

Concert Closes Clinic

1,500 Jam Shaw Terrace

By ERIC M. FILSON State News Staff Writer

A crowd of over 1,500 jammed the Terrace Lounge of Shaw Hall Friday evening to hear the end product of a week of studying and practice by students of the Stan Kenton Clinic.

The free concert thrilled listeners young and old with the latest sounds in stage band jazz. Stan Kenton, who was on campus most of the week, did not attend the concert because of an engagement in Columbus, Ohio.

The clinic participants presented the concert in a series of seven bands.

According to Dr. Morris E. Hall, former associate professor of music at MSU and director of the clinic, none of the students in the bands knew each other before the beginning of the week except one band from Marion, Ohio.

The bands played arrangements in regular, free form, and Latin jazz styles. Some arrangements included "Old Black Magic," "Teddy the Toad," "That's All," and "I Remember Basie".

The bands were directed by a group of outstanding professional jazz musicians and teachers. Marv Stamm, Leon Breedon, Ralph Mutchler, Morgan Powell, Johnny Richards, John LaPorta, and Herb Pomeroy lead the students in some exciting and different arrangements.

"All the bands played standard arrangements taught in the few schools around the country that offer formal jazz instruction," Hall said.

"However the Head Band did not. This band does not have any music in front of them to read. They play by improvising as they go along."

The Head Band proved a hit with their renditions of "Broken Heart" and "Trumpet Solo," the latter written by LaPorta during the clinic.

During intermissions Hall called for a return to stage bands and the swing music of the 1930's and 40's.

"Let's bring stage bands back," he said. "I like to hear more than a piano, bass, and drums on stage." He added in jest, "because I am a saxophone player."

Some other arrangements the bands presented were "Sweet Talk, Sweet Pea," "Why Not," and "The Three-Cornered Cat."

During the clinic held in Shaw Hall the students studied hard. John Poirier, a high school junior from Flint, said, "When I arrived on Sunday I didn't leave the building until Wednesday. I spent hours and hours every day in class sessions and practice."

"I feel that I learned more here about jazz and music in one week than I learned in the past four years," Poirier said he was surprised to find that the clinic stressed all forms of music in addition to jazz.

Other students said they found the week-long session a valuable

Civil Rights March Slated For Aug. 28

By JACKIE KORONA State News Staff Writer

Culmination of all the demonstrations, sit-ins and racial friction which have rocked the entire nation for months will take place at the end of this month when a giant Peace March is held in Washington, D.C., Aug. 28.

The march, which is expected to bring more than 100,000 individuals, Negro and white, to the nation's capital, has been in the planning stages for several months.

President John F. Kennedy has met with leaders of the march in an attempt to insure its peaceful nature and to straighten out problems which may arise before the date of the event.

Negro leaders throughout the country are planning to attend, as well as many Hollywood celebrities, including Tony Curtis, Harry Belafonte, Burt Lancaster and Charlton Heston, who heads the Hollywood March Committee.

In the meantime, people like George Lincoln Rockwell, leader of the American Nazi party, have proposed marches against the Peace March.

Behind the planned march are months of racial tension in the American Negro's attempt to redefine his position in society today.

"We have come to a significant turning point in the Negro's definition of civil rights and of himself," said Dr. James B. McKee, professor of sociology and anthropology and specialist in the field of race relations.

McKee said he felt these definitions are behind the increased emphasis placed on integration and matters of Negro and white relationships in this country today.

"The Negro college students who started the sit-in demonstrations were among the first to perpetuate this new self-concept of the Negro as a dignified and self-respecting person.

"And this idea was so contagious that it has inspired much of the civil rights movement today."

McKee said three factors lie directly behind the Peace March, when this self-concept idea is taken into consideration.

In the first place, such a huge march is a bigger and better use of the demonstration technique, he said. Much more notice will be taken of this than of the smaller, more minor demonstrations which have already taken place.

A use of the "march of Washington" tradition is also in the minds of the Peace March leaders. No better place than the nation's capital could be found to demonstrate dissatisfaction with situations existing in the country.

Finally, McKee said, any type of demonstration is a piece of strategy, a way of voicing protest, and the Peace March will be a loud voicing of this protest against the Negro position in American society.

Whether or not the Peace March will result in any concrete action to remedy the Negro complaints is a question which cannot be predicted.

However, the march in itself is evidence of the strong feelings of the Negro today, he said.

"A strong emphasis has been placed on militancy rather than moderation in the mind of the Negro," McKee said. "The Negro leaders are trying to outdo each other in this matter."

