

Doctor Always Available For Students

Patient Patients In Olin Waiting Room

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a three-part series on Olin Memorial Health Center.

By OYARS BALCERS
State News Staff Writer

"How do the services at Olin Memorial Health Center compare with those offered in other universities?" students often ask. "Are we expecting too much from the University?"

James S. Feurig, Olin director, said that few universities have a full-time health center to serve students. Many have registered nurses to care for routine health problems, while doctors come in for appointments, he explained.

There is always a doctor available if a student needs one, Feurig said. However, at night, the doctor is on call rather than waiting in an emergency room, he added.

Last year Olin handled an average of 250 cases a day.

Feurig said that he would like to see more services provided but that the budget limits this. There is a similar budget restriction in all other departments, he said.

In the 1961-62 academic year there were seven doctors on duty at Olin. There were eight doctors employed in the 1957-58 school year. This year Olin has a staff of nine doctors and one psychiatrist.

The American College

Health Association recommends a student-doctor ratio of 2,000 students to one doctor. Two years ago the patient-doctor ratio was about 4,000 to one if faculty cases were included. This year a further increase in enrollment and staff has swayed the ratio.

The determination of who is eligible for treatment at Olin is not left up to the health center. "The administration does this," Feurig said.

Because of the limited budget, only students carrying seven credits and faculty and staff suffering an on-the-job injury receive services, Feurig added.

University employees receive the same type of services they would receive if they were industrial employees, Philip J. May, vice president in charge of finance, said. "In other words, they are covered for anything that falls under workmen's compensation."

Students can have free doctor services between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. At other times a $1 service fee is charged. Medications and medical supplies are dispensed at cost plus a handling fee from the Olin pharmacy. X-rays are provided on a cost-per-film basis.

Students staying in Olin are not charged for room and board for the first 40 days. The departments of mental hygiene and physiotherapy provide services on a minimal "per visit" basis. The psychiatric clinic is maintained at Olin for short term cases.

Olin, besides handling routine clinical cases, also handles general surgery and orthopedic cases except in highly specialized areas such as brain, heart, spinal neurological and cardiovascular conditions.

If consultants are called upon the recommendation of the staff physicians, their fees are charged to the student.

All surgery, except minor surgery, and all anesthetic fees are also charged to the student.

Spartans Drop To 5th Place

The Spartans slipped to fifth place in the United Press International weekly grid ratings, but they are a six-point favorite to top Illinois.

Pittsburgh moved into the Spartans' fourth place, trailing leaders Texas, Navy and Mississippi.

The three top teams are all idle this weekend, while the Pittsburgh Panthers are the choice to defeat eastern rival Penn State.

Washington is a 14-point favorite to beat Washington State and remain the top choice for the Rose Bowl. Southern California is the pick by 13.5 points over UCLA in a game that could mean a Rose Bowl bid if Washington falters.

Committee Backs ROTC Revamp

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The House Armed Services Committee voted Tuesday to completely revamp ROTC programs at both college and high school levels. But it rejected an anti-discrimination proposal.

The legislation would authorize a two-year ROTC training course for universities. Entering students, however, would first have to complete a six-to-eight-week accelerated summer training period as privates.

MSU Asks $40,500,000

State Debates Budget

MSU heads met Tuesday with the State Department of Administration to defend the University's $40.5 million budget request for 1964-65.

"The meeting is held annually to give University officials an opportunity to explain in detail our budget request," said Secretary Jack Breslin. "The Department of Administration will digest the material we present and send it to Governor Romney."

The governor will make the changes he thinks necessary and incorporate the MSU budget request into his budget message to the legislature in January, he added.

The University has requested an $8,232,906 increase over this year's appropriation. The University of Michigan is asking for $9,350,000 more. When asked if MSU would get all it is requesting, Breslin said: "Past history has shown that the MSU budget has suffered severe reductions."

"I always go into these sessions with optimism, however," Breslin said. "The Department of Administration were President John A. Hannah, Breslin, Phillip J. May, vice president for business and finance, Howard R. Neville, acting provost and Thomas K. Cowden, dean of agriculture."

Representatives from Oakland University, MSU's affiliate near Pontiac, also attended the budget meeting.

Breslin said that the state comptroller had in past administrations been there to discuss the MSU budget and indicated that he wished state comptroller Glen Allen had been present Tuesday. "We often wonder just how the final MSU appropriation is found," the secretary said.

"We have asked several times how they arrived at a final figure, but the department has never told us."

Breslin said he thinks there should be some explanation. After all, the University gives them the information they want, he said.

None of the other state universities know how their budget is finally figured out either, he indicated.

One of the seeming mysteries of state government has been how the final budget request is arrived at. Legislative cuts have also been questioned.

In past administrations, the legislature has been accused of taking a "meat ax" approach. Last year, the Senate approved the budget as presented by Governor Romney, but lobbed off $386,396 from the Co-Operative Extension Service budget. This was partially restored later.

See Grid Sellout By Thursday

Ticket Manager Bill Beardsley warned students Tuesday to be sure to bring their activity book coupons to Jenison Field House before 5 p.m. Friday, or they might be without tickets for Saturday's MSU-Illinois football game.

Beardsley said that there wasn't a "big rush" for tickets Tuesday morning, as there was on Monday, but added that usually seniors and graduate students are in a bigger hurry to get their seats than lowerclassmen.

Sophomores may redeem their coupons in the Jenison outer areas today, while freshmen can pick up their seats Thursday. A limited number of adjacent seat tickets will be available Friday morning, but won't be held past noon.

Beardsley also said that there are still around 3,000 non-student tickets yet to be sold and that he expects a sellout by late Thursday.

Site Moved West On Red Cedar

The East Lansing City Council Monday took positive steps to get a new sewage treatment project rolling by February.

The council approved an ordinance to buy $3.5 million in revenue bonds to pay for a new sewage plant. It will be a joint project with costs shared equally by the city of East Lansing, MSU, and Meridian Township.

