Nobel Prize winner Martin Luther King Jr. will speak here Feb. 11 to kick off a unique MSU student project in Mississippi. His talk will open STEP, Student Education Program, under which MSU students will begin a summer education project in Mississippi.

STEP will be the only program of its kind in existence and will be wholly educational.

"This is completely non-political," Bob Harris, Bryan, Ohio, senior and president of All University Student Government which is sponsoring the program, said. "It is in the civil rights area, but our aim is equal educational opportunity for all children."

"Our classes will be open to any child or adult—white or Negro."

He stressed that there will be no official ties with other groups in Mississippi, although STEP may work with them.

The project has a three-fold purpose.

"We believe that student government should give students an opportunity to serve others and this cannot always be done on the campus," Harris said.

"It is also something which will mean a great deal in the future. It will give students in social work and education, for example, practical experience."

Four representatives have been in Mississippi since Tuesday exploring possible sites for such a project and are expected to return tonight.

They are Laura Leichter, director of AUSG academic affairs istry and Robert Green, associate professor of education.

Although a few other schools have such projects, they are administered by faculty rather than students, Harris said.

Hannah Heads Rights Meet

By JIM STERBA
Administration Writer

John A. Hannah, MSU president and chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, is in Washington today to preside over a national conference on civil rights.

The conference, sponsored by the Civil Rights Commission, was called to discuss Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which cuts off federal funds to groups involved in racial discrimination.

Delegates from more than 300 national organizations and 35 federal agencies will be on hand to discuss anti-discrimination regulations and programs aided by the federal government.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey will deliver the keynote address for the morning session of the conference.

Panel discussions are scheduled in the afternoon on health and welfare, agriculture and rural area development, manpower services, community and housing development and education.

Under the new Civil Rights Act, any institution not complying with the anti-discrimination clauses can be cut off from federal funds. This applies to colleges and universities.

'Taylor Or Khanh' On Way Out

From Our Wire Services

SAIGON, Viet Nam—The shaky Vietnamese government of Premier Tran Van Huong was toppled Wednesday by Lt. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, who restored military rule.

The restoration of military rule has put U.S.-Vietnamese relations and Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor on the spot.

"Now it's Taylor or Khanh," a Vietnamese officer said. "One or the other has to go."

But a U.S. spokesman said it won't be Taylor.

The American soldier-diplomat has "absolutely no intention of giving up his post as ambassador here," the spokesman said.

Washington authorities evidently hoped that a facade of civilian rule could be maintained in Saigon. The coup was reported to have caused no sense of crisis among Johnson administration officials.

The military leaders have indicated they intend to operate as far as possible within the legal framework of civilian government and to retain plans for early selection of a national assembly.

There was no reiteration of a State Department warning to Vietnamese military chieftains Dec. 22 that continued American support was based on the existence of a Saigon government "free of interference."

Buddhists who campaigned against Premier Tran Van Huong—just as they once campaigned against Khanh—celebrated jubilantly. They called off a five-man hunger strike launched at their Saigon headquarters last week and braked the anti-government, anti-American street demonstrations that have broken out sporadically for a week.

Usually reliable sources said Khanh made a deal with leaders of the Buddhist insurrection, at least on a temporary basis, which called for the departure of several into political exile abroad.

Red China rejoiced.

20 Failed In Selma; Campaign Is Recessed

SELMA, Ala. (AP)—A Negro right to vote campaign in the final day of a special 12-day registration term brought 20 more arrests Wednesday when officers enforced a limit of 100 on the number allowed to line up for tests.

Three white civil rights workers went to jail when they persisted in trying to talk to prospective voters after they had been warned to leave, and 17 Negroes were arrested when they sought to join the line after the allotted number of 100 had arrived at the courthouse first.

All 20 were charged with unlawful assembly after warning. The three-member Dallas County Voter Registration Board scheduled a recess after Wednesday but will hold a one-day session Monday, when Negroes will get another chance to apply for registration.

However, civil rights leaders said the emphasis next week will be shifted to neighboring Perry County, where Negroes also have proclaimed discrimination.

Even though a federal referee

—the only one in Alabama—has already been appointed to handle the flag-draped hier of Sir Winston Churchill amid the splendor of ancient Westminster Hall.

Some spent hours waiting to file past the coffin of the pugnacious old warrior and sense the solemnity which the British over the centuries have provided for their heroes.

When twilight came and a flurry of snowflakes dusted the long queue outside Westminster Hall, more than 20,000 persons had filed past the black velvet of the catafalque.

The queue stretched back to Lambeth Bridge over the Thames. It was more than a mile long. Two steady streams of people moved past the catafalque, a column on each side, at a rate of 4,500 per hour.

Only the dull clank of metal from the changing guards and the soft brush of feet against the carpet of the hall broke the silence.

Johnston, sniffling and coughing, bowed to the judgement of his doctors Wednesday and announced he would be unable to attend the funeral of Sir Winston Churchill.

Johnson invited a group of reporters to his bedroom, where he lay in a four-poster canopied bedstead and announced:

"I have just been examined and gone over by Dr. Buckley (Rear Adm. George G. Buckley) and the other doctors here and it is their judgment that while I have made a substantial recovery from the virus infection, they would consider it inadvisable for me to undertake a long trip where I would be exposed, as I would be on the London trip, at this time."

Johnson, who blew his nose once and coughed several times during his brief meeting with seven newsmen, said he has asked Secretary of State Dean Rusk to represent him at the Churchill funeral, along with Chief Justice Earl Warren and Ambassador David E.K. Bruce.

Congress Considers Saigon Coup Effects

WASHINGTON (AP)—The latest military coup in South Viet Nam stirred widespread concern in Congress Wednesday, including a statement questioning the effectiveness of U.S. Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor.

However the Johnson administration reacted cautiously and appeared to be waiting before making any pronouncements on any effect the coup might have on the heavy U.S. involvement in the war against Communist guerrillas.

Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in an interview that he had "about come to the conclusion that Ambassador Taylor has about outlived his usefulness in South Viet Nam."

But Aiken added he was not sure a successor would do any better, and Rep. Clement D. Zablocki, D-Wis., sharply disagreed.

"If Taylor has outlived his usefulness, then we have, also," Zablocki said.

However, Zablocki, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on the Far East, did express worry over some U.S. policies in Saigon.

Several newsmen and photographers ducked swinging fists from others earlier.

The claims of prejudicial news coverage was one of two major motions argued. The other claimed that the FBI search of the farm which yielded the bodies of the three men was illegal.

The defense said the 16 men, accused by the FBI of a Ku Klux Klan execution, were treated like "common criminals" after being taken to the Meridian Naval Air Station.

The preliminary hearing for the men was held at the air station's bachelor officers quarters building. The 16 were charged with conspiring to violate civil rights legislation.

Woman Fumbles On Reverse Play

WYOMING (UPI)—There was no question about it — Mrs. Rosena Kremers flunked her driver's test.

Mrs. Kremers, who was on a learner's permit, was taking tests for an operator's license Tuesday afternoon.

She put the shift into reverse instead of reverse and crashed into the corner of the Wyoming police station.

Police said she is eligible for another chance.

ROTC Ad Raises Wage

Higher wages and a shorter program are two major provisions of the recently-enacted ROTC Vitalization Act of 1964. Junior and senior ROTC cadets here will receive an increased 10-month retainer from $27 a month to $40.

The act also establishes a two-year program designed especially for junior college transfer students and upperclassmen not enrolled in ROTC.

The new program will be offered by the Army and Air Force in addition to the present four-year program.

A six-week summer field training course will substitute for basic freshman or sophomore training.

"This program will open the door to transfer students," according to Allan M. Jokels, Air Science information officer.

A candidate for the program must go through a series of intelligence and aptitude tests, interviews, medical examination and be assured of acceptance at a university, he said.

ROTC and AFOTC, the six-week summer training course must be taken two years before award of the bachelor or masters degree.

Nearly $56,000 Goes For Work-Study Aid

MSU has received $55,688 from the federal government to kick-off the campus Work-Study Program, Henry C. Dykema, director of financial aids announced Wednesday.

This is enough money to pay 90 per cent of the wages of about 150 students working 15 hours a week until the end of the year. Dykema, administrator of the program, has already started sorting the applications turned in by students who think they are qualified.

