ODAY'S AMPUS

Tudor Trouble

Washington, Feb. 17 (UPI)—Congress today turned the price problem over to a law it never enacted—the law of supply and demand.

That was the practical effect of a prediction by Senator Tobey (R-NH) that action on wage-price and rationing legislation will be delayed indefinitely by the market break.

"I think the peak of the price problem has been reached," said Tobey. "The edge is off the price problem," he told a reporter.

Tobey said his Senate banking committee probably will wait and see what happens before acting on anti-inflation measures.

The committee would be monitoring hearings on a Senate bill introduced last day after the market break. The bill, introduced by Senator Tobey, would set up a national commission to study the cost of living.

Chairman Walter R. Johnson of the House banking committee last week proposed that Congress take a two-week recess on anti-inflation measures. He said, "we are heading in the right direction."

If at the end of the waiting and watching period the old economic law of supply and demand does not stabilize prices, they indicated congress may be forced to consider steps to curb the cost of living.

Students have long urged a social science Bill that has been passed, that seems to know less about the term than the term.

John Smucker told us the other day that the same test slightly less at the end of the term they look at the beginning of the department finds things have actually lost most all along.

Bewildered

Students are overjoyed to have been released from their studies with cynicism. Few seem to have ever remarked utterly and exit from the classroom. The only exception about that was the prof takes off.

THE SQUARE CORNER

Why Study?

By PAT McCARTHY

SORTING THROUGH SOME OLD TEXT books the other day, we ran across out old Psych 201 tome by Floyd L. Ruch (some persons rhyme it with crutch, others pronounce it Roo)—take your choice). Not that we would consider ourselves sufficiently learned to criticize this profound insight in life, but it seems to us that the author was somewhat removed from college life when he wrote the book. In particular, his observations on how the student should conduct himself in study are no less than absurd.

The author seems to consider the average student, if there ever was such a person, capable of superhuman effort. A few gems of his advice include: "Work while you work; play while you play," "Remind yourself of your goal," "Assume an active attitude," and "Compete with yourself or with others." He strangely ignores the very immediate and practical purpose of studying which is to pass the course and stay in the good graces of the dean.

The crowning insult of all to college life is the supposedly representative schedule he uses to illustrate the ideal program of an earnest student. This poor student is one of those who spends two hours preparation for each course hour.

NOT THAT IT IS WRONG TO TRY AND plan one's daily schedule, but it hardly seems right to plan one's week or term without so much as passing mention on the possibility of one's wanting to do something else at a specific time. And certainly a great deal of time is wasted by not allowing for a good five or six hours of classes to be cut during the week. Just think what this highly self-regimented student could do, with all this extra time. Why he could maybe sleep, go to a show, sit all afternoon in the grill—how can one sit all afternoon in the grill when his schedule says that he has two classes in Beskey and three hours to spend waiting in line at the library?—or maybe he could just sit and do nothing but reflect on the possibilities of a new raise in subsistence.

It may be all well and fine to plan out every minute of one's day, but it certainly takes the joy out of life. We rather approve of the hit or miss method which leaves everything to the last minute.

Ruch does allow his subject two or three hours a day to " loaf" but this again gets us nowhere. Whoever heard of loafing by the numbers?

HOW THE STUDENT SHOULD ACTUALLY attack this problem of learning is to loaf whenever possible and put off all studying for any one course until the night before. Then of course he crams for the test.

This method has its advantages. The individual student, not this absurdly unreal "average" creature, obviously has more time to loaf and loaf with a vengeance. But the most attractive point of this practice is that he manages to get a comprehensive overall picture of what he is studying. He is not getting a time-wasting, piece by piece jumble of learning.

Because he must learn and learn in a hurry, he naturally throws out all irrelevant material and grasps the meat and overall concept of that which he may be perusing.

RUCH'S (ROOZE, RUTCHES) WHOLE trouble lies in the fact that he is drawing his marvelous plan around a completely nonexistent individual, the average student. No such thing exists or ever will.

Administration Officials Will Study Constitution

Top members of the college administration are now considering the proposed new Student government constitution.

In a Monday meeting with Council President Jerry Warren and Ed Howard, Ovid junior, instrumental in drafting the document, Dean of Students S. E. Crowe expressed surprise that the administration had not been kept informed of developments.

Crowe said yesterday that he had not had time to study the document closely, but indicated that he expected to be able to do so before the council meeting tonight.

There was a possibility that a meeting, including President John Honnay, Presidential Assistant James H. Denison, Registrar Robert S. Larson, Women's Counselor Mrs. Isabelle Gordon, Men's Counselor Tom King, and Dean Crowe, might be called to discuss the provisions of the new constitution.

Crowe emphasized in the Monday meeting with Warren and

Grain Prices Skid Again In 'Seesaw' Day

CHICAGO, Feb. 17 (AP) — A wave of selling in wheat put most grains on the price toboggan again today and stocks slackened their recovery pull.