To be built about a mile west of the present plant, it will be on the Red Cedar River near the Chesapeake & Ohio tracks and the I-496 connector route. Completion for the eight million gallon-a-day plant is scheduled for August, 1965.

The present plant, which will be closed down, is located on Kalamazoo Street near the Brody Group. Residents living nearby have complained of the offensive sewer gas odors.

"East Lansing residents will pay about $1.50 in additional sewage rates to assure revenue to retire the city's share of the project," said John M. Patriarche, city manager. "The new rates will go into effect Jan. 1."

Some of the project cost may be paid by the federal government, Patriarche added. A $691,000 aid grant was approved recently by the Michigan Water Resources Commission, but the federal government cannot approve it until plans are released by the Michigan Department of Health.

Early Registration Begins Today For 5,300 Students

Early registration begins today for an estimated 5,300 seniors and graduate students.

Held on the second floor of the Union, it will continue Thursday. A new innovation has been that students could select the hours they want to register.

Registrar Horace C. King issued a plea requesting that students arrive at the hour they signed up for. This will make the process work smoothly, he added. Full payment of student fees is also required.

"If a student misses his appointed hour, he should come to the Union anyway," King said. "He should see the registrar's representative at the south entrance and work out arrangements."

This also applies to students who have lost their early registration reservation cards, he said.

"Students should keep in mind that this is an experiment," he added. "We have done all we can to make it a success, but the students must do their share by keeping their reservation times."

Grid Game May Be On Local TV

WMSB (Channel 10), the University television station, has announced plans to televise the State-Illinois game if a sellout is announced by 1:30 p.m. Thursday.

The Thursday deadline is in accordance with National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) rules which require TV stations to notify the governing body that they are televising a game at least 48 hours before the contest begins.

According to University sports officials it now appears doubtful that the game will be a sellout by deadline time Thursday.

Hannah Calls Civil Rights Top Problem

President John A. Hannah lists civil rights as America's most important domestic problem.

"Progress in this area is necessary if America is to continue to have domestic tranquility," he said Tuesday. "About one-third of the world is non-white, and how we treat Negroes has a great deal to do with America's acceptance by these people."

The president spoke at the MSU Men's Club luncheon in the Union. The U.S. Civil Rights Commission, when it began in 1957, was the first government action on civil rights in 82 years, he said.

Soviets Endorse Cuban Demand
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (P) - The Soviet Union and other Communist nations Tuesday endorsed Cuba's demand that abandonment of the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo be made a condition for establishing a nuclear-free zone in Latin America. They launched a concerted attack in the U.N. General Assembly's main political committee on U.S. policy toward nuclear-free zones in other parts of the world as well.

Cambodia Severs All U.S. Ties
PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (P) - Prince Norodom Sihanouk, ruler of Cambodia, Tuesday severed all economic and military ties with the United States. Sihanouk charged that U.S. aid was being used to undermine him. He announced his decision in a fiery speech before an emergency session of his political party at a Phnom Penh stadium.

Red Agitation In Saigon Claimed
SAIGON, Viet Nam (P) - Communist terrorists have been sent into Saigon to blow up government and U.S. military installations and kill American personnel, Vietnamese security sources said Tuesday. Eager to discredit the new military regime, they have thrown usual caution aside and are recruiting any persons who say they support the Communist Viet Cong cause, the informants added.

Carelessness Can Hurt Children

Maybe it is the University that has forgotten about the children living in University married housing, or maybe it is some of the married students themselves who are at fault. But regardless of who is to blame, children have suffered from someone's neglect or carelessness.

Spray cans and containers of noxious fluids have been left within reach of youngsters, which quite understandably set their curiosity to work. One young boy has already required hospitalization; others have needed treatment by a doctor.

There are also jagged broken glass blocks in some of the connectors between the various housing units. But the repairing of these blocks is way down on the assigned priority list of married housing maintenance projects. Apparently repairs inside apartments are given top priority.

Children can't say much--they can't make any eloquent plea or write a letter. They can only get hurt, as some have, and only then does their plight receive sudden concern.

Can't something be done about these hazards and similar ones which threaten youngsters in married housing?

While we find ourselves pondering this question, we hope others who are in a position to rectify the situation ponder also: or must more accidents accentuate the problem?

The Unifier--Nixon?

He's through--forever, was one typical analysis by the press after Richard M. Nixon lost his bid last year for the governorship of California. But in the remarkable ways of American politics, Mr. Nixon's name keeps cropping up in discussions about next year's Republican Presidential nominee.

General Eisenhower suggested publicly what many others had been saying privately for some months--that Mr. Nixon ought not be counted out. Then last week, a sampling of opinion among managing editors of the Associated Press in Miami Beach showed, surprisingly, that many thought it would be Mr. Nixon against President Kennedy, with Mr. Kennedy winning again. The thinking is that the former Vice President will come to the fore as a compromise candidate if and when the Goldwater and Rockefeller forces deadlock.

Mr. Nixon denies he is or would become a candidate. He says the best role he can play is "to unite the party after the bloodletting" between the Rockefeller and Goldwater camps which, he observes, is "getting very bloody."

Perhaps Mr. Nixon isn't a candidate, but his point of view today isn't bad for someone who is. Talk like that is certain to remind Republicans their party might benefit if the "bloodletting" were stopped by some gifted unifier before the convention's end.

Perennials

The chronic instability of Arab politics again showed its face in the sudden revolt in Iraq.

Our judgments of its merits will have to wait. Meanwhile, one must wonder what makes the Arab nations so prone to political upheaval. Is it the result of the rapid defeat of the old order, or merely an example of Arab temperament? Is it politics or concern for the people which moves so many to revolt?

One Man--Generation's Turmoil

From Our Wire Services

HONG KONG,--Wrapped up in the slight figure of a bewildered young man is the story of a generation caught in a world of hot and cold war. It is a story of a young man who thought he had found the answer and discovered that his answer was wrong. Today he has no dreams, no illusions, not even an "ism" to cling to.

