Joint Concert To Highlight 4th Annual Fine Arts Festival

A joint concert of the Congress of Strings and Festival Chorus conducted by Ralph Hunter will climax MSU's fourth annual Fine Arts Festival tonight at 8:15 in the Auditorium.

The concert winds up a four-day program which has brought some of the world's most outstanding personalities in music, art and dance to the campus.

The Congress of Strings Orchestra will play Handel's "Concerto Grosso No. 12," Lully's "Chaconne" and Vaugh-

Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis."

The MSU Festival Chorus will perform Verdi's "Te Deum and Faure's "Requiem," accompanied by the orchestra. Guest soloist will be Majorie McClung, soprano.

John Boyden, a Canadian baritone, will replace Donald Gramm as a soloist in tonight's concert to be presented by the Congress of Strings and MSU Festival Chorus at 8:15 p.m. in the Auditorium.

Gramm is hospitalized in Santa Fe with a throat infection.

A wide variety of programs are scheduled today in addition to the concert.

"Films on Art," a program examining films as an art form, will be shown in Kresge Art Center at 10 a.m. Dr. D. Newton Glick, an MSU professor of urban planning and landscape architecture, will deliver a lecture on "The European Landscape from Donegal Bay to Sounion" at 4 p.m. in Fairchild Theatre.

Although today's activities formally conclude the Fine Arts Festival, the cultural spirit will prevail the rest of the week. "Days of Thrills and Laughter," a movie featuring famous silent film stars such as Charlie Chaplin, Pearl White and Douglas Fairbanks, will be shown Friday and Saturday in Fairchild Theatre at 7:30 p.m. Admission is 50 cents.

Paintings by the noted artist-teacher Hans Hoffman and his students will be on display at Kresge Art Center through July 21.

Hunter To Direct Festival Chorus

By SUE JACOBY
State News Staff Writer

"I Led Three Lives" is an apt title for the activities of Ralph Hunter, who will conduct the Congress of Strings and the MSU Festival Chorus in a concert at 8:15 p.m. in the Auditorium tonight.

Hunter, a conductor, teacher and family man, said he has often felt "like that man in the spy series--what was his name--Herbert Philbrick?"

He has been closely associated with Robert Shaw, who was originally scheduled to conduct the concert tonight, which will end MSU's fourth annual Fine Arts Festival. He was asked to take over the concert when Shaw cancelled his appearance because of illness.

"Our paths have touched and crossed for many years," he said. "I really did feel I was living three lives last fall when Shaw went to Europe."

"In addition to teaching at Hunter College in New York City, I did all of Shaw's choral work with the Cleveland Orchestra Chorus on weekends. Every Saturday morning I had to catch a jet and fly to Cleveland. I had to be back for class Monday morning--and I never missed one."

Hunter also has to find time for his family. He has two sons, ages 14 and 12. "They're just reaching an age where they're going to have problems."

Hunter has been putting the Congress of Strings through an intense rehearsal schedule since he arrived in East Lansing Sunday. The orchestra rehearses three hours every morning. There have also been three rehearsals with the Festival Chorus.

"This doesn't sound like too much time," Hunter said, "but it is actually quite adequate. The Congress of Strings is really organized beautifully, the faculty is of top caliber, and the young musicians are simply outstanding. There is no other way to describe the program."

Because of his tight rehearsal schedule, Hunter hasn't had much of a chance to see the campus.

Eclipse Can Be Dangerous

The entire North American continent will be covered by an eclipse of the sun Saturday afternoon, but you could go blind looking at it.

The eclipse means a serious threat to the eyesight of every person who watches it directly, reports the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

The bright visible rays of the sun will be blocked, but dangerous infra-red rays will still be coming from the sun. These rays can cause serious burns to the retina of the eye.

It is like holding a magnifying glass on a piece of paper. After a short time, the sun's rays will start the paper on fire.

Since the retina is not sensitive to pain, the person never knows it is being damaged until it is too late. Such retinal burns are incurable.

Even smoked glass, exposed photographic film, and dark glasses are not adequate to screen out the rays. Many who have tried them in the past have still suffered eye damage.

There was wide-spread eye damage in the Western states after an eclipse of the sun three

Famed Violinist Piaastro Praises MSU Hospitality

A world-renowned musician who admits to being "over 39" is quick to warn students that youth has no patent on "a great capacity for loving life."

Mishel Piaastro, a famous violinist in his own right and present conductor of the Longines-Symphonette, New York City, is on campus this summer working with the Congress of Strings sponsored by the American Federation of Musicians.

"I will even go one step farther than my good friend Jack Benny," he said. "I will admit to being over 70."

This is Piaastro's third summer at MSU. He said Michigan State has become a "byword throughout the United States when efforts in the field of the arts are mentioned."

"It's a fact. To my knowledge there is no administration so

'S' Student-1st Negro At Duke

A Michigan State student will become the first Negro to enroll at the Duke University Medical School, Durham, N.C.

Wilhelm D. Meriwether, Charleston, S.C., was recently named winner of a four-year medical scholarship. He was named along with 10 other Negro students being awarded the scholarships by the National Medical Fellowships, Inc.

