Atlantic Editor Tells of Newest Books

By ELOISE HENKEL

"After peace is established, our job will not be over; we must prove to the world what we mean by the American way of life," Edward Weeks, Atlantic Monthly editor, asserted Thursday evening in the college auditorium, addressing 3,000 students and townspeople on "Books in a Troubled World."

"Our writers today are revealing a new spirit," Weeks added. "A spirit Americans did not know they possessed 10 years ago." Today, in his opinion, much of the gloominess of that time has been shed, and Americans are examining themselves with questions like, "What does it mean to be an American?"

Explaining the impossibility of escape from reality, Weeks pointed to two books about American problems in other war periods, "Secret History of the American Revolution" by Carl Van Doren, bringing the anguish and uncertainty of the Revolution in a story of Benedict Arnold, and "Reverie in Washington" by Margaret Leach, picturing the small-town Washington in the 1860's.

"Our own history in the making is contained in 'Berlin Diary' by William Shirer," the editor continued, adding, "This is a good book because Shirer is a good commentator, one who identifies himself with the reader."

Armistice Day Ceremony Set

Plans have been completed for the observation of Armistice day by Michigan State college, it was announced yesterday by Don Farmer, chairman of Student council's committee in charge.

A period of silence will be observed at 11 a. m. while Honorary Cadet Colonel June Esslinger places a wreath on the plaque in the Union containing names of the graduates who died in the last war. The Union Grill and all East Lansing merchants will halt business, Farmer said.

Ten o'clock classes will be excused 10 minutes early and 11 o'clocks will be postponed for 10 minutes, according to Farmer. The committee assisting with arrangements includes Georgia Eagle and Max Reger.

High School Journalists To Convene Here Today

Representatives from 16 towns will attend the second regional high school journalists' conference sponsored by Matrix, women's journalism honorary, today in the Union, according to Clarice Carr, president.

Council Slates Nomination Of New Members

Nominations for additional Student council representatives from five college divisions will take place in a group of meetings occurring simultaneously at 5 p. m. Monday, it was announced yesterday by Student council's election chairman, Fred Quigley.

Elections will include two members from the Liberal Arts division and one each from Applied Science, Home Economics, Art and Engineering, bringing the total membership of the council to 28. Only the Veterinary Science division will not elect.

These elections are being held in accordance with an amendment passed by the student body last spring term enlarging the council in proportion to the number of students in each division, according to Quigley.

Liberal Arts students will nominate in room 206 Hort building, Applied Science in room 122 Kedzie chemical lab, and engineers in room 111 Olds hall, all at 5 p. m. Monday.

Dogs of All Sizes, Shapes to Overrun Dem Hall Sunday

Included in the 428 entries in the Ingham county American Kennel club dog show being held Sunday in Demonstration hall, will be dogs of 31 different breeds. Naming of the "Best Dog in the Show" will climax the show, which will be open to public from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Other features of interest will be children's handling classes and obedience tests. One of the highlights will be a "Parade of Champions" with 36 dogs including 17 breeds participating.

Continuous free movies will be shown throughout the show by the Michigan Department of Conservation.

Betty Guenther, sophomore from Grand Rapids, who has been confined to the college hospital with pneumonia, is "improving rapidly," according to Dr. C. F. Holland, head of the health service.

Housewives to Get Chance to Better Turkey Carving

Housewives of nearby counties will do a better job carving the Thanksgiving turkey this year as a result of the carving demonstrations sponsored by the poultry department and the Extension service of the Home Economics division.

Demonstrations are being held over a period of two weeks and all local arrangements are made by the home extension agents of the Home Economics division. According to J. M. Moore, extension specialist in poultry husbandry, demonstrations have been held in many rural communities where there is widespread interest in these projects.

Moore pointed out that the demonstrations show better methods of dressing, carving, and the best temperature to be used.

String Quartet Will Play Here Next Tuesday

The Stradivarius String Quartet of New York will appear in Michigan State college auditorium Tuesday at 8 p. m. according to Prof. Roy Underwood, chairman of the concert series. The quartet, formed in 1929 has developed a reputation in chamber music circles.

The quartet takes its name from the famous collection of string instruments used by its members. Walter Whitman, first violinist, uses the celebrated "Titon" Stradivarius dated 1715.

