

DEMOCRATS ATTEMPTING TAKEOVER OF UNIVERSITY

All State Colleges Aim Of Program

Pressures Exerted On Grievances And Hirings

By CHARLES C. WELLS
State News Editor-In-Chief

Michigan Democrats have launched a campaign seeking to strengthen their political influence over this state's colleges and universities.

Their initial effort is underway at Michigan State.

The power struggle here extends to the faculty, the administration, and the Board of Trustees. If it is successful, it will be tried at other state institutions.

One of the steps in the campaign was a meeting to organize the faculty June 17. In his invitation to selected faculty members,

EXCLUSIVE

Zolton A. Ferency, Democratic State Central Committee chairman, said that one of the objectives was to "consider the creation of a Committee on Higher Education for the (Democratic) Party in Michigan--from members of staffs of the public universities and colleges, the boards of control, and other party members."

Ferency attended, as did Warren M. Huff, chairman of the Board of Trustees, from Plymouth, and Clair White, board member from Bay City. The meeting was one of the first visible signs of a possible rift between MSU administrators and some of the Democrats on the Board of Trustees.

According to faculty members who attended, Clair White told the group to come to members of the Board of Trustees instead of going through MSU administrative channels with their problems.

Another step in the campaign was to pressure the MSU administration into hiring John Murray as assistant professor of journalism.

Murray has served as executive assistant to former Gov. G. Mennen Williams, director of public relations for the Michigan Democratic Party, and director of public affairs for the Michigan Civil Defense. Until his appointment to the MSU post, he was public relations director for the Michigan highway department, a Civil Service job under John C. Mackie.

When Murray first applied for an MSU teaching job, he was turned down because the Department of Journalism could not meet the salary he wanted. Another instructor was hired.

However, later, reportedly under pressure by Board Chairman Warren M. Huff, Murray was hired. Supposedly receiving the second highest salary in the department, Murray is said to be paid partially from journalism department funds and partially from a contingency fund administered by the Provost's Office.

"The issue here isn't the man's qualifications. They are excellent," said one faculty member. "But, if the trustees can step in and swing an appointment or a higher salary for a qualified political friend, who's to say they couldn't get an appointment for an unqualified friend?"

A third step is the clearing of important Board of Trustee agenda items with top Democratic leaders in Michigan. During two closed sessions of the board this spring, Warren M. Huff is reported to have admitted to other board members that he had "cleared" tax reform and its relationship to Michigan higher education and MSU's proposed medical program with Gus Scholle, president of the Michigan AFL-CIO.

Another step is pressure on administrative officials by Democratic members of the Board of Trustees to invite Zolton A. Ferency

Sewage Plant Use Approved

The Board of Trustees has approved the conversion of the sewage plant near the Brody dorms into a River Laboratory. The ponds and tanks will be cleaned and used to grow and hold fishes. The project will be under the direction of the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife.

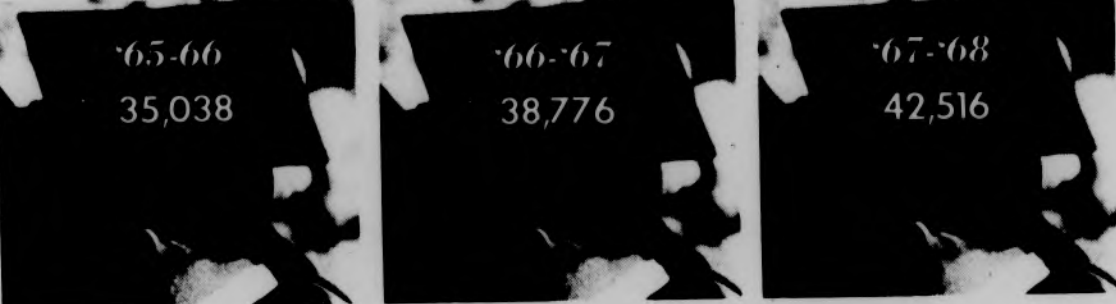

Work on the new sewage plant a mile west of the present facility has stalled because of a plumbers' dispute. The argument over the placement of non-union fixtures may delay the completion of the new plant until October. MSU owns the land on which both plants are located. Operation of both plants is financed on a use basis between MSU, East Lansing and Meridian Township.

East Lansing City Manager John M. Patriarche said yesterday that the existing contract called for the old plant to be demolished when no longer in use.

Phillip J. May, secretary for business and finance, said, however, that the conversion would save both the city and the University money.

May also said that he would file a request for a grant from the U.S. Public Health Service to finance the conversion.

Patriarche said that shut-down of the old plant will be almost immediate when the new $3.5 treatment plant goes into operation.

42,500 Enrollment Projected For 1967

MSU administrators have repeatedly stated that this University will continue to accept its fair share of those Michigan students wanting a college education.

That "fair share" will be an estimated 42,500 students predicted for the 1967-68 academic year. That will be about 7,000 more students than this year's expected enrollment of 35,038 students.

The projection was made on the basis of MSU enrollment patterns from 1961 through 1964.

For the coming school year, there will be about 7,900 entering freshmen; 23,138 returning sophomores, juniors and seniors; 2,000 graduate students; and 2,000 transfer students. This means there will be about 12,000 new faces on the MSU campus for the coming year.

The increase for the coming year is expected to be 12.1 per cent or a 3,770 more than last fall's enrollment of 31,268.

In 1966-67 there are 38,776 students expected. Breakdown: 8,100 entering freshmen; 26,076 returning sophomores, juniors and seniors; 2,300 graduate students; and 2,300 transfer students. This will be an expected increase of 3,538 over 1965-66.

In 1967-68, enrollment will zoom to 42,516 students, a 3,440 increase. This will include a breakdown of 8,300 freshmen; 28,916 returning sophomores, juniors and seniors; 2,650 graduate students; and 2,650 transfer students.

