Artist Acts As Goodwill Ambassador Says Actor

The most important duty of the artist in today's society is serving as a goodwill ambassador, said Everett Clarke, opera actor, narrator and director, who was guest speaker at the fourth Provost Lecture Wednesday afternoon in the Kiva.

His topic was "The Artist and His Community."

The artist under Mr. Clarke's definition, also includes the cameraman, the writer, the set and costume designers, and all others persons involved in the creative process.

The artist finds he must make money to survive, and ends up compromising his ideal, Clarke said. This results in accepting work on soap operas, radio or television commercials or modeling. To remain in his field, he may take on several smaller tasks simultaneously, Clarke

STUDENT EXHIBIT -- Students Roy Madsen and Lewis Mooney view the oil painting show.

Union Board Features All-Student Art Exhibit

The Union Board art exhibit, which opened Tuesday in the main lounge of the Union, is the first all-student art show in two years, Don Baer, Union Board social chairman, said Wednesday.

Baer said the Union Board is sponsoring the show to give MSU students an opportunity to exhibit their creative efforts.

"Kresge Art Center does not have student shows. This art show gives students an opportunity to show their talents."

Baer noted that the art show also allows the public to see what MSU students are doing in the field of art.

He said the exhibits at the art show were "largely modern art."

Eighty-eight entries are displayed including water color, oil, mixed media, prints, sculpture, and ceramics.

Judging took place Nov 7. The judges were R. Henderson of the art department, Bishop Pipes of humanities, Don Taylor of the philosophy department, and Robert Weil of the art department.

First, second, and third place recognition was awarded in each of the categories. No monetary awards were given, Baer said.

People may purchase any of the exhibits on display. The artist's names and phone numbers are placed on the exhibits.

Baer said the production of future shows would depend upon response from the crowds.

"If this art show is successful, I see no reason why we can't have future shows twice a year."

Debaters Clash On Castro Government

British graduate students from Oxford University clashed with two members of the MSU debate team Wednesday night in Anthony Hall on the question of whether Fidel Castro's government should continue to be tolerated by the United States.

William David Madel and John B. McDonnell, members of the famed Oxford Debate Union, took the position in the debate that the Castro regime should be tolerated.

Clark Davis, Pontiac sophomore, and James Hudek, Cedar Rapids, Ia., freshman, contended that the United States should not tolerate the Cuban regime.

The British debaters appearance on campus last night was the first by an Oxford team in two years.

Murray Hewitt, director of forensic activities, opened the program at 8 p.m. with a talk on the differences between American and British debating styles.

Jerry Anderson, coach of the Spartan debate squad, introduced the debaters.

University Gains Recognition From Big Ten On Housing

"The facilities, attitudes and the student personality of Michigan State have received a great deal of respect and recognition as a result of the Big Ten Residence Halls Association's decision to move its Executive Branch Secretariat to our campus," MHA president, James Chandler, said Wednesday.

Chandler announced that petitioning for the secretariat will run today through Monday. Positions that are open are: executive secretary, executive treasurer, secretaries, and two research assistants.

Lesinski Lead Up

DETROIT - Official canvass figures from Kent and Macomb counties this afternoon have boosted T. John Lesinski's lead over Clarence Reid in the Lieutenant Governor's race to almost 3,400 votes.

Reid -- the Republican -- had trailed incumbent Lesinski by only 2,181 votes before the Kent county official canvass was reported.

In Kent county, Lesinski gained 158 votes and Reid lost 1,024 votes from the previously unofficial tabulation.

The Lesinski gain and Reid's loss widened the gap between the two candidates to 3,363 votes.

Profs Request Penalty Repeal

Resolution Calls For End Of Probation On Six Students

University faculty members of the American Association of University Professors Tuesday requested repeal of the disciplinary probation given to the six students who opposed the speaker screening committee.

Herbert Weisinger, professor of English, offered the resolution at a meeting where the AAUP met to discuss academic freedom at Michigan State.

The resolution read in part:

"The AAUP...requests that those students that have been placed on probation as a result of their efforts on behalf of bringing the issue to the attention of the campus be taken off probation and restored to good standing and their offices in student organizations be restored."

Ex AUSG president Bob Howard and five other students were placed on strict disciplinary probation for inviting speakers to campus before clearing them with the speaker's committee. The committee has since recommended that speakers should not be screened before they speak.

"It is disgraceful that students are way ahead of the faculty," Walter Adams, professor of economics, said. "I am grieved that the people that showed the greatest courage were the students."

Adrian Jaffe, associate professor of English, said, "I have seldom seen students that have conducted themselves with more principle. I am concerned that they are the ones that got severely punished."

The AAUP also commended the speaker's committee for the principle of free speech stated in its recommendation, but asked that its procedures be simplified and democratized.

During a panel discussion Robert Repas, assistant professor of labor and industrial relations, said that the new policy still contains censorship and restricts the area of discussion.

"You can't have free speech problems until people try to exercise free speech," Repas said. "The policy ought to be simple and clear -- that a recognized student group may invite those speakers it wishes."

Dean Paul Varg, College of Arts and Letters and a member of the speaker's committee, supported his committee's recommendations. He said that the report of the committee is an argument against censorship and the screening of speakers.

"This is a tremendous gain," Varg said. "It is a policy we believe is the contrary of censorship."

Repas warned that the recommendations were not in effect and that former policies of the Board of Trustees still stand. He added that the ban on advocacy of any illegal or obscene act "does not encourage the free discussion of controversial ideas."

One AAUP member commented that the rule requiring clubs to inform speakers of the prohibitions is "comparable to asking a houseguest and telling him not to steal the silver."

In final action the AAUP asked for a committee to screen student disciplinary problems.

The resolution, by Dr. Einar Hardin, associate director of the School of Labor and Industrial Relations, said:

"The AAUP urges the faculty...to establish a permanent faculty committee to review alleged inequities in administering MSU disciplinary and regulatory practices affecting students."

