Top NCAA Quarterbacks All Come From Texas, Sir

NEW YORK (UPI)--The state of Texas has become a passer's paradise during the 1965 college football season despite the fact that the top Texan of them all - Bill Anderson - got away.

Four Texas schools boast quarterbacks ranking among the nation's top 10 passers. Yet none of the four stands much chance of winning the passing title because of Anderson, a native-born Texan who exercises his arm for Tulsa.

Anderson, a senior from Ferris, Tex., who threw only one pass in anger prior to this season, has made up for lost time. His 163 completions in six games has given him a staggering lead over runnerup Bob Griese of Purdue.

His passing prowess has placed him in excellent position to wipe out the NCAA record of 224 completions set by teammate Jerry Rhome, another transplanted Texan, last year. Anderson also leads the country in aerial yards 1919, touchdown passes 15 and in total offense 1861 yards.

Tom Wilson of Texas Tech heads the list of Texas passers with 98 completions for third place. Billy Stevens of Texas Western ranked second to Anderson in total offense with 1479 yards, is fourth in passing 94, followed by Spencer Washington of West Texas State and Vidal Carlin of North Texas State both 78 in eighth.

Stevens, a sophomore, and Washington and Carlin, both juniors, didn't throw a single pass among them in 1964. Stevens dropped from second to fourth this week after an open date but Carlin vaulted all the way from 28th place as the result of his starry effort against third ranked Arkansas. He completed 32 of 54 passes for 307 yards and two touchdowns in a 55-20 loss.

Anderson had an even more effective afternoon against Cincinnati, hitting on 32 of 55 attempts for 451 yards and six TD's, one short of Rhome's single game record of seven.

Mike Garrett of Southern California was throttled by a rugged Notre Dame defense and held to 47 yards. Nevertheless he maintained a virtually insurmountable 254-yard lead in the rushing department with an 895-yard total. Roy Shivers of Utah State took over second place with 641 yards.

Jerry Depoyster of Wyoming, became the fifth punting leader in as many weeks with a 44.2 average for 22 kicks.

1915 MAC Aggies Here For Homecoming

Many gridiron memories will be revived Saturday when 13 members of the 1915 Michigan State team return to the campus for the 50th Alumni Homecoming game against Northwestern.

The year 1915 was a big one in Michigan State (then Michigan Aggies) football history.

It was the year of the first Homecoming game. The Aggies met Oregon Agricultural College (now Oregon State) in that one.

It was a year in which the Aggies made a fine record, sweeping to five decisive victories while bowing only to the surprising Oregon Aggies.

It was the year in which Michigan State produced its first All-American, Jerry DaPrato, a brilliant fullback who ran for 15 touchdowns and booted 28 extra points and two field goals for a total of 124 points.

The team notched 259 points and allowed only 18 to its opponents.

The 1915 Aggies defeated Michigan, 24-0, at Ann Arbor, to record Michigan State's first shut-out over the Wolverines.

For Michigan, the defeat was the worst a team coached by Fielding Yost had taken at Ann Arbor.

The Aggies were coached by John H. Macklin, who recorded an excellent 29-4 record in his five-year tenure.

The returning group is due to arrive on campus Friday and will be feted at an evening dinner. They also will be introduced at the game on Saturday.

Expected to return are: Blake Miller, captain of the team; Charlie Butler; Sherm Coryell; Jack O'Callaghan; Jerry DaPrato; Lyman Frimodig; Chief Fuller; Dutch Oviatt; Gideon Smith; Brownie Springer; Herb Straight; Orville Laidlow, and Jack Heppinstall, team trainer.

GIANT COOKOUT

Concessions Outfit Attacks Hunger, Thirst

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

John J. Kennedy and the people of the MSU concessions department are Boy Scouts in the truest sense of the word. They must "Be Prepared" to "Do a good turn" for the average 70,000 people who attend football games at Spartan Stadium.

What's the good turn? To stop the hunger and thirst that develops in a spectator as the game progresses.

Kennedy prepares for this giant "cook out" by ordering approximately one ton of hot dogs, and numerous gallons of coffee and soft drinks. At this cook out however, the food is prepared on grills, or in the case of coffee, in vacuum cans which keep it hot from 8-10 hours.

The basis for Kennedy's estimates come on previous records and weather forecasts.

Sales at the games usually depend on the weather, and to a certain extent on the score of the game, Kennedy says.

"Cold weather brings large sales in coffee and hot chocolate, while during hot weather, soft drinks and ice cream get the call," he reports. Kennedy also noted that in a close game fans are much more likely to get involved in what is going on down on the field and thus stay away from concessions.

Vending in the stands, although it would increase income, was discontinued 15 years ago by the University, because it can create an inconvenience to fans at the game. "Vending can create blockage of the aisles, and may block a person's view of the game," Kennedy said. "We feel our obligation is to the spectator, and no one pays $5 a ticket to see the back of a vendor's head."

The money which is earned from concessions goes to the general fund of the University, but a percentage is taken out for the concessions department. Money from football games also played a major role in the construction of the International Center and Crossroads Cafe.

Money from this year's games may go to the improvement of the concession stands according to Kennedy. "I'm going to make some trips to other stadiums, and conduct some research for the possible revamping and remodeling of concessions for next year," Kennedy says.

An assistant manager and four section superintendents aid Kennedy at the games, each superintendent overseeing a number of stands in one section of the stadium. There are nearly 30 concession stands around the stadium, and approximately 225 people are involved in concessions work.

Homecoming weekend will be an especially busy one for the concessions department, as they must prepare a breakfast, four homecoming dinners, feed those at the game, the homecoming dance, and the campus police.

When the game is over and the stadium is empty, concessions work is not always done. This Saturday, for instance, the concessions department must set up the refreshments for the big Homecoming Dance.

