OUR PRIVILEGE

Criticism is being leveled at the rightfulness of an editor of the State News in assuming a partisan position such as taken in the editorial of our Tuesday's issue on the presidential candidates. Objections are being made that the occupant of the editorial chair, because of his elective position, does not have the privilege of expressing an opinion or of taking sides on any issue.

In the first place, it is not the bound duty of an editor to reflect the thought of that person or persons included in the student body. Imagine the position of an editor attempting to accurately reproduce the thought of some twenty-eight hundred different persons. If it is stated that the majority thought should be taken into consideration, then it follows that that general attitude must be followed whether it is right or wrong. The editor becomes nothing more than a medium a middleman. The editorial columns then assume the duty of the news columns and their purpose is destroyed.

We have at no time, unless specifically stated so, attempted to reflect accurately the editorial thought. Furthermore, there have been few editorials written during the last two terms in which a definite stand has not been taken. A newspaper which does not take a stand does not have an opinion of its own, is of little value as far as editorials are concerned. If editorial columns might be devoted to straight news to much greater advantage. We shall continue to take a stand on questions which in our consideration require it. And in the final analysis, editorials are written by one person, no matter how many aid in collecting material. This factor cannot be eliminated.

In addition to the duty of an editor of analysis and interpretation, there are others which must be considered. At times that includes the effort of arousing student interest in a subject well deserving of it. There are a number of methods, one of which has just been demonstrated.

We do not insist upon the correctness of the attitude concerning the two presidential candidates. The subject is one highly controversial and few statements could be made which were not open to rebuttal by those supporting the opposing side. We welcome campus Forum letters on either side of the case.

SOCIALISM

A letter of the State News asks that the description of Smith's plan of local option as socialistic be proved. First, the term socialistic does not mean socialism. Socialistic implies a tendency towards socialism.

Smith's plan calls for state regulation if not state ownership of the marketing of alcoholic drinks where their sale is legalized.

Inasmuch as socialism may be defined as government ownership of capital goods, regulation of capital goods is a step in this direction, and may be aptly termed socialistic.

Campus Forum

Cambridge, Mass. Oct. 24, 1928

I have noticed of late a certain amount of discussion in this column concerning freshman discipline and campus tradition. Having formerly been both disciplined and disciplinarian in Michigan State and having later deserted the alma mater for Harvard, I have been especially impressed with the existing conditions here. Perhaps it may interest the students at an institution which among other things has the distinction of being the oldest agricultural school, to read the words of a senior from a school of tradition and freshmen of the oldest college.

Harvard in its youth had traditions enough though it had no campus. They call it a Yard. There were prohibitions not only for freshmen and sophomores but even for seniors. The latter, for instance, in 1699 were limited to one quart of wine at commencement time and pinnacled when the corporation evidently considered attendance was completely banned. During the 17th and 18th centuries a definite flogging system made life miserable for freshmen in need. Even so recently as 20 years ago there was a fair ruling against freshmen smoking a pipe on the street in front of the Yard playing billiards at Lovell & Thayer's or using a cane. The 19th Boston Monday when groups of freshmen and sophomores wrestled in

How Gold Prospector "Went Scotch"

Mississippi, Minn. April 30, 1928

Two years ago last winter I went into the Red Lake gold fields in Canada. It was a tough trail from Hudson, over 140 miles of snow and ice. There were fourteen of us on the trail going in, and frequently at night when seated around a big camp fire, some one would ask me for a pipel of Edgeworth. These Canadian boys sure like our Edgeworth.

In four weeks time I ran out of Edgeworth. I was glad to get most any old tobacco.

One day, however, I dropped in to Dad Brown's tent, a 22-year-old prospector, and seeing a can of Edgeworth on an improvised table, back there 100 miles from the "steel," I perked up at once, saying, "Dad, I'm plain out of tobacco. How's chances for a pipel?"

"Help yourself," he said, "I'm pulling my heavy duty pipe from my pocket. I loaded it with Edgeworth, making it so tightly that I couldn't get the least bit of a drag."

I excused myself for a moment, and stepped outside to remove about three cigarettes to put in my pouch. Dad stopped me, saying, "You're worse than my Scotchman. I never saw you. Then I confessed. I told him what happened to my Edgeworth—that I was just dying for a smoke, and he smiled right away. He said, 'Boy, Edgeworth is mighty scarce in these parts, but I reckon I can spare what's left of that can. Help yourself.'"

You can just let your last nickel that I passed this Edgeworth with extreme care until I got back to the "steel."

Yours very truly,
C. M. Bahr

by living in the freshman dorms. For some reason it has been found unnecessary to regulate his life either with the view of making him study or of making him miserable. Other and more effective means have been found for producing both results. It has been found rather a matter of the survival of the fittest.