They are financed by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. Meriwether is a zoology major and is in Honors College.

warm or so sympathetic to the arts. In New York one hears they are doing this or that at Michigan State."

A former conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Piaastro received his education in Imperial Russia under the Czars. He left his native land long before the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917. "I probably would not be alive if I had not," he added.

"One cannot be alive at any age and not want to do something of value, something creative."

To illustrate his point, he recalled an incident concerning the Senior Citizens' Symphony New York City, which he often conducts.

"About a year ago, President Kennedy spoke in Madison Square Garden on the necessity for Medicare, a plan to take care of older citizens. Curiously enough, the entire program in the garden which went with the speech was played by the Senior Citizen's Symphony."

Piaastro says the symphony does not play for charity, but simply because its members are alive, want to be active, and have something to give to other men.

"Why, then should there be a

Top Skaters In Ice Show Wednesday

Top amateur figure skaters from the United States and Canada will perform in an ice show Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. in the MSU Ice Arena.

The show is the first in a series of three to be presented by the 15th annual summer ice skating session. The other shows will be presented July 31 and August 13.

Outstanding figure skaters who will perform in the 20-act show include Buddy Zack, from the Skating Club of Seattle, and Gary Visconti, from the Skating Club of Detroit.

Both Visconti and Zack have earned the Gold Medal, the highest award presented by the United States Figure Skating Association. They have participated in national senior men's competition and are planning on competing in the 1964 Olympics.

A local pair who will appear in the show are Joey Heckert and Gary Clark of East Lansing. They placed third in national junior pair competition last year.

The annual summer ice session, the largest in the country, has 110 students this year.

"The show will be fast-moving with a great deal of color," said Norris Wold, ice rink manager.

Admission is $1 for rinkside seats and 75 cents for balcony seats.

law that a man has to retire at any certain age if he can still give to others?"

Piaastro spoke Wednesday on "50 Years of Music Making" in connection with the Fine Arts Festival. He will conduct the Congress of Strings in a concert July 26.

"The Congress of Strings is a wonderful experience," he said. "It gives these talented young people a chance to come together and work under the best conditions."

He said each person must give his creative best regardless of his state in life.

"This is why I would say that young ladies should not think they have to give up their careers when they marry. Their work and their families are two different things."

Both are equally important. The only problem is to find enough time, he added.

"Time is our only enemy." 26.

Ag Teachers Conclave Set

Michigan vocational agriculture teachers will meet on campus Monday to discuss the role of vocational agricultural education in a changing world.

Also attending the 44th annual conference will be school superintendents and principals, directors of vocational education and counselors.

Dr. H. M. Hamlin, professor emeritus in agricultural education from the University of Illinois, and Harry E. Nesman, chief of agricultural education for the State Department of Public Instruction, will address the 200 educators.

Session topics include trends in agricultural education, the farmer and social security and rural defense and the job ahead in agricultural education. Awards for length of service and for outstanding contributions to agriculture will be presented.

The Colleges of Agriculture and Education are sponsoring the event at Kellogg Center July 22-26.

Summer Circle Presentation Fails To Take Advantage Of Circumstances

By JACKIE KORONA
State News Staff Writer

Will the divorce law be passed? Will the charming but bewildered lady be able to free herself of the boredom of marriage? Will the husband or the "lover" win her final favors?

With a set of circumstances such as these, combined with the wit of Victorien Sardou and Emile de Najac, the Summer Circle's fourth production "Let's Get a Divorce" could be a gem of fun and light-hearted gaiety.

It is not. Although director James R. Brandon of the speech department has put three fine actors in the leading roles of the husband, wife and "lover," the production lacks a great deal in the way of supporting actors and actresses.

In the satirical manner of French farce, the playwrights have told the tale of what marriage means when confronted with the dreams of bigger and better things.

Mollie Shorr, East Lansing senior, portrays a young wife, married for two years and 22 days to a wealthy and shrewd, yet boring, gentleman.

As she glides about her living room in a luscious costume telling her husband of the needs and desires of a sheltered girl, Mrs. Shorr personifies the inexperienced gentlewoman who has married without really learning what life holds in the ways of romance.

As she puts it, she feels a girl should be allowed freedom to do what she pleases until she marries. She should have had the privileges of a boy when still single.

In a wonderfully thought-provoking tirade to her husband, this belligerent young woman makes clear her desire for strong arms rather than weak embraces, excitement and passion rather than the routine of daily married life.

When the husband, played with an almost omni-present knowing little smirk by Leeds Bird, Bay City graduate student, plots to uncover his wife's "affair" with his cousin, his frustration is funny.

The husband wants to duel for his honor but a friend manages to keep him more calm than irate until the divorce law is either passed or rejected.

Meanwhile the "lover"--cousin is himself plotting, but his arrangements are more for love than honor.

The wife has promised she will come to him when she learns that the law has been passed and she has the knowledge of imminent divorce.

A telegram enters the scene, proclaiming the passage of the law, and the "lover" practically pants off stage.

This scheming third party is played by Roger Rochowiak of Lansing, with gawkiness and homeliness which further stress the absurdity of such a curious affair.

As the "lover" bounds around the stage, making awkward swipes around the shoulders of his beloved, it seems a bit hard to believe that such a lady could have fallen for him, even if he isn't a dull husband.

