Suspension of Salk Anti-Polio Vaccine Urged by Government

Tears and Cheers for Sing Winners

Reappraisal Of Serum Underway

Manufacturers To be Checked

WASHINGTON (AP)—Another few days' suspension of the nationwide Salk anti-polio vaccination program was urged by the government Sunday.

Surgeon Gen. Leonard A. Scheele predicted it will be rolling again—perhaps by the end of this week—on a double-checked-for-safety basis.

Scheele reiterated his faith that, "within the ever-narrowing limits of human fallibility" the Salk vaccine is safe and effective.

After an intensive round of conferences with Dr. Jonas Salk, developer of the vaccine, and other top medical and scientific experts, Scheele said the government is making a reappraisal of all tests and processes by which the vaccine is manufactured.

"We plan to make this reappraisal on a manufacturer-by-manufacturer basis, and just as rapidly as possible, to release the vaccine to availability beginning in the latter part of the current week.

"Until that check is completed, we are repeating our recommendation that the vaccine program be temporarily postponed.

"This will cause some delay in the program. But we believe—and I am sure that the American people join us in believing—that in dealing with the lives of our children, it is impossible to be too cautious."

He added, "I believe that this reappraisal will demonstrate that fact and that within a few days, all of us will be able to move forward in the fight against polio with renewed confidence."

Scheele stressed that the reappraisal program does not necessarily mean any of the vaccine already distributed will have to be rechecked.

The idea, he said, is that an inspection team will visit each of the plants, investigate safety procedures, talk with the men who do the processing and, in general, convince themselves that the greatest possible safety precautions are being taken.

DETROIT (AP)—Michigan will continue with the polio vaccination program despite the government's recommendation for further postponement.

Dr. Albert Heustis, state health commissioner, reiterated today—after learning of the Washington recommendation—that Michigan wouldn't halt inoculations unless it gets a "direct order" to do so.

Michigan already has inoculated more than 300,000 school children.

"I believe, Dr. Heustis said, "We have ample evidence that the vaccine we have used is safe and effective."

So far in Michigan only one possible case of polio among inoculated children has turned up. That one, in Detroit, was not confirmed as an actual case.

In Michigan individual governmental units have been free to act on their own responsibility if they wished to hold off on inoculations.

Oakland County was one of the so. The county yesterday postponed the inoculation of school children.

Diem Seeks Rejection Of Bao Dai

Premier Appeals To Free World

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Anti-Communist Premier Ngo Dinh Diem appealed to the United States, France and Britain Sunday night to reject Chief of State Bao Dai's efforts to re-establish himself in Viet Nam.

Diem warned in a broadcast addressed to the free world that it would be impossible to deceive the Vietnamese people with any government system designed to revive the colonial regime in one form or another.

Soon after he spoke almost the last vestige of armed opposition in Saigon to Diem's leadership was eliminated. A unit of the rebel Binh Xuyen Society surrendered its stronghold in the National Police Headquarters without a fight. This society of ex-royal pirates plunged Saigon into five days of strife.

A spokesman at the premier's office said his broadcast warning Sunday was a direct reference to the reported plan of Bao Dai to obtain his position as constitutional monarch.

The French-appointed chief of state, former emperor of Annam, has been away more than a year, living in his chateau on the French Riviera and exercising his powers by remote control. He now is in Paris where foreign ministers of the Big Three Western Powers are conferring, trying to mold a joint policy on Viet Nam.

It is understood here that Bao Dai's plan includes an appointed high council and an assembly of Vietnamese notables to which both the chief of state and the premier would surrender their powers—ignoring Diem's project for an elected national assembly.

Diem regards this scheme as inspired by the French and adopted by Bao Dai in a desperate attempt to avoid being deposed, his aides said.

It appears now that Diem would not object to leaving Bao Dai as chief of state for the time being if the ex-emperor gives up his powers to name governments and choose military commanders and promises to keep hands off the elections.

Short Winter Summer's Back And We Have It

Fair and warmer weather, with a high of near 65 degrees, is the prediction for today as summer returns to State's campus.

Frost and near freezing temperatures hit the area Sunday night, bring memories of winter. The low was 32 degrees.

Death Takes Philanthropist

Harry A. Fee, Adrian civic and business leader who donated the Hidden Lake Gardens to Michigan State in 1945, died last week in his Adrian home. He was 87.

Fee presented the gardens, a 227-acre tract on M-50, to the college for development as a horticultural experiment and a natural beauty spot. The horticulture department presently conducts several field trips yearly to the gardens for students.