The AAUP is an independent association of teaching faculty members to promote the interests of college professors. Dr. Robin Drews, associate professor of social science, is president of the group.

McGinty Defeats Quinlan For Speaker Of AUSG

Student Congress Wednesday night elected Dennis McGinty, Lansing junior, to succeed Jim Barnes, Flint junior, as Congress Speaker.

Barnes succeeded Bob Howard, Elmhurst, Ill., senior, as AUSG President.

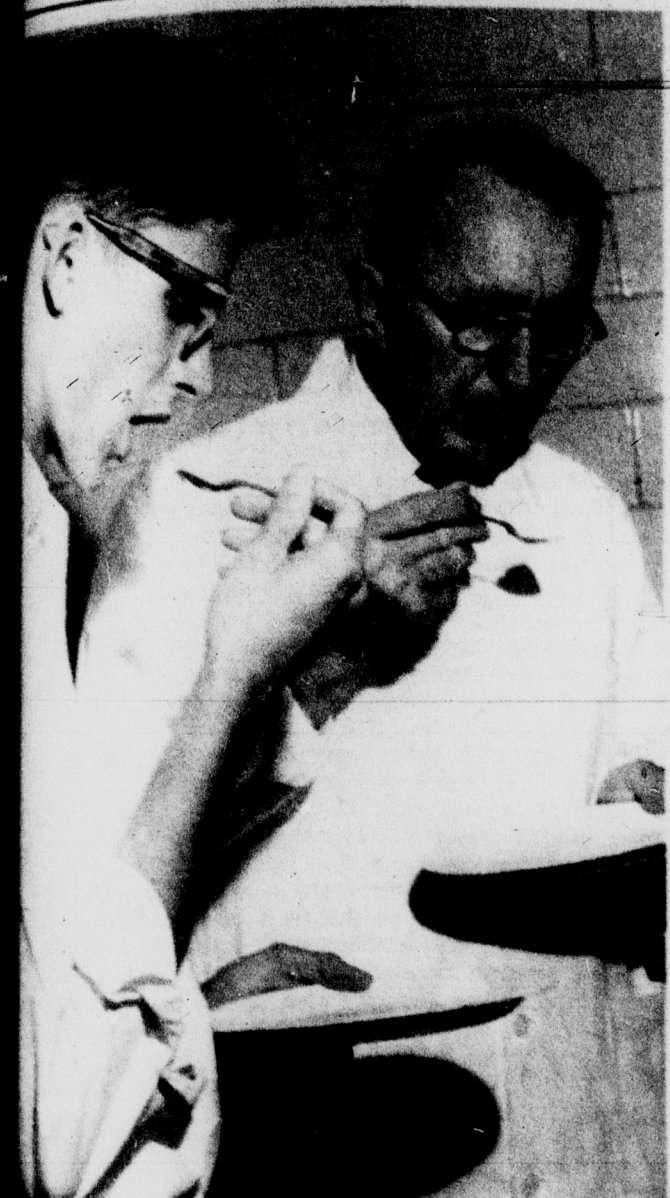

The balloting between McGinty and his opponent, Pat Quinlan, Dearborn junior, was extremely close. McGinty won election by two votes, 32-30.

Quinlan will retain his position as speaker pro tempore.

In a second election, Barbara Frey, East Aurora, N.Y., sophomore, was named to fill a vacancy on the important Committee of Committees, the Congressional oversight committee.

The elections were the only order of business taken up by Congress.

Base Restrictions On 2 Ex-Leaders

Driving restrictions on Bob Fuzak, former AUSG president, and Tom Stenquist, president of the Michigan Forensic Union, have been relaxed to permit use for academic purposes, Fuzak, dean of students, Wednesday.

Both had special permission to drive to and from classes as well as to use the car only for academic purposes, Fuzak said.

Stenquist includes permission to drive to the library, and Fuzak includes permission to drive to the library.

Driving restrictions placed on the two by the University disciplinary probation will be in effect for at least 90 days, Fuzak added.

Fuzak said there had been some confusion over the relationship between driving restrictions and disciplinary probation.

"The revocation of student driving registrations is automatic with the enforcement of this type of disciplinary probation," he emphasized. "The 90-day period is a minimum time which students may not drive on campus."

Fuzak said the 90-day driving restriction had been confused with the actual probationary period.

"If probations are terminated before the 90-day period is over, the students will still be unable to drive on campus."

If probations are extended beyond 90 days, driving restrictions will remain in force, he added.

U.S. Pessimistic On Quick Crisis Decision
UNITED NATIONS--Adlai E. Stevenson and acting Secretary-General U Thant met for almost two hours on the Cuban crisis Wednesday. There was no sign that any significant progress was being made toward a solution.

"I am hopeful that we can solve the problem," the U.S. ambassador told newsmen, "but this would be a triumph of hope over experience."

U.S. Sees Kennedy's Stand On Cuba
WASHINGTON--Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany said President Kennedy Wednesday that the United States, by rejecting the Soviet challenge in Cuba, "rendered an invaluable service to the freedom of the world."

Adenauer made the comment in responding to Kennedy's official statement as the two met to try and determine how the outcome of the Cuban crisis influenced Moscow's thinking about Berlin.

U.S. Orders Investigation Of Rumors
WASHINGTON--Prime Minister MacMillan opened a full-scale investigation Wednesday night into rumors that one of his admiralty officers had planned to flee behind the iron curtain with a British nuclear spy.

The prime minister told a stunned house of commons he was "for a trial of the truth" into the talk involving Thomas Blomfield.

The house approved MacMillan's motion for a three-man tribunal to investigate.

U.S. Asks U.S. For Aircraft
WASHINGTON--A state department spokesman said Wednesday the U.S. has asked for transport aircraft from the United States and the U.S. air lift of priority items to the Indian armed forces.