For the projection from this year to 1967-68, MSU administrators believe that the number of returning sophomores, juniors and seniors will hold an even 74 per cent of the total enrollment pattern.

From the 1961-62 enrollment of 22,724 to the 1967-68 enrollment of 42,516 expected, the enrollment increase percentage rises sharply and then declines.

From 1961-62 to 1962-63 there was a 10.2 per cent increase and another 10.2 per cent increase in enrollments for the next academic year. Then enrollments in the fall of 1964 hit a high of 13.2 per cent over the previous year's fall enrollment.

The percentage increase in enrollments for this year will be down to 12.1 per cent. Then in 1966-67 it will continue to decline to 10.7 per cent over the 1965-66 enrollment.

While the 1967-68 enrollment is expected to be a record, percentage-wise the increase of 9.6 per cent from the previous year will be the lowest since the increase in the 1961 record enrollment.

The percentage of out-state students will probably continue at its 20 per cent ratio.

REFERENCE MATTER GROUPED

Library Moving Books

Students returning to the campus this fall will find significant changes in the library's reference system.

All reference materials, with the exceptions of those in the science room, will be concentrated in what is now the Humanities I Room. The science library will eventually be moved to South Campus.

Students will still check out reserve books in the divisional library rooms, but they will go to the present Humanities I for any reference materials or help in finding books.

A professional librarian will be on duty at all times to aid students in the central reference room.

Richard E. Chapin, director of libraries, believes the new system will enable the library to provide better service for students.

"This new system permits us to take all the professional personnel we now spread thin and concentrate them in one spot. When a student is having difficulty finding something anywhere in the library, he will come to the central reference room for help."

A librarian will also be on duty throughout much of the day near the card catalogue in the lobby.

Plans have already been completed for a $4 million addition and remodeling project for the library. A $3 million addition on the present site of Wells Hall will house a new graduate research library. The U.S. Office of Education has said it will contribute $1 million to this addition.

An estimated $500,000 will be spent to remodel the present library and another $50,000 on equipment, utilities and miscellaneous construction costs.

University officials are hopeful that the joint capital outlay committee of the state legislature will approve preliminary planning money for the new library addition when it re-convenes in the fall.

Hagadorn Decision Delayed

City Council delayed long-awaited action Monday night on a recommendation by the Traffic Commission that Hagadorn Road be widened to four lanes without boulevard.

Councilwoman Mary P. Sharp called for more time to study the Traffic Commission's report on the controversial issue of what to do with Hagadorn Road, now a major north-south artery linking city and campus.

Residents along Hagadorn Road have protested the boulevard plan since early spring, fearing possible loss of front yards.

According to City Engineer Robert M. Bruce, the city would have to purchase 100 feet of right of way needed for a median.

Area resident Carl Goldschmidt, speaking in favor of the boulevard plan at the council meeting Monday night, said only 80 feet would have to be purchased, affecting three residents.

He supported Police Chief Charles F. Pegg, who has argued that the boulevard would be safer than an undivided road.

The East Lansing Traffic Commission hated to recommend any changes for North Hagadorn Road, a commission member, Franklin Kircher, said in an interview Friday.

Until Ingham County and the University decide what to do with South Hagadorn, which runs along the east edge of the campus, any changes in North Hagadorn could become obsolete in five years, he explained.

In a quandary, the commission has deferred the matter to city engineer, Bruce who recommended the least expensive of four projects proposed: widening North Hagadorn to four lanes, without a boulevard.

The four lanes would double the road's present capacity of 8,500 vehicles daily. Its cost would be $258,850 as compared with $467,500 for a boulevard.

The traffic commission approved Bruce's proposal at a meeting last week. Construction at the east edge of the campus prevents the county and the University from deciding what to do with South Hagadorn, Kircher said.

"Hagadorn will be a mess until the buildings are completed," he remarked. He cited other improvement projects scheduled in the area that could affect Hagadorn in the future.

These include a plan to make Albert and Ann streets one way to take some of the load off Grand River, and a plan to build a new intermediate school east of Hagadorn, requiring an extension of Burcham Drive.

Go West---He Did

DANIEL WEST, the former state representative from Detroit, has beat a well-timed retreat from the State of Michigan.

WEST, who was elected to two terms in the legislature while masquerading under the name of a prominent New York attorney, is wanted on innumerable counts of fraud and income tax evasion by both the state and federal governments.

HOWEVER, he skipped town before his trial.

THE Detroit Free Press aptly observed that West may be quietly meeting the qualifications for state representative in some other area of the country.

THERE IS a sidelight to the West story which should interest MSU students. When 111 students were arrested at a grasser in Shiawassee County in the spring of 1964, West was outraged at the lack of morality of the modern college student.

HE called for a thorough investigation of liquor on campus, including married housing units.

WHAT'S THAT old saw about people who live in glass houses?

Liberal Resources

THE DEVELOPMENT of the Justin Morrill College illustrates one of the most important assets of a large university.

THE NEW college will offer a liberal arts education with an international emphasis on par with similar programs offered at some of the finest private schools in the nation.

HOWEVER, MSU has one advantage which the smaller schools do not. It does not need to search far and wide to obtain top-flight faculty members for its liberal arts program. It can draw on the finest minds in each of the University's 75 departments.

MSU's liberal arts program will be unique in that it will place equal emphasis on the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences. A small college without a wide variety of departments could not offer such abroad program.

AS GORDON Rohman, dean of the college, points out, too many people think of "liberal arts" as merely including subjects such as art, music and literature. In reality, they include all of the natural and social sciences as well.

THUS, A large university can provide several advantages for the development of a highly specialized program.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Drew Pearson I'm Not

To the Editor:

Okay, okay, you've had your fun, friends.

Your recent presentation of my meek little comments from the other side of the Potomac shocked me into a manic-depressive state that will take much remedy and cure (probably via the Scotch and soda).

Really, I think you overdid things a little. Merriman Smith

-To Friend and Foe Alike-

does not get such display in the 100 papers a day that receive his stories. And what's this "OUR MAN IN WASHINGTON" bit?

