wife see the crookedness underlying the scheme of Makashyfe. In the meantime he was able to set his brother Robert Smythe, who had gone astray, to return to the true path and secure his place in life without questioning the justice of his position.

The parts of Robert Smythe and his daughter Mary were very well played by Robert Jewell and Esther Chase. The work of the latter especially in the rôle of Makashyfe, in the main, was excellent. The audience did him justice.

THE CART BEFORE THE HORSE

Now that the largest part of the present social season has passed, a retrospect on the financial aspects of the situation bring to mind some of the weak spots involved.

It has been truly said of the current business depression that everyone economizes except the college student. Nowhere is this more evident than in social affairs. From year to year increasing stress is brought to bear on the undergraduate student, both in fraternity circles and in general social functions. Continued elaborateness in favors and other aspects seek to establish a precedent for each party.

This is all well and good. Why deny those that wish to pay for it the privilege of spending for social diversion as much as those individuals wish to pay? But why not let each party stand on its own merits and suffer from lack of attendance when the student body does not wish to attend? There is no good reason why a continual hue and cry be raised by class administrators if the members of that class do not wish to be taxed. For nearly every social function this term an appeal has been issued for student supporters. If growing prospects for a record breaking attendance are not visualized, there immediately emit gloomy and pessimistic accusations of non-support, lack of class spirit, and various and other sundry predictions that the student body is going to the dogs socially.

Barnum's statement that there is one born every minute holds true in college the same as everywhere else. To this statement can be attributed the fact that many students do listen to these appeals, and no doubt extend themselves to too great a degree for their financial well-being.

Collegiate gullibility does much to draw large numbers in to the social swin. There have been scheduled five major open parties this term, and to each has gone a near record-breaking crowd. For each affair an attendance of hitherto unheard of numbers has been solicited, at least. Yet for each one no member of the student body has evidenced enough interest to inquire in detail into the financial aspects of the particular affair. Such trusting souls!

Perhaps the day will never appear of this or any other campus when the dollar and cent problem of a party will be weighed carefully against the social benefits to be derived therefrom. On with the dance! Let us be unconfined! Someone will pay the fiddler!

STUDENT CO-OPERATION

For the past year the college administration has been steadily revising the classification system used at Michigan State. Long waiting lines, excessive hardship for the student, unduly lengthy registration periods, are among the few disadvantages that have already been overcome by college heads. It is an undoubted fact that the revision—that is, as and that proposed—will cause more administrative work than heretofore, and for that very reason the college is to be applauded for its willingness to place the welfare of the student body over that of the faculty.

It is only fitting that the student body, in return for such administrative generosity, should support to the "hilt" every move made to help them, even though they may at the time see little use in the innovations. While past revisions can not be called overwhelming successes, they have, without a doubt, greatly expedited classification and registration from the standpoint of the student.

Some of the last steps in the college's move to completely centralize these two functions are this week, being proposed. They are entirely for the benefit of the student, since the various departments will probably be handicapped by the innovations. For that reason, if for no other, the student body should pay strict attention to instructions given them, and co-operate to their best ability. It is for them—will they show their appreciation?

That benevolent organization which directs with unerring exactitude the wavering step of the indigent student—the student council is breaking into print again. There is a vague threat that they might do something. It must be admitted that such is within the realm of the possible despite the fact that it would be setting a precedent especially with the present incumbents.

In weighty arguments and numerous debate they have evolved the idea they must have picked it up somewhere, and are pleasantly displaying themselves like children playing house, that junior members should be elected to serve two years instead of one which is the present malpractice.

Imagine asking a man to run around looking important for two full years when all the while he feels that one is liable to puncture his balloon like a child with his first toy. It is apt to grow tired of it and smash it devilishly full of unholy glue.

But feeling the stigma of adverse comment they are trying to reconcile the campus to their little idiosyncrasies, and are therefore demanding with much running off at the mouth two years in which to feel responsible for something or other. What a dirty trick to play on their successors. But, then

However, don't let us mislead you, the council has completed some remarkable projects. Oh, yes, accomplishments of which can be justly proud. They probably will be. When the Wolverine is in such sad straits a few weeks ago they resolved that the thing shouldn't be in such sad straits. Then they provided the editor with much encouragement. All he wanted was subscriptions.

That little uprising that stubbed so many toes and caused several persecuted looks last fall caught the council with their hair down, oh, you know what we mean. Opportunity almost knocked down the council door, but they slept through it as peacefully as babes in the woods. The habit grows.

