

'We Used To Call Them CIA Men' --Scigliano

Robert Scigliano, former assistant to the chief of the MSU Viet Nam project admitted Tuesday night that he doesn't "recall being told authoritatively that there were CIA men there."

But, he told 86 spectators at a meeting in the Union, "We used to call them CIA men."

And if they were Central Intelligence Agency employees, Scigliano pointed out, then it's possible that they were only giving technical assistance in counterinsurgency techniques to the Vietnamese Bureau of Investigation (the Surete, a police body with jurisdiction over serious crimes, immigration, customs revenue and internal security). They may not have been spies.

If this is so, then how would the following questions be answered, Scigliano asked rhetorically.

Why did the men live and work apart from the rest of us? Why did they not use the car pool? Why didn't they use our pool of interpreters and stenographers?

Why, when project members were relaxing at a sidewalk cafeteria in the evenings, was it only the CIA men who refused to discuss their work?

The presence of the men, whether they were spying or not, "tended to taint our credentials in the eyes of the Vietnamese and in the eyes of other Americans in Saigon," Scigliano said.

The professor of political science, author of two books on Viet Nam and from mid-1957 to mid-1959 assistant to the MSU Group chief in Saigon, said that four other weaknesses injured the project to a much greater extent than did the presence of the CIA men.

1. Speedy initiation of the project. "The University rushed into the project. The University didn't consider carefully enough what it was getting into in terms of allocation of personnel and resources. If planning had been more careful, the operational tasks would have been avoided."

2. Wide scope of action. "Even if one used the most latitudinous view of the land grant philosophy, one would have to say that massive equipment procurement for a police force is a most inappropriate activity." The University got into procurement (Scigliano stressed that only small arms, vehicles and other non-military equipment was involved) and operational fields due to the chaos in police and public administration when refugees began flowing into South Viet Nam from the North.

"The work was important to Viet Nam's future, so naturally the Vietnamese kept the project under close surveillance. This may have cramped the project members' freedom."

3. Lack of clear goals. "If the group had been smaller and if it had confined itself to...its proper tasks, it would have accomplished more good and attracted a great deal less attention than it did." He said the group should have had as its primary goal "teaching and curriculum development work in the National Institutes of Administration, the academic equivalent of MSU in Viet Nam."

4. Instant response to changes in U.S. policy. "A University should serve as an instrument of U.S. policy only when the University's policies are congruent with those of the U.S." He amplified this statement, in the question and answer period which followed his speech, with these words:

"The University cannot subvert its own primary purposes --discovery, recording and distribution of truth--to those of the national government. But I can't agree with those who say that a University has to be completely apart from the goals of a society as expressed through its government. Dif-

Congressman Defends CIA

Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) involvement with MSU's project in Viet Nam was defended Monday by an East Lansing congressman.

Rep. Charles E. Chamberlain, a Republican member of the House Armed Services Committee, said because the matter happened several years ago, "it was whipping a dead horse" to make this a controversy now.

"There have got to be sources of information for the American government," he said. "It is not always easy for the CIA to provide covers for the men who collect information."

"There are complaints when CIA men are attached to overseas branches of private business concerns or to other government agencies."

However, Chamberlain said he could understand why this particular case would be unwelcome in the academic community.

"In this kind of world we live in," he said, "the United States government must collect information. That function must go on for the good of the country. I would be more shocked to learn the CIA wasn't in Viet Nam."

Chamberlain, 48, a MSU graduate, says his committee membership gave him an insight into the worldwide problems the CIA faces in keeping Washington informed.

Ramparts Magazine last month touched off a storm about the relationship between Michigan State and the CIA.

FRANCE BANS NATO PLANES

Student Board OK's Limited Wage Policy

By ANDY MAREIN
State News Staff Writer

A referendum calling for restricted compensation for ASMSU officials was approved Tuesday night by the Student Board.

Students will vote on the proposal as an amendment to the ASMSU constitution May 19. Students will not decide if they want compensation for ASMSU officials, but rather whether they want to control the amount of money student government officials may receive.

The constitutional amendment specifies compensation may never exceed "3 per cent of the previous year's assessment on qualified voting citizens," according to the amendment.

Further, the amendment calls for a committee, made up of representatives of the major student governing groups, to decide who will be compensated, and how much they will get.

The committee could feasibly not provide any compensation at all, or use any portion of the 3 per cent, or about $3,000, for compensation.

