MSU Key Tamperers Suspended— Six Lock-Breakers Accused

Plot Is Doubted In Assassination

It is doubtful that the assassination of President John F. Kennedy was the result of a conspiracy, Tony Ripley, Detroit News reporter, told the MSU Men's Club Tuesday in the Union Parlors.

"Each time I tried to hunt down a plot I had to personally dismiss the possibility," said Ripley, who was in Dallas following the death of the late President.

Ripley said that investigation into the life of Oswald revealed no significant conclusions that he had plotted to kill President Kennedy for a long time.

"If there had been a last-minute change in the route of the President's car, I don't think Oswald would have killed anybody."

In history books, Oswald will be referred to as a "fanatic," Ripley said. Reading what he termed would be a likely historical account of the week-end of Nov. 22, Ripley said that Kennedy's death had no crucial relation to the Cold War.

"Other than having a Russian wife and attempting to renounce U.S. citizenship, Oswald's personal life had no direct connection with the Cold War."

Aide Quits To Write Of JFK

WASHINGTON (AP)—Historian Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., has resigned his job as a special White House adviser effective March 1 in order to write a book about President John F. Kennedy.

President Johnson, in a letter dated and made public Tuesday accepted the resignation "with much regret."

"The academic world will be richer for your return, but the White House will not be quite the same. . . ." Johnson said. "We shall miss the fresh insights of your scholarship and the liberality of your spirit."

Schlesinger, 46, a Pulitzer Prize winning author and former Harvard professor, thus becomes the second key Kennedy aide to step out of the Johnson administration with a similar objective in mind.

Theodore C. Sorensen, perhaps the closest of Kennedy's assistants, also recently resigned effective at the end of February to write a book about Kennedy.

Asst. White House Press Secretary Andrew Hatcher said Schlesinger's planned book would be on "The Kennedy Years."

Doctors Pick Lansing Site

Osteopathic School To Include Hospital

Lansing is the site for a new $30 to $40 million university of osteopathic medicine.

The new Michigan University of Osteopathic Medicine will be built at Holt and College Roads, about three miles south of the MSU campus.

Dr. Allan Potts of Royal Oak, chairman of the site selection committee for the Michigan Osteopathic Association, made the announcement late Tuesday morning. The committee spent more than a year finding the site for the university-hospital facility.

Plans now call for a 400 to 600 bed hospital with classroom and teaching facilities. It is expected to employ more than 2,000 persons and have an annual payroll of more than $10 million.

Speaking from the MSU standpoint, William H. Knisely, director of the institute of biology and medicine indicated the osteopathic facility will have no immediate effect on MSU as seen at this time.

"All indications are that there are unmet medical needs in this part of the state," he said.

Knisely did not rule out the possibility that the new university-hospital would meet those needs. He did not comment on whether it would have any effect on MSU's chances of getting a four-year medical school in less time than President John A. Hannah's prediction of 15 to 20 years.

"As far as I am concerned, MSU will be offering training in medical education to anyone at the post graduate level," Knisely added. "Our seminars will be open to anyone who wants to attend."

He indicated there is little chance that the osteopathic school will be directly associated with MSU's two-year institute of biology and medicine.

Plot Began As 'Game' In Dorms

Algebra Helps Make Masters

What started as an intellectual amusement during fall term, 1962 ended with suspensions for three MSU students recently, the State News learned Tuesday.

A ring of six men's hall residents were charged with tampering with campus locks and breaking into several classroom and dormitory buildings.

The students decided that the University security system presented a challenge. They set out to "crack" the lock system through the use of algebra and ingenuity.

After taking a lock off an incinerator, they tore it down and studied its components. They then figured out its basic makeup and how to apply it to other locks on campus.

After getting their calculations figured, they began to make "master" keys which will open any lock in a system and "corporate" keys which will lift out complete lock assemblies.

They succeeded in making master keys to 10 campus buildings, including the Administration Building, Student Services, Berkey Hall, Olin Health Center, Bessey Hall, and married housing apartment. They could get into the front doors of these buildings, as well as into office doors and files.

The students did not use their master keys to gain access to student records or examination papers, indicated John A. Fuzak, dean of students.

One of the students boasted that he planned to make keys and sell them to other students. However, Fuzak doubts if he even carried out the plan.

The gang's activities first came to light last spring when a dormitory manager discovered two of the ringleaders. They said they would take responsibility to turn in all counterfeit keys and signed a statement saying that they would have nothing more to do with the operation.

It was decided that the affair would be treated as a prank if the students would turn over their

SEC Impresses Romney, Will Urge Similar Programs

By JACKIE KORONA State News Staff Writer

Governor George Romney will encourage all public and private colleges and universities throughout Michigan to initiate volunteer teaching programs similar to the MSU Student Education Corps (SEC).

Romney met Tuesday with David Gottlieb, associate professor of sociology and education and SEC director, to discuss the MSU program.

Tentative plans call for a meeting of representatives from all the state's institutions of higher learning, including community colleges, in mid-March on the MSU campus.

At the meeting Gottlieb will outline the activities of the Corps to date. Students involved in SEC will explain their activities.

The governor is expected to urge the college representatives to weigh the possibilities of beginning programs similar to SEC at their own schools.

Walter DeVries, Romney's administrative agency coordinator, said the governor is "very enthusiastic" about the MSU program.

"The governor is interested in volunteer movements to help people," DeVries said.

"The idea of students working on this type of program without academic credit or pay is truly remarkable to us in the face of the proposed domestic peace corps."

The domestic corps, proposed by the late President Kennedy would be similar to the already existing peace corps, but would operate in the United States.

DeVries said the governor feels volunteer work should be purely voluntary, without inducements such as salary.

"Romney also supports the SEC because we think the program may be truly effective in getting to the cause of school dropouts," DeVries said.

Many of the programs established to study school dropouts get at the effect rather than the cause, he said.

The governor is especially impressed, DeVries said, because SEC is aimed at the students before they drop out of school.

At Tuesday's meeting with Romney, Gottlieb presented complete outlines of SEC. Included were an evaluation of the program, a breakdown of the number of students working with the corps and details of finances involved.