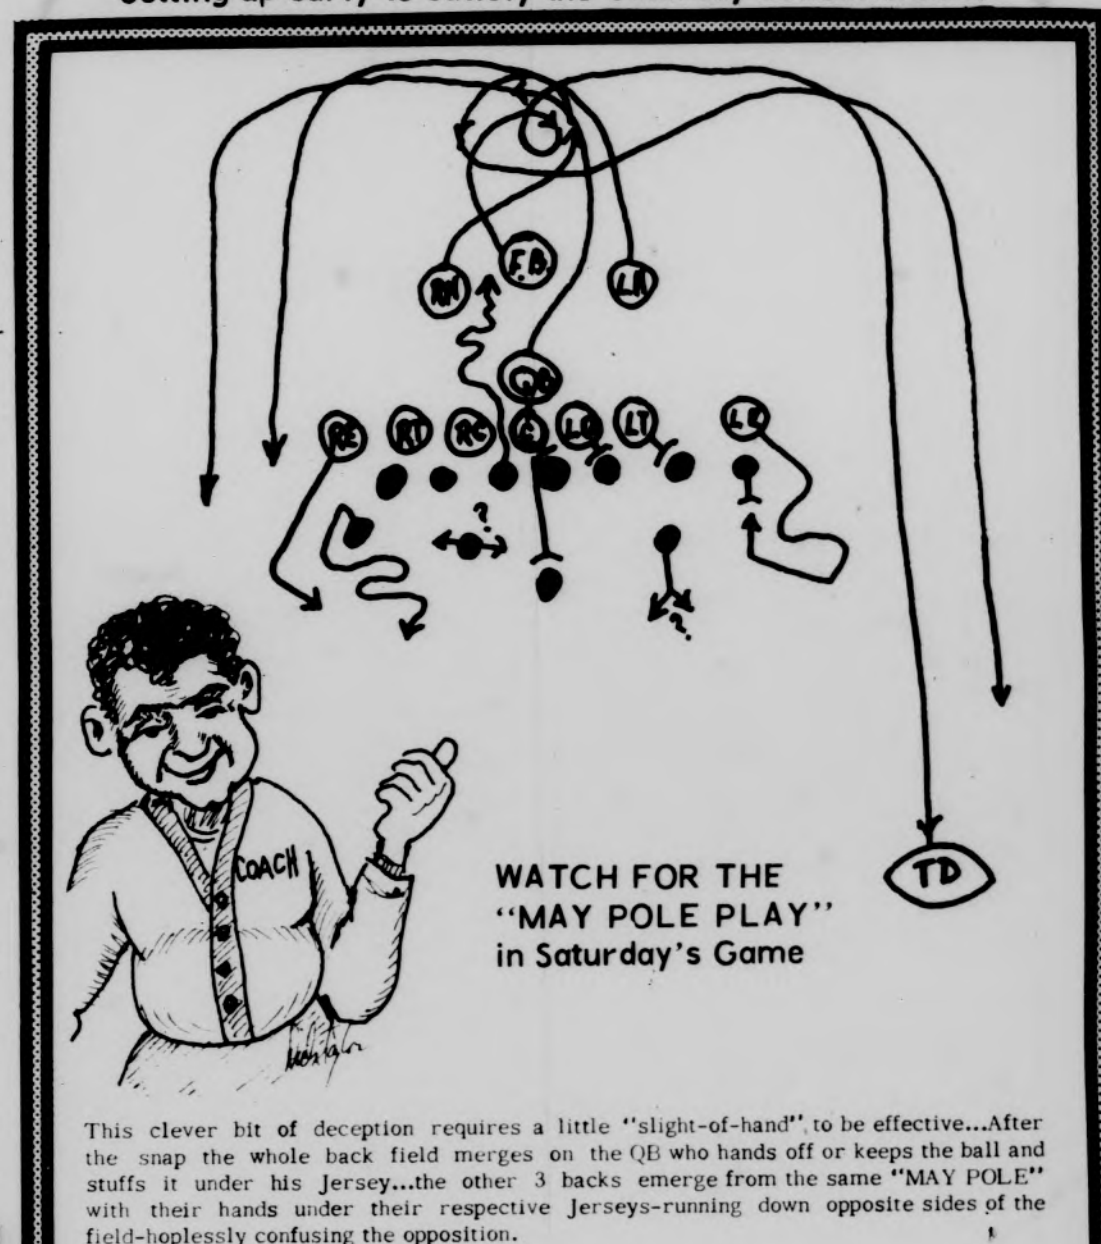

Work is often continued on Sunday morning as the counting of money taken in at the refreshment stands begins.

Then the staff starts immediately to work on the next home game. It puts in its order for more hot dogs, soft drinks, potato chips and on-and-on-and-on.

The food may not taste quite as good as mother used to make, but then she didn't have to cook for so many.

Setting up early to satisfy the Saturday sellout crowd.

This clever bit of deception requires a little "sight-of-hand", to be effective...After the snap the whole back field merges on the QB who hands off or keeps the ball and stuffs it under his Jersey...the other 3 backs emerge from the same "MAY POLE" with their hands under their respective Jerseys-running down opposite sides of the field-hoplessly confusing the opposition.

Another Big Surprise . . .

Another big surprise is awaiting you at the Big Ten Club at Gold-O-Tron. DOROW EXPECTS TITLE CLASH

By ED BRILL

State News Sports Writer

Al Dorow, the former Spartan star quarterback who spent some time in all three professional leagues, feels certain that the American Football League and the National Football League will come around to a world championship playoff in the next couple of years.

Not too long ago, Dorow, now an assistant backfield coach at State, sat in his office and discussed the possibility of a world championship.

Until an untimely injury cut short his pro career in 1962, the one-time All-American had quarterbacked teams from Toronto to Washington and Vancouver to New York.

He had his best year in the AFL. In 1960 when the AFL was first formed Dorow threw a record 33 touchdown tosses, almost double his best output in any one NFL season.

Dorow has been on both sides of the fence, in the pro football war brewing between the AFL and the NFL. And he has his opinions.