In the marvelously paced finale scene the husband makes an attempt to play "lover" and places the gawky cousin in the role of "husband." The three come alive with a spirit of mischief and romantic game.

In this scene also, Lawrence R. Sexton of East Lansing livens the action as a slightly mixed-up gendarme.

Yet all the gaiety and farce in these individuals cannot completely compensate for the lack of these characteristics in the REHEARSE CONCERT--Ralph Hunter rehearses the Congress of Strings and MSU Festival Chorus for their joint concert tonight at 8:15 p.m. in the Auditorium, the final event of MSU's fourth annual Fine Arts Festival.

Clicking Of Castanets Climaxes Performance By de la Camara

Flashing heels, fiery eyes and the clicking of castanets climaxed the "Ballet Espanol" performance of Carlos de la Camara and his troupe early this week.

But preparations for this brilliant, fast-moving production were a far cry from the polish of the finished product.

"See if you can keep it out of his eyes, Fred," said one stage hand into a speaker leading to the light room at the back of the Auditorium.

"Get the red across his throat."

"Sir, when I do thee with my fingers, it beegen to rise lettie by lettie?" asked the young Spaniard in a black leotard.

For more than two hours, conversations such as this, and the stopping and starting of music with heels clicking accompaniment filled the empty Auditorium.

Carlos de la Camara and his small troupe were rehearsing for the evening performance.

Time after time, Carlos would snap his fingers and the strumming of the guitar would cease. Soon the music would start again.

With it began the rhythmic tapping of the Spanish gypsy dance, the "zapateado," and again the discussion of lights dominated backstage conversation.

Myrna Gloria, one of the two female dancers and sister of Carlos, gave cues to the light man and called directions -- in Spanish -- to her brother.

Meanwhile, stage hands moved flats, pieces of scenery, to the middle of the Fairchild Theatre stage for a later Congress of Strings rehearsal, and people wandered through the back part of the stage.

When Carlos finished his workout with the guitarist, and Myrna had quickly run through one of her numbers, the troupe left the stage, perspiring from the hot lights and the furious pace of continuous dance.

"Back in New York I rehearse at least four hours a day," Carlos explained after completing a short limbering-up workout without music.

"Here I have just done my classical solo and the heel work. I had to try out the stage, and work with these lights before the performance tonight."

Sitting on the grey cement steps behind the Auditorium stage, Carlos spoke of his art with all the fiery emotion of the steps themselves.

Researcher Sees Hope For Leukemia Cure Soon

By CHARLES C. WELLS
State News Staff Writer

A cure for leukemia may be found or at least significant progress will be made toward combating the dread blood disease within the next six years.

Many scientists are now at work on the incurable blood disease which should speed up the solution, said Dr. Gabel H. Conner, director of surgery and medicine of the College of Veterinary Medicine.

He received a $46,000 research grant to continue his work. An original grant of $32,000 was made in 1962 to Conner and a five-man research team which he heads.

They are doing research for the National Cancer Institute of the U.S. Public Health Service to find a cure to the disease which results from the uncontrolled growth of white blood cells.

Scientists have long thought there is a definite relationship between leukemia and cancer. They are attacking the problem from all angles.

Conner is studying leukemia in cows. The MSU research team will select several Michigan countries to trace leukemia in about 500,000 cows.

"This has never been successfully done in any of the states, so the true rate is not known," he said. "Our primary goal is to determine how much there is in cattle and where in Michigan it does occur."

Much of the knowledge being uncovered about leukemia and cancer in animals can be related to the disease in man and lead to cures for the dread killers much sooner, he added.

"Man is more closely associated with the larger animals, he said. "You might say we are using the cow as a guinea pig."

Blood samples and tissue specimens are taken and analyzed by the campus researchers and then sent to the National Cancer Institute Laboratory in Bethesda, Md.

They are also sent to the U.S. Department of Agriculture Poultry Research Station on campus and the Michigan Department of Health.

Poultry researchers think that cancer is caused by a virus. Dr. Ben R. Burmester, biologist in poultry science, and other poultry researchers discovered that a virus caused cancer in the chicken.

If cancer or leukemia is caused by a virus, it might then be possible to develop serums to immunize humans and animals against the virus, Conner said. He indicated that cancer may be communicable if a virus causes it. It might be transmitted just as a cold or the flu can from one person to another, he added.

He stressed that there is no substantial evidence to prove this yet, but there is a possibility. "We would see a lot more cancer than we are if this were the case," he said. "It is highly possible that many people have built-in resistance to the diseases and thus are able to starve them off even though they may be communicable."

He will attend an international symposium on leukemia August 12 - 20 in Hanover, Germany. Researchers from all over the world will hear an Italian scientist report on his belief that he has isolated the virus causing leukemia in cows.

But 9th In Funds

State 3rd In Research Projects

By ERIC M. FILSON
State News Staff Writer

According to raw figures published in the April, 1963 issue of Industrial Research magazine, Michigan State ranks ninth in the Big Ten in dollars spent on research.

However, MSU ranks third in the number of projects undertaken behind the University of Illinois and the University of Wisconsin. Wisconsin and Illinois have 2,000 projects, and MSU has 1,600 projects listed. The University of Michigan has 1,300 projects in progress.

