Council Approves 2-yr. Med School

ANN ARBOR--A recommendation for a two-year medical program at Michigan State University was accepted June 12 by the Michigan Coordinating Council for Public Higher Education.

The council, consisting of presidents and selected board members of Michigan's state colleges and universities, also accepted a recommendation to start a full, four-year medical school somewhere in the state in 1971.

The recommendations were made at the request of an ad hoc committee which had been studying the problem of medical education in Michigan for three months.

The two-year medical program, which had been proposed by MSU as a part of its new Institute of Biology and Medicine, is to have the cooperation of Wayne State University and the University of Michigan.

These two universities, which already have the only two four-year medical schools in the state, are to supply specialized medical course work for students intending to become medical doctors.

The courses would be offered during approximately the final semester of the two-year program. Details are to be decided by a joint committee.

At the end of the two-year program, students would be eligible to enter medical schools in or out of Michigan.

The ad hoc committee stated that its recommendations were based on achieving the "reasonable goal" of producing physicians to maintain the present national doctor-population ratio. Their estimates of future needs were based on anticipated increases in state and national population.

The committee concluded that a four-year program should be established "in an area that is rich in clinical resources and under the aegis of the university of the state best equipped to undertake the direction of a new program in medical education."

Announce Changes In Schools

Announcement of increases in student tuition will not be made until the July Board of Trustees meeting, President John Hannah said Wednesday.

Tuition hikes were not revealed at Wednesday's Board meeting because Trustees are still awaiting final word from the state legislature on the amount of appropriations for Michigan State next school year, Hannah said.

Hannah said tuition increases were likely in a letter he sent to parents along with spring term grades.

In other action, the Board announced three major appointments and changes in alignment of two colleges.

Eldon R. Nonnamaker was named director of the men's division of student affairs in the Dean of Students Office, replacing John Truitt who recently resigned to accept a position at Indiana State College.

John W. Crawford, chairman of the Department of Advertising, was appointed chairman for the Division of Mass Communications and Frank B. Senger, associate professor of advertising, was named chairman of the School of Journalism.

Nonnamaker's and Crawford's appointments are effective July 1 and Senger's Sept. 1.

Senger and Crawford fill positions formerly held by Frederick S. Siebert, dean of the College of Communication Arts.

The name of the College of Business and Public Service will be changed to the College of Business, effective July 1.

The name change occasioned by the shift of three academic areas from the College of Business to the new College of So-

Enrollment At New High

Summer term enrollment at Michigan State University reached another new high with a total of 11,711 students enrolled, Registrar Kermit Smith said Wednesday.

This summer's enrollment is 6.3 per cent more than last year, a net gain of 692 students, he said.

The East Lansing enrollment rose from 8,921 to 9,001.

Enrollment at off-campus centers went from 1,203 last year to 1,306 and credit extension enrollment rose from 704 to 803.

MSU-Oakland's summer enrollment gained from 191 to 497 in its first year on the tri-semester operation.

'SUMMER PLAYHOUSE, GOING UP'--Rising in the midst of what is usually bulging with ROTC cadets, the summer Circle Theatre takes shape in Demonstration Hall. Here Stan Abbott, Salena, Kansas, graduate student, sets the lights for the upcoming production, "The Front Page." State News Photo.

Five plays will be produced again this summer by the University Theatre in the new arena erected in Dem hall.

The theatre, which started last summer, and seats 300 persons has added more sound control devices and is open to students and local residents.

The Summer Circle productions included: "The Front Page," Hecht and MacArthur's farce about the men and stories behind the headlines; "Five Finger Exercise," a modern drama of the problems within the family circle and "You Never Can Tell," G.B. Shaw's early romp dealing with dentistry, divorce and feminine freedom.

"The Queen and The Rebels," a drama of the effect of war on people by Italian author Ugo Betti and "Our Town," Thornton Wilder's reminiscence about life in a 1900 New England town will close the season.

Play tryouts are open to students, faculty and townspeople.

According to Don Cain of the University Theatre Dem hall combines the spacious qualities and ventilation of an outdoor theatre with the protection of a roof in case of wind or rain.

Mail orders for Scotch season strips of five coupons for $5 are being accepted by the University Theatre, department of speech.

First Summer Term

This week marks the beginning of Michigan State's first summer term. The change from school to term reflects the continuing expansion of summer studies.

