NO REGISTRATION FOR U.S. REDS

VARIETY OF TOURS

Bowl Trip For 5,000 Planned

Over 5,000 seats on planes, trains and buses are being held for use by the official University student Rose Bowl tour, Jim Tanck, Waterford, Wis., senior and cabinet president of Associated Students of MSU, announced Monday.

"We will offer a variety of package tours in all price ranges probably next Monday after we receive the official bid," Tanck said.

"We can offer the best package to the Rose Bowl as far as variety of transportation is concerned," Tanck said.

"I would encourage students to wait until the official package is offered," Tanck said. "They can sign up for others later if they're still interested."

"I think that it is only fair that there is some sort of class priority set up because juniors and seniors won't have a chance to go again, but no official decision has been made yet," Tanck said.

"If there is a tremendous demand we will increase the official tour and expand to as many students as want to go," he said. Tanck talked Monday to one of the individual agents offering flights to California for the game. He said they weren't sure what airlines they will use.

Louis Hekhuis, director of student activities, John R. Kinney, director of alumni relations, and John Winkler, director of International Travel Services, the University's official agent, are on the West Coast now making plans for hotel accommodations for the official student and alumni tours.

"In 1956 we had the largest group movement of people from one specific place to another on the official tours," Tanck said. "We expect to beat our own record this year."

Rose Talk Swamping Secretary

50 Part-Time Jobs Created

Rose Bowl prospects have created a barrage of phone calls in the Student Activities office and 50 new part-time job prospects in the Placement Bureau. Students, parents and prospective chaperones have begun phoning Louis Hekhuis, director of student activities, so much that his secretary, Miss Pat Carter, has become a full-time answering service.

Miss Carter said that she sits all day just pushing buttons on the phone, trying to answer people's questions.

Yes, the questions are about the official trips to the Rose Bowl, she said. Neither she nor Hekhuis can answer the questions yet, she said, but people continue to call.

"Parents make long distance calls," Miss Carter said, "saying their MSU student has been 'pestering' them about the official tours they can take to the Rose Bowl."

"As MSU wins each successive game," she said, "the phone calls begin to grow in number." "Each time I started to clean up some of my work," she said, "the phone would ring, so I finally decided it would be better just to answer the phone."

Miss Carter said she realized Monday would be a busy phone call day, but she hadn't realized it would be the full-time job it turned out to be.

Official information on student tours and university sponsored plans should be available Thursday.

Meanwhile, the Placement Bureau is making plans to hire 50 students for official Rose Bowl trip registration. Al Luce, assistant director of the Placement Bureau, said that interested students should sign up at the Student Employment Office in his department. Applicants with typing ability are preferred, he said.

Students would be working Nov. 22-24 and Nov. 29-30, he said. Applicants, who would be paid $1.50 per hour if accepted, should plan to work in four-hour blocks from noon until 9 p.m., he said.

"We are placing a great deal of emphasis," Neville said, "on the development of programs which lead to breaking down the student body into small groups." Neville described MSU's "living-learning" units which are designed to offer students a small college environment coupled with the advantages of the large university.

"Such an arrangement," Neville said, "is designed to promote closer relationships among students and between students and faculty."

TONIGHT IN FEE

Doctor vs. Historian Over Birth Control

Two staff members who recently started a debate in the State News over unwed mothers will participate in a panel discussion on birth control at 8 tonight.

Alan Schaffer, assistant professor of history, and James Feurig, director of Olin Health Center, will speak at a panel discussion in the West Fee Hall carpeted lounge. Myrtle R. Reul, associate professor of social work, will also be on the panel.

Feurig said in a State News article printed Oct. 5 that campus pregnancies have increased "significantly."

He added that it is "understood" that a pregnant girl will drop out of school in the third or fourth month of her pregnancy, usually at the end of a term.

Schaffer contested this statement in a letter to the editor several days later.

"It is also 'understood' that the unmarried father will drop out of the University by the third or fourth month of the pregnancy? True, he will not be 'showing' by then, but since as a proven 'carrier' of the disease, should he be treated on equal terms with the mother?" he wrote.

Some consideration had been given having the discussion in a larger room, as was suggested in a State News editorial Monday, but this would create a number of problems, Theodore J. Brooks, assistant dean of social science, said.

"We are limited to this end of campus because many of the social science people live in Fee, Akers and McDonel," Brooks said.

"We might use a larger room, but we are more interested in having a small number of students who participate in the discussion than in size alone," Brooks said.

He said Conrad Auditorium, between Fee and Akers, could not be used, because classes meet in it each night.

He said he hoped the discussion would turn into a debate.

"We are trying to get students to look at contemporary problems in the social science context," Brooks explained. "We don't want a debate on whether the University should dispense birth control pills. We want students to look at the background of the problem and see what the trends are."

Court Calls Act Unfair Under Fifth

Party Plans Election Bids

WASHINGTON (AP)-- In an unanimous decision Monday, the Supreme Court held that it was unconstitutional to require members of the Communist Party to register with the federal government.

Forced registration as required by the Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950 is inconsistent with the Fifth Amendment guarantee against possible self-incrimination, said Justice William J. Brennan speaking for the court.

It is believed that the decision will cast serious doubts on future use of the law by the government to move against party members.

National Communist leader Gus Hall welcomed the decision as opening the way for increased Communist activity. He said in New York "wherever it's possible, we're going to run Communists for public office. This is something we've always wanted to do and couldn't."

Justice Department officials noted, however, that the ruling is restricted to the registration of individual party members and said they will continue to prosecute the party for failure to register under the 1950 law.

Hall said Monday the ruling is "a blow against the longest legal vendetta in American history."

As a result of the decision, Hall said the party will:

--Publish a basic political program or manifesto within two weeks.

--Call its first public national convention since 1950. An unannounced one was held in 1958.

--Act to enter candidates in next year's congressional elections.

Hall said the 1958 convention designated him "national chairman" but he has never used the title and it was never announced because of the 1950 law.

Hall has been charged with failure to register as an officer of the party and he said Monday:

Broken Relay In Canada Triggered East's Blackout

WASHINGTON (AP)--The trigger that plunged the nation's Northeast into darkness last Tuesday was a broken relay in a Canadian power plant near Niagara Falls, it was announced Monday.

U.S. and Canadian officials reported their findings after a week of intensive inquiry into the chain-reaction blackout, but said they still don't know the origin of the surge of power that tripped out the automatic relay. Nor do they yet have recommendations to prevent future massive power loss.

Government and industry experts are still digging to find out why so many of the interlinked U.S. systems collapsed like a row of dominoes and brought near-paralysis to much of the nation's most populous area as well as part of Canada.

The broken relay was pinpointed by Ross Strike, chairman of the Ontario Hydroelectric Commission which operates a system on the Niagara River. He said it was in his system's Sir Adam Beck plant No. 2 at Queenston, a village in southern Ontario four miles west of Niagara Falls.

Strike announced the findings in Toronto at almost the same time Chairman Joseph C. Swidler of the Federal Power Commission was issuing a report saying the failure "seems to have occurred" at the Beck plant. He said the FPC will work with Ontario officials to "confirm these preliminary conclusions."

The Beck plant was producing 1.2 million kilowatts and taking 400,000 kilowatts from the United States under the grid system in which power systems are linked together to give each other a helping hand. The 1.6 million kilowatts was being fed northward to Canadian users over five lines.

The relay knocked out was on one of the five lines feeding Beck's customers. The relay is a device to measure load on a line and set a limit beyond which a circuit-breaker will snap open and cut off the power.

The power surged over into the other four circuits and knocked them out. This poured power into upstate New York systems. The surge turned south because it had no other place to go. Strike said the rapid increase in frequency tripped safety equipment but all of it didn't work.