Edward Robbins, second violinist, has the famous "Spartan" violin, formerly owned by the Governor General of Canada, Lord Dufferin, violinist, the great "Lord MacDonald" instrument and Ivan M. Armandeau, cellist, the famous "Serravallo" Guarneris.

The quartet will present two additional informal programs Wednesday, according to Roy Underwood, chairman of the concert series. The first will be given in See QUARTET—Page 4

THANKS A LOT!

The student body of Michigan State College thanks you for having given one of its members a ride. When in East Lansing, why not pay State a visit. M.S.C. is known for its traditional friendly spirit, the winding Red Cedar river, its beautiful campus, and Beaumont Tower, which is on the site of Old College Hall, first building of M.S.C.

Spartan hitch-hikers can now fortify themselves for the Thanksgiving vacation with "Spartan Cards," a replica of which is pictured above. The cards are on sale at the Union desk at the College and Campus book stores, Charles Hicks, Men's council president, said.

"Spartan Cards" are designed to be distributed by "thumpers" as a token of thanks to drivers, he explained. The card with the Spartan and Beaumont tower was designed by members of Beta Alpha Sigma, art honorary, last spring and is intended to promote friendly relations between motorists and hitch-hikers. On the back of the card is information about Michigan State college.

This plan, sponsored by Men's council, was carried out last spring term by Student Council as an outgrowth of an idea brought home from the N. S. F. A. convention in Brunswick, N. J., by State delegates last year.

Perfect coordination and timing are needed the same as for intricate football maneuvers. People must be at a certain spot at a specified time ready to contribute their share or the play is "bogged down."

Director Thompson Has His Worries In Fall Term Play

By MAXINE EYESTONE

Players take their positions, signals are called, the curtain rises, and the game goes on. The coach stands in the wings and tears his hair, the players maneuver from one position to another, toss their lines from one person to another, and hope to win the audience's approval after weeks of heart-breaking and nerve-racking practice.

Such are the woes of the director, Dr. W. F. Thompson, and the actors in the all-college play, "Stage Door," to be presented Dec. 3 and 4. What goes on behind the scenes few people know, but it takes more practice than the football team in preparation for a big game.

Characterization and coordination are different for different characters. The gay young flirts' gestures and manner of walking are unlike those of the fat colored maid or the frivolous one-time actress. Even going up and down stairs presents a major problem.

Endurance is one of the main points. The play must go on in spite of physical fatigue, the same as a game.

"Shadows" Still Ahead

Incomplete results of the State News Merchants' service survey showed yesterday that 78 percent of Michigan State students favor "M.C. Shadows" over the Alpha Mater.

The survey, which will poll a 10 percent cross-section of the student body, is now three-fourths complete, according to Ed Saltsburg and Ed Levy, Merchants' service directors.

Staff Members Go to Chicago

Eight college staff members, including Pres. John A. Hannah, will attend the annual convention of the Land Grant College association being held this week end in Chicago. It was announced yesterday by Karl H. McDowell, college secretary.

Hannah will be accompanied by Dean E. L. Anthony, Dean H. B. Dirks of Engineering, and Dean Marie Dye of Home Economics, together with four members of the extension department.

These will be Extension Director R. J. Baldwin, C. V. Ballard, leader of county agent extension work, May Edna Smith, state leader of Home Economics extension work, and R. E. Becker, assistant extension director.

The program for the convention includes committee meetings, section meetings, and outstanding speakers at general sessions. The conference will close Wednesday night.

State Group to Play With Orchestra

A group of students from the college music department will play during the coming season with the Lansing symphony orchestra, according to Romeo Tatz, of the college music department and this year's director of the Lansing concert group.

Among these are: Arnold Taylor, from Bay City, on viola; Irving Travis, Detroit, junior, flutist; Keith Mixer, sophomore from Lansing, violinist; Eugene Logue, Lansing senior, on bassoon.

Others will be Sara Davis, Battle Creek graduate student, cellist; Stewart Rawson, clarinetist from Manchester, Leon and Abe Kniaz, brothers from Chicago, on clarinet and French horn respectively; Orville McDonald, bassoon player from Grand Rapids; John O'Meara, Lansing junior, on the oboe.

Pan-American Policy Theme of Program

John Buccerio, president of La Colofnia, announced yesterday that another program on the Pan-American good neighbor policy will be presented today at 10:30 a. m. over WKAR. Accompanied by Lenore Huddleston, Esther Mastrovito will sing "Coorena" and "Amopola." Piano selections will be included.