He was born the same year as the great world depression. He was 11 when the Nazis invaded his country. He was a teenager when World War II ended.

He went to the United States and fought for the United States, tried to be an American and failed to make it. He found frustration, he turned to Communism and found hopelessness.

Albert Belhomme, now 34, is one of those men described by the word "turncoat." He was one of a small group of Americans captured in Korea who refused to be repatriated.

He wound up 13 years later in a tiny one-room flat in a run-down hotel in Hong Kong, with his Chinese wife and three children, living on hand-outs of the Red Cross and the Salvation Army and waiting to be sent to his native land, Belgium.

"I felt myself a sort of idealist," he told me. "I had faith in people. A lot of that has been destroyed. I have not really lost faith in people but I know now that power is the most corrupting thing in society. I am going to stay away from all political parties from now on. There is no future in it for me."

Belhomme was knocked about by the European war. He wound up in Berlin, at age 16, when the war ended. A year later his mother took him to the United States and settled in Ashland, Pa. "I tried to get a job," he said, "but there were obstacles because I was not a citizen, so I took out first papers. Then I heard that you could become a citizen more quickly if you were in the army, so I joined. Still there were obstacles. "I qualified for officers' candidate school, but I was not a citizen. I could have been useful."

He had been with a forward artillery observer section deep inside North Korea, with the 3rd Battalion of the 9th Infantry Regiment he and 11 buddies were captured, disarmed and held in a ditch until the action was over.

Their captors supplied them with reading matter--all political propaganda and mostly Soviet publications. By the time negotiations were underway for prisoner exchanges, conditions got better in the camp and there was more food. Belhomme refused repatriation. He had been a prisoner almost three years. The thinking-over period failed to change his mind because he felt he already had gone beyond the point of no return.

They took him to Shansi Province, to the town of Taiyuan, where he was taught some basic Chinese and given more political indoctrination.

In 1956 he married Hsiu Ying and then came the children, Billy, Ricky and Leon. But he felt the pressure of the Communist state. Nobody was free to move, free to speak.

Last Aug. 30, he came out of China with his family, "sick and tired of the place."

"The life, the industry, the farms and all the rest did not agree with what I had read... the people were apathetic, although active resistance was out of the question. I had been of the opinion that people are basically good and, given a chance, could make a go of Communism. But it was proven to me that it isn't possible."

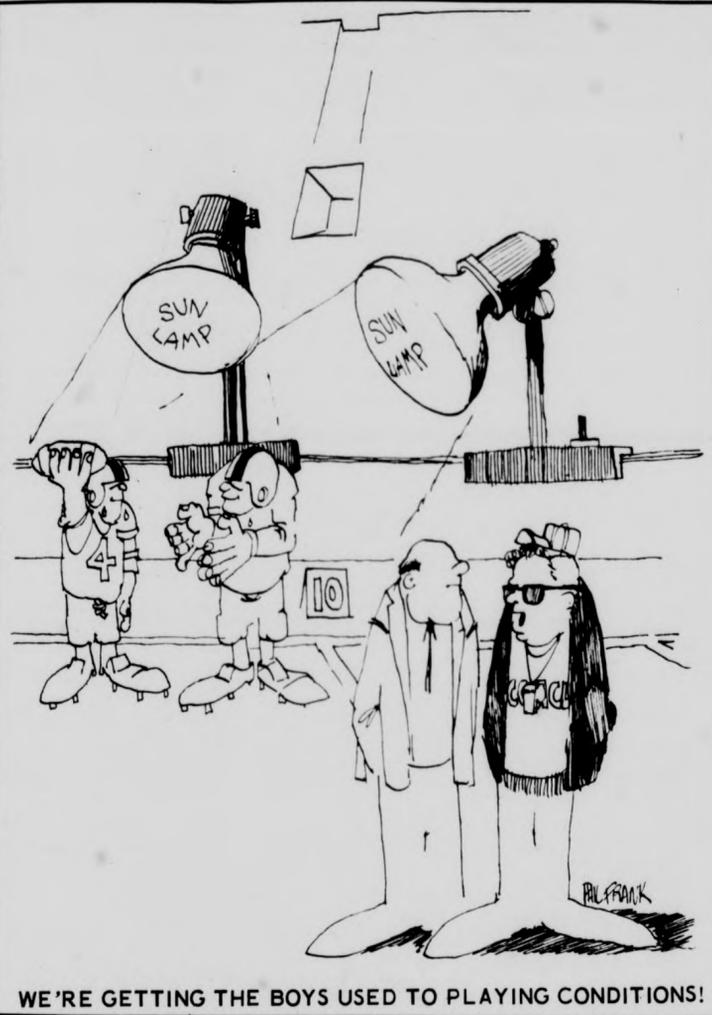

"In theory the things I was reading sounded very good. The trouble was there was a human element involved. Nine out of ten men who get power will change because they got power. On this side, at least there are checks on that power."

Letters To The Editor

When To Believe?

To The Editor:

Father Azkoul, you say I am not old enough to disbelieve. Am I, then, old enough to believe? Am I old enough to say "I believe in God, and cleave unto his rules, and dedicate my life to his service?" This is a vastly more complicated decision. It involves my entire future. If I am not old enough to doubt, I am certainly not wise enough to believe.

We agree, Father, I am not old enough to be wise. But I am still human -- newly so, but human -- and I need answers to the questions -- What is a human being? What is his purpose on earth? What happens to him after he dies? as much as any woman of ninety.

These are questions everyone must decide for himself. He cannot blindly follow those possessed of more wisdom. It is necessary for every man to see with his own eyes -- and not with the sight of another.

Disbelief is not always the honest end of honest consideration, but neither is belief. Many are doubters because it is fashionable. But he who really suffers the void of not being able to believe does so because none of the answers of faith are perfect replies to his questions!

In time, perhaps, the doubter will learn to settle for half-satisfying answers in preference to none at all. When he learns to compromise, he can believe, but not before.