The criticism has been leveled against Harvard that with the disappearance of tradition, school spirit has also disappeared. Certainly to a new corner from the middle west "Harvard indifference" is a rather terrifying thing. And if school spirit is to be measured by collective funds and pep meetings, Harvard has but little of it. However, in spite of a rather unhelpful transitional period, I have found that there is such a thing as school spirit here. It takes the rather astounding aspect of a decidedly more than half-century old tradition. When a freshman or a professional junior for that matter catches it, it is worse than the whole sophomore class and the Red Coats.

CAMPUS POLITICAL FACTIONS

Letters by Peterson and Murray follow:

The State News has committed an editorial blunder which under the conditions is far more distasteful to all straight thinking students than the notorious Bloss affair.

The News is a supposedly nonpartisan publication. It is a school paper, the alleged representative of an institution of higher learning. It is supposed to be a record of our personal prejudices as long as it refrains from their utterance.

Last Tuesday an editorial appeared which purported to be a discussion but which proclaimed the merits of one political party and of one candidate. It not only proclaimed it, it invited it.

The result is an extreme attitude of the followers of one party as of the other. Students of M. S. C. will not yet admit that they need the assistance of the school paper with its undoubtedly wide experience in national politics to form their opinions.

Our students have the reputation of being spartan, earnest, so that they will not uphold any dramatic editorial regardless of whether or not it coincides with their own beliefs. The editorial was dramatic. It expressed a narrow personal opinion. It granted less to the issues involved than the most honest of partisan legitimate papers.

As long as the State News derives its sustenance from a metropolitan group, it must refrain from taking unfair advantage of its position. Every club reporter in Lansing is aware of that fact. If its staff desires political prestige, let them go about it in a different manner.

Let them continue the policy of last Tuesday and a sound editorial reputation will give way before the doubtful plaudits of a political party.

The question of whether the editorial was important enough to take seriously, immediately resolves itself into the question of the importance of the paper itself.

It will be of great interest to the campus group, and thought and square play to see what more will be made by the editor to rectify a surprisingly important mistake.

Sincerely,
CABLETON C. MURRAY '28

SMITH VS. HOOVER

One of the controversies of last Tuesday's issue of the State News was Smith's editorial discussing merits of Hoover and Smith. The editor must have meant the merits of Hoover and Smith for not a single one of Smith's merits was mentioned and not very many of Hoover's were either.

Let us consider a few of Hoover's qualifications for the presidency:

1. He is against the 19th amendment because it is a foolish attempt to make people moral by law.

2. He would rather trust our national water power to the duly elected representatives of the people than to a power trust which tries to corrupt our schools with its propaganda. (This proposition seems to have already done its work on our campus.)

4. He would rather trust our national water power to the duly elected representatives of the people than to a power trust which tries to corrupt our schools with its propaganda. (This proposition seems to have already done its work on our campus.)

Hoover's lack of qualification is evident from the following facts:

1. He was a member of the cabinet in which the corrupt oil leases were discussed and as the only mining engineer failed to protect the interests of the people whom he would now lead.

2. Hoover is as inarticulate as Coolidge is entirely lacking in pep and as changeable as the weather. Proof of this is the League of Nations in which Wilson now he is against it. He

Lights that Fill the Skies with Commerce

THE air map of America is now in the making—the ground.

Ten years ago, there were 218 miles of air mail routes with two station stops; to-day, a network of sky roads bridges the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Can you imagine this growth without electricity—without illuminated airports—without trunk lines studded with electric beacons?

Men of vision are building for increasing traffic of the air. Soon, the skies will be filled with commerce.

Just as electricity is helping to conquer the air, the land, and the sea to-day, so to-morrow it will lead to greater accomplishments in aviation and in every human activity.

Visiting Librarians Present Study in Specialized Work

The campus had company a few days ago. Older faces appeared among the students here, each above a lettered ribbon. For the librarians of Michigan were meeting in Lansing and the college helped entertain them.

They're interesting people, these Michigan librarians. To most of us a librarian is just a person who is shuffling about finding the books we want and about letting us keep the reserved reading books out for two weeks.

What about these women, then, and men too? For there are important men librarians in the state, though most of them are women. What do they do that's interesting?

In the first place, these from the large cities and from Detroit especially are highly specialized in their particular branch of work.

For instance, from the Detroit public libraries, there came Mrs. Grace D. Liberman, who is in charge of the collection of books for the blind.

printed in the Braille system which the city owns, and these she sends out to shut-in blind people who are not able to come after them. Once a week she reads with her group of handicapped the latest news. And she enlists philanthropic women of the city who are willing to read to those of the blind who cannot themselves read Braille or who wish to read something not printed by this system.

Not in this department of the Detroit library system content with affording aid to those who can already read by touch. It cooperates with the department of education in teaching in juvenile literature, or they may know more about old manuscripts and Davis department is an assistant who goes into their homes and gives instruction.