For the past three years, State has been on a four-quarter, year-round system. Normal studies have continued and it has been possible to complete the four-year curriculum in three years.

In the past there was a director of Summer School who coordinated and administered the events and special sessions offered. This year there is no director and the change between spring and summer is the same as the change between any other two terms.

Many activities are arranged for teachers and other persons who can only attend the university during the summer. For convenience of persons with limited time, the term is broken into a five and a ten-week session.

Special activities will include 34 institutes, workshops and seminars.

Special sessions include the seventh annual Institute on Asia summer program in African languages, a chemistry seminar on intramolecular forces and bonding, an examination of methods in juvenile probation, a summer institute in biology for secondary school teachers, and workshops in such areas as family finance, instructional television, kindergarten education and working with the physically and mentally handicapped.

For the third summer in a row, Michigan State will present a Fine Arts Festival featuring music conductor Robert Shaw and other leading figures in the worlds of music, art and dance.

Art and landscape-architecture exhibits, theatrical productions and a foreign film series will also be featured.

Many of the world's greatest symphonic conductors and string musicians will assemble on the campus for the Fourth Congress of Strings of the American Federation of Musicians. The student body -- 100 young musicians who have won A.F. of M. competitions in the United States and Canada -- will be led by notable conductors in a series of five public lectures.

172 Students Attend Comm Arts Institute

One hundred and seventy two high school students from 15 states began advanced training in journalism and speech Wednesday as part of the annual Communication Arts Institute.

William Haight, head of the journalism phase of the institute, said the program will be given in three two-week periods thus enabling 550 students to take the course.

Commencement Talk Mature

We would like to see more speeches of the calibre and far-reaching importance as that given at the MSU commencement by U.S. Senator Mike Mansfield presented at all college graduation ceremonies.

Senator Mansfield's speech urging a new look at U.S. foreign aid policy for Southeast Asia elevated MSU's platform to an important public forum.

Because Mr. Mansfield is the leading Democrat in the U.S. Senate, what he says is bound to carry a great degree of national and international importance. The words he spoke will have a bearing on what the U.S. does in the future in foreign relations, especially economic aid.

For the above reasons we are disappointed in the many comments we heard criticizing the honorable senator's speech.

Some said it was out of place at a commencement--not a proper speech for the event. Others said Mansfield's talk was too political.

Apparently the critics wanted the old, stale commencement speech that warns graduates about the dangers of the ugly world they are entering--the kind you hear at all high school graduations.

Michigan State graduates should be mature enough to be above the trite secondary school type of address.

Mansfield's speech was not a political address. He did not try to blame any party or person for the wrongs of foreign aid. He hinted that the Kennedy administration, which is of the same party as Mansfield, was as much at fault as the Republicans.

All that he asked for was a new perspective in this nation's policy of handing out money to Asian nations.

The National Observer, a Sunday newspaper, thought his remarks were important enough to print key excerpts in their editorial page last Sunday next to an editorial which said, "Foreign Aid Under Fire."

President Kennedy emphasized the problems of business and the steel situation in his address at the Yale commencement, and yet no one accused him of politicking.

Mansfield, as head of the party in power in the senate, is in the same sense, a national leader, not a politician.

Mansfield Looks at U.S. Aid

Taking a hard look at U.S. policy in southeast Asia, Senator Mike Mansfield called for a re-evaluation of the "haphazard commitment and waste of resources" in the area, while addressing the MSU commencement audience last week.

The majority leader of the senate was openly and sharply critical of the national southeast Asia policy which he said represents "at best a mark-time course" and "at worst a collision course."

The Montana Democrat also hit at the results of U.S. economic and military assistance to the southeast Asian nations of Laos and Vietnam, and labeled the current U.S. policy in that area unsuccessful.

"There is no longer any escaping the fact that after years of enormous expenditures of aid in South Vietnam, that country is more, rather than less, dependent on aid from the United States," Mansfield said.

Nations that have received limited aid from the U.S. have no worse prospects for independence than those where the U.S. has spent billions, he added.

"It remains for us to hold fast -- and seek actively to -- end the commitment and waste of resources in which we have indulged for years in the pursuit not only of enduring interests but of political slogans and shibboleths."

Mansfield, who received an honorary doctor of laws degree, addressed more than 11,000 graduates and guests in the Jenison field house where the ceremonies were moved because of the threat of rain.

