

AL'S HALF ACRE

The Senator Was Discreet

By AL BERGLUND

AFTER all the talk about whether a day-time convocation would prove a more satisfactory method for the student body to establish contact with the lecturers who visit our campus at regular intervals, the student attendance at Monday's convocation gave the answer. The number of students who attended was sufficient to warrant further afternoon appearances of visiting speakers.

Will the students return to hear another speech such as the one delivered by Senator Ferguson?

I doubt it. No matter how much we need re-education in the fundamental principles of democracy, the general feeling was that the Monday convocation was no place nor time for such re-education.

If bringing leaders of our national government to the campus will not add to our information concerning vital national issues, no further lecturers should be invited. Senator Ferguson has come to grips with some of the most vital problems of our day during his tenure of office in the Senate, and the students who gathered in the auditorium wanted him to wade into these issues and do his best to clear some of them up with the first-hand information he possesses. Soporific platitudes about the spirit of the founding fathers may be obtained each June from commencement speakers.

Perhaps the Senator was misinformed about the reason he was invited to speak here. His attempt to stick to non-partisan issues in an election year for fear of offending anyone gave the whole meeting an air of burlesque.

There was no need for Ferguson to quote chapter and verse about how much better the Republicans will make our government if a GOP slate is elected in November. That will be done at Lincoln day dinners everywhere tomorrow night. On the other hand, a critical appraisal of such problems as taxation, civil rights, universal military training, the Marshall plan or federal aid to education would have given the students who will vote in November something concrete to go on. Anything less than a forthright discussion of at least one or two of these subjects seems to me a contradiction of the purpose of both campus political clubs and/or visiting lecturers.

Let's hope our next visitor will better serve Michigan State's student electorate.

ROBERTS REPORTS:

USSR 'Pulls' Propaganda Punch; Story Of Nazi-Soviet Agreements

By J. M. ROBERTS, AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Many observers have felt since publication of the captured German documents on Nazi-Soviet relations for 1939-41 that Moscow had been given room for some pretty strong retaliation.

Ernest Bevin said that, just because the United States had published some material out of context, there was no reason for Britain to do the same.

Russia was expected to come back with a statement showing exactly what the situation was at the time. While Russia had actually set the stage for the war, students knew there were factors in justification. Just as there were such factors in the British policy of appeasing Germany.

USSR Replies With Blanks. But Russia has replied with blanks. She says she is going to load the gun later on with her own captured documents. For all the suppression she makes with Monday's generalized argumentative and propaganda-filled statement, she might just as well have wanted.

There is no question in my mind that Russia, faced in 1938 with the possibility of war for which she was unready, shied her efforts for world revolution to devote herself to self-preservation. She was perfectly willing, of course, that self-preservation should be accompanied by a disruptive war between the western powers. But she also was right in suspecting that the West was perfectly willing to see Germany assume the role of Communism-killer.

World Boycotts Russia. Fear of Communism after World War I resulted in what amounted to an international boycott of Russia. The West, for a time, unquestionably welcomed the use of Hitler as an antidote. When they finally recognized him for what he was, it was too late. When they gave him Czechoslovakia the Russians naturally took it as a sign that he would be permitted to expand eastward without hindrance from France and England.

"France and England were assassinated," wanted a treaty. But they had nothing to offer, except the support of the French army, of which the Russians might have known a great deal, which the world did not find out until later. The treaties on the other hand were in Czechoslovakia, were spreading the contest, which later became occupation in the Baltics, and were spreading sparks in the direction of Poland. The latter was of vital concern to Russia's strategic position.

Usual Diplomacy. Much has been made of the fact that it was Russia who first suggested that she and Germany might get together. But as I read the documents, it amounted only to about what is usual when the ambassador from one country meets the state secretary of another for the first time. The entire progress of the negotiations indicates that it was the Germans, not the Russians, who displayed the real initiative, and that this initiative became almost frantic as Hitler prepared to start his war without knowing whether he might have to fight on two fronts.

The Russians' deals are totally unacceptable to the Western conscience. But just as realistic is the reason for their unwillingness to move against Russia today, so is it real to keep a careful balance. The object of American foreign policy is to contain Russia's expansionist policy until she can be persuaded to abandon it, to take any and every means of preventing not provoking another war.

Special Session Opens March 16

LANSING, Feb. 16 (AP)—The date of the special legislative session today definitely was set for March 16 by Governor Sigo.

Sigo said the session would get underway as planned on March 16 despite pressure from a few legislators to have proceedings open March 2.

Many of the legislators have planned their personal affairs on the theory the session would be March 16 and some of them have gone south with the same understanding, Sigo said.

Senate Group Votes To Appoint ERP Head

Proposal Takes Aid Plan From State Department

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (AP)—The Senate foreign relations committee unanimously agreed today to put a $24,000-a-year, cabinet rank administrator in charge of the European Recovery program. This would take the program out of State Department control.

Chairman Vandenberg (Mich.) announced the decision at a news conference. He said the administrator—advised by a bipartisan board—would work closely with the secretary of state. Any disagreements between them would be put to the president.

Vandenberg said that decision was reached after "happy and amicable" discussions with State Department officials. "If they had any complaints," Vandenberg said, "I haven't heard them."

The Michigan senator outlined the foreign relations committee's recommendations against a background of these foreign aid developments.

1. Rep. Heister (R-Mass.), chairman of a special house committee that visited Europe last summer, said the Marshall plan should be made "broad-enough" to take in any part of the world—not merely the 16 European countries it now includes.

2. Henry Wallace, a Marshall plan opponent, asked permission to give the house foreign affairs committee his views and the committee invited him to testify February 12.

3. Senator Reed (R-Kan.) and GOP hopes for victory in November might be roused if congress fails to adopt a "workable" program and President Truman could pin the responsibility on the Republican party.

4. The State Department disclosed that France is getting more than half the food, fuel and other supplies going to Europe under the $22,000,000 stopgap aid program voted last December.

Friday's lecture will be given by Dr. Paul Hongshiem, historical and theoretical sociologist and professor of sociology, anthropology, and foreign studies at MSC. Dr. Hongshiem will speak on "Max Weber and Karl Marx."

A Student Council committee headed by Yearl E. Schwartz, Wyandotte senior, will plan and present these discussions.

Schwartz said the purpose of the lectures is to augment courses already offered at Michigan State college with information not ordinarily covered in regular class sessions.

Plans similar to this one are already in practice at such universities as the University of
