Viet Envoy To Speak Sunday

Vu Van Thai, recently appointed ambassador from Viet Nam to the United States, will speak on the Vietnamese social revolution Sunday evening.

His speaking engagement, which will be at 8:15 p.m. in the Erickson Hall Kiva, is being Senate committee session on the sponsored by the Lecture-Concert Series, the International Relations Club and Delta Phi Epsilon, foreign service fraternity.

Vu Van Thai's father, Vu Van An, was executed by the Communists in 1947, shortly after he and other North Vietnamese nationalists fled to the country-

Vu Van Thai himself served as an adviser to Ho Chi Minh at the 1945 Fontainebleau negotiations with France, but broke with Ho when it became apparent that Ho was using the nationalist movement to further Communism.

In 1954, Vu Van Thai declined a new political position offered him by Ngo Dinh Diem, and instead took the new Republic's highest civil service position. Thai and other independents were pressured by Ngo Dinh Nhu, however, and Thai came to the United States in 1961.

Thai accepted a post as head of the United Nations Technical Assistance Board in Togo. He then became one of the UN's chief economic troubleshooters.

Thai's appointment as ambassador was made late in 1965.

Four-Story Office Structure To Overlook Red Cedar River

By ANDREW MOLLISON State News Staff Writer

A request for funds for a $5.4 million administration building overlooking the Red Cedar River will be submitted to the state legislature immediately, according to Jack Breslin, University Secretary.

Final plans for the new four-story office building on the north bank of the Red Cedar by Olds Hall and the old North Power Plant cannot be drawn up until the preliminary plans are approved by the Building Division of the state's Department of Administration, and appropriations are made by the Legislature. Once working drawings are completed, construction bids can

One surprise in the survey was a response of more than 80 per cent in favor of having police officers, rather than the driver, decide whether to administer a sobriety test. Such permission has been sought unsuccessfully in proposed implied consent legislation.

Registration, Distribution Policies Improved Upon

ASMSURECENTLY proposed the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs revised policies on organization, registration and distribution of materials by students. It is presently considering a revised solicitation policy.

Few students realize that before a proposed policy becomes effective, it must be approved by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

IF THE PROPOSED policy on student organization registration is approved, a concise statement of University policy will exist for the first time in this area. A hodge-podge of regulations is all the students now

We support this organization registration proposal for several reasons. First of all, any organization may be registered regardless of its beliefs. The proposal states "No organization shall have its registration revoked or denied by ASMSU on the grounds of its beliefs, its goals or its attitudes." Though we may disapprove of the goals of some organizations, we believe they have a right to be recog-

THE OLD REGULATIONS stated that an organization advocating the overthrow of the government would not be registered. The new proposal states that an organization participating in the violent overthrow of the government would not be registered. The difference is significant. Though we do not approve of any group advocating the violent overthrow of the government, we don't think they should be censored by ASMSU.

If the distribution policy is put into effect, a statement of University policy will exist in this area for the first

UNDER THE PROPOSAL, students would be able to distribute information anywhere on campus outside of buildings, provided the name of the organization is on the material. The only distribution permitted in buildings would be in the Union or the International Center. ASMSU feels that residence hall regulations on this matter should be by WIC or MHA.

We agree with ASMSU that distribution should not be permitted in classroom buildings. Between classes is the only time that distribution in class buildings would be effective. And at this time distribution could interfere with the passage of students from class to class.

THE PROPOSED SOLICITATION policy leaves much to be desired. It has not been approved by ASMSU yet. We urge that several changes be made before ASMSU acts on it.

As the proposal now stands, a campus organization wishing to hold a fund raising event would be required to get the permission of many campus groups. Anywhere along the line the event could be killed without so much as an explanation for the veto.

AN ORGANIZATION WISHING to hold a benefit program would first have to get permission from ASMSU to hold the event. If permission were not granted, no reason for the rejection need be given. This is wrong. If a request should be refused, we feel that ASMSU should give reason for

Furthermore, once beyond ASMSU, the event must be approved by every office that would be directly involved. For example, if the event were to be held in the Union, it would have to be cleared with the Union. This requirement also is wrong.

FOR ADMINISTRATIVE purposes it is necessary that the event be scheduled with the appropriate university departments involved, but these departments should not have veto power over solicitation proposals. That power should rest with ASMSU and the Office of Student Affairs.