Tomas Dominguez, sophomore from Puerto Rico, will be interviewed on Puerto Rican domestic and foreign affairs by Buccerio.

State's Junior Farm Bureau Meets Here

Upwards of 600 members of the Michigan Junior Farm Bureau will convene for their annual convention in the Fairchild theater today. B. F. Hennrich, State Director, announced yesterday.

Wilbert Kewath, Frankfort, Ky., is general chairman of the convention with Clinton Stokes, Greenville, in charge of the banquet at the Union ballroom at 6 p. m. and Don Mauch, Battle Creek, as speaker, heading the evening party to be held in Demonstration hall.

Harold Mitchell, Holly, junior, and Gerhard Gietel, Okemos, senior, will be convention delegates representing the college district Farm Bureau. Alternates are Ray Vinsood, Freeland, junior, and Harriet Berkman, junior from Clarkston.

Margery Frost, Williamston, senior, will participate in the "talk show" contest to take place at the banquet program. Further trophies will be awarded for various activities of the Junior Farm Bureau groups in Michigan during the past year.

If You Ask Me

What's Wrong With M. S. C. Or Rita Hayworth

By Tom Greene

WHAT'S WRONG with Michigan State? Is there something lacking here that other schools have? Has increased size removed all traces of school spirit and enthusiasm? Probably not, but many are the students who think they have to be blasé and indifferent because they are College Men and Women.

AS FAR AS athletics go, school spirit may decline from many things, but regardless of what they told you in junior high school, it does not thrive on a losing team. However, school spirit shows up in other places—provided there is any.

ONE OF THESE is student-sponsored activities. Student-run entertainment ideas here in the past few years can be counted on the fingers of one hand—a small hand at that. Despite opposition from not-unexpected quarters, Kampus Kapers was brought to life and the All-College variety show followed.

NOW STUDENT INTEREST seems to be waning. Surely the student body wants to see student talent—of which there is

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hayes Apologizes for Error Regrets False Figures; Upholds Anti-Cigarette Crusade

To the Editor:

Girls, I am sorry that certain students used the "false statement about infant mortality" to prove that smoking is harmless among women. My sincerest apologies are offered for quoting the inaccurate figures. Dr. Holland and Dr. Schulte both maintain the neurological figures are false.

With Dr. Holland's permission I quote from his "Neither Melnor I made any statement about 'women smokers dying young.' I told the State News I was in agreement with the general text of the article, but what was said about babies dying within the first two years is a bunch of 'hokey'."

I didn't say this as any slam to the article. I also stated that the fact that babies of smoking mothers are deprived of the benefit of

Editor's Note
Mr. Hayes' observation that "there is better material for newspapers, etc." seems to be journalistically unsound. Interest, as always in matters bordering on the screwball side, is high. For that reason, these letters which add little to the scientific aspect are printed.

As always, the State News wishes to present both sides, whether or not either makes sense.

Incidentally, Michigan Department of Health statistics last week showed infant fatalities at the lowest percentage in history. Observation indicates that the percentage of women smoking today is the highest in history.

their mother's milk is too well known to be commented upon. My own conviction is that smoking is a malicious practice among women.

They owe their bodies better care than do men since they have a more sacred purpose—that of cradling babies. From Dr. Schulte I quote: "I don't smoke myself and I like to see other women do it. However, it is an individual problem, and if a woman wishes to ruin her body in such a manner there is not much to be done about it."

"If you ask me," I believe there is better material for newspapers than to make "hokey," "phoney," and "dunkies" of a straightforward expression of thought from one student."

I want to thank Miss MacFarland, Mr. Little, and R. B. Johnson for the opinions of the minority who haven't yet passed the stage of sticking their tongues out and yelling names. Two sides to any issue makes it more interesting.

My intention was not to pick on girls who enjoy their cigarettes or who think that smoking is a good way to stay slim and healthy. My motive was to let "those who care" know what relationship it has to the impressions of many men and to their possibilities of healthy children, as expressed by "those who know"—doctors.

I Wanna Pücher

Dear Daisy Mae—
You are a woman. You smoke. You are not fooled by smoke-appealing ads. You like the taste of tobacco. And you don't think you've lost your natural fragrance and beauty. And you object to being a bulwark between men and their vices.

All these things considered, we suggest you bring this ever-glowing fragrance and beauty to the front where the men of M. S. C. can judge for themselves whether you have retained the glamor you claim for yourself.