The committee would consist of a representative from Men's Halls Assn., Inter-Fraternity Council, Off Campus Council, Panhellenic Council, Women's Inter-residence Hall Council and Inter-Organizational Council. The chairman of the committee will be appointed by the ASMSU Student Board.

"The committee shall, from the funds available to it, compensate officials of the association selected by the committee for services to the association," according to the amendment.

A motion from the agenda committee called for the board to oppose the present compensation proposal, because the board cannot at this time fully justify a favorable stand on compensation. This motion was defeated by the Student Board.

The agenda committee in its motion listed six reasons against the compensation proposal:

First, an examination of the budget revealed not enough funds were available for compensation.

Second was opposition to a committee which has sole discretion for the determination of compensation, because, thirdly, this committee has the "power to arbitrarily adjudicate the worth of each officer in question and the merits on which his compensation will be based."

Fourth, the committee has a structure "over and above the present student government."

Fifth, the compensation committee has indirect control over the activities of ASMSU officials, and sixth, the questions of many persons involving the theory of compensating elected student representatives.

Restriction To Begin On June 1

PARIS (UPI)--France has notified the United States and other NATO nations it is canceling existing rights for their military planes to fly over French and land on French soil, effective June 1, the U.S. Embassy said Wednesday night.

American officials said a French government note handed to the U.S. and other NATO Embassies Tuesday announced that these rights would be placed on a month-to-month basis beginning in June.

In the past the U.S. and other NATO member countries had enjoyed blanket, permanent authorization for their military aircraft to fly over and land on French territory.

The move appeared to be part of French President Charles de Gaulle's program for pulling France out of NATO.

It was disclosed following a new warning by De Gaulle's government it was determined to pull France out of NATO regardless of whether or not the 70,000 French troops now stationed in Germany remain there afterward.

The French note added fuel to the growing controversy over De Gaulle's planned NATO pullout.

In Strasbourg, France, U.S. Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, charged De Gaulle's NATO withdrawal moves were aimed specifically against the United States and warned they may set off a groundswell in the United States for the recall of all American troops from Europe.

"The American people might believe not only France but all Europe considers American troops as intruders rather than allies and collaborators," Hays told parliament members from 18 countries attending the Council of Europe Assembly.

In Bonn, the West German government warned France in a memorandum disclosed Wednesday that French troops would lose their right to remain in Germany from the moment they are withdrawn from NATO command July 1. It said French troops in Germany must accept a specific NATO mission and submit to German sovereign authority as conditions for staying on.

The French notification went to all NATO member countries with permanent authorizations to fly over French territory. These include the U.S., Canada, Britain and NATO countries that are neighbors of France.

Munn Transferred To Ford Hospital

MSU Athletic Director Clarence "Biggie" Munn was transferred from Sparrow Hospital to Detroit's Henry Ford Hospital Wednesday for a thorough check-up.

Munn was admitted to Sparrow Tuesday after suffering what his doctors termed a "stomach disorder" while on a northern fishing trip.

His physicians reported that his condition was "not critical."

807 Pints Collected In Donor Competition

An "encouraging" increase in blood donations Wednesday raised the total contributed to 807 pints, said Tom Pratt, Rochester senior and assistant drive chairman.

The first two days were not encouraging but the 140 pints donated as of 4:30 p.m. Wednesday brings the drive closer to the 3,000-pint goal, he said. The blood needed for open heart surgery was donated and will be bussed to Grand Rapids and Ann Arbor today.

Alpha Sigma Phi leads in fraternity donations with 75 per cent; second is Delta Sigma Phi with 65 per cent.

The leading sorority is Delta Zeta with 37 per cent and second is Kappa Delta with 15 per cent.

Leading among men's halls is East Shaw with 11.1 per cent, second is Bailey with 5.4 per cent.

East Mayo leads among women's halls with 7 per cent and Gilchrist is second with 5 per cent.

Campbell and West Shaw dormitories are competing on a percentage basis for Blood Drive turnout.

The competition grew out of the fact that Campbell and West Shaw had the highest percentage of participation in the winter term blood drive.

Indonesia, Malaysia Near Talks

SINGAPORE (UPI)--Indonesia and Malaysia appeared ready Wednesday to end their three-year-long undeclared war in the jungles of Borneo and across the Strait of Malacca.

Hopeful signs for a peaceful end to Indonesian President Sukarno's hostile policy of confrontation against Malaysia came from the capitals of the two countries and from Manila.