Then most surprising move was to provide each member with a key to the mutual amusement society. They are looking forward to soon having their picnics taken for the yearbook. Which explains their unusual interest and save decrease when there was a possibility that the big-book might not make its annual appearance. This is the one meeting of the year that no incidents marred. The reason being that they are capable of visualizing the results of that action. They hope to have some mirrors in their meeting place in the next lecture because they are near-sighted. Time hangs so heavily on their hands.

But to leave the abstract and approach the personal the council is merely a result of that great American subtilty of universal suffrage. Everyone must have a voice in the running of things. Some of them will like the devil. What a delightful job they do with everything reduced to rackets and such, and the glorification of Al Capone.

It seems that everything run by the popular voice contains the minimum coefficient of efficiency. How extraordinarily well the council mimics their betters. When fit into one of our national definitions of success—to do something worthy with consequences. Always doing somebody a favor.

New to give the council a test. They had only a year of it and now they want to do well. Let me tell you a sad story. A young lady went to the snack bar because she very much desired to possess the favors which in case you didn't go was a set of book-ends. Anyway that is her story. But it's not over yet. Her escort gave her one book-end and kept the other. She thought it was a joke, but he was a serious student. We ask you what in hell good is one book-end?

The basketball team is flying to Milwaukee for their final game and will be staggering back. One way of getting around.

H. J. Saaloth professor of pathogenic bacteriology on March 2 and 3 will make a trip to Minneapolis, Minn., to attend the annual Ohio State Clinic show where he will give a talk on "Poultry Diseases and Its Prevention." On his return he will stop at Clinton to give an address at the high school.

sence of Dean Bissell who had been granted a leave of absence.

In commenting on the appointment and future development, President Shaw stated: "The Engineering division has progressed harmoniously under the direction of Acting Dean Dirks, and the work has been carried on with apparent satisfaction to the students. During this period there has been a sound increase in student enrollment for this department." Enrollment figures from the registrar's office bear out his statement. For 1928-29, they were 562 and for 1929-30, 645.

"The increase in student enrollment is demanding increased shop and laboratory space. We are hoping that it can be provided in the near future," he continued.

Previous training and a broad experience in both the administrative and the practical sides of the Engineering field has equipped Dean Dirks to a position of this type.

He received a B. S. degree from the University of Illinois in 1904 and in the following year a M. E. degree from the same institution. From 1905 to 1907 he was the first full time man in the Engineering experiment station at that institution. This was the first experimental station of its kind to be established in American colleges, and Dirks was instrumental in pioneering the work. From that time and till 1910 he was an M. E. instructor in the Illinois trustees to be elected.

Michigan State's varsity fencers displayed a vast improvement in form in their Chicago meets last week end despite the fact they were outclassed by the rarer wielders of Northwestern U. I. to 6 and the swordsmen of Chicago U. 11 to 9.

Northwestern university fencers were met Friday night at Evanston, Ill., and the Spartans were forced to accept defeat.

Senior Formal Party Proves Climax of Brilliant Social Week-end Replete With Numerous Fraternity Functions

Carlisle's Pastime Players Furnish Music for More Than 150 Couples, Alpha Chi Sigma, Olympic, Chi Omega, and Kappa Delta Hold Formals Friday and Saturday Nights.

WITH THE STRIKING SUCCESS of the Senior Prom and the sparkling tempo of the mid-winter social season another brilliant week-end has passed. More than 150 couples danced to the music of Kenny Carlisle's Pastime Players Friday evening at the popular senior formal held in the Union ballroom. The hall was completely transformed by the streamers of black and white which formed a few false ceiling and a long corridor throughout the length of the room.

The guests were presented with brown leather book-ends bearing the college crest in silver as favors, and the programs of parchment were in harmonizing style. Prof. and Mrs. H. G. Dicks and Prof. and Mrs. A. J. Clark acted as patrons for the affair. Guests at the party included President and Mrs. R. S. Shaw, Secretary and Mrs. Halladay, and Prof. and Mrs. L. F. Emmons.

The committee in charge of all arrangements for the party was Clyde Hoppert and Prof. and Mrs. Elmer Eyer. The charming blue leather programs sent the fraternity seal in gold were given as favors.

The Olympic society held its first formal dinner dance last Saturday evening in the Union ballroom, with the Campus Nomads, a popular orchestra from Albion, playing for dancing.

In former years the fraternity has given a senior dinner ball held earlier than the winter formal. The tables which were arranged in cabaret style were sumptuously decorated with sweethearts and favors in pastel shades. Robert Olson, president of the fraternity made a speech of welcome to the 50 couples present. Acting as patrons were Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Proulx, Dean, and Mrs. F. Cox, and Prof. and Mrs. S. E. Stowe. Dresser vanities of silver engraved with the fraternity seal, made charming favors.

