You shan't hear the prayer, at any rate."

"Well, Arnold, mind now, if you pray I won't hear you; mind that. I don't know anything about it. I won't hear you."

Mr. Arnold then invited the girls to join in prayer with him, which they did, some of them kneeling on the floor, some on the sofa, and others leaning their heads upon their hands, while Allen passed through the window of the parlor, down upon the adjacent roofs.

Mr. Arnold's heart was full, too full for utterance, but his fervent and unlearned his tongue, and he poured out a simple, direct and heartfelt prayer which told powerfully upon the hearers. Many of the girls wept, nothing in their feet, and several of them crowded around Mr. Arnold, and begged him in the name of God to take them from that place. They would work their hands off if honest work would be got for them; they would submit to any hardship, if they could but be rescued from the life of sin, shame and misery.

"Take them from that place! Where would he take them? In all this City there is not a Christian home that would open its door to a Repentant female sinner except to turn her out of it."

On calling upon Mr. Arnold the next day, we found his room at the Mission, the room was brought upon the table, as though it never. Looking up at us with tearing eyes he exclaimed—

"Sir, what is to be done about this?" "Why, what?" asked.

"These poor girls," he replied, "have been thinking and praying, and praying and thinking once it all night, but I can see no light. Sir, (pointing his head between his hands) I shall go mad."

Poor, unsophisticated babe of grace, he does not know, nor would he have the pluck to acknowledge that his company is the terrible fact that there is not christianity enough on the Island of Manhattan, or elsewhere, to meet the case.

We arraign no one, nor do we assail any sect, for permitting this state of things to exist in a Christian land. It may be in accordance with the principles of Christianity, as practiced in this age and country, and also in harmony with the eternal sweep and fitness of things, that, practically speaking, a fallen girl should have no opportunity for reformation, but should be sent to hell by the shortest route. For the route is short. Five years is the average duration of the outcast life, reckoning from the hour she enters upon her career of shame—thirty five years, so that every year, one-fifth of these creatures go down to their graves. It requires six fresh girls a day from the Sabbath Schools and virtuous homes of the land, to feed the licentious maw of this metropolis of the Western world.

ARCTIC SODA.—Our enterprising druggist, Messrs. VanDuyn, Lynch & Co., have purchased one of these beautiful Arctic Soda Fountains so highly prized in the eastern cities. It cost about $500; is an ornament to their store, and will soon become a favorite with those who appreciate a cool, healthy beverage at five cents a glass. Their show-windows are completely loaded with the choicest brown-plants, most of which are in bloom, presenting a splendid picture of nature. Perhaps at no season in the year will this large collection of plants afford so rich a treat, as at present. Go and get some Arctic and see nature in bloom.

☞ Dr. Greenough of Toledo, will return to Manchester next week. His patients will find him at the Manchester Hotel from Tuesday noon the 14th until Saturday noon July 18th. To all the afflicted the Dr. extends a cordial invitation to call and see him, with or without money, for consultations are rare to all, and the cases he places under treatment he invariably cures permanently, so he is prepared to prove by reference and otherwise, to the most sceptical. This is no humbug, and the afflicted suffering from scrofula, piles, rheumatism, neuralgia, disease of the throat, lungs, liver, kidneys or the eyes, &c., should not fail to call and consult with the Dr. Remember the days—Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, 15, 16, 17 and 18th of July.

Ice Cream Festival.—The Good Templars will hold an Ice Cream Festival at their hall, Friday evening, July 17th. The public are invited to attend.

Sudden Death.—Wm. Eyre, a gentleman, employed by J. R. Kibby of Freedom, dropped dead while spreading hay in the field Tuesday morning last. Mr. Kibby left him at work about ten o'clock and on going to dinner at noon, on answering the call Mr. K., repaired to field and found him dead. He leaves a wife and sister, who reside in Freedom. A German woman, residing in the town of Bridgewater, was effected by the heat while working in the field yesterday, and died. A farmer near Chelsea, while driving a mowing machine yesterday afternoon, fell from his seat dead.

Red Hot.—The excessive hot weather during the past ten days, has put the last golden touches upon the wheat and has had even a more happy effect upon the corn. Harvest help receive from $3.50 to $5, per day, but find it almost impossible to endure the heat, which varies from 90 to 110 degrees. Many are obliged to quit work at 10 A. M. and keep cool until 4 P. M.