Stagnation

To The Editor:

The column by Jack Shea in Monday's paper typifies the stagnation of the American mind in regards to our war with Communism.

Premier Khrushchev, a political genius and master of the art of propaganda, has stated numerous times, "we will bury you."

I understand that he specifies that it will not be through military aggression, but economic ruination. The reason is as obvious to him as it is to our own strategists--we have a military supremacy in conventional weapons. Nuclear armament must be discounted as it is mutual suicide, something Khrushchev admitted in a speech last year.

The recent agricultural failures in the Soviet Union have placed Mr. K in an embarrassing and uncomfortable position. Now is the time for the United States to shift from the defensive to the offensive. We must capitalize on this Soviet failure. It is time we emerge from our womb of unconcern and shout to the entire world that Socialism cannot produce, while Capitalism is over-abundant. We should, through our extensive news media, take Mr. K by the ear and rub his nose in his own boasts of economic superiority.

Let the Russian people hunger a little. An empty stomach promotes an active mind, and the result is that we are not much wiser than we were before reading it.

Jack Gallie

Edified?

To The Editor:

Your Wire Service report on Nkrumah and the Young Pioneers is an intriguing example of selective perception, and the result is that we are not much wiser than we were before reading it.

It was GBS who said that if you want to be most misinformed about any "native" country (which was colonial in those days), ask the fellow who has lived there for thirty years and speaks the language like a "native."

At one time we heard and read ad nauseam about one-party states in Africa because you have so many one-party states in this democratic country that you cannot see wood for trees. Or really is it the mote-and-beam vision?

To add a little more information for your readers, the Young Pioneers no longer sing "Rule Britannia" as we did until we could hardly hear ourselves for hoarseness; they sing "Long live African Unity and the African Personality." And what is the African Personality?

That which makes the South African settler government ban the book "Black Beauty." Poor kids, can they understand all that?

Mahleni Njisane

Yes, Opera

To The Editor:

We should like to clarify a few statements made by Miss Degnore in her letter regarding the Classical Music Library. Miss Degnore seems to be under the erroneous impression that we are primarily a record lending library. Although we have records which do circulate (these are mainly duplicates of recordings found in our regular collection), our main purpose is to provide records for classroom use and for use in the library.

We should like to state for Miss Degnore's benefit, that we do have operas with recognized current artists in our regular collection; Joan Sutherland in La Sonnambula, Maria Callas in Cavalleria Rusticana, La Boheme, Tosca, Il Barbiere di Siviglia, Aida, Un Ballo in Maschera, La Forza del Destino, Il Trovatore, and Renata Tebaldi in Vanessa, Madama Butterfly, Manon Les-caut and Othello, to mention only a few.

We sincerely hope that Miss Degnore's letter will not discourage students and faculty from taking advantage of our facilities.

Consideration

To The Editor:

In regard to the November 14 letter written by Mr. Kellner; I also had the misfortune to be involved in a scene at Olin this week -- only in this case I was the one insulted. Never having been to the Health Center I could not have been expected to know the procedure followed.

Yet when I asked the receptionist whether I would be called over the P.A. when a doctor was available, she very sarcastically said, "Well, what do you think you're waiting in line for?" Then as I walked away I heard her comment to a co-worker something to the effect, "Honestly, these college students." Her treatment certainly helped make me feel better.

Point Of View

An African Student Speaks His Mind

by Ephrem Ma

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ephrem Ma is from the Federal Republic of Cameroon in West Africa. He is currently taking a three-month course in the intensive study of English at the University's American Language and Education Center. We wonder if you will be as moved by this article as we were.

How do you like America so far? I am always asked this question. Before answering it, I ask you not to be mad at my mistakes; I am not English speaking.

Now, how do I like America? That is a very good question. You ask me that question because you expect me to enjoy myself in America as well as any foreign exchange student. If the situation remains the same for us, I will ask to be transferred to France.

We're Disappointed

Most of us are deceived, confused, disappointed; we can't communicate as we wish with the American students. The boys are sometimes very unfriendly and unkind; they scarcely speak and when they do, you can tell them that you are from Heaven, or Africa, or the sea. That will be all right, they won't ask you: "How can a man be from Heaven or from the sea?" They rarely ask you questions about yourself, your country and so on. And they answer the questions you ask them by "Yes" or by "No." It is boring, very, very, boring.

This lack of communication is most obvious with the girls. Of course, some girls and boys try to be nice but you have so few of them that I wonder if this number is as many as per thousand of the students. There is something wrong with girls. I didn't expect when I landed in the U.S. to find girls who can't dance fast, well or at all when you invite them to dance with you. But the same girls will dance really fast or well, a few seconds after if an American guy invites them.

They are very interesting when you first meet them: "It was nice talking to you" they say when running away from you as fast as possible. Don't expect to see them again; however, if you meet them by hazard, they won't voluntarily see you. It is no use to call them up because they have to go to a fancy meeting at the moment you call and so on.

A Slap-In The Face

It is unbelievable and a shame; it is hideous. Who do you think the African exchange students are when you slap us in the face that way? How do you want us to have a good impression of this country then?

It isn't very fair to encourage the African exchange students to come to the U.S., the "leader" of the free world, and then to treat us in an unacceptable, meaningless way, when we are full citizens in our native countries and when we can study and feel at home in some other countries that aren't known as the free world "leader."

We African students are exchange students as well as those from other foreign countries, and we need all the respect due to our title as they speak more and more of the importance of Africa and the good relations between her and the U.S.

Answers Taunts In Commons

Home Caught On 'Hot Seat'

LONDON—Sir Alec Douglas-Home defended his new Conservative government Tuesday against an onslaught of Labor Party questions and taunts in his first question period in Parliament.

It was the former Earl of Home's "trial by fire" in the hot seat occupied by British prime ministers. The House of Commons institution of question time—which allows the most obscure lawmakers to grill the nation's leader—is the nearest British equivalent of an American Presidential news conference.