The U.S. sources said there may be a further request for additional items.

U.S. Reports Downing Russian-Made Bomber
WASHINGTON--Syria--Saudi Arabia claimed Wednesday its forces shot down a U.S.A.R., Soviet-made Byuzhina bomber over the South Arabian town of Najran, near Yemen's northern border.

CLARKE

added. This leaves him no time to add to, and sharpen his abilities.

Appreciation of the world as theater is necessary to the artist to carry out his function. This can be accomplished through any medium.

"Film is the natural pioneer in its recognition of the world as theater," Clarke stated.

The social function of art, as Clarke sees it, is to widen the aesthetic experiences of the mass. This is especially important in the industrial society.

The Latin American theater is the one to watch in the future, Clarke feels. He cited an instance in Chicago in 1958, when the "Festival of the Americas" was held concurrently with the Pan American games. Two plays chosen for presentation and written by Latin American authors received wide acclaim, Clarke said.

Possible reasons for Latin American emergence as an alternative world are government subsidy of the artist and the theater, and the effect of foreign exposure through education in other countries and war, Clarke added. He termed the writing "independent and glowing."

After learning the technique of his art, the artist's task is maintaining awareness of the world in which he lives, Clarke concluded.

Buck Fever Invades Campus

Michigan Deer Season Opens Today

Buck fever invades the campus, as well as the northwoods, today with the opening of deer season throughout Michigan.

Men's dormitories, faculty housing and married housing quarters all took on a new look early this morning as bright red and yellow clad figures headed for the woods.

Saturday morning is expected to bring an even greater army of hunter-students into the field.

Conservation and police officials urge hunters to use common sense, and to concentrate on safety as much as on that buck.

All firearms transported in vehicles between the campus and the hunting campus must be unloaded, broken down, encased, or locked in the trunk of the car, police officials said.

Weapons are prohibited in the dormitories and on the campus, and should be securely stored against theft and damage, police said.

"Deer hunting is a relatively safe sport, if you remember the two most important things," said Sgt. James Brophy, department of public safety.

"Drinking and shooting, just like drinking and driving, don't mix. Also be sure of your target and your backstop."

Hunters that cause injury and death can be liable for criminal prosecution, Brophy continued. Negligent hunters can lose hunting privileges in Michigan.

"Carry first aid equipment, and brush up on how to use it," Brophy said. "You might be able to help someone injured in the woods."

University hunters can receive emergency messages, even when in the forest-bound hunting camps.

Michigan State Police and the Conservation department provide hunters with location and notification service. All hunters have to do is notify friends of the location of their camp, and then register with the State Police post nearest that camp.

A few brief safety tips for hunters: Don't mistake those cows for deer. Don't balance on a fence with a loaded gun. Don't invade farmer's property without permission. Know the location of your fellow hunters at all times.

Adding A Member To Board of Trustees

The possibility of adding a student to the Board of Trustees in an advisory capacity has been suggested by University of Illinois' newspaper, The Daily Illini.

We think it's an excellent idea. At present, communications channels between students and administration are centered in two groups: Spartan Roundtable and All-University Student Government.

Spartan Roundtable is a once-monthly dinner meeting of student leaders, President Hannah, and University personnel. It provides for an informal exchange of opinions between students and administration, and has been widely copied by other Universities.

Student Government, the other channel, has proved for the most part highly ineffective in communicating student ideas to the administration.

The position of a student representative on the Board of Trustees would be a non-voting, advisory one. It would give the students a voice on the University's policy-making board.

At present, their only voice is through the President, from the ideas and attitudes he gleams from Spartan Roundtable and other student events.

The post could be filled either by a popular campus-wide vote or through appointment by a board of student leaders.

The Illini suggests that the task of the student advisory member "would be to reflect student sentiment on such items as disciplinary procedure, due process, curriculum planning, fees and services. He would act as an official 'lobbyist' for such student-centered desires as tuition hikes, use of student funds for campus construction, and student rights."

A student member on the Board of Trustees would insure that this University's decision-makers are in touch with student opinion.

We urge that AUSG, the Board itself, and the Administration investigate the possibilities of such an arrangement. It could be another Michigan State "first."

MSU Band, Block "S": Two Jobs Well Done

After last week's halftime performance by Purdue's band, many students asked why Michigan State's band could not do the same type formations as the Boilermaker's 280-piece band.

The answer is simple enough -- Michigan State's marching band is one of the few in the country doing musical patterns, rather than the more traditional type of formation marching.

The 160-member MSU band, under the directorship of Dr. Leonard Falcone, should be congratulated for their fine performances all season both at home and away games.

It is something unusual how they quickly step off their interpretation of popular music; but it is also something of the future, thanks to the "Patterns in Motion" arrangements by William Moffit. Perhaps it is consistent with the progressive spirit of the University.

One of the most traveled bands in the Big Ten, State's band is a good representative of our school and brings praise from musicians who are aware of the ever-changing realm within which marching bands operate.

To the student it is something new. He must acquire a liking for it. Only then will he begin to appreciate the programs and hours of practice they entail.

We would also like to congratulate Block "S" for completing what must be their most successful year.

Once described as a scrambled pizza pie, the card section has become organized and is now a welcome spectacle. With continued appearances on television, Block "S" may become as well known as the UCLA block and others from the West Coast.

One Small Voice

We're Not Being Told About Vietnam Operation

Bob Beeler

When President Kennedy made his declaration to the U.S. public calling for the quarantine of Cuba, he first stated that he was fulfilling his promise to keep the American people well informed on this vital matter. He then provided the facts that had been obtained from a thorough surveillance of Castro's island.

Pictures showing the missile installations were made available for all to see. The result was that the American public knew what type of situation existed and what the steps of action were to be.