Philippine Foreign Secretary Narciso Ramos, returning to Manila from weekend talks in Bangkok with Indonesian Foreign Minister Adam Malik, predicted the dispute will be "solved by peaceful means and not by force." He added that a settlement could come "in two months, three months or five months--but it is in the books."

In the Malaysian capital of Kuala Lumpur, Deputy Prime Minister Tun Abdul Razak said his country was prepared to talk peace with Indonesia, if the cur-

McNamara Buried In Detroit

By DENICE ANDERSON
State News Staff Writer

DETROIT--The crowd pressed forward, eager to catch a glimpse of the distinguished list of mourners, including President Johnson, attending the funeral of Patrick V. McNamara, 71-year-old Michigan senator who died Saturday.

Police strained to keep the crowds from entering the Holy Name Church where mass was said for the senator.

Only relatives, associates and the press were allowed in the church, and then only after extensive security measures.

There was a brief stir as Gov. George Romney entered, but after a few handshakes, the mourners again became quiet and many returned to their silent prayers.

Shortly after the casket was brought in, President Johnson entered. He had flown to Detroit for the funeral and planned to return to Washington, D.C., in time for a diplomatic reception at the White House Wednesday night.

Mrs. Johnson did not attend the services.

The mass was said by Father Christopher Leahy, pastor of St. Christopher's church in Detroit.

Father Leahy officiated at the burial of the first Mrs. McNamara, and he also celebrated the nuptial mass of the senator and his second wife.

Father Leahy said that the gathering was to console the living and solicit prayers for the dead.

"We are not here to listen to a eulogy," said Father Leahy, "but to recommend Patrick McNamara's soul to the mercy of the Almighty God before his body is placed in its temporary resting place."

"McNamara was a most remarkable man," he said, "with strong character and tireless industry."

"He was a self-made man who worked with his hands and never forgot his humble dignity," he continued.

"McNamara should be a symbol to the youth of today to apply himself and have a sense of obedience," Father Leahy said.

Railroad Crossing Disrepair Tests Motorists' Patience

ANYONE WHO DRIVES a car over the railroad crossing at Harrison Road south of Brady faster than 15 miles an hour runs the risk of shaking a few bolts loose or breaking the car's springs.

The planking between the rails depresses several inches when an auto rides over them. This leads to quite a jar when the car passes over the rails. In fact, the jolt the car receives is as severe as if the car hit a low curb.

IN 1963 THE traffic count on Harrison Road averaged 15,500 cars a day. And today's count is much higher. That means that every day more than 15,500 cars take the chance of loosening mufflers and breaking springs—too much punishment for any car. Motorists who use a highly traveled road, such as Harrison, should not be subjected to this annoyance.

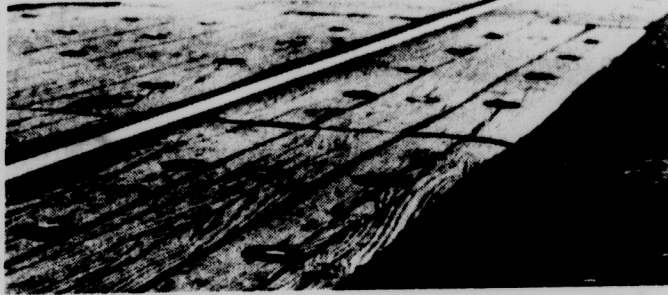

The Grand Trunk Western Railroad, the Chesapeake & Ohio and MSU are all responsible for the maintenance of separate tracks at this crossing. All the tracks of this multiple track crossing need improvement, and MSU's track is one of the worst.

MSU, GRAND TRUNK, AND C&O have the duty of keeping those crossings in repair. MSU in particular is obligated to keep its crossings repaired, for many of the motorists who use Harrison are connected with the University.

But it would do little good if MSU repaired its section and the two railroads did not fix their own crossings. Each of the crossings is in such bad repair that any one is capable of causing damage to a car.

HOW MUCH LONGER must cars be forced to take this unnecessary punishment? Will motorists have to resort to the inconvenience of using another route? Let's see some work crews on that crossing—and soon.

Mississippi (Negro) Rebels

TOO MANY TIMES in recent years, northern citizens have self-righteously pointed an accusing finger at the South for its transgressions against Negroes. It has been said, and correctly so, that the North has problems and situations just as difficult and intolerable as any in the South.

Realistically, discrimination, bias and racial prejudice are national, not local problems. And when a problem exists and needs correcting, whether it be in Maine or Mississippi, any citizen has the right and responsibility to attempt to alleviate it.