Wool.—From all we can learn in regard to our wool market, we condense the following facts: Seventy thousand pounds have been shipped at this station, 30,000 pounds remain in the hands of buyers, and about 100,000 pound with the farmers. The price holds firm at 35a36 cents.

☞ During this hot weather it would seem rational that men would endeavor to keep cool. Yet the heat and fever of intemperance and drunkenness have seemed to be raging in an extreme degree. Almost daily men have been seen on our streets intoxicated, and the nights are becoming wholly unrested for quiet sleep, as drunken revelry is commenced about the usual hour of retiring to rest, and kept up with singing, hallooing and other boisterous demonstrations of hilarity until two or three o'clock in the morning. Dining after ten o'clock p. m., does not add to the quiet of our village, nor to the health or moral condition of its inhabitants. Ladies who after that hour become so excited as to require ice cream or lemonade, should send for the doctor. We hope fathers, mothers and guardians will not permit those in their charge to indulge in such questionable luxuries, at such unreasonable hours and with unprincipled associates. And we further hope the innate sense of propriety may lead all others to reform, so that some but thoughtless may give such evidence of depravity.—[Tecumseh Record.

Whew! What an idea! How are you Ingins? You must drink less firewater to the forty rods, simmer down and don't put any lemon in your ale; eat your cream and don't send for the doctor if you are crazed. This is the first local opinion on "record" to convince rational beings that ice cream and lemonade are genuine evidence of abandoned depravity. Thermometer indicates 108, shady. It's too much for Tecumseh (Record.) but if we should receive a barrel of lemonade and four gallons of ice cream, we would bid defiance to old Sabadom and wouldn't gas much excited about the "doctor" before ten o'clock. This is a different place. Of course it is—we've got a Brewery.

☞ Peterson for August is on hand completely filled with engravings, fashion plates, patterns in crochet, children's dress the new glove, music, and the usual amount of choice reading matter. Peterson is bound to progress with the age. The July number commenced a new volume. Address Chas. J. Peterson, Philadelphia.

Great Rush.—One would naturally think Coon & Morey were bound for the West or some Foreign Climate, by the way they are selling Groceries and Tobacco. But such is not the case. They will remain in Manchester, and continue to sell goods in their line Cheaper than any house this side of New York City, "for ready pay. They sell sugars by the ton, teas chest after chest, coffee barrel after barrel and sack after sack; also other goods in quantities to astonish everybody. Their trade is daily increasing, and they are bound to keep their hall rolling. They will soon have a wagon ready to deliver goods to their village customers, free of charge. They are constantly receiving goods in large quantities, direct from New York, bought at the lowest cash figures, and they will be sold the same. One call will satisfy all that they can save money by buying their Groceries of Coon & Morey.

To Whom it May Concern.

Last week we received and published a communication from some kind friend, who signed himself "Republican. He says:

