'Rabbit' Leaves Courtroom

Two unidentified American MPs escort Tamaki Nakamura, former lieutenant in the Japanese army and prisoner of war commandant, from the courtroom in Tokyo after he was sentenced to 12 years at hard labor for misappropriating Red Cross supplies and mistreatment of prisoners of war. Nakamura, known to Allied prisoners of war as "The Rabbit," is a graduate of St. John's and Northwestern university in America.

Foresters Will Display Beards At Annual Ball

Michigan State's only costume ball, the annual Foresters' Shindig, will be held on Jan. 25, in the Women's gym, according to Fred Schulte, Lansing senior and Shindig chairman. Music will be supplied by Jimmy Shafer's orchestra from 9 to 12 p.m.

George Allen, Lansing graduate student, will be master of ceremonies for the dance time program.

Old Paul Bunyan himself, lord of foresters and lumberjacks everywhere, returns in spirit once each year to create the proper atmosphere. He will be greeted in true woodsman fashion with a colorful array of plant shirts, blue jeans, and boots.

The gym will be transformed into a state forest of real trees. Various woodland scenes will include a lumber town saloon, serving eats and drinks over a rustic bar.

Highlight of the affair is the beard growing contest already in progress. Having started on Jan. 10, the men are vying for the most luxurious growth. The winner will be chosen by popular applause at intermission. It'll be general appearance, not only length that counts, so it's not too late to start. A prize will go to the winner.

Coed Freedom Proves Successful

By NAN MORGAN
A year ago this term the honor system made its first appearance in women's dormitories. Though first instituted on an experimental basis it has become a permanent part of women's dorm life, and illustrates another step in the lifting of regulations governing women students.

Under the honor system government proctors have been replaced by counselors, and quiet hours are enforced by the women themselves.

The lifting of the majority of women's restrictions, which have culminated in the honor system, occurred in just the past few years.

As late as 1940 women students were required to wear hose wherever they went, and could not appear for dinner without having their legs properly covered.

Sneaking into the dorm dining rooms without hose was quite a polished art which occasionally involved hiding behind a sofa or crouching in a telephone booth in the lobby.

It was in 1942, when wartime shortages caused a scarcity of hose that coeds could legally wear anklets.

Slacks vs. Skirts
The battle of skirts versus slacks was climaxed in '43 when the latter were permitted for class wear during cold weather if covered by a full length coat. Until that time slacks were taboo for anything other than athletic events, even if East Lansing was in the throes of a sub-zero cold wave.

House regulations have also had some drastic changes. Dormitory hours have been following a trend toward extension since '31 when freshmen women had to be in at 7:45. Fifteen minutes were taken

Presidents Meet With Hannah

College Heads Will Exchange Ideas, School Problems

A council of presidents from the colleges in Michigan, which are state supported, was formed yesterday afternoon in the offices of John Hannah, head of Michigan State college.

Named as chairman of the new group was Alexander G. Ruthven, University of Michigan president.

The council was organized to facilitate the exchange of information and problems of higher education in Michigan. Heads of the seven schools have met from time to time in the past to discuss their mutual problems.

The college presidents decided to make a formal organization so that inquiries might be addressed to a central body and there might be a smoother method for the exchange of information.

Plan Research

The schools plan to pool facilities for research into the problems of higher education and to find means of coordinating their programs more effectively. The council members agreed to meet at least four times each year and as many more times as needs might indicate.

Besides Ruthven and Hannah the council is made up of John M. Munson, Michigan State Normal; Paul B. Sangren, Western Michigan; Henry A. Tape, Northern Michigan college of education; Grover C. Dillman, Michigan College of Mining and Technology; and Charles L. Anspeck, Central Michigan college.

236 Pledges Take Exam

Results of the bi-annual fraternity pledge test held last Friday night were released yesterday by the office of the Dean of Men. Participating pledges numbered 236.