First off, I hardly consider myself a man.

Secondly, "IN WASHINGTON" connotes some sort of professional full-time digger, who runs from senator to congressman, pinning each one's ears to the wall with penetrating questions.

I am first, a full-time 9-5:30 employee of the Civil Rights Commission. I am next, a person on the extreme outside of everything that is happening here, except in civil rights.

When I have time to fidget about in search of things to write about for columns, the usual route and role is to call, let's say Art Buchwald's office. His secretary says he's not in and she doesn't know when he'll be in. I say for him to call me. Then I sit and wait.

But I'll continue to incorporate all underhanded techniques available to come up with copy. Unfortunately since my wallet frequently sags, I cannot bribe anybody. I'll continue, however, to keep my eye peeled for stuff. Like the lady who comes around by our alley everyday and goes through the garbage cans in search of usable items.

I suggest that the "OUR MAN IN WASHINGTON" subhead be refined a little so as not to purport the notion that I'm a junior Drew Pearson.

Jim Sterba.

To The Reporter:

If you're not our man, then whose are you--theirs? Would you prefer the column title, "Sour Man in Washington."

Our proposition concerns your facility to mobilize your reverberating circuits in the anterior section of your body, and spit out, via tongue in cheek transits, a surplus of unique and valuable ideas.

But if you're going to feed us this line about the relative insignificance of #347041 at 125 5th in D.C., why not do up a piece for our readers. We're sure that those who have watched you hang up your D.C. Wash. know you don't use starch... even if you're a white collar man by day.

The fact that you are willing to confess all could prove an intriguing piece in itself.

The Three Of Us -- Apart

WHEN I wear a bright pink dress, it's striking. When you wear one, it's flashy. When the well-built blonde down the hall wears one, it's vulgar.

WHEN MSU hires a prominent new faculty member, it's the result of a vigorous recruitment program. When the university down the road hires one, it's academic piracy.

WHEN I speak out at a teach-in, I'm defending freedom of speech. When my opponent speaks out, he's shooting off his mouth.

WHEN I swallow an insult from my employer to keep my job, it's adapting to the situation. When you swallow one, it's compromising. When he swallows one, it's crawling.

WHEN I write a column, it's interpreting the news. When you write one, it's slanting. When he writes one, it's distortion. WHEN MY child interrupts a conversation, he's spirited. When yours does the same, he's undisciplined. When his child interrupts, he's a brat.

WHEN I get a D, it's bad luck. When you get one, it's the result of slacking off. When he gets one, it's plain stupidity.

WHEN I try to run your life, I'm concerned. When you try to run mine, you're domineering.

MY TERM paper is in the planning stages. Yours isn't started. I DON'T study because I'm ambitious to get out in the real world. You're lazy.

WHEN MY professor tells the dean he's wrong, he's offering constructive criticism. When a student does the same to my professor, he's an insufferable upstart.

WHEN I throw away my husband's papers, I'm being efficient. When he throws away mine, he's being officious.

WHEN I yell, I'm blowing off steam. When you yell, you're venting your spleen.

WHEN I buy a dress on sale, I'm being thrifty. When my husband buys a new gadget for the car, he's a spendthrift.

Charges Shortage Of Army Supplies

Sen. John Stennis (D-Miss.) Tuesday told the Senate there are serious shortages in army supplies and combat equipment because of the expanding war effort in Viet Nam. Stennis said his information comes from a "classified report on army readiness" approved by the Senate defense subcommittee which he heads.

Approve Voting Rights Bill

The House gave final approval Tuesday to a compromise version of the administration voting rights bill. Final Senate action on the bill is expected Thursday, and it will go to the White House for President Lyndon B. Johnson's signature on Friday.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has approved a long-awaited consular treaty with the Soviet Union. If ratified, the treaty would allow the Russians to open consular offices in major U. S. cities. The U.S. could do the same in the Soviet Union.

Draft Quota Hiked

The September draft quota was set even higher. The September quota is 27,400 men, the largest since the Korean War. The quota for October is 33,600 men, including 4,600 for the Navy.

U.S. Funds Bail Demonstrators?

A civil rights leader said Tuesday that federal funds of more than $3,000 were used to bail voting rights demonstrators out of jail in Allendale, S.C. But a U. S.

official denied the money had been spent. If the federal funds were spent, it would represent a drastic departure from previous government policy in regard to civil rights demonstrations.

Marines Burn Viet Hamlets

U.S. marines burned two South Vietnamese hamlets to the ground Tuesday in retaliation for sniper attacks near the Da Nang air base. Reporters indicated that several of the 25 persons killed were not Viet Cong but civilians, including women and children. They also said the Marines refused to give civilians time to clear their belongings out of their straw houses before they were burned.

A-Bomb Victim Dies

To the Editor:

The following item which appeared recently in "Asahi Shimbun," Japan's largest newspaper, may interest many of the students and faculty at MSU.

"A 20-year-old bus conductor died of the after effects of the atom bombing 20 years ago at the Nagasaki A-Bomb Hospital.

"The A-bomb victim, Kimiko Matsuda, followed her father who died of A-bomb after-effects in 1963.

"Her mother and two elder sisters are being treated at the Nagasaki A-Bomb Hospital.

"Miss Matsuda, for whom the A-bomb effects had remained latent, had supported her family until early this month when she was admitted to the hospital."

Since many MSU students have given many demonstrations of their concern for the less fortunate peoples of Asia, I can't help wondering why some of these students do not start a drive for funds to aid many more Miss Matsuda's, in the prime of life but disabled by the after-effects of the A-bomb.

400000 Says He's All Man

To the Editor:

I wish to correct a recent column written by Dave Hanson. He assumed that the student with the student number 400,000 will be a freshman arriving in the fall. In addition, he said #400,000 will be a machine. Must protest, because my student number is 400,000. I received this number in June, 1964, six months before I entered MSU as a graduate student in French.