"We should know approximately how many students are qualified by next week," Dykema said. Qualified students must support their applications by a confidential family financial statement.

Students who are found qualified for the program will then receive 90 per cent of their wages from the federal Work-Study fund. The other 10 per cent will be paid by MSU.

Students must work on campus to receive Work-Study funds.

Qualified students who do not work on campus will be offered jobs in appropriate areas on campus. The first qualified students will be put to work in the library, where the shortage of help is critical.

Dykema said consideration would be given to try to place students in jobs related to their major field of study.

Iranian Policy Static Even After Slaying

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—The assassin's bullet that struck down Premier Hassan Ali Mansour will bring no major changes in Iran's internal or pro-West foreign policy.

This was made clear Wednesday by the new premier, Amir Abbas Hoveida, who said after presenting his cabinet:

"As can be observed from the composition of the cabinet, all of them are men who were used by Mansour. The new government does not intend any major changes in ministers."

"There will also be no change in Iran's foreign and internal economic and social policies."

The Shah had named Mansour Premier last March to press his campaign to buy up Moslem church land and that of other large holders and sell it to peasants on easy terms.

As security police continued their relentless investigation into the death Tuesday of Mansour, informed sources asserted that the fanatical Moslem terrorist group believed responsible for the killing is not powerful enough to create general turmoil or an effective anti-Shah movement. Police are holding Mohammed Bokaragi, 20, a Moslem, as the slayer.

The sources said the new government will crack down mercilessly on the fanatics. Those taking part in the assassination plot soon will face execution, they added.

The sources said this isolated act of terrorism will not affect Iran's dealings with Western oil companies.

Thousands File Past Churchill

LONDON (AP)—By the thousands they came Wednesday—Britons, Americans, the people of many lands—to bow their heads before the flag-draped hier of Sir Winston Churchill amid the splendor of ancient Westminster Hall.

Some spent hours waiting to file past the coffin of the pugnacious old warrior and sense the solemnity which the British over the centuries have provided for their heroes.

When twilight came and a flurry of snowflakes dusted the long queue outside Westminster Hall, more than 20,000 persons had filed past the black velvet of the catafalque.

Horse To Select Ticket Winner

To bribe or not to bribe the horse — that is the question.

For those who will enter the contest for two tickets to the Performing Arts Company production of "Italian Straw Hat," that could be the problem.

Contestants will mail in coupons appearing in the State News during the third week in February.

Four coupons will be drawn and placed under four strawhats on the heads of four young girls and the coupon under the hat eaten by the horse is the winner.

In "Italian Straw Hat," to run March 2 through 7 in Fairchild, it is also the horse that poses the problem.

Hero Fadinard's horse grabs a straw hat off the head of a vindictive woman and Fadinard spends his wedding day chasing a hat to replace the eaten one.

Jim Alexander, Long Beach, Cal., graduate student, will produce the play in the 19th century French setting of "Italian Straw Hat."

Interracial Case Tested

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A three-judge federal court heard and took under study Wednesday the case of a white construction worker and his part-Indian Negro wife—a case brought as a test of state laws against interracial marriage.

The court promised an early ruling after a strong suggestion by one of its members that the Virginia Supreme Court might be asked first to rule again—in the light of more recent Constitutional interpretations from Washington—in such a socially sensitive area.

Throughout the hearing the principals in the test case—Richard P. Loving, 31, and his wife, Mildred, 25—sat almost impassively. The Lovings are enlisted by the American Civil Liberties Union, and an assistant attorney general argued legalisms of jurisdiction and Constitutional rights.

Robber Steals Officer's Car

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Policeman Robert W. Gentry had been on duty only an hour when he spotted a sedan cruising past.

Gentry ran after the car, catching it at a traffic light a block away.

He arrested 17-year-old Jesse Johnson for car theft even though the car was not his.

The car happened to be Gentry's. There were similar cars in Jackson, but not with a police riot helmet in the back window.

The State (Of The) University

President Hannah attempted in his "State of the University" address Monday night to get away from the pattern of presenting past University accomplishments. He gave us a statement of concepts according to which the University operates and of the function of the University in "the social structure of which it is a vital, vibrant part."

The address was largely an encouraging, and in some sense an inspiring one, with a number of idealized pronouncements on the purpose and importance of higher education today, and the unique importance of a land-grant university in furthering these values.

Hannah portrayed MSU as an evolving, almost organic, institution in which each student and faculty member contributes to the total accomplishment of the University. "The efforts of this University are the expression of many hundreds of individual actions and collective actions." Within the bounds of realistic bureaucratic operation, this is probably the way the University operates, and the basic reason it is organized as it is.

Hannah's sincerity in stating the purposes of this University and the limitations of its operation cannot be doubted.

There is no reason to question Hannah's confident statement that "eventual size is not very important. What is important is for us to learn how to make it possible for our students to achieve fully adequate education no matter what size the University becomes."

Likewise, we should not doubt his sincerity in saying that "we achieve our purpose by helping intelligent young people develop their inherent capacities to the fullest to the end that they become useful, productive citizens of our democracy."

We have some doubts, however. It is difficult not to feel in looking over Hannah's speech that something is missing. A feeling lurks that the student is being pushed around a bit too much.

Toward Self-Fulfillment

"Self-fulfillment cannot be the only goal," President Hannah said in his "State of the University" address. Perhaps it shouldn't be. But any self-fulfillment at all could be hard to come by in a massive state university like MSU.

Even a stimulating intellectual curriculum could be hard to get in what is in danger of becoming a multi-university. President Hannah, aware of the danger and anxious to curb its development, has offered this proposal:

"Suppose it is agreed that the three big, complex universities—MSU, University of Michigan and Wayne State—would limit their freshman sophomore enrollment to not more than 40 per cent of their total enrollment."

Hannah is not suggesting, however, that the University become less complex or less big. He is more concerned with guiding some pre-college students to community colleges that "can provide vitally important educational services that complex universities should not be asked to undertake—terminal education, certain kinds of continuing and adult education, retraining of those displaced from jobs in in-even as Hannah states his ideal of developing each student to the fullest.

The problem is whether the University must develop the student, or allow the student to develop. The question is not so much one, as Hannah says, of providing courses for him and modernizing curricula, although these are important, as it is one of allowing and encourage the student to develop his own ideals and personality.

Hannah asks, "Is there not a way to strengthen in the University what we hope our students have been taught at home and in the church about the importance of honesty and decency and morality and consideration for others?"

He answers his question later in the speech:

"Somehow, sometime, someplace we should make certain that all of our students are required to try to think through for themselves what they believe the fundamental values of society are."

If it is the function of the University to encourage thought on the part of students of ideals, values and social concepts, it is not the place of the University to step in and through courses, pre-enrollment circulars or repeated informal indoctrination sessions to impress on students its own ideals, values and social concepts.

Good citizens cannot be developed in an atmosphere of stated and accepted ideas and goals. The best citizens are those who have developed their own ideas in an atmosphere of free discussion and intellectual activity.

This atmosphere can probably be created, as Hannah assures us, as well in a state university of 39,000 or 50,000 students as in a small and conservative private college.

But it cannot develop as long as it is predicated on the basic, and presumably undeniable, "fundamental beliefs" which this University hopes to instill in its students.

Home-Owner Attacks Open Housing

To the Editor:

If the students at MSU wish to continue screaming for open occupancy, we citizens will always be ready to read their views on the subject. The idea for an open housing ordinance has been resting for many months now and it is surprising how many people, even former proponents of the ordinance, think the whole thing should be buried, six feet under. We must remember though, that many college students are so intelligent, and have learned so much out of their books, that by all means we must listen and learn from them.

Tell me, now, where does our "great civic leader" Linda Rockey come from? Where is her home town? I take it, the "clean-up campaign" in her town is over, and all prejudice has been washed away forever. I'm sure she must have been chairman for the job; where else would such knowledge and experience come from? It is unfortunate that she is so grossly misinformed. Where on earth did she get the idea homes were not for sale to those who can afford them? The statement is comical and very definitely wrong.

It is well known that Miss Rockey's oft-mentioned, illustrious Dr. Green, is an East Lansing home owner. Anyone, and I mean anyone, is free to buy a home in this town, providing, of course, this person can afford that house desired.

A housing ordinance would eliminate the seller's right to choose a buyer, if this were his wish.