"The figures are not comparable," said Milton E. Muelder, vice president of research development. "The figures should mean the same, but each institution filled out the magazine survey according to its own criteria for handling statistics. These figures are not likely to be the same among the various institutions."

"It certainly is a wonderful demonstration of the commitment to research in the nation, however," he said. "Also, we should not confuse dollars with the significance of research being done."

"Some of the finest work in ultrasonics, enzyme development in plants, biochemistry, solid state physics, and food science in the country is being undertaken on this campus."

Muelder said MSU does not have the dollar volume being spent on research that some universities have. This is because there are no large institutional research programs such as the Phoenix Project at the University of Michigan.

"A proposal to establish a plant research laboratory to study radiation is presently before the Atomic Energy Commission. This proposal, if approved, will establish probably a separate building on campus with an operating staff of 9 senior staff, 27 post-doctoral fellows, 9 technicians, and 36 graduate students," Muelder said.

$300 Food Grants

The Institute of Food Technology has awarded $300 scholarships to three MSU food science sophomores.

They are Gary Steinhardt, DeWitt; Wayne Clifford, Flint, and Roger McFeeters, Sturgis.

Muelder said that the federal government is increasingly in favor of fundamental research instead of applied research because the government has decided this is bringing the best return for its dollars.

He also said he hoped that large research institutes will be established in the future.

"The rate of research expansion in the last three years has been significant," he noted.

52 per cent from federal funds, 6 per cent from industry contracts, 1 per cent from foundational grants and 4 per cent from other sources.

About 926 researchers are involved in 1,600 projects which are allocated as follows:

There is $1,206,000 for physical sciences, $1,170,000 for engineering, $883,000 for life sciences, $453,000 for social sciences and $5,422,000 for other purposes, largely agricultural.

About 75 per cent of this is basic research.

Of this research volume, 75 per cent is done by academic departments, 23 per cent by the Agriculture Experiment Station and 2 per cent by other departments.

According to Muelder, a research center in Lansing is quietly being planned and developed by private firms. The center will be located on the South Side near the expressway. The center is being aided by MSU, which provides consultants and other advice for both construction and future operation.

Location of research centers near large universities is desirable because industry likes to be located near the extensive facilities, faculty brainpower and advanced educational offerings of universities.

Muelder stated in the MSU publication, Articulation of MSU Resources with Industrial Development, that "Michigan, the Midwest, and the nation have a primary need for sustained industrial expansion."

"Based on a faculty having one of the highest percentages of doctorates in the country, research has grown in recent years to a point where at the present time over 1,600 research projects are underway concurrently."

"The National Science Foundation, the Atomic Energy Commission, the National Institute of Health are among the most important agencies sponsoring much of this research activity."

Slightly over $5 billion was spent in the U.S. for research and development in 1953-54. Approximately $12.5 billion was expended in 1960. Universities performed about $1.2 billion of this with about half devoted to fundamental research and the other half to applied research.

The federal government is the most important source of support. Its support of basic research frequently is no more than 7 per cent of its total expenditure for research and development. However, from this small percentage comes support to universities for 96 per cent of expenditures for research in the physical sciences, 50 per cent in the life sciences, 83 per cent in engineering and 25 per cent in the social sciences.

According to figures in Industrial Research magazine of 98 institutions in the survey, and average of $10,617,403 was spent on research. MSU falls below this average. An average of 440 projects were reported for each institution. MSU has 1,600 projects.

CONTINUING CONSTRUCTION--Two additions to MSU's science complex are under construction south of Shaw Lane. The $2.8 million cyclotron is expected to be completed this fall. The $5.2 million biochemistry building will be finished by fall, 1964.

"At MSU we have the Agricultural Experiment Station which is supported by about one-third federal funds and two-thirds state funds. MSU also has a general research fund which individual researchers may draw on for small grants. This highly diversified research aid is of considerable help to many campus researchers."

Muelder believes that in the future, graduate work and research will assume an increasing role. "We have one of the largest graduate programs in the country at the present time. We continue to anticipate a strong undergraduate program."

"The new science complex is an example of MSU's increasing commitment to research."

MSU has a total dollar research volume of $9,134,000. The sources of this money are: 37 per cent from University funds,

"Ballet is something pure, for the gods. Flamenco shows all the passions of men. It is of men and for men. But the ballet brings out the artist."

Later that evening, under the bright lights of the Auditorium, Carlos demonstrated his feeling for both types of dance.

In the high-waisted slim brown pants, ruffled white shirt, short jacket and sombrero of the gaucho, the dancer clicked his way through the "zapateado" of the afternoon rehearsal.

All the confusion existing earlier disappeared and in its place were the glamorous costumes, smooth music and untouchable arrogance of the dancer.

Tonight Carlos de la Camara was the "vicious" man dancing the flamenco-- and the artist pleasing the gods with his ballet.

Prep Speech Students To Debate

"Resolved: That medical care be provided by the Federal government for all citizens at public expense."

With this resolution in mind, or the props and lights for a Summer Circle performance, more than 100 high school students from eight states are working for two weeks in the Communication Arts Institute.