The advertising department is looking for salesmen, salesgirls, clerical workers, artists and people interested in obtaining practical experience in the field of advertising.

Shaw Asks Change In Dress Rule

West Shaw's general council Monday night passed a motion mandating Robert Milne, Standish senior and West Shaw president, to vote in favor of a change in dress regulations.

The council voted to seek a change to spring term regulations on a year-round basis. However, bermudas and tennis shoes would not be allowed.

A similar proposal by Emmons Hall was defeated by Men's Halls Association last week. At that time nine of the 11 presidents of men's dormitories voted against the change.

James Hardee, Detroit sophomore, presented the proposal to the West Shaw council. A substitute motion to change dress regulations on Friday nights only was defeated.

Name MSU Prof In Baker Probe

The name of Walter Adams, MSU professor of economics, was mentioned in testimony before the Senate Rules Committee Tuesday as a former stockholder in one of the firms in which Bobby Baker is reported to have made a substantial profit.

It was emphasized that Adams' purchase and sale of stock in the Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Corp. of Milwaukee was strictly legal.

Adams told a State News reporter he bought $2,000 worth of stock in the company in August 1959 on a tip. In February, 1960 he sold the stock to Baker, a Senate aide at the time, for $4,000, or a profit of $2,000.

He said that at the time Baker's offer seemed like a good deal.

"My only regret now is that I sold the stock prematurely," Adams said. "The stock made its phenomenal rise after I sold out."

Adams said he met Baker while in Washington to appear before a Senate committee.

The rise to which Adams referred netted Baker a profit estimated at $75,000.

Report Plane Shot Down In Germany

WIESBADEN, Germany (AP)—A U.S. jet trainer plane with three officers aboard was reported missing Tuesday night and a U.S. official in Bonn said he had a report an Air Force plane had been shot down over Communist East Germany.

A U.S. Air Force spokesman in Wiesbaden said the plane would have had no business over East Germany and its crew had reported nothing unusual.

The spokesman said there had been several confusing reports, including one that a West German plane had been shot down over Erfurt, in East Germany about 150 miles southwest of Berlin. There was no confirmation of this report in Bonn.

The U.S. official in Bonn said he had no more precise information on the report a U.S. Air Force plane had been shot down.

France, Red China Clash Over Two-China Concept

PARIS (AP)—France and Red China engaged in a dispute Tuesday over the two-Chinas question a day after they agreed to establish diplomatic relations.

France proclaimed its intention to maintain relations with the regime of President Chiang Kai-Shek despite a statement by Red China's foreign ministry in effect demanding that Paris break with the Chinese Nationalists.

The Peking government denounced the two-Chinas concept, and asserted that Monday's agreement to establish diplomatic relations with France was reached on the understanding that France would expel the representatives of the "old ruling group."

A French official spokesman countered that this may have been Peking's understanding, but not that of France. The spokesman said France is standing on the text of the brief communique. It simply said that France and Red China had agreed to establish diplomatic relations and would designate their respective ambassadors within three months.

The French spokesman said France was merely recognizing the regime which effectively governs Mainland China—the Communists—and still recognizes the government which effectively controls Formosa—Chiang's Nationalists. This is the two-Chinas policy.

The spokesman said Red China's interpretation of the exchange of diplomatic representations was Peking's own business and had no bearing on the position of France. He insisted the agreement was reached without any Red Chinese conditions and without strings.

Peking broadcasts blamed "U.S. imperialists" for the two-Chinas concept, claimed French recognition had further isolated "U.S. imperialism" but firmly

Missionaries Ask UN Aid

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (AP)—American Protestant missionaries Tuesday appealed to the United Nations to send helicopters to three mission stations in Kwilu province where at least 18 persons have been signaling for help since last week.

"We have been begging them at least 20 times a day since last Friday but they don't do anything," said a distraught American woman missionary.

Later Tuesday a U.N. military officer said the world organization's four helicopters should reach the missions this afternoon.

Kennedy, U Thant Discuss Malaysia

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and U.N. Secretary-General U Thant Tuesday discussed the possibility of the United Nations taking a hand in the dispute over Malaysia.

Kennedy said he came to the U.N. at the request of Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines to report to Thant on his talks with those governments on the Indonesia-Malaysian cease fire agreement, to take effect late this month, and on an Indonesian-Malaysian-Philippine foreign ministers conference to be held early in February.

Viet Nam Situation Encouraging

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said Tuesday the military picture in Viet Nam has noticeably improved recently after many successes scored by the Communist Viet Cong in November and December.

Full Of Promise And Risk

MUS's leadership in the field of residence hall efficiency and innovation will be put in a delicate position next fall with the institution of the recently announced "college within a college" plan for combining specialized study with dormitory living.

If the plan, by which entire co-ed dorms will be occupied by students with similar majors who are taking advanced subjects in the dorms, is successful, it may herald the start of a new era in campus life, here and at other colleges.

On the other hand, there is a definite danger in the grouping of too many people with the same interests and the same talents in one area. That is, that they may become clique-ish, and, worse, yet, too narrow in their conception of the University, and of the people who comprise it.

There is no way to know what the results of this daring and original scheme will be. It is quite possible that as is hoped, the specialized study and the college-coordinated activities that are planned for the dorms, as well as the mere fact of living with people who can help out in major subject areas and interests, will lead to a more concentrated atmosphere of work and achievement.

Next year will tell, but the plan is replete with dangers that must be considered before an evaluation can be made.

Aid Needed To Halt Library Thefts

By DENISE BELCHER
State News Staff Writer

A female student, caught cutting pages from a book in the campus library, whimpered that her boyfriend dared her to do it. Very frightened about her predicament and embarrassed to be caught, she now will treat library books with respect.

But how about the students who don't get caught? They are in the majority.

Lt. Allen Andrews, chief of uniformed services for the campus police force, said there have been only nine reports of theft or destruction of books since 1961. Three of the cases remain unsolved, he said, but those responsible for the other six reports were caught.

Five were referred to the office of the dean of students, while one went before the East Lansing Police Department, where he was prosecuted. He received eight days in jail, a $10 fine and was required to pay court costs.

