Our Dumb "FROSH"

"It's great to be a soldier," says Oswald, "but say, I hope I hurry up and grow so this suit will fit me. I want to send a picture to Pa and Ma of me in my army suit if the man that has all the clothes can find a pair of pants that I don't have to take tucks in and a coat with sleeves short enough so I can get my hands out. Guess they didn't know there was such small men as me when they made these clothes."

WORK TO START IMMEDIATELY ON 1927 WOLVERINE

Need Few Additional Members To Complete Staff; Work On Budget Finance System.

CONTRACTS TO BE LET
Board of Publications Wolverine Committee Composed of Tyrell, Engle and Prof. Nelson.

Actual progress on the production of the 1927 Wolverine, State College year book, will be started tomorrow, it was announced today by Arthur J. Harrah, 27 editor-in-chief.

With only a few additions to be made to complete the staff of the book, actual work can be under way at once. Contracts for printing and other expenses will be among the first duties to be taken up. Shop shoe orders are being sought at once and a budget system to manage the various portions of the book will be completed this week by the Wolverine committee of the Board of Publications composed of Norval Tyrell, Editor of last year's annual, Paul Engle, assistant editor of the record, and Prof. Nelson of the journalism department.

Printing arrangements, expected to be quickly made by this time, have been delayed by lack of complete class records of the registrar's office. This business, somewhat being due to the number of late registrations.

Since the last issue several have been given positions on the staff of the book. Don McPherson is named sophomore class editor. Whelan Gray is freshman class editor. With Tom Bitt the latest addition to be appointed to the staff.

In the handling of the feature work with Miss Dorothy Rothwell will work with Robert Winton. Rothwell is the new feature editor. If the publication Michigan Herald has been previously announced as an excellent feature editor, and she will work under the new editor system. Miss Anne Wang will be co-ed assistant business manager. Miss Marjorie McKelvey is added to the finance and circulation section which is in charge of James E. Ford.

These two men will hold the responsibility of organizing and preparing the section. Kelly will edit the sports reports from the various sports turned in to him, while Marshall will handle the major sports section. At this time three men have been added to his assistants under this kind of arrangement. They are Ed Ward, Bob Kelly, and Tom Spurling. Max Grayson is reading, handling and looking out Theodore Smith in charge of track. The roster of men working on sports for the Wolverine is a large group which will be the group from which next year's sports editor will be selected.

The contract for observing has not been awarded, but it is expected to be this week. John and Alton of Chicago, Canton Engineers of Canton, Ohio, and the Lansing College are the companies being considered at present.

Many assistants are still needed on the staff and those on the freshman class who join their staff this year will be the group from which the editor, business manager and other principal positions will be chosen for the 1927 book.

Candidates for staff jobs may call on the editor at 2822 Co-Operative for appointment.

There will be a general W. A. A. meeting in Room 2 H. E. building at 8 o'clock Wednesday night.

AGRICULTURE IS IMPORTANT DIVISION

Work of Agricultural Division Includes Large Part of Michigan State Interests.

Although latecomers have made complete registration and classification impossible at the present date, the Division of Agriculture looks forward to a very busy year. Dean Shaw points out that although the name of the institution no longer carries the term "agriculture" in the principal line, the work of the division still carries a large portion of Michigan State's interests.

More campus buildings are controlled from this division than from any other. Aside from Agricultural Hall and the main building connected with the college farm, many more on the eastern fringe of the grounds are part of the system. Thus all of the laboratory work in Entomology, Forestry, Biology, Horticulture and Dairy buildings comes under the direction of Dean Shaw, although students from other divisions have classes in them also.

The various departments are continually on the look-out for better methods and products in their particular lines. Thus the dairy building is claimed to be the best in the state, and anyone who has tasted college ice-cream knows one argument in favor of the claim. In the corridors of the Ag building may be seen many trophies won by college entries in the annual State Fair in Detroit.

In another week or so the various departmental clubs will begin to function again. The Horticulture club will have the outline of its fall program completed.

Chinese Student Reveals Picture of Native Land

Sheltered away in a corner of East Lansing, apart from the general hubbub of Michigan State college festivities and idle whims, is a heart-felt ambition which is steadily being fashioned in the person of a retiring youth from Hunan, China. This ambition, in little day dream, has been fostered in Carlo Young, Chinese student at Michigan State college, who is keenly absorbing American ideas and customs with an eye for the future when he will be able to finally return to his native land with the benefit of his American education.

