44 Killed In Chinese Mob Riots

Fighting Shifts To 'Little Shanghai'

HONG KONG (Friday) (AP) — Thirty workers were killed in hand-to-hand battle between Communist Chinese and anti-Communist Chinese in Hong Kong's mainland factory village of Tsun Wan, the government announced Friday.

Frenzied fighting between Chinese mobs and police erupted at about 14 other places.

The two-day death toll in rioting was set at 44 in an announcement by acting Gov. F. B. David.

Officials said the worst of Hong Kong's rioting shifted Thursday night to Tsun Wan, known also as 'Little Shanghai.'

Of the total 44, 10 were known to have died Thursday in the continuing rioting in the north-west Kowloon section of this British colony. The mainland area borders Red China. Four others had been killed in the early stages of the rioting.

The troubled sectors were patrolled orderly Friday.

David had said earlier that at least 100 were feared slain in the Communist faction clashes in Tsun Wan.

The new figure was announced after the government public relations office made a review.

Thousands of anti-Communist Chinese ran amok Wednesday when a Chinese mobbing unit of the Hong Kong government started ripping down Nationalist flags.

David finally called out British troops Thursday night to help Hong Kong's 6,000 Chinese, British and Pakistani police and the civilian police reserves put down the rebellious mobs.

New Traditions Arise at MSU

Balloons to Tell All of First Spartan TD

By JOYCE KORB

Tradition and spirit are a big part of the college life on our campus. Freshmen and transfer students soon learn of the many traditions that have survived throughout the years, and the school spirit of MSU students.

A new tradition will be established this weekend at Saturday's Homecoming game with Indiana. Michigan State students will let go of 2,100 helium-filled balloons, giving the impression of a massive green cloud above Macklin Stadium.

The balloons will be released when Spartans score their first touchdown of the first half, proclaiming to the people of Lansing and vicinity that MSU has scored. In case we do not score in the first half, Duffy Daugherty has requested that they be released at kick-off time of the second half.

This tradition, which is sponsored by the Sigma Kappa sorority, is a kick-off for the Carnegie Chest Drive. Members will sell the balloons at all points surrounding the stadium, on the bridges, in front of Sparty and other convenient points prior to the game. Barry Smith, chairman of the project, said the price is 15 cents and all proceeds go to Carnegie Chest.

Members of Sigma Kappa are planning to turn the balloons over to Carnegie Chest of the students are willing to support the idea. The aim for the future is that at all home games, every MSU student will carry a green balloon to symbolize the

The Jazz Society of West Circle Drive gave a performance in the Union Ballroom Thursday night to a capacity audience. The show was sponsored by Union Board.

2 Michigan Men Among 49 Aboard

Crew, Personnel All Feared Dead

LAKENHEATH, England (AP)—An Armada of aircraft, including giant jet bombers, crisscrossed Atlantic waters Thursday night in a great search for a U. S. military transport plane missing with 59 men aboard.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Pan American World Airways reported early Friday three of its planes crossing the Atlantic heard distress signals from the missing U. S. Air Force plane with 59 American aboard.

Pan American dispatchers at Idlewild Airport, working on a chart, fixed the position of the downed aircraft as about 158 miles north of the Azores.

The airline said its first message arrived at 10:13 p.m. Thursday night from Pan American Flight 65, also reported as "very strong SOS received."

The plane was then about 560 miles north of the Azores.

The third message was received eight minutes later from Flight 115. It also picked up another SOS message. Its position was reported as about 360 miles west of the Azores.

The airline said its dispatchers computed the approximate position of the downed transport from the three SOS reports.

The Lincoln Air Force base said Thursday night that two Michigan men are among the 49 men and two officers aboard a U. S. military transport plane missing on a flight from England to the United States.

They are Staff Sgt. Thomas I. Devota, 30, of Alhambra and A1C Earl F. Vasey, 22, of 1609 Stone St., Saginaw.

None of the nine crewmen was from Michigan.

The hours yielded only faint hope that the Air Force personnel and Navy crew of the huge C-118 Liftmaster were alive. The missing plane is the military version of the civilian DC-6.