Why not have your picture in the State News and let those who gaze at you be the judges?

I Won't Woo

To the Editor:
After reading Mr. Hayes' letter in last Tuesday's State News, I thoroughly agree with the opinions which he expressed. He was straightforward with his reasons and he gave sound reference material.

The girls, however, in replying to his article just expressed their OWN personal views on the subject, which is just the petty side.

I think Mr. Hayes' letter expresses the opinion of the majority of the male student body.

And, Daisy Mae if I ever catch you smoking I'll NEVER woo you again.

Royalty At White House; Scandal of 1870's Exposed

By United Features Syndicate

Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON—Shortly before the Duke and Duchess of Windsor made their last visit to Washington, Mrs. Roosevelt was talking to some close friends about the impending visit, and also remarked that Princess Juliana was coming to see the President a second time.

Mrs. Roosevelt's friends asked how she liked receiving so much royalty. In reply the first lady told in detail her husband's views on the subject. She said the President was talking recently to May Craig, correspondent for several New England newspapers, who told him she thought it was bad public relations to have so many kings, queens and princes being entertained by the head of a democratic nation.

To this the President replied that aside from his delight in entertaining such charming guests, he welcomed them as representatives of truly democratic peoples. And many Americans, he added, sometimes forget that these nations were of vital importance to the United States.

NETHERLANDS IMPORTANT
Holland, for instance, he said, was a little country, but it had islands in the Pacific on which the United States was completely dependent for its tin and rubber.

And he explained how Queen Wilhelmina still held sessions with her cabinet in London, and still Spartan Christian fellowship of these islands.

"And just this week," the President was quoted by his wife as saying, "I wrote to Queen Wilhelmina and told her that her daughter was going to visit us again."

When Mrs. Roosevelt's friends asked her how she liked having the Princess Martha of Norway and her children around so much, she replied: "Oh, we really like them."

HOW WE GOT ALASKA
Army and Navy strategists who stay up late studying the defense of the U. S. A. consider only one part of the country in actual danger of Axis invasion in the near future.

They have some definite ideas about the Panama canal, Texas and the Southwest if the Nazis ever get across from the bulge of Africa to the bulge of Brazil. But for the time being, with Nazi armies encroaching on Russia, and with Japan becoming more and more belligerent, they say the only real danger spot is Alaska—separated by only 23 miles of Bering Sea from the mainland of Siberia.

In view of this, it is interesting to dig into the dusty archives of the State Department regarding the manner in which Alaska was acquired from Russia.

AFTER CIVIL WAR
The purchase took place shortly after the war between the States, when the czar was occupied in trying to get an outlet through the Bosphorus, which risked war with England. So he was afraid England might take Alaska. Also Alaska was valuable chiefly for seal and sea-otter furs to beautify the ladies in waiting, and the Alaskan fur crop was getting low.

Simultaneously, Charles Seward, Secretary of State in 1867, was anxious to extend the new American "empire" both north and south and had suggested the Alaskan purchase to the Russian ambassador in Washington.

Marines May Leave China; Winter Near

With a special Japanese "peace" envoy en route to London, President Roosevelt yesterday morning addressed press conference that he is considering a plan to withdraw United States marines from China—perhaps as a peace gesture or perhaps for use in other parts of the globe.

Marines in Peiping and Shanghai have been used as guards around the International settlement, but if the President makes a formal decision these forces will be withdrawn to an unnamed base—presumably in the Pacific.

In the meantime, Saburo Kuroda, the Japanese envoy whose mission is to negotiate a truce, is flying to the United States to hold special conferences with State Department officials. He is expected in Washington next week.

War Stalemate Develops
Joseph Stalin, speaking in Moscow's Red Square yesterday, thus discrediting the German tactic that he had fled the city, predicted the downfall of Hitler's empire within a year. "Under the weight of his own crime," he declared that the Soviet army will achieve an "ultimate victory."

As Stalin spoke, the position of the Russian armies, which have time and again been reported victorious, was being reported.

CORAL GABLES

ALWAYS THE BEST MUSIC IN TOWN

November 8, 1941

Fellow Spartans:

NO MORE GLOOMY SUNDAYS.

Starting this Sunday Coral Gables will introduce a Tea Dance featuring two orchestras.

Dancing will begin at 4 o'clock, Bud Bell's band will play till 7 o'clock and Rodd Raffell's orchestra will then take over for the remainder of the evening.

