It's Up To The Faculty

The administrative group has approved Michigan State's new student government constitution. It has supported the Student council in the belief that the constitution is a good one and should be brought before the college as a whole.

This month the constitution will be submitted to the faculty for approval. If it is passed, the students will vote

It is fitting that students should have the final say in approving their constitution. It will give us a more responsible attitude toward voting when we must finally cast our ballots.

Members of the faculty, a more conscientious group than average, will consider the constitution carefully. If they approve, it will heighten the prestige of the constitution.

But it is, after all, our own student constitution. It is we who should take the most interest in it. The Stu-dent council now has the opportunity to go into every dormitory and living unit and explain the constitution and answer questions about it.

But the Student council can't do the whole job. It is up to the Joe-on-campus to find out what kind of government the Student council is proposing for him.

The State News will do everything in its power to support the constitution. It is a good one. Members of the faculty and student body have worked hard on it.

Organized groups on campus would be performing a public service by bringing up the constitution in their meetings for discussion and interpretation. There is no more worthwhile project than that of awakening citizens to a responsibility and an interest in their own

This is an issue which requires the attention of every single student at Michigan State College. Indifference means a continuation of the mixups and downright carelessness which have sometimes marred our student government in the past.

MSC's Second Campus Chest

That green and white blotter you salvaged from the registration daze informed you of an important coming event-Michigan State's second Campus Chest week.

This special week doesn't start until May 7, but plans for the program are already formed. It is the only week during the school year when students are asked to contribute to charity.

The Chest was originated last spring after the campus had suffered along with a rash of drives by individual charities. The present Chest program gives an opportunity to contribute generously to charity once - and then forget

There is no goal for the Chest drive. The Chest committee would like to collect one dollar per student during that week, but no actual quota will be set.

There are two reasons. First, a goal that is missed is bad psychologically. It makes students think that the drive wasn't a success. Actually, the drive is a success if it nets any money at all for charity. Last year's Chest was a $4,400 success and the drive this year is expected to collect even more. Second, a student who simply can't afford a dollar for the drive, shouldn't be left feeling like a slacker. The spirit behind the giving is what counts.

Money from the drive will stay pretty close to home, too. Organizations getting the lion's share of the funds this year are the World Student Service fund, displaced persons at Michigan State, and Spartan

Other groups represented by the Chest are the March of Dimes, the Damon Runyon cancer fund, and the Lansing

A becterial attack on a few cities may cause such panic that the attacked country would immediately plead for peace. Secret and semi-accret weapons can, if properly, employed, knock the bottom out of the resistance of the bravest people.

The epidemic that would weep the country would not be A bacterial attack on a few

The epidemic that would sweep the country would not be that of the bacteria but that of cringing fear and terror.

It was not the actual damage caused that brought the last war in the East to quick end, but fear-crazed thoughts of what might come.

Recently, bloingleal warface is dirt cheap when compared to other weapons—namething that broads in the victous minds of rulers of tiny nations thinking of expanding.

That bacteriological warfare drags in civilians is nothing new. Today war means total war. The days when the casualty lists oays when the casuatty lists were the only painful feature of a war are gone. World War II taught the importance—of the home front.

Biological warfare would also leave a very large portion of the culture of a people intact, for if it is a war in which bacteriological warfare is exclusively used, libraries, monuments and the blocks in which people live would not be razed to the

Thus it almost seems as if the terror of bacteriological warfare is largely imaginary and that this mode of warfare may lead to a slightly more humane war. It is right to say that the thing that really is inhuman is war itself. -Pardon My Accent-

You Just Can't Win

Eventually all kinds of notes-along with gripes and news tips-find their way to my messy desk to add to its "professional look."

Usually I can trace the notes to their owners, adding a note to the note. But here is one I have no idea how and why it ended up on my desk.

It's mimeographed and seems to have originated at Hunter college from one Robert Tyson of the psychology department there. I know it didn't come from Tyson, because I don't know Tyson and he doesn't know me and I don't think he was on this campus lately. One thing I do know is it didn't come through the mail.

I found it interesting and thought I'd pass it to you. Especially to coeds taking their practice teaching this term. Maybe it will give them some tips on what instructors have to put up with. And I know they do want to read The State News on the bus every morning . . . so early in the morning (8 o'clock).

"What to say . . . "When you are given an objective test: 'It doesn't let you express yourself." "When given an essay test: 'It's so vague. You don't know what's expected.' "When you are given many minor tests: 'Why not have few big ones? This keeps you on edge all the time.

"When you are given a few major tests: 'Too much depends on each one "When you are given no tests: 'It's not fair. How can ou possibly judge what we know "When every part of the subject is taken up in class: 'Oh, he just follows the book.

"When you are asked to study a part of the subject by

When the course is in lecture form: 'We never get a chance to say anything! When the course consists of informal lecture and discussion: 'He just sits there. Who wants to hear the students?' They don't know how to teach the course.' "When detailed material is presented: 'What's the use? forget it all after the exam anyway.'

"When general principles are presented: 'What did we We knew that before we took the course.'

Maybe our psychology department has the answer as to how this study-if that is what it is-was compiled. Maybe our psychologists here have encountered better answers to Tyson's questions-if Tyson's questions they are.

I could have written to Tyson at Hunter college. Maybe he's still there. Maybe he isn't. Maybe he's a great psychologist, and I should have heard of him.

Anyway, with midterms just around the corner, I thought you people might be interested. In the meantime I would appreciate it if anybody knows the whereabouts of this study and whatabouts of Robert Tyson, to let me know. 'At least, I'm interested although can't see tests and grades along with eight-o'clocks. They're all agin' this Greek's nature.

Although her very presence commands attention and although last night's performance knew moments of exquisite beauty, something was obviously lacking. Her voice is there in all its former glory—(she surely left us no doubt of that!) Also, her excellent musicianship and deep devotion to musical values was convincing as ever. What then could be lacking?

Perhaps many will disagree, but we must say that her heart