"The march, however, is planned as a peaceful one and these leaders will try to keep it such."

With so much advance warning, officials in Washington have had time to plan for a peaceful maintenance of those participating. A state representative to Congress from Michigan has stated that talks between Negro leaders and the president are striving for this goal.

Regular District of Columbia police will be on duty, he said, but special forces will not be employed unless violence does break out.

McKee said that the military forces to supplement the District police will be 100 percent on duty, but will not be called unless there is definite cause.

"It would look bad for this country to have a great show of the military just because some Negroes were marching in the nation's capital," said McKee.

50 Top Amateurs Headline Show

By SUE JACOBY State News Staff Writer

Some of the flashiest blades in the amateur skating world will skim across the surface of MSU's Ice Arena tonight in the final ice show of the summer at 8:15 p.m.

The 25-act show will feature "the cream of the crop" of the 15th annual Summer Figure Skating session, which has attracted top amateur skaters from the United States and Canada. Outstanding skaters who have attended the ice session in previous years include Carol Heiss, former world and Olympic champion, and Donald Jackson, also a former world champion.

More than 50 skaters will perform in the show which will include pairs, fours and dance numbers, as well as single performances.

"There is a great deal of variety in tonight's show," said Norris Wold, ice rink manager. "The only choreography involved in the show is in the dance numbers and a precision number done by 24 girls."

"There aren't any elaborate costumes or settings. The main reason for this is when you have the talent, you don't need props."

The Summer Session used to present long shows with elaborate costumes and choreography. However, the long hours of preparation for the show took too much time from the skaters' regular practices.

"We really think the shows are better this way," Wold said. "The quality of the skating is as high as ever, and the kids don't have to take the time from their regular practices."

"Audiences also seem to react favorably to the type of show we present now."

Many of the skaters performing single numbers use the same arrangements which they perform for competitions or high tests. The three final tests of the United States Figure Skating Association (USFSA) require that students perform free skating numbers as well as compulsory figures.

Tests are being given this weekend beginning Thursday. Wold said 12 students are attempting to pass the eighth test. "This is quite a high number," he added. The eighth test gold medal is the highest honor given to skaters by the USFSA.

The Summer Session ends when tests are completed.

Top performers who will appear in tonight's show include Gary Visconti, a gold medalist from Troy who plans to compete in the 1964 Olympics; Buddy Zack, another gold medalist from Seattle; and Joey Heckert and Gary Clark of East Lansing, Bronze medalists in national junior pair competition last year. Wilma Piper and Tom Easton from Rochester, N.Y., will present a dance number.

"The last show is generally the best of the season," Wold said. "The skaters are usually keyed-up and in top shape."

Increase Follows Trend

Editor's Note: This is the first of a two-part series dealing with summer term.

Zooming college enrollment throughout the country has spilled over into the summer months which were once reserved for recreation and recuperation from the rigors of the traditional nine-month academic year.

The startling jump in summer enrollment at Michigan State University during the past decade is no exception to the trend.

The number of students attending summer session has more than doubled since 1953, when 3,968 students registered for courses in June. Enrollment for this year's summer session stood at 11,921, with 10,014 on the East Lansing campus and 643 at Oakland University. Summer enrollment for 1962 was 8,998.

During the same period of time, graduate summer enrollment has nearly tripled. In 1954, graduate students accounted for about 34.3 per cent of the total summer enrollment. By 1962, the percentage of summer graduate students had jumped to 47.4, close to half of the total summer enrollment.

Although the percentage of graduate students is also increasing at a faster pace than undergraduates during the regular academic year, it is not increasing at the summer rate.

Dean of Students John A. Fuzak suggested several reasons for this phenomena. He pointed out that many teachers come to MSU to take graduate courses during the summer.

"The programs of the College of Education now attract many teachers during the summer," he said. "Other occupational groups do not release their people so readily for study during the summer."

The increase may also represent a gain in the number of students who receive their bachelor's degrees in June and immediately begin their graduate study in the summer, Fuzak said.

MSU has felt the impact of increased summer school attendance more than some other Big Ten schools, according to Fuzak. "This may be partially due to our quarter system, which

Introduce Classical Major

A major in classical studies, emphasizing the language, art, philosophy and history of the ancient world, will be offered here for the first time this fall.

The inter-departmental major leads to a B.A. degree in the College of Arts and Letters. James D. Rust, assistant dean of the College of Arts and Letters, said there has been a growing demand for students trained in classical history and language to teach in high schools.