Here's our chance to make it a real collegiate affair. Let's all be out there Sunday afternoon and every Sunday afternoon from now on.

Here's hoping for a capacity crowd.

Sincerely,

A TRUE SPARTAN

'V' Ball Opens Social Card; More Tonight

By Harriette Ysberg
Leading off social activities on campus this week-end were the "V for Victory" ball and the Tri-Club "Autumn Boogie" last night. Numerous term and radio parties are also planned for tonight.

Demonstration hall was the scene of the Victory ball, whose chairman was Hal Crumley. He was with Mary Jane Millard whose dress was military in style—a plaid taffeta skirt with a black velvet jacket set off by epaulets. Clinton Snyder escorted Ruth Cornell, I. S. A. president, who chose pink tulle embroidered with silver flowers. Robin Keith and his orchestra played for dancing.

TRI-CLUB HOLDS PARTY

Lattice-work covered with autumn leaves formed the backdrop for Tommy Tabler's orchestra at Tri-Club's semi-formal night. Miss Sophia Birba, chairman, was escorted by William Fish. She wore light blue taffeta trimmed with coral.

Clothes were important at the Wells hall hard times party in the Little Theater last night, but not so far as beauty was concerned. Bancroft Bisbee, chairman, and his guest, Betty Schorn, helped carry out the theme, as did Rex Barnes, president, and Tony Yager.

DELTA CHIS DANCE

Two fraternity term parties are scheduled for tonight. Delta Chi will entertain their guests in the Union, with Bud Bell playing for dancing. Chairman Ken Hathaway will escort Eleanor Wilson. And she has chosen a black taffeta skirt with contrasting red velvet jacket.

Dorothy Doran will be the guest of Chuck Jarrett, president, and will wear a black taffeta, off-the-shoulder formal set off with pink embroidery.

Phi Kappa Tau's semi-formal will be held in the Little Theater tonight, and Chuck Hubbard will be there with Betty Jane Youngman, who has chosen draped black silk jersey.

Don McGaw, president, will dance to the music of Jack Murphy with Emma Siskha.

WILL PLAY "DOGPATCH"

Dancing "Dogpatch" style is to be the keynote of a dance tonight sponsored by the Michigan State Hill foundation, according to Chairman Florence Wilkins, Syracuse junior. The forestry cabin will be the site of the "girl-get-away" event.

The dance will celebrate national observance of Sadie Hawkins day, sacred to the memory of Hekkebiak Hawkins, an early Dogpatch settler who had the homeless daughters in the hills. A day has been set aside commemorating the time when Sadie Hawkins successfully pursued and won a man.

TRAVEL TO TROPICS
Guests at the Beta Kappa fraternity radio party last night found themselves in a tropical setting. Lister Simons, chairman of the dance, escorted Armonia Saragossa, and they entertained with the congo, native and tropical dances. Miss Saragossa wore a gay flowered skirt with a lace, off-the-shoulder blouse. Simons was also dressed in a native costume.

Pledges of Phi Delta Theta fraternity entertained active at a radio party last night at the chapter house. Bill Clark was general chairman and had as his guest Betty Applegate.

Also following a South American theme—this time in the form of a "dive"—was the radio party at Mason hall last night. Guests came dressed as poor South Americans, and Bob Nickerson and his guest, Jean Johnson, added to the atmosphere dressed as peons.

SHOW MOVIES
Movies of the Halloween party last week were shown at the Abbot hall dance last night. Bob McDougal was chairman of the affair.

Tonight Alpha-Xi Delta sorority members and guests will attend a radio party at the chapter house. General chairman will be Rosalie Beltz who will be escorted by Bud Jarvis.

Another hard-times party will be held at the Phi Chi Alpha fraternity house tonight. Stuart Atwell is chairman and will escort Eva May Legg, while John Reynolds, president, will have as his guest, Mary Don Doxie.

WEEKS

The Weeks mentioned were "You Can't Do Business With Hitler" by Douglas Miller, and "Pattern for Conquest," by Joseph C. Harsch.

According to Weeks, the English haven't the heart to write as they did in the last war. "Where Stands a Winged Sentry," by Margaret Kennedy, he remarked, illustrates the new determination in English writers today who are emphasizing British endurance, patience, and courage.

