10,014 Students On Local Campus

Classes began Wednesday with a record summer enrollment of 11,921.

Total registration was 1,115 students higher than last year's summer term. The East Lansing campus has 10,014 students enrolled, while Oakland University has 643.

In addition to the regular 10-week courses, a number of half-term classes are being offered to accommodate students with limited time for study.

The first half-term ends July 24. The second session begins July 25 and continues until August 30, when the regular 10-week session also closes.

Students obtain full credit for the five week courses. A maximum of nine credits can be carried during one half-term session.

First-day enrollment changes will be accepted Friday. Tuesday is the deadline for registering late, adding courses or changing sections.

Extra-curricular events on campus do not end with the beginning of summer term. A wide variety of workshops and seminars in areas ranging from jazz to Asian studies are offered during summer session.

The Stan Kenton Jazz Workshop returns to the campus again August 4-10. Top jazz musicians, including the entire Kenton band, will be on campus for the workshop. The workshop is traditionally climaxed by a concert on the back lawn of Shaw Hall.

The annual Congress of Strings returns Monday for the third consecutive year. Sponsored by the American Federation of Musicians, the Congress is composed of 100 string artists from the United States and Canada.

Conductors such as Eugene Ormandy, director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, Izler Solomon, conductor of the Indianapolis Symphony, and Ralph sent from their environment, City Music Hall, New York City, will conduct the Congress.

A highlight of the summer is the annual Fine Arts Festival, which presents programs in nearly every cultural area on campus, including concerts, art exhibits, dance programs, foreign films and lectures. The Fine Arts Festival will be held July 15-18 this year.

The Institute of Asia will be held this summer for the eighth consecutive year. The Asian Institute features credit courses, seminars, lectures, exhibits and Asian films.

A number of students will pursue their studies off campus this term. The W.K. Kellogg Biological Station operated by MSU northwest of Battle Creek offers field and research courses every summer.

A 10-week summer camp program in forestry will be held at Dunbar Forest near Sault Ste. Marie.

According to Vladimir Bogachev of the New York bureau of Tass, the reason for launching a woman into orbit was to demonstrate that anybody will soon be able to fly in space.

Bogachev said that difficulties in linking the two space craft together in orbit were complicated because Miss Tereshkova is not a trained pilot.

Bogachev visited campus in May as a guest of the Michigan Press Association.

Russians Land Safely

The pair of Russian cosmonauts ended their record-breaking flight Wednesday morning.

Col. Valery Bykovsky orbited the earth 82 times and his dimple-chinned space partner, Valentina Tereshkova, completed the circuit 49 times.

Bykovsky, Tuesday, broke Andrian Nikolayev's previous record flight of 64 circuits of the globe.

Bykovsky returned to earth at 8:06 a.m. EST Wednesday morning and Miss Tereshkova landed about three hours earlier.

Monday an official announcement said the two Russian space partners had achieved a joint orbit and were only three miles from each other. Both craft were reported by Soviet bulletins as doing fine and the pilots were also fine early Wednesday.

Bykovsky became a member of the Communist Party while in flight. Premier Khrushchev sent him a message saying his request for party membership had been granted.

Bykovsky performed a stunt in his cabin Monday for Soviet television. He put on a show by pouring out a small quantity of water which drifted around the cabin in a shining globe.

The cosmonaut playfully poked at the weightless mass which was clearly visible in front of a camera set up on one side of his space couch.

Miss Tereshkova sent messages of goodwill to various nations of the earth on Monday and Tuesday.

According to Vladimir Bogachev of the New York bureau of Tass, the reason for launching a woman into orbit was to demonstrate that anybody will soon be able to fly in space.

Bogachev said that difficulties in linking the two space craft together in orbit were complicated because Miss Tereshkova is not a trained pilot.

Bogachev visited campus in May as a guest of the Michigan Press Association.

7 Meets Make Busy Calendar

Agricultural experts and Michigan farmers will gather on campus today to discuss efficient crop production practices at the annual Crop-Soils Field Day.

The program, carried out under the Cooperative Extension Service, will begin at 9:30 a.m. with wagon tours from the barns located on Mt. Hope Rd. south of the main campus.

Gas Chromatography

An international symposium on gas chromatography will take place this week at Kellogg Center. About 400 engineers, scientists and college faculty will discuss new techniques and theories.

Custodian Bus Drivers

Nearly 1,600 custodians and transportation supervisors from Michigan schools will review new developments in their respective fields during the school building maintenance and transportation conference at Shaw Hall this week.