This is a highly laudable undertaking. It is a strength of and a necessity for democracy that there is communication and interaction between the policy formulators and an educated populace.

However there is another situation which is extremely deplorable because the government has almost completely failed to meet its obligation to supply the public with information regarding the extent of government activities and the basis for such action. I am referring to our operations in South Vietnam where the Diem regime is battling the Viet Cong guerrillas.

About the only official statements by our government have been the 37 telegrams sent to the families of the 37 U.S. military men killed in Vietnam since August 30.

Unofficial estimates state that there are now about 10,000 U.S. military "advisers" helping dictator Diem suppress the Communist Viet Cong. Also unofficially, some 2 billion U.S. tax dollars have been poured into the country since the summer of 1960.

There are two reasons why the public comprehension of the whole affair is incomplete and muddled. First, there is a definite lack of official information being given out by the government.

Secondly, and more tragically, there is a vast discrepancy between the background briefings of the State Department and the Pentagon compared to the reports of American news correspondents on the scene.

Further, the government-controlled press of South Vietnam accuses the Western newsmen of being either liars or in the pay of Communists.

Ben Price of the Associated Press parallels the accounts of the Pentagon and the State Department with those of the U.S. reporters in this fashion: "They contrast so greatly that sometimes it is difficult to determine if they refer to the same war."

Another example of this variance of opinion is reported by Malcolm Browne, also of the Associated Press. He said that American military men have been repeatedly stoned by the Vietnamese soldiers. A colonel with whom Mr. Browne was riding at the time of one such attack admitted that such occurrences were fairly common. Yet a check in Washington produced no one who had ever heard of such a thing.

What are the facts? What is the extent of our involvement? What have we accomplished with our effort so far? Can we believe the following conclusion by a field correspondent? "I have a fear that there are military policy makers in Vietnam and Washington whose attitude is that certain things must work, therefore they are working."

Mr. President, in the Cuban crisis and the recent controversy over the raising of steel prices, you showed us how a good politician uses the means of communication to gain popular support for his program. Now would you please show us how a good President uses communication to inform the public on matters which concern them and have a right to know about.

Letters to the Editor

On Geniuses, Speakers, Etc.

To the Editors:

Twice this term the State News has carried stories relating to the physical and mental health of superior college students. Both stories claimed to be based upon an interview with Dr. Feurig of the MSU Health Service; both reported that the superior student was more likely to suffer from physical and mental ailments owing to the strain of self-imposed achievement standards. Indeed, the story appearing on page 8 of Tuesday's paper went so far as to claim that there is a higher likelihood of suicide among superior students.

Stories like these support the commonly held American dogma that any exceptional talent is closely related to some pathological state: we can endure the superior performer if we can convince ourselves that he's really a nut or suffers some dread physical ailment. Unhappily, neither the dogma nor the stories in the State News represent the truth of the matter. L. Terman in his Genetic Studies in Genius studied a group of more than three thousand talented people for more than twenty years, and found that they were healthier physically, made more stable marriages, filled more leadership positions, and, alas for our dogma, had a lower suicide rate than a cross-section of the population drawn from the same milieu. S. Stouffer's The American Soldier used a sample of close to a third of a million soldiers in World War II. This study shows that there is a decreased incidence of breakdown under combat conditions, a lower level of anxiety and loss of confidence, and a lower level of self-inflicted injuries as one goes up the scale of intelligence and education.

Closer to home, every examination of the correlation between academic achievement and number of referrals to a college health center or psychiatric clinic has shown that, comparing equal numbers of students in each category, the better the student, the fewer the number of referrals.

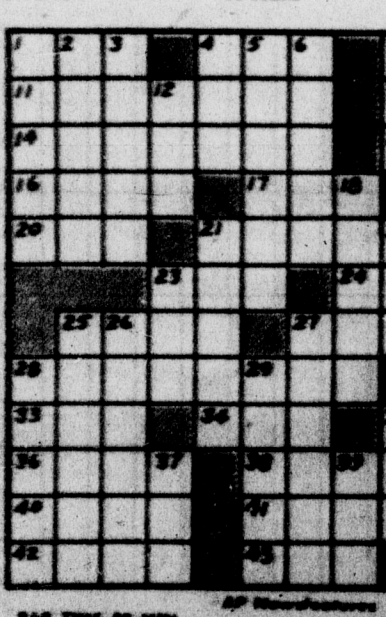

Also, leadership positions in high school and college tend to be held by the academic top achievers. Last spring, more than 40 per cent of all the leadership positions on this campus were held by students with a 3.2 average, yet these students represented only ten per cent of the student body. There may be no empirical basis for it, but one might assume that leadership and physical and mental health are positively correlated.

Finally, I think you should warn those at the bottom of the academic ladder that they can't place much confidence in the State News story: there is little likelihood that those at the top of the scale will eliminate themselves by suicide. I must add that the repetition of these stories in the paper and their ready acceptance by your readers causes me to fall into such a state of deep depression that I have contemplated both suicide and murder. Clearly, I would never have qualified as a superior student.

Rough Row In 'Old Days'

Sally Derrickson

MSU coeds may think they have a rough row to hoe these days but it's nothing compared to what the first coeds went through when they entered State 92 years ago.

Those girls spent their afternoons spading in University gardens which covered the territory where Olin now stands. They also green house--and even picked potato bugs off the plants.

It was all part of the curriculum for the first females--10 spent in regular freshman classes--algebra, geometry, trigonometry, surveying, history, geology and bookkeeping.

Their story is part of the legend of Michigan State that Dr. Macdon Kuhn, history professor and University historian, tells in his book, "Michigan State: The First Hundred Years," published in 1955 in conjunction with State's centennial celebration.

Ladies were ladies in those days, Kuhn reports. They refused to hoe on the same row with a "rude and uncouth" sophomore (shudder) used tobacco.