Another 2,500 guests viewed the ceremonies over closed circuit television in the Auditorium. It was the first time in 12 years that rain had forced the transfer of ceremonies indoors.

A total of 2,406 degrees were conferred at the ceremonies, 1,872 baccalaureate and 534 advanced.

The college of agriculture had 128 bachelors, 29 masters and 13 doctoral; engineering -- 189 bachelors, 16 masters, 4 doctoral; home economics -- 108 bachelors, 5 masters; veterinary medicine -- 65 bachelors, 6 masters, 58 doctoral; science and arts -- 542 bachelors, 100 masters, 17 doctoral; business and public service -- 443 bachelors, 77 masters, 5 doctoral; education -- 291 bachelors, 169 masters, 27 doctoral; communication arts -- 111 bachelors, 4 masters and 4 doctoral.

Five honorary doctor of laws, including one to Senator Mike Mansfield, were conferred.

Others receiving the honorary degrees were Ray R. Eppert, Malcom P. Ferguson, Dr. Theodore W. Schultz, and Arthur F. Vinson.

200 Chemists Meet For Polymer Confo

Two hundred chemists from across the nation will convene here today for the American Chemical Society's first polymer symposium.

Improved types of plastics, new ways of making synthetic rubber, and techniques for studying synthetics of this kind in the laboratory will be reported at the three day meeting.

Raymond F. Boyer, director of plastics research at the Dow Chemical Co. of Midland is general chairman of the meeting. Professor Jack B. Kinsinger is in charge of local arrangements.

Polymers are substances such as fibers, plastics, and rubber which are composed of long, chain-like molecules.

'EXOTIC DRESS'--President John A. Hannah added a bit of extra color to commencement ceremonies last week when he appeared dressed in a green and white robe held together at the neck with a yellow band. Clashing slightly with the red and coral colored petunias that banked the stage, the president explained that the robe had been given him last summer when he received an honorary degree from the University of Nigeria. STEPS DOWN--Head wrestling coach Fendley Collins, left, has resigned after 32 years. Grady Peninger, will move into the vacated position from his assistant wrestling coach post.

MSU Loses Coaches

The athletic department lo, two popular and important figures through resignations between spring and fall terms.

Fendley Collins, head wrestling coach for 32 years, and Bob Mowerson, assistant swimming coach, for five seasons both resigned their positions.

The 59-year-old Collins, who will be replaced by his assistant Grady Peninger, gave "health and other personal reasons."

Mowerson, who assisted Charles McCaffree, is going to the University of Minnesota as head swimming coach.

Collins has been granted with extreme reluctance," said Munn. "There is no one in the field of amateur wrestling who is held in higher regard than Collins. The game can ill afford to lose him."

"We are fortunate, however, to have in Peninger an exceptionally capable replacement. He is one of the young comers in coaching and can be counted on to continue the great wrestling tradition Collins developed here."

Munn said that the switch would be effective July 1 and that Collins would be given important assignments in the department. He will continue teaching physical education courses and also will fill a brand new post of Coordinator of Special Events. In this capacity he will oversee such things as Big Ten and NCAA championship meets in various sports when held at State as well as annual state high school meets in wrestling, swimming and track.

Collins' Michigan State wrestlers won 21 national titles in NCAA and NAAU meets and 14 in Big Ten competition. His teams were NCAA runners-up three times and ranked high many other years. The 1961 aggregation won the Big Ten team title. His men produced first division finishes in ten of the 12 Big Ten meets in which they have participated.

Collins was born in Headrick, Okla. He was graduated in 1927 from Oklahoma State University where he was undefeated in his collegiate mat career. He won the 1926 middleweight amateur championship of Canada and the 1927 NAAU crown. He coached football, wrestling and track at Cushion, Okla., High School for two years before coming to state.

He is vice-chairman of the National AAU wrestling committee, secretary of the U.S. Olympic wrestling committee and secretary of the Pan-American

Radatz Tames Tigers

By JIM WALLINGTON
State News Managing Editor

DETROIT--The Detroit Tigers were stopped cold by another one "who got away" here Saturday.

Dick Radatz, who pitched three years for Michigan State up to 1959 and a resident of the Detroit suburb Berkley, cut off a Tiger rally for the second time this season to preserve a 4-2 victory for the Boston Red Sox.

Earlier in the season the 6-4 ex-Spartan hurler saved a 5-1 victory for the Sox and Gene Conley.