The nine cases reported amounted to a total value of $115 stolen. While it is a common belief that it is immoral to "rat" on a fellow student, this is about the only way violators of books can be found out and stopped. And it is to the advantage of the informer to halt one more person from the destruction or theft of a book or article he may one term be required to read.

"Anybody who remains silent about a case like this is in part responsible," said Mrs. Beryl Levine, head of the Humanities Department.

Who is responsible for theft and mutilation of the books?

While it is impossible to know who most of the offenders are, it is relatively certain they are not all undergraduate students. Henry Koch, assistant librarian, said that the material in some of the books which have been mutilated or are missing is that ordinarily read by graduate students or instructors.

There are also off-campus persons authorized to use the library facilities, so no sure guilt can be placed on any particular of overdue books. Approximately 2,100 overdue notices are sent out from the main circulation desk each term, for a circulation of about 70,000 during the same time period. This does not include reserved reading in the various sections.

Books held out longer than time permits are not exclusive with undergraduate students, either.

While instructors are permitted more privileges than the student body, being allowed to keep a book as long as desired unless there is a special request for it, they sometimes abuse this right.

"Instructors and professors, only a few, I think, have a habit of taking things, and it's difficult to get them back," said William Stoddard, head of the social science division.

Mr. Stoddard added that students can be held up from getting their diplomas if their book fines are not paid or books returned.

"This we can't do with the faculty," he said.

theft or mutilation of books is that segment of those who use the library. A problem almost as large as

No Bias Accepted In Ads

The State News does not accept advertising from persons who discriminate on the basis of race, color or nationality.

Unfortunately, an advertisement, appeared in the 1963 Welcome Week edition which gave the impression that the State News does permit such discrimination in its classified columns.

Clarification of how the ad appeared in print is necessary since its stipulation, "white only," was called again to the attention of the staff last week.

The discriminatory advertisement was taken during summer term by a new employee of the advertising department who was unfamiliar with the policy of the State News regarding such notices. The words "white only" got as far as the printer before they came to the attention of the staff.

The printer was ordered to drop the advertisement from the newspaper. When the edition was published, the offensive ad appeared.

How the advertisement came out in print, we do not know. Perhaps it was dropped on the floor of the printer's office and inserted by someone who thought it belonged in the newspaper.

Whatever the cause of its publication, the advertisement did not appear with the consent of the staff. The State News, under no conditions, receives advertising from persons who discriminate on the basis of race, color or national origin.

End The One China Policy

After some 15 years of solidarity among western nations in opposing the Chinese Communist regime, a slight crack has appeared in the armor. France, under the headstrong leadership of Charles DeGaulle, has announced formal recognition of Mao Tse Tung's government, amid howls of unfair play from the United States.

As it has in the past, the U.S. government has remained strongly opposed to any admission that Red China exists, preferring to keep its collective head buried in the sand. The State Department, calling DeGaulle's move "unwise," said that it is "an unfortunate step, particularly at a time when the Chinese Communists are actively promoting aggression and subversion in Southeast Asia and elsewhere."

This is isolationism of the worst sort. We could just as easily say that we don't recognize snow in the winter and won't clear it off the streets because we don't know it's there. Closing our eyes won't make the snow go away, and that won't keep people from falling on it. Telling ourselves that the Red Chinese are no real threat and don't deserve recognition as a nation can only make the inevitable adjustment more difficult later on when they have become even stronger and even more dangerous than they are now.

It is too early to tell whether France's move will lead to a wave of recognitions by other nations, but France's action is bound to mark a significant turning point in attitudes toward the Red regime.

American refusal to face the facts of political life can not in any way help our diplomatic position. The one-China policy should be discontinued, at whatever loss of face may be necessary, without any further hesitation.

Ramadan Attests To Role Of Body As Man's Servant

Editor's Note: Fauzi M. Najjar, associate professor of social science, explains here the significance of the holy month of Ramadan. He is a member of the Arab Club.

More than 400 million Muslims all over the world join together this month in one of the most trying of human experiences, the fasting of the holy month of Ramadan. It was in Ramadan, the 9th month of the Muslim (Lunar) year that the Koran (Holy Book of Islam) began to be revealed to the Prophet Muhammad through the Archangel Gabriel.

The fast begins with the break of dawn and lasts until sunset. Eat and drink until it appears that a white thread may be distinguished from a black, then keep the fast strictly until nightfall. During this time nothing should pass through the throat. The Believer is enjoined to abstain from food, drink, tobacco, perfumes and sex. The observance is binding upon all adult Muslims of both sexes, with special dispensations for the aged, pregnant women, nursing mothers and travelers.

Though Ramadan seems to have been a holy month among the Arabs prior to Islam, its designation as a month of fasting (Saum) derives from the example of ascetic discipline among the "People of the Book," and the fast of the Day of Atonement. This does not mean that Islam enjoins asceticism!

On the contrary, Islam regards asceticism as an error and disavows "monkery." Muslims should in moderation and with gratitude avail themselves of God's gifts and satisfy the reasonable desires and needs of the body. No one is allowed to go to the length of neglecting his worldly duties for the sake of religious exercises.

But the error of asceticism does not reduce the priority of the soul; Ramadan sufficiently demonstrates that. Mortification of the body is not a condition of spirituality and the ordinance to observe the fast was intended to remind the Believers that the body is the servant not the master of man. Islam looks upon Ramadan as a fine school of patience and endurance as well as an occasion for renewal, rededication and discipline.

In modern times, political leaders and liberal Muslim theologians have tried to reconcile the strict demands of the faith with the pressing demands of the secular state. Habib Bourguiba, the President of Tunisia, created great controversy when he advised his government employees not to fast lest observance interfere with the task of building up the nation.

Ramadan is more than an exercise in Taqwa (spiritual discipline). It is an ethical and a social institution. Mere abstention from the pleasures of the body is only a physical fulfillment of the obligation.

Red Cedar Report

Disregard those reports that say MSU spends as much on football as the federal government does on defense. That's ridiculous. It spends three times as much. It's grounds and maintenance that equals the defense allotment.

Have you heard about the latest dance craze? It's called the "Scratch." True, it doesn't look too impressive, but it sure does feel good.