"There is a crying need for Latin teachers at the secondary level," he said. "Furthermore, the demand for teachers trained in classical studies at the college level is also very great."

"The major in classical studies will provide a fine background for any student who plans to continue his work in graduate school."

Rust said the major is also a good program for students seeking a broad liberal arts education who have no professional ambitions connected with the study of classics.

"The breadth of required courses extends to five departments, and recommended electives extend to three more."

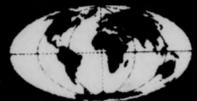

To obtain a B.A. in classical studies, a student must fulfill all of the degree requirements of the College of Arts and Letters. In addition, he must take specified courses in art, comparative literature, history and philosophy. The major in classical studies requires two years of work in Latin above the elementary level and one year of Greek or two years of Greek and one of Latin.

Recommended electives include French, German, political science and English, in addition to comparative literature, advanced Greek and Latin, philosophy and history.

A student planning to teach high school Latin is eligible for a teaching certificate upon com-

Senate Opens Test Ban Hearings

WASHINGTON -- Secretary of State Dean Rusk has made a strong plea for Senate ratification of the partial nuclear test ban treaty.

Rusk told members of three Senate committees Monday the U.S. has not forgotten the lessons of the past 18 years in dealing with the Russians. He said the U.S. will maintain its strength and will know of any possible cheating by the Soviets in violation of the pact, which bars all but underground nuclear tests.

Rusk said that even if the agreement contains marginal risks, "they are far less" than the hazard of a continued nuclear weapons race with Russia.

Rusk, just back from Russia and talks with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, said the pact does not obligate the U.S. to recognize Communist East Germany, includes a veto on amendments, but does not include any "side arrangements, understandings or conditions of any kind." His testimony marked the Administration's opening Senate appeal in behalf of the pact.

The Senate hearings are expected to take at least two weeks. Most senators predict the treaty will be ratified by the necessary two-thirds vote.

Four New Nations Sign Test Ban Treaty

WASHINGTON -- Four more nations signed the nuclear test ban treaty here Monday. They are Iceland, Laos, Sweden and Trinidad-Tobago. Thirty-nine nations have signed in Washington already and others have done so in Moscow and London. Several nations will sign in Washington later in the week, including Japan, the only nation ever bombed by nuclear weapons.

Senate Pays Tribute To Dead Kefauver

CAPITOL HILL -- The Senate paid final tribute to Estes Kefauver Monday, meeting briefly for a formal announcement of his death and adjourning for the day. Kefauver's body was flown to Madisonville, Tenn., by military plane for burial today. Kefauver, who twice sought the Democratic presidential nomination, is also remembered for his investigations into racketeers in the early 1950's.

Berlin Border Guards Escape to West

BERLIN -- Two East German border guards celebrated the eve of the second anniversary of the Communist wall Monday by escaping to West Berlin. The guards escaped in darkness, unnoticed by their comrades. West Berlin authorities said defections have increased as tomorrow's anniversary approached.

VATICAN CITY -- An official Vatican publication announced that the late Pope John left instructions for creation of a "Peace Prize" to be awarded every three years. Funds for the prize will come from the $160,000 Balzan Peace Prize awarded to Pope John himself just a month before he died.

completion of requirements for the degree in classical studies.
The classical studies major is a logical outgrowth of development in this area at MSU, according to Rust.
Greek and Latin were first taught here in 1936. Latin course offerings were increased in 1962 to meet state education requirements. In the meantime, courses in ancient art and history and the classical tradition in translation, philosophy and political science were being developed.
Representatives from the departments of art, foreign languages, history, philosophy and the Honors College met a year ago to discuss the possibility of combining all the classical courses into a separate curriculum. The new major was approved by the Academic Council last spring.
Some 1,400 students were enrolled in courses in classical studies for two quarters of the 1962-63 academic year.
"Many students will be taking these courses who are not interested in classical studies as a major," Rust said. "We do not expect that this will ever be a large major."