That's the sort of thing the modern head librarians, with the direction of library does, besides fulfilling all its regular and traditional functions. And all were here, celebrating by their meeting the centennial of our old friend, the State Library.

The Union ballroom will be the scene of another Union party this evening when Ward Kelly's orchestra will entertain. Decorations and a number of specialties are to be introduced at the party according to Phillip Glin, chairman of the collection of books for the blind.

OPEN DATE GIVES KIPKE CHANCE TO PREPARE FOR MISSISSIPPI

Remainder of Season Is Not Easy for Spartans with Four Hard Games in Row.

DETROIT GAME FOLLOWS

Taking advantage of last week's open date on the Michigan State schedule, Coach Kipke has been preparing his men for an intercollegiate clash with the Mississippi A & M eleven who will meet the Spartans here Saturday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. From now on, until the end of the season, the Green and White gridlers will be busy in meeting the University of Detroit, the University of Michigan, and the North Carolina State College eleven.

Mississippi Aggies also had an open date last week and as a result the Mississippi coaches have been pointing towards the State game. The Dixie team will come here boasting of a heavy line-crushing backfield as well as a very formidable forward wall. The existing ball tofers will average nearly 120 pounds according to reports. Coach Kipke, who scouted the Aggies two weeks ago, says that the "Maroons" have a dangerous aggregation which is liable to upset the Spartans by strong defensive play.

The State coaches have been working with their men during the past two weeks in an attempt to polish up the Spartans play. Following the Colgate game several of the regulars were on the hospital list. Because so many men were suffering injuries, Coach Kipke gave his men two days rest following the Homecoming game and since then has been working hard on defensive play as well as allowing the State backs to garner some touchdowns. Now all the men are able to scrimmage again with the exception of Duke Schaub, veteran fullback who will probably be out of the game tomorrow because of an injured leg.

Defensive line play was under the watchful eyes of the forward wall coaches last week while Coach Kipke attempted to develop an over-head attack. Breen, a sophomore, and Hild have been used most in this practice. On Monday of this week the varsity was sent against a freshman eleven and were ordered to secure as much as possible. The State backs gained yard after yard as the line opened holes and the team seemed to be in good shape after a week of rest from hard scrimmage. On Tuesday evening the Fresh came onto the field armed with Mississippi plays but they failed to gain much territory. However, on Wednesday night the forward pass attack which the Fresh used against the varsity showed up the weak points of the defensive play of the Kikemen. However after a few plays were ac-

GAME STARTS AT 2:30

The Mississippi A & M vs Michigan State football game will start tomorrow. Owing to the season of the year it has been necessary to make this change.

Completed the varsity defense strengthened. Another team was used on offense against a second fresh team. Passing was stressed with Breen and Hild doing the major part of this heavy.

When the game starts Saturday but few changes in the lineup for State are expected. Capt. Hornback and Anderson will get the call at center. Christensen will be at left tackle while either Joslyn or Ferrari will start at right tackle. Moeller and Hitchings are expected to start at the guard positions while Hines will probably be at this pivot post. With Hines almost definitely out of the game for tomorrow, the backfield personnel will probably be somewhat different than in the Colgate game. Groce will be at one halfback while Nordberg is due to start at the signal calling berth. Freddie Danziger, by his plunging in the Colgate tilt, won the eye of the coaches and will be at the fullback position. The other halfback position will be

X-COUNTRY TEAM TO OPEN SEASON

Fully aware of the strong competition which the Michigan State college cross country team will have to face Saturday when the Spartans open the University of Notre Dame barrier at South Bend, Ind., Coach Mason has picked his team to defend the record the State team set up last year.

Headline the list of Spartan runners will be Lauren P. Brown, captain of the team and one of the best cross country men who have ever run for Michigan State. Brown, holder of the State course record as well as being the Central Intercollegiate cross country and team runner, will run the 5 mile and 10 mile races. He will face the Notre Dame star, John W. Brown. Capt. Lauren Brown defeated the Notre Dame opponent last year but not by a very large margin. Four other members of the undefeated team which State backed off last year will run for State. These are: Ted Wilbur, Fred Roberts, Leonard Dowd, and George E. Egan. Coach Mason is counting on Dowd to place well up in the lead, although this will be his first race.

According to the kind of a day Coach Kipke wishes to start, it is want a passer in the game, or if he want he will probably give Breen the call. However, Hild or Kipke might get the call over the sophomore.

Notre Dame has the advantage over State in one respect. They have a one-point victory over the University of Illinois having run once in the advantage of running once in competition while the Spartans are opening with the Notre Dame team. Although State won last year 21-24, the result Saturday is expected to be exceedingly close as the Irish are exceptionally strong this year and the State men have been running the course in good practice time. Notre Dame and State are rated as being two of the strongest teams of the mid-west.

Following Notre Dame State tackled Marquette University, University of Michigan, and then defends its Central Intercollegiate title at East Lansing.