"We try to give these students more understanding and appreciation of the arts, and help to further develop their skills in different areas of speech," said Jerry Anderson, director of the speech section of the Institute. "Through this two-week session, we hope to help them play a greater role in the classroom and co-curricular activities of their high schools, and to create a better appreciation of the role theatre plays in American society today."

These high school students, 72 of whom are in forensics and 35 in theatre, spend their time at MSU attending lectures and working in laboratory sessions with faculty members and guest artists.

Forensics includes extemporaneous speaking, group discussions, oratory and individual speech activities, with emphasis on debate.

"We have an activity-centered program, as opposed to a strictly lecture situation," said Anderson.

"The forensics students spend many hours in the library doing research for their debate on the national high school debate position concerning medical care."

In the theatre section of the Institute, students study acting, play analysis, staging, set building and the practical application of this work.

The students who have completed the basic course in the Institute and those of outstanding ability are placed in an advanced theatre group.

They act as crew members in the Summer Circle, working with technical equipment such as lights, and aid the director in any way they can.

"In fact, one of the girls in the Theatre Institute is in a play this week. The students are in essence getting regular summer stock experience."

Besides these activities in workshops and in actual debate and theatre situations, the high school students hear lectures on topics pertaining to their own particular fields.

In forensics the students listen to guest resource experts in the subject area of the proposition. Don Stevens, a member of the Board of Trustees and educational director of the AFL-CIO, spoke to the students, as did representatives of the Michigan Medical Association and the Michigan Health Association.

The British vice-consul-general from Detroit was another guest speaker at one of the first Institute sessions.

"During this two-week session, a similar program of speakers has been planned," Anderson said.

Out of this summer study, these high school students are both discovering what college life is all about, and gaining an insight into the practical application of speech theories. "Teachers of students who have attended previous sessions have told us that the high school youngsters have more self-realization, maturity and leadership. "And we hope the students are learning something about speech."

Food Scientists Try Inexpensive Sherbet From Cottage-Cheese Whey

Little Miss Muffet may be eating the curds, but the whey will go to make sherbets.

Cottage cheese whey, that thin watery part of milk containing sugar and minerals, is being used by Michigan State food scientists to make inexpensive sherbets.

Charles H. Stine, associate professor of food science, and L.E. Blakely, also of the food science department, are using a new spray drying method developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to make whey solids.

The spray dried whey is then substituted for much of the non-fat milk solids commonly found in sherbet ice cream.

Professionally trained food judges tested the flavor, body and texture of this sherbet and rated those samples containing 50 to 75 per cent spray-dried whey as "best."

This is good news to cottage cheese processors who have to throw away thousands of pounds of whey each day. It is either poured directly into streams or disposed of by other expensive means.

The MSU food scientists' findings may give new value to this "wasted whey" as a substitute ingredient in sherbets. The dried whey is slightly acid, which means processors can reduce the amount of edible citric acid normally added for the desirable tart flavor of sherbet.

This means a saving in production costs.

Ordinarily, sherbet is made from milk fat and nonfat milk solids. Stine and Blakely substitute whey for up to 75 per cent of the solids and then add 20 per cent sucrose, 8 per cent corn syrup solids and one-half per cent stabilizers to improve texture.

For flavor, pure frozen orange concentrate or lemon juice, and natural orange or lemon flavoring are added. The resulting product rates high in flavor, body and texture.

Eclipse

 years ago. In Utah, 31 cases were counted and another 75 were reported in the state of Washington.
 Children suffered the most eye damage because they are particularly susceptible to vision damage. There is no safe way for either adults or children to look directly at an eclipse of the sun.
 The eclipse can be viewed directly with no eye damage. A simple projector can be made with two pieces of white cardboard, size 9 by 12.
 A pencilhole should be punched in one cardboard. During the eclipse it is held over the shoulder and the image is focused in the second cardboard. The size of the image can be changed by altering the distance between cardboards.

Duke Speaks To Men's Club

Robert Duke, assistant curator of MSU's new planetarium, told members of the MSU Men's Club Tuesday that the building represents several "firsts" in science efforts at universities.
 "The planetarium is to our knowledge the most advanced of any," he said. "Unlike most university planetariums, it was not dependent upon tax funds. More than half the cost came from alumni funds."

Pianist Evans

One of America's great piano artists, Phillip Evans of the Juilliard School of Music will be featured at the next program of the Kellogg Center Series on July 21.

Selections from Bach, Beethoven, Debussy, Bartok and Chopin are scheduled at the public recital in Kellogg Center Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

Alma Mater Honors Roberts

FORMER SPARTAN PITCHER--Robin Roberts now with the Baltimore Orioles was honored by alumni and friends of his at Tiger Stadium Tuesday night before the Baltimore-Detroit game. The former Philadelphia Phillie's right-handed ace was honored by four groups. Jack Breslin, former teammate of Roberts at MSU and now secretary to the Board of Trustees here, presented Roberts with a citation that read "This award is presented by Michigan State University and its alumni to Robin E. Roberts in recognition and appreciation for outstanding contributions rendered by him as a gentleman and athlete to the game of baseball." In addition, Roberts, who had pitched batting practice before the game after pitching a complete game on Monday night, was awarded a wrist watch with a green block "S" on the face by Dr. Sam Fortino on behalf of the Varsity Alumni Club, a bronze miniature statue of Sparty by Athletic Director Biggie Munn along with a gold lifetime pass to all MSU athletic events, and a green Spartan blanket with a white block "S" on it from his former collegiate baseball coach, John Kobs, who recently retired. The friends of Roberts got a chance to chat with him and other alumni at a gathering following the game in the Motor City. Pictured above with Roberts are from left to right: Coach Kobs, Roberts, Chuck Davey, former Spartan National boxing champion, and Athletic Director Munn.