"When the AFL was newly formed, the clubs went for the exciting football players because of their gate attraction," Dorow said. "The defense, which usually takes a few years to jell anyway, thus lagged even that much more behind the offense. That was why, the AFL ran up such unbelievable scores."

"Today," said Dorow, "the two leagues are more on par than in the AFL's early days. Right now there are about three teams in the AFL, capable of competing on a regular basis with the NFL. I can't see any reason why the two of them won't hook up a championship playoff in the near future."

Dorow believes that the NFL owners have had their own way too long, and that they should face up to the fact that two, even three, professional leagues can survive nicely today.

"If the NFL owners don't consent to such a playoff in a couple of years, then the players (NFL) are certain to demand one," he continued. "The great public interest and the TV receipts from such a game would mean $15,000 - $20,000 for each player involved."

Dorow argues that there are enough fans and enough good players to support leagues of equal ability. He pointed out that pro clubs now scout and draft players from more than 800 universities and colleges across the nation.

The balding coach sees a quick end to huge sums of cash that rookies have taken in the last several years.

"There isn't a team in either league which can survive for long with rookie wages the way they are now. Besides, with only a few pro clubs in the country now, competition between rookies for a pro career is so great that an ordinary club keeps only about four or five rookies a year."

Dorow stresses desire as the most important factor in becoming a professional football player. "The willingness to work hard, play hard and to fit in with your squad, can make or break the career of any well endowed young football players."

For a man who was once a "seventh string left halfback," Dorow went along way in nine years of pro football.

Gatekeeper Guards Spartan Secrets

Sipley Bars 'S'Gridders From Public

By ROBERTA YAFIE
State News Sports Writer

The Gates of Troy may not have been able to withstand the Trojan Horse, but as far as the Gates of Sparta are concerned, the going isn't quite so easy.

Compared to the ancient Athenians, the Spartan defender may seem almost laughable. But he packs a fast hand.

Harold Sipley is a small, wiry man, well past middle age, wearing nothing more than a canvas jacket or light topcoat and green "S" cap, not quite the man you'd expect to find keeping what goes on at the secret practice field a secret.

Granted, his role as defender of Spartan football doesn't involve fighting off the masses, but it's more than simply standing about. As soon as the gates are opened he's at work, and when the coach's whistle blows at 4 o'clock the gates are snapped shut, save for a side entrance reserved for latecomers.

The only people you'll find inside are players, coaches and working press. Any students wishing to see the Spartans in action will have to wait till Saturday's show or else catch the sneak preview Monday when practice is open to the public.

"This is my second year on this job," Sipley remarked. "I retired from the East Lansing Post Office in June and took this job as something to do to keep busy."

Players were filing in and each had a greeting. With every "Hi, Harold," from a green-clad Spartan came a response tagged with a word of praise or encouragement.

"I get to know all of the fellas, or at least most of them," he went on. "I'm out here about 3:15 and stay around until they finish."

He paused to let a truck out and then carefully locked up again.

SORRY BOYS, CAN'T WATCH--Harold Sipley, gatekeeper at State football practice has to turn away many fans these days who want to see the nation's No. 1 team in action. Monday is the only day the field is open for spectators. The Spartans prepare for Saturday games in secrecy the remainder of the week.

At that point, another Spartan came through the side door. The whistle had blown and the gate was locked, but several of his friends stood outside seeking admittance. Sipley put his head through the gateway, explaining as best he could the situation. He didn't want to turn them away. But orders are orders.

"Sure, a lot of students complain about not being allowed in," he said, "but I have my orders. It's kind of tough to have to turn them away, especially when they're children, but those are the rules."

During his tenure, Harold has yet to come up against any spies from the various Big Ten enemy camps, but it can be assured that they'd be out before they could pick up any information.

With one eye cocked on the playing field and another on the gate, Sipley fired a few questions of his own.

"Where are you from?" he asked. "Have you been here long? I guess you're working for the State News, too."

When the last reply was affirmative, he looked up.

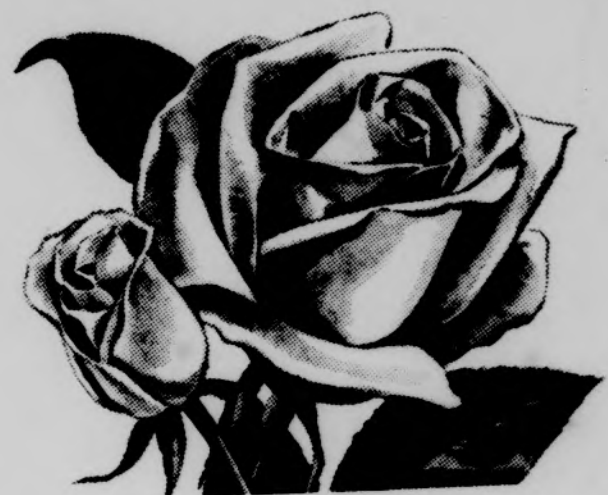

"Well then, I guess you've got some more things now to file away in your notebooks," he said. "I hope I've helped you some."

"I was thinking of filing it with the State News," the reporter answered.

"Everybody over at the post office reads that!" he said, looking up from packing his pipe. "Why, if they read my name... no, just keep them for your notes. You wouldn't really want to do that. All I do is stand around and keep people out."

From the looks of things, judging by the Spartans, he's done a pretty good job of it.

No. 1 Spartans Wary Of Wildcats

By RICK PIANIN
State News Sports Writer

Michigan State's football team, ranked No. 1 in the nation, can expect a warm Homecoming this Saturday when it takes on Northwestern.

All the warmth will be generated by an appreciative MSU student body and certainly not by the Wildcats, who have designs on toppling the undefeated Spartans.

Northwestern enters the game with a 2-1 Big Ten record and is 3-3 overall. The Spartans are 6-0 for the season and are 18-point favorites in the game.

State has defeated Northwestern six straight years and leads in the all-time series, 6-3.

Northwestern has converted its style of offense this year from a free-wheeling passing attack to a solid running game. This change can be attributed to Head Coach Alex Agase, a former All-American lineman, who believes that a good running attack is the most important component of the offense.