Even while the night searchers peered hopefully over the smooth waters for flares from possible survivors, the mystery deepened as to just what happened to the missing plane.

The homeward bound Liftmaster vanished sometime, somewhere between Lands End and the Azores.

It had fuel enough to last until 3:30 a.m. Thursday. The Liftmaster was due at Lajes in the Azores early Thursday.

By early morning the aircraft was officially described as "presumed down" and the search was launched in fine, clear weather.

Aboard the Liftmaster were two Air Force officers and 48 enlisted men returning to the Lincoln, Neb., Air Force Base after a tour of duty in Britain.

The Navy crew consisted of three officers and six enlisted men. Names of those aboard were not made public.

Called into the search operation were 33 American, British and Portuguese aircraft from the Azores, Scotland, England, France, Germany, Iceland and North Africa.

Senior of the Week Petitions Due Oct. 18

Senior of the Week petitions must be submitted by Oct. 18, according to Dee Jennings, chairman of the program.

The petitions may be picked up at the Union desk, and must be returned to the Ballot Box at the desk.

President of student government, Don Pais, Ticket and Jane Oldfield, draw 509 applications out of 1,300 for the Spartan special. Lists will be posted on the AUSG board 9 a.m. today.

MSU Could Lead

Illogical Vote Laws Demand Overhaul

The tongue-in-cheek column written by a State News staff member last week to poke fun at Michigan's voter registration laws calls attention to a serious situation affecting far more than just one person.

It is this: thousands of persons face disfranchisement in national elections next month simply because they do not meet the residency qualifications set up by the various states.

There can be little argument that on matters pertaining to state and local issues, qualifications for voting should be set up by the individual states.

It is not logical to assume that a state should allow a non-resident to vote in state and local elections when that vote could conceivably swing an election for governor a certain way or more realistically, could swing an election for local drain commissioner a certain way.

But what about national elections?

Why should any American citizen 21 years of age or older, not a convict and able to read and write not be allowed to vote for President of the United States?

The major reason, it appears, lies primarily in the right of American states to set up residency qualifications not only for voters casting ballots in state and local elections but also for voters casting ballots in national elections.

The qualifications from state to state are anything but uniform.

Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Rhode Island require a two-year in-state residency as a prerequisite to voting.

Oklahoma Sentiment—

'If Dems Win, Farmers Will Do It'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles by the Associated Press' veteran reporters who are surveying election sentiment in key states across the nation. Previously discussed were Pennsylvania and Missouri. Today's article deals with Oklahoma.)

By ARTHUR EDSON

KINGFISHER, Okla. (AP)—Will A. Struck, who farms 480 acres of wheat land hard hit by drought, leaned on the front fender of a parked car and readily expressed his political sentiments.

"I'm mad," Struck said. "I'm mad."

"Everything," he said. "My wheat crop. Struck said, 'wasn't worth a damn. Haven't had a good crop around here since 1952. Between like and the dry weather they're going to bust us poor old farmers." So, Struck said, although he voted for Dwight D. Eisenhower for president in 1952, this time he will switch to the Democrats and Adlai E. Stevenson.

In 1952, Eisenhower carried this normally Democratic state by 518,045 votes to Stevenson's 430,930.

The Democrats are betting that the dry prairies and the hill country have enough discontented farmers to move Oklahoma's eight electoral votes over to Stevenson.

Republicans say the farm revolt is over-rated. Anyway, they're betting on big majorities in Oklahoma City and Tulsa, where Eisenhower four years ago rolled up a formidable 52,000-vote advantage.

Walter E. Curry, Republican state chairman, predicts Eisenhower won't do as well as his 87,000-vote margin four years ago. Right now, Curry would be happy to settle for a victory of 35,000 to 50,000 votes.

On the Democratic side, Sen. Mike Monroney, one of Stevenson's staunchest supporters in Oklahoma, figures his man to win by 80,000 votes. He's banking heavily on farmer discontent to infect the small town merchant.