Fee had been in ill health for some time and was a hospital patient during the winter. He visited the Gardens only two days before his death.

Dr. Weidner Leaves to Assist Viet Government

Dr. Edward W. Weidner, head of Michigan State's political science department, and his family left Sunday for Saigon, South Viet Nam.

Weidner is chief of a team of specialists, which includes eight other Michigan State faculty members, assigned to help the South Viet Nam government strengthen its civil operations.

Other members of the team will join Weidner in Saigon by July 1. The Michigan State team will assist in the reorganization and training of government officials.

Co-operative Learning

The watchful eyes of parents from 46 Michigan communities will be focused on Michigan State Tuesday as the Michigan Council of Co-operative Nursery Groups meets for its fourth annual conference.

Two examples of the co-operative school, where mom, dad, and junior learn together, are in operation on the Michigan State campus.

The Spartan and the Quonset nursery schools, located in the Quonset barracks area, will act as hosts for the conference. Members of the two schools will also serve on a number of committees.

The Spartan school is used for the children of married students, and the Quonset, for the "small-try" of faculty members.

One of the advantages of the two schools is that the parents, as well as the children, learn from the experience, said Miss Elizabeth Page, director of the Spartan school.

Parents, under the direction of trained teachers, help supervise the children at play, direct group activities, and serve the morning and afternoon juice.

A child learns to share his mom and pop with other children in the group. Miss Page said, and each child learns to get along with adults other than his own parents.

Dads have an additional responsibility in the Spartan school set-up.

Since no special play area is provided for children in the married housing section, the nursery school grounds are kept open, and fathers are responsible for keeping the yards in repair.

Forty co-operative nursery schools were operating in Michigan last year. An additional 20 have been licensed this year, with 10 more in the formative stage.

Main speaker at the conference will be Dr. Grace Langdon, chairman of the Professional Council of the Child Education Foundation in New York.

She is co-author of her work in training teachers of primary-age children, said Mrs. Bernard Mikol, a Spartan Nursery school mother and a Council chairman.

Four workshops will deal with the place of the parent, child, and teacher in the co-operative school movement, and with the formation of new nursery schools.

Hoffman Attacked for 'Martyrdom' Congress Used as 'Wailing Wall'

By J. J. Hoff

I wish to comment generally on the Hurst-Hoffman affair, especially in regard to Ritzinger's prejudicial column, "Glib Politics," which, I believe, was far more confused than the affair he attempted to describe.

Further confusion and misapprehension among students has resulted from this article, and, speaking only as an observer and nothing more, I would like to help clarify the matter.

First, I will briefly review the basic and more important charges made by Ritzinger, either direct or by innuendo:

1. The "special session of Congress was a farce in which most of the congressmen were 'snowed' and befuddled by sheenigans (of the president and others, I assume) and the majority were too thick to understand."
2. The Congress speaker attempted to divert and thwart discussion from the "real" issue and bawled misceled the vote on the censure motion.
3. Hurst's dealings with a subordinate were an attempt to keep information from Congress and a dictatorial violation of free speech.

The latter charge is the crux of the whole issue, and I would call it absurd except that so many have honestly been duped into believing it. Here is the actual story:

During the Wednesday meeting, Hoffman, angry at Hurst's decision and report, began butting in and interrupting congressmen and others present in order to explain his views. Hurst was aware of this dissent and eventually the two discussed the situation together, which resulted that Hurst said in effect:

"You have disagreed with my decision publicly... if you continue in this manner, you will no longer be a member of my executive team" (everyone agrees that this is elementary executive prerogative).

However, during a meeting of the committee of the whole, Hoffman approached the congress speaker and told him his story. The speaker, attempting to get to the facts of the matter in terms of Congress business rather than personal differences of an appointee, asked Hoffman if he wished to repeat his views on the subject of the Festival Review to Congress, and fully explained the procedure by which he could be heard, i.e., formal introduction by a congressman after general orders.

Hoffman agreed. The speaker then told Hurst that Hoffman was scheduled to speak to Congress. Hurst then referred to Hoffman the same morning that he had stated earlier, telling him, in effect:

"When you speak to Congress, you will do it as an appointee." Hurst then left, under the assumption that Hoffman was going to present his views.

Later, as scheduled, Hoffman, who, in doing so, stated floor by an emotional congressman was introduced onto the floor in effect that "Hurst has tried to keep Hoffman from talking to us (Congress) and I believe that we should hear his version of the story."

The Congress agreed, and Hoffman, in his remarks told Congress that Hurst had threatened to fire him in order to stop him from talking to Congress.