Transmission lines and generating plants were tripped out in one system after another, reaching into New England and southern New York, throwing a mantle of darkness over New York City.

Swidler's report on the finding was sent to the White House, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and Buford Ellington, director of the Office of Emergency Planning.

Concern, Not Fear About Size--Neville

MINNEAPOLIS--"We are concerned about 'bigness' but we are not afraid of it," Howard R. Neville, MSU provost said here today.

Neville and officials from several other universities discussed educational "bigness" at a press conference in conjunction with the annual meeting of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

The MSU provost said his institution is approaching the problem from a variety of directions and is "attempting to develop a plan of administration which is a controlled decentralization of the total undergraduate and graduate programs."

"We are placing a great deal of emphasis," Neville said, "on the development of programs which lead to breaking down the student body into small groups."

Neville described MSU's "living-learning" units which are designed to offer students a small college environment coupled with the advantages of the large university.

"Such an arrangement," Neville said, "is designed to promote closer relationships among students and between students and faculty."

"The injection of academic emphasis into residence hall life has pleased both faculty and students," Neville said.

He cited a survey in which 95 per cent of the students who responded indicated that they would recommend the living-learning units to the new freshmen. He added that the academic residence halls have had the highest proportion of return applications in the experience of the MSU residence hall system.

He pointed out that each of the seven academic-residence halls built at MSU since 1961 houses some 1,200 students, 600 men in one wing and 600 women in another. In each wing there is a head adviser, two graduate advisers and 12 resident advisers.

In addition to the new residence halls, Neville reported, a number of MSU's older living facilities have been converted to "living-learning" units.

MSU had 35,580 students enrolled fall term and some 18,000 of them were in University housing, Neville noted. He pointed out that of 18,000 students housed on campus, nearly 13,000 were in

Slip Of The Pen Can Lose Class

Registrar Horace C. King said students should watch out for mistakes when filling out section reservation cards or they run the risk of not getting courses they want.

King said that choosing courses carefully and following the instructions for filling out the section request forms would assure most students of getting a complete schedule.

While very few students make mistakes in filling out the form, he said, there is nothing his office can do if the student makes a mistake.

If you mark a section number incorrectly, you will get all your other courses except that one. If, however, you make a mistake in transferring your student number, you will receive no section reservations.

When students enter the Auditorium, they will be given a section request form, an IBM card and a supplement to the time schedule. King said that there have been very few changes, but students should check the supplement if they want to be sure of getting a complete schedule.

Beginning Wednesday, students will also receive a list of closed or nearly closed sections.

King said that certain time periods are better than others if the student hopes to get a complete schedule. The 10:20 and 1:50 class periods are the two heaviest and the 8 to 9 and after 3 classes are the least popular.

Game On Aud Screen

The big game can be seen on the big screen by 3,500 students Saturday.

The Auditorium will be available with a wide screen for the MSU-Notre Dame game. Tickets will go on sale today at 1 p.m. on the third floor of the Student Services Building for 50 cents.

The 4,228 tickets for other locations were sold out by 5 p.m. Monday.

Rental of a second giant screen projector from Detroit made the use of the wide screen possible in the Auditorium. First tried in Wilson Hall for the Michigan-MSU game, the projector used then lost the picture in the third quarter. This time if the first one loses the picture, the second will take over.

"We weren't originally planning to use the Auditorium," Vice President of Finance and Operations for ASMSU Richard Hollander said, "but with the back-up projector we don't anticipate any technical difficulties."

ASMSU will be able to break even in the Auditorium project by selling only 2,000 Auditorium seats, Hollander said.

No one will be allowed to exchange tickets from other buildings to the Auditorium, he said.

Admit Red China With Reservation

DIPLOMATS THE WORLD OVER once again are plagued by the great debate over the seating of Communist China in the United Nations. As the General Assembly ponders this enduring dispute, popular support for Red China's entry is increasing on American college campuses. Unless the proponents of Red China's admission can substantiate their claim, their cause smacks of pseudo-liberalism.

Many reasons can be given both in favor of and against membership for a nation which actively opposes the UN charter. If these reasons were not well-founded, the debate would not last this long or have such an impact.

FRANCE CAME OUT last week in favor of a place for Communist China in the UN as "a matter of justice, political realism and historical inevitability." The French ambassador also wants the issue settled by a simple majority rather than two-thirds. The General Assembly decided in 1961 that Red China came under the "important question" category and would need a two-thirds majority to be admitted. It still does.

Some observers think Peking should receive all China's UN credentials, permanent Security Council membership and representation in the assembly. Then what happens to Nationalist China? Tiny and insignificant as it may be compared with the other four world powers, should it give up its Security Council seat to the Communists who ran it off the Chinese mainland?

Peking's cruel and spartan communism provides plenty of arguments against her entry into the UN. Her militant foreign policy blatantly opposes its peace-keeping efforts. Her brutal ultimatum to India and decided influence in Indonesia's abortive coup don't merit much trust.

Then there is always the possibility that Red China will humiliate the UN by ignoring the invitation or refusing to accept unless Nationalist China is expelled from all UN bodies.

WE SUPPORT admission of Communist China into the world's only universal peace effort, but not without reservation. Nationalist China should remain a member and retain its assembly seat, at least. The UN should not offer Red China membership and then make further concessions to get the Communists to take the seat.

Since the UN is the only world organization of its kind, a country which represents nearly 25 per cent of the human race should not be excluded. Its membership should be universal in order that its decision may have a universal impact.

RED CHINA'S HOSTILITY will never be affected by the UN as long as it is not a member. Maybe she will not be moved as a member either, but it's worth a try. And we can never really know if the Chinese Communists will accept membership until an offer is made.

Black Majority Rule Remains Inevitable

THE RHODESIAN DECLARATION of independence issued last week was cloaked in language similar to our own declared back in 1776. But in semantics the similarity ends. While the first declaration pronounced the natural rights of men to govern themselves, the Rhodesian document asserts the right of a small minority to rule as it sees fit with no outside interference.

Prime Minister Ian Smith, after reading the independence proclamation, declared, "We Rhodesians have rejected the doctrinaire philosophy of appeasement and surrender. We have struck a blow for the preservation of humanity and Christianity..." But he failed to justify how a small minority arbitrarily governing over a large Africa population perpetuates either humanity or Christianity.

RHODESIA, A SELF-GOVERNING colony since 1923, is populated by 220,000 whites of European stock and four million African Negroes. Declaring independence from Great Britain entrenches deeper than ever the rule of the whites. Recently, Britain had refused to grand independen-ence unless Rhodesia took steps to incorporate the majority (Africans) in the government.

A new constitution emerging in 1961 gave the Africans 15 seats in the 65-seat parliament and set conditions by which they might eventually compete for the 50 white seats. But since 1962 when Prime Minister Smith took over the reins of government, any efforts to expand the role of the four million blacks have been stifled.

SOON AFTER RHODESIA proclaimed independence, the U.S. and Great Britain registered sharp disapproval and numerous African and Asian scored the arbitrary move enacted by the Rhodesian white minority. The existing situation is indeed a most difficult one.

An economic boycott has been proposed, but history has shown that boycotts are poor persuaders. Although the United Nations offers no quick or easy solution, here is an opportunity for it to play the important role we have always wished for. If through the world body, cooperation can be obtained, the peace could be maintained in the southern African country and proper sanctions enforced, according to the will of the U.N.

ANY ARMY CONFLICT must be avoided as sympathetic African countries attempt to reverse the actions taken by the Rhodesian white minority. Rhodesian whites must be shown that the sooner they allow the African majority to become educated, to live as equals and to participate meaningfully in government, the easier the period of transition will be.