As for the state political reporters, they're so evenly divided that Oklahoma will have to go down as a truly doubtful state at this time.

With every ballot counting, the farmer seems to be the voter with the loudest complaint. So what he thinks takes on special significance.

Leon Whitaker, a young man who used to farm at Kingfisher (pop. 3,345) but now works for a drilling company in Buffalo, Okla., was talking with Eldin Baker, an insurance man.

"I tried farming seven years," Whitaker said, "but everything was against me. I had to quit. One farmer can't live on a quarter section of land (160 acres) any more and make a living. I know. I tried."

"And plenty of others have found out the same thing," Baker said.

Dry weather plus comparatively poor prices in relation to costs, Baker said, have whacked down the population of Kingfisher County from 28,000 to 12,700 since 1948.

And many farmers who remain make a living only by driving 44 miles into Oklahoma City to work each day, he said.

Yet neither blames the administration for the farmers' plight. Both voted for Eisenhower, and will do so again.

But A. G. Guth, who sells farm machinery, reports: "The Democrats who voted for Eisenhower are talking quite a bit about going back."

In a state where the outcome looks so close, James Gatewood, a filling station worker, sums it up this way:

"Now you take this farm situation, if the Democrats are elected, that's what will do it."

Eleven other states, including Michigan, require a six-month residency qualification. The remaining 32 states demand a one-year in-habitance.

As a result of this lack of uniformity, many strange and unjust situations involving thousands of voters arise.

For example:

A person who moved from Michigan to Alabama in December, 1954 would not be able to vote for President until the 1960 elections. He would not be able to vote in this year's Presidential elections because he would not have met the two-year residency qualification in effect in that state.

But a person who moved from Alabama to Michigan as recently as May 5, 1956, would be able to vote in this year's national elections since Michigan requires only a six-month residency qualification. If he stayed here, he'd also be able to vote for President in 1960.

He'd be able to vote in two Presidential elections, in other words, while the person who moved to Alabama would be able to vote in only one.

A possible remedy for inconsistent registration and voting laws from state to state would be separate ballots for President and Vice-President and a Federal statute establishing identical voting qualifications for every citizen—BUT ONLY FOR THE OFFICES OF PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT.

MSU, which recently fought successfully for the voting rights of students in Lansing Township, could, with its able staff of political scientists and government experts, take the lead in seeing that inconsistent and unjust voting and registration laws are changed.

The Voters Speak — As Lubell Sees It

Neither Party 'Clinching' Young Vote

By SAMUEL LUBELL

Although both the Republicans and the Democrats have advertised themselves as "the party of the future," neither can be said to have gained a clinching hold on the nation's youngest voters.

Thus far in this campaign the youths to whom I have talked and who will be casting their first Presidential ballots in November are divided six to five in favor of President Dwight D. Eisenhower. This is a far slimmer edge than in 1952—when the first voters I interviewed broke five to three for the President.

What is most striking about these younger voters, though, is how closely their preferences parallel those of their parents and of the social and economic class they come from.

In farm areas, reflecting the angry turn against the Republicans, Adlai Stevenson is winning two of every three farm youths who will be voting for the first time this November.

Similarly, the Democratic solidarity of the Negroes can be seen in the ten to one edge Stevenson holds among colored first voters.

How young Negroes feel about the two parties was summed up fairly well by one Los Angeles college student. "We've had quite a few political discussions around the house," he told me. "Being rich men the Republicans want to keep the Negro in his place. The Democrats try to give the poor people a break."

It is in the suburbs and non-Negro precincts that Eisenhower fares best, showing a three-

-to-two edge among the first voters.

A fair part of this support reflects the feeling voiced by one young housewife in Detroit. "My husband was about to go to Korea when Eisenhower ended the war," she said.

This year's ranks of first voters are also being swelled by the refugees who fled from Soviet-controlled Eastern Europe at the end of World War II and who have been in this country long enough to acquire citizenship.