Nearly all commodity markets joined in the downturn near the close of the trading day.

The seesaw action of market prices the last few days left the future value of the housewife's shopping dollar still up in the air.

Uncertainty among traders over the future outlook kept prices bobbing in the markets.

However, the average householder still was cashing in on the general commodity market downturn of the last two weeks.

The New York division of Safeway Stores, Inc., reduced prices on 105 meat items from two to ten cents and two large Philadelphia chains cut meat prices two to ten cents a pound.

Wheat and oats dipped lower in all United States markets. Grains showed some strength in early trading today and some brokers said there were indications selling had about run its course. When prices dipped near the close they were not so sure.

Timid buying on the heels of Monday's rally tended to bolster New York stocks. Many leaders, however, were stalled by light selling. The feeling that Monday's best advance in four months was only a technical correction failed to dampen enthusiasm of professional buyers.

U.S. Halts Fuel Oil, Gasoline Exports For Next 48 Hours

Commerce Department Plans Change In Quotas By Friday

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17 (AP) — The Commerce department tonight halted the issuance of export licenses for gasoline and fuel oil for 48 hours, effective at once.

Before Friday, a new cut in export quotas probably will be announced, a department spokesman said, to save oil for chilly American homes. The decision was announced after two false starts. Shortly after 4 p.m. CST, the department told reporters of the temporary license suspension.

Within half an hour an information official notified reporters that the suspension "has been called off." Instead, he said, an announcement of a cut in quota was being "prepared." Then, in another half-hour, the department officially announced that the suspension was in force.

Scan Oil Needs

The cut-off of licensing will permit officials to scan foreign oil needs. American embassies have been queried and a good many replies have been received.

They indicate, a spokesman said, that foreign governments can stand another cut in oil deliveries. Shipments to 30 or more countries were slashed by 3,700,000 barrels on January 30.

The new order will not halt oil which is at shipside or already in transit.

Says Countries Cut

Before the commerce department had made up its mind, Rep. Heselton (R-Mass.) announced on the house floor that the foreign countries had agreed to take less oil.

Later, he told reporters that cables so far received from the embassies indicated a saving of 21,500,000 gallons of fuel-oil and kerosene alone for American consumers, or about 500,000 barrels. Gasoline savings also may be possible, he said.

Final Step In Effect

The license cut-off was a climactic step in the department's effort to cope with vast oil demands growing out of an almost nationwide cold spell.

A week ago oil shipments were halted from the east coast, the worst shortage area. That order did not block shipments from west coast and gulf ports however.

Wives To Sponsor Informal Parties For Professors

To promote better relations between faculty and students, the Spartan Women's League is sponsoring faculty coke hours every other week. These informal get-togethers give professors and students an opportunity to chat over a coke or a cup of coffee and become better acquainted.

The project is still in the experimental stage, and the group is open to any ideas or suggestions. The aim is to find if this type of meeting is meeting the campus needs and wants.

Winged Spartans Cut Flying Costs

The Winged Spartans have openings for 20 new members according to an announcement by Bob Jaksen, president. This number will fill the membership quota allowed under the Michigan corporation law.

The club was formed to allow student flyers a chance to do what little expense to themselves as possible. Rates for flying time have recently been reduced from $5 to $3.50 per hour for solo and from $5.50 to $5 for dual flying. The reduction places the club rates at less than half of the standard commercial rate.

Eight Missing As Navy Boat Turns Turtle

HYERS, France, Feb. 17 (AP) — The French coast guard said to-night one officer and seven men from the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway were missing after a naval launch capsized about midnight last night.

Navy boats operating in the glare of the Midway's searchlights rescued 29 other men clinging to the overturned launch or swimming nearby.

The launch overturned while taking officers and men to the carrier after a farewell shore party given by French officials.

Survivors were segregated on the Midway until the full story could be heard from them. The hunt for the missing men continued tonight with French naval ships and small fishing boats aiding.

The French coast guard set the figure at eight missing in an official report after denying rumors that 40 had disappeared. French police said American ship officers had asked them to check on the possibility that some of the missing men had merely failed to report back from shore leave and were not on the launch.

The project is still in the experimental stage, and the group is open to any ideas or suggestions. The aim is to find if this type of meeting is meeting the campus needs and wants.

Women Celebrate Date Of Initial Rights Fight

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17 (AP) — A group of women met here today to talk about the subject that interests them most: Women.

One hundred years ago determined females met in Seneca Falls, N.Y. They voted at the Women's Rights convention, and came out in favor of woman suffrage.

True, 13 states keep them off juries, and others restrict their civil rights.

Not until 1871 did they seep into congress and demand the right to vote. An etching of the time shows both the congressmen and the women a little startled and embarrassed as if a lady had wandered into the pool room.

They thought they should pick whatever profession or job they wanted to.

Not until 1920 did they vote in a national election.