The only answer is, she wants open housing ordinances, and so to suppress another piece of freedom that Americans have given so dearly to maintain. I hope she realizes that all the Negroes who do own homes in this town will also lose this right of choice and gain nothing.

Some progressive thinkers believe that the home owner and landlord must be forced into civil rights action.

Any psychologist will admit that those who are strongly prejudiced will never totally lose this feeling, and pressure through more government legislation certainly isn't the way or best method to better human relations.

The East Lansing Human Relations Commission has a lot more sense than some citizens can understand. They know that civil rights action, of any sort, is an extremely touchy subject to many people.

Because of this, they have the knowledge and know how to progress only when they believe their next step will be most generally accepted by all. Proof positive is the housing ordinance.

The progressives were hoping for the quick and quiet passage of an abortive law, by any method, that would accomplish little, but further suppress individualism. They failed miserably. I'm led to believe that Mrs. Rockey is also an expert on store management and of course the State of Mississippi. Yankee Stores are not within the city limits of East Lansing. Their business is not our business and must definitely vice versa.

Again the Human Relations Commission was wise enough to see this and would not commend or condemn under the name of this city. Just how "vocally forthright" does Mrs. Rockey intend to be?

Her so-called "non-violent" agitators are planning more escapades shortly.

The citizens are ready and willing. College students have no place in local affairs.

The professors are supposed to be training these young adults for the future leadership of this country. God help us all, even them, if someone doesn't straighten out the thinking of some of these students.

I do hope our "great civic leader" is paying the taxes on her house here in town. If she is not a qualified resident, as many are not, why is any of this her business?

Mrs. Joanne Richland

Editor's Note: Linda Rockey's home town is Okemos. She and her husband now live in East Lansing.

Packaged Geniuses Not MSU Goal

To the Editor:

After reading the letters of Jan. 11 and Jan. 18, I have reached the conclusion that both Mr. Ebert and Mr. Kiernan are ignorant of the goals of Michigan State University.

At present I am majoring in political science. Previously I attended the University of Illinois, majoring in engineering for one and a half years. Having been oriented in both curriculums I believe Michigan State offers the best program to produce a "well-rounded" individual in comparison to other universities.

Mr. Ebert and Mr. Kiernan seem to be oblivious to the fact that all students are ignorant in many fields of learning. It is neither the purpose nor a possibility for Michigan State to produce students proficient in "world" knowledge.

The University College offers, to all students, an excellent survey program as is possible in a four year institution.

At the University of Illinois, an engineering student is not given sufficient, if any, contact with the humanities, biological sciences and social sciences.

Unless we wish to produce Jacks-of-all-trades without a place in society or pursue a five-year course, we must continue the present policies.

May I also remind Mr. Ebert and Mr. Kiernan that learning does not stop upon graduation. The main object of a university is to provide instruction in the art of learning, not to produce packaged geniuses.

Churchill's Other Side

To the Editor:

Amidst all the eulogies to the late Sir Winston Churchill, let us recall all his "greatness." As an African acquainted with British Imperialism, I see the passing of a great European statesman. I see the passing of a staunch conservative, of the Victorian school; I see the passing of the symbol of British war time courage. I see the passing of the epoch of British Imperialism.

Surely, Sir Winston was a man of unfailing courage, a man of burning leadership. And to some he was a symbol of freedom.

But to millions of former British colonial subjects, he was something less.

A Word From Niels Bohr

To the Editor:

The following quotation heads this week's Honora College Bulletin:

"What is it that we human beings ultimately depend on? We depend on words. We are suspended in language. Our task is to communicate experience and ideas to others. We must strive continually to extend the scope of our description, but in such a way that our messages do not thereby lose their objective of unambiguous character."

Wisdom points out to Mr. Kiernan that what tribute to a most liberal art—that of communication—comes from Niels Bohr, Nobel laureate in physics.

Notes From Underground

Are People Worth It?

By Char Jolles

Isn't there anything good about people?

They beat babies, poison cats and forget to shovel their sidewalks. Worst of all, they're always there, in hordes.

Somebody is always watching you walk, or looking at your clothes and laughing at you, doubtless. During their friendlier moments, people want to eat with you or sit in your room, keeping solitude at bay.

Parents in particular are guilty of loving too much. Friends and lovers impose on your time, and other people forget your name.

Depending on your religion, breed, skin or sock color, people might even hate you. But one thing is worse than being loved possessively, ignored or hated, and that is being explained.

People are always tampering with that incomprehensible self that is yours. They wrap it up with their simple words, like "He's insecure." Their explanations are just too easy. Their image of you is always wrong.

Furthermore, they are always out to be better than you. If it isn't a higher grade-point, or a larger vocabulary, then it's a straighter nose. And, what is more frustrating, they're always imposing those damn value systems: "You should be happier" or "You should study more."

People are inconsiderate, cruel, and people are nothing. Take away their achievements, their ideas and their plans and you discover they are going to die some day. All that is left is their fear of death and their need for love, their naked need.

Perhaps it is this naked need that makes people so inconsiderate and cruel. The same need that makes them love too much also makes them destroy. We aren't aware of this need very much, and so we wonder why people aren't the way we'd like them to be.

Can't we say anything good about people? Maybe we can't. But we must take care of them. They're all we've got.

Basketball Players Dropped

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo.—Two leading basketball players of the U.S. Air Force Academy were dropped abruptly from the varsity squad Wednesday in the midst of a cheating scandal which saw 30 additional cadets resign rather than face court martial.

The Academy information office, announcing the latest withdrawals which raised the total to 65, declined to say whether the basketball action had any connection with the bizarre "exams for sale" case now under investigation.

"We cannot refute, confirm or reveal the status of any cadet," said Col. Richard Haney, chief of the public information office.

U. S. Won't Neglect Policies

STUTTGART, Germany—U.S. Ambassador George C. McGhee assured West Germany Wednesday that the United States will not neglect its foreign responsibilities under President Johnson.

Speaking under the auspices of the German-Atlantic Society, the Ambassador said: "I have been concerned to find that here in Germany some have feared that my country's new awareness of its inner needs may result in a turning away from our foreign responsibilities. I assure you this is not the case."

Agreement at New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS—Dock workers and longshoremen in New Orleans agreed on a new work contract today. It was thought the agreement would bring an early end to the 17-day dock walkout from Maine to Texas. However, longshoremen in Baltimore later rejected a new contract, forestalling an early settlement.

Castroite Protests to U. N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—Cuban Foreign Minister Raul Roa protested to the United Nations Wednesday against what he called a conspiracy by the United States and several Caribbean countries to violate Cuba's territorial integrity through armed attacks.

The protest was in a note which referred to statements allegedly obtained from Eloy Gutierrez Menyo, an anti-Castro guerrilla leader, and three companions taken prisoner by Castro troops.

Russia Has Flu Epidemic

MOSCOW—Health officials here urged special precautions Wednesday to keep Leningrad's worst flu epidemic in 20 years from spreading to Moscow.

Although reports from Leningrad indicated the epidemic was under control, Moscow television urged Muscovites to avoid crowds and to stay away from theaters. Parents with young children were advised to keep them home.

Doctors at Western embassies said they were treating some flu cases but said there was no cause for alarm.

Woodward Retires

MADRID—U.S. Ambassador Robert F. Woodward of Minneapolis, Minn., retiring shortly, made a formal call Wednesday to say goodbye to Gen. Francisco Franco.

Woodward, here since May of 1962, will be succeeded soon by Angier Biddle Duke, former chief of protocol, at the U.S. Department of State. A career diplomat, Woodward is returning to Washington for reassignment.

Indonesia, Red China 'Inseparable'

TOKYO—Indonesian Foreign Minister Subandrio said Wednesday that Indonesia and Communist China would "forever" be linked together and "no force from within or without can divide them."

"We have a common enemy—imperialism headed by the United States and Britain. Our struggle is inseparable, because it is based on a common ideal and directed against a common enemy," Subandrio was quoted as saying by the New China News Agency.

Youth Released

NEW YORK—A youth who once confessed the shocking murders of career girls Janice Wylie and Emily Hoffert was released Wednesday while a second who denied the crime was held.

The weird revolving-door development put 22-year-old Richard (Ricky) Robles behind bars. A short, slim, curly-haired dope addict and cat burglar, he was held without bail in the Aug. 28, 1963, slayings.