The bulk of the DPs I have talked with are going Republican. A Ukrainian in Minneapolis felt "a military man is needed in this troubled world." In Chicago a young Lithuanian boasted, "I'm a card-carrying young Republican. The Democrats aren't anti-Communist enough for me."

But by far the biggest difference between the first voters who are for Eisenhower and those for Stevenson will be found in their economic background.

Most Stevenson first-voters came from worker-families or work in factories themselves. The Eisenhower first-voters are drawn most heavily from clerks and salesmen or from families where the head of the household is either in business or holds a white collar, salaried post.

Taken in the whole, in fact, the net conclusion one comes to is that there really is no such thing as a "young vote" which is distinctive in itself.

Despite the personal appeal that Eisenhower is supposed to have, how the nation's youth divides reflects the identical forces and trends which are shaping the voting of the rest of the nation.

One reason for this, of course, is the simple fact that many young voters take little interest in politics and usually follow the voting pattern that prevails in the family. Asked why they favor one party over the other, younger voters are likely to shrug off the query by replying, "No one ever asked me that questions before" or "I guess I was raised that way."

But how the first voters divide also testifies to the strength of the realignment of party loyalties on economic grounds that is taking place in this election.

In this realignment, which reflects in the main whether one's sympathies are with business or labor, the Republicans do seem to be gaining something of an advantage.

"The Republicans are for business and I'm all for it," declared one 22-year-old railway clerk in Detroit. "Years ago no one ever believed a fellow could own a fairly heavy cruiser. Now lots of friends have them. I like the way things are going."

Again, in Los Angeles, a 23-year-old student, whose father was a purchasing agent, explained, "I used to think the Democrats were the party of labor but they are not that any more. I'm for Eisenhower because he's kept the country together."

Occasionally one runs into someone like a 24-year-old factory worker from Tennessee who declared, "My father is Republican because he wants to admit he's a man. If he knew he was voting for his pocketbook he'd vote Democratic too."

But, more generally, voters who differ from parents are white-collar employees who have learned to lean even though they are who are workers, Democrats.

All in all, of the first voters who went for Eisenhower in 1952 none are sticking with him. Many younger voters have during the past year credited their 1952 Republican party.

Booters Play Wolves Here

The varsity soccer team played its first game of the season against Michigan State last night at 9:30 at the Kellogg Center. The Spartans were the only home team to see the Spartans win this season. The Spartans defeated the Michigan State team by a 4-3 score. The first game of the season was a thriller with goals coming from both sides. The Spartans won with a three-goal barrage in the second half.

on campus. During the summer, however, the sport was elevated to varsity status, and given uniforms and financial backing by the University.

Most of last year's team is back again, but newcomers hold starting berths at both right, and Wally Burger, right wing. Substitutes who will probably see action are Neil Butler, Aurelio Guzman, Angelos Piliotis, Al Lonigo, Morris Russ, and Jocko Nevis.

The Spartan booters lost their opening game last spring 3-2, to the Corinthians of Windsor, Ont. It was their only loss in two years, and they followed it up by winning three straight in the abbreviated spring program. Besides the two wins over Michigan, they humbled Kalamazoo, 8-2.

Coeds Chosen To Reign At Coronation

The Arnold Air Society members Thursday night chose nine coeds to reign at the Coronation Ball on Oct. 27. It was announced by Capt. Major George Hoke, Commander of the Society.

The elected coeds include seniors Lucy Bates, Patsy Green and Barbara Jean, Patrouille juniors Louise Branner and Carol Ann Large, and sophomores Jan Piper, Nancy Ash, Sue Sinclair and Julie Wurster.

One of the nine will be named Honorary Colonel at a banquet on Oct. 23, and the other eight will be Honorary Lieutenants and Colonels.

In addition to being regent of the Coronation Ball, the coeds will be taken on a visit to the Arnold Air Force Base and be given orientation flights.

Also they will reign at all Air Force Wing activities for the remainder of the year.

The Coronation Ball, one of the main social functions of the combined Air Force and Army ROTC units, will feature Capt. Hoke and his famous orchestra.

To insure safe and fast traffic, the weather is rainy, heavy or foggy.