TODAY THERE is a problem in Mississippi, specifically in Strike City. Mrs. Janie Close, wife of an MSU student, spent Easter weekend there and described the situation in a three-part series in the State News which ended Wednesday. Mrs. Close has been persistent in her efforts to obtain both financial and physical aid for the Negro families who refused to be bullied or deprived any longer.

The reaction of many in the South to this activity of sympathetic northern whites has been, "why come down here and bother us, you have problems of your own to solve. Things would take care of themselves if it weren't for all the outside agitation."

TRUE, WE IN the North have many problems, but does that justify or eliminate in any way the inexcusable injustices still occurring in the South? Any individual who feels he can aid a fellow American in obtaining basic rights and privileges has every right to make the effort, wherever it may be.

These Mississippians, who refused to be treated as second or third class citizens any longer and who want something more for their children than degradation and $6 a day, are paying the consequences for their courage in a hostile land. They need help, financial, medical and physical. And they need it now.

AS MRS. CLOSE said in her series, "It is recognized that these small projects offer no final solution to the majority of displaced Negroes in the Delta area, but they do represent a significant move forward for the dignity of the Negroes involved, and they demonstrate to Negroes still on the plantation that their long heritage is not an unbreakable pattern."

Will you offer a helping hand?

POINT OF VIEW

'Good People' Active Too

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is written by Mrs. Rita Phipps, wife of an MSU graduate student.

When President Hannah tells alumni that most of the MSU students do not demonstrate and are fine youngsters, he may be doing so to assure influential people that MSU well deserves their support. However, unfortunately, this sort of implied judgment, that demonstrators are not fine youngsters, has far-reaching consequences when it adds one more voice, intentionally or not, to the stream of such implications coming from people as important as President Eisenhower and as homey as editorials in the State News.

The effect of these implications is that it indicates to the non-active opposition and neutrals that fine people do not join opposition groups and do not demonstrate. Thus, many people are deprived, by the power of innuendo, of one of the most powerful means of expressing their point of view.

If every single one of the people holding the minority (or is it a silent majority?) point of view joined active pro-peace or civil rights organizations and themselves participated in making decisions about how best to be effective (marches, letters, speakers, etc.) then some changes that they want might be started.

In our country we enjoy freedom of congregation and speech, and so far, except for a few unusual cases, no one has been punished for expressing his honest opinion. From Congressmen in Washington to faculty members at MSU, from religious leaders to members of even the most radical student groups, all have enjoyed freedom of speech.

Political suppression is not feared; what is feared is red-baiting and character defamation, two subtle yet powerful ways to make the opposition impotent.

The non-active opposition unwittingly supports this smear by believing, "I agree with the demonstrators but not with their strategy." But when the non-active become active, perhaps there will not be many left to believe there is anything wrong with petitions or rallies, for what, indeed, is wrong with such democratic activities?

Joining an active group is one of the most effective ways of expressing one's point of view, and the freedom to do this is guaranteed by our constitution. Some hard-working and safe groups to join are NAACP, SANE, FOR, SDS, ACLU, WILPF and CSR. Find out which group is most compatible with your own interests and join in the democratic struggle for a true consensus.

Bamboo Curtain Results From Mutual Distrust

To the Editor:

Reading your editorial, "U.S. Must Take Initiative to Ally Chinese Distrust," I must say that I find myself laboring under two disturbing impressions. The first is that your editorial appears to be pervaded by your own acquired distrust of the Chinese. Certainly, you seem by your attitude to provide a clear insight into America's success in molding young minds regarding the Communist Chinese.

The second is that your authoritative, "documented" information bears a compelling aura of many years of research on—let alone residence in—China. I have been close to five years now in America and still shun to speak about Americans with the authority you do about the Chinese. Can't the staff persons the Senate Foreign Relations Committee recently opened hearings on China was to let in some fresh air of understanding and appreciation of the Chinese and thus, hopefully, help to arrest some of the wrong assumptions and wild speculations about these people, assumptions that have beclouded American foreign policy for years. You somehow seem to have missed the bandwagon.

You specifically talk of "shoot the American games", of "Chinese children who are taught to hate, hate, hate", and of experts molding young minds. I suggest it is high time you examined your own mind—it strongly smacks of expert molding. Furthermore, have you ever stopped to ask yourself: Could the Chinese possibly be saying similar things about me? There are two sides to any argument, you know.