The two saves were highlights of Radatz' first season in the major leagues, which also included the thrill of striking out New York Yankee super-stars Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris.

"That was probably my greatest thrill," Radatz said of the strike out feat in an interview Friday.

Radatz, using his side-armed fast ball, is Boston's top and most-used reliever. He has appeared in 24 games, all in relief, seven more than other Red Sox pitcher.

What does Radatz think of his fireman's role, which is usually considered a second-rate job by many major leaguers?

"I love this fireman role," he said. "To me, it isn't a second rate job. It's a real challenge. The trend today is toward an emphasis on relievers."

"I think I will be a relief man the rest of my career. I didn't like it at first. But now I'm not concerned with starting."

"My arm is conditioned for relieving. I don't think I could start a game right now. I can throw 10 pitches and be ready to go into the game."

Radatz' fine record is indicative of his love for his job. In 43 innings, he has given up a scant 11 runs, 10 earned, for a 2.09 Earned Run Average, the best on the team.

Opposing batters have made 31 hits off him, three of them home runs. Fifty-five batters have gone down swinging. He has walked 17.

Dick's meteoric rise to the Red Sox surprised both him and club officials.

"I'm real thrilled and surprised," he said. "They didn't have me on the varsity roster in spring training."

"The big guy was a real surprise," said Red Sox pitching coach Sal Maglie, a former National League pitching star. "He impressed us in Seattle when he faced us last year. Then he showed us a lot of stuff in spring training."

Maglie said he didn't plan to convert Radatz into a starter immediately.

"Our greatest need is for a thrower who can go a couple of innings," Maglie said. "Besides, he has to learn a couple of more pitches. He's still learning. This guy's got a lot of heart, though."

Radatz credited a second base-

Milking Machine For Swine Built By 2 MSU Men

A milking machine designed specifically for milking University swine was built by Elwyn Miller, assistant professor, and grad student Dick Daniels both of the animal husbandry department.

The milker is built with a standard DeLaval motor and pump, but the milking procedure is unique.

For a milking machine to be effective with swine, a hormone Oxytocin must be administered. The hormone is injected with a syringe into the muscle or veins of the pig to be milked. After the "let-down" hormone is given, the lactation or milk-giving process begins.

In its initial test last week, the machine worked successfully, but Miller said the machine still has a few bugs.

The machine will be used for research in analyzing and breaking down swine milk into its chemical components.

getting ahead and encourages unemployment and lack of education.

"This is the real dynamite in America -- the non-white areas of great northern cities," he said.