Placement Program

More than 200 college and university administrators and faculty involved in admission and the advising of incoming freshmen will meet to discuss advanced placement programs in institutions of higher learning this week at the Union.

Organization Management

An institute for organization management will open at Kellogg Center Sunday. About 300 chamber of commerce and trade association executives will discuss ways of increasing their effectiveness.

St. Louis Blues'

"St. Louis Blues," an American film, will be presented at Fairchild Theatre Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. on the Lecture-Concert Foreign Film Series.

Farewell Spring, Hello Summer

Classes have started, books are bought, and the summer term has begun -- but it's not exactly summer yet.

At 10:04 p.m. Saturday the season of summer comes to campus, now that temperatures have reached well over 80 degrees, and the outdoor pool has been open for more than a month.

But with the official weather bureau proclamation that summer begins Saturday comes the annual rush to beaches and sunny spots in backyards. Books will be propped up against trees on the banks of the Red Cedar as summer students attempt to combine academics with the "crazy-lazy-days-of-summer."

Also mixed up with the courses and cruises of summer term are the warm afternoons and hopefully cooler nights of June through August, with professors hinting that air conditioners are welcome in classes, and students wishing their classes were held in air-conditioned Bessey Hall.

SCHEDULING CONFLICTS--A common problem with students, especially summer quarter when one tries to fit together both short and long term classes. Pert Martha Wolf, Buffalo, N.Y. sophomore, is confronted with such a problem but she is content in settling it in front of the IM.

Ice Skaters Ready For 15th Season

The 15th annual summer ice session, boasting a star-studded field of ambitious young figure skaters, opens at Michigan State University Saturday, June 22, and runs through August 18.

Among the 110 registrants for all or part of the eight-week session are three gold medal skaters, the absolute tops in this exacting sport, and 13 who have passed their seventh tests and are knocking on the final door.

Four professionals have signed in to direct the skating activities under the supervision of Arena Manager Norris Wold. The pros are Montgomery Wilson, Skating Club of Boston; Don Stewart, Ice-Land Skating Center, Troy, Mich.; and Beryl Williamson and Jack Jost, both MSU Ice Arena and Lansing Skating Club.

They will be public skating every evening except Monday from 8-10 as well as Saturday and Sunday afternoons from 3-5.

The greatest bulk of time will be taken up by practice periods for the session's regular registrants. Reserved patches start at 5 a.m. daily except Sunday.

The gold medal skaters signed in are Buddy Zack, Seattle, Wash.; Jerry Zak, Lakewood, Ohio; and Gary Visconti, Detroit.

Those working on the final test will be Gary Clark, Lansing; Charlene Cruickshank, Bothell, Wash.; Maud Dubos, Detroit; Ruth Fitzgibbon, Guelph, Ontario, Can.; Joey Heckert, Lansing; Lynn Haglund, Short Hills, N.J.; Erlene Hildebrandt, Duluth, Minn.; Joyce Komperda, Milwaukee, Wis.; Lee Lamprecht, Rock River, Ohio; Duane Maki, Detroit; Mary O'Donnell, Detroit; Ann Pellegrino, Arlington, Mass.; and Cynthia Sweetnam, West Newton, Mass.

81 Cardinals Vote

Balloting Begins To Elect Pope

The Roman Catholic College of Cardinals today begins the work of electing a successor to the late Pope John XXIII.

Balloting begins this morning with the largest number of Cardinals in history attending the conclave. Jozsef Cardinal Mindszenty, of Hungary, a refugee in the U.S. legation in Budapest, is the only primate absent from the 82-member college.

The conclave opened Wednesday with a solemn mass celebrated by Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, dean of the College of Cardinals.

Balloting will be held four times a day, twice each morning and afternoon, until a new Pope is chosen. Cardinals took 11 ballots in 1958 to choose Angelo Giuseppe Cardinal Roncalli, the patriarch of Venice, who took the name of John XXIII.

The fate of the second Vatican Council is a prime issue which must be decided by the new Pope. The Council cannot continue its work unless the new Pope reconvenes it.

Press releases from the Vatican indicate the council may be interrupted for more than a year, although the new Pope will probably reconvene it in some form.

A second issue involved in the election of the 262nd Pontiff is the church's increased involvement in world affairs under Pope John. His last encyclical, "Pacem in Terris," was the first papal letter addressed to all peoples of the world.

Papabili, persons considered top prospects for the Papacy, are numerous as balloting begins today. Most of them are members of either the middle-of-the-road or liberal segment of the church hierarchy.

Two Italian Cardinals whose names are often mentioned are Giovanni Battista Cardinal Montini, Giovanni Cardinal Urbani and Giacomo Cardinal Lecaro.