This new style of play was in evidence in Northwestern's 9-0 victory over Iowa last Saturday when Wildcat quarterback Denny Boothe threw only two passes in the entire game.

Northwestern will be handicapped in the game, suffering the loss of its two starting halfbacks, Ron Rector and Woody Campbell. Junior Larry Bates and sophomore John Anstey will replace the two regulars.

Defensive guard Mike Beinor and defensive halfback Bob

Hampton will also be missing from the lineup.

Northwestern's biggest running threat is fullback Bob McKelvey, a 220-pound junior, who has gained 347 yards rushing in 107 carries.

The Spartans will send out right halfback Clinton Jones and fullback Bob Apisa to test the Wildcat's defensive line, rated the best in the Big Ten.

Jones is State's leading rusher with 487 yards in 101 attempts and four touchdowns. Apisa is second in running with 459 yards to his credit in 82 carries and six TD's.

Apisa is the team's leading point producer with 36. Fieldgoal specialist Dick Kenney is second with 34.

Quarterback Steve Juday has completed better than half of his passes, good for 710 yards.

End Gene Washington still looms as Juday's favorite pass receiver with 25 catches for 344 yards and one touchdown. Jones ranks second with 16 receptions for 213 yards and one TD.

Defensive left tackle Buddy Owens will be out of action with a leg injury and will be replaced by Don Weatherspoon. Weatherspoon saw a lot of action in the Michigan game and should have no trouble fitting into the lineup.

State's defense will again be backed by rover George Webster, linebackers Ron Goovert and Charlie Thornhill.

HIGH AND THE MIGHTY--With the aid of the ladder, Spartan defensive halfback Don Japinga (14), only 5-7, looks to Bubba Smith how opposing linemen must view the 6-8 defensive end every Saturday. And they don't get to use ladders or hammers or anything. Photo by Cal Crane

BASEMENT BATTLE AT INDIANA

Will Hawkeyes Awaken?

By ROBERTA YAFIE
State News Staff Writer

Fairy tales can come true, but when the principals are at each other's throats for 10 weeks happy endings aren't always so easily realized.

The Big Ten's Sleeping Beauty may have at least awakened, but only Saturday will determine whether its return to the living is permanent.

Iowa started the '65 season as one of the top-seeded teams in the conference, a rating based chiefly on Gary Snook, their passer supreme. In '64, Snook connected on 110 of 264 passes for 1544 yards in six games, all of which were good enough to set new all-time conference marks in those departments.

Pre-season scouting reports were the last bearers of cheerful news. The Hawkeyes haven't been having an easy time of it. It was a shocking opening day as they dropped their first game, 7-0, to Washington State. The rest of the campaign wasn't any brighter.

A 27-7 thrashing of Oregon State followed, but that was their last taste of victory. Four Big Ten contests saw the Hawkeyes fall by the wayside to Wisconsin, Purdue, Minnesota and Northwestern in rapid succession to give them a 1-5 overall mark to date.

Coach Jerry Burns seems to think that this is the week the handsome prince is due to arrive to put some life into his lagging squad. After obtaining an unlisted number for his home phone, Burns made the isolation complete by moving the Hawkeyes' workouts to a closed field. It's expected that a major shake-up is in order for his starting lineup.

the BIG 10

He'll have to work fast to save a small amount of face. The Hawkeyes meet Indiana this weekend and, although the Hoosiers' standing is far from good, they've got a way of pulling out a win when they want to.

Iowa's 0-4 conference mark stands a notch below Indiana, which sports an 0-3 record, and the Hoosiers need this win. They'll be minus John Ginter, their No. 1 halfback, however, and his absence is sure to be felt.

Last weekend's action set up a four-way tie for third place, with Minnesota and Michigan State the only remaining unbeaten-untied conference elevens following Purdue's and Wisconsin's losses.

The Badgers and Boilermakers are joined by Northwestern and Ohio State in the third-place dilemma. And, even with the Spartans and Gophers hanging on, the Big Ten is still the Big Ten, and anything can happen.

Which does leave the title hopes literally up for grabs. Purdue, Minnesota and Wisconsin have the roughest going, for in order to stay in contention for the title, they must win all their remaining games.

And, since the Badgers, Boilermakers and Gophers play each other at one time or another in the next three weeks, it should be an interesting feat to watch.

With halfback Hubie Bryant and end Chet Anderson slated to return to action Saturday, Minnesota may have its team intact for the first time this season.

The Gophers will be putting their 3-0 Big Ten mark on the line against Ohio State. Coach Murray Warmath has been keying on the Gophers' running game and defense against the Buckeyes' patterns.

Cyril Pinder, who scored twice last week against Duke, twisted a knee in a physical education class and will most likely be out of the Illini lineup when they take on Purdue.

Grid Facts & Figures On Wildcat Rivalry

Michigan State's unbeaten Spartans will host Northwestern this Saturday at Spartan Stadium on MSU's Homecoming Day.

Sidelights on the game and series with the Wildcats include these:

....Michigan State will attempt to continue its "Big Ten" mastery over the Wildcats. All six of State's victories in the nine-game series have been league wins. Northwestern beat the Spartans three times prior to State's entering the conference.

....A victory for State will be the 70th for a Duffy Daugherty-coached team. That will tie the mark of Charlie Bachman-coached Spartan units from 1933 to 1946, best victory total by one coach in the school's record books.

....In Homecoming Day games over the years, Michigan State has played some of its best football, winning 32 games, losing 15 and tying two.

....The Spartans hope to continue fine defenses against rushing by the Wildcats. In 1962, State held NU to 39 yards rushing, in 1963 the figure was 79 and in 1964 it was a minus 16 yards.

....One of the great individual performances in the series history was that by All-American Sherm Lewis in 1963 at Evanston. He gained 104 yards rushing, caught a 29-yard pass for one score, sped 87 yards for another TD and returned a punt 84 yards.