Students now taking Humanities 242 are studying about the universities of the Middle Ages. It seems that our counterparts of years ago also wrote home for money, staged riots and took part in other "activities." In fact, the only difference between them and us seems to be co-ed dorms.

We've heard of one mechanic who designed a sports car to beat anything on the road, especially Cobras. Naturally he named it the "Mongoose."

Why is that on the coldest day of the year, the temperature being at least -10°, one has an eight o'clock on the opposite end of the campus?

Abrams Planetarium will open in a few weeks. Its purpose is to acquaint students with astronomical numbers other than those found in their housing and tuition payments.

Education Group To State Goals

Bob Kerr, AUSG president along with Edwin Sasaki, executive director of the blue ribbon Student's Committee on Higher Education and Michael Hannah, Grand Rapids freshman will explain the committee's purposes at 4 p.m. Thursday in 326 Student Services Bldg.

Hannah said there is presently a proposal to give academic credit to those who contribute to the committee.

If MSU fails to contribute to the committee, it will endanger the work of students in Michigan's other institutes of higher learning who wish to make the committee a success, he said.

The committee's main function is to prepare a report to be submitted to the blue ribbon Citizens' Committee on Higher Education, Hannah said.

The citizen's committee was established by Gov. George Romney for the purpose of improving higher education in Michigan.

The student committee will be organized on much the same lines as those which Romney suggested for the citizen's committee, Hannah said.

Eight sub-committees will be formed, he said, each consisting of members from Michigan's various colleges and universities. Each will have charge of one specific area of higher education.

One MSU student will also be chosen to a steering committee and will be expected to travel to other schools, Hannah said. Travel expenses will be paid. The steering committee's functions will be to coordinate the sub-committees and compile their reports into one main report.

The president of the citizen's committee has already said that this report will be used in the final report submitted to Romney.

Fly To Gather Underground Lore

What's Under Great Lakes?

MSU geologists will fly some 35,000 miles this spring and summer to solve the mystery of what's under the Great Lakes. They will make continuous measurements of the earth's magnetic field as they shuttle 154 times at six-mile intervals across Lakes Michigan, Superior and Huron.

What they learn about the underground structure will be of great value to anyone interested in tapping the oil and other valuable minerals believed to be hidden under Michigan -- perhaps under the lakes themselves.

The project, supported by a $44,000 grant from the National Science Foundation, is under the direction of Drs. William J. Hinze and James W. Trow of the MSU geology department. Actual field studies and much of the analysis will be carried out by Norbert W. O'Hara, a doctoral degree candidate.

The MSU researchers will be looking for irregularities in the earth's magnetic field. Each irregularity offers a clue to the structure and composition of the basic (Pre-Cambrian) bedrock. This knowledge, in turn, can be used to locate mineral wealth. Geologists already know a great deal about formations on the Canadian side of the lakes. There, a number of outcroppings of bedrock can be clearly seen.

In the Lower Peninsula of Michigan, however, the bedrock is completely covered by a thick -- 14,000-foot-or-more -- covering of sediment and Ice-Age debris.

During the past three years, Michigan State crews under the direction of Dr. Hinze have canvassed the entire Lower Peninsula, making land-based magnetic and gravitational measures. However, MSU geologists have not been able to match what they learned with what they know about the Canadian formations because they do not have information for the intervening lakes.

Now, the researchers plan to gain magnetic data on the lakes, incorporate it with similar data on Michigan, and interpret it all in light of what they already know about magnetic irregularities in the Canadian formations.

The fieldwork -- the actual flying -- will be started in April and completed in July, according to plans.

Analysis and mapping will take a longer time and will require use of MSU's new 3600 computer. Also, it may be necessary to repeat some measurements to eliminate erroneous readings caused by magnetic storms.

The researchers hope to have their report completed by the end of 1965.

Go-It-Alone President

De Gaulle Presents Enigma

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG
UPI Paris Correspondent

Historians of the future may have difficulty unraveling the puzzle of Charles De Gaulle.

Here, they'll say, was a man who couldn't be pushed... a man who wouldn't take good advice... a man who cut away from his friends and took up with their enemy.

The go-it-alone president of France never seems to worry about what other people or other nations, think of his actions. His official recognition of Communist China was a prime example. De Gaulle was not swayed by the entreaties of his allies and not bothered by strong U.S. objections or angry threats by Nationalist China.

The big question about the 73-year-old De Gaulle is "why?" Why would he take a step that could alter the whole balance of power in Asia... even lead to the day when Red China might control all of the Asian world?

It's believed he now, after establishing diplomatic relations with Peking, may support Communist China for membership in the United Nations. This could in turn touch off a grain reaction among African and Asian states that would railroad Peking into the U.N. seat. And then what happens to Nationalist China and U.S. policies in the Far East?

De Gaulle has acted with cold, hard realism. He believes he stands to gain by recognition of Red China for several reasons. For one, the existence of a nation of 650-million people, the largest in the world, cannot simply be ignored indefinitely. And China offers prospects of vast markets for French industrial exports for the next 50 years.

De Gaulle thinks France is in the best position of all Western nations to pull her former Indo-China possession out of the East-West cold war and to neutralize them. But he believes this cannot be done without China's agreement.

And he believes France can show her allies there are alternatives to Washington's cold war policies.

West Shaw Quizzes Kerr On AUSG Value

By HUGH LEACH
State News Staff Writer

What began as an informative discussion about All-University Student Government at West Shaw Hall Monday night developed into an attack on AUSG and its President, Bob Kerr.

Kerr and Congress Speaker Bob Hencken were invited to speak before the West Shaw General Council and interested students who wished to attend. West Shaw President Bob Milne said the meeting was held because students must realize that "AUSG concerns you."

Kerr was asked if he made a statement when he was running for election that if he could accomplish nothing, he would resign. He first admitted making the statement, then said his actual statement was that if AUSG could do nothing, he would move to abolish it.

Asked what he had done, he said, "Materially nothing, but have gotten a lot of promises from the administration."

He also said he thought AUSG was accomplishing something.

It was charged that Kerr lacked power in governing students. He replied that his main function was to try to get faculty and administration approval of resolutions passed by Student Congress.