I am not from Cleveland, but from Seattle, Wash. While I am flattered by the mental prowess you attribute to me, I resent being referred to as "sexless."

INFORMING RURAL SOCIETIES

AID Sponsors Communications Study

The success of the federal government's foreign aid programs has been said to rest ultimately on the recipient villagers, sometimes tradition-bound illiterates unresponsive to new ideas.

Consequently the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) granted MSU's Department of Communication over a million dollars for research on how new ideas are spread and adopted in rural societies abroad.

MSU received the grant of $1,236,357 in December of 1964. Everett M. Rogers, associate professor of communication, is director of the project, formally called "Diffusion of Innovations in Rural Societies."

"The main notion is that villagers in developing countries have been most difficult to reach with programs of directed social change," Rogers said.

Programs of change include

U.S. AID programs of technical assistance, United Nations agencies, and national community development, public health and extension service programs.

Rogers and his associates are concerned with why these programs of change are successful in some villages and not in others.

They have selected Brazil, Nigeria and India as project sites. Fourteen research workers are there now, with three purposes in mind, Rogers said:

--to identify innovators and opinion leaders in peasant villages, and their role in the diffusion and adoption of new ideas, --to develop improved research methods in communication for use in developing countries,

--to train Brazilians, Nigerians and Indians in how to do communication research so they may continue it when the project is completed.

The researchers will focus on innovations in agriculture, such as the use of fertilizers, new crop varieties and cultivation methods, Rogers said.

They will also consider innovations in health and sanitation, such as latrines, cholera vaccination, nutritional practices and birth control.

Rogers said the project will be carried out in three phases. Phase one, already initiated in Brazil, requires data-gathering in 80-100 villages in an attempt to determine why programs of change have been successful in some and not in others.

Two researchers from the MSU faculty, Gordon Whiting and William Herzog, both instructors in communication, are working in Brazil, with their headquarters at the University of Minas Gerais in Belo Horizonte.

Phase one will begin in Nigeria on Oct. 1 and in India on Dec. 1.

For phase two of the project, researchers will interview heads of farm households in about 16-20 of the 100 villages.

The next step is to initiate various techniques of change, Rogers said. "For example, we might give each village leader a transistor radio, or hold literacy classes in another village to prepare them to receive mass media."

Phase three is a series of field experiments in those 16-20 villages. These experiments are designed to measure the impact of various techniques of change, introduced after phase two, Rogers said.

Meanwhile, back at MSU, the researchers have established a "diffusion documents center," located in A-2 Wells Hall.

In the center are about 870 different publications dealing with the diffusion of new ideas. "We also publish an annual bibliography in July for research workers anywhere who want to know what has been done on this subject," Rogers said.

Dems Attempt Takeover

to join the faculty as a member of the Department of Political Science.

One MSU faculty member noted that Ferency would be invaluable to the Democratic Party in mobilizing the MSU faculty along partisan lines.

Frank Merriman, Republican board member from Deckerville, indicated that MSU administrators were "forced to check their proposals with Chairman Warren Huff before bringing them up before the regular board meetings."

"This is not a good policy," Merriman said. "If the issues are to be brought up, then they should come before the board as a whole and not be funneled through its chairman first."

Commenting on pressure by Democrats on President John A. Hannah, Merriman said:

"There is more pressure on President Hannah by Democratic members through their chairman on administration policies than at any other time since I first became a member in 1960."

The change in the non-partisan nature of the board has come since Jan. 1, when two new Democrats were added. There is now a Democratic majority of 6 to 2 Republican members.

"The change has come particularly in the actions of Chairman Warren M. Huff," he said.

Huff suggested closed meetings of the board without having the administration present. At first all trustees were invited to attend, but Frank Merriman, Stephen S. Nisbet (R-Fremont) and Connor D. Smith (D-Pinconning) declined.

Later Merriman attended several of the closed sessions, but was not invited to the July 21 meeting held the night before the regular board meeting.

Merriman said he disagrees with the policy of closed sessions with the administration absent.

"Our responsibilities as trustees of Michigan State are to hire the best administrative people we can and then let them run the University," he said.

"Partisan politics, like having one party group meet in secret, must play no part in a trustee's role. Higher education in Michigan is much more important than party politics."

Stephen Nisbet, commented he "is disgusted by the way the board is trying to organize the faculty on a partisan basis because higher education should be non-partisan."

"Decisions of the MSU Board of Trustees should not be made on a political basis."

"The board should have nothing to do with appointments to the faculty except in the appointment of the president," said Nisbet. "The trustees have the right to approve or disapprove of an appointment, but they should never insist on anyone being hired."

Friction between MSU administrators and the trustees is nothing new. In 1961, several Democratic trustees strongly opposed the appointment of Jack Breslin, President John A. Hannah's personal choice for University secretary.

Students Still Exempt From Draft Step-Up

President Lyndon B. Johnson's doubling of the draft call need not worry MSU students.

Col. Wilbur J. Myers, personnel manager of the State Selective Service, said, "The increase in the draft call won't affect the full-time students who are progressing satisfactorily."

He couldn't foresee any change in the government's policy concerning students.

"There's a population increase hitting this 18 to 20 age group," he said. "About a million and a half young men will be coming of age in the next few years, and not all of them will be going to college."

The draft board does expect to "tighten up on the fringe students, who have been jumping in and out of school ahead of the draft."

By Nov. 1 the University will be requested to recertify students and the "fringe students" may need reclassification.

Swimmers Eye European Trek

The NEWS In

SPORTS

With a month long trip to Europe dangling as a bonus, five Spartan varsity swimmers will compete in the National AAU Outdoor Swimming Championships in Maumee, Ohio, a week hence.

Winners and many of the runner-ups in the Amateur Athletic Union sponsored meet (Aug. 12-15) will be whisked off to Europe immediately after the meet's completion to take part in several international meets and clinics.