....Michigan State's "rover back" position had its inception in the 1959 game at East Lansing when halfback Bob Bercich roamed at will in covering Wildcat ace Ron Burton.

Our Major Duffy Spurs Wagon Train Westward

By DAVE HANSON
State News Staff Writer

It was a warm clear day early in September when they began arriving at East Lansing, gateway to the West, to get ready for the long and tedious trek to southern California.

For some it was just an adventure. Others would make the trip to seek fame and fortune. A few came from the exotic isles to the west to the uncharted coast and would leave the group to continue by ship to their destination.

For Major Duffy, wagonmaster, it was a job.

"We've tried it before and just come out with our skin," he said then. "This bunch wants to make it all the way, wants it bad, and we might just make it."

The problem was that there were nine other wagontrains heading for Pasadena from different points. It's a dog-eat-dog trip. Each tries unscrupulously to sabotage the others chances. Rivalry gets strong when it looks like one group might make it and old bitterness boils over.

There are wild tribes of Indians in Illinois to contend with, the ferocious (all the more so when threatened with extinction) wolverine, the poisonous but attractive buckeye trees that lure so many to their doom. Wildcats. Hoosiers. When you get to the plains and think the going will get easier, you have to be on the lookout for the sneaky tribe of backshooters, the Hawkeyes.

Major Duffy pointed out the dangers to the recruits. Some of them knew they wouldn't make it and backed out. Others were told to stay home and act as reserves. He chose the best. He taught them what he knew. They were ready.

They were hanging around Spartan Stadium one afternoon and a tough looking group of 11 guys came up to major and crew.

"What do you see when the smog lifts," scout Seth Juday asked one of the bronzed strangers.

"UCLA" came the answer and a rout ensued because of the bad joke.

"They were hungry," said the wagonmaster afterwards. "But we were hungrier. No bruises are going to stop us this early in the game."

Sometime later the group found themselves surrounded by a bunch of lions. One undaunted teamster subdued them with a foot in the mouth--a bare foot.

"They were mighty well toed," said major of the Nittany's.

As expected, they later ran into the dangerous tribe from Illinois, squelched the nasty wolverine pack, learned from their Boy Scout handbook not to eat buckeyes--coming out of it all with just a few bruises and scratches.

"We've been traveling for a month and a half," said major Duffy. "We're tuckered out but the worst of it is over. There's more trouble ahead, but we're moving and ahead of the rest of them."

So they stopped for a boiler-maker last Saturday in a watering spot called Lafayette. A little dazed, they didn't see the enemy sneak up from behind, but they pooled their resources and came out on top in a brawl that proved they were serious.

Now they're heading home for supplies. They've blazed the trail farther than any of the major's friends had thought was possible.

But even at home there are dissenting elements. They know that someone will try to loose a bunch of Wildcats on them, but with Bowie knives and nerves of steel they face it like the Spartans of ancient Greece.

Then it's back on the road to break through Hawkeye territory. Beyond that lie the Hoosiers. Then, with the help of Our Lady, the fighting Irish will succumb to the charm of another and more anxious Irishman.

If they make it--"What do you mean if," says the major--they'll almost fly to the coast from there. South Bend to Pasadena. Pasadena or Bust.

"There's no turning back," says the major. "We've fixed the wagons of six other trains already, and we reckon nobody will fix ours. It's in good shape."

Westward ho, the wagons. Head 'em up, move 'em out.

State Harriers Go Bronco Busting

By JOE MITCH
State News Sports Writer

If the Big Ten Conference is supposed to display the toughest brand of athletics in the nation, then State's cross-country team has yet to do its part to support this belief.

In their first outing of the year with a non-conference opponent, the harriers were beaten last week by Notre Dame, 17-43.

The long-distance runners, however, would like nothing better than to start proving their league power as soon as possible.

The Spartans, their backs to the wall with two straight setbacks, get the chance to redeem themselves against another non-conference foe this Saturday. In town for the final dual meet of the season is Western Michigan, last year's NCAA champion.

A traditional power in cross-country, the Broncos could be hard to tame, but Spartan Coach Fran Dittrich has let it be known that he'll do everything in his power to gain at least one out-of-conference win.

"I'm still looking for that fifth man," said Dittrich. "I need someone who can keep up with my four best runners. I can't say that we don't have one, but he hasn't shown up yet.

With the spirit of Halloween filling the air, it would be appropriate for that fifth man to pop up out of nowhere and treat the Spartan lineup with needed balance.

It would also be a "trick" if Dittrich did find a No. 5 man since in the four meets to date no other runner has displayed a consistent performance other than the four top runners.

Only in Dick Sharkey, captain Paul McCollam, George Balthrop and sophomore Art Link does Dittrich have any confidence they'll finish among the top places.

Ralph Stadelman, Paul Bryan and Keith Coates have all been No. 5 placers at some time or another for State this season. Even though all three have been erratic so far, probably one of the trio will end up as Dittrich's fifth runner.

John Kinsel, Russ and Ray Pletcher, Claudell James and Dean Hunt are other runners in the Spartan lineup.

These two clubs last met in 1959 with Western Michigan edging the Spartan harriers, 28-29.

Against Western Michigan, Dittrich will have a chance to test his unestablished runners and will get a glimpse of what to expect from both his team in the conference meet and the Broncos in the NCAA.

GEORGE BALTHROP

PAUL MCCOLLAM

The Bronco runners appear to have just as strong a team as they had last year when they collared the national championship. They were undefeated until they met Notre Dame two weeks ago. In an invitational meet, Western Michigan placed second with 67 points to the Irish's 58.

Posing the biggest obstacle to State's Sharkey, who has captured two of four individual wins this season, is Steve Smith. Against Notre Dame, Smith took first place with a time of 19:07.04.

Smith will team up with Gary Myers, Ted Nelson and Roger Point to give the Broncos a well-balanced squad.

'The Big Ten'

The Boiler-makers, out to make up for the whipping they received from State, have emphasized containing Jim Grabowski, the Illini's fullback powerhouse.