Watson Says No Resignation

AUSTIN, Tex.—State Democratic chairman Marvin Watson said "absolutely not" when asked Wednesday about reports he has resigned to become an aide to President Johnson.

Watson said he was flying back to Dallas after attending the joint legislative session this morning at which Gov. John Connally made his speech to the new legislature.

Steel Earnings Jump

NEW YORK—More lustrous reports on 1964 earnings came Wednesday from major steel producers as second-ranking Bethlehem Steel Corp. and Inland Steel Co. recapped financial results.

Inland, a big factor in the pulsing Midwest steel market, said profits last year jumped 27 per cent to an all-time company high of $71,073,725 or $3.91 a share.

Bethlehem, falling far short of its 1957 peak, nevertheless reported a new production mark and cashed in with a 45 per cent gain in earnings at $147.9 million, or $3.11 a share.

J-Hop Decoration Features Fountain

Professional decorations will transform the Auditorium into a 1930's formal ballroom for J-Hop Saturday, Feb. 6.

This is the first year professional decorations have been used, said John Newcomer, decorations chairman and Harpers Ferry, W. Va., junior.

"We want to make these the best decorations ever and something that people will remember for years," he said.

Artist's sketches of the layout are now on display in the Union showcase.

The formal ballroom will carry out the "Speakeasy" theme of the dance. Columns flecked with diamond dust will line the dance area against a red and gold satin background. Crystal chandeliers will hang from the columns.

A round fountain shooting streams of water to a height of 12 feet will decorate the center of the room. Colored lights will play over the falling water. Total decorations are valued at $22,000 and are being rented from a local theatrical supply company.

Because of Farmers Week activities in the Auditorium, they cannot be installed until the night before the dance, Newcomer said.

The decorations committee will put them up in about 12 hours beginning at 7 p.m. Friday.

Tickets are now on sale at $6 a couple for the annual semi-formal dance, sponsored by J-Council. Les Elgart and his orchestra will play, and Hap and Joey will entertain during intermission.

Tickets are available at the Union and in the International Center.

3 Arrested For Larceny

Three MSU students went to jail Wednesday after waiving examination on a charge of larceny from a vehicle in Lansing Township Justice Court.

Campus police said Bruce A. Halgren, Somerset, N.J., junior, Michael L. Remondino, Birmingham sophomore, and Fay A. Rogers, Spring Lake junior, were arrested at about 3 a.m. Monday when officers spotted them stripping a car in parking lot "O."

Police said they watched the students lift the rear of a Volkswagen and take the tires and wheels off.

Chivalrous Motorists Honored

Crime doesn't pay, but traffic courtesy will pay beginning Monday.

Richard O. Bernitt, director of public safety, has designated the month of February as Traffic Courtesy Month on campus.

As part of the courtesy program, police patrols will distribute movie passes to courteous motorists, pedestrians and bicyclists.

The Butterfield Theatre System, in support of the traffic courtesy month concept, has agreed to supply campus police with passes to four area theatres in their chain -- the Gladmer, the Michigan, the State and the Campus.

Officers will present passes for what in their opinion are acts of courtesy on a Monday-through-Friday basis during the entire month.

"No criteria for a courteous act has been established by either the Department of Public Safety or the Butterfield System," Bernitt said.

"The judgment of officers on duty will determine what constitutes an act of courtesy," he said.

"Although the 3-E's of traffic safety -- engineering, education and enforcement -- have resulted in lower accident rates, they have proved inadequate in themselves," Bernitt said.

"Lack of courtesy in traffic is a big part of the problem, and we hope this new program will help correct this fault."

Patrols will start each day with three passes and will be looking for courteous drivers and pedestrians to give them to. They need not award all the passes, however. If they do not find sufficient acts of courtesy during the day, remaining passes will be given to the night shift for distribution.

"We hope to bring the courtesy theme into play wherever and whenever we can," Bernitt said.

"For instance, we are trying to obtain posters from the National Safety Council with the courtesy angle in them. These will be displayed in the usual places on campus."

We have high hopes for this program. We always talk about the bad kids, now we'll try to say something about the good ones, he said.

"Of course, traffic violators will not go unnoticed while patrols are looking for courtesy," Bernitt said.

The State News will carry a daily box score of pass winners, along with a comparison of the rate of traffic violations in February, 1964, and February of this year.

Admissions include Melvin Olman, Grand Rapids graduate student; Cynthia Dalton, Drayton Plains freshman; Michael Lafromboise, Lincoln Park freshman; William Noecker, Lansing freshman; Edward Cray, East Longmeadow, Mass., freshman; Bobby Jon Harrison, Allen Park freshman and Thomas Johnstone, Sandford freshman.

Others admitted were Peter Westerman, East Lansing senior; Robert Stinson, Birmingham junior; Charles Baugh, Crystal Lake, W. Va., senior; Virgil Archie, St. Joseph freshman and Charles Parsons, Muskegon senior.

Milliken Keeps Tie-Break Power

The Senate Business Committee decided Wednesday to let Lt. Gov. William Milliken keep his power to break tie votes in the Senate.

The question of tie-breaking power came up in the committee last week.

Committee members contended that under the new state constitution the lieutenant governor did not have this power, especially in final passage of bills.

Two sections of the constitution had direct bearing on the question.

Sen. Gary Brown, R-21st District, said if half the Senate voted "yes" on final passage of a bill and the lieutenant governor not voted to break the tie, his vote would mean passage. Brown holds only a senator's vote can make a majority, not the lieutenant governor's.

However, after a Republican caucus, he voted to let Milliken keep the power, despite his personal feelings.

The committee as a whole followed Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley's ruling that the lieutenant governor does have tie-breaking power in all phases of a bill's movement through the legislature, from introduction to final passage.

"The business committee's move was a matter of constitutional interpretation," Milliken said. "Along with a play for power."

Soviets Back Education

Schools Stressed

"The Soviet people have a commitment to education that is almost frightening in its implications for the free world."

"It is a challenge which must be met with an urgency which equals our nation's best effort in time of crisis, and which transcends any effort we have put forth thus far in time of peace."

Henry I. Willett, superintendent of the Richmond, Va., schools, who recently returned from a visit to the Soviet Union, made these declarations Tuesday.

He spoke before a joint conference of the Michigan Association of School Boards and the Southwest Michigan School Administrators.

Education, he explained, represents a threat that is interwoven into the whole fabric of Soviet life, that may begin with nursery school at two months and extend through adult life.

Communist indoctrination in schools, he said, is supplemented with communist youth organizations in schools for pupils from seven years up, with summer youth camps, with organizations in every community enterprise, whether it is a school or factory, which make recommendations that are sent to top leaders of the party.

This is the program, he proposed, which makes it possible for 10 million communists to control a nation of 230 million people.

The subtlety and thoroughness with which the program is planned makes it all the more dangerous, he warned. "It certainly gives great evidence of their belief in education as the greatest weapon and tool that could be used in accomplishing their purpose, he added.

The Soviet commitment to education and the thoroughness with which they indoctrinate their children have strong implications for us, Willett said. "It has implications in terms of our own educational program and our schools' responsibility for interpreting more accurately and more adequately a belief and understanding of our own principles, freedom and economy."

In an earlier talk, Willett told the Michigan school people that "even the underdeveloped nations of the world are showing a commitment to education which should cause us great concern and which should serve to motivate our thinking, planning and action."

"The cost of education is an investment in man's greatest resource," the speaker declared.

Let's talk about engineering, mathematics and science careers in a dynamic, diversified company

Campus Interviews Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, February 1, 2 and 3

Young men of ability can get to the top fast at Boeing. Today, Boeing's business backlog is just under two billion dollars, of which some 60 per cent is in commercial jetliner and helicopter product areas. The remainder is in military programs and government space flight contracts. This gives the company one of the most stable and diversified business bases in the aerospace industry.

No matter where your career interests lie — in the commercial jet airliners of the future or in space-flight technology — you can find an opening of genuine opportunity at Boeing. The company's world leadership in the jet transport field is an indication of the calibre of people you'd work with at Boeing.

Boeing is now pioneering evolutionary advances in the research, design, development and manufacture of civilian and military aircraft of the future, as well as space programs of such historic importance as America's first moon landing, gas turbine engines, transport helicopters, marine vehicles and basic research are other areas of Boeing activity.