I am curious. Since the U.S. dropped its Wheat Curtain on China and China naturally responded by clapping to its Bamboo Curtain, how many times have you peeped through the double-closure curtain to observe State Mother Mao coldly weaning children away from their disloyal parents? If American scholars have a hard time getting to China, how did you (editorially?) hear one youth say: "Our parents only gave birth to us, but Chairman Mao saved us."

Is it too much for you to apprise us of the youth's name, his interlocutor, the location and time? Or are you employing a journalistic gimmick popularized by Time Magazine without any regard to the authenticity of your statement?

Lastly, your headline urges that the "U.S. must take initiative to ally Chinese distrust." You sadly furnish the wrong diagnosis. Perhaps I should remind you that American foreign policy is founded on the considered opinion that the Communists are bent on an ineluctable goal of world domination. Thus their wars of liberation, co-existence, peaceful agreements, etc. are just interim conjuring tricks. In sum, Americans DISTRUST Communists.

Your headline, therefore, should have read: "U.S. Must Take Initiative to Ally American Distrust of Chinese." The peace which you and I seek can only be achieved if the mutual distrust of Americans and Chinese is somewhat allayed. The worst of it is, an ideological cold war has become a mutual paranoid war. Under such circumstances, negotiations are well nigh impossible.

Blood Gifts Save Life

To the Editor:

As a taxi driver for the Air Force ROTC blood drive it was my pleasure on Monday morning to pick up a cute, blonde co-ed at Fee Hall. Since the blood drive had officially been open only a few minutes I was curious why a young girl was giving blood so soon, rather than waiting until later in the week, or not going at all.

When I asked her why, she explained that her father had undergone open-heart surgery which required over 30 pints of blood. She felt it was the least she could do, since her father received the blood through the Red Cross.

Because 30 people had given blood, it was possible for this girl's father to have an operation which gave him a new lease on life. However, her father needs to have another heart operation. During the next few months there will be numerous people who will require blood due to surgery and various accidents.

The students who come to Demonstration Hall are doing more than simply filling a pint bottle with blood; they are helping to save the life of a human being. The privilege and honor of helping to save a life is an opportunity open to every student at MSU. Out of 30,000 students I would like to believe that at least 3,000 care enough to take advantage of this opportunity.

ASMSU Pay Put To Vote

SALARIES FOR ASMSU officers is the toughest issue that ASMSU has handled this year. The very label "financial compensation" that ASMSU prefers to dub salaries indicates how tactfully it is acting.

Critics of ASMSU can have a heyday over the issue. They can scream that the members of ASMSU are taking advantage of their positions and are using student tax money to their personal advantage. Others will simply argue that the board members do not deserve compensation.

The issue all started last term when the board hastily voted future board members salaries. Student opposition was so strong that the board quickly repealed the financial compensation amendment. And at the same time, it promised that the question over compensation would be submitted to the students to decide.

And now the issue is coming to a head. At its Tuesday night meeting the board voted to submit the proposed financial compensation amendment to a student referendum scheduled for May 19.

THOSE WHO ARE quick to accuse ASMSU of trying to use their positions for personal gain had better read the proposed amendment more closely. In effect, the proposal takes compensation controls out of the hands of the board and puts it into the hands of the student body.

This is accomplished through two safeguards. First, the decision on who receives compensation and how much they receive is decided by an independent committee chaired by a student who is ineligible to receive a salary.

Second, and most important, the proposal stipulates that all decisions of the committee are subject to a student referendum. That means that if you don't like the amount of money that a member of ASMSU is receiving you can circulate a petition and force a referendum.

As an extra safeguard, the maximum allowed for total compensation is limited to 3 per cent of the student tax.

BUT SOME STUDENTS will argue that although creating safeguards is important, the main issue is whether members of student government are entitled to a salary. Some of the members-at-large put in as much as 30 hours a week on student government.

This is no sob story about how hard the members of ASMSU are forced to work, for they fought for their jobs and knew from the beginning what would be expected of them. But 20 or 30 hours a week is a lot of volunteer time. And they ought to receive something for this work, even if it's an allowance for their book expenses.

Many other schools give student government officers some form of financial compensation. Some pay the class leaders as much as $1,500 a year.

As an extreme example, the president of the student body at Southern Illinois University receives a full scholarship plus $20 a month laundry expenses.