Swim All-Americans Gary Dille, Ed Glick and Jim MacMillan, plus sophomore Pete Williams and senior Denny Hill, all have their eyes on the all-expense paid European trek.

Ever since school let out this spring, Glick, Williams and Hill have spent an average of almost five hours a day in practice, under the supervision of coach Charles McCaffrey and his assistant, Dick Fetters.

Less than a month back MacMillan and Dille joined the threesome. And according to coach Fetters, the delay could hinder their chances of making the European-bound team.

"Dille and MacMillan missed some valuable training time by waiting so long to begin practice," said Fetters. "Right now they're going all out with a rigorous training schedule, but their late start might be their downfall. They're trying to do a lot in just a little bit of time."

The AAU is sponsoring two different trips. One junket will go behind the "Iron Curtain" into Eastern Europe, while a second group will tour Western Europe.

As it looks right now, first place winners will make the trip into Eastern Europe, with a second group traveling through Western Europe.

Fetters said that Hill and Williams had put in many long hours of training and that their effort could pay off.

The Spartan quintet as a whole looked impressive in the Eastern U.S. Diving and Swimming Championships in Philadelphia last weekend.

Williams grabbed first place in the 400-meter individual medley and added a second place finish in the 200-meter backstroke.

Dille, NCAA backstroke champion, finished third in the backstroke, giving evidence that he hasn't reached his top form yet. Dille, of course, is no stranger when it comes to traveling abroad. In 1964 Dille made the Olympic swimming squad and won a silver medal in Tokyo.

In the eastern meet MacMillan finished second in the 200 meter freestyle, while Hill was edged by Olympian Carl Roble for 1500 meters honors. A 400-meter relay team of Dille, Glick, Williams and MacMillan also took a second.

Ron Kramer Joins Lions

The Detroit Lions acquired the rights to all-pro tight end Ron Kramer Wednesday, and immediately announced they had signed him to a one-year contract.

Kramer, a former University of Michigan grid star, had asked the Green Bay Packers to trade him to Detroit earlier this year, so he could be closer to his family.

The Lions turned over their first 1966 college draft pick to the Packers in exchange for Kramer.

Collegiates, Browns Uncap Campaign

By LARRY MOGG
State News Sports Editor

All the glitter and glamour of the gridiron will unfold at Soldiers Field, Chicago, Friday night when the cream of the 1964 college football seniors match muscles with the Cleveland Browns, the best team in the professional football world.

It's advertised as the 32nd annual All-Star football game, and somewhere in the neighborhood of 100,000 people will gather in the Windy City to watch the All-Stars and the Browns get the jump on the football season.

The collegiate are caste in the role of underdogs again, something they have been every year since the affair was inaugurated. The pros lead in the series with 20 victories, compared to nine wins by the stars. There have been two ties. All-Star coach Otto Graham, the former all-time great quarterback of the Browns in the early 50's, has scrounged around the four corners of the nation and picked up a bevy of prime grid beef. Graham brought 49 into camp three weeks ago, and his squad appears to be loaded in several positions.

Offensively, the All-Stars should be a match for Cleveland. Graham has four All-American quarterbacks in camp, and two of them are Heisman trophy winners. Graham is expected to settle the starting signal-caller job, by employing two quarterbacks in the starting backfield.

Heisman winners Roger Staubach (Navy) and John Huarte (Notre Dame) will get Graham's call in the starting backfield. Staubach, a better runner although a top-flight passer, will man a halfback spot in the "Graham Cracker" offense. Huarte, who netted $200,000 in signing to play professionally with the New York Jets, will get the nod at quarterback.

But, if Graham is forced to look elsewhere for some quarterbacking help look no further than down his bench. Craig Morton (California) and Bob Timberlake (Michigan) have credentials that are on par with Huarte and Staubach.

Whoever does the throwing (and you can expect the All-Stars to keep the air filled with footballs), there will be a swarm of high-class receivers to do the catching.

Graham has so many good pass catchers, that his toughest task will be picking the starting ends. He has the likes of Bob Hayes (Florida A&M), an Olympic sprint champion; Fred Belitnikoff (Florida State), considered the best end in camp by Graham; Jack Snow (Notre Dame), who latched onto a record number of Irish passes last fall; and Larry Elkins (Baylor), who set all kinds of Southwest Conference pass-catching records.

The All-Stars also are well set in running stock. Tucker Frederickson (Auburn), Gale Sayers (Kansas), Ken Willard (North Carolina) and Junior Coffey (Washington) will do most of the ball-carrying.

Defense figures to be the weak spot for the All-Stars, who must contain the bull-like charges of Jimmy Brown and at the same time keep a watchful eye on Frank Ryan, the Browns' slick quarterback.

Graham is counting on defensive linemen Jerry Rush (Michigan State), Marty Schottenheimer (Grambling), Dick Butkus (Illinois), Glen Ressler (Penn State) and Archie Sutton (Illinois).

The All-Stars must get a good night out of their defensive halfbacks, where the Browns are expected to test most often.

Utilities Institute Formed

A series of meetings beginning last summer between the Graduate School of Business Administration and representatives of public utilities companies all over the country have resulted in the establishment of America's first Public Utilities Institute at MSU.

The institute, organized under the graduate school of business administration, will encourage research in the public utility field. Another function is to hold educational conferences for public utility executives.

"We are hoping that this institute will develop into a center of national importance in scholarly work in the field of public utilities and the social and economic aspects of the industry," said Alfred L. Seelye, dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration.

The institute will be wholly financed by grants from industry, Seelye said. Eighteen companies have already pledged a quarter million dollars and he expects 20 more firms to participate by the beginning of the new fiscal year.

The institute, which Seelye calls "a unique concept," may have far reaching effects on the school as well as industry.

As a center of research in the field, and the only one of that, it will raise the prestige of MSU's graduate school of business. Because of the educational opportunities it affords to students, and because industry executives from all over the country will attend conferences here, employment advantages will accrue to many graduates.