Commenting on Jan Strother's "White Cliffs of Dover," Weeks found the heroine to be "wooden." J. B. Priestley's "Out of the People," however, the speaker declared, "shows the new yeast rising in England, the realization of the people that the real England, the England fighting this war is the democratic England."

Eric Knight's "This Above All" is both descriptive and imaginative, the critic maintained, as it sums up English hopes and apprehensions. In "The Keys to the Kingdom," A. J. Cronin, a poor Scotch doctor, is at his best, as always when writing of humble folk.

Forecasting outstanding books to appear soon, the speaker recommended "The Admirals of the Sea," a tale of Columbus by Morrison, "Children of Light," "For Whom the Bell Tolls," by Ernest Hemingway in which Robert Jordan is the "connecting link between us and what is happening in Europe."

Weeks looked for a return of the humor of Mark Twain and Artemus Ward, good books on labor unions, typical of American industry, and historical biographies.

APO Members Attend Convo

Eight members of the Michigan State chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, will attend the Five-State conference of the organization at the University of Chicago today and tomorrow. It was announced yesterday by projects chairman William Konde.

Those attending will be Emerson Planck, A. P. O. president, John Woodruff, recording secretary, Bob Marshall, corresponding secretary, Gordon Hanna, program chairman, Douglas Bland, sergeant-at-arms, Richard Geer, Bob Van Antwerp, and John Sinclair.

A. P. O. representatives from 20 different schools in Michigan, Illinois as a practice session with Ohio will attend the conference, Konde said.

Contest Attracts Five State Men

Five members of the Michigan State livestock judging team are participating in the regional judging contest at the University of Illinois as a practice session with four neighboring states this week. Team members will leave tonight with G. R. Propp, instructor in animal husbandry and coach of the team. Students on the team are Harold Geiger, Crosswell senior; Don Eppelheimer, Charlotte senior; Merton Sowerby, Rockford junior; Keith Sowerby, Rockford senior; John Foster, Hastings senior; Edward Warren, Ypsilanti senior; Howard Fox, Cassopolis senior; and Arthur Pope, Addison senior.

Dean E. L. Anthony's office on the second floor of Ag hall.

All persons interested in nominations have been requested to be in these rooms at 5 p. m. Monday. Members of the divisional councils will preside over the meetings.

Five voting machines will be used in the primary elections to be held Thursday, November 13. Quigley announced the machines for Applied Science and Liberal Arts will be placed in the Union, for Engineers in Olds hall, for Home Ec students in the Home Ec building, and for Ag students in Ag hall. Primary voting will last from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. The five persons elected will take office immediately and remain until spring term.

Besides Quigley as chairman, the Student council election committee includes Charles (Bud) Hicks, Men's council representative, and Bob Peterson of the Applied Science council.

Lansing Film League Sponsors Pictures

Opening with "The Life and Loves of Beethoven" on November 16 the Lansing Film league will sponsor, during winter term, a series of documentary and foreign films in the Olds Hotel. These films will be presented on alternate Sundays at 7 p. m. with a second showing later in the evening.

Other films on the season ticket are "Thunder Over Mexico," Nov. 30; "Carnival in Flanders," Dec.

Drama Fans Find Southern Play Hard to Comprehend

By Rosalind Friedman

An attentive audience of 450 playgoers tried desperately to follow the ideas and plot presented by the Carolina Playmakers in "The House of Connelly" yesterday at Fairchild theater.

Although the play was well received, the conflict of people in the South during the early years of the Reconstruction was a bit beyond the comprehension of the northern audience.

Strangely enough, it is not the

The Union ballroom at 12.35 p. m. This will be a half-hour program enabling students to attend during their noon hour. Underwood pointed out.

At 4.00 in the Music auditorium Frank Mannheim, head of the piano department, will join the Stradivarius quartet in presenting a piano quintet by Brahms. Both programs are open to students.

Director Shuffles Cast of Term Play

Due to some difficulties in production, a change has been made in the original cast of "Stage Door," which will be presented in Fairchild theater on the evenings of December 3 and 4. Dr. W. Fawcett Thompson, director, announced yesterday.

Frances Grootjans, who originally was to play the part of Terry Randall, and Myra Buchholz, whose role was that of Kay Hamilton have changed places so that now Miss Grootjans plays Kaye, and Miss Buchholz is Terry. This gives the latter the leading role.

The reason for this, Thompson said, was that the women were better adapted to playing each other's parts.