Top non-Italian prospects are Gregory Peter Cardinal Agagianian, a native of Soviet Armenia, and Franz Cardinal Koenig, who served as Pope John's personal emissary to the U.N. last May.

6 Win Ag Scholarships

Six winners of agriculture scholarships at Michigan State University for 1963-64 year have been announced by Production Credit Associations of Michigan.

Each of the PCA scholarship winners comes from a Michigan farm, is currently enrolled in the College of Agriculture at MSU and plans an agricultural career. The scholarships--worth $300 per year--are renewable annually to students who maintain certain academic standards.

The six students are: Roy H. Buckingham, Easton Rapids freshman; Charles R. Handy, Sodus junior; Simon A. Scholten, Grant sophomore; Donald VanSingen, Grant sophomore; Norman R. Veliquette, Kewadin freshman, and Glen L. Ziegler, Jonesville junior. Five of the six students are planning on a possible farming career. The other plans to teach vocational agriculture or work for the Cooperative Extension Service.

A committee of area managers of the Production Credit Association selected the scholarship winners. Along with granting these scholarships for agricultural study at MSU, the association also provides special educational loans to farm youth.

route to Shaw Lane and the south campus.

According to Phillip J. May, MSU vice president, the University will share the cost of the bridge construction on a 50-50 basis.

"We are leaving it up to East Lansing," May said, "to make the necessary business transaction with the land owners for the bridge right-of-way."

Land Problem Unsettled On Bogue Street Bridge

"The Bogue street bridge could be built within 90 days," said Robert Bruce, East Lansing city engineer. "To date, however, the real estate committee representing East Lansing is still in the process of negotiating for the bridge approach property rights with the land owners, J. Pulte Incorporated of Birmingham."

The land, according to Bruce, was formerly owned by the Beta Theta Pi fraternity until it was sold to the Pulte organization.

Pulte purchased the land for building apartments in a land development plan.

Bruce said that if land purchase negotiations are unsatisfactory, the city can resort to land condemnation proceedings.

The four-lane Bogue street bridge has been in the planning process for two years. According to Bruce it would divert a portion of the heavy traffic from the heart of East Lansing and open up a

Former EE Instructor Looks Back 50 Years

What will the campus look like 50 years after you graduate? Edward E. Kinney, former member of the electrical engineering teaching staff, and superintendent of buildings and utilities, had the opportunity to find out just that.

Kinney, who graduated from Michigan State College in 1915 and is 70 years old, has spent all his life in the East Lansing area, and most of it on the campus.

"My family used to live where the Brody dorms are now," Kinney reminisced. "When they decided to build the dorms, the house was just moved back."

"We also lived where the Sigma Chi house stood until the house was torn down recently. That was originally built around 1911 or 1912, just three years before I graduated."

Kinney said the actual size of the campus has increased greatly since he attended college here.

"There was little more than 400 acres of land here," he said. "Now there are over 4,000 acres. I can remember when there was nothing but flowers where the Stadium is now."

And as for the size of the student body, Kinney said there were 1500 students here in 1915. (The enrollment is now more than 25,000.)

"I remember a speech which President Harfah said that the enrollment would be leveled off at 12,000," he said.

What does Kinney think of the giant increase in student body?

"My goodness, where would you be if you did limit out-state students. You'd lose the benefits gained by bringing these students in, the broadening influences derived from their going to school here," he said.

"The enrollment should be limited, though," he said. "I think more institutions should be established."

Getting back to the student body here, Kinney said he feels the students of today are more interested in the literal meaning of freedom of thought and expression than those of his college days.

"This is good unless the student misconstrues these to mean liberty and license to ignore the rights of others," he said.

"Freedom is one thing, but ignoring others' rights is not part of it."

While at State in the capacity of buildings and utilities superintendent,

"But I don't think the answer is limiting the number of out-state students. If we do this, other states might do the same.

"It's got to come," he said philosophically. "The majority of public universities are all experiencing the same problem of growth."

And part of the privilege of education in this country is that of going out of state to school, Kinney had some rather unforgettable experiences.

"In 1947 there was a flood which filled the field house with 11 feet of water," he said. "The canoes were up to the ceiling."

"And in 1951, we had to shovel out the Stadium before a football game. State was playing Notre Dame that day, and there was a big snow storm. So the students, faculty, and everyone else connected with the school got out shovels and had the stadium cleared by game time."

"State won the game, too," he grinned. "35 to 0."

What has Kinney received for his almost 50 years with Michigan State?