Questions covered Scottish affairs, industrial and nuclear energy development and national security. All seemed designed to show up what Laborites consider to be Sir Alec's lack of House of Commons experience, economic knowledge, and administrative ability.

Laborite George Wigg resurrected the ghosts of the John Profumo scandal by asking the Prime Minister to say who now will be answering questions about security.

Wigg was the man who did most to uncover ex-War Minister Profumo's love affair with Christine Keeler while the red-head was dallying with a Russian agent.

Sir Alec replied that Home Secretary Henry Brooke will remain in control of the Security Service but that he himself would not shirk responsibility for matters of national security.

Sir Alec then added that before a full Commons debate on the government's handling of the Profumo affair, "I would rather value a conversation" with Labor Party leader Harold Wilson on some aspects of security.

It was clear, despite derisive howls from the Laborites, that Sir Alec displayed greater confidence than he did when he addressed the Commons for the first time as Prime Minister last week.

When a Laborite said the opposition distrusted Brooke's judgment in security matters "even more than it distrusted the Prime Minister," Sir Alec retorted amid laughter, "I hope you will trust me but if you do not I shall not lose very much sleep."

Civil Rights

the commission for six years. "Three commission members are from the 'old South,'" he said. "While hearings were being conducted in the southern states, even these members could not stomach some of the things going on there."

"Negro graduates holding doctorate degrees in education, law and medicine were even being denied the right to vote in the South," he said. "Northerners tend to think that this problem is solved, but it is still very real."

Almost 10 years after the Supreme Court decision to integrate public schools, integration has been only token, he said. The Southern schools that have integrated will take only Negroes they believe have high moral character or those that are docile.

The commission also investigated discrimination in housing, employment and in labor unions, he said.

"To solve racial prejudice in America, the Negro will have to be accepted just like any other person," he said. "No other minority suffers such discrimination as the Negro."

Hannah said that discrimination is not just limited to the South. He also indicated that either the local and state governments promote racial equality or the federal government will step in and do it.

Under President Kennedy's civil rights package, the commission will become a national clearing house for equal protection under the law for all people, he said. Another provision will empower the commission to investigate all cases of vote frauds—not just those concerned with Negro voting.

"The Negro must have the right to rewards like housing and employment that others making the same contribution to society get," he added. "Every citizen whether he be white or black must be entitled to equal educational opportunity so that all will be worth their full value to society."

Senior Will Visit Asia With Tour

Donald E. Dickson, East Lansing senior, is one of ten students in the nation who will visit Southeast Asia next month under a program sponsored by the U.S. National Student Association of International Education.

Dickson was named Friday as a member of the Student Delegation to Southeast Asia, a program designed to acquaint college students with political, economic and social conditions in far eastern countries.

The group will tour major cities, rural communities and universities in Hong Kong, Indonesia and the Philippines. Dickson, a political science major, said he hopes to do some independent research on the trip which will aid him in courses next term.

The delegates will have an opportunity to speak with students in universities and adult leaders in nearly all areas of the countries.

"This will give us an opportunity to establish contact with the students and student movements of other countries," Dickson said. "I believe this is one of the most important features of the trip."

"It will also contribute immeasurably to our cultural understanding of the countries we visit."

Dickson does not speak any Asian languages, although he plans to study Japanese next term. He said he eventually hopes to go into foreign service.

"This trip will be a tremendous experience for the type of work I am planning to do," he said.

The group will leave Dec. 15 for the 30-day trip. All expenses are paid by the sponsoring organizations. The trip is also under supervision of the State Department.

Dickson and his nine companions were selected by judges appointed by the national sponsoring organizations.

Mrs. Rudd Gives Coeds A Few Last-Minute Tips On Etiquette

Housemom Keeps Chi 'O's On Their 'Charming' Toes

Should the women of Chi Omega appear a bit more poised and confident than other coeds, it is because Mrs. Martha Jackson Rudd is their housemother.

Mrs. Rudd, housemother for almost two years, has worked in the field of charm, poise and personality for many years, and is the former owner of the School for Charm in Lansing.

She has lectured on personality development and has taught several short courses on charm.

Mrs. Rudd's campus talks and Lansing area presentations on personal charm are numerous. She has spoken to women's organizations and school gatherings, as well as to men's clubs, both in this area and in Cleveland, where she worked in a charm school prior to coming to Lansing.

Her audiences are varied, for "charm appeals to all ages and sexes. I have spoken to groups ranging in age from 6 to 75 years," she said.

This summer, Mrs. Russ will continue to manage the Glenn of Michigan clothing store in Petoskey. "This keeps me active and aware of the current fashions," she said.

ROTC Lauds Top Air Force Cadets

Capt. Charles Pfuhl, Lansing senior.

By maintaining their standards of performance, the cadets may become distinguished military graduates and will be eligible for regular Air Force commissions upon entering active duty as second lieutenants.

Col. Stone, who visited the campus Nov. 15 for inspection of air science facilities and operations, also presented cadet Rolland Scott, Washingtonville, N.Y., junior, with his cadet pilot wings.

French Mystery-Thriller

After DeG, What?

PARIS (AP)—President Charles De Gaulle long ago wrote that a little mystery is necessary to strengthen the authority of one who desires to govern. True to this guideline, he is letting people guess how long he intends to stand at the helm of France.

De Gaulle will be 73 Friday. If he should die, France would be shaken to its complex and potentially explosive political underpinnings.

The biggest political question in modern France today is: What happens after De Gaulle?

Under constitutional processes he would be replaced temporarily by the President of the Senate, now the strongly anti-Gaullist Gaston Monnerville, a native of French Guiana.

The constitution provides that a presidential election must be held 20 to 50 days after the vacancy occurs, unless the Constitutional Council, a sort of supreme court, finds unavoidable reasons to delay the vote.

With De Gaulle in power for an indefinite period, the list of politicians of presidential timber seems meager and pale.

So far no other politician has been able to detach himself enough from partisan politics to make a convincing show that he is needed and wanted. The race for successor will probably be wide open.

