HOMECOMING GAME

MSU Defense set for Griese

DRAKE GARRETT

In five games this season, the Michigan State secondary has been hit for 57 completed passes, for 741 yards, and four touchdowns.

Saturday, they face what may be the biggest test of the year, the lightning fast arm of Purdue quarterback, Bob Griese.

George Webster, defensive rover and co-captain of the Spartans, rates Griese as one of the top quarterbacks in the country. "He's one of the best I've seen anywhere," said the All-American senior.

"Of course, any passer is good if you give him time," Webster insisted. He animosity to Griese intended.

"We won't make any drastic changes in our defense," Webster insisted. He said they would play their usual game, despite the great passing threat.

Drake Garrett, a newcomer to the defense who last week won the game ball for his two game-saving interceptions, saw a possible change in his duties.

"If anything, we will probably be playing looser as a whole," said the junior safety. This would be to shut off the threat of the long ball, which has hurt the Spartans three times already this season.

Garrett also believes Griese will be tough, although he has not played defense against him before. "He's an experienced, three year player," Garrett said, "and I believe he is one of the better quarterbacks."

Jess Phillips, defensive halfback, sees a change for his coverage in Saturday's game. "We'll play them a little tighter than in the past," Phillips said.

"We want to stop the short pass," Phillips explained, "and we will be using basically a man to man coverage."

"We will utilize our main defenses," Phillips emphasized, insisting that nothing drastically new was being devised to stop the Boilermakers.

"I've played against quite a few good quarterbacks," Phillips said. "On a given day, any one quarterback can be good."

As for receivers, the backs were in agreement as to who was the best they had ever faced.

Webster named Bob Hadrick, who played end for the Boilermakers last season, Jack Clancy of Michigan, and John Wright of Illinois.

Garrett named Clancy as one of the best, and Phillips nominated Wright.

Block 'S' in trouble; needs more students

Organized cheering and card waving may become extinct at Michigan State if several conflicts are not resolved soon.

Block "S", the synchronized card section at football games, has only half the number of students it needs to operate. Added to this, Block "S" is faced with a serious seating problem at the stadium.

"We have only 450 students in the group," said Hal Salisbury, director of Block "S". "We need 1,008 members in order to perform perfectly."

Salisbury adds that 80 per cent of the present membership are women.

Don Martin, director of Spartan Spirit, said Block "S" had a table set up at registration, but it was not effective. Anticipating a larger turnout, not much of a campaign was mounted to inform new students about the group.

Both leaders also complained that the end-zone seating arrangement is not desirable.

"We would like to see," Salisbury said, "two or three thousand students in the block section situated on about the 40 yard line. Seats on the 40-50 yard line would insure a large turnout for the group."

Other schools employ large blocks in this seating arrangement.

"Illinois," said Martin, "used a double block system, one located on each side of the field."

Problems became apparent at the MSU-Michigan game when only 380 seats were reserved for the 450 Block "S" students.

Ticket Manager William Beardsley, defended the action. "We held the tickets back until Thursday," he said. "When we received no word from them (Block "S") as to numbers, I had to guess. My estimate was 400 seats."

Beardsley said the seating designation is not permanent and that he "would hold back 1,200 tickets if they were needed."

When asked about a possible relocation of the Block "S" for the next season, Beardsley said, "It may be possible. However," he said, "I believe that if the group sat on the side rather than in the end-zone, a large number of people would not be able to see the displays. Those people sitting on the same side just could not get a good view."

Salisbury insists his organization tried to contact the ticket manager but could not get through.

Salisbury said the small group and cramped seating space made the half-time stunts of complicated card flashing impossible.

About the present Block "S", Beardsley said "I like to see it, but I would rather see no block at all than to have one here that is poorly done."

Goovert small, but stubborn

By LARRY WERNER
State News Sports Editor

Ron Goovert has a chip on his shoulder.

People keep telling the former MSU All-American linebacker that he is too small to be a great football player, and he stubbornly tries to prove the sceptics wrong.

Goovert came to Michigan State as a 180 pound freshman, not unusually large for a Big Ten player. But he proceeded to become an All-American on the finest defensive team in MSU history, at 205 pounds.

After earning a tryout with the Houston Oilers, of the American Football League, the Ferndale native was dropped—for lack of poundage.

Oakland was the next team to show interest.

Then it was to Charleston, W. Va., where Goovert is now trying to prove himself with the Charleston Rockets of the Continental League.