He was recently presented with an achievement award from the National Association of Physical Plant Administrators, in recognition of outstanding service during his years as MSU superintendent.

Better Turn Over, Tom!

Brandon Addresses State Educators On Dropouts

Statistics indicate that only two out of 10 children now in grade school will finish four years of college.

Educators say the others will need specific training if they are to find their way in the occupational life of modern society.

Michigan school personnel concerned with education for "the other eight" met at Leland June 16-19 under the auspices of the Michigan Department of Public Instruction. Dr. George Brandon of MSU will be one of the principal speakers at the conference.

Brandon has been on leave from MSU to serve as deputy director of the Panel of Consultants on Vocational Education, called at the request of President Kennedy.

He will speak at the opening day's session on the topic "Observations on the Role of the President's Panel of Consultants on Vocational Education."

Brandon was a member of a panel at the Public School Adult Education Conference sponsored by the Michigan Association of Public School Adult Educators and the Michigan Department of Public Instruction at the MSU Kellogg Gull Lake Biological Station May 16-17.

Oriental Art

Contemporary Japanese prints and Oriental figures in art form are among the items on exhibit through Monday at Kresge Art Center and the Library.

The exhibit, sponsored by the Summer Institute on Asia, includes drawings and color woodcuts by Toshiko Uchimo, wife of the Japanese artist who spent last summer on campus.

Samples of calligraphy, the combining of writing symbols in an art form, will also be shown at Kresge.

In the Library are photographs, masterpieces of Asian art in America, together with the history of Asian art in this country.

"The Look of India," a photographic essay on the country, is expected to be arranged on the second floor of Bessey Hall.

Also included in the Summer Institute exhibits is a collection of Oriental teapots at the museum.

To Earn While They Learn STEP Enables Teachers

Students who have completed two years of junior college may earn elementary education degrees at MSU through a unique program which only requires them to spend three summer terms on campus.

The Student Teacher Education Program (STEP) was begun three years ago. Most of the students probably would not have been able to afford a university education if it had not been for STEP, according to William V. Hicks, professor of education and director of the program.

STEP allows students to live at home and draw a salary during most of the time they are enrolled at MSU.

The STEP program starts after a teacher meets requirements for junior standing at MSU.

The students attend a summer term in East Lansing and become a student teacher in his home community for the school year. At the same time, he takes courses from MSU instructors who reside in his city.

Following a second summer session at MSU, the student returns to his home town and becomes an intern teacher with responsibility for a class. He continues MSU course work after school hours. After a third summer session and second year of intern teaching and studying, he is eligible for his degree.

Students are paid by local schools during their intern years. They receive two-thirds of the normal salary during the first year. During the second year, they receive about three-fourths normal salary.

The schools use the amount they save on full salaries to pay a master teacher who supervises the intern's work. There is at least one consultant for every five first-year interns and one for every eight or ten second-year interns.

Hicks has high regard for the first STEP graduates.

"They are better teachers," he says, "because they know their children better than other elementary education graduates. They know how to 'read' children."

All of the members of the first graduating class, he notes, have been offered contracts by the schools in which they are teaching.

Of the 23 students graduating this year, 10 are in Grand Rapids and 13 in Port Huron. The original class numbered 38 but 15 dropped out.

In all, 253 students are enrolled in STEP. They are in centers located in Port Huron, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, Saginaw, Alpena and South Macomb.

"We have had terrific cooperation and willingness from the school officials and teachers in these cities," Dr. Hicks reports.

A part of the STEP program has been an extensive research project which is producing volumes of valuable research data on the development of young people into full-fledged teachers.

The research which will be continued over the next seven years, is financed by a $585,000 grant from the Ford Foundation.

Tooth Research

Decay Is Hereditary

By TOM WINTER
State News Staff Writer

Do you have cavities in your teeth? If so, it might be consoling to find out that your heredity may be a cause.

In a 26-year research project that cost over a third of a million dollars—granted mostly by the National Institute of Dental Research—Harrison R. Hunt, professor emeritus of zoology and his staff have proved that susceptibility to tooth decay in rats is hereditary.

"Probably there is also a heredity factor in human tooth decay," says Hunt.

The real stumper, though, is to find out just what is inherited that makes teeth resistant or susceptible to decay, and to find out how the heredity works.

Hunt and his aides: Samuel Rosen, now a professor in the College of Dentistry at Ohio State; C.A. Hoppert, formerly a professor of chemistry, and A. C. Sawant, post-doctoral fellow from Bombay, are still working on the problem, and have turned up several leads.