Whether your career interests lie in basic or applied research, design, test, manufacturing or administration, there's a spot where your talents are needed at Boeing. Engineers, mathematicians and scientists at Boeing work in small groups, so initiative and ability get maximum exposure. Boeing encourages participation in the company-paid Graduate Study Program at leading colleges and universities near company installations.

We're looking forward to meeting engineering, mathematics and science seniors and graduate students during our visit to your campus. Make an appointment now at your placement office.

Weaker Sex Masters Judo

Don't let this throw you men, but the masculine sport of judo is being mastered by the "weaker sex" at MSU.

A student walking by Jenison

Fieldhouse on a Monday or Thursday evening can easily be attracted by the noisy slamming of the Judo Club working out inside.

Upon reaching the fourth floor the curious visitor might literally flip when he sees the dainty figures clothed in their gi's—judo outfits—practicing judo side by side with the men.

Wayne Bates, Hillman junior and president of the Judo Club, estimates that about one-third of the club's 88 members are women.

In his third year with the Judo Club, Bates said that he feels most women take judo because "it's a unique sport—something nobody else is doing."

Sue Witt, Bangor freshman and a second term member of the club, said: "I'm in police administration and heard from a few sources that eventually I would have to know judo. I started taking it now so by the end of four years I can properly defend myself."

Pat Brown, Mason junior and a first term member of the club, said that she wants to teach junior high school and many people have told her that there is a discipline problem in those grades. So she's planning accordingly.

Mary Hunt, Eaton Rapids junior, is starting her second term in the club.

"I started taking judo for self-defense, but right now I'm staying in it for the fun and exercise," she said.

Marlene McHaney, Dearborn sophomore and new member of the club, said that she's thinking of changing her major to police administration, and judo would be valuable for self-defense. She also likes it for the exercise and originality.

Ski Club To Slide In Lansing

MSU skiers now have the opportunity to ski within five minutes' drive of the campus.

MSU Ski Club members will be allowed to ski on the private hill owned by the Lansing Ski Club for an initial fee of $15.

This fee will be used by the club to help defray the cost of improvements on its hill which is located on Lake Lansing Road just east of the Walnut Hills Country Club.

Persons interested in this offer can contact George Page, Ski Club president, at 351-5458 or at the weekly club meetings, 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays in the Union Ballroom.

Sign-Up Set For 'Winds'

Registration is now open for the Winds of Change seminar on the population explosion to be held in Kellogg Center Feb. 5-7.

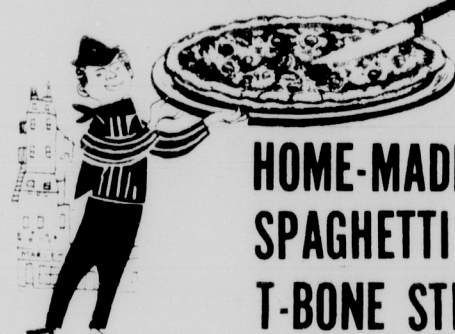

Students may register through Wednesday between 9 a.m. and noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. in 308 Student Services or the United Nations lounge in the Union.

All sessions are free except the Saturday night banquet which costs $3.20.

The conference will study whether there is a problem with the growing population and, if so, what possible solutions are available.

Representatives of the Planned Parenthood Center in New York City have called the seminar the most complete conference on the subject held in the United States.

"THE SCOREBOARD NEVER LIES"—Perhaps that might have been true if Spartan scoring leader Stan Washington (sinking basket at left) hadn't fouled out in the waning minutes of Tuesday night's encounter with the University of Michigan. Photos by Dave Sykes and Jon Zwickel

HIGH SCHOOLS INCLUDED

Need Strong Gym Federation

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a two-part series in which Spartan track and gymnastics coaches review the current NCAA-AAU controversy.

By ROBERTA YAFIE
State News Sports Writer

The fight for supremacy in the ranks of amateur athletics has not by-passed gymnastics. On the contrary, it has swept it up in the cyclone of mass confusion and madness springing from the NCAA-AAU battle.

George Szypula, gymnastics coach, said that the problem in his sport is rooted as far back as the elementary school level.

"We need better construction in gymnastics in the secondary schools and more teams, regardless of the organization," he said. "The sport is growing, but basic instruction isn't keeping pace. Many top-flight gymnasts may be lacking in the fundamentals."

The athletic programs in most European nations and, especially, the Soviet Union, begin with gymnastics and these programs are instituted from the lowest grades up.

"We need a federation in which the NCAA and AAU would have membership along with the high school associations and other groups," he continued. "This would be similar to the European structure of athletic direction—a separate structure for each sport. What's important is honest, sincere, unbiased leadership. We've lacked this."

"In the past, leadership has been sectionalized, favoring one area of the country—the East, in most cases. The dissemination of materials has been slow, therefore information is not received in time in all areas."

Szypula was referring primarily to information regarding rules changes. Among these changes are the compulsory routines required of all-round gymnasts for the Olympics and World Games championships.

He said that they are rarely in the hands of the coaches little more than a year ahead of the scheduled competition, and that nearly two years are needed for proper preparation.

This is an indictment of the AAU specifically in gymnastics, for it is supposedly the international representative of the sport.

Since the formation of the United States Gymnastics Federation, the AAU had worked harder to satisfy the needs of the sport. But they haven't worked hard enough.

Like Spartan track coach Dittrich, Szypula agrees that gymnastics does not need outside competition provided by the AAU if the USGF takes care of its own.

"If the USGF can provide us with these compulsory routines during pre-season and post-season meets," he concluded, "we will not have to count on the AAU. These compulsorys are not exclusively an American affair, but come from all parts of the world. For this reason it is a necessity that we have access to them."

'Can Play With Best'—Forddy

By DUANE LANCASTER
State News Sports Writer

Michigan won the game but Michigan State won the praises. The Wolverines eked by State 105-98 in overtime Tuesday night but 9,643 fans left Jenison Field House talking about the surprising play of the Spartans.

State had pressed the mighty Wolves to the wall before being outscored 15-10 in the five-minute overtime period.

Coach Forddy Anderson was understandably disappointed after the game but didn't hesitate to express his pleasure in the team's performance.

"It was a very fine effort," he said, "and proved we could play with the best of them."

"We won't play a tougher team than Michigan this year and we'll go full tilt for every game from now on."

The Spartans have a chance to prove themselves again Saturday when they travel to Evanston, Ill. to meet Northwestern in a revenge match.

"Our chins were really down after losing to Northwestern

(State lost 76-75 last Saturday), but that all-out effort against Michigan has put their chins up in the sky."

"We forgot our assignments at the start of the second half and had to fight an uphill battle but they did a fine job of it," he said.

"Michigan losing Larry Tregoning didn't hurt them as much as losing Washington hurt us either," he added. Tregoning fouled out midway through the second half and two minutes later State's guard Stan Washington did the same.

It took a complete team effort to stay close to the awesome Wolves who stand 12-2 for the season and 4-2 in the Big Ten. But standing out in the upset attempt was State's junior center Bill Curtis.

Both Curtis and Michigan's Cazzie Russell scored personal highs Tuesday night. Russell scored 40 points and Curtis almost matched him with 36.

The outburst raised Curtis' average to an even 20 points a game, second on the team to Washington's 20.6 game output. The 6-4 product of Grand Rapids has now tallied 260 points in 13 games.

By LARRY MOGG
State News Sports Writer

Three third-period Michigan goals offset a trio of power-play scores by State Wednesday night in the MSL ice arena as the Wolverines dashed the Spartan hockey team, 6-3.

Michigan's Bob Boysen, Mel Wakabayashi and Marty Read combined to erase a 3-3 deadlock midway in the final period. Read's goal came with an open net.

With the win, the Wolverines moved past State into fourth place with a 3-4 record. State is now 3-4 in league play.

Michigan scored first after seven minutes of play when an errant Spartan puck trickled in the nets off goalie Jerry Fisher's skate. Alex Hood, Wolverine forward who was nearest to the play, received credit for the score.

The Wolves wasted little time evening things up when Wilfred Martin beat Fisher on a breakaway with only 44 seconds remaining on the clock. A goal by Mel Wakabayashi moved the Wolves back out in front of the see-saw contest midway through the second period.