In this circumstance, who would have De Gaulle's blessing? Speculation centers on Jacques Chaban-Delmas, speaker of the National Assembly, and Michel Debre, former Premier.

Chaban-Delmas, 48, figured prominently in the maneuvering for De Gaulle's return to power in 1958. He is a vigorous and dedicated politician with a home base in Bordeaux, where he is mayor. He is frequently called in by De Gaulle.

Debre, 51, served De Gaulle for three years and three months as Premier. He helped organize the party and became De Gaulle's faithful aide.

De Gaulle once said, "Après moi, la pagaille, (after me, a mess)". Whether one of these men or some one else will prove him wrong remains to be seen.

Placement Bureau Figures 'Excellent' For Fall Term

The Placement Bureau will wind up one of the heaviest fall interviewing seasons on record during the final three weeks of the term.

Jack Shingleton, Bureau director, said the 21 rooms have been filled to capacity nearly every for this time of the year. Shingleton said, "We expect a full house most days during the next three weeks as well." A large percentage of the interviewing day this term. Nearly 5,000 students had been interviewed by 459 employers Friday.

"This is an excellent figure has been conducted by employers interested in graduates in scientific and technical fields.

Shingleton said there has been a significant increase in the number of Ph.D. candidates who registered for interviews this term. "These companies were just begging for doctoral candidates to interview," he said. "In spite of the increase, there still weren't as many Ph.D. students as the companies would like to have interviewed."

Interviewing at the Bureau will end Dec. 6, the Friday before finals.

AUSG To Address Committee Will Explain Amendments

Representatives of AUSG will be invited to explain constitutional amendments passed in the recent student referendum at the next meeting of the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

The key amendment approved in the referendum was a proposal to open all student judiciary hearings to the public unless the defendant specifies that they be closed. Present policy has the hearings closed unless the defendant specifies they should be open.

Other amendments approved were: A proposal that two representatives from the Dean of Students Office meet with and serve in an advisory capacity to AUSG in all its branches.

An amendment allowing the administrative vice president to serve student judiciary hearings.

An amendment specifying more precisely the time of elections.

To become effective, all amendments must be approved by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs. Dean of Students John A. Fuzak said AUSG representatives to be invited would include Speaker of Congress Bob Hencken, Vice-President Terry Burgen and another Congress representative.

"We have a good many questions about these amendments, Fuzak said. "We don't actually know enough about them to make a decision at present."

The committee probably will hold its next meeting Tuesday, Fuzak said.

Another matter discussed at the meeting Tuesday was the procedure for chartering new sororities on campus.

DG's Shine Up Sorority Symbol

DG's Faith Anchored

The large, gold anchor sitting on the lawn of the Delta Gamma sorority house, 365 N. Harrison, does not mark the site of a shipwreck. It is the national symbol of Delta Gamma and is depicted in miniature on the DG pin.

All DG chapters have tried to get anchors for their houses. Since this type of anchor has not been made since about 1920, however, many chapters have not obtained one.

The MSU anchor was presented to the house by the pledge class of 1961.

The class found it in a steel warehouse in Detroit. After painting it, the pledges set the anchor in a cement block.

"This was done so no one can walk off with it," said Lee Schneider, Grosse Pointe senior and a member of the '61 pledge class.

No one has succeeded in actually stealing it, but fraternity pledge classes often paint it.

In addition, some pledges have been tied to the anchor with chains and padlocks, taped to it with adhesive, and required to vacuum around it.

The anchor weighs 170 pounds. It has a base 3 feet wide and a shaft about 5 feet high.

"It takes approximately three extremely strong men to carry it," said Miss Schneider.

The anchor is cleaned by the DG members and is painted once a term -- if it is not painted by a fraternity first.

It is also a favorite plaything of elementary school children on their way to and from school.

Businessmen See Bright Future For U.S. Economy

NEW YORK (AP)—America might just possibly be nudging into a new era of spreading prosperity that would all but lick inflation and depressions.

Businessmen and economists across the country are tantalized by this prospect as they watch the current good business performance stretch on and on.

In recent interviews, these men carefully fenced off the boundaries of their thinking:

--Business ups and downs will continue, but they may become almost invisible to the majority of people.

--Economic growth rates should increase, though probably not a lot. Unemployment, geographic pockets of semi-poverty and economic deprivation for some racial groups will continue to be slow to disappear.

--Inflation could flare up anytime the government gets careless or the labor-management-market relationship gets out of whack, businessmen say. There's a new psychology emerging, however, where by the first reaction to a cost problem is to offset it somehow rather than to raise prices.

Some economists worry about building so much stability into the system that it has not only the firmness, but also the vitality, of a rock.

But others say that the kind of growth indicated by present trends--on profits, personal income, cash supplies, tax cut prospects and the like--will be very satisfying.

Prof. Paul McCracken of the University of Michigan, a member of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Eisenhower, says, "Economists are famous for worrying hardest about a problem just after it's ceased to exist. This could be the case with our concern over a sluggish economy."

"We may find out this was the year that we moved out of it."

Recording facilities will be available in 302 Student Services 8-2:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday. Students must make appointments by phone and bring their student ID's for the recording session.

Betty Abu-Gheida, educational exchange coordinator, said the tape facilities are being set up here because of the strongly favorable response from foreign students to the program.

gram has been extended by the Lansing chapter.

The recordings are from five to six minutes long. The program is open to permanent residents who have relatives overseas as well as temporary foreign students.

The Red Cross mails the recordings free of charge to overseas families of students.

"This is a wonderful gesture on the part of the Red Cross," Mrs. Abu-Gheida said, "and we urge all foreign students to take advantage of it."

How Do You Say 'Sugar'?

It's dinner time, you want the sugar and you're not sure how to ask for it. This is the problem some of the 24 coeds participating in Alpha Omicron Pi sorority's foreign language plan have faced.

One night a week, the girls seat themselves at dinner according to their interest in Spanish, French or German.