Theatre

 production's minor performers. The awkwardness of the "lover," when found in the butler and restaurant waiter, as well as the maid, is disconcerting rather than endearing.
 And the feeling that several other characters appearing at intervals during the production add little is disappointing.
 Yet even with this lack of life among the lesser characters, "Let's Get a Divorce" is an enjoyable production, full of witty satire on marriage and divorce, put across solely through the efforts of the director and his three principal performers.

Issue 2,100 Faculty Permits

New faculty-staff motor vehicle permits are being issued by the Department of Public Safety this summer.
 More than 2,100 of the permits had been issued by Tuesday night. Faculty and staff members who are away for the summer may obtain their permits in the fall.
 The permits are being issued in Quonset No. 104. Part-time employees and persons governed by student motor vehicle regulations are not eligible.

Husband-Wife Team Plan Unique 4-Hand Concert

Music fills the lives and homes of Florence and John Richardson, a husband and wife team who will present a unique four-hand concert on one piano Monday at 8:15 p.m. in Kellogg Center Auditorium.

Richardson, a member of the MSU music department for 18 years, has been playing duets with his wife for 10 to 12 years.

"The art of playing a concert on one piano has nearly died out," he said. "No duet recital at all has been presented on campus for about 10 years."

Mrs. Richardson explained that playing a duet on one piano differs from the duets played on two pianos in the manner of Ferrante and Teicher.

The sound of two pianos can not be matched, and the music of four hands on one piano is completely different from two hands on two pianos.

She noted that a couple playing on the same piano sometimes has trouble when "hands run into each other."

Richardson added it is important "that there be an empathy between people who are playing on the same piano."

He said there is far more music written for four-handed duets than for dual piano performances.

The Richardson's program Monday will include a Mozart sonata, Schubert's "Fantasy in F Minor" and Bizet's "Children's Games." Admission to the concert is free.

The Richardson home in East Lansing is dominated by pianos. The living room has two and there is a third in the basement. Richardson says he and his wife would like to have four pianos.

"My wife teaches private piano lessons," he explained. "Two pianos are always better for lessons because the teacher can demonstrate on her own instrument. Thus, a third piano is a necessity if I want to practice while my wife is teaching."

In addition to the pianos, the Richardsons also own a tape recorder, record player and claviocord.

Do the Richardsons ever tire of music?

"Not really," Richardson said. "It is a vital element in our lives."

In addition to teaching piano in the music department, Richardson has worked with selected private pupils in East Lansing.

Mrs. Richardson teaches private piano lessons in at their home.

"I don't teach at night, though, so my husband won't have to listen to the playing when he comes home."

Young Lindbergh In Heroic Rescue

SAN DIEGO, (UPI) -- A heroic name of yesteryear was involved in a new story of heroics Monday.

The name is Lindbergh. Jon Lindbergh, son of the famed aviator, and deep-sea diver for the San Diego Metropolitan Sewage System, made a heroic effort to save a fellow worker.

The man was injured when a boom broke on a work barge. A helicopter flew to the barge and the injured man was placed on a stretcher and strapped to the copter's pontoon.

The copter took off and then plunged into the sea and overturned. Young Lindbergh swam 100 yards and dived underwater. He managed to cut the injured man loose from the stretcher, but was too late.

The workman died a few minutes later.

Concept of Music Grown

Folksinger Duke Here

By ERIC M. FILSON
State News Staff Writer

"Many folk-singing groups depend too much today on exciting, rhythmic, repetitive music," said Karen Duke, guitarist, folksinger who is on campus for the Fine Arts Festival.

Miss Duke said too many groups are depending too much on "rock and roll" type rhythm to excite audiences.

"While this is often entertaining it is not necessarily folk music."

The charming singer gave a concert Wednesday night in the Kiva which included folk selections such as Hush Little Baby, The Willow Tree, Where Have All the Flowers Gone, and Michael, Row Your Boat Ashore.

"The concept of Folk music has grown tremendously. Many songs are being written today in folk styles even though they aren't folk songs."

"I would define folk music as songs that have an unknown author and they have been passed from generation to generation," she said.

"Also, folk music is much a matter of taste. It is becoming commercialized. I don't care for a lot of it."

Her favorite folk-singer is Leon Bibb, and she thinks that Joan Baez is pretty much of a purist.

"My singing is a fairly purist style."

"I think of myself more as an entertainer instead of a folksinger," she said.

She joked that if she had a great voice she would have been an opera singer.

She used to sing classical music but has abandoned it because she said she feels it was a forced attempt for variety. She said she likes to sing anything, however.