Hunt, for instance, is studying the difference in shape of decay-resistant rat teeth and susceptible rat teeth to find what significance this may have.

How did they prove susceptibility to tooth decay in rats is hereditary?

"Well," said Hunt, "we first selected rats which developed cavities early, bred them together and inbred them to get a susceptible line. We did the same thing for rats which developed cavities later in life to get a resistant line."

The two lines of rats were fed a uniform diet, he said.

"After 15 years, the differences between the two lines had become very marked," said Hunt. Susceptible rats were getting cavities on the average when 30 days old and rats from the resistant line when about 550 days old.

"And a 500-day-old rat is equivalent to a 90-year-old man, adds Hunt.

These differences by themselves demonstrated that susceptibility or resistance to tooth decay is hereditary, and some rather ingenious experiments carried out later mostly by Rosen confirmed this conclusion, Hunt said.

In one such experiment, resistant baby rats were nursed by a susceptible mother and susceptible baby rats were nursed by a resistant mother.

The resistant babies suckled the susceptible mother developed cavities no sooner than other resistant rats. And the susceptible babies developed cavities just as soon as the other susceptible rats, said Hunt.

If the resistant rats were resistant only because the bacteria causing decay were absent from their environment, these rats which suckled the susceptible mother would have gotten cavities just as soon as the susceptible rats, and this, of course, was just not the case, Hunt said.

But what is inherited that makes the teeth resistant or susceptible?

Some of the clues the researchers have turned up are: The protein content in the enamel of the resistant rats differs from that in the susceptible rats; the resistant teeth differ in shape from the susceptible teeth; the saliva in resistant rats is more viscous than saliva in susceptible rats, and the susceptible rats produced more protease than the resistant ones.

Hunt is still studying the shapes of the resistant and susceptible teeth. Rosen removed the salivary glands from resistant rats. They became less resistant and got decays sooner, but were still far more resistant than the susceptibles.

"We intended to secure homozygous (genetically uniform) cavities-susceptible and cavities-resistant rats, so that the lines could be crossed and the number of pairs of genes involved estimated.

"We secured a homozygous susceptible line, but were unable in 15 years to establish homozygosity in the resistants," says Hunt.

'Blues' Film Tells Life Of W.C. Handy

"St. Louis Blues," the motion picture story of the late W.C. Handy, opens the summer term Foreign Film Series.

The star-studded cast of the film biography includes Nat King Cole as the great Negro composer, Eartha Kitt, Pearl Bailey, Ella Fitzgerald and Mahalia Jackson. Show dates are Friday and Saturday in Fairchild Theatre on campus.

Seven other motion pictures are also scheduled for the summer series. All will be shown in Fairchild Theatre at 7:30 p.m. on the dates listed. Tickets will be available at the box office.

"Devi" (The Goddess) an Indian film makes its Lansing area debut June 28-29. The unusual, powerful and moving Japanese film "The Island" is scheduled for July 5-6. "Black Tights," a French film composed of four short ballets, plays July 11 and 13. Charlie Chaplin, Laurel and Hardy, Pearl White, Douglas Fairbanks and other silent film stars return to the screen July 19 and 20 when the Foreign Film Series presents "Days of Thrills and Laughter." The British movie "Man in a Cocked Hat," July 26 and 27, is a bright, witty comedy which pokes fun at fumbling Foreign Office methods in handling a "colonial incident." A dramatic World War II drama of German-occupied Italy comes to the Fairchild Theatre screen August 2-3. Finale of the summer film series is the German film "Das Dreimäderlhaus" (The House of Three Girls). It is a romantic comedy covering a year in the life of composer Franz Schubert.

Religion Instructor Headed For India

Dr. Robert T. Anderson, associate professor of religion at Michigan State University, has received a Fulbright grant from the U.S. Department of State for a year of research in India.

Dr. Anderson plans to make a comparative study of the visual arts and other aspects of societies where the dominant religion has an overt feminine symbol or principal.

He will be doing his research at the Ramkrishna Mission Institute of Culture, Calcutta, and will be on sabbatical leave for one year, starting July 1.

A member of the MSU staff since 1957, Dr. Anderson is an authority on the Old Testament.

He was born in Syracuse, New York, in 1928, received the B.A. degree at Syracuse University in 1950, the S.T.B. (bachelor of sacred theology) at Boston University in 1953 and the Ph.D. at Boston in 1957.

Dr. Anderson taught at the American University in Cairo, Egypt, 1955-56.

In regard to his research,

Dr. Anderson has theorized that societies with a goddess or a strong feminine element of some sort in their religion reach a higher stage of development in the visual arts than other societies.