Kerr explained that often the administrators "lean in the direction of least resistance."

Ask Clues In Possible Hit, Run

Campus police are still seeking information about a possible hit and run accident which occurred behind Williams Dormitory at 1:05 a.m. Sunday.

John Matzke, Birch Run, was hit by a light blue '55 or '56 Chevrolet and pinned against a parked car. He received a knee injury.

The driver of the car stopped at the scene of the accident but apparently gave a false identification.

He was described as a 5'9" male, weighing about 150 pounds, with brown hair and thick glasses.

Keys

keys and not make any more. Three members did turn in their keys and the dean indicated they had nothing more to do with it.

During fall term irregularities concerning persons opening doors and being in unauthorized areas were discovered. Dean Fuzak called for a full investigation by the Campus Police.

It turned out that the ring-leaders and another member had not turned in all their keys, Fuzak said. All three were given a hearing and suspended for a year. Two are now attending another college.

University Secretary Jack Breslin, who has charge of University security, figures the cost of the student's "ingenuity" will run into the thousands. A $3,000 figure has been set as the initial cost for changing locks and tumbler systems.

The question that comes to mind is if any good came out of the incident. Officials indicated that University office and classroom buildings will no longer have the same lock systems as those used in the dormitories. Stricter security measures have been put into effect.

He said the administrators usually act if they think student support of a resolution is high enough, but, if they do not think they will be pushed, they refuse to take action.

Kerr also said he thought a major problem was the lack of communication with Congress by the administration.

In response to a question, Hencken said the main problem with All-University Student Judiciary is that its function is to represent students in enforcing University rules, which are made by administrators.

He said the Congress really knows little about judiciary activities because it operates in closed sessions.

"How can we recommend changes when we don't know anything about it?" he asked.

One of the men said he thought AUSG had "missed the boat" by not doing more to educate the students as to its activities.

Neither Kerr nor Hencken had to answer this one. Another Shaw resident offered the defense that nobody has made a better suggestion, and until somebody does, AUSG should be left alone.

Nixon Boosted

CONCORD, N.H. --Richard M. Nixon picked up new support in the New Hampshire Presidential primary Tuesday and still another candidate -- Harold E. Stassen -- leaped into the fray.

Nixon's support came from former Gov. Wesley Powell, who announced he is withdrawing his own name and will support a write-in campaign for Nixon in the March 10 primary, the nation's first.

Lenin Created Soviet, World Communism

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov Lenin created the Soviet Union. This is what Alfred Meyer, professor of political science, said of Lenin forty-one years after the Marxist leader's death, Jan. 21, 1923. "He was the most influential man of the first half of the 20th century, the creator of the U.S.S.R. and of the world-wide Communist movement," Meyer said. "But any attempt to briefly and generally describe the man and his influence will be ambiguous and may get one in 'hot water.'" Paul Thompson, associate professor of economics, attributes some of Lenin's power and influence after the Revolution of 1917 to his theory of party organization. As early as 1901 Lenin urged a strong, centralized party, a core group, that would be in charge of the socialist revolution. In 1903 at the second party congress for the Social Democrats, the party split into a Bolshevik group that supported Lenin's interpretation of leadership of the proletariat as seizure of power by the party, and a Menshevik group that favored permitting revolutionary leadership through the bourgeoisie. "Lenin organized a small section, a party he controlled absolutely, and then refused to compromise," Thompson said. "His ideal was that one man should control the party and the party should control the state. He created a party machine that could ride out a revolution." After the execution of his brother Aleksandr in 1879 for plotting to assassinate Czar Alexander III, Lenin joined the underground movement. By 1893 he was an authority on Marxism. His early writings reveal Utopian outlook. Eight months before the revolution that gave him his opportunity for power, however, Lenin wrote from exile in Switzerland, "I guess I will never see a successful revolution." "When he did come to power, he came terribly fast. His life had been a preparation for the event, but in many ways he was still caught unprepared," Meyer said.

"Why Lenin appealed as the leader is a complex question," he continued. "Lenin was undoubtedly a leader of extraordinary capabilities, a man who created a bureaucracy but who was more than an ordinary bureaucrat." "There were other rival leaders equal to his strength but they just did not succeed. We are still left with the question: If Lenin had not appeared, would someone else have done the same thing?" During the stormy years that followed the Revolution of 1917 Lenin did modify his Utopian views for the world-wide socialist revolution to fit changing economic conditions. At first he established severe control through the military and taxation to keep himself and the Bolsheviks in power. He placed the nation on a communistic economy.

Although people who opposed his views never suffered under a purge, Lenin did attempt to suppress opposition, Thompson said. When Lenin died at the age of 54 in 1923, Stalin succeeded to power. Whether or not he carried out the letter and spirit of Lenin's policies, it was Lenin's system of party structure, policies, plans, and instructions over which he assumed command.

Stuttman Awarded For Heroism

Len Stuttman, Lansing television and film producer, has been awarded a bronze medal and $750 by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for an act of heroism.

Stuttman, 36, the producer of a weekly TV show in Lansing and Chicago, "The Many Worlds of Len Stuttman," saved locomotive engineer from suffocation on the Grand Trunk railroad last April 18, just outside Charlotte.

Arnold W. Silver, the engineer, was trapped in the locomotive when it derailed and hit a steel truck. Stuttman crawled over the top of the locomotive, broke the glass window and freed Silver. He also attempted to rescue a fireman but was driven back by smoke.

Operators Need Revised Numbers

Students who have moved this term are asked to notify the campus telephone operator for correct listings.

Off-campus students should call the campus operator at 355-1855, on-campus students may dial "00."

To Close More Bases

WASHINGTON, 4--Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara reported Tuesday that a new round of military base closings is expected before the end of March. But he said it will be of less magnitude and will involve smaller installations than the closings announced last month.

He told a news conference that "every base we have is in jeopardy in the sense that we don't plan to retain a single one" not required for military purposes. McNamara said he will continue to review the need for every installation.

He recalled that he already has said he believes there is excess capacity in the present system of 11 navy yards, but added he has not yet decided which ones are in excess.