Marilyn Italiano, Newark, N.J., senior, who lived in Madrid, Spain for a year and is taking graduate courses in Spanish is chairman of the program, designed to help those taking a foreign language become more proficient in conversation.

Marilyn Bull, Casnovia senior, directs the German section, composed mainly of girls interested in science.

One table is reserved for English, but "I think they feel left out sometimes," Miss Italiano said.

"The program has proven successful so far," she added, "but at the beginning the girls were rather shy about saying anything. Now they are not as afraid."

"I think the program has been very helpful to me," Loraine Pierson, Delton junior, said. "I'm taking Spanish 102, and the first time we tried the plan I was really mixed up. Now with Marilyn's help, I have more assurance when I speak."

Allocations between the three users are: MSU, 3 million gallons a day; East Lansing, 2.5 million gallons; and Meridian Township, 1.5 million. Meridian Township and MSU shares were worked out on a formula based on the amount both users estimated they would need.

It is expected that the new plant will help clean up the Red Cedar River. Residents living in East Lansing and in Meridian Township who are pouring raw sewage into county drains will be required to hook into the new sewage system.

This has been a state law before but it was difficult to enforce because these areas did not have sewage lines. They were required to have septic tanks, however.

Gen. Patton's Son Wins Army Honor

WASHINGTON (AP)—Another George S. Patton is rising to prominence in the army.

Lt. Col. Patton, son of the dashing "blood and guts" tank general of World War II fame, has been chosen to attend the Army War College starting next August, it was learned Tuesday.

The army selects only its most promising officers for its war college at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Offspring of several outstanding World War II and Korean War generals have made the grade.

SOS: 'Please Send Tickets For Opera'

Anyone not planning to use his ticket for the opera "La Traviata" Tuesday is asked to send it to the Music Department, 102 Music Building.

Students in the music 272 class taught by Walter Hodgson, professor of music, need the tickets. Hodgson has requested his class to attend the opera. Tickets for the opera, however, have been sold out.

His career came to a tragic end when he was fatally injured in an automobile accident in France about eight months after the war ended in Europe.

Patton's son graduated from West Point and became a second lieutenant about five months after the general died.

Relay I To Contact Japan

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Space Agency said Tuesday Japan will be added to its world-wide communications satellite network with a one-way relay to the Pacific Ocean Friday.

This inaugural broadcast to the Far East will be between Mojave, Calif., and a station about 100 miles northeast of Tokyo via the Relay I satellite.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the experiment will be the first of a series planned between this Friday and Dec. 13.

NASA said the initial broadcast would consist of greetings from American officials to the Japanese people.

At the time of transmission

Relay I will be 4,000 miles above the Pacific and about half-way across. The Mojave station, NASA said, can send but not receive satellite transmissions and there are no plans to modify the station.

No Need For Wings, Eagle Has A Pilot

AUBURN, ALA. (AP)—War Eagle III, Auburn University's mascot, probably is the only bird in captivity with a private pilot.

The golden eagle, nicknamed Tiger, is flown to Auburn's out-of-town football games by his trainer, Elwyn Hamer, a licensed pilot.

Hamer is a junior and the assistant trainer, Bob Suther, Los Angeles sophomore, also is a licensed pilot, so War Eagle is assured of "wings" for the next three years at least.

Hamer, Lagrange, Ga., aeronautical administration student, has been working with the eagle for two years under supervision of his original trainer, Jon Bowden of Gulfport, Miss., who graduates in December.

Hamer flew the mascot to Jackson, Miss., for the Auburn-Mississippi State game Nov. 9 and to Athens, Ga., Saturday for the Auburn-Georgia game. He said War Eagle gives no trouble on the trips. "He settles down in the baggage department," Hamer added.

War Eagle is neither tied down nor hooded for the trips, although he possesses full length wings and claws. An Auburn merchant pays the bird's transportation costs.

The eagle has been in captivity since he was a fledgling. He weighs about 15 pounds and is 5 feet 6 from wing tip to wing tip.

"FOR PIZZA SAKE CALL"

FOR THE FINEST ITALIAN FOOD DELIVERY EVERY DAY

This Week's Play

Offense Must Keep Moving

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of State basketball plays prepared for the News by Basketball Coach Fordy Anderson.

The diagram shows a basic offensive play which, if worked correctly, will give any of the five players a shot at the basket and will create a "rebound triangle" while the remaining two players are safety men, should the opposing team get the rebound.

The play requires good passing and continuous motion by all five players. It gives the offensive team many possible scoring chances.

One of the most effective would be when four fakes and then cuts toward the basket, as six stands in the way of the defending players to create an open path for four. Two passes the ball to four and moves in for a rebound. Four then has a good shot as he is directly under the basket.

Should he miss and the offensive team get the rebound, as a result of their "rebound triangle," another play can be set up by passing the ball and keeping in continuous motion.

Should he miss and the defensive teams get the rebound, the players are ready to set up a defense.

Illini Opportunistic

'S' Can't Make Mistakes

There are many ways the Spartans can try to beat Illinois Saturday, but there's one thing they can't do...they can't make mistakes.

This point was emphasized time and time again at the weekly MSU football writers' luncheon at Kellogg Center Tuesday afternoon.

"You can't make mistakes and beat Illinois," said coach Duffy

Daugherty. "Illinois has all the ingredients of a great team--a good defense, fast backs, and more power runners than any team we've played."

Daugherty wasn't the only man at the table with that opinion. Wally Weber, former assistant coach at the University of Michigan, had a similar warning for the Illini and Spartans.

"Mistakes, more than anything else, will determine the winner of Saturday's game," he said. "They'll prove to be more important than any strategy either team can devise."

Weber spoke with authority. It was a fumble recovery in mid-air which helped the Wolverines score a touchdown against Illinois two weeks ago, giving the Illini their only loss of the season.

Illinois sports information director Charles Bellatti reminded the writers that the ability to cash in on opponents' errors has, indeed, been one of the major reasons for the Illini success story.