But with 59 seconds left in the period, the Spartans played a man advantage when Vomar scored his second power-play goal.

Vomar took a pass from Doug Roberts and blazed the puck from 35 feet out into the upper corner of the net.

Swim League
Like Red Sea:
Split In Half

Anyway you cut it, the Big Ten swimming conference neatly separates in half. You have five bullies and an equal number of pushovers.

Shelved in the uppercrust are Indiana, Minnesota, Ohio State, Michigan and the Spartans. Buried beneath the elite are the likes of Purdue, Illinois, Iowa, Northwestern, Wisconsin and Iowa.

Comparing the two groups would be like running a beauty contest between Liz Taylor and "Ma Kettle." They're just not in the same category.

State takes to the road this weekend on a route that will send them up against Illinois and Purdue. After last week's struggle with Michigan the Spartans can expect to have an easier time with this twosome.

Purdue edged out Illinois for ninth place in the Big Ten championships last year. The Boilermakers totaled 14 points to the Illini's 7, both of which are microscopic when put alongside Indiana's winning total of 223-1/2.

"Schools tend to stress competition in some sports, while the other sports are forced to take a backseat," said Spartan swim coach Charles McCaffree.

Although the five also-rans swimming facilities, they haven't been able to offer athletic tenders to top-rate swimmers.

"Another chair for Mr. Virile"

Obediently my dog trotted away and returned directly with a fanback chair of Malayan rattan. He is the smartest dog in our block.

"I suppose you're wondering why I am here," said Mr. Virile, seating himself.

"Well, sir," I replied, my old eyes twinkling roguishly. "I'll wager you didn't come to read my meter."

You can imagine how we howled at that one!

"That's a doozy!" cried Mr. Virile, finally catching his breath.

"I must remember to tell it to Alice when I get home."

"Your wife?" I said.

"My father," he said.

"Oh," I said.

"But enough of wit and humor," he said. "Let us get down to business. How would you like to write a campus column for Persona Stainless Steel Razor Blades?"

"For money?" I said.

"Yes," he said.

"My hand, sir," I said and clasped his. Warmly he returned the pressure, and soft smiles played upon our lips, and our eyes were moist with the hint of tears, and we were silent, not trusting ourselves to speak.

"What will you write about in your campus column?" asked Mr. Virile when he was able to talk again.

"I will take up the burning issues that vex the American undergraduate," I cried, bounding to my feet. "I will explore, without fear or favor, such explosive questions as 'Are roommates sanitary?' and 'Should preceptors be given a saliva test?' and 'Should capital punishment for pledges be abolished?' and 'Can a student of 19 find happiness with an economics professor of 80?'"

"And will you also say a pleasant word from time to time about Persona Stainless Steel Razor Blades?" asked Mr. Virile.

"Sir," I said simply, "what other kind of word except pleasant could I possibly say about Persona Blades, which give me more luxury shaves than Beep-Beep or any other blade I might name?"

"Another of my products is Burma Shave," said Mr. Virile. "Can you find it in your heart to mention Burma Shave occasionally?"

"But of course!" I declared. "For is not Burma Shave the whisker-wiltingest lather in the land?"

"Yes," he admitted.

And then he shook my hand again and smiled bravely and was gone—a tall silhouette moving erectly into the setting sun.

"Farewell, good tansorialist!" I cried after him. "Aloha!"

And turned with a will to my typewriter.

In-Group Wit Seen Far Out

'Fringe' Timely, Satirical:
'Whatever-It-Is-It's Funny'By LAURENCE TATE
State News Reviewer

"Beyond the Fringe" is a candid and offbeat comedy of humor, satire and God-knows-what—but whatever it is—it's funny.

The essence of its effect is its aura of irreverent informality: four young men bouncing around the stage doing whatever nutty things pop into their minds.

This of course is a carefully rehearsed illusion, but it works. The performers always seem to be having a great time with their urbane and often in-group wit, and whenever something seems not too funny, you are convinced into thinking that the lack is yours, not theirs.

This lack of humor does not come up often, but there are some conspicuously funny lines floating around, and the thought hovers in the back of the mind that a lot of it is closer to Bob Hope than intellectual satire.

Although the show has been considerably refurbished since it first opened on Broadway, much has been retained—the Shakespeare parody, the put-up-miner and the sentimentalization of war.

The new cast, although not always suited to the material written for the original performers, played with the proper zest, at times with too much, as if they distrusted the material.

The Shakespeare parody, not very subtle to begin with, did not need to be pounded in quite so strongly. The dialogue got lost in the clowning, and the dialogue is pretty good in itself.

In general, however, the evening was a blast. It's good to have well-exploited nonsense, like the far-far-out bits about blue trousers left in trains and the ambiguous death of Lord Nelson.

The show is best, in fact, when it foregoes a target, topical or otherwise, and takes flight on the wings of sheer idiosyncrasy. Perhaps the best example of this was Robert Cessna's almost literally endless variations on the Colonel Bogey March.

This is really beyond the fringe. Timely satire you can get anywhere, but good nonsense is hard to find.

FRINGE BENEFITS—That's what the audience received at the performances of "Beyond the Fringe" Tuesday. The show, greatly acclaimed by those who saw it, was part of the Lecture-Concert Series. Photo by Tom Pozarycki

Napoleon, Birds
In Science Book

The Emperor Napoleon and the penguin are topics in a new layman's guide to science written by James Stokley, astronomy lecturer and associate professor of journalism.

In his eighth book, "Modern Advances in Science," Stokley reports on areas of science and technology in which recent important progress has been made.

Stokley notes, in a discussion of peaceful uses of atomic energy, that techniques of nuclear science "have provided evidence that someone probably administered arsenic to the former emperor (Napoleon) for several years before his death."

The evidence, according to the MSU author, was provided recently through a process called "neutron activation analysis," by which abnormal amounts of arsenic were detected in hairs taken from Napoleon's body in 1821.

Stokley's book also reveals how scientists have been able to find the temperature at which penguin eggs are incubated.

By means of a tiny transmitter and electric thermometer planted in a penguin's egg, they learned that emperor penguins of Antarctica can incubate their eggs at temperatures as low as minus 76 degrees Fahrenheit.

Fellowships
Available

New York University will offer a limited number of fellowships this summer to undergraduate students interested in continuing studies in Portuguese.

Eligible students must have one year of college Portuguese. The fellowships provide tuition, all required fees, round-trip travel between the student's home and NYU and a total living allowance of $400.

The eight-week course, beginning June 21, offers eight points credit in intermediate Portuguese.

The deadline for completed applications is Feb. 15. Further information can be obtained from Professor Oscar Fernandez, East 437, New York University, Washington Square, New York, N.Y.

Careu Visits
Harvard Meet

John Carew, chairman of the Department of Horticulture will speak at the New England regional meeting of the American Society for Horticultural Science at Harvard University Friday.

Carew is president-elect of the society and will participate in the regional meetings Friday and Saturday. He was elected to his post at the national meeting in Boulder, Colo., last August. The 1965 meeting will be held at the University of Illinois this summer.

His topic for the Harvard meeting will be "Horticulture and Its Environment." He will discuss the application of horticultural science and its relation to world food problems.

Folk Society
To Take Trip

About 30 members of the Folklore Society will attend a folk festival at the University of Chicago this weekend.

The Chicago festival, known as the "biggest and best" in the Midwest, will start Friday and continue through Sunday. The program will include lectures and a series of five concerts featuring such names as "Mississippi" John Hurt and the Stanley Brothers.

William Armistead Jr., faculty adviser to the MSU Folklore Society and well-known as a folksinger throughout the state, is scheduled to perform in the festival Sunday. Archie Green, the faculty adviser to the University of Illinois society, and Ellen Steckert from Wayne State will also perform.

Armistead said that one of the main purposes of the trip is to study the possibilities of holding a similar folk festival at MSU.

Shows Offered
By Film Society

The MSU Film Society will show a series of surrealist and dadaist films at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Union Ballroom.

The films include Man Ray's "Etoile de Mer," Hans Richter's "Rhythmus 21," and "Symphonie Diagonale," Salvador Dali's "The Andalusian Dog," and Stan Brakhage's "Desistim."

The showing is open to members and their guests only. Society subscriptions will be available.