Cyprus May Need US Arms

LONDON 4--American and British diplomats worked in a half dozen capitals Tuesday night to avoid an explosion on Cyprus. Signs mounted that U.S. troops may soon be assigned to help keep the peace there.

Reports reaching London indicated both Greece and Turkey, Western allies estranged by their opposing views of the troubled island, have put their armed forces on alert status.

Diplomatic sources said Washington and London were concentrating their efforts on keeping everyone cool.

U.S. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, the North Atlantic Treaty

Organization's supreme commander in Europe, flew from Paris to Ankara for urgent talks with the Turks and arranged to go on to Athens today. Diplomatic consultations were also in progress in Paris and Nicosia, the Cypriot capital.

Two senior British ministers -- Foreign Secretary Richard A. Butler and Commonwealth Secretary Duncan Sandys -- struggled to keep alive the deadlocked Cyprus conference in London.

Turkish Foreign Minister Feridun Cemal Erkin said his government has decided to withdraw from the negotiations that opened here Jan. 15. He explained the decision was taken "in principle" and fixed no date for the walk-out. That left diplomats with the hope that the Turks may change their minds.

At the British government's request, Erkin conferred with Butler for 50 minutes and said he will see the British foreign secretary again Thursday.

"We are withdrawing in principle because the conference has failed so far," Erkin told reporters. "It has been unable to achieve its purpose."

Sandys talked with Cypriot Foreign Minister Syros Kyprianou, another leading conference figure. Sandys said "the situation is very serious now."

At stake is the future of the Mediterranean island, an old colony that Britain freed in 1960, where animosities between Greek and Turkish Cypriots broke out in bloody rioting last Christmas.

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home's cabinet met in emergency session. British military chiefs were brought into explain the way tightly stretched British forces are being deployed in Cyprus and in other trouble spots -- particularly East Africa and Malaysia.

The British expect President Johnson to appreciate that they are in a tight corner as far as manpower goes and to provide some American military help, diplomatic sources said.

There also are plans afoot to bring in contingents of West German, French, Italian and Canadian soldiers. Possibly each nation would provide 500 men.

A receptive mood was evident in Washington. U.S. officials said the United States is seriously considering sending a contingent of troops, but more information is needed before there is a final decision.

The duties of the contingents would be the same as those performed since the trouble at Christmas time by the 2,500 British soldiers on the island -- to keep the feuding Greek and Turkish Cypriots from fighting with each other.

At the Johnson administration's invitation, Lt. Gen. Sir Geoffrey Baker, vice chief of Britain's imperial general staff, has gone to Washington for planning discussions with Pentagon chiefs.

George Junne Thawing Out

"Did you get the picture, George?"

No, George Junne, chief photographer for the State News, was unable to produce a satisfactory photograph of "J HOP" painted in red on the ice of the Red Cedar River.

He had, however, every intention of carrying out the campus editor's orders when he left the State News office Monday night about 7 a.m.

Just behind Bessey Hall, a few members of the J Hop committee were beginning to give the river's covering of ice a painful job when Junne arrived.

The students had just completed the huge red letter "J" when Junne posed his Mamiya C3 for action. He stepped back to obtain a better angle, but the ice wasn't ready for him.

Junne likened the following incident to "standing there and having someone pull the floor out from under me."

The ice shattered and Junne went down, chest-deep into the freezing waters of the Red Cedar.

One of the students realized Junne's dilemma and offered the end of a shovel to his hand. After several attempts, this method proved unsuccessful for the hole in the ice continued to enlarge while Junne remained in it.

Finally, Junne was pulled to the surface by one of the students, after which he returned quickly home and took a hot bath.

While there was no official comment, news of Red China's statement spread a ripple of elation among Chinese Nationalist officials in Taipei, Formosa.

They felt it was a vindication of the Nationalists' restraint in holding off a break in relations with France. Earlier, Chu Fu-Sung, senior deputy minister of foreign affairs, told the Associated Press:

"The possibility of developments leading to severance of relations with France cannot be ruled out."

Presumably, this position still stands if the French ask the Nationalists to vacate the Chinese Embassy in Paris or sell oil from Algeria's Sahara to Red China's war machine.

Bad Reference

BURLINGTON, N. C. 4-- A clerk at the Burlington bus station hesitated when a man presented a check. "Any references?" the clerk asked. The customer said that Sheriff Arthur Jones could identify him.

The clerk telephoned the sheriff. The sheriff gathered up several papers and hurried to the bus station. The sheriff served three warrants he had been holding.

EDUCATING BY AIR-Two WMSB staffers are shown working on one of the station's many educational TV offerings. The channel will present a Shakespeare festival from April 18-22 to commemorate the Bard's 400th anniversary.

'Educational, Cultural'

WMSB Programs Lauded

WMSB, channel 10, the station which began broadcasting as WKAR-TV in June of 1951, now reaches 14 counties in south central Michigan and parts of 14 other counties in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.
 "WMSB is considered one of the finest educational and cultural stations in the United States," Neil Rosen, promotion supervisor, said.
 Former graduate students, now running the industry, worked part time at the station.

 Presently, no courses for credit are offered by the station.
 Last year a 39 week series of lectures by Harm de Blij, professor of geography, on "Sub-Saharan Africa," was presented.
 In the future, the station hopes to offer more courses, Rosen said.
 Programs coming up include a "Festival of Shakespeare" April 18-22 to commemorate the playwright's 400th anniversary.
 Six full length plays of Shakespeare as well as scenes from his major plays will be presented and discussed by authorities on Shakespeare.
 Discussions and reviews of the latest books on Shakespeare will also be included.

 Punch and Judy shows will be broadcast each morning in the Elizabethan tradition.
 Spring quarter full length comic operas such as "The Marriage of Figaro" dot the agenda.
 A drama festival including 12 plays by authors such as Ibsen and O'Henry will also be aired.

Hatch Aids School Study

Raymond N. Hatch, professor of education, is one of a 15-member committee in Minneapolis, Minn., this week to evaluate the University of Minnesota's school of education.
 The committee will be in Minneapolis until Thursday. It is representing the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.
 Hatch, also chairman of the department of guidance and personnel services, is heading a section of the committee charged with evaluating Minnesota's student personnel program.