Young is no narrow-minded student but a well-studied sociologist, a student with a flexible mind willing to discard the traditional characteristics which he feels are hindering the progress of the Chinese people. Young is living for the day when he can write a book, including the American characteristics which he feels will benefit his countrymen. He is preparing to go to a Chinese university to gain the information which he has gained from the United States.

At an interview with a Michigan State News reporter, Young gave vent to his ambitions and theories. He gave an interesting picture of the life of the native land, which attracted much of the general consciousness of his audience.

The form of education in China is quite similar to that in this country. Six years grade school, three years junior high school and four years college. However, only a few children really get advantages of this. The villagers have practically no schooling and it is only the very wealthy children that go to high school and college. It is the latter class that will produce higher standards in China. Those that get the education are serious minded and take advantage of every opportunity offered to them. The enrollment of the large old university is a thousand pupils.

It is only in the universities that the new ideas are found going to college. Here is the heart of China's growing democratic spirit. With the democratic spirit will come fewer connections with other nations and a greater sense of civilization.

Young said the writer some very unusual facts about the life of the native land.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO TAKE STATERS TO ANN ARBOR GAME

Special to Carry Military Band and Football Squad; Ticket Sale Opens Thursday.

RUMMEL IN CHARGE

Train to Leave Lansing 8:45 Saturday Morning and Return At Night.

President George L. Dirks, of the student council, has announced that arrangements have been made for a special train to accompany the football squad and college military band to the U. of M. game at Ann Arbor this week, Saturday. Last year the band made the trip to Wisconsin and Michigan, and this year the announcement names the Michigan and Cornell games as the scenes of the advent of the college band.

Marty Rummel, the Spartan's injured and captain is in charge of the Ann Arbor special arrangements, and has announced elsewhere in this issue the details of the grant to the Yost stadium.

Details details will be given in Friday's issue, but at present it is expected that the train will leave the Union station in Lansing on Michigan Avenue at 8:45 Saturday morning. The return train will leave Ann Arbor sometime that night. The round trip rate will approximate $3.00. A mass meeting is called for the 25th Friday night, and it is expected that a large number of students will accompany the team on the special. It is at least believed that there is a sufficient number of loyal students to warrant the chartering of the train. Student support or the absence of student support at Ann Arbor will either make or break the team's morale for the remainder of the year, and the special train arrangements have been made to provide the means for the making.

Tickets will be on sale for the train, starting Thursday at the athletic office, the Union building, and Washington Snook shop.

NOTED SPEAKER TO TALK HERE

Dr. Lynn Harold Hough of Detroit to Speak at Next Convocation.

The next convocation scheduled for this year will be held October 12. Dr. Lynn Harold Hough of Detroit will be the speaker. Dr. Hough is reported to be one of the foremost ministers in the country and is very well-known.

Hough is noted for his sermons in London, England, where he occupies the pulpit of one of the city's largest churches during his column there.

Dr. Hough is not only high in the ministerial circles of the country but is well known as a writer, for he is the author of several much read books.

Dr. Hough, noted as he is as a speaker and advanced thinker, draws to his church the most intellectual and progressive minds of Detroit. His deep studies and travels make him a most interesting speaker and his wide knowledge of foreign affairs and people give weight to the observations which he makes.

Although the subject of Dr. Hough's address is unknown as yet, it is certain that he will talk on some question of interest to the college.

PLAN EXTENSIVE HOMECOMING DAY

Plans for the biggest homecoming day in the history of Michigan State college are under way with the appointment of the committee which will be in charge.

The committee is composed of "Carp" Julian, chairman; R. J. McCarthy, secretary of the Union; Fred Alderman, president of the Varsity club; George Dirks, president of the Student Council, and J. B. Hasselmann, director of the college publications department.

Manila folders, fillers for all notebooks, graph paper, etc., are on sale at the main desk.

Coupons are the same as cash for any purchase in the Union, but they save you 8%. Use them.

Football extras are on sale at the main desk immediately after the game.

Chess and checker sets may be obtained at the main desk for use in the building.

President Butterfield has provided the New York Times for lobby readers at the Union.

Fresh Learns Old Collegian Game

The world is not as hard-boiled as some people would have us believe.

This is the conclusion of a student returning to the college from a late date in Lansing at one o'clock in the morning. The collegian who is new at the game and not affluent enough to afford a taxi the only solution left is to use his own method of locomotion, which is not a thing to be greatly desired after gliding over the floor of the "Ary" for two or three hours in a row.