"Illinois is an opportunistic club with a good defense," he said. "Last Saturday they crossed mid-field only once under their own power. All the other times, they got the ball on Wisconsin mistakes."

MSU fans should be encouraged by the fact that Mike Currie is coming along better than expected and his knee may be in playing shape by Saturday.

"The injury isn't as bad as it appeared at first," Daugherty said. "Players sometimes get well when they're anxious to get well."

Once again the Spartan coach reminded the writers of his feelings toward the Big Ten championship.

"To me it's greater to win the championship than go to the Rose Bowl," he said. "The conference championship should carry more weight than going to the Bowl. If we win the Big Ten, it wouldn't matter to me whether we were picked or not for the Rose Bowl."

Daugherty announced that the Spartan first unit line will start Saturday afternoon. The line includes tackles Dave Herman and Rahn Bentley, guards John Karpinski and Earl Lattimer, and end Tom Krzemiencki.

Buddy Owens will be at offensive center substituting for the ailing Don Ross, with Harold Lucas taking over the center slot on defense.

If the Spartans kick off, Ed Lothamer will be at end, but Matt Snorton will get the call if MSU receives.

Daugherty said the Spartans will just concentrate on mastering the game plan during this week's practice sessions.

He said he feels it's too late to stress techniques and that now it's just a matter of informing the team of Illini weaknesses and strengths.

The Spartans underwent their usually heavy Tuesday practice yesterday afternoon.

Tuesday and Wednesday practices are always the most rigorous of the week. The team tapers off and works in sweat clothes on Thursday.

The surest statement at Tuesday's luncheon was voiced by Daugherty in his early remarks.

In speaking of Saturday's game, he said, "It'll be a real dog-fight right down to the wire."

Hoop Plans Jumbled; Berry To Miss Opener

BILL BERRY

Coach Fordy Anderson's basketball plans received a harsh setback Tuesday morning when it was announced that Bill Berry will probably miss the opening game of the season.

Berry, who injured his ankle during practice Monday evening, figured predominately in Anderson's starting lineup plans.

The 21-year old senior's injury was described by team physician Dr. James Feurig as a "severe sprain of the left ankle."

Feurig said that Berry would be able to do some "heel and toe" running, but noted that it would be 10-14 days before Berry would be able to do any jumping.

The Spartans open their season against Northern Michigan a week from Saturday.

Winter Skies Cause Soccer Time Change

Kickoff time for the NCAA Soccer playoff game between Michigan State and St. Louis University slated for Friday on the Spartan's field has been changed to 2:45 p.m.

The game, originally scheduled for 3 p.m., was pushed up to allow extra minutes for an overtime should there be a tie at the end of regulation play.

Olin Seeks Answer To Impoliteness

One student learned that his opinion does mean something. The students wrote to the State News recently and complained about the way a receptionist at Olin treated a co-ed. The letter came to the attention of Dr. James S. Feurig, health service director.

Feurig contacted the student and asked for his help in identifying the receptionist. "We are definitely interested in the performance of our people," Feurig said.

He said the incident will be discussed with the person responsible in an effort to correct the situation.

Feurig said he took exception to the last paragraph of the letter, in which the student said, "It is serious that the administrative body of Olin is unable to discharge such undesirable help as this."

People have been fired at Olin, Feurig said, but only if they habitually violated the rules or were consistently inefficient in their work.

Suspend Tutoring Until Winter Term

Tutoring services for students will be discontinued Thursday for the remainder of the term. A centralized tutoring program with an office in Student Services was initiated early this term by Omicron Delta Kappa, junior-senior men's and faculty honorary. Tutoring has been provided by Green Helmet, Alpha Lambda Delta, Phi Eta Sigma and Tower Guard, all freshmen or sophomore honoraries.

Tutoring will definitely be resumed next term, according to Stephen Hartgen, president of Green Helmet. He said the only reason it is being discontinued for the rest of this term is that the student tutors have to study for finals.

WMSB-TV

provide video-tapes for three other stations in Illinois, California and Washington.

The Illinois station will provide their own announcers, but WKAR will furnish the audio portions for the other stations. WKAR would also provide the local audio coverage should WMSB televise the game, WZM, Grand Rapids, will probably carry the WMSB game coverage if the University station televises the contest.

The University of Illinois has already arranged for a closed-circuit telecast of the game. The University's assembly hall will be equipped with four large screens to let those who are in Champaign-Urbana watch the game. The university will charge students $1 and non-students $2 for viewing privileges.

Over 2,000 tickets for the closed-circuit show were sold Tuesday evening on the Illinois campus.

The fifth player will be announced at a later date. "The purpose of the contest is to arouse more spirit to back the Spartans this weekend and to give five lucky girls a date with members of the team," according to a WBRB spokesman.

Students often ask doctors in Olin for excuses to explain that classes were missed because of some ailment, Feurig said. However, Olin is authorized to issue class absence excuses only to those students who have been hospitalized in the Center, he said.

Health

for ambulance service unless the need arises from injuries sustained through classroom work, participation in scheduled intramural sports events or university employment.

The only exception is a case in which a temporary infirmity prevents participation in physical education classes, Feurig said.

Student emergencies and injuries usually go to Olin. However, students injured off-campus, for example in a car accident, are usually taken to a Lansing hospital by ambulance and transferred to Olin when their condition justifies it, Feurig added.

The decision of where to take an emergency case is usually left up to the department of public safety, which picks up most on-campus student emergencies, and occasionally, those involving non-students.

Feurig described the handling of non-student emergencies on campus by using the spectators at Spartan football games as an example.

He said about one to three coronaries per game are reported. These have been handled by Lansing ambulances and such patients sent to Lansing hospitals. The same thing stands for the fractures and other mishaps that spectators may have, he added.

Feurig, in 1961, said that a big aim of the staff is to curtail the "junk stuff." He coined the phrase to describe students trying to escape the "nervous" dormitory conditions or the group of normal, healthy students who seek medical excuses because for some reason they feel the need to drive cars from class to class each day.