Ultimately, the African black majority will rule its country—either after bloodshed and strife or after peaceful negotiations. Which alternative Rhodesia chooses admittedly will be distasteful to the white population. But time is growing short, and black Africa is growing increasingly impatient to govern all its land.

To the Editor:

Regarding your editorial Nov. 4, it should be noted that Alpha Phi Omega contacted the Department of Dormitories and Food Services at the beginning of this term for permission to rotate the fall blood drive among various dorms and was promptly turned down. The official policy of this department regards conducting campus-wide events in dormitories as an invasion of students' privacy.

Your editorial implies the Red Cross favored rotating the blood drive among dorms but Alpha Phi Omega rejected the idea. It would seem more truthful to state that both were in favor of moving the drive around but University policy hindered the realization of this idea.

Both organizations are perfectly willing to abide by the University ruling since it has been found that distance is only a small factor in determining the quantity of blood donated. The amount of enthusiasm and competition engendered among living units is found to be a much larger factor.

The most graphic illustration of the distance factor's relative insignificance is the fact that Farm House fraternity on Bogue Street and with only 42 members has donated more pints than the whole Case-Wilson-Wonders complex combined. These dorms are the closest to Dem Hall.

If poor turnout for the drive this year cannot be ascribed to Alpha Phi Omega, the American Red Cross, University policies or the distance factor, where is the blame to be fixed? Perhaps an analysis of why it was necessary to continually emphasize that the blood drive had no connection with the Viet Cong, or where the idea that the drive was the following week instead of the correct week originated, might lead to the real offenders.

Rivals Send Congrats

EDITOR'S NOTE: This telegram was sent to the students of Michigan State through the State News office by the students of Notre Dame.

To All MSU Students:

Congratulations to the 1965 Big Ten Champions, the Michigan State Spartans. Looking forward to another great game in the fine tradition of our past close rivalries.

For those MSU students coming to Notre Dame for the game: Remember the free parking and the reception prior to the game from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in our student center.

Extremists' Rights Supported

To the Editor:

I am what is called a "middle-of-the-roader" in most areas of life. I live in a dorm and get average grades. I am out to defend no one if I can help it like so many of our "pseudo" extremists seem to do.

I may not want to stop the war, ban the bomb, free the slaves, live off campus, burn the library, go to the Rose Bowl or any of the causes my fellow students seem to find a need to identify with. What I do want to do is understand the treatment that has been given to some of these extremist elements.

When one of my "weirdo" students is charged with trespassing in the Union, a Union we paid for and support, I wonder why? The outrage though is when a few days later I am confronted at my meal line with a petition to sign on the same issue; an activity the University has supported. Is not this trespassing the same as issuing literature? I am for the war in Viet Nam, but to have my University take such a narrow-minded point of view distresses me deeply.

All of these views and numerous rumors of spies not hired by our flawless (?) administration but by the campus police on "alien" students. Distant rumors also of the government drafting some of the extremist agitators also cause great worry in me.

I might not go along with what the "fringe" is preaching but I will at least do nothing to stop their right to say it. When I see this prohibition on a campus, an area where all ideas have traditionally had free interplay, I worry deeply.

Gardens Not Same

To the Editor:

A director of the horticulture gardens should have an appreciation of beauty, not an obsession for cutting down trees.

Why were the evergreens (arborvitae) that line the sidewalk through the garden destroyed? Were they too large, too stately for the garden?

Apparently you never walked down that sidewalk on a sunny day or a misty evening. Too bad; you missed a lot. I'm sorry for future students of MSU. They'll never realize that at one time the garden had character.

Whatever is to take their place will fall far short of replacing the grace and dignity of those trees.

What Of War When Two Beauties Meet?

A shocking incident occurred at the Miss World beauty contest recently, according to the Associated Press.

A Syrian official was compelled to protest to contest organizers after Miss Israel spoke to Miss Syria. The two countries are technically at war.

Miss Israel asked: "Don't you think it would be nice if I said hello, even though our countries aren't talking?"

Miss Syria fled the scene, crying "I can't talk to her. I can't—and I don't want to. I've had instructions not to talk to her."

She was led away sobbing. Something is drastically wrong with a contest in which such blatant indiscretions can occur. The Syrian official had every right to protest.

The theory of the Miss World contest is one of friendly competition.

These girls are under enough pressure without being confronted by taxing political issues. Fortunately, the Syrian girl was saved further embarrassment by her quick thinking. She was clever enough to abandon the conversation before there was a scene. Had she been less composed, she might have magnified the incident.

Suppose a less quick-witted girl had been in her place. Shocked and insecure, she might have answered weakly:

"Hello."
The Israeli girl, obviously more clever and trained in the insidious ways of political machination would be quick to counter:

"You certainly are beautiful. I wish my hair was as easy to manage as yours."

Then what could the innocent Syrian girl say? Naive to the ways of the world, she would only manage to get herself in deeper. "My nose is too crooked," she would smile weakly. "You have a perfect nose," she would add hesitantly to the Israeli politico.

Should the conversation go this far, without the dull-witted Syrian girl being rescued by a wiser Syrian official, things could really become bad.

"Oh no," the Israeli devil would protest. "I wish I had a nose like yours. Mine is much too big."

Syria: "What's that perfume you're wearing?"

Israel: (shrewdly) "You like it?"

Syria: "Oh yes!"
By this time things have gone beyond the point of restitution. Even if it was stopped, the damage would be done.

The two girls LIKE each other.

The balance of power in the Middle East hangs upon a slender thread indeed.

Inhibitions Of Sobriety

There was this song fest the other night down in the local rathskeller.

We wandered in about midnight and the place was sort of jumping as they say. The kids upstairs were dancing the animal and whatever else is big with the high schoolers these days.

But in the basement among the rafters and the candle tables we had this fellow on the piano armed with a microphone, Jim. I think they called him.

Our little group, tempered by the inhibitions of sobriety, was at a considerable disadvantage in the merry-making department. And this really hurt at first. We had hardly done justice to the first shell when old Jim discovered someone, probably a student, from Viet Nam.

This demanded a chorus of "For he's a jolly good fellow" while our Asian brother stood up, hands clasped above his head like a professional fighter to acknowledge the suddenly patriotic drinkers.

Although we didn't catch it, it was supposed he was obviously a Good Guy and from the South.

This bit of patriotism out of the way, our piano-playing leader kept us in the mood with a delightful ditty about some gal named Sarah who sits 'n sips.

By this time Jim was really hitting his stride in the fun & games department.

"In this one," blared the loudspeaker, "you guys on the right will be the bathrooms." (Loud cheers from the "bathrooms.") "And you guys," he said directing a finger over our way, "will be the bedrooms." (Even louder cheers from my new comrades.) It was magnificent. The whole thing gave you a cause for the price of a beer.

It was a contest to see which side could slaughter Belafonte's "Matilda" with the most enthusiasm.

The thing ended in a draw of course. And by then everybody was ready for "Hey La-dee-la" with original semi-smutty offerings from the patrons.

But eventually, the inevitable break came and the crowd began thinning out.

We didn't see the fellow from Viet Nam leave, but on the way home one couldn't help wondering about his impressions and how he would explain the evening to the folks back home.

You see, he was a bathroom.

Apartheid Said Economic Necessity

By BILL PRITCHARD
State News Staff Writer

Without its gold mines, South Africa would collapse, and to feed the mines with labor the South African whites must subjugate the black man, said I.B. Tabata, president-in-exile of the South African Unity Movement, Friday night.

Tabata, who is touring major American cities, was in Detroit seeking support for the Alexander Defense Committee. The Committee was set up for Dr. Neville Alexander, a South African freedom fighter arrested last December for opposing the South African government's apartheid policy.