The social life in those days was pretty limited. The faculty outlawed dancing on campus shortly after the girls were first admitted. College officials hoped that the presence of young ladies on campus would help civilize the male population.

The literary societies and fraternities invited the young ladies to their meetings occasionally, but since most of them lived at home, social life other than this was next to nonexistent.

College was cheaper in those days--board was $2.50 a week, fees ran about $10 a year and books averaged $15. Tuition was free. Most students, however, had to work, scrape, save and borrow in order to get through, since their families couldn't afford to send them.

"They worked three hours a day at wages that ranged up to ten cents an hour," Kuhn writes, "earning a third to half of their weekly board bill." Many taught school for $30 to $40 a month in the winter. Living conditions? Well, maybe they weren't as crowded as they are now, but they were less than ideal. For $4 a year until 1884 the college furnished students with a bed and a woodstove. They bought the furniture they needed from other students, used kerosene study lamps, and carried water in from the well.

When the weather warmed up, though, there were few problems with bathing facilities. Students swam in the Red Cedar. (That was a long time ago--nowadays a dip in the Red Cedar means a trip to Olin for observation.)

There was no Spartan Stadium in those days...and no social life though some of those first coeds later married their professors. MSU was an honest-to-goodness cow college in 1870, when it was more important than Beaumont Tower.

The good ol' days? You can have 'em!

Point of View

Benefit of the CCC

Bob Hencken

Bob Hencken was the President of the Young Democrats representative to the Campus Club Conference. He was one of the six students placed on strict disciplinary probation. As a result, he had to step down from his office.

Now that "rationality and maturity" have replaced emotionality and irresponsibility, it is time to take an objective look at the work of the Speakers Committee crises and at the ideas which motivated "those who defied the law."

As one of those "rabble rousers," I feel qualified to explain the student body why we did what we did and the positive good we think came of it.

As you know, we have been castigated for not using available legal channels. Let's look at this. It must be realized that the students involved in the CCC acted not as individuals but as leaders of clubs and with the overwhelming support of their executive boards and membership. The CCC was not, as the Administration and State News have stated, an organization of seven individuals trying to defy a law.

It was the mutually agreed-upon course of action of eight campus organizations which bring speakers to campus and which we faced by a crisis. Campus Club Conference was only a name, the cosponsoring of the speakers by eight clubs, all of whom were not listed on the board in the Union.

In our opinion, the Administration had resurrected a long-dead policy of intervention in students' speaker policy and had done so in a manner which left us no other recourse than to do what we did.

People say we should have used legal channels. But what were they? We could not and do not see any. We objected to the creation of the Speakers Committee but the only way we could protest legally was through that same committee. No administrator suggested another legal channel to oppose it.

Furthermore, the Committee did not announce that it was open to student opinions until the morning of the day that our speakers were to appear. These people were invited before the creation of the Committee, and we felt that there was no moral obligation for us to clear them before a group which we considered to be in violation of freedom of speech.

What was immature about our actions? In the light of the way the University created the Committee or the way they handled the Robert Thompson affair last Spring or the way they handled the trial of the students in the speaker controversy, I am forced to say that nothing was immature about our actions.

Rather, they were different. Organized, united student opposition to the Administration is non-existent on this campus. When any group of students oppose the Administration through anything but the administration-designated channels, they are immediately subjected to persecution from the University and from the Administration's enforcers who compose the ranks of "student leaders" in the dormitories.

These people who attack our action and nowhering forth their "mature" protest would have done nothing if we had not aroused the campus to the danger of the Speakers Committee.

These are the same people who now oppose the return of Bob Howard and who are doing everything in their power to insure that AUSG will be under their control.

It is also likely that the disturbance we created had some effect on the speed with which the Committee deliberated and drafted its proposal. Without outside pressure they would probably have taken more time and perhaps have permanently institutionalized themselves into the fabric of decision making.

Speakers

Editor's note: With the major turning point in the Speakers' controversy--that is, the recommendation by the committee that a body be set up to act in a purely advisory capacity--we feel it unnecessary to continue to print the many letters on the topic. Most of them by now are repeating pretty much what earlier letters said.

For sure among the 32 letters, all views are expressed. Some sharply criticize the Administration's action, some defend the action as being necessary. Most were strongly critical of the existence of the Speakers Committee as an abridgement of free speech.

Some letters felt the State News was lagging behind student opinion in its "moderate" stand in rebuking Bob Howard and the other student leaders and advocating peaceful, legal protest.

Others agreed with our stand as being the only way to accomplish anything without chaos.

A few letters praised Jack Shea's column on "The Difference Between Dissent and Disobedience," in which he criticized the illegal action by the CCC.

Letter Policy

State News welcomes letters from readers. We regret that we are not able to print every letter we receive because of lack of space. When we receive several letters on the same topic, we will print only those which bring up a new point, or we will run excerpts from the letters.

Letters should not be longer than 300 words, and should be typed if possible. Include name and campus address. No unsigned letters will be printed, though names may be withheld if we feel there is reason. State News reserves the right to edit letters.

Study of the Limber pine tree is the basis for the new laboratory in the Conservation Building. J.W. Andresen, professor of Forestry, said in a recent interview.

Four MSU students received per term grants for this project from the National Science Foundation.

The laboratory will be equipped with the following: "resin analysis" (chemical) and morphological (structural) research.

The four students to receive the grants are: Walter W. Arnold, West Olive senior; Chester E. Ellsworth, Belding senior; and David A. Stock, East Lansing senior. Both Ellsworth and Stock are in the Honors program.

The grants were given on a three term basis in the area of special problems listed in the MSU catalog. The students, under Andresen's supervision, enroll for three credits of special problems each term.

The study is basic research and is primarily a comparison of the Limber pine's structure. The tree varies in appearance from one part of the country to another, he said.