IN A NUTSHELL, the real question facing the students in the referendum is: Does the work ASMSU officers perform merit financial compensation? The question should not be: Will ASMSU take advantage of an amendment permitting financial compensation? The proposed amendment insures that ASMSU can't take advantage.

Monsoon Fails To Halt Bombing

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (UPI)—U.S. B52 bombers Wednesday hit southern exit areas of the Ho Chi Minh trail near the Cambodian border for the seventh time in eight days, pounding suspected enemy troops and supply bases.

With winds of the approaching monsoon season already sweeping North Viet Nam, the objective apparently was to disrupt Viet Cong and North Vietnamese plans for a rainy season offensive.

The rainy season is the best time for Communist operations, because U.S. air power is hampered by the cloud cover from supporting Vietnamese and other allied units under attack.

Romania May Help In POW Release

GENEVA (UPI)—Communist Romania may offer to mediate between the United States and North Viet Nam on the treatment of American prisoners of war in Communist Vietnamese hands, diplomatic sources speculated Wednesday.

The State Dept. said Wednesday it is trying through "all available and appropriate channels" to assist and secure the release of American prisoners held by the Communists in Viet Nam.

U.S. Protests Student Beatings

MADRID (UPI)—A U.S. Embassy official met with Spanish Foreign Ministry officers Wednesday amid speculation the United States had lodged a protest over the beating of seven American students Monday by Spanish police.

The seven U.S. students—one a daughter of former Secretary of State Christian Herter—came out of the faculty of letters and philosophy building during a student demonstration and, before they realized what was happening, became the target of police water cannons and truncheons.

The incident, according to some of the students, apparently was due to "some confusion" among the police, after a police lieutenant was injured by a stone thrown by a demonstrator.

Wallace Victory Disputed

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)—The landslide victory of Mrs. Lurleen Wallace in Alabama's Democratic gubernatorial primary came under fire Wednesday from Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and other integration forces. King called the outcome "a protest vote against the tide of inevitable progress" and said: "It seems obvious that white Alabamians were desperately grasping for a way to return to the old days of white supremacy."

Mrs. Wallace's victory over her nine male opponents was so complete that she will not have to participate in a runoff.

Robert Daru, former U.S. Senate chief counsel on crime and criminal practices, announced that he and a group of southern attorneys would legally challenge the nomination of Mrs. Wallace, who openly ran in the Democratic race as a stand-in for her governor-husband George, prevented by the state constitution from succeeding himself.

Daru, now counsel for the New York Criminal and Civil Courts Bar Association's Committee on Justice and Public Affairs, said the nomination was "a violation of law, being an avowed and admitted conspiracy to evade constitutional provision against succession."

Labeling the Wallace effort, "government by stooge," and hurling such jibes as "meet the stand-in queen, my wife Lurleen," Daru said the legal challenges would be filed in both state and federal courts.

Daru filed charges in Alabama last year to disbar Attorney Matt H. Murphy Jr., chief counsel to the Ku Klux Klan, for his courtroom tirade against Negroes, Jews and Catholics during the Liuzzo murder trial. Murphy was killed in an auto accident before the case could come to trial.

Wallace shrugged off the threat. "My wife has been elected governor of Alabama," he said confidently. "I suppose this man wants to abolish elections."

In Little Rock, Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus said Mrs. Wallace's victory was due to her husband's administrative abilities and his stand on segregation. Mississippi Gov. Paul Johnson was out of the state, but Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin wired the Wallaces congratulations.

Alabama Negro Vote In; Gains Small, But Important

A Taft hit the political comeback trail in Ohio, Democratic gubernatorial contenders faced runoff battles in Florida and Oklahoma, and Alabama Negroes used their new voting power to shatter a century of deep south courthouse tradition.

These were the highlights of Tuesday's primaries in six states, the openers of the 1966 sweepstakes that will culminate in the Nov. 8 elections.

Attention was focused Wednesday on Alabama, where Negroes newly enfranchised by the 1965 Voting Rights Act failed to block

Mrs. Lurleen Wallace's bid for the Democratic nomination for governor to succeed her segregationist husband, George.

Mrs. Wallace beat her nearest competitor, Atty. Gen. Richmond M. Flowers, by more than 200,000 votes, avoiding even the necessity for a runoff. If she wins in November, the result could be a Wallace regime in Alabama extending until 1975.

Even though Wallace is forbidden to succeed himself under the state constitution, he could succeed his wife in 1971 for another four-term year.