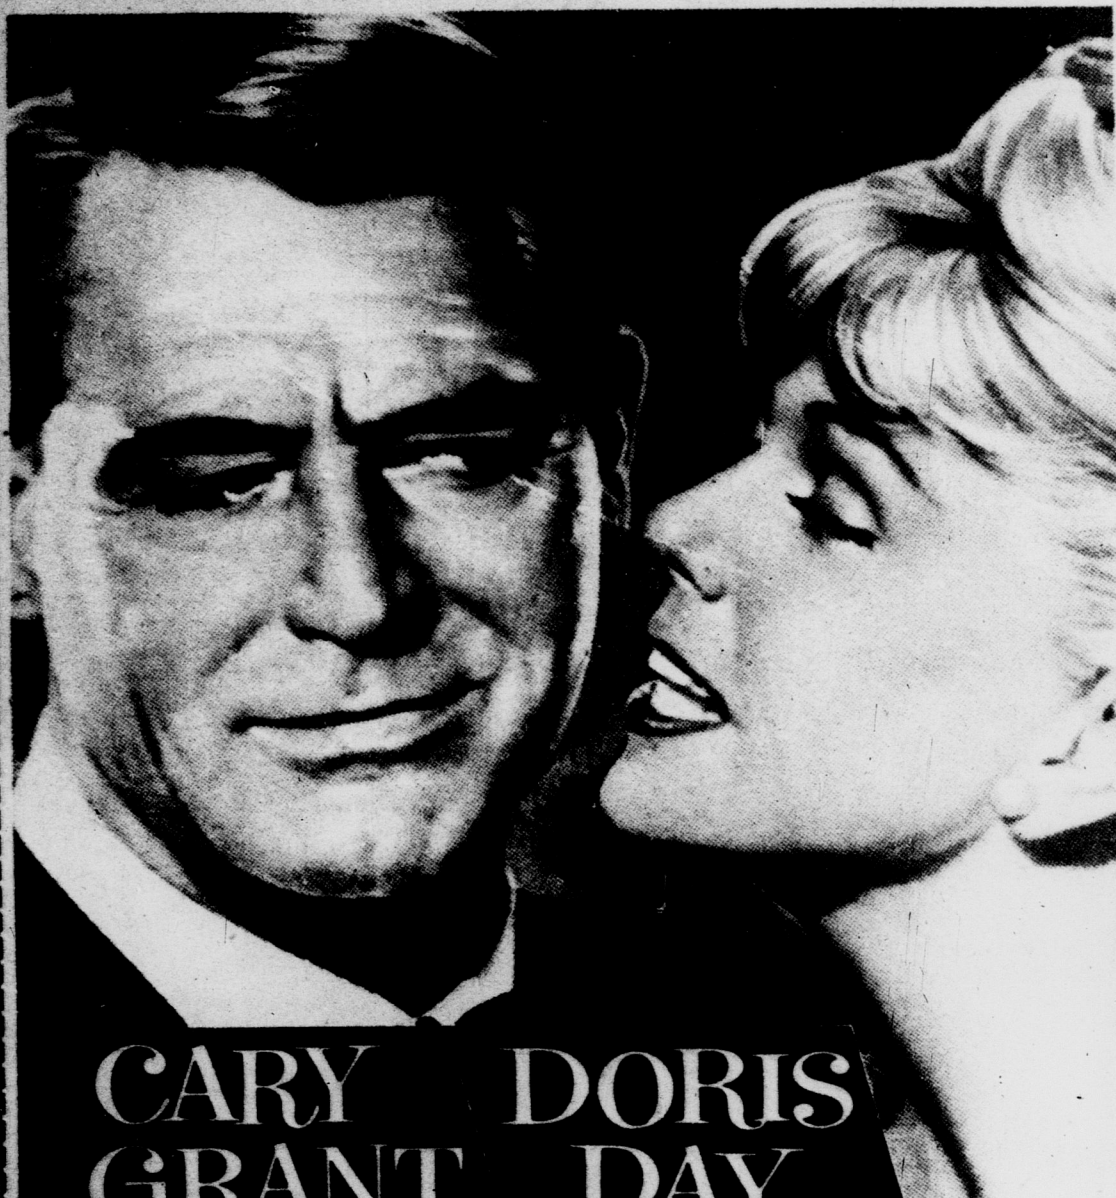

Citing the plan developed in Atlanta, Ga., which offered Negroes the opportunity to buy whatever class housing they could afford in a large area of the city, President Hannah labeled it as a successful and highly favorable solution to the housing discrimination problem.

Tuition

The School of Police Administration, the School of Social Work and the School of Urban Planning and Landscape Architecture will be transferred to the College of Social Science July 1.

The College of Social Science as was previously announced, is one of three new, separate colleges being formed out of the College of Science and Arts. The others are the College of Natural Science and the College of Arts and Letters.

Nonnamaker was born in Bluffton, Ohio, Oct. 2, 1928, and holds the A.B. degree from Ohio Northern University, where he was director of admissions from 1953 to 1954 and from 1955 to 1956. He received the M.S. degree in 1955 from Bowling Green State University and was a graduate assistant there from 1954 to 1955. He received the Ph.D. degree at MSU in 1959. At MSU, Dr. Nonnamaker has also served as a part-time assistant director in the Dean of Students Office (1957), guests counselor in the counseling center (1958) and head adviser at East Shaw Hall.

His memberships include the education honor society, Kappa Delta Pi, and Phi Delta Kappa, education professional fraternity.

Crawford joined the MSU faculty in 1956. He came to the University from Kenyon & Eckhardt, Inc., advertising agency, where he was vice-president and copy supervisor in the Chicago office. From 1938 to 1955 he was associated with Leo Burnett Co., Inc., Chicago advertising firm.

Crawford is a native of Chicago and a graduate of Northwestern University where he became a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary. He is author of a text, "Advertising: Communications for Management." Senger joined the MSU staff in January 1956 after having held positions as retail advertising director for the Cadillac (Mich.) Evening News and general manager of the Illinois Publishing Co., at Champaign, Ill.