The institute will be housed in Eppley Center and will continue operations for five years on money already pledged. At the end of that time, the school and industry will evaluate its contributions and decide whether to continue it or not.

'Joy' Is A Real Beauty

By DAVE HANSON
State News Reviewer

"Joy in the Morning," the film currently at the Campus, is a really beautiful movie. Really—beautiful!

Yvette Mimieux says to Richard Chamberlain, "You're beautiful." He doesn't come right out and say so, but he agrees. Richard says to her, "You're beautiful." Everyone agrees. They are beautiful!

The film will be, no doubt, at least nominated for the Academy Award for cinematography. But the story doesn't need or deserve all the lavish color and Hollywood settings.

Richard plays a young law student during the twenties who wants to marry an innocent and inhibited young thing from the slums.

They get married. How will they get along? His father stops sending money and the school says he can't have another loan. They vow to live day-by-day, in sickness and in health, for richer or—for and like that. Sweet.

But M-G-M's idea of poverty isn't quite the same as author Betty Smith's. Poor Richard gets a job mowing the infield of the track course and is given a ski resort type bungalow just beyond the river in a setting that might have been created by a 19th century French Impressionist. Beautiful.

Poverty also means that they can afford a wardrobe to make any college student jealous. Poverty is, according to M-G-M, a psychological thing.

A high-school girl must have been called in as technical consultant on sex. Yvette's problem is that her step-father looked at her strangely and once touched her while she was asleep. "Oh, my God," says poor Richard. Indeed.

Everything turns out all right as you may have guessed. Yvette gets pregnant and his father decides to subsidize his education. Getting married is wrong, goes the moral, but having kids is wonderful.

Campus Bus Service Plans No Changes For Fall Term

The MSU bus service finds increased enrollment figures for the fall deceiving, and does not plan to add any new buses to its fleet.

General Foreman Henry Jolman said 10 of MSU's 13 buses will be in service at the start of fall term, "and if riding increases, we'll add more immediately."

He anticipated less traveling on campus, however, because many of the students will now have classes in their residence halls.

Buses will run on a 12-minute frequency, with the commuter buses on a six-minute frequency, the same as last year, Jolman said.

Bus drivers will record the number of passengers for each half trip and keep alert for overcrowding.

"If their figures indicate we are getting more loads than we should be, we can add service and announce the new schedule in a matter of days," he said.

MSU is looking into the possibility of leasing extra buses on short notice. It's impractical to buy new buses because student demand is so irregular, Jolman said. Each bus costs $26,000.

"We can't follow any trends because the University keeps expanding. Things aren't the same from one year to the next."

He said buses have lost riders during the summer months.

Though the summer lag may mean an increase in operation costs, MSU doesn't anticipate raising the cost of the bus pass.

The regular bus pass is $12 a term, and the commuter pass is $6 a term. Each pass is for an unlimited number of rides during the term.

For its first nine months of service, the MSU bus service hauled a total of 3,300,000 students a total of 280,000 miles.

Last winter term an average of 32,000 students rode MSU buses daily.

Resource Shortage Said Not Inevitable

Problems in the use of natural resources should be realized and planned for, Rolland R. Renne, director of the Office of Water Resources Research of the Department of Interior, said at a recent workshop in community resource development.

The nation need not accept the inevitability of natural resource shortage, he said, nor fear the risk of technology outracing population.

Renne, former assistant secretary of agriculture and a former president of Montana State College, said that there is an alternative.

Wise planning and management of resource use, he said, would include investments in research and new technology.

"We must recognize our problems with the use of natural resources," Renne said, "but man must avoid both hysteresis of starving and false visions of unlimited plenty."

If present trends were to continue, Renne said, the combined effects of soil erosion and urban uses would bankrupt the nation's agriculture land supply within a century.

"Many of our forest areas have been depleted," he said, "but the situation is improving because of highly developed commercial interests."

"Depletion of our grasslands is less evident but more serious than that of our forests because our grasslands are harder to replace," he said.

One of the most critical resource problems, Renne added, is water use.

"Our urban areas create more demand for water, but at the same time, cause it to move faster by providing more waterproof surfaces like streets and roofs."

"Pollution of water by waste and silt impairs use of water even as a habitat for fish, and the dredging of harbors and lakes are hidden costs of man-made changes," he said.

The United States, with one-tenth of the world's population, consumes more than 50 per cent of world mineral output, Renne said. He added that more than one-half of the minerals have been placed on the critical list.

Every river basin in the nation, except those in the Pacific Northwest, will be facing serious problems of water quantity and/or quality within 35 years, he said.

MSU Institute Translates Research

Classroom teachers may soon inherit the fruits of human learning research at the push of a computer's button.

The layman's use of computers to locate everything from a research document to a film strip is only one of about 16 projects conducted by the College of Education's Learning Systems Institute (LSI).

Ted Ward, professor of education, is director of the institute.

LSI was founded in fall of 1963 to serve as a "research translator," to translate research to provide the ways and means for educational change.

Under the Learning Information Center (LINCENT) project, information about aptitude and achievement tests or such educational materials as research documents and audio-visual aids would be on punched cards and accessible to the classroom teacher in a matter of minutes.

Administrators, students and counselors as well as teachers could use the computer as a reference aid, LINCENT Director John F. Vinsonhaler said.

"We see no reason why computers should not now take an important place along with other electronic media such as television, radio or tape recordings in making educational practice more effective," he said.

The clinic-school project is another of LSI's major efforts to bridge the gap between research and practice.

The clinic-school manual, as part of the project, contains a collection of over 150 hypotheses for teacher behavior, drawn from classroom incidents, Mrs. Judith Henderson, campus coordinator of the clinic-school project said.

Teachers were observed by colleagues and interns who documented their classroom behavior, specifically, the decisions they made in particular situations.

Each statement contains a description of the incident, the teacher's rationale for making the decision, the student reaction to the decision and a list of "good" alternative decisions.