"I didn't like the idea of playing here at first, but I'm beginning to enjoy it now," Goovert said. He was on the far end of a phone call to Charleston and, at the time, was on his lunch hour at the Charleston Kroger store, his weekday place of employment.

Goovert's performance for the Rockets' most recent game was reminiscent of the Goovert that MSU fans remember.

He recovered a fumble, intercepted a pass and scored a safety. Goovert was named "player of the game" but considers the performance just a part of his ascent to the "big time."

"I thought that I played well in the All-America game at Atlanta," Goovert said. "Houston thought so too, and I had a pretty good chance of making it, but they told me that I needed a few more pounds."

"They wanted to put me on the taxi squad, but I felt that I should be playing instead of sitting around. I probably should have stayed with them, because a couple of their guys have gotten hurt."

The Oakland Raiders expressed interest, but Goovert was released from Houston too late for Raiders to activate him.

Oakland suggested that he play for Charleston for a year and try again next year.

With the Purdue game excitement in the air, Goovert wanted to talk about the great 14-10 Spartan comeback of '65, in which he played a major part.

"We knew that the Purdue game was the one which would probably decide the Big Ten championship, and we were ready," Goovert said. "Purdue and Notre Dame of last year were the greatest games I've ever played in."

Size didn't prevent Goovert from being the scourge of enemy Big Ten ballcarriers last fall, and he is determined that he will not fail in his pro attempt because he is not big enough.

"I'm 210 now, and I should be 225 to play pro," Goovert said. "I know I can put on the pounds. I've been up to that weight before." Goovert predicts that he'll, "make it by next year."

Ron Goovert has a chip on his shoulder from people telling him that he is too small. He is small.

But he's stubborn too, and that's why he'll make it.

Gridders' pride at stake

By ED BRILL
State News Sports Writer

They say the smell of roses can do funny things for Big Ten football players. So can pride.

The Boilermakers of Purdue invade Spartan Stadium Saturday, and a lot of theories are going to put on the line before a lot of people. A nation-wide television audience will view the game in addition to an assured capacity-plus crowd of over 76,000.

One theory has it that defending Big Ten champions don't have the incentive to repeat. They say that undefeated Michigan State (5-0) doesn't have as much to win from this game as Purdue (4-1), a team that would like to go to the Rose Bowl as the conference champion.

"They have a lot of incentive and momentum," said Spartan head coach Duffy Daugherty. "They have all the incentive that we had last year.

"But our team has a lot of incentive too. Our players have an ambition, a good ambition--they like to have people think they are the best."

That translates as pride. It means that the Spartans, bumped from the first spot in the national polls for the first time in a year, aren't too happy about it.

A few other theories will be tried down on the field. Some coaches believe in passing their way to victory while others like to grind it out of the ground.

Saturday one of the best passing teams in the nation will face one of the best running teams. Purdue boasts All-America quarterback Bob Griese and a host of fleet-footed receivers. The Spartans counter with an offensive backfield that just might be the best in the nation.

"Griese is the best passer we've faced in recent years," said Daugherty. "It's his quickness in releasing the ball that makes him so tough to rush."

Griese has 64 completions for 104 attempts--a .615 percentage. He's been good for 890 yards of total offense, including 804 passing yards, and five touchdowns.

End Jim Beirne has been Griese's prime receiver with 28 catches for 363 yards and four touchdowns. Halfback Jim Finley has hauled in 15 tosses for 175 yards and one TD.

The Boilermakers also have sound running with fullback Perry Williams and halfback Bob Hurst.

Defensively, Purdue is strong and experienced, with only three starters gone from last year's crew. Linebacker Frank Burke, halfback John Charles, and tackle Lance Olssen are defensive standouts.

Cornerback Leroy Keyes is dangerous on both offense and defense for the Boilermakers.

The Spartans will count on their defensive backfield to stop Griese, a backfield that has allowed 148.2 passing yards per game.

MSU has permitted just 41 yards rushing a game. The big question is whether defenders George Webster, Charlie Thornhill, and Bubba Smith will be able to reach Griese before he throws.

The Spartan offense is led by quarterback Jimmy Raye, who has accounted for 395 yards in the air, and 264 on the ground. Fullback Bob Apisa is the leading rusher, with 326 yards, and a 5.4 average per carry.

Halfback Clint Jones, who has been hampered in his last three games, will be trying to break loose. Jones has rushed for 267 yards this season. Right halfback Dwight Lee, has 264 yards. As a unit MSU has averaged 214 yards rushing per game this season.