Miss Duke has been playing the guitar for 15 years. She became interested in folk-music in high school when Burl Ives and others were becoming popular.

The singer taught herself to play, finding songs that would suit her voice and guitar.

I started playing in the privacy of my room. I was very serious at my first performance.

She attended Smith College, majoring in music. Her principal interest was in piano and voice. After graduating she did a variety of activities including summer stock theatre acting, graduate work, teaching, getting married, and modeling.

"My best concert was at Georgia Tech in Atlanta," she said. "An audience such as that one helps me to sing because of a mutual stimulation."

During her performances she sits on a stool like many folksingers. She lives in Manhattan, New York at present but has not done much performing in the New York area.

Her favorite songs include: Where Have All the Flowers Gone and the House of the Rising Sun.

Miss Duke comes from a musical background. Both her grandmothers sang, and one played the guitar well. Her father is John Duke, composer of songs, and a professor of music at Smith College.

The singer also has an impressive experience in summerstock.

'No Other Gods'

by Rev. Wilson M. Tennant

Since the beginning of time, men have been fashioning their own gods. Primitive man made his gods of wood, iron, brass, ivory or precious stones. He moved these gods from place to place and room to room, to suit his own convenience. To these gods he imputed certain super-human powers.

There were in some areas, men whose business it was to make gods for others. These gods were like pieces of furniture or decorations, having utilitarian uses in the life of primitive man. There was a tendency at times to be careful not to offend one of these idols and thus incur its wrath. There was not, however, any sense of commitment of one's life to a high purpose or worthy goal.

Modern man still has his idols. It may be stated that he worships, or success, power, popularity, pleasure, material things that are his objects of worship. He still fits these idols into the various areas of his life for convenience. He tends to impute to them certain powers, and, at times at least, he fears incurring their displeasure. There are among us dealers in idols who seek to persuade us to "stop and buy."

The Hebrew-Christian tradition has called men to something higher and better than this idol worship. When Moses wrote God's law on the tablets of stone, he included in the preface this phrase,

"NO OTHER GODS." This must not be conceived as an attempt to regiment the life of man. As we find God's law spelled out more clearly in the life and teachings of Jesus, we find a challenge to make a commitment to the search for truth, beauty and holiness the goal of our living.

The men who would be Christian do not fashion their idols according to their own design. The man who would be Christian is called to fashion his life according to the life of Jesus. The pattern in the New Testament is a constant challenge to the highest and the best we can know. In the words of Moses, we must have "NO OTHER GODS." There is room in this way of life for the person who has tired of idol worship, the person who has felt that somehow there must be more meaning and purpose in life, and the person who has seen his idols fail him.

It is not possible for a person to live a Christian life without a commitment to Christ. This commitment involves an affirmation of faith in Christ. This commitment involves a recognition of the truth of the revelation of God we find in Christ. This commitment must also involve a participation in the achievement of the goals of the Christian community. There can be "NO OTHER GODS." A life divided against its God cannot stand. No man can serve God and keep his idols.

I visited with a young man at youth camp one day, who found his way to a meaningful commitment to Christ. This experience changed his life and gave him a feeling that there were significant things for him to do as a Christian. In a very brief time he was giving serious consideration to his personal involvement in the achievement of Christian goals in his community and his world.

"NO OTHER GODS!" Not restrictions imposed from without, but an inner response of love and loyalty to the highest and the best--here lies the Christian's secret of new life.

Intimidation Denied

A Negro march on the capital Aug. 28 is not intended to intimidate Congress, said Martin Luther King.

The Negro leader, who is in New York City preparing for the march, said the mass demonstration will have "a positive effect on civil rights." He also said it will not alienate support for Negroes.

King also denied a trend toward violence in civil rights demonstrations, despite recent scattered incidents.

Need Excitement In Church Service

A noted church musician has advocated a return to handbells, brass and other instruments to add excitement and joy to the church service.

"We've got to find new musical methods of expressing our worship of God," said William Lemonds.

"I can't think of a better way of bringing out the totality of a musical performance than through the combination of voices and instruments," he told a Church Music Workshop at MSU last week.

Lemonds is university organist, choirmaster and chairman of the music department at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.

Danger Seen In 'Magic' Religion

The use of magic in religion is found helpful by some Protestant ministers, but the Rev. Ernest Dunn sees a danger in it.

During a recent convention of the Society of American Magicians, Protestant clergymen explained how they are using their hobby of magic in religion. One said that magic and religion are more compatible than most people realize.

The Rev. Mr. Dunn, coordinator of United Campus Ministry, questions the compatibility of magic and religion. He said it is a danger to regard religion as magic, when it is so much more than this.

Clergymen illustrated their point by transforming handkerchiefs from black to white and from fragments to wholes. One said, "This illustration has helped me show individuals how they could change aimless, fragmented lives into lives of personal worth."

Southern Baptist On Racism Christian Decision Best

By LINDA MILLER
State News Staff Writer

An individual who performs his Christian duty, "in the dead-level best way that he can," is fulfilling his capacity in a world marred by racial tension, the Rev. Truitt Smith of the Southern Baptist Convention believes.

"There are tensions, temptations and heartaches all around us," he said. "Without these there is no reason to be Christian. The racial crisis is just one part of the problems each individual faces."