Raynor Captures U-M Art Award

Louis E. Raynor, associate professor of art, has won the University of Michigan Artisans Award at the eighteenth annual Michigan Craftsmen's exhibit in Detroit.
 Raynor described his sculpture entry as "a very big cookie jar." It is 20 inches in diameter and has a wood ash glaze.
 The jar will remain on exhibit at the Art Institute of Detroit through Feb. 28 before becoming part of the U-M art collection.
 Raynor won the Founders' Award at the Exhibit in 1959.

Lunch, Fire Or Air Raid?

CD Seeks New Signal

"Run for an air raid shelter." "Pull over to the side of the road." "Grab your lunch pail."
 These are some of the messages Americans hear every day from sirens. Due to the ambiguity of their sounds, their messages are sometimes confused and often ignored.

For these reasons, the Office of Civil Defense is searching for a new warning signal to replace the present sirens.

Herbert J. Oyer, Speech and Hearing Clinic director on campus, and Edward J. Hardick, instructor in speech, have completed work on a research project to determine human reactions to different sounds.

For 18 months, sounds of babies crying, lions roaring, guns firing, dynamite blasting and elephants charging were recorded on five miles of tape and tested on people representing every age group, education level and occupation.

Researchers tested 400 to 500 different sounds selected from an almost unlimited number audible to the human ear.

There are 340,000 distinct tones a human can hear which can be combined with 1,500 noticeable differences in pitch that can be multiplied by 325 others which can be distinguished by source, Oyer explained.

"Our goal was to find a sound that could get the attention of the most people and be impossible to ignore," Hardick said, "but apparently there is no such sound."

The project cost about $43,000 and resulted in a 171-page report to the Office of Civil Defense in the Pentagon.

One important finding of their experiments is that tones which jump from one frequency to another without sliding have the greatest alerting potential.

Each person tested heard all sounds Oyer and Hardick used in the experiments.

They were all asked whether the sound was pleasant or unpleasant, whether they could ignore the signal and whether the noise was bizarre or strange, as well as other questions designed to categorize reactions.

Soviets Propose Destroying 'Obsolete' Bombing Planes

GENEVA (AP)—The Soviet Union Tuesday branded all bombing planes as obsolete and offered to join with the West in destroying them.

Soviet Delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin announced the offer in the 17-nation disarmament conference and the United States immediately expressed interest in the plan.

His proposal called on the big powers to destroy planes that carry nuclear weapons rather than allow them to fall into the hands of smaller powers.

A similar suggestion was made to Premier Khrushchev in Moscow last year by Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Rusk suggested that the United States and the Soviet Union join to make a bonfire of their B47 and Badger bombers under mutual control.

Khrushchev did not respond at the time, but Tsarapkin said the premier announced Soviet interest in the idea at last month's plenum of the Communist Party's Central Committee in Moscow.

Tsarapkin's offer went slightly further than that made by Rusk as it would include all bombers of all countries. Tsarapkin stressed that in the Soviet view bombing planes were obsolete anyway. He clearly did not intend the measure to reduce or limit the nuclear delivery capacity of the United States and Russia. Both are putting more emphasis on long-range missiles.

Tsarapkin told reporters the Soviet Union is prepared to permit the United States to super-vice destruction of soviet bombers if the Russians are allowed to exercise the same control over U.S. planes.

The Soviet delegate did not submit the Kremlin's reply to President Johnson's proposals to the Geneva conference for ending the nuclear arms race.

Tsarapkin told newsmen the plan still is under study in Mos-cow. But he again raised objections to such Johnson's proposals as a treaty to ban the spread of nuclear weapons and the estab-lishment of observer posts to prevent surprise attacks or an accidental war.

Tsarapkin told the conference: "Bombers, though obsolete, still are an important means of ag-gressive warfare. They can be used to transport nuclear weapons over thousands of kilometers in order to carry out a nuclear strike."

"Their destruction would help strengthen the security of all states,"

William C. Foster, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Dis-armament Agency, expressed in-terest in the Soviet offer. He told Tsarapkin he would like to dis-cuss it in detail. British Minister of State Peter Thomas also ex-pressed interest.

Tsarapkin told newsmen that the measure, once it is adopted by the major powers, "will event-ually affect all states of the world, without the exclusion of anyone."

Some western officials inter-pret this remark as an indica-tion that the soviet proposal was directed particularly against France and Red China.

Both nations have refused to sign the Moscow treaty banning most nuclear tests. Both are pressing ahead with their own nuclear weapons development. Neither possesses operational long range missiles.

But Tsarapkin refused to let newsmen draw him into a discus-sion of the French and Chinese attitude, saying: "this is not our problem."

Tsarapkin recalled that Khrushchev told the Central Committee meeting in Moscow that "the big powers should adopt this first measure (bomber destruction) on the path to phys-ical disarmament, and continue it to the end."

Rusk originally suggested that the United States and Russia should destroy their bombing planes as they go out of operation. This affected particularly the B47 and its soviet equivalent, the Badger, which both are due to go out of service within the next three years.

A U.S. spokesman said Tsarapkin's informal comments after the meeting were far more explicit than his formal statement in the closed conference room.

His explanation to newsmen stressed that in soviet view bombing planes have ceased to form a significant element in the nuclear striking force of the two super powers, and therefore should be destroyed to prevent them falling into the hands of other nations.

The U.S. spokesman com-mented: "there is no reason why the destruction could not be ex-tended to include all bombing planes."

The soviet proposal thus was the first issue with some pros-pect of negotiation to emerge at the Geneva talks since they re-sumed Jan. 21.

The proposal was contained in a nine-point soviet disarmament memorandum the main feature of which was a re-statement of Mos-cow's known positions. A western spokesman described it as a "re-shuffled menu containing almost nothing new."

The Soviet memorandum offered to discuss reciprocal cuts in defense budgets but gave no de-tails. It also expressed Moscow's willingness to ban nuclear tests underground, but without any form of international control.

"Life itself has confirmed that detection of underground tests does not require any methods of control," the memorandum stated.

Other points in the memoran-dum included familiar soviet de-mands for an east-west non-aggression pact, liquidation of foreign bases and abandonment of the proposed NATO multinational nuclear force. All were unacceptable to the west.