"The black man's sole reason for living is to minister to the needs of the white man," Tabata told the audience in the Woodward Avenue-Grand Circus Park Central Methodist Church.

To attract needed foreign capital, the white South African government must have more illiterate black labor to increase the mine output, he said.

No educated black African is qualified for the mines, Tabata said, because he would stir up opposition to the whites.

To keep the Africans illiterate, the Verwoerd government has the Bantu Education Act which has re-instated the old, divisive tribal system, he said.

The government appoints puppet chiefs and effects legislation through them, Tabata said.

The government also forces Africans onto reserves which they cannot leave without special passes. In effect, he said, Africans are "foreigners in the country of their birth."

Passes must be displayed upon the demand of any police official anywhere in the country, Tabata added, and thousands are arrested each year for being without the passes.

Even with the reserve and pass systems to centralize the labor supply, he said, 60 per cent of the mine labor comes from independent African states to the north.

Tabata predicted that if this outside labor were ever pulled out in protest of the South African government's oppressive policy the whole country would crumble economically within six months.

Therefore, indigenous labor is desperately needed. To keep the blacks suppressed enough to obtain that labor, Tabata said the whites must regard the blacks as things instead of humans.

But the degradation of the Africans has also dehumanized the whites, he said, especially the soldiers. They have no reservations about committing atrocities, such as beating the life out of a black woman's unborn child.

Tabata said he did not see how American and English representatives could speak out against the South African government since U.S. and British capital underwrites the Verwoerd regime.

"The flow of American dollars into South Africa in particular has tripled since 1960 because investors can get nearly 25 per cent profits out of their investments as compared with an expected top of 11 per cent in other world markets."

As long as there is the cancer of racism in South Africa it will surely spread, he said, the plight of the South African is intertwined with the struggles of the American Negro.

Tabata spoke of the day when the violence of the white South Africans would be met with violence in an "eruption to end further eruptions."

"We are not fighting for death," he said, "we are fighting for life. Our people must exist."

Yarmouth Castle Ruled Safe Before Fire

MIAMI (AP)--A Coast Guard investigator said Monday the cruise ship Yarmouth Castle complied with all international safety regulations three weeks before she sailed to a fiery death in the Atlantic. Capt. V.G. Niebergall, head of the 7th Coast Guard District Merchant Marine Safety Division, disputed in almost every respect the complaints of survivors that the Yarmouth Castle was poorly equipped to cope with the fire that swept the vessel Saturday.

B-52s Support U.S. Ground Forces

SAIGON (UPI)--Giant B52 bombers Monday flew 5,000 miles to rescue U.S. Air Cavalry troops pinned down on a mountainside by murderous fire from 1,500 regular North Vietnamese soldiers. The B52s tore great chunks out of the Communist forces, and sent them reeling in retreat with an estimated 1,000 dead.

It was the first time in the Viet Nam war that the eight-jet Strategic Air Force bombers had been used in direct support of ground troops.

Britain Seeks Sanctions On Rhodesia

LONDON (AP)--The Labor government and the Tory opposition joined Monday night in a drive to push through Parliament a far-reaching law imposing crippling sanctions on rebellious Rhodesia. Atty. Gen. Elwyn Jones told the House of Commons that Queen Elizabeth II, acting through her governor, Sir Humphrey Gibbs, is the only legal government in Rhodesia.

But Prime Minister Ian Smith of Rhodesia, after confronting Gibbs in Government House in Salisbury, thought otherwise. He told reporters Rhodesia "no longer has a governor."

Drugs, Alcohol Caused Kilgallen Death

NEW YORK (AP)--The death of Dorothy Kilgallen was caused by the combination of moderate quantities of alcohol and barbiturates, the medical examiner's office reported Monday.

Dr. James Luke, assistant examiner, reported that Miss Kilgallen died of "acute ethanol and barbiturate intoxication." He said the quantities of alcohol and of barbiturates in her bloodstream were not excessive, but said the combination caused a fatal "depression on the central nervous system."

Kimba Asked To Form New Cabinet

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)--President Joseph Kasavubu asked Premier Evariste Kimba to try to form a new Cabinet, despite his defeat by followers of Moise Tshombe in Parliament, Radio Leopoldville announced Monday night. It said Kimba agreed. The broadcast gave no details.

Kimba was defeated on a no-confidence vote in a joint session of Parliament Sunday night. The vote was 121 for Kimba, 134 against, and seven abstentions.

coeducational academic-residence halls.

MSU carried the "living-learning" unit one step further this year, Neville reported, with the opening of Justin S. Morrill College. This is a small college within the larger university and it offers liberal education with an international dimension. It has its own residence halls, its own faculty and its own special curriculum.

"This may well be the first of several semi-autonomous units at MSU," he explained.

He described other examples of MSU's "college within a college" approach. He said that instead of assigning students to residence halls on a more or less random basis, students have been grouped, voluntarily and, to a limited degree, according to class and major subject.

The College of Natural Science, for example, has been assigned to one residence hall, the colleges of Social Science and Arts and Letters to others.

Neville emphasized that the "living-learning" units at MSU constitute just one of many approaches to the challenge of bigness.

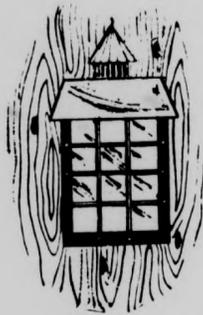

"An introspective examination of the entire University is being carried out through MSU's Educational Development Program," he said. "Through a total curriculum review process, we are trying to develop programs at least at the junior and senior levels where students will have at least one small class each term."

An example of this, he said, are the pro-seminars in the College of Arts and Letters. These offer a graduate-type seminar in which the student may select a specific professor to follow a field of special interest.

"We do not have all the answers," Neville cautioned. But he added that "we feel that we have identified some of the most important questions."

NEW YORK (UPI)--Arkansas took over second place Monday in the United Press International major college football ratings and trimmed top-ranked Michigan State's lead to its lowest advantage since the Spartans took over first place a month ago.

Arkansas drew 13 first-place votes from the 35 coaches on the UPI rating board and cut the Spartans lead from 34 points to 18. The Razorbacks pulled ahead of Nebraska, which narrowly averted defeat at the hands of Oklahoma State Saturday and fell to third. Michigan State received 19 first-place ballots, two less than last week, and Nebraska gained the remaining three votes. The top three teams all have perfect 9-0 records.

Notre Dame, which faces Michigan State at South Bend, Ind., Saturday in a game that could decide the national championship, slipped slightly but held fourth place following its 17-0 victory over North Carolina.

Southern California, Alabama, UCLA and Missouri continued to rank 5-6-7-8 in that order.

Texas Tech, with an 8-1 record, jumped from 11th to ninth place and Purdue edged Florida for the 10th spot.

WEDEMEYER WHOLE SHOW

Whites Smash Greens, 36-0

By LARRY WERNER

State News Sports Writer

In the words of the old talent scout Arthur Godfrey, "Hawaya, Hawaya, Hawaya." Godfrey made his three adaptations of the word Hawaii famous; now another famous talent seeker--- named Duffy Daugherty---may borrow his show biz counterpart's phrase.

Two Hawaiians have already proven themselves in Green and White football attire: Dick Kenney and Bob Apisa. A third, Charlie Wedemeyer, was added to the list of successful South Pacific recruits when he led his "White" team to a 36-0 victory over the "Greens" in the annual freshman intra-squad game Monday.

Wedemeyer, who is listed as 5-7 and 170 pounds, gave a rain-soaked crowd a reason to brave the inclement weather by firing three touchdown passes, scoring one himself and chalking up a total of 337 yards through the air and 58 on the ground for an incredible individual total offense of 395 yards.