experience in their musical careers.
Friday the students were given a questionnaire. Their answers supported the clinic's success.
A sidelight of the clinic was a two-day session for music educators.
During the clinic Kenton expressed some of his opinions on jazz.
"The stage, or jazz, band is one of the best ways for young people to express themselves."
"The jazz band can help young people to find their identity, to mature, to feel important and to find their purpose in life."
In many ways, he said the stage band helps a person to find his identity quicker than does the concert band or symphony orchestra.
"The concert band depends largely on section sounds, where more than one person may be playing the same things," Kenton maintained.
"In stage band work, each player must contribute or the whole thing is off. Each guy must blow his own part."
He explained, however, that good stage band work is invaluable experience for musicians interested in symphony music, adding that most of the members of his band could also perform symphony work.
Kenton said the future of creative music in America rests almost entirely with our universities.
"Young guys, with happy spirits and a determination to have their music heard, hold the key to the progress of jazz in this country."
"We're in the last days of the old classical die-hards. More and more colleges and universities are adding commercial music programs to the curriculum."
He said we are turning more and more to the young musician, such as the students that participated in the MSU clinic and equally serious musicians now studying at the Berklee School in Boston, North Texas State, Indiana, Southern Methodist and other schools around the country.
Kenton traveled to Indiana University Sunday to the third in a series of Stan Kenton Clinics held this summer. After a week there, two more clinics will be held at the University of Denver and the University of Nevada. The series started two weeks ago at the University of Connecticut.

Summer School

lends itself very well to summer school."
Students generally attend summer session for one of two basic reasons. Either they are eager to graduate in a shorter length of time than usual or they have to make up courses to graduate in a regular length of time.
Stanley Crowe, who worked as director of summer session at MSU 1933-1956, said the summer school student has always been "quite seriously motivated."
"Anyone who thinks most summer school students go to college during the hot months of the year just to have parties and good times is mistaken," he said. "Most of the students in the summer have a definite reason for being there, and I would say the general academic atmosphere is far more serious than during the other nine months of the year."
Crowe said there was an enrollment of about 800 students when he began directing the summer session in 1936. The session lasted only six weeks.
Crowe said courses were offered in English, mathematics, geography, chemistry, botany, farm crops, economics, psychology and sociology.
"Of course, the number of courses was drastically limited. Many of the departments didn't offer any courses at all. Instructors never knew until the last minute whether they would have a class, because there had to be six students for a class to be held."
Today nearly every department of the University offers summer school courses. According to Acting Provost Howard R. Neville, one-half to one-third of the University's 1350 faculty members teach during the summer. However, the summer staff includes numerous graduate students who receive assistant instructorships during the summer.
Many of the regular teaching faculty are working on research during the summer, according to Horace King, assistant provost.

Juvenile Books In IMC

By LINDA MILLER
State News Staff Writer

If a student is looking for a child literature book for an education class, he won't find it in the main library. Since 1959, when the Instructional Materials Center was established, all juvenile books were moved to Erickson Hall.

Circulating children's literature is just one of the many services IMC offers to faculty and students in education. The Education Building, recently renamed as Erickson Hall, opened in 1958; the center was organized by Roy Edelfeldt, former MSU professor of education, one year later. Its original purpose was to serve the faculty as a demonstration center for instructional materials.

Jean Skamser, director of the center for the past year, said that IMC was one of the first services of its kind in the country. In the last five years, it has extended its services to students enrolled in the College of Education.

"To display and make available the newest in materials used for instruction is the main purpose of the Instructional Materials Center," said Mrs. Skamser. Display work is done by the center for special workshops, book exhibits, courses and programmed instruction.

Children's literature books comprise most of the library. Making these books available to faculty and students is one of the biggest operations of the center, because a course in child literature is offered every term by the college for elementary education majors. It is also for this reason that the majority of students and teachers who use the center's facilities are in elementary education.

Prospective teachers in all fields of education can benefit by use of the center's facilities. Curricular guides, periodicals for teachers and professionals, teaching booklets for sale, files of publishers, guidance materials and school textbooks are available for use in the center or check-out by faculty approval.

All special education references have been moved to the first floor where the center is located, so that students can readily obtain them. Mrs. Skamser said that a multi-media of foreign language materials recently were obtained by the center, including workbooks, recordings, tapes and tests. The center is responsible for the language labs on the fourth floor of Erickson Hall.

IMC is in the process of collecting a library of tapes for instructional use. Film strips, transcriptions, recordings, maps and globes are also available. The center has audio-visual equipment on hand to loan to education faculty for class demonstrations.

The system of cataloging and shelving in IMC is a modified cutter system, according to Mrs. Skamser. The first letter of the author's last name in a color category appears on the cover of each book.

The five divisions are known as general, poetry, folklore, science and social studies. A multitude of topics unsuitable for the other four categories are grouped under the general heading. Holidays, biographies, geography and travel are included in social studies.

Inventory last April revealed that the center contained 4590 books. About 90 of these have been awarded by Newberry and Caldecott publishing companies and do not circulate. There is also a special collection of limited, exclusive editions for in-center use only.