The five leading fraternities in order of their scores are: Theta Chi, 15 pledges, 88.3; Phi Kappa Tau, 14 pledges, 86.8; Sigma Chi, 13 pledges, 86.5; Delta Chi, 18 pledges, 86.2; and Phi Delta Theta, 13 pledges, 86.1. Remaining fraternities turned in scores that were correspondingly high, it was noted.

Paul F. Cline, president of IFC, said that the pledge tests are held Winter and Spring terms to determine the value and extent of pledge class training within the fraternities.

Russ Wentworth, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, was in charge of the tests, which were given in room 206 Horticulture building. He was assisted by Jerry Anderson, Lambda Chi Alpha, Bruce Thorberg, Sigma Chi, Walter Avis, Theta Chi, Chuck Petot, Kappa Sigma, and Dick Verkle, Delta Sigma Phi.

Fraternities that have already held open houses report a large turnout and great interest among visiting rushers. Next week individual fraternities will invite men to resume regular rushing procedure.

On in '34 and in '38 the hour of nine was made official. Fall term of '45 brought about the present uniform hours for all women. Later permissions were put into effect just three years ago.

Callen Four In
Until '44 popular coeds were protected from callers at the dorm until 4 p.m., but the iron curtain was raised that year and men poured in at noon.

During the war years when it was often necessary to have three girls to a room there was bed check every morning at 7, and lights out at 11:30 p.m. But this rule was soon revoked and once again girls could sleep in or study during the wee hours of the morning.

Abandonment of the last 70 hours occurred fall term when smoking was finally permitted in the dormitory rooms.

No Flowers Friday: Council Calls Greek Party Open Dance

By JIM MCCARTNEY
Student council last night, in formal resolution, decided to leave the question of formal or informal dress for campus dances up to the organization sponsoring the dance.

The problem for men in obtaining formal wear was fully discussed. It was suggested that an organization might be taking a chance in presenting a formal dance.

The question of flowers for Friday night's semi-formal IFC-Pan-Hellenic dance was brought up. Councilmen agreed that since it has been declared an open party flowers will not be allowed.

PLYMOUTH, Pa., Jan. 15 (AP)—Edward Griffith, president and general manager of Glen Alden coal company, announced tonight 13 miners were known dead in a gas explosion at the company's Nottingham Colliery.

Griffith said names of the men were not available. Two other men are not accounted for, the mine official said. The bodies of the dead men were still in the mine.

No Change
Discussing discontent with the recent college absence policy, the council voted down a proposal to request a restatement of the policy by the faculty.

The council approved constitutions for two campus organizations: Excalibur, senior men's honorary discontinued because of the war; and a new organization, as yet unnamed, created to present one "student-produced, student-directed, student-written, operated or other musical type production" each year.

Union Board Will Sponsor Card Tourney

Union board has announced that it will sponsor Michigan State's entry into the 1947 national bridge tournament. Bill Page, Muskegon junior, will be in charge of State's entry.

Michigan State will be one of 128 colleges participating in the four year old tournament. Each school is entitled to enter four pairs of contestants. State's four team entry will be determined by an all college bridge tournament to be held within the next two weeks.

The eight finalists will play a group of 18 prepared hands; their scores will be sent to the central tournament committee in New York. The two highest pairs in the district, consisting of 17 schools, will be invited to Chicago for the finals on April 18 and 19.

A call for entries will be made this week. All entrants must register in teams: either two men, two women, or a mixed couple.

Rep. Elton R. Eaton, Plymouth Republican and chairman of the house taxation committee, was preparing for introduction of resolutions to place the repeal proposal on the table, and to revise the amendment by eliminating the so-called "frozen" appropriation to public schools.

At the same time, Governor Sigler wound up a conference with Mayor Edward J. Jeffries of Detroit, sponsor of the amendment, which, he said, "was a very friendly discussion and I personally feel we have made a lot of progress."

Jeffries' only comment to newsmen was "the governor will talk it over with a representative group of mayors."

Asked whether he was seeking a compromise on the question with mayors and educators, Sigler replied "Yes," and then added, "Well, I wouldn't want to put it that way, exactly."