He is a native of Danville, Ill., and is a graduate of the University of Illinois. He has held fellowships with D. P. Brothier Advertising Agency, Detroit; Better Homes and Gardens, Des Moines, Ia., and the Lansing State Journal. He is coauthor of a book, "Advertising Copy and Layout."

Coaches

wrestling Confederation. He is a past president of the American Wrestling Coaches and Officials Association.

In 1955 he coached the U.S. Pan-American wrestling team and in 1959 served as director of wrestling at the Pan-American games.

He was elected to the Helms Foundation Wrestling Hall of Fame in 1956.

Peninger also is an Oklahoman, coming to Michigan State in 1960 as assistant coach after 10 successful years as an Oklahoma prep coach. He was named the state's "Outstanding High School Wrestling Coach" in 1960. His Ponca City High School team was three-time state champion and runner-up twice in his nine-year tenure.

Peninger like Collins was an Oklahoma State wrestling great. He never lost a dual meet match in college. He won two NAAU championships, one in 1945 while he was still in high school and the other in 1947.

He was born in Weletka, Okla., and is 35 years old.

Mowerson will replace present Gopher coach Bill Huesner, who has been hired by MSU Athletic Director Biggie Munn to come here as a physical education research specialist, but not as a swimming coach.

Mowerson came to MSU in 1957 after he produced many championship teams at Battle Creek in 20 years there. He will move to Minneapolis this summer in time to assume his swimming duties Sept. 16.

McCaftree is still searching for a replacement.

commencement that the United States must reevaluate its aid to Southeast Asian nations because they are becoming economic dependents. (see story page 2).

JUNE 12

Wayne Elliott Franson, Detroit, who graduated from MSU in 1959 with a psychology degree, received a five-year-to-life sentence in Los Angeles as a member of the "Lavender Hill Mob" which promoted a series of robberies in the L.A. area.

Four Michigan State faculty were beaten in a six-man race for two posts on the East Lansing board of Education. (see story page 1).

JUNE 13

A proposed two-year medical school for MSU was endorsed by the Michigan coordinating council for public higher education in Ann Arbor (see story page 1).

JUNE 14

Over 1,000 high school juniors registered for the 25th annual Wolverine Boys State which ends today after a week at MSU's Brody group dorms.

Bob Mowerson, assistant swimming coach here, was named head swim coach at the University of Minnesota (see story page 5).

JUNE 15

Judy Lamparter, Detroit freshman, was chosen to represent Michigan in the Miss U.S.A. contest next month in Florida where the winner will enter the Miss Universe contest.

JUNE 17

Veteran MSU wrestling coach Fendley Collins stepped down in favor of assistant Grady Peninger. Collins, head coach 32 years, cited "health and other personal reasons" for the move (see story page 5).

Freeway Ready by Nov. 1

Students traveling to Detroit will be able to use the I-96 freeway for the whole distance by November 1.

State Highway Commissioner John C. Mackie said that barring unforeseen delays the last 60 mile stretch between Brighton and Lansing will be open by that date.

A last major roadblock in construction was cleared recently when a court order gave the highway department immediate access to a 13-acre piece of land southwest of Howell.

Mackie said title to the property, owned by Richard A. Harmon of Howell, has been in question nearly a year while freeway construction on both sides of the affected land has been underway.

"Delays in acquiring the property have not only held up construction on Harmon's land, but also on an interchange west of there," Mackie said.

The Highway Department said it offered Harmon $10,500 for his property. He wants $45,000.

Federal condemnation laws were finally used to obtain the property. Mackie said this was only the fourth time the Highway Department has used Federal laws to acquire property for an interstate highway project.

I sold it for only a few pennies a day through the Campus Want-Ads.

Carillon Music Starts Sunday

The first of a series of carillon concerts which will continue to July 29 will be conducted Sunday, said MSU Carillonneur Wendell Westcott.

The concerts will be held Sundays at 4 p.m. and Tuesdays and Thursdays at 8 p.m. from Beaumont Tower, Westcott said.

However, there will be no concert this Tuesday because Westcott will attend the dedication of a 66-bell municipal carillon at Springfield, Illinois.

Urge More Counsel for Mixed Marriages

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International
For many years, pastors had one word of advice for couples contemplating a religious mixed marriage.

The word was: Don't.
This is still the first counsel they have to offer to the young people who are thinking of marrying outside their faith.

But they now recognize that it cannot be their last word on the subject. In spite of all warnings, mixed marriages are taking place in large numbers. Unable to prevent them, pastors are seeking ways to make them work.