Researchers in human learning have examined the manual, and in some cases, have taken exception to a teacher's decision.

In that case the researcher has prepared his own statement on why he disagrees with the teacher and what he would have done instead, in the light of learning research.

The manual stands as the "explicit model of what a master teacher, a good teacher, is like," Mrs. Henderson said.

The manual will be used beginning this fall in some MSU student teaching programs.

LSI is also developing a project to "package courses or parts of courses" for use in off-campus instruction.

School teachers and administrators around the state are demanding more courses in education than MSU has faculty to teach them, according to a report by Ward.

To meet this demand for off-campus instruction, LSI is developing the "system-designed course," or "instructor-less course."

Students would use tape recordings, films, reference books, pamphlets and study guides prepared by MSU faculty.

A supervisor chosen by the local school system and the University would guide the course in accordance with a manual.

The students would meet with an MSU faculty member for one or two sessions out of about 10, the report states.

The new techniques that develop from the system-designed courses of campus could be used in improving on-campus instruction, Ward said.

The counterpart to the Learning Systems Institute is the Human Learning Research Institute, created last March by the Colleges of Education and Social Science to serve as a focal point for all-university research, with a long-range bearing on the problem of education.

Shaw Film Set Friday

Irishman George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man" is a German production for the international film series to be shown 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday in Fairchild. The picture was an Academy Award nominee.

A satire of the glories of love and war, "Arms and the Man" involves Raina, the young lady of upper class Bulgarian society, with Capt. Bluntschli, the opportunistic, cynical Swiss officer of the defeated Serbian forces.

Raina's fiancée, Lt. Saranoff, had led the dashing charge that ended the Bulgarian war with the Serbs. Fleeing from the enemy, Bluntschli climbs into Raina's room to take refuge.

After getting over her first fright, Raina finds herself taking an interest in the Swiss officer who finds war little more than a grubby opportunity to make money. When Saranoff, showered with the praises of his countrymen, returns to Raina, she is no longer sure she will marry him.

While Raina hesitates, Saranoff finds the ambitious maid Louka a more willing partner. The film stars O. W. Fischer and Life Pulver.

AIR FORCE SCHOLARSHIPS

Nine Cadets Receive Aid

Nine MSU Air Force ROTC cadets have been selected to receive Air Force scholarships this fall.

The cadets were among 977 AFROTC cadets named as recipients for the new scholarship this week by Brigadier General William C. Lindley, Commandant, Air Force ROTC, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

Each scholarship covers the cost of tuition, books and fees. In addition, recipients will receive $50 per month during their junior and senior years in the four-year officer training program. The scholarships will become effective when the cadets enroll in AFROTC for their junior year this fall.

According to Lt. Col. Gerald T. Heyboer, professor of Aerospace Studies at MSU, the new scholarships will range from about $425 per year for in-state students, to $950 per year for out-of-state students, in addition to the $50 monthly allowance.

The scholarships were made available for the first time to Air Force ROTC cadets under the recently enacted ROTC Vitalization Act of 1964.

The number of scholarships awarded to each school hosting Air Force ROTC was based on the number of second lieutenants graduated at each institution for the past five years. All cadets qualified for enrollment in the junior year of AFROTC this fall were eligible for the scholarships.

Brody Preparing For Classes

Remodelling Includes Auditorium, Offices

Renovation of Brody Hall is on schedule, said T. L. Smith, assistant residence halls manager, and the new facilities should be ready for class use this fall.

Existing space in the Brody building is being remodelled into a 210-seat auditorium, three natural science labs and 19 faculty offices.

The estimated $130,000 project will provide facilities for teaching the entire state of University College courses for students living in the six-dorm complex. Offices of Residence Halls Manager Lyle A. Thorburn and his staff will be transferred from Brody Hall to the new Holmes Hall.

Multi-purpose rooms will be used for classes during the daytime and for recreation during the evening hours. New doors have been put on these rooms to make them more functional as classrooms.

University College students in the Brody dorms will be able to sign up for courses listed in the fall term schedule book. Drops and adds will be handled in Brody for these courses.

Faculty members who will have offices in Brody will serve as advisers for some of the students in the dorms.

The coming of classes to Brody Hall will end some of the long walks previously necessary. Bus service will continue this fall and students will be relieved to learn that the sewage plant across the river from the dorms will be closed sometime during fall term.

An estimated 3,000 students will be housed in the Brody dorms this fall, with an increasing number of freshmen. Two of the dorms are for women and two for men. The complex became co-ed in 1962.

Brody Hall serves as the dining and recreation area for students in the complex. It houses the largest university kitchen in the nation.

Brody Hall and Butterfield, Rader and Bryan dorms were part of the original construction project in 1954. Bailey, Emmons and Armstrong were built in 1956 and Butterfield was expanded in 1962.

Thief Bags Purse But Leaves Sack

The "sweet-tooth" bandit and a considerate thief both figured in campus crimes during the last week.

A coed left her purse in the women's restroom on the second floor of the Horticulture Building, Wednesday. When she returned, the purse and about $3.50 were missing, but a paper bag with her name on it held the other possessions from her purse.

A candy machine in Wilson was forcibly opened, Saturday, and an unknown amount of candy was taken from it. Another machine in Snyder was left open the same night by a serviceman. It was also rifled, campus police said.

On Wednesday a wall plaque was reported missing from the International Center.

Three students were arrested for being minors in possession Friday night and their case is pending.

A car sustained $60 damage the same day when a parked car in Parking Lot G rolled out of its parking space and struck it. The vehicle belongs to Thomas Stebbins, Monroe Falls, Ohio. A 1963 Falcon belonging to William R. Shay, 337 West McDonnell, was stolen by a juvenile Saturday.

Board Post To Professor

Charles Lawrence, professor of accounting in the Graduate School of Business Administration, has been elected to a one year term on the Board of Directors of The Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants.