Specimen tests numbering 400 are studied by future teachers in the center. The IMC staff instructs students and faculty in the use of duplicating machines located in the center. Ditto masters, mimeographing stencils, paper, mounting boards and the like are for sale.

Mrs. Skamser said that from a dozen to 300 books are checked out by students in one day. The number fluctuates with the assignments in course work. She said that the first five weeks of this summer was particularly intense, and that most of the summer patrons are already teachers, returning for additional education. During the regular academic year, the majority are undergraduate students.

Planetaryium

Star In Film

The new Abrams Planetaryium is being put to use even before it is open.

Bendix Systems Division, Ann Arbor, used the planetaryium for a film documenting space research. Clyde Murtagh, a staff engineer from Bendix, supervised photography of the 6-foot model of the moon on loan from Rand McNally and Co.

The sequence filmed shows possible landing sites for lunar vehicles now under development.

The model of the moon and another model of the earth were brought to campus in July and will stay several months after the building is formally dedicated.

It is one of the displays in the exhibition hall of the Planetaryium.

'S' Mail Service Popular

William Schulburg sorts mail in new mailsters.

By CHARLES C. WELLS
State News Staff Writer

One of the most used facilities on campus is the MSU Mail Service.

Last year, the facility handled 3,398,862 pieces of mail, a monthly average of 280,000 pieces. This is an increase of over 125,000 pieces handled in the 1961-62 school year. Dollar value of postage alone ran $190,000.

The service is operated by Michigan State, but works closely with the East Lansing Post Office. It performs three basic functions for University departments.

The first is inter-departmental mail which is picked up and delivered to any other department on campus. This job is completed in only four hours.

"The majority of our inter-departmental mail is letters, but large sized mail runs a very close second," said Wayne Van Riper, supervisor of the MSU Mail Service. "Any incoming mail not specifically addressed to a particular department comes to us from the U.S. Post Office and then we distribute it."

The second function of the mail service is the picking up, stamping and delivering of outgoing mail to the East Lansing Post Office, he said. All they have to do is distribute it because we have taken care of the cancelling here.

"We try to give every service that the regular post office given and then a little extra," Van Riper added.

That little extra that Van Riper referred to includes stamping and sealing envelopes and inserting material into them. To do this, the department is highly automated.

An inserting machine puts from one to six sheets into an envelope at a time. It runs at 4,200 envelopes per hour and is available for any job over 1,000.

Several machines seal and stamp the addressed envelopes. These two machines can operate at a combined speed of well over 35,000 pieces of mail per hour, and are often called upon to do so. The only manual work is sorting and delivery.

To accommodate the increased use of the service in recent years, two motor scooter-sized mail vans were put into use in July. These Mailsters have greatly improved mail service, he said.

"If the South Campus keeps developing, within three or four years we will have to get another Mailster," the supervisor said.

Van Riper has witnessed the tremendous growth of mail volume in his twenty years as supervisor. He said that when he took over, volume was so small that the one man who handled it could go home in the afternoon and take a nap.

"There is no time for that now," he said.

Since the mail facility was initiated over 30 years ago, the staff has grown from one man to eight full-time employees and one part-time student. The office, located in the basement of the Student Services Building, is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Today there are six dispatches to the East Lansing Post Office to hit outgoing dispatches on trains, trucks and planes. He indicated that all first class mail is handled before 5:30 p.m. so that it does not have to wait overnight.

The supervisor also serves as mail consultant for the University. He often receives calls requesting information on mail service, postal laws and regulations, and postage rates.

Bob Fox puts mail into his satchel.

Entertainment Ghost Alive

By SUE JACOBY
State News Staff Writer

The ghost of a more graceful and formal era of student entertainment is still very much alive for at least one man in East Lansing.

Stanley Crowe, who served as director of summer school at Michigan State 1936-1956, was well acquainted with student entertainment before and after World War II. He took over the entire entertainment program for the University in 1940.

"All-University dances were tremendously big events at State 30, or even 20, years ago," said the slender, white-haired man who now works for the East Lansing Savings and Loan Association. "Kids would just jam the places to dance to a big-name band like Paul Whiteman's."

There were many more formal dances in the 1930's and early 1940's than there are today. "The kick-off dance of the year used to be the Military Ball," Crowe recalled. "Then there was the Harvest Ball and the J-Hop and the Spinster's Spin. There was always something in the spring, too."

A few of the dancing ghosts may be lurking in some rather odd buildings for formal parties on and around the campus.

