

Schedule for Winter Expanded

New Courses Give Variety To Students

From comparative religion to audio-visual education to industrial electronics—a variety of new courses have been added to an expanded winter term class schedule.

Largest group of new classes being introduced is in the School of Business and Public Service. Real estate, law, principles of management, political science and police administration are new this term, Dean Herman J. Wynyard said.

The real estate law course is being taught to give more adequate instruction in business management, he explained. Three courses in real estate management previously offered did not offer a wide enough scope of real estate problems, he said.

Delving into the human relations aspect of labor, a principles of management course is being offered to a large group, Wynyard said.

Other new courses in B. & P.S. are the second part of a sequence in traffic administration, and a new course in traffic patrol and communications.

Two new political science classes are also underway. Interest groups and political processes is one which emphasizes an analysis of pressure groups and their workings. Another course is a study of the United Nations.

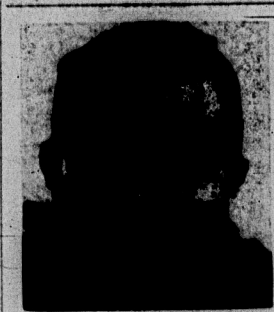

New in the School of Education is an audio-visual program for experienced teachers. Dean C. V. Millard said that the class is the first of a two-term course involving the study of effective audio-visual teaching methods.

The School of Engineering now offers instruction in industrial electronics. According to Dean Lorin G. Miller the course is set up to study electronics as the main tool of industry, replacing hydraulic and mechanical methods.

In the School of Science and Arts, comparative religion is being offered as a study of the origins and development of world faiths.

A new music course, piano methods and literature, has been arranged to include student teaching in East Lansing public schools. Keyboard experience is offered to fourth grade pupils, Dean Milton F. Mueller said.

JOHN WILSON

Class Head Wins Rhodes Scholarship

John D. Wilson, senior class president and a three-year varsity football regular at Michigan State, has won a Rhodes scholarship.

The scholarship entitles Wilson to a minimum of two or perhaps three years of study at Oxford University, England. It carries a stipend of about $1,400 a year.

He plans to take his two years starting next fall, following graduation from State, and will study modern history, particularly Russian history in all its aspects—economic, social and political. He also plans to study the Russian language with a view to perhaps some day entering U.S. foreign service.

Wilson is believed to be the first football player in a major school to win a Rhodes scholarship since Byron "Whizzer" White in the 1930s. Wilson was a regular left halfback in State's defensive backfield for three years, a fixture at the post throughout, a player especially adept at pass defense. This fall he was one of the stand-out defensive men on State's national championship team, of which experts almost unanimously said the defensive crew outshone the offense.

Wilson is a pre-law major with a 3.7 average. He hopes eventually to get his law degree, but the study at Oxford comes first.

Wilson played in the North-South game at Miami, Fla., Christmas night. He made a new "All-Scholastic" All-America team, a new selection featuring players also up high in their studies.

A further honor Wilson won as a senior was the F. Ward "Potsy" Ross Memorial Trophy, given annually to the football player who has made the best contribution to his school both athletically and scholastically.

Campus Chest Funds Aid Overseas Youth

Part of the money donated to the Campus Chest and allotted to the World Student Service Fund will directly benefit students in Korea.

According to a personal report issued to Campus Chest members by Frank Sulewski, SSF regional secretary, the new arrangement is a change from the former practice of having a general fund for housing, health and equipment with no assurance that the money would be allotted for students.

WSSE uses the Campus Chest funds to help students all over the world. Last year former MSC students received 20 per cent of the funds, totaling $1,000. No definite allotment has been made for this year.

Included in the fund distribution is the setting up of medical scholarships for Negroes in the Union of South Africa. These will replace scholarships that were formerly offered by the government there.

Sulewski explained that he feels the WSSE program is making headway in European countries this year. Students there are now accepting the principle of mutual aid among students of the world over, the principle goal of WSSE.

He told of the friendliness he observed between students from India, Pakistan and Indonesia during a meeting of the WSSE representatives from all over the world in Germany last summer. Previous to this meeting the students were suspicious of the purpose of WSSE and afraid its benefits were given for charity, Sulewski said. Now they are beginning to realize that they, too are contributing to WSSE, by educating each other and others about their way of life.