Specifically, he notes, the early Egyptian and other ancient civilizations that worshipped goddesses were more concerned with the visual arts than were the Jews.

In modern times, he adds, Protestant countries do not seem to have emphasized the visual arts as much as countries where Roman Catholicism, with its greater emphasis on the Virgin Mary, is the majority religion.

Dr. Anderson will be considering evidence that Hindu goddesses such as Kali might have had an influence on the development of the visual arts in India.

He also plans to investigate the possible influence of the feminine element in religion on family life, rights of women, ethical codes and structure of government.

Recognition Night Planned For Robin Roberts

Friends To Honor Ex-Spartan Hurler

--Former teammates and friends of Robin Roberts when he was a baseball and basketball star at Michigan State are planning a recognition night for the veteran major league pitcher ace July 16 in Tiger Stadium.

The Detroit Tigers and Baltimore Orioles, Robbie's current team, both have given assent to the idea.

The July 16 game will be played under the lights. It will be the opener of a three-game Tigers-Orioles series.

Plans call for a presentation on the field prior to the game and a get-together for Robbie and friends after the game.

General chairman of the affair is Jack Kinney, baseball teammate of Roberts' at State and now the university's director of alumni relations.

Coordinating arrangements from the Detroit end is Chuck Davey, a great collegiate boxer at State in the Roberts' period, later a pro star, and now a Detroit insurance executive.

General committee members include Don Mason, director of the Ralph Young Scholarship Fund; Gaie Mikles, head of physical education; Bob Hoerner, sports editor of the Lansing State Journal; Bill McCann, president of the Ingham County Alumni Club; John Garver, president of the Varsity Alumni Club; John Carter, assistant director of alumni relations; Fred Stabley, sports information director; John Kobs, head baseball coach at State for 39 years until his recent retirement from coaching and the discoverer of Roberts as a pitching prospect; Sam Fortino, Varsity Alumni Club representative to the University's athletic council, and ticket sales manager Bill Beardsley.

A bloc of tickets is being bought by the committee. They will go on sale in a few days in Detroit, East Lansing and other Michigan points. Sales plans will be announced when completed.

Roberts' major league career is too well known to require much elaboration, but sports fans may have forgotten his collegiate achievements.

He came to Michigan State in 1944 as an army trainee and played varsity basketball. A year later, discharged from service, he returned to State and again established himself as a basketball star.

At the end of the one season he was voted by newsmen and athletic officials to be the State of Michigan's most outstanding collegiate cager. He was called by then Basketball Coach Ben VanAlstyne one of MSU's finest all-time players.

His baseball career started more slowly and less auspiciously. He came out for baseball after the 1946 basketball season had ended and announced himself a first base candidate. Kobs' team was pretty well set and Robbie didn't do too well at hitting, so a change had to be made.

At Kobs' suggestion, he switched to pitching and was told to work his arm into shape over the spring holiday back home in Springfield, Ill., while the rest of the Spartan team went south on a training trip.

Robbie did, and came on to win four, lose two that first season. The highlight was an 8-0 hitter he flung at the Great Lakes Navy team which then was loaded with pro stars.

The following season, 1947, he was the club's workhorse, pitching in 17 of State's 24 games, going 90 2/3 innings, winning five, losing four and compiling a 2.88 earned run average. He drew all the toughest assignments and learned rapidly as he went along.

Several things he had from the start: Poise, a live fast ball and good control. He struck out 86 and walked 22 in his junior season.

That was the end of the line at State for Robbie. The Phillies sought and signed Roberts for a $25,000 bonus. He joined them in spring training of 1948 and was assigned to Wilmington, Del., of the old Inter-State league. He worked there about two months and went up to the parent club.

Tigers Axe Coaching Staff, Continue Their Losing Ways

BOSTON--Detroit Tigers, who fired Manager Bob Scheffing and his coaching staff Tuesday, lost their debut under new manager Chuck Dressen Wednesday night to the Red Sox, 9-0.

Dressen, who broke into organized baseball in 1919, led the Brooklyn Dodgers to the National League pennant in 1952 and 1953. His last managing position was with the Milwaukee Braves, where he was replaced in September of the '62 season by Birdie Tebbets.

Joining Dressen as coaches are Stubby Overmire, Pat Mullin and Bob Swift. All were members of the Tiger farm system.

The replaced Scheffing said he wasn't surprised by the move of General Manager Jim Campbell. His immediate plans call for a months vacation with his wife. In 1960, Scheffing was a coach under Dressen when the Braves finished second in the senior circuit.