The election took place at the association's annual meeting and convention held at Boyne Mountain Lodge. Lawrence has been active in the association since 1955 and has served with distinction on a number of the organization's committees.

He holds CPA certificates from the states of Colorado and Michigan and is also a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Grads Appointed

A former MSU student, John Cowan, has been appointed district manager of the Chicago Loop District for Lederle Laboratories, a division of the American Cyanamid Co.

Cowan, formerly a hospital representative in the Cleveland district, received a B.A. in Business Administration from MSU in 1956.

Suzanne Simpson, also a MSU graduate has joined the Maytag Co. as a home economics trainee in the firm's Linda Marshall home service department.

Miss Simpson's holds a B.S. degree in home economics education.

Good Families Seen As Vital To World 'Family Of Nations'

Rich as we are in the United States, we still need the underdeveloped countries of the world, Mrs. Zelma George told a College Week for Women audience here early this week.

"We're growing more interrelated and interdependent," she said. "We need the new 'underdeveloped' countries for their natural resources."

Mrs. George, a noted sociologist and a former member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations in 1960, added, "We think we are self-sufficient, but we would have to close down our factories in three months without some of the essential minerals imported from these new countries...we need their markets, too."

Mrs. George emphasized that the greatest single change in the world today has been the sudden and total involvement of all nations and people in world affairs.

"We have an obligation to new countries," she said. "Some have moved overnight from tribalism to internationalism. We had time to adjust and did what we have done in virtual isolation..."

"We could make mistakes and correct them before anyone knew. But new nations can make a mistake and it's known around the world while it's still happening."

Mrs. George noted many new countries of the world are trying to keep from aligning themselves with either the East or West. But China appeals to many new countries on the basis of their two common bonds -- anti-colonialism and color. China is the vanguard in aligning countries by color.

"It's a ridiculous way to divide mankind," Mrs. George asserted. "I am convinced that the time has come around the world for equality of all mankind. Any freedom we think we have is not really ours until everyone has it. As long as there are some who don't have it and see that we do and aren't giving it to them, they will want it."

Part of the struggle to improve lives falls to women, she noted.

"Women's place is still in the home; however, four walls of the house no longer contain the home. Functions of yesterday's woman are still hers...she still must provide services for the family. That many of these services come from outside the house now doesn't lessen the responsibility."

Mrs. George pointed out that a homemaker may have to go to the legislature to protect those services, but that is her job. It may be more important because it takes her outside the house.

"Women who say they are 'just housewives' are doing well if they are that. There is more unskilled labor in the home than anywhere," she said.

Mrs. George gave her husband, Clayborne George, a Cleveland, Ohio, attorney, credit for her closing statement: "There will never be a good family of nations until there are nations of good families." ... "and good people," she added.

2 Researchers Cited For Nutrition Study

Two Michigan State researchers were cited Wednesday night for their contributions to animal nutrition and teaching at the annual meeting of the American Society of Animal Science.

Elwyn R. Miller, associate professor of animal husbandry, was awarded the $1,000 American Feed Manufacturers Award for his basic research in baby pig nutrition.

Lyman J. Bratzler, professor of food science, won the $1,000 Distinguished Teacher Award, presented by Swift and Co., in recognition of his "outstanding undergraduate teaching." The award was based upon former students' evaluations of Bratzler and his meats courses.

Miller, who last year won the Junior Sigma Xi Award as the university's top scientist under 40 years of age, heads up a research team of animal husbandmen, biochemists and veterinarians who have completed more blood studies and electrocardiographs of baby pigs than anyone else in the world.

His basic studies have helped establish values for determining when a pig is normal and healthy. They also aid in finding out what causes nutrient deficiencies and the effect these shortages have on the animal.

Bratzler, in addition to his teaching duties, is also an internationally known meats researcher.

CLASSIC 'CHANGE-OF-PACE'

Serious Drama Praised

By DAVE HANSON
State News Reviewer

Before a disappointing but not disappointed audience Tuesday night, the Ledges Playhouse opened its change-of-pace production, "Oedipus the King."

The one-act, hour-and-a-half production, "Oedipus the King," has neither music nor comedy to attract customers to the Grand Ledge theater, but it gives the entire cast a chance to show off their talents as dramatic actors.

The play takes place at the final confrontation of Oedipus with the facts of his birth. Legend decreed that he would kill his father and marry his mother.

Oedipus, however, believes he is the son of Polybus, king of Corinth. When it is proved that he is actually the son of the king and queen of Thebes, he knows that he has been outwitted by the gods, for he has slain his father and is now married to his mother, Jocasta, the queen.

Director-actor Lael Woodbury commands the stage as Oedipus. He is cocky before doubts about his birth creep into his mind. He becomes mad and confused as the facts unfold. In his final blinded humiliation, Woodbury seems as strong an actor as ever.

As Jocasta, his queen, Margaret Woodbury handles the realization that she is also his mother with finesse. She seems to know the truth from the first and grabs at straws to disprove it.

Dave Hundhausen, as the priest, and the supporting cast that make up the chorus do a fine job. They are articulate and get their lines across.

Lane Bateman plays Creon, whom Oedipus views as a threat. It is Creon who is destined to rule when Oedipus blinds himself and begins his wandering exile.

The minor characters come and go to unfold the facts behind Oedipus' birth. They brighten the stage for their moment and then are gone, always leaving Woodbury as the focus.

His eyes are deep-set and he has the dark strength that such a part demands. At times he seems almost too sinister. When he returns to the stage with blood-streaked face, there is pain in his voice and movements.

It is an even production, balanced between emotion and fine acting. The background music is effective. The simple set and lighting allow all the attention to focus on the actors.

This production is, above all, a chance for the actors at the Ledges to act. Musicals and comedies please the crowds but often don't let the actors get their teeth into a part.

They cannot be expected to turn out a polished production with their time schedule the way it is, but the quality of "Oedipus" gives them a chance to show their talents in an off-beat way. More power to them.