Before the Auditorium was built, many of the dances were held in Agriculture Hall or the Women's gymnasium. The Lansing Armory was also used for formal parties.

Crowe said the fraternities and sororities used to give more big parties.

"One of the biggest events was a joint party given by the Olympics and the Feronians." The Olympics are now Sigma Nu fraternity and the Feronians are the Alpha Phi sorority.

Crowe attributes the decline of the former party partially to changes in the college atmosphere since World War II. "Students here have a great many more pressures on them today," he said. "There seems to be a greater drive to get through with school, and a general serious attitude brought about by the tensions we all live with."

Crowe said he thinks television has made a difference in student attitudes toward various forms of entertainment.

"As late as 1951, students practically fell over each other trying to see a live show which featured Patti Page here. I think students were more eager to see live performers before television. After all, many of the people who come here are on TV every other weekend."

Crowe said lectures were just as popular 20 to 30 years ago as they are today. "We had some of the most lively ones during the war," he noted. "The war correspondents used to draw a tremendous attendance when they came to speak on campus."

"Amelia Earhart was here to lecture once, and it was about the biggest thing on campus at the time."

Lectures today, he said, are less entertaining and more intellectual.

"I believe this is also a reflection of the generally more serious attitude of the students."

Routine Phone Call Evokes Excitement

A routine telephone call to the East Lansing Police Sunday afternoon sparked a series of events that involved a patrol car, a peculiar traffic mixup, two units of the East Lansing Fire Department, a crowd of 50 on-lookers, and a car on fire.

East Lansing Police received a call from Eric Filson, Mt. Pleasant senior, to investigate a car blocking an alley east of Haslett St. on Albert Ave.

As a patrol car responding to the complaint drove east on Albert, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Culver, 235 Durand, East Lansing, proceeded across Albert on Haslett into the path of the patrol car.

The officer issued them a summons for running a stop sign. Then Culver couldn't get his car started.

A wrecker was summoned: The mechanic tried to start the car after taking off the air filter. The carburetor and top of the engine burst into flames. A student ran out to the car from a nearby house with a bucket of water, and the mechanic doused the flames.

Meantime the fire department had been called, and a pumper and fire chief's car came roaring to the scene. A crowd gathered. A State News photographer happened by and snapped some pictures.

Mrs. Culver said they had been having trouble before starting the car.

What happened to the car that touched off the chain of events in the first place --- the car blocking the alley? "It drove off in the excitement," said Filson.

1,600 Incoming Frosh Assisted By Scholarships

More than 1,600 Michigan State freshmen are entering the University on scholarships ranging from local PTA stipends to MSU grants through the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

About 800 of these students are being aided by University funds. Ronald J. Jursa, assistant director of admissions and scholarships, said approximately the same number receive financial assistance from groups not connected with MSU.

"We don't have any way of recording the more informal scholarships, sponsored by organizations like local service clubs," Jursa explained. "However, we do have records of some of them, such as those sponsored by General Motors or the Alvin Bentley Foundation."

Nearly $540,000 in scholarship funds were made available by the University during 1962. These range from the coveted $6,000 Alumni Distinguished Scholarships to token awards of $50.

The Alumni Distinguished Scholarships, supported by the Alumni Development Fund, are the only MSU scholarships which are not based on financial needs. Ten students are awarded the scholarships strictly on the basis of academic ability.

The next category of scholarships is the honors group for students in the Alumni Distinguished Scholarship Competition. All Michigan residents in the contest with financial need receive scholarships, according to Jursa.

"We can't do too much for out-of-state residents, even if they do have financial need," Jursa said. "These are state funds, and most of them are earmarked for Michigan residents."

A number of Trustee scholarships are also available for superior students who do not compete in the Alumni Distinguished Scholarship Competition. "The number of these available depends on the amount of money we use up in the honors program," Jursa explained.

The National Merit program is new this fall. All National

Pleidaes, the 7 daughters of Atlas, and a nymph all live at the rivers edge edgewood 2-4432

Merit finalists who indicated MSU as their first college choice were eligible for the MSU grants through the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. They range from $100 to $1,500 on the basis of financial need. MSU is the first public institution in the country to sponsor a scholarship program through the National Merit Corporation.

Academic requirements for keeping MSU scholarships stiffen with each year the student completes in school. A 2.6 average is required to keep the scholarship at the end of the freshmen year, a cumulative 2.8 at the end of the sophomore year, and a cumulative 3-point at the end of the junior year.