Students Produce Movies

"First Date" is the title of a film which tells the story of a college couple's first date.

The film portrays the nervousness and anxiety of two typical students on their first college date. The subject, however, is not the most unusual fact about the film. This film was written and produced by three MSU students.

It was written and directed by Thomas Kenny, Royal Oak junior. Ray Dion, Lansing graduate student, served as cameraman and Shari Dion, Lansing senior, was the script girl.

The film is one of 25 currently being produced by State students. The film is a project for Cinema I and II.

that a great deal of hard work is involved in producing the film. The students are required to write a 20 minute documentary

All 61 All-American Roses Bloom At MSU

Michigan State's "rose bowl" is blooming with All-Americans. Each of the 61 official All-American rose selections are found in the MSU Horticultural Gardens. The Horticultural Gardens and the Cooley Gardens in Lansing are the only two rose gardens in Michigan which contain every All-American variety. MSU also boasts the oldest botanical garden in the nation. Beal-Garfield garden, located near the library, was founded in 1873. It contains some 4,500 species of plants.

Next a sequence treatment is prepared. This is a writing form which may be compared to chapters in a book. The mood, pacing, visualization and brief character sketches are established in the Scenario.

The final step is writing a shooting script. This involves the use of technical language in describing exactly how the picture is to be made. Camera movement, narration, and dialogue are included in this.

After photography of the film is completed, they edit the footage into final form. This involves cutting the production and putting all sequences together into a meaningful whole.

Maybrey explained that the purpose of the course was to acquaint the students with the basic film form and techniques of motion picture production.

The course may well acquaint the student with many of the basics of film production work, although it is only after four to six years of experience in the work that they can be expected to be fully competent film makers.

Some other film projects being produced by students are: "Obsolence," an abstract study of war destruction; "Jenny," a fantasy about a young girl; "Electricity," a fantasy promotional film for an electric company; and "Jazz."

Driver Ed. Receives 2 Grants

Michigan State has received two grants totaling $7,500 from the Allstate Foundation for the improvement of driver education in Michigan and throughout the nation.

The grants accepted by John Ivey, dean of the College of Education, will be used for scholarships for driver education teachers in Michigan and for college and university driver education instructors in a number of other states.

The $2,500 grant is part of an annual program started 10 years ago by the Foundation to assure the further improvement of Michigan's high school driver education program.

The $5,000 grant will provide scholarships for driver education teachers from 30 colleges and universities to give them the essential background for preparing high school teachers in their respective states.

Teachers will attend five driver education courses at Michigan State this summer, covering various aspects of driver education and safety.

The courses for which Allstate Foundation scholarships are granted are Driver Education and Traffic Safety I, June 10-21; Driver Education and Traffic Safety I and Driver Education and Traffic Safety II, both June 17-July 24, and Driver Education and Traffic Safety II and Workshop for College Teachers of Traffic Safety Education, both August 12-23.

NAACP Welcomes Government's Bias Ban

NEW YORK—President Kennedy's announcement this week that the Federal government will take steps to stop discrimination against Negroes in employment on federally-financed construction jobs and in federally-aided apprenticeship training programs was welcomed by NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins.

The President revealed his plans in a statement released in Washington on June 4. The announcement followed termination last week of the Philadelphia NAACP branch's mass picketing of a school construction site to break the color bar against skilled Negro construction workers.

In a statement issued after the President's announcement, Mr. Wilkins said that the steps indicated by Kennedy "are precisely those urged by the NAACP upon both the Eisenhower and Kennedy administrations."

He said apprenticeship training programs are "certified by the Federal government and receive financial assistance from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare."

"The barring of Negro workers from Federal construction jobs has long been a scandal, the scent of which penetrated White House windows in recent years when Negro electricians and structural iron workers were denied jobs on new congressional office construction in the Nation's Capital and when students of Howard University protested that no Negro skilled workers were among those erecting a new gymnasium financed with Federal funds."

Mr. Wilkins had previously indicated that the Philadelphia "tactic of mass picketing of construction jobs will certainly be used by our branches in other cities confronted with this problem."

Meanwhile, on June 4, Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, in a conference with NAACP officials, pledged government support to put qualified Negro artisans, even if non-union, on government construction jobs if the unions continue to exclude them because of race.

Participating in the two-hour conference were NAACP Labor Secretary Herbert Hill and the Rev. E. Franklin Jackson and Edward Hailes, president and secretary, respectively, of the Association's District of Columbia branch.

Mr. Hill told the Secretary of Labor that "after more than 20 years of negotiation and protest, the rate of progress for Negroes in the building and construction industry is negligible. It is less than token and is totally unacceptable."