Northwestern, boasting the top total defense in the Big Ten, will be spending Homecoming with the Spartans. Although State is an overwhelming favorite, it won't be getting off that easily.

Along with the Wildcat defenders, they'll have Dennis Boothe to contend with. The versatile quarterback reversed his field last week when he switched from his usual air attack to a consistent ground game and succeeded in blanking Iowa, 9-0.

Coach Milt Bruhn stressed blocking and promoted halfback Dick Schumitsch to second string as Wisconsin prepares for Michigan. Badger halfback Chuck Coch and fullback Gale Bucciarelli are both doubtful starters.

FROM ROLL-OUTS TO CLIPPING

Penalties, Passes & Lasses

By ROBERTA YAFIE
State News Sports Writer

Okay girls, here we go again. And let's forget about any defeatist attitudes. Tomorrow is Homecoming, and you can show your dates just how clever you are in two easy lessons. Just clear your mind and think Rose Bowl.

Now that you have an idea who's out there playing football, let's see what they're doing.

Steve Juday--the one who is standing around most of the time--has a variety of passes to choose from. Again, the name describes the action.

We'll forget about the forward pass; he's not about to throw into his own end zone. On a button-hook pattern, a receiver is running and then stops suddenly, turns about inside or out and catches the ball.

A sideline pass goes right where it says it does. Clint Jones or Gene Washington will be running a straight downfield pattern, stop, turn and head for the sideline to make the reception.

When deep receivers are covered, Steve may turn to a flat pass. It's thrown towards the sidelines and behind the line of scrimmage, but not laterally.

If it were lateral, there'd be quite a difference. Any offensive player can throw a lateral to any other offensive man in order to continue advancement of the ball. It must, however, be parallel to the line of scrimmage or backward, and if dropped in the process becomes a free ball.

Recovery of a lateral has its limitations. If dropped by the offensive team it can be recovered and advanced, but if the defense picks it up, they can't move it further.

In a roll-out, the quarterback fakes an end run and throws to his intended receiver while running toward the side. A screen pass is thrown to a receiver who will go on to run a pre-designed pattern with help from his linemen.

Along with being able to spot a successful play, it also helps to know what your team is doing wrong. In this department, the officials have thoughtfully provided two devices to let the public know what's going on--red flags and hand signals.

It's fine to follow the referee--he's the head official running around without pads and the one who goes through penalty motions--but try spotting them. It's really not all that bad.

There are three categories of penalties--loss of yardage, loss of down and disqualification or suspension.

A Football Lesson

Just For You Gals

Last In A Two-Part Series

The five-yard penalty applies to four infractions. Offside is called when either team crosses over the line of scrimmage before the ball is snapped. It's indicated by "hands on hips."

When the ref stands with arms crossed over his chest it's delay of game, when too much time is taken between plays. Man in motion applies only if a player moves before the ball is snapped. If you check back to Lesson One, you'll note that a back is moving legally as long as he's running parallel to the line. The indication will be the side of the hand against the chest.

An out-of-bounds kickoff is exactly what it says, and the penalty applies if the receiving team hasn't touched it, it's then kicked over again.

Illegal procedure, position or substitution are indicated by a motion undefinable as far as dictionaries go, so you'd best consult your program for a precise description.

The 15-yarder is often the most called and the most disliked penalty, because who likes to lose 15 yds. The personal fouls fall into this category. Holding is illegal use of the hands by the offense. Illegal use of the hands or arms by offense or defense is illustrated by the ref holding his wrist. Defensive holding costs five yards and a first down. Grabbing the face mask is another 15-yarder.

If the ref puts his hand on his head he's not suffering from frustration or a headache but merely indicating that there's an ineligible receiver downfield. That's good for another 15 yds.

There are a few more signals that look as though the ref wants to get into the game, but how much do you think he'd accomplish running around in his striped shirt. Roughing the kicker after the kick, brings a foot motion aping Dick Kenney.

Pass interference is more than meets the eye and is often a difficult infraction to be

STERN TEST FOR STATE

Booters Face Bobcats

By BOB HORNING
State News Sports Writer

Revenge and the incentive of knocking off a national power should be enough motivation for Ohio University when the Spartan soccer team invades Athens Saturday.

Besides trying to reverse a 4-0 defeat at the hands of State last year, the Bobcats will be aiming to highlight a successful season that already shows a 5-2-1 mark.

Ohio hasn't beaten MSU in five tries, another reason for wanting to snap State's current six-game win streak.

However, the Spartans will be ready too--knowing they are facing a tough team, trying to preserve their perfect season record and attempting to extend their string of not losing a game in regular season play to 26.

Since dropping their opener, the Bobcats weren't beaten until Mid-Atlantic power Pittsburgh turned the trick last Saturday, 2-0.

Spartan Coach Gene Kenney called Ohio "a well-balanced and powerful team." It is one of the best squads in their history. We haven't looked good yet this year away from home, so we are expecting a rough game."

The two teams have done almost the same against common foes. The Bobcats have beaten Akron University, 4-2, and tied Denison, 1-1. State beat Akron,

Webster: Tackles Do His Talking

By JIM HARDEE
State News Sports Writer

Minnear goes up the middle and is stopped by George Webster. Hadrick cuts wide for a pass, it's knocked down by Webster. This guy is everywhere.

It's Webster's job to be where the ball is. He's the rover back on the Spartan defensive unit. The rover back has the freedom to rove either far or near on defense, depending on where he thinks the opponents will strike on a particular play. Much of Webster's job is guess work. He must try to diagnose in a split instant, what the enemy will most likely do, on say third and five.

Against a running team, Webster usually plays the strong side of the line. He tries to follow the flow of the play, so he can be in the middle of the hole that the opponent's offensive line has opened up.

A passing team finds the 6-4 218-pound junior covering either an end or back on most occasions. Webster combines the qualities of power, maneuverability and speed, so pass defense doesn't bother him much.