But the state's Negroes, voting in record numbers, helped nominate Attorney Fred Gray to be the first Negro candidate for the Alabama House of Representatives since reconstruction. If elected in November, Gray would represent Barbour, Bullock and Macon counties. He defeated two white candidates in the Democratic primary by sizable margins.

In Bullock, Macon and Hale counties, Negroes were swept into a May 31 runoff against white opponents for the office of local sheriff, a past symbol of white supremacy in county courthouse politics.

Noted China Authority Will Speak

An American author and reporter who has been permitted by Communists to enter Red China three times since 1960 will speak here Tuesday.

Edgar Snow will discuss "China Today" as part of the Lecture-Concert series in the Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

Snow's interest in China dates back to 1932, when he filed dispatches on the Japanese expansion over Manchuria and into North China.

In 1936, Snow obtained the first interview by a western journalist with Mao Tse-tung. After spending three months with Mao, Snow wrote the book "Red Star Over China," the first connected history of the Chinese Communist movement.

Snow entered China in 1960, 1964 and in 1965. He is believed to be the only reporter to interview Mao since the People's Republic was founded in 1949.

Lotteries To Benefit Michigan Schools?

A constitutional amendment to permit the state to conduct lotteries and earmark the money for school aid purposes was introduced today by Rep. E.D. O'Brien, D-Detroit.

O'Brien said such a lottery system would collect as high as $100 million a year.

"However, if we could collect $15 or $20 million a year it would be a big help to the state," he said.

The proposed amendment would have to pass by a two-thirds vote of both houses and also would require approval by the people. O'Brien said he thought there would be plenty of time to get in on the ballot this November.

O'Brien submitted similar proposals in 1959, 1961 and last year. This is the first time, however, he proposed the lottery funds be earmarked specifically for the schools.

"With the local school districts depending more and more on state funds it becomes necessary for the state to find new sources of revenue to meet our commitment in education," O'Brien said.

"Since we are already committed, we might just as well get started in collecting the new revenues needed to pay for our commitment."

MONTREAL LEADS, 3-2

Wings Washed Up?

MONTREAL, P. --It will take more than even a 100 per cent healthy Roger Crozier to save the Detroit Red Wings now.

Crozier, a doubtful starter after suffering a knee and ankle injury on his left leg Sunday, went back into the nets Tuesday night.

But even the appearance of the gummy goalie failed to perk up the listless Red Wings who offered little resistance as Montreal charged to a comfortable early lead and coasted to a 3-2 victory and took a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup finals.

Claude Provost scored with the game just 66 seconds old and Yvan Cournoyer added one on the power play--his specialty--in the final minute of the first period. The Red Wings never came close.

Montreal so dominated play in the first two periods that it sent 28 shots on the Detroit net. The Red Wings managed but 13 in the same span.

Crozier said his heavily-taped left leg felt shorter than the right and that he was off-balance for the early part of the game. manager-coach Sid Abel said. "They were just getting too many rebounds."

Irish Top Netters, 7-2; Snap Three-Win String

SOUTH BEND, Ind. -- MSU's tennis team had its three win string snapped Tuesday when it dropped a 7-2 decision to Notre Dame here.

Victories by Vic Dhooge at No. 5 singles and the team of Dhooge and Jim Phillips at No. 2 doubles accounted for MSU's points, winning, 6-3, 6-2.

Rich Monan dropped his fourth match against two victories at No. 1 singles with a 6-4, 6-0 loss to Bill Brown.

Mickey Szilagyi went three sets with Pedro Rosello but lost, 6-2, 6-8, 4-6. The loss evened Szilagyi's record at 3-3 overall.

Senior Laird Warner drew nationally ranked Jasjit Singh at No. 3 singles and lost, 6-2, 6-0. Warner is 4-2 on the year.

Jim Phillips dropped below .500 in singles play with a 6-2, 10-8 loss to Gary Rieser. He is now 2-3 overall.

Dhooge finally broke the Irish spell and upped his record to 4-1 at No. 5 singles with a 3-6, 7-5, 6-0 victory over Vin Chinn.

Captain Mike Youngs dropped his second match of the year at No. 6 singles with a 6-1, 6-2 loss at the hands of Tom Murphy. Youngs is 4-2 in regular season play.

China Rebels Woo Soviets

TOKYO, P. --The army paper of Red China reported Wednesday there is a rebellious group in the Chinese Communist party and the survival of Mao Tse-tung's ideology is at stake. It seemed to hint that influential elements seek a reconciliation with the Soviet Communists.