We urge that the entire solicitation process be streamlined. Although the present proposal is adequate, we feel a new approach might be sought.

WHILE WE DEFINITELY approve of the distribution and registration proposals, and urge their adoption by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, we believe that ASMSU can show greater initiative in developing a more effective solicitation policy.

Railroad Strike Looms

IT HAS BEEN ONLY a few days since the transit strike was settled in New York and now railroad unions threaten to strike on a national level, if their demands aren't complied with. The decisive issue is an old one, whether or not firemen should be employed to occupy the engine with the engineer.

UNION DEMANDS INCLUDE the reinstatement of half or more of the 17,500 firemen's jobs eliminated under a federal law in 1963. The problem is that the special statute expires on March 31.

In recent years, with the advent of diesel engines, and the demise of steam engines, the job of the firemen has become increasingly outdated. The railroad argued, and with good reason, that in most cases there was no need for firemen on modern diesel engines.

OF COURSE, UNIONS disagreed and a long struggle ensued. Finally, with an act of Congress, many firemen were eliminated. Now the union asserts that in the last two years there has been an increase in the number of accidents involving trains.

Though railroad officials denythis, it may or may not be true. The fact remains for the union to prove that this alleged increase in accidents has been primarily caused by the absence of firemen.

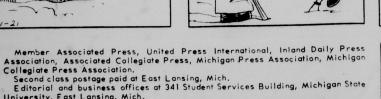

THEN THERE IS AN even deeper, more important problem to be faced. After viewing the circumstances resulting from the transit strike in New York City, can the nation or any large urban area afford to have any of its means of transportation stifled?

President Johnson alluded to this problem in his State of the Union speech when he expressed the need for legislation to deal with strikes hindering the public interest.

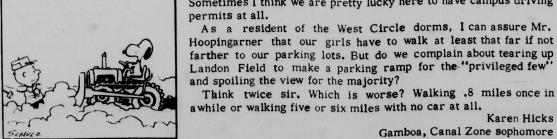

FIRST, A RAILROAD STRIKE must be avoided, and without the reinstatement of many unneeded firemen. Second, Congress should take steps toward formulating a way to deal with strikes having a harmful effect upon the public.

Colonel Holmes Errs On Three Decisions

A. Holmes, is working on his fourth strike. In recent weeks the good colonel has swung three times, through his outspoken opinions and rulings, at current events. Each time he has missed the ball entirely. His two publicly announced comments have been ill-advised and his one ruling unjust. Holmes' latest boner involves his refusal to recommend reclassification of 15 troubled University of Michigan students.

The 15, nine of whom are from Michigan, were classified I-A after their participation in an anti-Viet Nam war demonstration in the Ann Arbor Draft Board office.

Holmes' comment followed a justice department statement that the Selective Service cannot be used to stifle constitutionally guaranteed expressions of views.

His decision to not recommend reclassification, then, is in arrect contradiction of the justice department's interpretation of the constitution and the selective service laws.

But Holmes apparently feels he can put the Selective Service above constitutional guarantees. And he seems to have felt so all along. His recent actions go hand in hand with his statement several weeks ago made in support of national Selective Service Director Lewis B.

Hershev said then that demonstrations like the one in Ann Arbor constituted an interference with the operation of the Selective Service Dept. Such interferences, Hershey in effect, said were grounds for reclassification of the students to 1-A status. Holmes concurred. Hershey's contention is absurd. It is equaled Zamorski's mother lives in Wyandotte with her parents. Reportedly, she owes $2,600 in medical expenses, is four months behind in the $108 per month mortgage, and incurs bills close to $20 per week for medication.

Her only income is the $40 per month she receives from her son and part of the $170 a month Social Security that comes to her parents. Lamorski's petition contends he is needed to support his mother. No one else is available.

Holmes said he issued his disapproval on the basis of the draft board's file and the investigation of the Social Welfare Dept.

But, information given Holmes from the welfare department was untrue. It said Mrs. Zamorski merely had gallstones or gallbladder trouble. Letters from the two doctors at Henry Ford easily disproved this.

In light of the apparent situation, Holmes' decision was foolish. Bearing in mind the seeming contradictions, Holmes' job was to investigate more thoroughly and determine the real facts. At least he owed this service to the petitioner.

In baseball a batter is out after three strikes. Holmes is not subject to those rules. He has another swing, and, probably, even more swings after that one.