Laboratory equipment is already being moved in. The supplies will include several new microscopes; ten herbarium cases, which are used to store plants according to species; various chemical analyzing equipment; and "Antinomical" dissecting equipment to cut the plants into sections for viewing in a microscope.

County Extension Director Dies of Heart Attack

Robert A. Griffith, 55, University county extension director, died suddenly of a heart attack Wednesday at the MSU Extension office in Midland.

Griffith was a University staff member for 15 years.

He was graduated from Michigan State in 1931 and began his career with the MSU Extension Service in 1937. He was an agricultural agent at a year until 1947 when he was transferred to the Midland office.

He is survived by his wife, Ellen; a son Roger, who is a student at MSU; and a daughter, Mary, a high school senior at Midland.

Services on Friday at Midland will be held in the Wilson Funeral Home at 11 a.m.

Genuine Hooka Water Pipe

Have a Harem of your own

A new smoking rage is about to sweep American college campuses. After decades, the Hooka (or Turkish Water Pipe) is now being rediscovered as a noticeably more enjoyable and safer way to get smoking enjoyment. The smoke actually bubbles through cool water before reaching your lips. The result is the coolest and best filtered smoke yet obtainable. No statistics have yet been obtained, but we venture a guess that 9 out of 10 women prefer men who smoke HOOKAS. Probably some gals will want you to take them into your Harem. In any case, this device is a real gas, a sophisticated novelty, and incidentally a good gift item. Be the first in your block to own one. Comes complete with simple instructions, and full money back guarantee. Send $3.75 cash, check, or M.O. to: HOOKAS, PO Box #630, Oak Park, Ill.

Wildcats In Three Way Tie

Spartans Hope To Play Spoilers

Now that State's football season has been spoiled, the Spartans eleven will be trying to do a little spoiling of its own Saturday when the squad tangles with Northwestern at Evanston, Ill.

Two weeks ago it looked as if this would be the game of the year, but now the best State can hope for is to ruin the Wildcats' Rose Bowl hopes.

Northwestern is in a three-way tie with Wisconsin and Minnesota at the top of the conference. All three have four and one records. Right behind them and ready to step in if they falter is Purdue which sports a three and one mark. The injury jinx, a familiar sight on the Spartan campus lately, has knocked alternate tailback Ron Rubick out of action for the second week in a row. Injuries have also hit the guard ranks where John Walsh is definitely out and Herb Paterra is questionable.

However, two Spartan stars who have been bothered by injuries, Sherm Lewis and Jim Bobbitt, are expected to be back in top form for the Wildcats. Captain George Salinas had another splendid day last Saturday against the Purdue Boilermakers and took over the State rushing leadership. The senior fullback now has netted 487 yards in 90 carries for an average of 5.4.

Coach Duffy Daugherty calls Northwestern, "An outstanding team with perhaps the best balanced offense in the country."

Although the Wildcats have made the headlines with their aerial game this year, Coach Ara Parseghian's aggregation has also shown it has a good ground attack.

Heading up the Northwestern ball carriers are fullback Bill Swingle and halfback Willie Stinson. Swingle has picked up 260 yards rushing while Stinson leads the team with 335 yards.

Top linemen for the well-rounded Wildcats are guard Jack

Cvercko and center Jay Robertson.

Last Saturday Northwestern set four all time team records, even though they were beaten by Wisconsin. The squad set a new record for most points in a season, most yards passing, most passes completed, and most first downs.

All this came with the season still two games away from its conclusion.

Leading the Wildcat attack is sophomore Tom Myers. In his first season of varsity competition Myers has thrilled Northwestern fans with a passing display reminiscent of Wildcat immortal Otto Graham.

Myers has completed 104 of 160 passes for 1403 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Winner of Moore, Clay Bout May Face Liston For Title

NEW YORK (UPI)—A fancy piece of change and a probable shot at the heavyweight crown awaits the winner of tonight's bout between Archie Moore and Cassius Clay at Los Angeles. Clay, a 20-year-old boxing sensation from Louisville, predicts he will knock out Moore in four rounds or less and odds-makers are taking him at his word. They've made Clay a solid 2-1 favorite.

any bout promoted by Championship Sports. Liston's one round September victory over Patterson at Chicago after Liston was denied the right to fight in New York because of his background.

Health Club Meets Tonight

The women's Health, Physical Education and Recreation Club will meet tonight at 7 in Women's IM building.

Topics for the meeting include winter and spring term activities, the student section of the HPE Convention to be held later this winter, and the club's constitution.

Following the meeting there will be an informal swimming clinic and a free swim.

In touch football play-off action Tuesday night, The Machine gained a berth in the finals as John Mason threw four touchdown passes and Jim Dobrei scored three times to hand Evans Scholars a 25-18 defeat.

West Shaw 10 put four different men into the scoring column as they crushed 6-Pac, 31-0. Bill Sherwood scored twice to pace the Shaw attack.

Larry Van Spruell caught three TD passes from Wayne Kusnery, Mike Lynd and Jim McCleary to lead the Emperors to a 19-6 victory over Cache.

Mark Mellon and Bob Zimmer each scored twice for Carthage as they romped over West Shaw four, 27-12.

With the exception of the short course league, the final play-off games tonight mark the end of the 1962 IM touch football program. (Continued to page 5)

Indoor Track Looks Good, 21 Lettermen Lead Team

By PHIL PIERSON

OF STATE NEWS
"We should be better than last year," said track coach Fran Dittrich in analyzing the coming indoor season. Last year the Spartans finished third in both the indoor and the outdoor meets.

"Our only weak spot might be the pole vault," continued Dittrich, "but in all the other events we should be very strong."

Anchored by Sherman Lewis, the squad has no less than twenty-one returning lettermen. As a sophomore last season, Lewis won both the indoor broad jump and the 300 yard championships.

Complementing the veterans, the squad has some very promising sophomores. Included are Sprinters Bobby Moreland, Dick Gordon, and J.D. Smith; and James Beard and David Warner, both quartermilers.