The NAACP labor secretary reported that Mr. Wirtz agreed that much more had to be done and pledged administration support to proposals made by the NAACP. The Government would require contractors to by-pass "lily-white" union hiring halls and employ Negro plumbers, electricians, steamfitters, carpenters, rod men and other construction craftsmen. Secretary Wirtz agreed the employers' commitment not to discriminate as required by their contracts with government had priority over a union agreement which requires discrimination.

LEARN FROM HITTERS

MIAMI (AP)—Ray Scarborough, a scout and pitching instructor for the Baltimore Orioles, says young pitchers can learn a lot about their craft by listening to and watching the hitters.

"The good hitters are studying the pitchers all the time," says Scarborough, "especially after you've gotten them out. They're looking for tipoffs on what you're liable to throw them the next time around."

Pitchers should do the same thing with hitters, thinks Scarborough, a onetime curveball specialist for the Washington Senators, Boston Red Sox, Chicago White Sox, New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers.

"Listen and look around the batting cage during practice," he recommends. "They may indicate by some action or habit the pitch they like the most or the pitch that might give them trouble."

Wins $5,000 Suit Over 10c Pickle

An MSU student won a $5,000 damage verdict against an East Lansing supermarket Monday in a lawsuit involving a 10-cent pickle.

An Ingham County Circuit Court jury returned the verdict in favor of the plaintiff, Peter A. Werbe, Detroit senior.

The court action stemmed from an incident Nov. 17, 1961, when Werbe was accused of eating the pickle in Shaheen's Food Center while shopping and failing to pay for it at the checkout counter.

Werbe charged in his suit the store manager Joseph Farhat stopped him on the way out of the store and forced him (Werbe) into an office and locked the door. Werbe claimed the action was unlawful imprisonment and maltreatment.

Attorney for the defendants contended the issue involved was not the value of the 10-cent pickle but the right of a store manager to detain and question a person suspected of larceny.

The trial was concluded Monday after four days of testimony.

BECOME PESTS

CHATTANOOGA (AP)—Most of the 100 species of foreign birds introduced into the United States have failed to adapt to the new world, a government biologist reports.

Those that have, Dr. Gardner Bump told the Tennessee Conservation League, have become favorite quarry of big game hunters or pests.

Dr. Bump, with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said the ring-necked pheasant and Hungarian and chukar partridges "now provide much of the upland game bird hunting in many northern states."

"Others, like the English sparrow, starling and pigeon, have succeeded so well that they now are classified as pests in many areas."

Kobs

of the U.S. Olympic Baseball committee.

Coach Kobs has developed many outstanding players. The best known of his pupils is Robin Roberts, the all-time great pitcher with the Philadelphia Phillies and now Baltimore. Besides Roberts, Kobs has had a dozen others make the majors and scores in minor league pro ball.

Present major leaguers who played for him at State also include pitcher Dick Radatz, Boston Red Sox; pitcher Ron Perranoski, Los Angeles Dodgers; outfielder Al Luplow, Cleveland Indians; pitcher Jack Kralick, Cleveland Indians, and catcher Hobie Landrith, Washington Senators.

Eleven of his athletes have been honored by All-American recognition. Many now are coaches in high schools and colleges and it is perhaps of this group he is proudest.

Former Kobsmen who now are head college coaches are Ed Sobczak, at San Jose State, and Wendell Lawrence, at the Air Force Academy.

A graduate of Hamline University in St. Paul, Minn., he won 13 letters in four sports—football, baseball, basketball and track. In January of 1951, he was selected by a board of sports experts in Minnesota as one of the state's top five all-round athletes for the first half of the 20th century.

Kobs is a native of Cavalier, N.D., born Aug. 21, 1898, and attended high school in Lake City, Minn. After his graduation from Hamline, he was kept on for three years as an athletic staff member, and then made the switch to Michigan State in 1924.

His early days on the Spartan campus were busy ones—Kobs being assigned duties at one time or another as head basketball, baseball, hockey and freshman football coach, as well as carrying a full schedule of physical education classes.

Coach Kobs was tapped by the U.S. Armed Forces for an overseas mission for the winter of 1957. The Spartan mentor conducted a baseball clinic for the U. S. Army at Nurnberg, Germany. Coaches from some five service leagues in Germany came together for the clinic. He also was head coach of two U.S. teams in Pan-American Games.

Kobs' family includes his wife, Lauretta, and two sons, Dr. Robert, of Jackson, and Jack, a Lansing bank official.