LANSING, Jan. 15 (AP)—The state's difficulties arising from passage of the sales tax diversion amendment bubbled over today as a movement spread to seek repeal of that amendment at the spring election and Governor Sigler appeared to be taking a hand in the growing controversy.

Two Politicos Claim Legal Right To Post

ATLANTA, Jan. 15 (AP)—Georgia's battle of the two governors entered the courts late today when Attorney General Eugene Cook filed suit to enjoin Herman Talmadge from functioning as governor on the basis of his election by the legislature several hours earlier.

After a day in which both Talmadge, 33, and 39-year-old Ellis Arnall, completing a four-year term, had performed the duties of governor, Cook filed a petition for the injunction in Fulton superior court at Arnall's direction. The suit asked Judge Walter C. Hendrix to decide title to the office, pending to a supreme court appeal.

Both Operate As Governor

Throughout the day Arnall and Talmadge had operated as governor from offices less than 20 yards apart at the capitol and engaged in battle for control of the state militia to bolster their claims to the office.

Talmadge had left the capitol when the suit was filed but his secretary, Benton Olson, described the action as "merely a maneuver."

In accepting the order from Governor Arnall directing me to file a petition for a declaratory judgment in this matter, and in filing this petition, I am recognizing Gov. Arnall as the lawful governor," Cook said. "I feel that the supreme court of Georgia should have an opportunity to pass on it," Cook added.

Judge Hendrix directed Talmadge to show cause Feb. 7 why he should not be barred from the office.

Quiescent Constitutional Provision

Arnall contends a legislative election is illegal. Talmadge says a constitutional provision requires—See GEORGIA, Page 4

Governorship Row Based On Legal Grounds

ATLANTA, Jan. 15 (AP)—Here are the legal grounds upon which Herman Talmadge and Ellis Arnall are basing their claims to Georgia's governorship.

Talmadge—a provision of the state constitution calling for legislative election of a governor if no person had a majority of votes in the preceding general election. Talmadge contends death voided the majority his father, Eugene, received. The clause provides for the election by the general assembly of one of the two men receiving the most write-in votes. Herman received the most general election write-ins.

Arnall—another section of the constitution providing that a governor shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified. He says the section that Herman relies upon is void and that his legal successor could be only Lieutenant Governor M. E. Thompson.

At least 42,000 men were idle—more than half of them in protest against the use of troops to suppress the truckers in moving food—and observers said that the walkout threatened to involve all of the port of London's 24,000 union workers.

No Riders

Beating the shortages is getting to be a tough proposition. Three MSC profs found that out the other night when they tried to find a seat on the bus on its return trip to Lansing buses. The trio, Lansing found, boarded an eastbound bus hoping to ride to the East Lansing end of the line, stick on the bus on its return trip and thus avoid the mobs. It might have worked except for a bus driver who insisted that all passengers leave the bus at the end of the run and pay again if they wanted to ride further. The trio avoided the mobs all right, but it cost them a dime to do it.

Head Buildings

May Alleviate Lab Shortage

A shortage of engineering labs, which has proved a bottleneck in the engineering department, will be met by the construction of 125,000 square feet of temporary buildings which are to include several labs, John A. Hannah announced yesterday. He said the new buildings would probably be finished next fall.

Last November the college was granted 125,000 square feet of temporary housing which is to be built across the Red Cedar road to the auditorium and band shell. The new buildings are to be used as classrooms, offices and laboratories.

"Head" temporary buildings were named due to the legislation of former Senator Mead who introduced the plan of allotting money to the FWA to move college buildings to college campuses. The buildings were merely ammunition warehouses. Michigan State college has acted the worst point in the state's recovery—tussle," Hannah said. "Our building program will now start to ease the crowded conditions brought about by increased enrollment."

"Not too serious" was Hannah's reported inability of the state to give next year's freshmen chemistry courses. "I do not see how we are going to meet the situation in the chemistry department as yet," he remarked. "I know it will be met in the way we will provide facilities for the new freshmen when the time comes."