The Rev. Mr. Smith, who came north from Texas nine years ago, has established a Southern Baptist group in East Lansing. The group has one Negro member.

He said that many Baptists who move to Michigan from the South soon feel as others here do about integration. "Some say that Negroes are not ready culturally to mingle," he said.

The Rev. Mr. Smith is not sympathetic to the adage "Black is black and white is white and never the twain shall meet," but he cautioned that many who feel this way think they are doing a Christian duty.

"It think it is my personal duty to God to admit anybody, regardless of color," he said. Instead of adopting a "Social Gospel" attitude of remodeling society, he thinks a person must live in the way he can do good as an individual.

The Southern Baptist Convention, which originated in the South, is now represented in all 50 states and is active in world missions.

"We are grieved that the Baptists in the South are giving a black name to our denomination by opposing integration," he said, "but they think if they advocate integration the streets would run red with blood."

There are ten million Southern Baptists in the United States, and the convention owns and operates the three largest seminaries in the country. In many states, white churches are affiliated with the same association as Negro churches.

"A few Negroes have slipped in and joined all-white churches," the Rev. Mr. Smith said. He believes that the majority are not so much interested in joining for the cause of integration as to serve Christ among people with whom they feel comfortable. Theological seminaries operated by the Southern Baptist Convention admit Negroes. Baptist colleges are also becoming integrated.

"In most cases, the Rev. Mr. Smith said, "these Negroes are glad to have help. But I know of many cases in which just the opposite is true."

He told of a white woman who wed a Negro preacher and accompanied him to Africa to do missionary work. They were not accepted by the Negroes in Africa and were forced to return to the United States.

"Some Negroes do not even want white people in their congregations," he said.

The Bible is the rule of faith and practice for the Southern Baptists. "There may have been Negroes in New Testament times," the Rev. Mr. Smith said. "I doubt if Jesus ever offended a Negro."

He emphasized that it is the duty of each Christian to be as Christian as he can be. "But we are not even Christian enough for our government to be such," he said. "Being a democracy, the U.S. government also has to represent its people's prejudices."

He believes that something big is going to happen soon in view of the racial crisis. "But the heart has not gone along with the head yet. There will be a problem for years, and I do not think it will be solved apart from Christian standards."

OSLO, Norway (AP) - Norway distributes more copies of the Bible in proportion to its population than any country in the world, a report by the Norwegian Bible Society shows.

For every 1,000 inhabitants in Norway, more than 37 Bibles and New Testaments were distributed in 1961 - a total of 325,000 copies in Norway, plus 187,000 elsewhere.

Area Lutherans Meet At World Federation

Two East Lansing pastors and a layman will fly to Helsinki, Finland, this month to attend the fourth assembly of the Lutheran World Federation.

The Rev. Theodore Bundenhal, pastor of University Lutheran Church, and George Bubolz, member of the American Lutheran Church National Commission on Research and Social Action, will depart by jet from New York July 30.

The Lutheran World Federation, representing churches and nearly 50 million of the world's 71 million Lutherans, is held every five years to promote theological cooperation, world missions, inter-church aid, an international exchange of pastors, church workers and students, and aid to refugees.

The Rev. Mr. Wietzke, who was a delegate to the last federation, will serve as an official visitor during the ten day meetings. He said that the Lutheran JOHNSON CITY, TENN. (UPI)—A young Robin Hood in Tennessee was sentenced to three years in prison last week. Kelly Darnel, was convicted in Johnson City of stealing from large churches and giving the money to small churches.

World Federation, representing the largest Protestant denomination in the world and people from every continent, is "a very lively and relevant organization. It represents a bridge between the two sides of the Iron Curtain."

The Rev. Mr. Bundenhal plans to attend several lectures and exhibitions on church art. A new Martin Luther Chapel is presently under construction in East Lansing.

Bubolz plans to study the church as a daily force in people's lives. In addition to attending meetings in Helsinki, Bubolz will travel to rural Finland and north to Lapland.

Accompanied by his wife and eldest daughter, the Rev. Mr. Wietzke plans a personal tour following the conferences in Helsinki. He will visit such places as Leningrad, Russia, Stockholm, Oslo, Copenhagen, Amsterdam, Brussels, Paris and London.

He said that the most valuable part of traveling is people, not places. "I want to get as broad a picture as possible of how these people live," he said. "Each offers his own unique challenge. But I am sure we will see a lot of the traditional things, too."

The Rev. Mr. Bundenhal especially looks forward to a visit to his ancestral home Bundenhal, Germany, following the meetings. With his wife and four children, he will cross Russia and visit Athens, Istanbul and Jerusalem.

The greater part of his trip will be centered in Jerusalem where his family will be the guests of the director of the American School of Oriental Research, which deals in archaeology and theology.

The three men and their families will return to New York on the same plane from London in late August.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP)—Noting restrictions on religious references in American public schools, the Assemblies of God said the situation is in contrast to that in Manila, the Philippines, where Mayor Antonio J. Villegas requested a Bible for each school pupil as a textbook to help make Manila a "citadel of democracy." The Assembly said it and the American Bible Society provided the Bibles.