Vase On Exhibit

A sculptured ceramic vase made by art instructor Noah Alonso has been selected for inclusion in the 23rd Ceramic National Exhibition to be circulated nationally through May, 1966.

The traveling art show is sponsored by the Everson Museum of Art of Syracuse, N.Y.

The ceramic piece, 21 inches high and 13 1/2 inches wide, is a Raku-ware vase hand-built from clay and wrought metal. Alonso earned a master of fine arts degree from MSU. He joined the University's art faculty in 1962. He has also taught public school and special education art classes in Michigan.

Nassau Trip Available

A seven-day cruise to Nassau is available to MSU students and their friends.

The cruise will be made aboard the Homeric, a 26,000-ton vessel which is air-conditioned. Two days and one night will be spent in Nassau.

Included in the offer are room and board, outdoor sports and entertainment. The price of the trip is $192.50.

The trip is being arranged through a travel agency by Richard A. Osipod, Grand Rapids sophomore, who can be contacted at 353-2200.

month Taylor may have rebuked Gen. Nguyen Khanh too harshly when the military purged South Vietnam's high command council. Khanh, the South Vietnamese military commander, has assumed the national leadership again the latest coup.

There are indications that the United States will at least counterbalance the latest military takeover, with the hope that a framework of civilian control will be restored if scheduled elections are held March 21.

State Department officials refused formal comment on Khanh's coup. Press Officer Robert J. McCloskey said he knew of no plans for Taylor to return to Washington for consultations, or for the dispatch of a high official to Saigon.

He said the United States was not totally surprised by the coup. Other officials explained that, because of recent Buddhist demonstrations in Saigon and elsewhere in the country, the possibility of some such action was foreseen, although the timing was not known.

Photographer To Show
Unique Films Of Cuba

Robert Cohen, reporter-photographer, went into Castro's Cuba and brought out an uncensored film report of the Western Hemisphere's first Marxist nation.

Cohen will show his film at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Auditorium as part of the World Travel Series.

The photographer was authorized by the U.S. State Department to travel through Cuba to produce the motion picture. The film was developed in the United States without having been seen by Cuban officials.

"Inside Castro's Cuba" gives Cohen an unprecedented trilogy in photographing the Communist world.

Formerly he was the first U.S. citizen to film Red China for the National Broadcasting Company, and he later produced a documentary entitled "Inside East Germany."

In Cuba, Cohen photographed U.S. Congressman Charles O. Porter of Oregon questioning Castro about the release of political prisoners.

His camera records the building of the first Socialist generation in the Western Hemisphere in Marxist culture centers and boarding schools.

"Inside Castro's Cuba" is a film report on Cuban agriculture, Soviet aid and influence, the Bay of Pigs invasion, the families of political prisoners and the rural and urban Cuban himself.

Worker Suffers
Burns From Lead

A worker at the Owen Graduate Center construction site received an eye injury Wednesday when he fell while carrying a pot of molten lead. The lead burned his face.

Richard Pritchett, 34, 813 Warren St., Lansing, was treated and released at Edward W. Sparrow Hospital.

Visitor To Face
Weapon Charge

A Wacousta man was free on $500 bond Wednesday after being charged with carrying a concealed weapon Monday.

Terry L. Chamberlain, 9080 W. Herbison Road, Wacousta, will be examined today in Lansing Township Justice Court.

Campus police said they arrested Chamberlain early Monday morning at Michigan Avenue and University Drive after first contacting him on campus.

Police said Chamberlain was stopped for having an uncased and fully assembled rifle in the passenger area of his car, which is a violation of Michigan conservation law.

Arts, Letters Reveal Research

Students 'Quick To Sense Dying Humanities Tradition'

Every education should include a good dose of the humanities and this dose should be more than two year-long courses, according to a 12-page report prepared by the Humanities Research Center.

Recently approved by the College of Arts and Letters, the paper finds that the "humanistic aspect of college education has been put aside or left to a few introductory, general education courses."

"At best it is a concession to a dying tradition, in an atmosphere of condescension which students are all too quick to sense," the paper argues.

"Because the humanities discipline his (the student's) mind and emotions equally and direct them to ideas and ideals beyond his immediate self, they must be central to the education of all men," it emphasizes.

"But contrary to popular opinion," the paper states, "humanism in a university is at odds neither with the sciences nor with professional education."

"Wherever learning takes place humanism is being exemplified."

"It is high time that humanists spell out the social values of humanistic studies," the paper continues. "This they have failed to do."

Studying the humanities leads to several socially desirable goals, according to the report:

--An understanding of the role of law in making orderly and constructive societies possible.

--An understanding of the nature of social change.

--An understanding of the development of contemporary institutions including the economic order, the nation state, representative government, the church and education.

--An understanding of the historical sources of social conflicts and their resolution.

--An understanding of the discipline that underlies the great and lasting achievements in literature and the arts.

--An understanding of man's efforts to construct tenable metaphysical and epistemological theories.

--An understanding of the impact of scientific discovery of modern society.

--An understanding of the value systems, cultural patterns and social institutions of other societies.

Consumer Helped

Twenty-five growers and roadside stand operators in nine southeastern Michigan counties organized the Michigan Certified Farm Markets this year to help consumers avoid unethical highway-based peddlers, according to Don Hine, district extension marketing agent for southeast Michigan.

Seniors Of The Week

Week's Seniors See Misconception

Seniors of the Week Bettie Lowi and Ken Hoffman are both from south of the Mason-Dixon line.

Bettie came here from Gadsden, Ala., and Ken from Nashville, Tennessee.

"I think that most people in the North, because of what has gone on in Mississippi and Alabama, have a distorted view of the South," Ken remarked.

"People in the South are more liberal than the people of the North think," he went on. "This is true of the cities but not so much of the rural areas."

Bettie agreed. "Misconceptions are in the minds of the outsiders in so far as the prevalence of fanaticism. Many people who would integrate are afraid of ingroups like the Ku Klux Klan."

Both agreed that it will be a long time before integration is accepted in the South.

"You can't change an institution in five or 10 years if it's been in existence for 100," Ken said.

"It will take many years before the people will in their hearts accept it," Bettie added.

"I don't think that an effective method of total integration in the South can be found until it can be shown that segregation no longer exists in the North," Ken concluded.

Bettie, with majors in Spanish and Russian, came here on an orchestra scholarship.

"My mother was determined to have a string quartet in the family. So I started on the cello when I was in the fourth grade. But we never got more than an ensemble," she said.

She has belonged to MSU orchestra, State Singers, Union Board, Panhellenic Council, Russian Club, and Spanish Club. She has also worked on Greek Week. Welcome Week and Presidents' Council. She has been president of Alpha Epsilon Phi and temporary chairman of Forums on the Union Board.

Last year, from January to July, Bettie studied at the University of Puerto Rico and the Conservatory of Music in Rio Piedras.

In August she visited Peru. This summer she hopes to work with the National Security Agency making area studies. This is a highly secret part of the Department of Defense. If she doesn't continue working with this agency, she hopes to go to Northwestern or the University of Chicago to get her masters degree.

Ken is assistant advertising manager of the State News.

"At first I just wanted a job," he said. "But after not even a term of working here I began to like it. Advertising is fascinating in the way it affects people's lives."

The merchants in East Lansing look to the State News as the only medium for bringing their products to the student body, he said.

"It's a challenge and a pleasure working for an award-winning newspaper. The biggest benefit I've had on the newspaper is dealing with people in business situations," he went on.

Now an accounting major, Ken hopes to go on to law school, and eventually into corporation law.

He hopes to go to either Vanderbilt, Michigan or Wayne University law schools.

Presently working on Greek Week, Ken has also worked on Water Carnival and J-Hop. He is publicity chairman of Senior Council and a member of Zeta Beta Tau.

Strict Laws Needed

Romney Urges Safe-Traffic Acts

Gov. George Romney called Wednesday for "immediate and decisive action" to remedy highway safety problems that cost Michigan 2,125 lives and an estimated million dollars a day in damages in 1964, according to a United Press International report.

In a special message to the legislature Romney centered his traffic safety plea around recommendations for a beefing up of law enforcement at the state and local levels, more stringent licensing

Crab Is Guinea Pig

Topic Of Study Is 'Learning'

By JEAN PITCHFORD
State News Staff Writer

A research project concerning the relationship between molecules and learning has been started by W. C. Corning, assistant professor of biophysics.