One of the boys who was not wise to the tricks of the trade started out by asking the other night. Remembering his mother's advice to be wary of strangers and especially those who offer one rides in cars, he refused half a dozen invitations to "ride out", but at last was overcome with weariness and accepted one of the proffered rides.

Greatly surprised that he was not asked for his pocketbook, which didn't have anything in it anyway, or worse yet, taken on to Detroit, or taken and forcibly detained, he was let out at the bank corner and went home to his downy bed.

When he had found out from some of the other boys in the house how dumb he was and what was the correct procedure in case of being caught down town after the last car had left, he started out to test his new found knowledge on the following night.

Starting from Washington avenue at twelve-thirty, he rode fifteen separate cars and walked to total of ten feet, all of which goes to prove that people are really very kindly to students after all.

SENATORS—Business meeting Wednesday at 5. Chemistry building.

MAIL COURSES IN AG MAY BE ESTABLISHED

Courses to Be Short But Interesting; Co-operation Promised.

Prof. John D. Wilford, director of continuing education, has announced that correspondence courses of agriculture and marketing will be established if ways and means of conducting the classes can be found.

If the courses are to be established they will be on an optional supporting arrangement. Each person taking the courses will have to be based on such as the time cost of the course and that the financial burden will be placed on the college.

Several heads of departments have already promised their cooperation to Prof. Wilford in his work. It is believed that if it is found possible to offer the courses, that they will be available by the first of January.

As planned the course will be very short, each one consisting of not more than ten or fifteen lessons.

Carleton Murray, '29, Finds Bachelor's Life Not Too Bad

The life of a bachelor may not appeal to all of us but, nevertheless, a chance to get into the great open spaces away from man and the turmoil of business is a lure that wells up with an impetuous flame which can only be subdued by "breakin' loose" and drink!

Such was the experience of Carleton Murray, '29, forester, who spent the past summer as forester in the Missoula National Forest, Montana. "Carl" was practically isolated from the world. The Montour Ranger district is noted as being the most obscure and lonesome district in the Missoula forest. The altitude is 8200 feet. The nearest railroad nineteen miles away. Neighbors were the sociable distance of a stiff five-hour hike over rough trail. The trails were closed by forest fires, making it impossible to obtain or send out mail. Foot-trails alone led to the nearest wagon road which was fifteen miles from the cabin. As the altitude was such that grass could not grow, no horses could be kept so accordingly, Carl's territory had to be traversed on foot.

However, a forester is a forester and the trails and vibrations of a rough, lonesome life were offset by the lure of the wilds. Work was also a remedy for dreary hours. Being one's own boss in his own home is a good experience especially when there is no one in the vicinity to argue with or fight with. Carl was his own cook, house keeper, janitor, and "bottle washer." "And he's sure some cook!" remarked "Joe" Blake who had roughed it with Carl in northern Michigan.

The opening of college brought Mr. Murray back to State and he is again continuing the study of forestry. He has other interests which also invoke his time. At least we would take it from his own statement that such is the case for he said, "I had always desired and planned to be a bachelor but since returning to M. S. C. this fall I have changed my mind. We wonder who she may be?"

Other food is cooked and bought in large quantities and stored away for company. Chinese eat no uncooked food.
Chinese are fond of festivals. Young and old. They are weekly occurrences and often last two or three years. They are given by a community or by a household. It is not uncommon for a household to have four or five hundred guests at a time.

A Chinese lady never works in any other way than to run her house and she prides herself on her ability to entertain. There is always hot tea and every guest is greeted at the door with a cup of tea.

One Chinese club has as its worst initiation duty the law that every boy must do dishes. None of the college students work, not only for the belittling but because they can't afford to work. Pay is so small that time is more valuable than money to them.

Young attended Southeastern University. He says that the boys wear long jackets to school but for social functions wear regular English suits. The girls also have adopted the present day mode of dress.

The social functions consist of visiting tea shops and giving parties where involved card games are played. The Chinese do not have musical appreciation thus do not dance or have musical instruments in their homes or abodes of entertainments. Picture shows are scarce. They are substituted by varieties of plays.

He wound up his conversation with a brief discussion of the religion of his writer's inquiry on this popular subfellow countrymen, in answer to the fact. He says the Chinese really have no religion but worship of ancestors. Each family has an image of some popular ancestor made and keeps it in a prominent place in the house. The first of the year the family bows to the idol and offers it wines and choice dishes. Mr. Young believes this to be a soon extinct custom, however, as many other of the time-worn characteristics.