The captains of this year's team are Sherman Lewis and Donald Castle. The 880 and the two mile runs are Castle's specialties.

The first scheduled meet is a triangular affair on Feb. 2, with Ohio State and Kent State at Columbus.

Also on the same date, is a scheduled appearance in Ann Arbor for the Michigan Open. The runners not competing at Ohio State will run in the Open. Here is the complete schedule:

February

Booters Win Tourney Berth

NCAA "at large" berth secured. State soccer team, Gene Kenney, is busy with his booster brigade for the appearance in the "at large" bids.

The Spartan's selection late yesterday by the NCAA Selections Committee. The bid wasn't unexpected because the booters were informed earlier they were being considered for one of the "at large" bids.

Post-season laurels have had way of eluding past Spartan soccer teams, despite fine records. During the three year period of the NCAA tournaments, MSU posted a 23-4 mark, but were constantly bypassed by the NCAA.

Riding an eight game winning streak when the Green and White were handed their only defeat by St. Louis in their final game last week, it looked like the same old story. But the Selections Committee altered their ways and awarded State a playoff position.

Still uncertain is State's foe in the opening quarterfinal round. Navy and Maryland are the leading contenders with Miami (Fla.) and Howard University given outside consideration. Navy played Maryland yesterday and the winner is expected to gain representation.

The contest will probably be played here, although it could be played at a neutral field. The tilt is scheduled for next Monday. The semi-finals and finals will be held in St. Louis, Mo., on Nov. 22 and 24.

The booters will go into the contest boasting a great scoring punch. Eleven different individuals have counted goals during the season. Jean Lohri tops the Spartans with 18 points. Rubens Filizola is right behind him with 17.

Following is States scoring through eight tilts.

	G	A	TP
Lohri	13	5	18
Filizola	10	7	17

Leading soccer scorer Jean Lohri (3) added to his total on this play late in the final period of the MSU-St. Louis game. Lohri's shot into the net knotted the score at 1-1, but St. Louis later rallied for a 2-1 victory. Also shown in the play is Mabrice Ventura (17), who picked up an assist for his pass

Les Gourmets Visit Detroit
A whirlwind tour through some of Detroit's finest service establishments will highlight the Gourmets sponsored trip Saturday.
The itinerary includes the Armour Meat Packing Plant, Stouffer's restaurant, and the Sheraton-Cadillac Hotel in Detroit and Monte's in Warren.
All interested students are invited to attend. Cost of the trip is $4.75 which includes lunch and bus fare. Call 882-8575 for reservations or contact Miss DeRosa in the Hotel, Restaurant, Institutional management office.
Prof To Discuss Common Market
The Common Market's political impact in Europe will be discussed by Joseph La Palombara, professor and chairman of the department of political science, in a meeting open to all interested persons Thursday at 7:30 p.m., in 33 Union.
The meeting is sponsored by Delta Phi Epsilon, national professional fraternity for government service abroad and international business. La Palombara is the fraternity's MSU adviser.
The political science head has returned to campus this term from a year of research and writing at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences, at Palo Alto, Calif.
Grad Entrance Exams Given Saturday
Graduate Record Examinations required for admission to a number of graduate schools will be given here Saturday.
The examinations are also required by many donors of graduate fellowships.
Information may be obtained at the Counseling Center in the Student Services Building. Applications must be sent to the Educational Testing Service fifteen days prior to the date of test administration.
1963 dates are Jan 19, Mar. 2, April 27 and July 6.
Unpaid Tickets Total $84.60
Thirteen unpaid traffic tickets cost John Daniel Polakowski, 21, Bayonne, N.J., senior, $84.60 at Lansing Township Justice Court Tuesday.
Stopped on a traffic violation by University police Monday, Polakowski was held on five outstanding warrants for his arrest in the East Lansing city jail. Arraigned in court before Judge George J. Hutter, Polakowski was given a choice of paying $84.60, including court costs, or 20 days in jail.
Polakowski paid the fine.
Student Falls In Road
Carol Sue Taylor, Trenton freshman, suffered possible back and shoulder injuries Monday when she tripped and fell on Chestnut Road by the Men's Intramural Building in the face of oncoming traffic.
She is recovering at Olin Memorial Health Center after being brushed by a vehicle as she lay in the roadway.

State Board Studies Proposal To Make Delta 4-Year School
By UPI
Delta College should remain as a community college facility, a spokesman for the Michigan Council of Community College Administrators said Wednesday.
Philip Gannon, president of Lansing Community College and head of the Council, told a legislative committee the two-year institution serving the Saginaw Valley area with education beyond the community college level should be provided by a school entirely separate from the existing facility.
"We believe that if a state institution offering an abacalaureate degree or higher is established in an area where a community college now exists, every effort should be made to continue the community college services," Gannon said.
Of several choices for providing the full four years of college to students in the Saginaw Valley area, Gannon said he would personally prefer the creation of a state institution on the senior college level, leaving the present community college program intact.
Gannon was the first witness to appear today before state Rep. Lester O. Begick's committee. The Bay City Republican heads a House committee studying whether Delta College should be made a four-year degree-granting institution.
Begick's committee studying a proposal which was before the legislature earlier this year heard four representatives of existing state institutions of higher education during a day-long meeting Tuesday.
No conclusions were reached, Begick said, on the basis of testimony by spokesmen for Western Michigan University, Michigan State University-Oakland, and the University of Michigan.

WASHINGTON - Michigan is scheduled to receive $175,000 for road work on Federally-owned lands.
The Bureau of Public Roads said the amount released will pay for full construction or improvement of highways in national parks and forests, on other public lands and on defense installations.

