The Spartan's Spirit

There is a humor magazine conference at State this

On the surface it is just another conference. But it can also be held up to the student body as an example of what an active organization can do. It is an example that many other groups on campus could follow.

The conference is something new. It has been tried be-fore but never successfully. Michigan State tried to hold a similar conference here last year, but a week before the opening only three affirmative answers had been received

But the members of the Spartan magazine staff believed in an idea. College humor magazines should get together to discuss their mutual problems and present solutions.

So the staff went to work. They sent letters to 33 college humor magazines in this area. Each letter was typed separately to attract more attention. They also sent letters to large publication and advertising firms throughout the country.

Only a few replies were received from college magazines, but the firms were interested. They believed the convention was a good idea. Many offered to send top-notch men as speakers. Where who did not send speakers said they hoped the conference would be a success and notify them earlier next wear so they could help.

But only a few colleges had answered the Spartan's questionnaire. Many other groups would have called the thing off but not the Spartan staff

Where they didn't get a reply they sent out anther letter Each one was individually typewritted. After a period of time they east another letter.

The Spartan staff sent four letters and a telegram. all told, to over half of the original 38. And the effort paid off. Eight humor magazines said they could send delegates

And so there is a humor magazine conference at State this weekend. Thanks to what can truly be called Spartan

The last time I sat at a typewriter to best out a column was fall term, when Ricgie Munn's talented group of youngsters were envorting around a place called Macklin Their doings were of such a proportion to stir even a passive sports editor as I into a maelstrom of activity

Them days are gone forever

The inspiration for column writing is gone and in its place is the sort of listless feeling that Hadacol ad writers

Speaking of Hadacol reminds me of a product that, judicinl decisions pending, is suggestively named Carter's Little

Seems that the Carter people and the federal trade commission have been engaged in a little tiff over the brand name of the product. The FTC wants to cut the "Liver" out of Carter's.

Shades of Teddy (carry a big stick) Roosevelt and his trust busters

What's the next step a federal agency will take to rob the American people of one of their venerated institutions? The government agency's contention in the Carter case is that the company's advertising claims are false and mis-

On such contentions could claims be built that cigarette hangover is inevitable, that all shirt collars wrinkle, that cherry pistacchio is not a new flavor in ice cream, etc. When they take the Coke out of Coca-Cola on the grounds

Wednesday night the Student council went into operation under the new legislative system, patterned after a modification of state legislative procedures throughout the country, and adapted to this particular campus.

The meeting went off like clockwork. It lasted only an hour, quite different from council meetings in the

The members beard the first and second rendings of six separate bills. All were passed by the connei What we're getting at is this:

It worked Wednesday night but can it continue to work? Coming on the heels of the council's new constitution, this new method of procedure is basically sound, but one thing will hinder its potential efficiency.

The council does not have now, and it is doubtful that it will ever have, the high caliber of personnel necessary to carry out all council functions under this new system.

Students who have two requirements are needed to fil council positions under such a plan. They must be

3. Weli-versed in parliamentary procedure.

2. Willing to work

Maybe the new setup will stimulate people with these analitications to run for council office, but it is doubtful. Student anothy toward activities of this kind seems to this writer just too great to overcome.

I personally would like to see the council succeed in this protect but success borders on the impossible

What They Learned at College

Ye Sterling Stir, Sterling college, Kansas, asked several seniors what they considered the greatest lesson college had tought them. Answers included

"How dumb I am!" 2. "To get all my graduating requirements in before the final year." 3. "That I don't know anything." 4. "To get on and off trains successfully with three suitcases and a typewriter." 5. "To free myself from my mother's apron strings." 6. "To get along with Margo.