But perhaps, if he continues to fail, the state Selective Service should give some thought to playing with baseball's rules.

Thus, in baseball, when a player is hitting poorly, he's replaced. The same should be done for Holmes if he continues his slump.

With the new year 1966 but three weeks old, public attention is more common but trying problems in day to day life. There is little thought of reform, except perhaps in President Lyndon B. Johnson's more platitudinous moments.

And even though 1966 is a non-presidential election year, the need for reform in the nation's outdated and impractical Electoral College is readily apparent. President Johnson himself has proposed the abolishment of the electoral college while continuing to count presidential electoral votes as they are under the present

JIM SPANIOLO

Need Election

Reform Now

This would prevent the election of independent electors like the 15 from Alabama, Mississippi and Oklahoma who voted for Harry F. Byrd Sr. for president in 1960. It is not enough though; for the basic evil of the system would remain.

The evil is that the present Electoral College system does not meaningfully reflect the popular will of the nation. It then first appears that the best thing to do would be to elect our President by direct popular vote along. But since such a proposal would have to pass in form of a constitutional amendment, it is extremely doubtful that southern and small states could be convinced of its merit. There are several proposals, which would modify yet retain the basic structure of the Electoral College that appear to be an improvement on the pres-

The first proposal, and most preferable to this writer, is called the district plan. It would also abolish the selection of electors but retain the electoral vote, equal to the number of senators and representatives from each state, as a system of counting.

The presidential candidate with a plurality in each of the Congressional districts within a given state would receive its one vote. Then the candidate with the plurality of the popular vote within the entire state would receive the electoral votes equal to its two sena-

For example, in Michigan with 19 congressional districts, one candidate might win over his opponent in 12 districts while losing in the other seven. The winner in the state wide popular vote would receive the two votes equal to the senatorial seats.

The winner would then have won 14 electoral votes, but the loser would still receive seven votes for the seven congressional districts that he won. Under the present system, the winner would receive all 21 of the electoral votes. In this way, the electoral vote of each candidate would more accurately reflect the popular vote.

If no candidate received a majority of the electoral vote, the newly elected Congress would vote together as individuals to select the President from the top three candidates. A plurality on the first roll call would be enough to elect.

The biggest weakness of the district plan is that state legislatures draw boundaries for the districts; and the distinct possibility of gerrymandering always exists. But with the Supreme Court keeping a wary eye on apportionment in the states, as it is today, the danger becomes less prominent.

The second proposal, the proportional plan, would do away with the office of elector as does the district plan. But under this method, each candidate would receive the same proportion of the electoral vote as his share of the state's popular vote, with any fractional votes carried to three decimals. The candidate receiving the largest number of votes would win.

If no candidate received 40 per cent of the vote, the new ser tors and representatives would then sit jointly and vote as individuals to elect the new President from the two candidates receiving the largest number of electoral votes.

The goal of both plans is to reflect, as closely as possible, the popular vote of the country, something the present system many times does not do. But it is doubtful that either proposal will pass either house of Congress in the near future.

For there is an old saying among politicians, "you don't patch the roof before it leaks." Wouldn't it be nice though, just once, to repair the system before instead of after the injustice occurs.

Iranian Government Foils Plot

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) -- The Army prosecutor today announced the arrest of 69 persons charged with plotting to overthrow the government of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi. He said they were supplied with arms from abroad.

The prosecutor did not identify the country supplying arms but identified the plotters as members of the "party of Islamic nations." Other sources said the party was closely linked with supporters of Egyptian President Gaml Abdel Nasser.

Suggests Health Centers

By BOB HORNING State News Staff Writer

The need for improved communications between the community and health officials to raise health standards was cited by a visiting medical professor Wednesday night.

Dr. Lester Evans, who served 32 years as a pediatrician on the Commonwealth Foundation and has been president's medical consultant at New York University and the University of Virginia, said MSU's new medical school can be a significant step in this direction.

'The relationship of health and disease to the life process is something that can't be separated and this is a main point of concentration in the new medical school," Evans told members of the Medical School Community Liaison Committee.

"Emphasis in the medical school will not only be on the effects of disease on the human being, but also on the social effects of the disease, and the circumstances under which the illness occurred," he said.

Evans said that communities are now realizing this need for medical schools, and MSU will have an advantage in fulfilling its obligations because there are no time-worn traditions to be broken down before the school begins to operate effectively.