Many figured the Green squad to hold the edge in the frosh scrimmage. With the likes of Bob Super, Bill Feraco, Dick Berlinski and All-American Roger Rumlinski donning dark jerseys, it could safely be said that the White was the underdog.

The White team moved 60 yards in ten plays early in the second period with "Little Charlie" going the last two yards on a rollout. Bobby Lee, from Upper Sandusky, Ohio, booted the first of four conversions, and the score was 7-0.

Near the end of the second quarter Wedemeyer fired to his favorite target, Hillsdale's Frank Waters, for a touchdown play which covered 45 yards. Lee made the score 14-0.

Mike Mahady, a fullback from Latobe, Pennsylvania, scored the third six-pointer after another White aerial display in the third period. Lee added another PAT.

Later, Wedemeyer capped a 50-yard drive with a five-yard scoring toss to Don Warnke, from Detroit Denby. Lee added another extra point, at the 40-second mark of the third period.

The White scored again with 51 seconds remaining in the game, on a 21-yard pass play, from Wedemeyer to Waters. An attempted drop kick fell short.

It seemed as though nothing would work for Super and Feraco's squad. Dennis Lazar, a defensive end from Flint, added salt to the Greens' wound by dropping Super in the end zone for a safety.

After the free kick, and with only seven seconds remaining, Wedemeyer astounded those in attendance by running from his own 40 to the Green 31, after being trapped in the backfield trying to pass.

Fittingly Wedemeyer said after the game, "The line did a tremendous job, and so did Frank Waters."

How right you are, Charlie. White's offensive front seven gave their quarterback time to throw the ball, and the son of former State All-American, "Muddy" Waters, astonished the fans with his circus catches and running ability.

Super completed two of five passes, for 22 yards, and his alternate Feraco connected on 10 of 23 for 114. Top groundgainer for the game was Reggie Cavender with 44 net yards in 15 carries.

FIRST ROUND FOE UNCERTAIN

Booters Enter NCAA Field

By BOB HORNING
State News Sports Writer
It's back to action this week-end for the Spartan soccer team, as they start out on their quest for a national championship.

Michigan State, the No. 2 team in the midwest region, will travel to the East coast to take on the No. 2 team from that region, either the University of Maryland or the University of Baltimore, in the first round of NCAA tournament play.

The kickers took last week off from formal practice, to catch up on their studies.

Spartan Coach Gene Kenney said Maryland is the probable opponent, although it isn't official yet. Baltimore had a better season record, but Maryland played a tougher schedule, losing only to Army and Navy.

Navy beat State last year, 1-0, for the national championship, and is again No. 1 in its region this year after an undefeated regular season.

St. Louis gained the No. 1 midwest berth, by virtue of its 3-2 victory over State 10 days ago. The Billikens will play the midwest's No. 3 team, Ohio University, at St. Louis Saturday.

Kenney said his boys shouldn't be looking ahead to meeting St. Louis later in the tournament. "Last year we just beat Maryland in our first tournament game, 1-0, scoring in the last four minutes.

If the booters win Saturday, they will play again a week from Saturday in East Lansing for the right to go to the nationals in St. Louis.

The Spartans should be at full strength for Saturday's tilt, although All-America Payton Fuller's knee is still bothering him after being kicked during the St. Louis game. A blood clot developed on his shin and Fuller was in Olin Health Center two days last week, but can run now and should be ready Saturday.

Some lineup changes will be made during practice this week, Kenney said, with the idea of making them permanent for the games.

Kenney said the reason for the changes were to tighten up the defense and to go with experience in the playoffs. "Belloli and Enustun did good jobs and played their hearts out, but the St. Louis game showed us we have to do something."

"We should win if we score two goals," Kenney said, "but we scored twice against St. Louis and lost. They were the first team to push our defense this year, so we couldn't really tell how good our defense was before. It showed its weaknesses against St. Louis' fine forward line," he said.

State Harriers 6th In IC4A; Georgetown Grabs Crown

By JOE MITCH

State News Sports Writer

NEW YORK--Michigan State's cross country team got strong finishes from its top two runners here Monday afternoon to take a sixth place in the IC4A championship meet on the Van Courtlandt Park course.

The Spartan harriers, rambling along with only six runners as compared to the maximum number of seven on the other teams, tallied a total of 174 points in the 57th running of the 5-mile title-meet race.

Repeating as team champion and holder of the individual title was Georgetown with 56 points, followed by Notre Dame in second place with 89 points.

Army was in third place with 96 points, closely followed by Villanova in fourth with 128 points.

Penn State with 164 points took over fifth, a position held by the Spartans last year.

Georgetown's Charles Messenger, a junior who placed high in the '64 meet, took home the individual title with a record time of 24:46, which erased the old mark of 24:48.8 established last year by another Georgetown runner, Joe Lynch.

Coach Fran Dittich's runners turned in another creditable performance to add to their strong second place finish in the Big Ten meet last week. State's top runner, Dick Sharkey, a junior who missed last year's meet with a leg injury, finished a strong eighth, despite trailing the individual winner by nearly a quarter of a mile.

Senior Paul McCollam, an eighth place finalist in '64, slipped a couple of notches this year by finishing 12th.

Knee Injury May Sideline Bob Apisa

Spartan fullback Bob Apisa might miss Saturday's game with Notre Dame because of an aggravated knee injury received in the Indiana game last Saturday.

"The knee is bruised and swollen," explained Head Coach Duffy Daugherty, "which restricts his mobility. We'll know Wednesday whether he'll be ready for the game."

Fullback Eddie Cotton would replace Apisa and Mitch Prullitt, left halfback, would back up Cotton. The rest of the team will be ready for the game.

Art Link, a sophomore, fared well in his first IC4A meet by finishing 26th among a field of nearly 300 runners.

A slight disappointment to Dittich and assistant coach Jim Gibbard was the performance of George Balthrop, who managed a 55th place. Balthrop, who finished eighth in the conference meet a week earlier, was counted on to lift the Spartans into the top five positions.

Rounding out the Spartan finishing contingent were Keith Coates, 77th, and senior Paul Bryan, 114th.

The Spartans returned home last night and will have three days before they take off for another grueling race in the NCAA championships next week in Lawrence, Kansas.

Court Decision Heartens Reds

NEW YORK (UPI)--The leader of the Communist party, U.S.A., encouraged by a favorable U.S. Supreme Court Decision, said Monday the party would move immediately to get Communist candidates on election ballots. Gus Hall, party leader who operates under the title of "chief spokesman," held a news conference here shortly after the court declared illegal a major provision of the 1950 Subversive Activities Control Law. The provision required Communist Party members to register with the federal government.

Red Ruling

myself as an officer should now be kicked out." Critics of the 1950 subversive law contend it puts party members on the horns of an impossible and unconstitutional dilemma.

If they failed to register they could be prosecuted, fined and sent to jail. If they register, they leave themselves open to prosecution under the Smith Act of 1940, the law which makes it a crime to belong to a group that advocates overthrow of the government.

The court followed this line of reasoning, putting aside all constitutional challenges to the registration requirements except the one based on the Fifth Amendment protection against possible self-incrimination.

This amendment, Brennan said in the court's written opinion, is designed to relieve citizens "of the necessity of making a choice between incriminating themselves and risking serious punishment for refusing to do so."

ference here shortly after the court declared illegal a major provision of the 1950 Subversive Activities Control Law. The provision required Communist Party members to register with the federal government.