The South Carolina recruit was switched to rover back this season, after playing defensive end as a sophomore. Since Webster seemed to possess all the important qualities of a good rover back, Vince Carillot and Head Coach Duffy Daugherty made the switch.

And Webster has responded to the position like it was home.

If given the choice, Webster would rather play against a running team. "I enjoy playing the line, because it gets me closer to the ball," he said.

Webster is soft spoken and quiet. "Mickey" as his teammates call him, plays down his role for the Spartans. He speaks of the help Daugherty has been to him in adjusting to a new position.

"He tells me what I'm doing wrong, and then he lets me know that he's given me the machinery and the rest is up to me," said Webster.

Webster has been troubled by knee and hamstring pain for the better part of the '65 season, but he has not let it interfere with Saturday's games.

"He's one of the few players I've ever coached, who has the ability to set aside pain and ailments when Saturdays roll around," Daugherty said.

Sports Illustrated named him lineman of the week against Michigan after he intercepted a pass, recovered a fumble and lead the defensive charge that checked the Wolverines with minus yardage.

According to Webster, George that is, the remaining games should find the MSU squad playing harder than ever. "These players give their all, not only during a game, but also during practice," he said.

So Saturday, when you lose track of the ball, take a look around for the No. 90. You can bet he knows where it is.

Pep Rally

Duffy Daugherty, many of the football players and the cheerleaders will feature a homecoming pep rally at 7 p.m. Friday behind Jenison Field House, in preparation for the State-Northwestern game.

War Of The Roses In Full Bloom

By LARRY MOGG
State News Sports Editor

Florida over Auburn--Coach Henry Jordan and his Auburn Tigers make their living in the tough Southeastern Conference by checking hot-shot offensive units. The Tiger defense is tougher to move than a mountain, but the Gators have the bulldozers to do so. Florida is the cream of the Southland. They'll be in the Orange Bowl New Year's Day.

Georgia Tech over Duke--The Rambling Wrecks are bowl bound, and the Blue Devils won't get in their way. Bobby Dodd has a rising power under his thumbs. Georgia Tech may be unstoppable for the next couple of years.

Louisiana State over Mississippi--If the Bengals hope to stay in the thick of the Southeastern Conference race, they have to win this one. Ole Miss has been slightly off form this fall, but could right everything with a win over rival LSU. But don't look for it, the Bengals have too much scoring power.

Illinois over Purdue--Skip the records. The Boilermakers and the Illini are just about on par with each other. Look for the Boilermakers to turn up flatter than an out-of-tune piano. The Illini will turn Pinder and Grabowski loose, the only thing Purdue will turn loose is their fading bowl hopes.

Iowa over Indiana--Every week I've picked the Hawkeyes, and every week things have turned up snake eyes. This has got to be it. Indiana loses in the battle of the basement.

MICHIGAN STATE over Northwestern--But it could be closer than most people suspect. The Spartans seem certain to be a bit down for this one. But they should get the kinks out by the second half and whip up a seventh straight victory.

Wisconsin over Michigan--The Wolverines haven't won a conference game as yet, and although they're favored to ditch the loss column here, the young Badgers should throw up a surprise. Wisconsin stays near the top of the league race, but just by fate and Charlie Burt's arm.

Minnesota over Ohio State--The experts say to watch out for a battle of extremes--Minnesota's air-might pitted against the Buckeye's ground gang. Minnesota is another young team on the move in the Big Ten. The Gophers added ground dividends will pay off.

Missouri over Nebraska--Nobody has come close to beating Nebraska this fall, maybe it's because they haven't played anybody of consequence. Former Spartan assistant coaches Dan Devine and Bob Devaney hook up in this Big Eight game. The Cornhuskers and Tigers are both loaded down with runners, passers and receivers galore. Devine worms out an upset.

called. There are two instances when it's put into effect. One is the use of the hands by any offensive player to push, hold or pull. The only exception is when the ball carrier extends his arm out straight.

The second call is illegal guarding of a pass receiver by a pass defender. The defenseman must not grab, hold or interfere with the receiver's opportunity to catch the ball unless he is making a valid attempt to intercept the pass.

Pass interference, along with kicking interference, use the same signal. The referee will extend his arms in a motion as though he was holding someone off or pushing them back.

Clipping occurs when a man who is not a ball carrier is blocked down from behind, usually across his back or legs. The ref will make a chopping motion with his hand against the side of his leg.

Arms crossed in front of the official and swung back and forth indicate an incomplete pass, declined penalty, no play or no score. He's not clearing the air.

Following a field goal or touchdown he'll raise both arms above his head. If a safety has occurred--when an offensive ball carrier is forced down in his own end zone--the official puts both palms together above his head, as though he were to go into an Egyptian-type of dance.

That just about lays the groundwork for any successful football fan. And it may do more. You may find yourself running a play or two of your own over at the IM field.

Rearrange Seating For Brubeck Show

Due to criticism of the acoustics of Jentson Field House for concerts, there will be a new seating arrangement for the Dave Brubeck performance tonight.

The change resulted from Brubeck's dissatisfaction with the Auditorium acoustics in 1963, as well as students' complaints after the Serendipity Singers' concert, according to John Newcomer, vice president for special projects for ASMSU.

For tonight's performance, the audience will be closer to the stage centered on the fieldhouse floor, Newcomer said. In addition, the curtain will be replaced by a solid backdrop which will enhance the sound.

"With these improvements," Newcomer said, "a capacity crowd of 5,500 people should have no difficulty hearing."

We have the best sound equipment manufactured in the country, said Robert Musmanno, executive assistant to the ASMSU cabinet president. "The professionals do not expect any better equipment than ours."

Newcomer said that MSU's Audio-Visual Dept. purchased a high quality sound system at the beginning of the year. Before this equipment was available, all sound apparatus was rented from Cobo Hall in Detroit.

The Brubeck concert begins at 8 p.m. and is expected to last two hours. Doors at Jentson will be open at 6:45 p.m.

Workmen are banging through a wall from the newly-built gallery section into the main gallery at Kresge, but the exhibition of American collages will open Saturday on schedule.