Jazz Club Polls

State Students

Voting will begin today to determine State favorites in popular music. Al Singer, Bay City freshman, has stated.

The poll, sponsored by the MSC club, will continue through Monday and Saturday, with the polls open from 8 to 5.

Divisions on the ballots will include swing band, sweet band, female vocalist, male vocalist, small group (instrumental) and jazz band. The club is also trying to cut out if students would be interested in attending jazz concerts featuring nationally known acts.

Ballot boxes are to be provided at the Union Ticket Desk, Main auditorium lobby, and Quonset Hut cafeteria. Students must write their names and student numbers to the ballots.

The Official Ballot is printed on page two.

Solon Charges Union With Racketeering

Senator Capehart Calls Methods 'High Pressure Sales Campaign'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15 (AP) — Senator Capehart (R-Ind.) accused a big CIO union today of conducting "a high pressure sales campaign" in pushing suits for portal-to-portal pay.

Naming the union as the United Steel Workers, he said its activities might be called racketeering.

The Senator also related that in Chicago unions are filing portal suits on prepared forms and that "this has taken on the aspects of a wholesale business." Capehart explained that the forms require only filling in such information as names and amounts.

Capehart was urging a Senate judiciary committee to approve legislation aimed at erasing liability for the bulk of more than $4,000,000,000 in back pay claims.

The suits were inspired by a supreme court decision that employers are liable for pay for time required to be spent on their premises as well as for actual work.

Asks If Racketeering Is Used
Senator Eastland (D-Miss.), a member of the subcommittee, posed the question whether the steel workers practiced "racketeering" in using methods described by Capehart.

Eastland referred to a questionnaire which Capehart said the union had circulated to its members dealing with the portal issue. Capehart said one question asked was:

"Do you normally take a shower before leaving company property?" This indicates, Capehart said that the unions are out on a fishing expedition and don't know whether they have a case or not.

Commented Eastland: "Isn't that more like racketeering?"

High Pressure Sales Campaign
Capehart agreed that it might be called that. "It is a high pressure sales campaign," he added.

Georgia Governors Battle

ed such an election and that he should take over for his father, the late Eugene Talmadge, who died 23 days before his scheduled inauguration yesterday.

Each appointed an adjutant general to command the militia but at the day's end there had been no development to determine whom the troops would heed should the commanders in chief call for assistance.

Marvin Griffin, who has served under the Arnall administration as adjutant general, resigned and was promptly re-commissioned by Talmadge. Arnall countered by naming Col. R. W. Collins adjutant general.

Then Talmadge issued an executive order dissolving the state guard on the grounds it had served its purpose and that the reorganized national guard, with Griffin in command, was in position to take over if needed.

"Just Walk and See"
"Just wait and see whose orders the state and national guard will take if they get orders that are conflicting," commented Arnall, who vested Collins with complete, full and absolute control of both the state and national guards.

Talmadge made several appointments to state offices during the day, but when his appointees moved to take over, the Arnall men on the job just sat tight. The rival appointees chatted amiably.

Lieutenant Governor-elect M. E. Thompson, balked in his fight to succeed Arnall by the legislature's election of Talmadge, visited the capitol and said "the politics of this is over; now it's a question of law." He said he had turned his claim over to a lawyer.

Rivals Part After Inauguration
The rivals did not face each other after their dramatic 2:15 a.m. encounter when the legislature, after 12 hours of debate and canvassing of the general election returns, inaugurated Talmadge.

"I presume that you have been informed that I have been elected as governor by the general assembly of Georgia," said Talmadge as he preceded scores of his followers into Arnall's capitol suite.

Arnall shot back:

"I understand the general assembly allegedly has elected you, but the general assembly cannot elect a governor. Accordingly, I respectfully but firmly refuse to yield the office to you, whom I consider a pretender."

Talmadge turned on his heels, after a brief verbal exchange, and walked from the office but some of his followers tried to push their way inside.

P. T. McCutchen, Arnall's secretary, blocked the door as some shouted "pull him (Arnall) out of there."