Even though the question of whether the party itself must register as an agent of the Soviet Union now is pending in a federal court trial in Washington, Hall said:

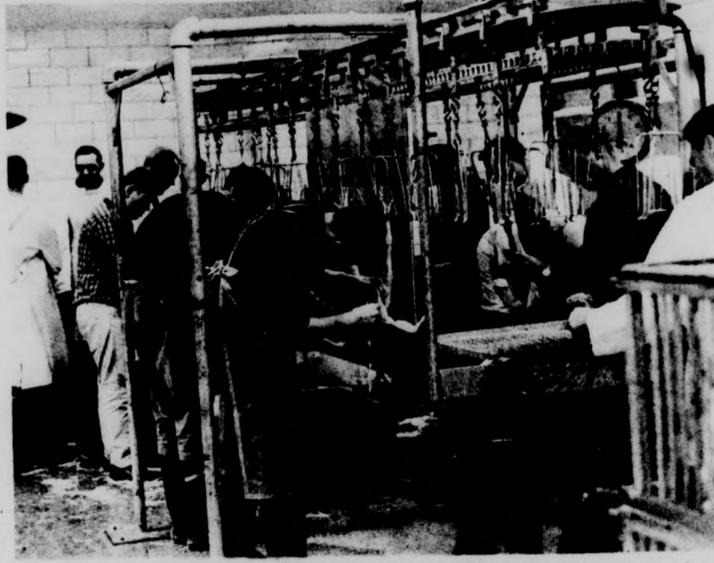

"Wherever it's possible we are going to run Communists for public office."

"We also announce that within a month's time we shall publish the draft of a Communist program for our country so that all Americans can judge for themselves what it is the Communists propose and what they really stand for," Hall said in a statement.

Hall described certain federal laws affecting the Communist Party, such as the McCarran and Smith Acts, as "the longest legislative vendetta in our history."

"The Communist Party takes this occasion to call for an end to all anti-democratic law that infringe on the Bill of Rights," Hall said. "It calls for a halt to any further prosecutions under the McCarran Act and for the tossing of this act and the Smith Act into the garbage pail of our national history."

Hall said Communists, in refusing to register under the McCarran Act, did not "wish to conceal their political program or philosophical views or their membership in the Communist Party."

WMU Protests Its 'Grand River'

KALAMAZOO (UPI) --- About 700 students and teachers marched on City Hall Monday and protested dangerous traffic conditions on the Western Michigan University campus.

They presented about 20 demands to City Manager Clarence H. Elliott who discussed the hazards with spokesmen for the faculty and students.

About 178 accidents and two deaths, including one last Thursday, have happened on the stretch of West Michigan Avenue which runs through the campus.

The students asked the city for a 20 mile per hour speed limit but city spokesmen said it had been lowered from 30 to 25 m.p.h. Sunday and that only a legislative act can change the 25 m.p.h. limit which is set by the state.

Among the demands were more lights, better lights, overhead pedestrian walks, regular police patrols and crossing guards.

The city manager told the group to ask for student body approval of an ordinance which he said he would suggest if he gets student body approval. The ordinance would prohibit jaywalking and thumbing rides on the campus.

Campbell also said the city planned to make Michigan Avenue a one-way street west on the campus and VandeGiesen Street a one-way street south and east. He said the city has the situation under study.

The demonstrators wore black arm bands. They placed the arm-bands and a wreath at the base of a "Flame of Life" traffic safety award.

Elliott, also wearing a black arm band, met the marchers at the City steps. The march from the campus to City Hall was quiet and orderly.

Peace Talk Offer Revealed

WASHINGTON (UPI)--The State Department confirmed Monday that at least one approach for secret talks in Rangoon on ending hostilities was received from North Viet Nam a year ago. It was rejected as lacking sincerity, the department said.

Press Officer Robert J. McCloskey confirmed that U.N. Secretary-General U Thant relayed a proposal for a meeting of American and North Vietnamese emissaries in Burma in the early fall of 1964 but added:

"On the basis of the total evidence available to us we did not believe at any time that North Viet Nam was prepared for serious peace talks."

A report that Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara had opposed holding the meeting in Rangoon was denied by McNamara and by the State Department.

The report appeared in a Look magazine article by Eric Sevareid about the late UN ambassador, Adlai Stevenson. Sevareid quoted Stevenson as saying that McNamara opposed the meeting because "the South Vietnamese government would have to be informed and that this would have a demoralizing effect on them; that the government was shaky enough as it was."

In a statement, McNamara declared it was totally false that in the fall and winter of 1964 he had opposed such talks.

"There is not one word of truth in the remarks made about me or the position attributed to me in the article," McNamara said. "My position has long been known."

"It is that we should search in every possible way for peaceful settlement in Viet Nam and should be prepared for unconditional discussions with the governments concerned, in large groups or small ones, at any time and any place."

"That was my position in 1964. It is my position today and it will continue to be my position," The State Department spokesman also reaffirmed that the United States is prepared for unconditional discussions.

McCloskey said there is "no unwillingness to talk to North Viet Nam."

"Did U Thant advise the United States that North Viet Nam was prepared for talks?" McCloskey was asked.

"Yes," McCloskey replied. "All our indications were that there was no serious intent on the other side," he said.

"We saw nothing to indicate that Hanoi was prepared for peace talks and the secretary of state said he would recognize it when it came along. His antenna is sensitive."

The spokesman said that the United States would not place conditions on an offer for unconditional discussions.

"Would the United States accept such an offer now for discussions?" a newsman asked.

"We will want to make a determination based on our own contacts," McCloskey said. "We have pointed out that we hear all kinds of things from direct and indirect contacts but we have not seen any evidence of a desire for a peaceful settlement."

In New York, U Thant declined to comment on the magazine report on the grounds that he could not discuss matters taken up with member nations.

McCloskey said McNamara did not participate in making the decision to turn down the offer to meet in Burma with the North Vietnamese. That is from Burma.

McCloskey denied that there had been any change of U.S. policy although he conceded that President Johnson, in his April 7 speech at Johns Hopkins University, had first used the phrase "unconditional discussions" with reference to talks with the Communists.

Economic Ills In Latin America

Wide income gaps and lack of discipline to a social system are the major problems in Latin American countries, a Colombian economist said here last week.

Lauchlin Currie, former advisor to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, compared the situation in Latin America to that in the U.S. in 1933.

"If Latin America's very-low income farmers are viewed as being unemployed, the situation in these countries is similar to the United States in 1933," Currie said.

He contended that government projects aimed at smoothing out the economies and eliminating social inequalities would also increase employment.

Currie said, however, that such a "war against poverty" would be difficult to wage because of the "vicious circle" economies of the countries.

"Underdeveloped countries are characteristically underdeveloped throughout their economic and social structures," he said.

There are many problems, all urgent, and all rising out of several basic problems," Currie explained the wide income gaps between the incomes of professional persons and laborers and between laborers and farmers partly as a result of inflation and ineffectual tax collecting methods.

Any gain that might benefit the whole economy, Currie said, seems only to add to the vicious "circle" and widen the gaps between income groups.

Because progress in production methods seldom increases jobs in Latin American industry, cities have excess populations, he said. He said this means that the cities cannot serve as havens for the poor and virtually unemployed rural people.

Currie said that the vicious circle of Latin American economics is best seen in the paradox of the over-population problem. Poverty is largely caused by a region's high birth rate, yet the only way to decrease the birth rate is to raise the standard of living.

Since 1951, the population of Colombia has increased by 50 per cent. Much of this increase has been among the rural people, according to Currie.

Birth control among the poverty stricken rural people is not a question of religion but one of knowledge, he said.

"The most prolific people are not necessarily very religious," Currie explained. "These people do not maintain high birth rates because of convictions, but because of ignorance and the 'old age care' that children seem to guarantee," he said.

Currie explained that the very individualistic type of social order further complicates the Latin American economic situation.