"There has been no change in the church's opposition to mixed marriages," Fr. John C. Knott, director of the Catholic Family Life Bureau, said in an interview.

"We still say they're hazardous and ought to be avoided. But we are trying to take a positive approach to the ones which do occur."

A similar view was expressed from the Protestant side by David R. Mace, president of the National Council on Family Relations. In a recent issue of the Christian Advocate, Methodist magazine for clergymen, he pointed out that interfaith marriages have a breakdown rate "between two and three times higher than that of marriages within the same faith."

"It is still good policy to warn young people of the hazards involved -- and to do it in time," Dr. Mace said. "But the stern realities of the situation demand that we consider what to do if such a marriage does develop."

Both Fr. Knott and Dr. Mace are convinced that a mixed marriage has a far better chance of survival if the partners avoid the temptation to treat religion as a taboo subject.

Instead of shying away from religion as a potential source of friction, Fr. Knott said, a Protestant-Catholic couple should "try to build up the religious life of the family from the common elements of their belief."

"They may find," he said, "that they share more important convictions than they had realized. After all, both of them are Christians."

He suggested, for example, that Protestant and Catholic mates join in grace at meals, in saying the Lord's Prayer, and in reading the Bible.

"They can start a little ecumenical movement on the domestic level," he said.

Dr. Mace said it is extremely important for partners in an interfaith marriage to "study carefully the meaning of each other's faith."

"If they can see some way in which to unite in religious loyalty, that is best of all for the harmony of their marriage. But if not, they owe it to each other to take each other's convictions seriously, to know just what these convictions are, and just what they are held."

Substantially similar but more detailed advice is offered by the Rt. Rev. James Pike, Episcopal bishop of California, in his book, "If you marry outside your faith" (Harper). This book, first published in 1954, is now out of print, but a revised edition is due for publication in August, and will include an inexpensive paperback version.

Bishop Pike points out that arguments about religion are seldom the real problem in a mixed marriage. The greater danger is that a husband and wife will maintain a "studied silence."

Bishop Pike believes that this conspiracy of silence has such a devastating effect on a couple -- and also on their children -- that it would be far better for them to quarrel about their beliefs, which "at least keeps religion to the forefront of the marriage."

But it is not really necessary to choose between silence and a quarrel, he says. The best solution of all -- indeed, in his opinion, the only satisfactory solution -- is to "face the subject frankly together" and try to find common ground.

Bishop Pike says it is psychologically disastrous for one partner to sacrifice his own convictions and accept his mate's simply for the sake of harmony.

"What is called for is an open-minded examination -- together -- of the positions and claims of the two alternative traditions represented by the couple, or of any other likely possibilities."

If this joint exploration does not unite the couple in the same church, he says, it will at least lead to "a better understanding and a deeper appreciation of each other's faith."

Dr. Ivey Dean of Education

President's Aide Replaces Erickson

The new Dean of the College of Education will be John E. Ivey, who currently is consultant to the president, professor of education and president of the Midwest Program on Airborne Television Instruction, Inc.

The appointment, effective Aug. 1, was approved by the MSU Board of Trustees. He succeeds Dr. Clifford E. Erickson, appointed provost of the University in February.

Ivey will continue as chief executive of MPATI, Inc., a multi-state educational television program headquartered at Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., a position he has held since September 1959.

Ivey, 43, came to MSU in 1960. He has a long and distinguished record of achievement in the fields of education and sociology. Formerly executive vice-president of New York University (1957-59), Dr. Ivey served as head of the Learning Resources Institute in New York City before coming to Michigan State.

A native of North Carolina, Ivey received his undergraduate degree at Auburn University in 1940, the Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina in 1943, and the LL.D. from the University of Chattanooga in 1954.

Universities would be strengthened and unnecessary duplication avoided.

"A two-year program of graduate study in human biology would be established at Michigan State University leading toward either a Ph.D. or an M.D. degree. The course work in Anatomy, Physiology, Biochemistry, Bacteriology and General Pathology would be provided at Michigan State University and would be designed to be equivalent to similar courses in the medical schools of The University of Michigan and Wayne State University.