> The appeal through your paper to young men, is not fair play, honest or in accordance with your known antecedents, politically speaking.
> As to the honesty of our purpose, no person but Republicans, that is sequaintied with us politically can doubt. Perhaps all our readers are not acquainted with our antecedents, therefore we do not hesitate to say that we appeared on this earth as a Democrat, politically speaking, at Salina, N. Y., and naturally descended (POLITICALLY) on the genuine "old whig line" until our conductor changed the switch and we found ourselves sailing over the broad plains of the republican line. Like thousands of others, we paid fare for years and never rode smoothly over this line. Our chief engineer died, and by some very bad management the train was run into a collision of defeated democratic politicians and political hooks on the train thrown off the track, passengers slightly wounded and being to reach Washington by the New York Central.
>
> We think republican must have read our article through, as we have every one green goggles. We did not advise young men to vote the democratic ticket, but for their honors and pocketbooks." If that is democratic, we are not so. Democrat. Politicians at Washington are death to young men's pocketbooks, and ruinous to your manly honor. We supposed it was a good time to advise young men to protest these three earthly blessings, but have concluded the people are not prepared to make the radical change within short notice at 110 in the shade.
>
> "We know there is no law in this country to suppress freedom of speech. That is the reason why we expose our opinion in plain English. The Interprise is free to all who wish a fair debate of national or other interesting topics.
>
> In regard to our bargain or contract to publish a neutral paper, with nothing therein, we refer Republican to "come how," in number one, which said:
> "The neutral flag is a beautiful one to all under it, but it only represents its true import. Very queer ideas are entertained by a portion of the public in regard to the rights and duties of editors and the relationship subsisting between the editor and his subscribers. Some people seem to think that a press is free for me to say what I please of others—provided, always, that nobody shall have the liberty to say anything against me. Nearly every man thinks himself capable of giving the best possible advice to an editor, and writes him down as a very long eared editor, if he does not. Editors forget that they are not other people's views, or opinions than those established by himself. In this hypocritical age, it is not safe to be a politician, but a statesman and please every one who expresses his little right of the world, and if an editor is not qualified for him to write for the press—and desire of course, claims that he only knows how to make the first class and that some one will attend and instruct it published. The practice of withholding intelligence from papers for a mere difference of opinion between the editor and subscriber upon accidental questions is very pitiful. It is, to say over, purely American. In no other country is it so frequently resorted to as in this; and it is a sorry method of manifesting displeasure or disgust. With parents long established, and liberally supported, these individual instances of private prescription can have but little effect. But in respect to papers employing slender patronage, and struggling for existence, they settle at a fatal blow of freedom of thought and discussion.
>
> In conclusion, our friend Republican opened his battery and fired a broadside at the Enterprise, viz:
>
> "Now, Mr. Editor, come out square and be honest, be fair, and give us a local newspaper without politics, or give us a political paper outspoken and in editor case you will be better satisfied than you will undertake to carry double. We want you to put your hand back better locally."
>
> Square-toed and honestly signifies in our friend's opinion, that we should place some combination at the head of our paper and support the same. We will hold both tickets next week, but cannot consent to support either without stamps. To carry double would require 50 stamps. If Republican is sincere, and wants us to obtain our bread and butter honestly, we propose he send us to congress this fall, and if we cannot obtain it honestly at Washington, we will return and practice law.
>
> We cannot conscientiously close this subject without asking our friend to answer just one question, viz:
>
> "Has an individual who loaned the government greenbacks in 1864 and '65 any greater claim upon it than the widow or orphan who gave the country a husband or a father?"

☞ The Rev. Mr. Seofield a member of the general, acted as chaplain to a New York regiment during the war—when about to administer the rite of baptism to some men who had taken the oath of allegiance, and stated that their intention of becoming Baptists, he was asked by an Irish soldier, whose duty it was to supply the baptismal pool with water, if he had not better turn the water hot, as the day was very cold.

"Hot water! exclaimed the complaint, angrily, and swore for lowness. Do you think I'm about to scald hogs?"

☞ Rev. Mr. Smith, a Methodist minister of Ionia, Michigan, died after a few days illness, having persuaded on Sunday what he announced as his last sermon, and preached a most eloquent farewell sermon. He was taken sick that night and died on Tuesday.

☞ A merchant of Helena, Montana started for home in New England after a brief stay of a few weeks, and his partner sold him at the Canadian line, of fashion, to bring her along, too. Whether sorely or jokingly directed upon his return with a wife of his own, and a candidate for matrimony with his partner.

☞ A. C. Britton, formerly from Tecumseh, writes from Springfield, Ill., June 28th, that in April he took charge of a government train leaving Fort Hays, Kansas, for Denver City. The detachment consisted of twenty men, twelve of whom were from Michigan. The 14th of May they were attacked by Indians and their mules all stampeded. Two Michigan men were carried off—Charles Hicks and Wm. Higer—while several others were wounded. A. J. Hayden had several holes shot through his clothes, and C. Fields had his arm cut off, and E. Wilson had his leg broken. The detachment in this crippled condition had to walk back to Fort Hays, 225 miles.

A Card.—Mrs. Woodruff takes this opportunity to inform those suffering from the effects of the many chronic diseases, that she has receipts and medicines that will afford them relief. Good references from persons who have received benefit from these medicines will be furnished upon application at her millinery rooms, in Goodyear's Block, Manchester.