DEARBORN - The Ford Motor Co. has scheduled a community tree-lighting ceremony Dec. 2 to replace the annual Christmas fantasy cancelled when fire destroyed the Ford Rotunda.
Henry Ford II, Chairman of the Board, said Tuesday that the public will be invited to attend the tree-lighting ceremony to be held in front of the firm's central office building on Michigan Avenue at Southfield.
The program, complete with a 75-foot Christmas tree, a Santa Claus and a large choir, will begin at 5 p.m.
The company also plans to erect a life-size Nativity scene in the area. Figures of the Holy Family will be located in a 30-foot high alabaster blue shell on the grounds.

Campus Noted For Landscape

TO PLANT A TREE — Grounds Planning crews have started work planning and landscaping bare spots on campus.

—State News Photo by Lorin Browning

The beauty of the Michigan State campus is no accident. Thousands of hours are spent each year in developing and maintaining its reputation and attractiveness, George Parmelle, curator for campus planning said.

"We have more than 6,000 different types of plants, trees and flowers on campus," he said. "All new plants are carefully selected and their positions are personally located."

"For example, our landscape architect makes a great effort to blend new buildings in with the existing surroundings. The huge sycamore tree on the east side of the Women's gym was purposely selected in order to preserve the effect of the surrounding area."

Parmelle noted that the University exchanges rare and unusual seeds with over 50 different countries in an international program of plant and seed exchange.

"We recently received a shipment of 14 different varieties of crabapples from New Zealand. So far as we know, 13 of these plants are new to North America."

The 30-foot-tall Dawn Redwood in the interior court at Bessey Hall, he added, was found in a remote part of China, and prior to 1948 was believed to be extinct.

"The real function of the carefully selected plants and flowers placed on campus," he said, "is not only to provide the 'green picture' and continue the deep interest and pride in the campus appearance, but we hope we are upgrading the taste of the student public. All new trees and flowers are labeled, telling where they are native, where they are most plentiful, and their description."

Parmelle noted that there are 93 different types of lilacs, over 30,000 Japanese Spurge, and literally hundreds of honey locusts among the many plants which are scattered on campus.

Mixed Dating Experiment Shows Shades Of Public Opinion

(Ed. Note: Miss Buchholz graduated from the MSU school of journalism last June. She is currently employed as a reporter for the Rochester Times Union in Rochester, N.Y.)

By JOYCE BUCHHOLZ

Ron and I dated about a month. It was an experiment of sorts to see if we would be avoided or accepted, to determine whether public opinion had changed in the last few years.

Ron is a Negro. We knew dating would be difficult and, of course, sometimes it was, but not so difficult as I had expected. I wondered if attitudes had changed or whether the people we met only pretended that everything was all right and that they approved.

I had read that in the progressive North a sorority lost its charter for admitting a Negro, that a New York country club refused to admit Ralph Bunche and that African diplomats could not find housing in Washington, D.C.

I had seen advertisements for restricted subdivisions and classified housing ads "For White Only," and I had seen signs that read "We reserve the right to refuse to serve anyone," and I had heard that it meant "We reserve the right to refuse to serve Negroes."

I wondered if East Lansing were any different or if here, too, the Negro remained a second-class citizen or if he was accepted like any other individual.

But especially I wondered whether public opinion on interracial dating and marriage had become more liberal, whether it had progressed at all, or whether it was the same with just a veneer of artificial approval.

Here is our story. You decide. I suppose the girls in my dormitory found out about Ron the first Sunday he came to dinner. We sat in the living room to wait until the 300 residents and guests were seated. Then we made our entrance.

Many faces, some disapproving, turned our way when we entered the dining room. A friend invited us to her table. A girl I didn't know well was sitting with us and she left hurriedly. But my friend remained, even though she had finished her dinner, and chatted about school and activities and her coming wedding.

After dinner Ron and I took a walk down Grand River in the spring sunshine and window shopping. Student couples, also window shopping, and families driving along the boulevard, stared and gawked. Children, leaning out of car windows, pointed at us.

We stopped at a drug store for a coke and sat on the same side of a booth, facing the main entrance. A friend, also from my dorm, came in with her boyfriend. At first I didn't think she saw us. But the drug store was not crowded and we knew from the attention we had created on Grand River that we were not an ordinary couple to be easily overlooked.

My friend did not "recognize" me until I caught her eye.

While we were out walking my roommate had guests. One was the girl Ron and I had lunched with. Call her Lynne. With her was another girl who asked my roommate:

"Who's that boy Joyce is going with?"

"Oh, a boy she's interested in," my roommate answered. "So what?" said Lynne. "He's nice. He was very nice at lunch. Looks are only skin deep, you know."

I had been defended, not offended, and I learned that others had come to my defense as well. Another girl, whose parents were visiting her that day, told me:

"When my mother saw you together she wanted to know who your date was so I told her he was a friend of a friend of yours who had come for the weekend and you were just entertaining him for the day."

"Why did you say that?" I asked.

"Well it wasn't exactly true," she said. "But it kept my mother happy."

Another instance of defense came a few weeks later.

I met a friend for coffee. She told me that a mutual acquaintance had seen Ron and me together.

"When Betty told me she saw you with that boy," she said, "I assured her that he was just a friend, that you wouldn't do anything like that."

"But he's more than a friend, Kay," I told her.

"Oh Joyce," she said, startled. "You're not serious?"

"But I am."

She drew away for a moment, then commented:

"Well, there's nothing wrong with dating one, I suppose. I've dated several foreign students myself and so have some of my sorority sisters."

"How do the other girls feel about that?" I asked.

"Oh, they just laugh," she said.

Ron was mistaken for a foreign student several times.

One girl asked me:

"Who was the boy you had dinner with last weekend?"

"His name is Ron," I said.

"I've been dating him."

"Is he from Africa?" she asked.

"No, he's from Ohio."

"Oh," she said and paused. She recovered her vocabulary and added:

"He has such an interesting face. He must be a very nice person."

"He is," I said.