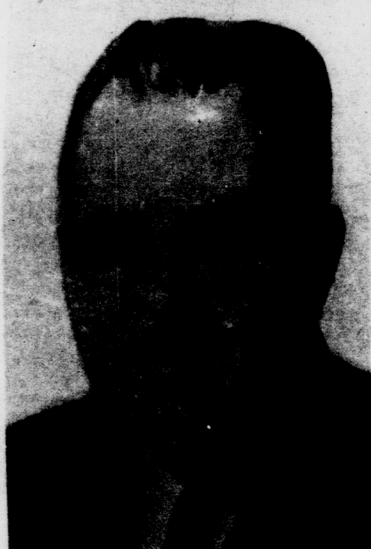

"Specialized medical course work in Human Pathology, Pharmacology, Clinical Laboratory Diagnosis, Physical Diagnosis and the Introduction to Clinical Medicine would be provided by the medical schools of The University of Michigan and Wayne State University. Common criteria of admission and student evaluation would be adopted by the three cooperating Universities.

"For those students seeking a Ph.D. degree, the entire program would be available at Michigan State University. Those students seeking an M.D. degree would transfer to The University of Michigan or Wayne State University for approximately the terminal semester of the two-year program. At the conclusion of the two-year program these latter students would be eligible for admission to the final years of medical school -- either within or outside of the State of Michigan.

30 Professors At Dairy Meet

Thirty MSU professors will be at the wrap-up of the American Dairy Science Assn. meeting Thursday in College Park, Maryland.

Over 2,000 scientists from all over the world presented about 350 technical papers at the event. C. A. Lassiter, chairman of MSU's dairy department, calls "the number one dairy science meeting of the year."

Sites suggested were Grand Rapids, Lansing, Detroit and the Flint-Pontiac area.

The recommendation was that: "No later than 1967, appropriations should be made to expand medical education in Michigan so that by 1971, 100 additional first-year students would be admitted. It is recommended that to achieve this goal a new four-year medical school for 100 entering medical students be established, with the first class to enter in September of 1971."

The committee also recommended that another committee should be appointed to recommend location and sponsorship of the new school. This committee is to report no later than 1965. Funds for the appointment of a dean and a few core faculty members should be appropriated no later than 1966 and construction funds should be appropriated no later than 1968.

The planning committee is to have representation similar to that of the ad hoc committee but with additional representatives experienced in medical education from outside of the state.

The MSU Institute of Biology and Medicine was established to strengthen and integrate established programs in biological sciences, veterinary medicine and nursing as well as to afford two years of pre-clinical medical education.

MSU officials think they will be able to start medical education in 1964.

The ad hoc committee's recommendation for the two-year medical program stated that:

"A cooperative program of graduate education in the basic medical science between Michigan State University, The University of Michigan and Wayne State University is recommended; in which the present educational resources of the three Rosters are being accepted at the Men's IM office for the summer term open softball league which will open play July 2, summer IM director Bob Gowans said today.

Deadline for entries is 5 p.m. Wednesday, he said.

Enrolled students, faculty members and staff of Michigan State are eligible to play on teams that join the league, which sees action four nights a week, Gowans said.

Each team will play one game week, according to present plans, IM officials said. Games will begin at 6 p.m.

Officials said men interested in officiating softball games should also contact the IM office by Tuesday.

Radatz

man for boosting his climb to the majors.

"I learned much from Johnny Pesky at Seattle last year," he said. "He changed me from a starter to a reliever."

Pesky, Seattle manager, was a star second baseman for the Red Sox in the late 1940's. He guided Radatz to 2.20 ERA, tops in the Pacific Coast League and a 5-6 won-lost record in 57 games.

"Johnny taught me a lot about the science of pitching," Radatz said. "Maglie has worked with me a lot, too. He has taught me the change up. It's important to have a change in speed when you throw a fast ball as often as I do."

"It sure is different up here in the majors. You got to know where to put the ball all the time. You can't just toss the ball toward the plate like in the minors."

"I've thrown harder this spring than I ever have before. Now I picked up a good sinker off the fast ball."

"Baltimore has two of the three home runs off me, one by Snyder and one by Jim Gentile," he said. "I got Gentile out the five other times he faced me, however."

Radatz said he retired former Michigan State teammate All-uplow all three times he pitched to him.

Radatz and Luplow, Cleveland outfielder, are only two of five former Michigan State baseball players in the major leagues. The others are Hobie Landrith and Robin Roberts of the Baltimore Orioles, Ron Perransoki of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Jack Kralick of the Minnesota Twins.