"People live entirely within a family unit rather than a social unit. Because of this, it is very difficult to obtain a consensus from the people," he said.

"For a country to improve itself," Currie said, "its people must be well-disciplined to a social system." He added that "Americans are well-disciplined despite what some newspapers seem to say. This type of well-ordered society is necessary for progress."

Campus UN 'Sends' Troops To Rhodesia

A vote for military action to suppress the new Rhodesian government was made by the General Assembly of the Campus UN Friday.

The delegate for Peoples China voted in favor of this resolution along with the Nigerian delegate who said this white minority group should not be allowed to rule over millions of Africans.

The South African delegation voiced the only major opposition to the resolution.

Secretary General Barry Kolb, senior political science major, said the United Kingdom is to blame for its lost colony. They waited too long to effectively enforce their policies of majority rule.

Prime Minister Ian Smith of Rhodesia declared independence after several years of negotiations floundered on Britain's insistence that Rhodesia's four million Africans be assured ultimate control of the government.

Rhodesia is not yet as institutionalized in racial policy as the apartheid South African government, Kolb said.

Thieves Get Varied Loot Over Weekend

Major thefts this weekend totaled over $185 in several cases of larceny reported to Campus police.

Joseph H. Schenkel, Elmont, N.Y. sophomore, reported that an estimated $125 damage was done to his sports car when thieves pried open the top of his car and stole the radio valued at $95.

Charles E. Streeter, East Lansing graduate student, $42.50 worth of clothing was taken from a lobby at the Owen Graduate Center sometime Saturday.

Carol J. Williams, Livonia sophomore, reported to police that a purse valued at $1 and its contents of $17 were taken from her room in Williams Hall Wednesday at Thursday.

Prof Suspended For Hypnotizing

DEARBORN (UPI)—Officials at Henry Ford Community College have suspended a part-time psychology instructor for putting a pretty young coed under a hypnotic trance Friday night from which it took 16 hours for her to be revived.

The instructor, Gerald G. Griffin, 32, of nearby Nankin Township, put the girl, Cynthia Wellman, 18, Inkster, under the hypnotic trance while the two sat in her car in a parking lot near the school.

Griffin said he did not perform the hypnosis in class because college officials told him not to use hypnosis with his class since they felt it did not relate to his introductory psychology course. He had admitted using hypnosis on seven other students.

Griffin said he became worried about Miss Wellman when she would not respond to his commands or arouse from the trance. He said he transferred her to his car and took her to his home.

Griffin said he contacted the girl's mother and Wayne County General Hospital and rushed the girl to the hospital.

A Detroit psychiatrist, Dr. Bruce L. Danto, finally revived Miss Wellman more than 16 hours after Griffin had put her under the spell. Dr. Danto was treating her for any lingering effects of the hypnosis.

Griffin, who is scheduled to take his oral examinations for a doctoral degree in counselling psychology Thursday, said he never has used hypnosis "at a party or for sensational purposes."

"I'm a scientist," he said. Police said they would not charge Griffin because there was no law regulating the use of hypnosis and there was no evidence of the hypnosis being used for improper purposes.

Indian Playwright To Open 'Goa' On Campus Tomorrow

Indian playwright Asif Currimbhoy will give the world premiere of his "Goa" at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the arena theater.

Currimbhoy was once forbidden in India to produce "The Doldrummers," a play he wrote about Indian beatniks.

Although he had three volumes of plays published in India, he had to go outside his country to have them produced.

Teaching on campus this term, he will assist in the production of the Performing Arts Company presentation of "Goa" Wednesday through Saturday. He is at MSU under a John D. Rockefeller grant.

"Goa" deals with India's 1961 invasion of the Portuguese colony of Goa, an act that destroyed India's traditional position as a pacifist nation.

Neither "Goa" nor any of his plays are essentially political, however, Currimbhoy said.

"Many of my plays deal with contemporary Indian subjects and changing social values which have not been acknowledged or accepted, particularly as subject matter in the theater," he said.

The audience at Friday's performance of "Goa" may remain after the presentation to discuss the play with Currimbhoy.

Currimbhoy coined the title, "The Doldrummers," for his banned play to describe the beat and angry ones for whom the traditional passive resistance lost its meaning. Censorship of the play brought protests throughout India and the government lifted the ban.

Arthur Miller, John Osborne and Graham Greene were among the theatrical artists who encouraged Currimbhoy to produce his plays outside India.

The American Education Theater Association selected Currimbhoy's "Thorns on a Canvas" for its catalog "New Plays of '64-'65."

Currimbhoy is on leave from an international oil company in India where he is a marketing executive. He began writing nine years ago. He does all his writing evenings and weekends.

Moscow Philharmonic To Come For Concert

One of the world's youngest symphony orchestras will give a concert at 8:15 Thursday in University Auditorium, performing Wagner, Mozart, and Prokofiev.

The Moscow Philharmonic, formed 14 years ago, is a teenager in the society of orchestras, where most members are patriotic dowagers at least 100 years old. Its comparative youth, however, does not prevent it from an abundance of talent.

Conductor Samuel Samosud founded the Philharmonic in 1951. Dismayed by the lack of Soviet concert audiences, he hoped to provide a medium for Russian symphonic music as well as the European classics.

The orchestra first became known to American audiences when Van Cliburn won the first International Tchaikowski Competition in 1958. Cliburn was accompanied by this orchestra in his recording of the composer's Concerto in B-Flat Minor, the first classical LP to seal one million copies.

Interest in the group grew through its many recordings and the glowing press notices it received during its 1963 European tour. Impresario Sol Hurok has signed the group to a tour of the U.S., which will take it to New England and the Midwest.

Thursday night's program will begin with the Prelude to Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," Mozart's Fourth Violin Concerto and Symphony in B-Flat Major by Prokofiev will follow. Conducting will be Kiril Kondrashin, director of the philharmonic.

David Oistrakh will be the soloist in the Mozart violin concerto. In his many concert tours, Oistrakh has acquired the reputation of being one of the finest violinists in the world.

Oistrakh is completely Russian-trained, having studied in his native Odessa. Moving to Moscow in 1928, he quickly established himself as a noteworthy artist. International acclaim followed in 1937 when he won first prize at the Ysaie Violinists' Competition in Brussels.

New Terror-Mystery Misses Mark

By DAVID HANSON
State News Reviewer

Once in a while a terror-mystery makes it, Alfred Hitchcock makes the best, but "Return from the Ashes" is a British bomb that not even he could save.

It is a study in waste. Three good performers do their best to put meat on the lines they have to speak, but the results are almost humorously bad.

Maximilian Schell is nearly great as a master chess player who likes women to buy him things. He creates a believable character, but with the drawback of ridiculous dialogue.

He loves and marries a woman doctor, who is Jewish and is taken to a concentration camp as soon as the overdue rites are performed. She keeps him, and in return he fills her lonely life with innocuous love and chatter. She calls him a bastard and he can't disagree.

'RETURN FROM THE ASHES'

She returns (from the ashes of a concentration camp) to find Max making out with her now grownup daughter. She is repulsed, naturally, and pretends to be a look-alike for herself so the happy couple can collect her legacy.

But then she reveals herself as the long lost wife, and Max gets caught up in a game of musical beds. He doesn't care which one he ends up in, as long as he can have cash to spend.

Ingrid Thulin plays the dead wife. Makeup helps make the transition from what she became in prison to her former self. The makeup is not convincing.

Things may seem rather contrived, and they are. She doesn't tell Max she's back—because one of the best scenes is when he thinks she might really be his wife. A little kid falls off the train in the opening scene to show that she's been in the camp and no longer "feels." Not that the kid was such a loss but it seems rather a waste just to make a point.