'Making citizens aware of the medical advantages available is one of the problems the medical school will have to face along with doctors and hospitals, Evans said.

Evans suggested a neighborhood health center as one means of doing this.

A neighborhood center, said Evans, "would inform people how to get medical help and would also provide social counseling."

The social emphasis of the neighborhood center stems from physicians' contention that you have to know the human being as much as possible before you can help him medically.

Many citizens won't go to hospitals or doctors because of fear. ignorance of the services available, or ignorance of their own condition. The neighborhood center, Evans said, would help solve this problem.

Evans said that some communities train lay persons as mental health aides to serve in neighborhood centers so the public will have more trust in the

"The success of both the medical school and the neighborhood center depends on a joint effort of the community and health officials," Evans said.

"After 20 years of lab-oriented medical practice, medicine is again moving out into the community where the problem exists," Evans said.

State's hockey team reaches the midway portion of its season schedule this weekend with a two-game series against the Bulldogs from Minnesota-Duluth at the Ice Arena.

The Spartans, stopped short of brillance last week with a series loss to Minnesota's Gophers, are intent on making the second half of the season a little brighter by gaining their first series win of the year. This will be the last series for the skaters on home ice, although they have separate games here with Michigan later in February. The Friday and Saturday night games are scheduled for 7:30 face-offs.

At the Pentagon, newsmen were told that McNamara's statement should not be construed as meaning a decision has been made on additional forces for Viet Nam. This, it was said, depends on whether Gen. 'S' SEEKS 4th BIG 10 WIN

Drama: Hawks Vs. Cagers

By BOB HORNING State News Sports Writer

The Spartan basketball team. which hasn't been so high-flying since Johnny Green was bouncing around Jenison Field House in 1958-59, aims for its fourth straight Big 10 win at Iowa Saturday afternoon.

The game will be televised at 4:15 on Channel 6 Sports Network as the Big 10 Game of the

With Iowa holding its opponents to 66 points a game this year, and State giving up only 68, the game naturally will be expected to be dominated by defensive play.

Ralph Miller, the Hawkeye cosch calls his style of play 'a perpetual running, constantmotion, pressure game." Miller relies greatly on a press and a variety of defenses to make his style work.

Spartan Coach John Benington said, "You need to be good and experienced to succeed against them. And you have to be able to react quickly to their changes on defense.

"Often they will fake one defense and go to another just to "The press gave State trouble last year."

mentum now which has moved them to the top of the standings. State's play the first half against Ohio State caused Benington to call it the best defensive half any of his teams have ever play-

But the offense has also been looking more than adequate. Spearheaded by Stan Washington (16.5 points per game average), Bill Curtis (14.4), and Matthew Aitch (13.4), State has been outscoring its opponents by an average of 10 points a game this season. The 24 points by guard John Bailey against Ohio also showed that the front line doesn't have to do all the scoring.

Why U.S. Really Intervenes Abroad

By JOHN HERRON

The real reasons the United States is in Viet Nam are being hidden from the American people, the national president of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), said here Wednesday night.

Carl Oglesby, national SDS president, and Mike Locker, University of Michigan graduate student, questioned the Johnson administration's reasons for being in South Viet Nam and in the Dominican Republic at an open meeting of the MSU chapter of SDS, before 150 persons.

The United States is not there to help the Vietnamese people create a sovereign state, but to establish an economic front against China, Oglesby said.

Outing Club Gets Results On Cave Trip

Ten members of the MSU Outing Club who had a batty time exploring caves last term have learned the results of their trip to study banded bats.

The 10 found 11 banded bats while exploring Trap Door and Coon's Caves near Bloomington, Ind. They sneaked up behind the bats, snatched them from their perches by the napes of their necks, and copied down the numhers on their bands.

The bats were hibernating so the Outing Club members merely hung them back up when they got the bats' numbers. The banding numbers were sent to the Fish and Wildlife Service.

A recent reply from the Wildlife Service stated that seven of the 10 bats found in Coon's Cave had also been banded there. The other three bats found in Coon's Cave had been banded in different caves in Indiana in 1961 and

The 11th bat, and only female found, was not banded in a cave at all, but in a town. All the bats were banded by James B. Cope of Earlham College. The purpose of bat banding is the same as that of bird bandingto study migrations, growth rates, breeding habits and sex

David Johnson, Williamston graduate student will present a slide lecture at the club's meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in 128 Natural Science.