Specifically, Corning hopes to find where learning occurs in the nervous system of the horseshoe crab, and what changes in nerve cell structure allow it to learn.

Corning, who obtained his degree from the University of Rochester, is conducting the experiment under a grant from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

The experiment will consist of three parts. First, the crab is "taught," using ordinary conditioning. A light is shown on it for ten minutes, followed by a shock across the tail, causing it to jerk.

"After several trials, the crab will wag its tail when exposed to light," Corning said.

The next step is to measure electrical activity in the nerve cells while the animal is learning. When the activity of the cell change, the animal is killed, and the nerve cells are compared with those of control crabs to see what chemical changes have occurred.

The horseshoe crab was chosen for the experiment because it has a simple nervous system. All functions are not controlled by a single "brain," but each is handled separately by ganglia spread out along the spine.

War History Told Again

Michigan's participation in the Civil War is accurately recorded in "Michigan and the Civil War Years 1860-1866: A War-time Chronicle," prepared by George May, research archivist for the Michigan Historical Commission.

The book relates the political and military events of the war from January 1860 to the Democratic victory at Charleston, S.C., in 1860 to July 4, 1866, when state officials were given regimental flags at Detroit as a war memorial.

Active Farmers

Michigan's active farmers in 1964 are listed in the "Michigan Farm and Ranch Directory," published by the Michigan Department of Agriculture.

The directory, available at MSU, lists the names, addresses and telephone numbers of all active farmers in Michigan.

School For Blind Organizes Cub Pack

By PHYLLIS HELPER
State News Staff Writer

Every child should experience scouting. And because "scouting is fun for everyone" the Michigan School for the Blind has started a Cub Scout pack for its grade school students.

Began last November, the pack includes 15 students, ages eight to ten.

Mrs. Ruth Kennedy, superintendent of the school, said that the majority of the scouts are totally blind.

She also explained that more children would like to join, but are unable to because facilities at the school are unavailable for a larger number.

The group meets at the School for the Blind, but is part of Pack 225 of the Willow Street School.

"By being part of another pack," Mrs. Kennedy, also the den mother, said, "a step is taken in broadening relationships with children in other schools."

"This emphasizes associations with children of normal sight. It teaches our children to associate with others, and helps others to learn to live with and accept our students."

The Cubs follow the same program as full-sighted students. They have weekly den meetings, monthly pack meetings, and perform tests to advance to the next rank.

"We try not to adapt the program any more than we have to," George Zarka, den father and a teacher at the school said.

"In the scout organization," Zarka continued, "the Cubs are always working towards a higher rank."

Presently the pack has monthly meetings on the last Tuesday of each month, but Zarka explained that they were short of leaders for the children.

The pack can use groups or individuals to help at these monthly meetings. Chaplains for activities are also needed.

Any student or group interested in working one night a month with the pack should call George Zarka at the Michigan School for the Blind, 373-3730.

Intruder Considered Mentally Incompetent

Charles English, the man who broke into Gov. Romney's office early last May armed with a pistol and a knife, was ruled mentally incompetent for the second time Tuesday.

English received the same ruling in his first hearing shortly after the incident.

He was committed to Kalamazoo State Hospital and appealed his case.

No new evidence was introduced at the latest hearing because the aim was to determine his mental competency at the time of the incident, not his present condition.

Gov. George W. Romney gave his account of the occurrence Monday.

It is now up to the doctors at the hospital to determine the length of English's treatment.

Young, Old Miss Churchill

Britain's Man-In-The-Street
Eulogizes War-Time Leader

LONDON (AP)—"I hate to think what would have happened to us all without him. I just dread to think of that."

These words from James Crumley, 75-year-old former Scottish international soccer player, typified man-in-the-street reaction Wednesday to the death of Sir Winston Churchill.

Crumley, now proprietor of a chain of fish and chip shops in London, went on:

"His death is a great loss to this country. He has been such a great man. Throughout his life he proved himself a great battler, a man you just had to respect. "There is no doubt about it. During the war he saved this country and saved us all."

The reaction among even the youngest was the same as that of the elderly: a great man to whom all owe so much has gone from their midst.

Mrs. Eve Browne, a young London housewife, told her children, Carolyn, 6, and Ann, 5, of the death, and explained to them:

"He led our people during the war."

The two children discussed the matter with each other for a few moments, then returned to mother and said: "The robbers will be glad now, won't they?"

Said Mrs. Browne: "I think even the robbers will be sad to see him go. They had just as much respect for him as we had."

A London fashion model, Karen Van Laun, 21, said: "I was just born when he was still a very powerful man. His death is the end of a great chapter in British history. I suppose we all knew he was dying but we didn't really want to believe it. It is very sad, especially since he had made such a tremendous fight, but he had a very full life -- he did everything he wanted to do."

As the news spread, flags went to half-staff all over London and elsewhere in the country. Men were seen wearing black ties.

Explained Mark Cogley, landlord of the Goat Tavern in fashionable Mayfair:

"As soon as I heard of Sir Winston's death, my first thought was: Where is my black mourning tie? I have never worn the tie except in mourning for relatives or the monarch."

A London antique dealer, Peter Ritchie, said: "He was the man we all admired, irrespective of politics. I cannot think there will ever be a greater Briton."

Ivor Spencer, secretary of the Guild of Professional Toastmasters, who had introduced Sir Winston Churchill to many dinner guests over the years, said:

"I still have a Churchill cigar I got some years ago. I would never dream of smoking it. It is a relic I will always treasure. You must believe in miracles after the miraculous way that Churchill saved this country from defeat in World War II. He was worth a dozen divisions to the British people and the allied cause."

Bert Johnson, veteran London

"Churchill saved us all when things were dead against us. He was fearless when I guess quite a few of us were afraid. When I heard he was dead, I got a cold feeling, all sad, in my stomach."

February
Decrees
Are Made

The year 1965 has been proclaimed Michigan Colleges Foundation Year and February will be Heart Education Month in Michigan.

The proclamations were made Wednesday in Lansing by Gov. George W. Romney.

The Governor urged all Michigan citizens to support the Michigan Heart Association's work. The Heart Association supports 41 Michigan heart research projects and gives financial aid to the American Heart Association and its research.

The proclamation of 1965 as Michigan College Foundation Year recognizes the importance of the 15 member colleges to the continued cultural and economic progress of Michigan and the Michigan Colleges Foundation is an efficient medium for support of these colleges, according to Gov. Romney.

Clinic Directors To Meet

Directors of speech and hearing clinics of seven Michigan universities will meet Friday at Kellogg Center.

Purpose of the meeting is to discuss lengthening the training for speech pathologists and audiologists in Michigan colleges and universities, according to Herbert J. Oyer, professor and head of the MSU Department of Speech.

Oyer reports that the American Speech and Hearing Association has become an accrediting body and is reviewing speech and hearing programs throughout the country.

The ASHA has voted to lengthen training programs for speech pathologists and audiologists to five years and through the masters degree, said Oyer.

Accreditation in Michigan currently is based on four years in a college program for the undergraduate degree.

Meeting participants will represent Central Michigan, Eastern Michigan, Michigan State, Northern Michigan, Wayne State and Western Michigan universities and University of Michigan.

Oyer is also chairman of the ASHA committees on scientific affairs and research in hearing aids.

ATL Professor
Publishes Essay

An essay on MSU's Department of American Thought and Language has been included in a recently published book, "American Studies in Transition."

Author of the essay is John J. Appel, assistant professor of American Thought and Language at MSU. A native of Weimar, Germany, he earned his degrees from the University of Miami and the University of Pennsylvania and joined the Michigan State faculty in 1962.

His other published works include articles on Irish and German immigrant historiography for a number of scholarly journals.

The book was published by the University of Pennsylvania Press.

Heart Month
Coming Up

February is Heart Month. How many years will you be able to celebrate it?

Excess weight, cigarette smoking, inactivity and high blood pressure and cholesterol level are pointing out those susceptible to heart attack years before it arrives.

Heart experts cannot agree on the exact reason why half a million Americans die of heart attacks each year. But they agree that there are recognized danger signs.

Today's Health magazine states that an abuse of prosperity is the greatest cause of heart attacks. Two packs of cigarettes a day, too many calories and excess drinking can all abuse the heart.