The show, circulated by the Museum of Modern Art in New York, includes 54 works from 1950 to the present by 14 artists.

Fragments of printed matter, paper, cloth and other materials pasted on a picture surface form the collage. The medium has gained importance only in the last 50 years.

The artists in the Kresge exhibition include both foremost composers of collage and young artists just beginning noteworthy work in the medium.

The show will open 2 p.m. Saturday and will be on exhibition through Nov. 21. Kresge hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday and 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Informality is the keynote for the collages on exhibit. Angelo Ippolito makes his works from torn pages of the airmail edition of the London Times. Gene Hedge composes with insulating material.

Conrad Marca-Relli, one of the major American collage artists in the exhibition, works with overlapping pieces of paper or plastic. He forms linear compositions that become intricate puzzles in compressed space.

Many of the works reflect modern American painting. Robert Motherwell and Alfred Leslie, both painters as well as collage artists, brush on painted areas among the odds and ends of the collage.

Anne Ryan, who died in 1954, gained her reputation as an important collagist in only six years of work. Her work, often made of delicate cloths, shows a feminine, almost reclusive sensibility.

Cut and pasted paper is a mainstay of the collages in the Kresge show. Charmion von Wiegand suggest Persian manuscript art in her delicate, abstract paper works.

Nicholas Kruschenick cuts paper for hard-edge, bright, flat compositions, and Leon Polk Smith for quieter, more introspective effects.

Joseph Cornell, an artist known for his work with three-dimensional boxes, concentrates on juxtaposed images. The San Francisco artist Jess shows romantic surrealism in his book of collages, "The Better Dream House of Joe Dunn."

Spartan Soccer

5-2, and squeaked by Denison, 4-3.

Sam Roberts, Ohio's center forward, is leading the Ohio Collegiate Soccer Assn. in scoring with 11 goals and three assists. The Liberian has scored over half his team's goals despite playing at only half speed because of a leg injury. He is threatening to smash all Ohio University scoring records.

Heading a defense that has allowed only eight goals in eight games are John Andrews and John Eastman, an All-Midwest selection last year.

The Bobcat defense will have its hands full in stopping State's potent offense which is averaging just under seven goals a game. And they will meet another defense which has also given up but one goal a game.

The Spartans haven't lost a regular season game since the last game of the 1962 season, a 1-2 defeat to St. Louis. Since then they have won 24 and tied one in scheduled play. The tie was also to St. Louis, 1-1, last year.

In NCAA playoff games in that period State has won four and lost three, two of the losses to St. Louis and the other to Navy last year in the national championship game.

The all-time soccer record, including this year, is 76 victories, 8 losses and 5 ties.

Homecoming Brings Lots Of News

HERE HANGS A WILDCAT--Two MSU coeds seemed to have caught a Wildcat hanging around Campbell Hall. So they strung him up. The Northwestern Wildcats are 2-1 in the conference going into the Homecoming game. State, ranked as the top grid power in the nation by both major press polls, is unbeaten in six straight games.

Someone asked me just before I sat down to write this bit of weekly nonsense if I had enough homecoming activities about which to write.

Sure, I've got all sorts of lovely things. Real news.

For instance, there's a Homecoming football game on Saturday. And Dave Brubeck will be appearing in concert at Jenison Field House (complete with improved acoustics) at 7 tonight.

Or hey, news, Peter Palmer's orchestra will play at the Homecoming Dance from 8 to 12 Saturday night and during intermission Judy Helms will be crowned Homecoming Queen and the "Winds" will sing their folk songs.

But, we've all heard about these before. What haven't we heard about?

Halloween. Halloween has gotten a poor press this year. Even with some of the slow news days we've had lately there hasn't been very much comment on this, one of the greatest of all American traditions. Only Charlie Brown and Linus seem very interested in the event. And not even they can muster much support.

Where are the good ol' days? Are State students too old? Have they killed everything good about Halloween? Is there no justice for an American favorite?

I guess not. And I sure do feel sorry for those 1,500 kids from married housing who will go marching around looking for treats without anyone cheering them on.

Our 'A-1' Band Plans Salute To No. 1 Team

'Tis a "Taste of Honey" to be rated the No. 1 football team in the nation. This feeling will be expressed musically by the MSU marching band in its pregame show.

Under the direction of Leonard Falcone, the 175-man unit will salute the team as the "King of the Road" in the halftime show. The band's "spinning S" formation will be a special feature of the show. Conceived by Assistant Director William Moffit, the maneuver calls for the band to form its "S" while playing the MSU "Fight Song."

The 160-man Northwestern band will join the Spartan band. The visitors, directed by John Paynter, feature drum major Wes Sims and twirler Richard Burton.

ENTERTAINMENT THIS WEEKEND

KYLE KERBAWY

OTHER CONSIDERATIONS: THE BEST: The Czech Philharmonic Orchestra, making its first tour of the United States and Canada, will present a concert at 3 p.m. Sunday. The concert is a part of the Lecture-Concert Series.

In the Homecoming spirit will be a pep rally (all-university type) behind Jenison at 7 tonight. The rally will be sponsored by Spartan Spirit and will feature as usual the cheerleaders and members of the team. The rally will adjourn before Brubeck's concert.

Also at 11:45 tonight President John A. Hannah will deliver a special Homecoming weekend speech on the steps of the Union.

Following Hannah's speech Sparta Men's Honorary will present its "Midnight Sing" near Beaumont Tower.

OLD STANDBYS: Abrams Planetarium will feature a simulated trip to the moon in its new public program beginning at 8 tonight. Saturday shows are at 2:30 and 8 p.m.; Sunday at 2:30 and 4 p.m.

In addition Kresge Art Center will open a new show on American colleges Saturday. The center is open from 2 to 5 p.m.

MIXERS: Brody and Shaw will present dances tonight. Casewill hold a mixer Saturday night. McDonel's Saturday night dance has been cancelled this week in respect to the Homecoming Dance.