This is the 21st game in the series. The Spartans are ahead, 10-9 with one tie. Last year, MSU spoiled the Purdue Homecoming with a 14-10 victory that put the Spartans at the top of the conference and national poles for the rest of the year.

Starting for Michigan State at ends will be Al Brenner and Gene Washington. Joe Przybycki and Jerry West at tackles, Tony Conti and Dave Techlin at guards, and Larry Smith at center. Techlin will be returning from a one-week absence due to an ankle injury.

Defensively, Smith and Phil Hoag will play the ends. Charles Bailey and Nick Jordan the tackles, and Jeff Richardson and Pat Gallinagh the guards. Thornhill and Webster will back the line.

Jim Summers, Jerry Jones, and Jesse Phillips will start in the all-important defensive secondary.

Can Spartans Stop Him?

The Spartans hope they can equal last year's performance when they meet Purdue Saturday. They scored the winning touchdown in the last quarter to upset the Boilermakers, 14-10. Here they are busy upsetting Bob Griese, Purdue All-America quarterback.

If you're looking around for unbalanced lines, glance at the won-lost columns of the Big Ten in overall play this season as compared to the rankings in conference action.

It's football's sixth week, and the two sets of standings are still far from balanced. The only two conference members sticking to a pattern are those at the top, and after Saturday it just won't be the same.

Michigan State and Purdue stand alone as the only Big Ten teams with perfect conference records. It's only logical that the pair should knock heads in the weekend's top game.

The only other undefeated elevens in the group are Minnesota and Wisconsin, but each have notched a tie.

But let's return to the overall figures. Temporarily snug in first place are the Spartans and the Boilermakers. And it's getting too close for comfort.

MSU is 3-0 and 5-0 in conference and season play, while Purdue stands 2-0 and 4-1. Tied for third are Minnesota and Wisconsin, 1-0-1. Overall, the Gophers are 1-3-1, while the Badgers' record is 2-2-1.

Northwestern is seventh, 0-1-1 and 1-3-1. Michigan and Ohio State are deadlocked in the eighth spot at 0-2. The Wolves are 2-3 on the year, while OSU stands 1-3 in all games.

Resting comfortably in the cellar is Iowa, 0-3 and 1-4.

Indiana and Illinois, both with poor season records, get the weekend off from Big Ten play and an opportunity to improve their all games marks.

Indiana will be in the Orange Bowl tonight to face the University of Miami. So far this season, the Hurricanes have a 2-2 mark.

Illinois will be out to spoil Stanford's Homecoming as they go after their third consecutive win and a .500 percentage in all games.

A quartet of Big Ten Homecoming games highlights the conference card.

While Purdue and the Spartans battle it out for the conference lead, Minnesota will be fighting for life in the race against Michigan at Ann Arbor. Wisconsin, also making a bid for honors, takes on a sinking Ohio State at Columbus. Northwestern will be at Iowa City to keep the Hawkeyes from their first Big Ten win.

Get That Griese

Bob Griese, the Purdue quarterback and All-American candidate, is the man Spartan defenses will key on tomorrow. Among Griese's achievements this year: fifth in the conference in passing, sixth in total offense, second in punting. Against Ohio University, he threw three touchdown passes for a Big Ten high this year and kicked six extrapoints to tie Spartan Dick Kenney in that department.

Booters face small field, injuries

By DENNIS CHASE
Associate Sports Editor

The Spartan soccer team takes on Marquette in Wisconsin tomorrow, but they'll also be battling the field and injuries. "The narrow field--we lose at least 18 yards off the width--will force us to revamp our strategy somewhat," Coach Gene Kenney said. "We usually plan four men up, two in the middle and four back. This time we'll only plan two men up, Tony Keyes and Guy Busch, if he is healthy, and drop two of our forwards back. "It's a 2-3-2-3 defense, to accommodate for the narrow field."

The booters have other problems. Busch still doesn't look 100 per cent with a strained left leg, Kevin O'Connell is in a similar state with an injured foot. Both are doubtful starters, although Kenney indicates that he might take a chance, Gary McBrady is also a question mark. He has a charley horse which is still giving him trouble.

Marquette's record is 1-1-2. The men who should give the Spartans the most trouble are Helmut Vold on offense and Jim Ward on defense.

The Spartan defense has been a bright spot this year. Goalie Kevin O'Connell is on his way to a record season. He has allowed two goals in five games. The record is six in a season.

But Bert Jacobsen, Peter Hens, Tom Belloli, and Nick Wirs haven't let the opposition get too close.