Now, that is the misapprehension of Congress business and the story of Hoffman's story.

The fact is that Hoffman was scheduled to speak to Congress. He was not a member of the executive team, and he was not a member of the executive team.

any executive does to a loyal appointee.

How then, Mr. Ritzinger, do you make your case for free speech?

It is my considered opinion that Hoffman could have availed himself of every opportunity to state his case. Hurst's use of his power was beside the point. Hoffman could have had the facts concerning the Festival Review and the

Waning Respect

State Students Out of Step With Parades

Breathes there a man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said, this is my own, my native flag?

The flag of our country is displayed with Michigan State's marching cadets at Tuesday parades, but from the comments and courtesy of bystanders, the flag is being treated with waning respect.

Undertones of "hup, two, three, four," by bystanders is only part of the disrespect for the cadet parades.

When the American flag is being displayed, it is the patriotic duty of students and other onlookers to treat the marchers and the entire parade with the same respect they would pay the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

This country's military and air forces are, like the Presidency, human institutions. Individuals in them are frequently subject to criticism in which no punches are pulled.

But comments at Tuesday parades have not been directed to individuals. They have been deriding the military training program in general.

The training program and large armed forces do not always fit easily into the life of a nation which has traditionally maintained small military forces. And the programs should be frequently appraised and examined.

But showing public disrespect for the training program in front of the symbol of national independence is not the way to show criticism for a more effective program.

Students and others who watch the parades from the curbs should re-evaluate their respect for the nation's banner.

They should remember that the flag which is passing before them is the same flag that has been draped over tombs of the Sullivans, the Colin Kellys and the Roger Youngs who would like to be saluting the flag from the curb but can not.

"Flappers" Welcome Parents

Parents' Weekend Highlights

Dr. Hannah Outlines Basic Ideals of State

The basic philosophy of Michigan State was presented by President John A. Hannah for parents and students in Kellogg Auditorium Saturday afternoon as part of the annual Parents Day weekend.

In reviewing the founding and development of the university, President Hannah said that Michigan State was the first college to be based on the ideal that scholarships should be put to use in solving every day problems.

"Michigan State works on the theory that there is no problem not fit for research and study on the highest level," he said.

"The common objective of all education is to give students what they need to make full use of their potential," he added. He said that education in general had contributed to a higher standard of living, a classless society, and political stability for Americans.

Members of the Parents Weekend committee greeted parents in flapper outfits in keeping with the theme of "Collegiate Comeback" dance held for parents and students Saturday evening.

Other activities which attracted parents Saturday afternoon were the Green and White football game at Macklin Stadium, a showing of the Centennial Movie, a tea and open house at the Home Economics building and an ROTC training exhibit.

ZANESVILLE, Ohio (AP)—Because Judge Clarence Crossland ruled she didn't tell the truth in divorce suit testimony against her husband, Mrs. Clara Belle Harmon, 27, must spend every Saturday night for a year in the detention home. She also didn't get the divorce.

Letter

which at this point could have only been achieved by Congress.

As it was, Hoffman offered very little in the way of a constructive proposal; rather, he confused the issue by using the Congress as a walling wall and misrepresented the fact that it was trying to shut him up and take away his job because he dared speak.

The Congress, few members of which have formal knowledge of legislative jurisdiction overruled the speaker and very nearly turned itself into a Kangaroo Court.

Had Hurst been censured (much less impeached) in such a confused, "mock court," the Congress would have been the laughing stock of the campus.

Too many, including Bill Reid and Diane Broersma, were dupes of a party who was seemingly more interested in his "personal martyrdom" than an objective contribution to the work of the student government.

As for the other charges, it is bald distortion for anyone to claim that the censure vote was "close." No minority in Congress has ever let a close vote on a controversial subject go uncontested.

Are you sure, Mr. Ritzinger, that you weren't influenced by the sound of your own voice when the vote for censure was cast?

In conclusion, I wish to agree with Ritzinger that the "special session" was a farce full of shenanigans and confusion... a black eye to the All-College Student Government, but I disagree as to who caused it and why.

I suggest that the cause is not so much "glib politics," but rather, hasty assumptions, overripe dramatics and some half-baked journalism.

Recount of Votes

A recount of votes cast for senior class vice-presidential candidates in Thursday's primaries was ordered Sunday by elections commissioner Rex Dawson.

Winners Bill Mercer and Bob Kuhl polled 336 and 327 votes respectively, while defeated candidate Tamara Van Buskirk drew 321 votes.