Oh yes, that is a mystery. There is murder, violence, suspense, sex and all that bag. All calculated to make the viewer hang on to find out how it ends. Justice prevails, have no fear. Samantha Eggar, who died in the "Collector," plays the girl in love with her step-father. She overacts in self-defense, because she's stuck with a rotten part in a rotten flick.

There are about three great scenes in the film, a half-dozen good ones, lots that get no place, and the rest is blah.

The photography is generally poor. The film is handled in stock fashion—with the wavy lines between scenes. A handheld sequence when Max gets drunk is good until the cut back to a straight studio shot.

Things look better when we see the expressions on the faces of Max and Samantha. Their expressions and acting ability save this from being a total loss. Miss Thulin is a colder type, demanding words to create a role, and she is out of luck this time.

"Return from the Ashes" indeed. More ashes are needed, like those of the script. This is not horror, it's horrible.

Debaters Win In Ann Arbor

Four MSU debaters won the Novice Division of the University of Michigan Third Annual Warm-up Debate Tournament Saturday in Ann Arbor.

The unit of Mary Conroy, Foley, Minn., senior and Jack Garvin, Muskegon Heights senior, debated the affirmative with Craig Mertz and Glenn Foster, both Saginaw freshmen, debating negative, and compiled a 5-1 record with 296 speaker's points to win their division. Foster and Mertz were undefeated and received Certificates of Excellence for their team's performance.

Also undefeated from MSU was the negative team of Rodney Dean and Roger Chard, both Lansing freshmen, who received Certificates of Excellence.

Other members of MSU teams in the Novice Division were Sandy Fillion, Elkton freshman, and Evelyn Knott, Dearborn sophomore, affirmative Thomas Rau, Westfield, N.J., freshman and Dennis Blyth, Dearborn freshman, negative.

High Court Rules On Other Cases

Besides the decision on the registration of Communist Party members, the Supreme Court handed down other important rulings:

—Granted a hearing to Dr. Samuel Sheppard, Cleveland osteopath sentenced in 1954 to life in prison for the slaying of his first wife, Marilyn.

—Reversed the conviction of the Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth, Negro civil rights leader, on charges of obstructing a Birmingham, Ala., sidewalk.

—Ordered the U.S. district court in Richmond, Va., to determine whether the assignment of teachers on an allegedly racial basis invalidates school desegregation plans.

Card Section May Go To Rose Bowl

A MSU card section at the Rose Bowl hasn't been ruled out by university officials yet.

Both Athletic Director Biggie Munn and Vice President for Student Affairs John A. Fuzak have agreed to help in all ways possible, so that the block might go as a group to Pasadena.

Any student who can definitely go to Pasadena for the game should report to the Spartan Spirit office, 325 Student Services, no later than Thursday noon. "Block S members will be given first chance to go," Tom Carman, head of Block S said. "Any other students who wish to go will be used to fill the remaining seats."

The block is awaiting university permission to find a sponsor for the trip.

"The cost will be greatly diminished if we can find a sponsor," Carman said. "But students should not rely on this to pay their expenses."

Munn gave his tentative OK on the condition that the block's performance at the game be perfect, Carman said. For this reason anyone planning to go with Block S will be required to attend a minimum of four practice sessions this term.

"No Big 10 school has ever taken its card section to the Rose Bowl before," Carman said. "So we want to make as good a showing as possible."

Block S will try to get a section at the Rose Bowl at least as large as it has at MSU games. "The size could be either larger or smaller, however, depending on the number of tickets we are given, and depending on student response to the proposal," Carman said.

There will be a special ticket meeting Thursday afternoon for key athletic officials to determine if student response has been great enough to justify further plans.

Other students who will sit with the block must bring their IDs to the Spartan Spirit office when they come to sign up for the trip.

Block S members must bring their Block S passes and ID cards.

Members of Block S will receive a greater reduction on travel costs than will non-members if a sponsor is found, Carman said.

Increase Disability Payments

Persons under 25 years of age who become totally and permanently disabled as a result of an accident while working are now entitled to greatly increased benefits from Workman's Compensation.

They must prove that their earning power would have increased. These and other recent changes in the Workman's Compensation Law were discussed by George Van Peursem, Lansing representative, Michigan Manufacturing Assn., at the luncheon session of the Seminar for Municipal Personnel Officers at Kellogg Center Monday.

Sponsored by the Personnel Management Program Service of the School of Labor and Industrial Relations, the seminar is a bi-annual event for municipal personnel officers planned for discussing municipal problems.

At MSU all full-time employees are covered by Workman's Compensation.

IN PEACE CORPS

No Room For Kooks

There is no place in the Peace Corps for "beatniks, kooks, draft dodgers or their like," a Peace Corps official said Friday.

"There are plenty of opportunities for dynamic, energetic, idealistic student leaders who have the proper motivation. That's what we're looking for," said Public Information Director Thomas S. Page.

"Student leaders who can meet these qualifications come from the student left or the student right. And you can't have a football team with just a right and a left end. You have to have people in the center too," Page said.

"That's the way the Peace Corps has been from the beginning and that's the way we intend to keep it," he added.

Page's statement was in response to a letter sent to Corps Director R. Sargent Shriver by State Sen. Raymond D. Dzendzel, D-Detroit. Dzendzel wrote Shriver Wednesday after hearing reports that a Corps recruiter was on the University of Michigan campus at Ann Arbor trying to sign up demonstrators against the war in Viet Nam.

Page said recruiter Robert Satin was trying to describe highly motivated student leaders when he said the corps sought people with "organizational skills" to make democracy successful in underdeveloped nations. Page said Shriver had not yet seen Dzendzel's letter.

The Peace Corps ended a recruiting drive at MSU Friday.

British UN Consultant Advocates World-Wide Patriotism

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

Today's citizen must learn a new patriotism that gets conflicts off the battlefield and onto the United Nations debating table, J. Avery Joyce, British UN consultant, said Sunday.

Under the new patriotism, nations must choose the UN charter over national interest, he said.

He proposed that the United States present a statement of national policy to the National Liberation Front in Viet Nam and work through the UN to set up a cease-fire. He also suggested reconvening the 1954 Geneva Conventions.

Joyce spoke Sunday evening before the 2nd Annual Convocation on Christian Social Concerns at University Methodist Church. The conference was sponsored by University Methodist and the Wesley Student Foundation.

"The United States opposed democratic elections in Viet Nam out of fear that the Communist Ho Chi Minh would have been elected," he said. "I believe the elections would have set up a balanced neutral government similar to those in Cambodia and Laos."

Quoting Toynbee, Joyce said we cannot live in a shredded-up world. We will live in one world or none.

He appealed to individuals to develop a patriotism that sees its country's aspirations in relation to the welfare of the world.

"The one commitment the signers of the UN charter made was not to settle international disputes by force or the threat of force but instead to work for peace," he said.

Yet while nations spend $200 billion on armaments, the UN cannot reach a $200 million goal for reconstruction projects. "No nation can make war and tell the truth," he continued.

The nations may dog-fight in the General Assembly, but they bring the problems out in the open, he said. Upstairs the staff is working on peace and reconstruction projects.

Joyce named three things he thinks are wrong in today's world. First, there is an element of downright cruelty in our behavior that we have grown to accept. That cruelty includes inquisitions, international wars and capital punishment.

Secondly, World War II is not yet ended. There never was a settlement in Europe, and Germany is still occupied.

Thirdly, the world is in permanent revolution. The revolution the U.S. started in 1775 is spreading into Asia and Africa where it takes on new faces.

The real test of a democracy is how far an individual can fight his government if he thinks it is morally and legally wrong, Joyce said.

"The only revolution that will succeed is one based on equal franchise," he said. "Smith's revolutionary government in Southern Rhodesia will not work."