The main ballroom of the Olds hotel was the scene of the Chi Omega formal.

Those interested are urged to attend the meeting.

Coop Makes Plans For Formal Dance To Be Held March 6

Plans are well on the way to completion for the Women's Building formal dinner dance to be held March 6 at the Women's building.

The dinner will be in the main dining room on the third floor and will be served by girls from the Home Economics department.

Dancing will be in the parlors on the first floor with Bruce Fawcett's orchestra furnishing the music.

The members of the decorating committee under their chairman, Isabelle Paulson, have chosen pastel shades with which to transform the ballroom.

Guests for the occasion will be Prof. and Mrs. R. S. Shaw, Sen. and Mrs. H. H. Halladay, Dean Elizabeth Conrad, Mr. and Mrs. Mort Mason, Mrs. Grace White, Mrs. Edith Gillingsworth, Mrs. Katherine Kinsler and the girls from Abbott hall, who are also helping in the planning of the affair.

A Jackson orchestra played for dancing at the Alpha Gamma Rho house held Saturday evening. The patrons were Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Burhans and Mr. and Mrs. Pendleton Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. James Crowley and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Warren acted as patrons at the Hesperian Inn house held Saturday evening. Jack Deesoppe and his orchestra furnished the music.

The bridge tea sponsored by the Spartan Women's League Saturday afternoon in the main dining room of the Union proved to be very successful.

Twenty tables of bridge were in play during the afternoon. Mrs. Alice Chapman received two wall roses as first prize, and Nancy Ann Hale was presented with a multicolored valentine bunch as second prize.

Josephine Johnson was a guest of all arrangements for the affair and she was assisted by Lucille Purcell, Leonie Martin, and Irene Johnson. Miss Josephine Gaffin was the faculty advisor.

Spartan Iota chapter co-ed society invited its social activities for the year with a tea held Saturday afternoon at the parlor of the Peoples Congregational Church. The number of its participants and the women members of the faculty.

Martha Farley presided at the tea table which was sumptuously decorated with white chrysanthemums and red tulips, featuring a Valentine's Day theme. The refreshments were carried out the color scheme.

The guests of honor at the tea included Miss Nedra Ladd, Mrs. H. H. Halladay, and Miss Mary Shober, patronesses. Miss R. S. Shaw and two junior representatives from the faculty were present.

Martha Farley also was in charge of the tea, was assisted by the tea committee in decorations. Another

Student Grangers Plan Several Trips For Coming Months

To Confer Degree at Grand Ledge With Junkets to Berrien County Following.

The Student Grangers has been formulating plans for several trips during March at which time students from the local organization will give the degree work. The first trip will take place Thursday evening, March 12, when the first degree is exemplified at the Omega Grange near Grand Ledge. Verne Stockman who graduated here several years ago is master of that chapter.

Plans for the second trip are more extensive and will include degree work at several places, probably in Berrien county. This trip was planned in response to many requests for the college organization to exemplify the fifth degree, which is the Pomona degree or the county master degree. This trip will take place the weekend following the class winter term.

Plans for the third trip are more extensive and will include degree work at several places, probably in Berrien county. This trip was planned in response to many requests for the college organization to exemplify the fifth degree, which is the Pomona degree or the county master degree. Ruth Hart is in charge with the group who will assist with songs. Acting with her will be Mabel Stiles and Ruth Peckine.

Dean E. Conrad represents State At Idea Exchange

Dean Elisabeth Conrad represented Michigan State college at the convention of the National Association of Deans and Faculty Women, which was held in Detroit, with its headquarters at the Hotel Statler, Feb. 18-20.

More than 300 deans representing colleges, universities, and normal schools in all parts of the United States, as well as in Canada, attended the large banquet which featured the convention program last Thursday evening at the Hotel Statler. Mrs. John Macfield, wife of England's poet laureate, was the speaker of the evening. Her topic was "Women of the Time of Samuel Johnson." Contracted with the Women of Today," Mrs. Conrad acted as chairman of the reception committee whose members were hostesses at the banquets. The delegates to the convention made a trip to the University of Michigan Saturday.

Interchange of ideas regarding college administration was the purpose of the convention, and the chief topic of discussion was the "Fundamental Interpretation of Culture."

Michigan State negative debaters

Richard Hutchinson and Joseph Kidder

won by audience decision over the team from Calvin college in Wyoming last Friday evening. In the other part of the dual debate State's affirmative team Carlile Lovewell and R. C. Booth lost to the Calvin men on their campus in Grand Rapids.