SPARTANS SHOW INCREASED POWER IN SECOND VICTORY OF THE SEASON

State Scores In First Quarter When Pass From Boehringer to Smith Makes Possible Sixty-Yard Run for Touchdown; State Line Given Test Under Fire; Substitutes Look Good.

Showing far more power than in the opening game of the season with Adrian, Michigan State college's football team took the measure of Kalamazoo, 9 to 0 on college field Saturday.

More than 1,000 kids took advantage of free admission and witnessed the game.

With several linemen out with injuries, Coach Young was forced to start Werner and Gordon in the line. Both men gave excellent accounts of themselves.

The first quarter saw State scoring its first touchdown. This came in the closing minutes when Smith snared a pass from Boehringer to lunge 60 yards for a tally.

Prior to this time the State line had been given a real test under fire when the Katoos rushed the ball up the field in an uncertain fashion.

penalty aided State in halting the Hornet rush.

The second quarter saw State making several determined bids but failing because of frequent penalties. Substitute material began to be injected into the fray during the second period and looked about as good as the regular talent.

The third quarter found State scoring its final points when Paul Smith booted a field goal from the 35-yard marker. In this period the Katoos made their most determined bid when they carried the ball to the Spartan 14 yard line by a series of passes from Berry to Meisenberg.

Here another pass to the latter went over the goal line and State was given the ball on the 20 yard line. A steady march down the field resulted in Smith's field goal. With a nine point lead many substitutes began to enter the fray. The new blood seemed to function very well, though which individual State reserve strength is expected this season.

The final quarter saw Kalamazoo hold in check while State also failed to offer anything remarkable.

With these preliminary games out of the way, Coach Young was to begin pointing his charges for Michigan State in the Wolverine showing at Ann Arbor Saturday. The Yostmen counted to an unrelenting win over Kalamazoo V & M last week and seem every bit as strong as in 1925.

With the strength the Spartans show, it is felt that the team's season will be a real display of power may be expected.

Co-ed Fencing Class Inaugurated This Year.

Fencing practice has now begun for the varsity, freshmen, and co-ed candidates.

Eight men have signed up for the varsity team. Arrangements are underway to secure bouts with Michigan, Chicago, Wisconsin, Ohio State and Milwaukee Y. M. C. A. If the freshmen and co-ed class shows ability and interest, a meet may be secured for them before the year is over. The completed schedule will be announced later.

The co-ed fencing class is the first one ever inaugurated at this college. It is also the first class for girls in the midwestern colleges and universities.

An interclass fencing competition will be held at the beginning of winter term. All college championship meets will be held during spring term to determine the 27-28 campus champion. Max Goodwin, captain of the team, is the champion for this year.

PLAN TO SCHEDULE NOTRE DAME AND U. OF M.

Efforts to book the University of Michigan for the football game that will be a feature of the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the college next May 13 are being made by Coach Young, athletic director.

If the Wolverine cannot be secured for the occasion, then some other high school organization will perform.

Notre Dame university is being sought for the game Alumni day. This day comes June 11 this year. State is expected to oppose at South Bend for Alumni day in many years past and there is every reason to believe the Irish will give the idea of playing there favorably.

COLLEGE QUOIT TOURNAMENT ENTRY DATE ADVANCED

The final entry date for the campus quoit playing tournament has been advanced to October 15. Truman L. Forsythe, assistant director of athletics and director of intramural sports, says that the small number of entries was caused by not giving the tournament enough publicity. He stresses that there is still time to enter.

A reception in honor of the new residents of East Lansing will be given by the members of the church and congregation in the parlors on Wednesday evening, Oct. 6, beginning at 8 o'clock. All members are urged to come promptly to receive and welcome guests.

COLLEGE PARTY IS WELL ATTENDED

A special all-college party was held in the church parlors Friday evening. The invitation to all students of the college campus was widely accepted and the parlors were crowded with groups of students.

E. D. McLand was chairman of the event while Stockman and Strong, assisted by Hibbs, furnished the music. All of the students were assembled in the student parlor to meet both Mr. and Mrs. McLand. This sense of acquaintance is hoped to be a big factor in the church this year and all students are advised to be acquainted if throughout the coming school year.

At the end of the evening the students present in couples and each pair received a bottle of tonic and a number of grape drops by way of refreshment.