"They work well together," said Kenney. "They haven't had to meet a real good forward line yet, but they've been snuffing them off pretty well at midfield."

Does the coach worry about overconfidence stemming from MSU's 5-0 record? "They've got a long way to go," said Kenney. "They're not overconfident."

Terry And The Pirates

Captain Terry Bidiak watches the play of his teammates in a game against Pittsburgh earlier this season. That's Guy Busch going after the ball. Busch injured his leg but will start in the game against Marquette this weekend. Don't worry Terry, the team is 5-0 and shows no signs of letting up.

... A victory for MSU over Purdue would be its fourth in a row over the Boilermakers. Neither team has ever defeated the other more than three times in succession in the 20-game history of the series.

... The Spartan squad will face Purdue for the 13th time. MSU has won seven of the 12 games played.

Ruggers are hurt

By NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

MSU's Rugby Club coach Neville Doherty is forced to find a new backfield man after an injury suffered in the 8-6 victory over Windsor last Saturday.

Diarmuid Costello, a wiry Irishman doing graduate work here, was injured in the MSU victory last Saturday. He will be a doubtful starter for the rest of the year.

Doherty started two men last week: Curt Conrad at wing and Brian McGillie at forward, and was pleased with both.

"McGillie is extremely fast in getting the ball in play and is big enough to get into the scrum itself," Doherty said.

"A lot of the boys have never played together before, but the teamwork last Saturday showed they are developing into a team."

He noted some of the scrum forwards had played last year for MSU and most of the others have played rugby at other schools.

Kirk Louis, a hooker, has played here three years and has been used effectively in getting the scrum advantage.

Andy McEnte, another club veteran, played his first game of the year against Windsor and will be relied on heavily at a prop position.

Ian Donald and Mike Auer have

Kirk Louis, the Harriers three-year man, goes after a ball during a scrimmage. He'll be going after a lot of them this weekend when the Spartans take on Blackrock.

been alternating between playing the other prop and the number eight man. Neither has played for MSU before, but Donald played for clubs in New Zealand and England and Auer played for Harvard's club. Both are doing grad work at MSU.

Doherty also noted the fine play of Jim Moriarty and Ron Bacon.

The team is not as stable in the backfield, however, and Costello's absence will make a large difference in setting up plays.

Rick Allen, John Harris and Bob McGillicuddy are all experienced men in the backfield, but McGillicuddy will be leaving soon for the armed forces.

"The club is interested in anybody who has played rugby before or who would like to learn the sport to come to practice on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at 4:30 on Case field," Doherty said. The field is located behind the soccer and practice football fields.

The ruggers meet Blackrock after the football game on Old College Field, behind Jenison.

Early to Bed...

Ken Early, MSU football equipment manager, gets the uniforms ready for the Spartan-Boilermaker tussle tomorrow. Wonder how clean they'll be at the end of the game?

Harriers in tri-meet here

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

The MSU cross country team, this season, will put their perfect record on the line against Notre Dame and Eastern Michigan in a triangular meet today at 4 p.m. at Forest Akers Golf Course.

Notre Dame placed second to Eastern Michigan in a nine-team invitational at South Bend last week while Eastern finished fourth.

Top Irish runners are Ken Howard, and Chuck DeHorn, both juniors. In its only other action of the year, Notre Dame finished second to Minnesota in a triangular meet at Indiana.

Eastern Michigan is unbeaten in five dual meets, romping past Wheaton, Chicago, Central Michigan, Toledo and Baldwin Wallace. Senior Tony Mifsud, who was runner up in the invitational at South Bend, has won individual honors in all five meets. Supporting Huron runners include Terry Norman, Glenn Duke and Ken Head.

Notre Dame handed the Spartans their worst defeat of the season last year, and have nine returning letterman, but Spartan cross country captain Dick Sharkey expects that "Eastern will be just as tough as Notre Dame."

An interesting personal dual is liable to take place between Sharkey and Mifsud in the meet. Sharkey has taken individual honors in each dual meet also, and is being billed as a potential All-American. Sharkey and Mifsud are close friends, having run against each other in both high school and college.

Coach Fran Dittrich will be starting the same unit that he started against Wisconsin two weeks ago with two exceptions.

Sophomore Pat Wilson, who was injured and sat out the Wisconsin meet, will be running in place of sophomore Mike Rummell, who quit the team.

Besides Sharkey and Wilson, seniors George Balthrop, Eric Zemper and Claudell James, junior Art Link and sophomores Roger Merchant, Dean Rosenberg and Dale Stanley will be running for the Spartans.