GOP Leaders Start To Decry Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republican leaders warmed up by por-traying President Johnson as a "wheeler dealer" writing a "grim record" in the cold war and making impossible fiscal promises.

GOP National Chairman Wil-liam E. Miller also announced that the party will again field its "truth squads." In past elec-tion years, these squads of Re-publican speakers follow Demo-cratic campaigners in various areas in what the GOP says is an effort to set the record straight.

The blasts at the Democratic President were made at a joint news conference by Miller, Sen-ate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and House GOP leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana.

It was Miller who said Johnson is "the most accomplished wheeler dealer Washington has ever seen." Then in words of sarcasm, the Republican Chair-man added:

"The world is rosy; it just needs more and better co-ex-istence."

"The economy is booming, if you'll just overlook 4 million unemployed; and the budget is pretty as a picture, give or take a few billion and juggle figures."

Halleck pictured Johnson as heading the country toward a financial mess. He said that while the President boasted that the gross national product had in-creased 16 per cent, or $100 billion, in three years "he over-looks the fact that the GNP in-creased 44 per cent in the Eisen-hower years when the cost of government averaged 22 per cent less than today."

Halleck said that while 1960 Democratic promises remain un-fulfilled "now we are told we are going to get all those things bigger and better at less cost."

Dirksen ticked off trouble spots in Asia, Africa, Latin America and Europe where he said the United States is making "a los-ing record, a grim record."

"It has reduced American prestige," Dirksen said. "It cer-tainly does not justify embrace of Moscow-sponsored co-existence or White House talk of a peace offensive."

Washington (AP)—U.S. officials said Tuesday that an apparent soviet proposal for destruction of the bomber forces of all na-tions is neither acceptable nor practicable.

But, in a formal statement, the State Department welcomed a soviet show of interest at the Geneva Disarmament Confer-ence in the idea of parallel destruction by the United States and Russia of certain types of obsolete bombers which might otherwise fall into the hands of smaller countries.

The State Department state-ment was cautiously worded to try to draw a precise line be-tween what the Johnson Admin-istration may be ready to agree to and what the soviet govern-ment may actually be proposing.

The United States, the state-ment recalled, suggested to Rus-sia some time ago the "destruc-tion on a one-for-one basis of United States B47s and U.S.S.R. Badger bombers." Both are jet aircraft with nuclear weapons capability.

Reporter Speaks Calm Coach

By RICHARD SCHWARTZ
State News Sports Writer

Editor's Note: Today's column is the second in a series written by State News sports writers.

So you've watched State basketball games and think it's easy to arouse the ire in Coach Forddy Anderson.

Maybe if your name's Cazzie Russell or Bill Buntin it is, but if you happen to be student 349045 at Michigan State, nothing doing. Try if you're not convinced.

Just say the words "basketball tradition," putting a slight intonation to your voice. Make it as if you question its existence at Michigan State. Do this, and you're now ready for the fireworks—you hope.

"Isn't that the line I hear rival coaches feed some of the high school players to discourage them from considering a State offer?" Anderson will calmly report. "Tradition? I don't think there's any doubt but that we've got it."

"Look up next time you're in Jenison Fieldhouse," he'll tell you, "and note the interest displayed. Surely then you can't really believe that tradition here is lacking."

Having gotten nowhere fast with this line of questioning, you might try the more subtle approach. Perhaps something like this:

"Sure, you've got tradition around here—a losing tradition! What about that?"

"It's all a matter of player talent," Anderson will explain, still maintaining his composure. "We just went through a period when we had the talent, but the talent either couldn't stay in school for some reason or else just picked up and left us."

"These things hurt quite a bit, but there's nothing you can do about it. You have to do with what you have. That's a coach's job, the same as it is with an educator. One tries to get the most he can out of every individual."

"Coach, why do you get so dog-gone excited when you're coaching if you can't even manage an angry word with all this needling?"

"Simply because the conditions in competition are so rapid-fire you don't have a moment's let-up. A coach, in an effort to keep a few steps ahead all the way, sometimes gets so wrapped up in the intensity of the game that he can't stop to realize his actions."

"I'm one who finds great enjoyment and reward in being in the thick of it all. But there's the pressure of continually being involved in the chess work that goes on which is bound to get emotionally trying."

By this time you ought to throw in the towel if you think you can get Anderson riled by a few questions. If you really want to see him when he's fighting mad, then wait 'til the Spartans tangle with the Wolverines Saturday afternoon. It's as good as guaranteed.

Lewis Possibility For Mich. Relays

For Coach Fran Dittrich and the Spartan trackmen, it's all a matter of time, that is, the time it took to run the 220, the mile, two mile and so forth.

"It'd be unfair on my part to judge the team in terms of winning or losing at this stage," Dittrich said. "While our opening meet showed a team score favoring Ohio State, a study of the times recorded show definite improvement over last year."

"Considering how we entered a team of full strength for last season's opener whereas we lacked several key starters this time," he said, "the statistics look quite encouraging."

Dittrich pointed to better clockings by State in the 1000, 800, 600, 300 and hurdles, and improved measures in the pole vault and high jump events.

"I am hopeful of having Dick Sharkey and Dick Mathers in the lineup for the Michigan Relays Saturday and possibly giving Sperm Lewis the go-ahead. Had we had this added depth last weekend, the victory would undoubtedly have been ours."

Dittrich views the upcoming Relays as "a special" meet which will put the emphasis on combined efforts rather than individual performance.

"There'll be no team score to detract from the times each man records," he explained. "Every man on the team will be under close scrutiny since the stress is placed on finishing in faster times than previous years."

Minor Ankle Injuries Plague State Cagers

Despite rugged games with Michigan and Ohio State, Michigan State's basketball squad seems to be in good physical shape for the return match with Michigan Saturday in Ann Arbor.

Dr. James S. Feurig, team physician, reported that there were no injuries that would hamper the Spartans Saturday.

He did say, however, that senior center Fred Thomann and junior forward Marcus Sanders sustained similar, but minor injuries, in the upset victory over the Buckeyes Monday night.