The editorial in Liberation Army Daily, broadcast from Peking, was the latest of recent statements indicating concern in the Peking Politburo about trends among intellectuals and some sections of the armed forces. The editorial said there were in the party certain "antiparty" people who wear "a veil of Marxism-Leninism and Mao Tse-tung's teachings."

"The activities of these antiparty, anti-Socialist elements are not an accidental phenomenon," it said. "They are responding to the great international anti-Chinese chorus of the imperialists, modern revisionists and various reactionaries to revive the Chinese reactionary class which has been struck down."

This seemed an indirect way of saying that pro-Soviet elements should be rooted out. By "imperialists and modern revisionists," the Chinese Communists mean the Americans and the current Soviet leadership. Peking has been accusing the Kremlin of plotting with the United States against Red China. The presence of pro-Soviet elements in China, possibly in influential places, conceivably might explain why the Soviet leaders have seemed restrained in dealing with cascades of anti-Kremlin vituperation from Peking.

Analysts have suggested that any significant change in leadership or policies in China might clear the way for mending relations with the Soviet party.

Crozier MVP Pick?

DETROIT, P. --The National Hockey League's Board of Governors faces a tough decision when it comes to voting for the most valuable player in this year's Stanley Cup playoffs.

Detroit Red Wings goalie Roger Crozier appeared to be a shoo-in, but was injured last Sunday after playing less than six minutes and the Red Wings are down in the playoffs three games to two.

Although the award does not necessarily have to go to a member of the winning team, players on the championship team probably draw more consideration.

'S' Halfback Lee Stars In Shadow

By LARRY WERNER
State News Sports Writer

Dwight Lee was the sophomore left half back in Michigan State's backfield last fall. Most Spartan grid fans saw him as the half-back opposite Clinton Jones.

Some athletes may resent playing in the shadow of a great player, but the 6-2, 200-pound Lee feels that he is a better player because of it.

"I feel playing in the shadow of Clint helped me in that it made me work that much harder," Lee said. "Everyone can't be a star, and I got satisfaction out of throwing blocks for Clint."

Backfield Coach Dan Boisture sees much of Lee's improvement in the blocking area and predicts that Lee will become a better player with Jones furnishing the incentive.

"Lee helped make Jones a better back because of his blocking for Clint," Boisture said. "Lee used to be an adequate blocker. He is now a good blocker, and Jones being a great back gives Lee incentive to improve himself."

Lee feels that his improvement is a key factor in the success of the '66 Spartan team. Clint Jones and Bob Apisa are All-Americans, but Lee has not yet made the complete emergence from the shadows.

"If we can all run well together, we'll have a great offense," said Lee. "If we are all good backs, one guy might have a bad day, but one of the other two might be having a good day. This way, the other teams can't key any one or two of our backs."

There is no question in the mind of Boisture regarding Lee's improvement. Boisture points to the desire to improve himself as one of the major reasons why the big sophomore is going to be a better back this fall.

"Lee is conscientious," said Boisture. "He is the kind of guy who works on his own time to make himself better. He even joined the track team last winter, which helped improve his running. Dwight is now bigger, stronger and faster."

There was a point in the '65 season when Lee evolved as a top-notch Big Ten back. Lee was a first-year man fighting it out in the nation's toughest football conference. He made the big move from the "rookie ranks" to the spotlight when his talents were called on in the Indiana game.

"Dwight made the transformation from a young sophomore in the Indiana game," Boisture said. "After Apisa got hurt, Lee turned on and furnished us with the power-running we needed."

Despite rolling up considerable yardage against the Hoosiers, Lee believes that his best game was the week before, at Iowa.

"I gained the most yardage against Indiana," Lee said. "But when Clint ran four touchdowns against Iowa, he ran to my side, and I had to block for him. I got much satisfaction from helping Clint score."

Like all athletes, Lee has personal goals, and like all dedicated athletes, he has goals concerning the team. "I hope to make All-American before I leave here, and I want to do my best to help the team get the national championship next year," Lee said.

As far as Boisture is concerned, Lee will bolt from the shadows this season. "It is my opinion that Lee will be 25 per cent better," Boisture said. "He'll be great because he points his nose to the goal line and runs."

IT SAVES DAY

Call It: 'Team Error'

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (P) --The official baseball scorer at Penn State has come up with a new statistic--the team error.

In a recent game with Susquehanna University, the Susquehanna first baseman hit a high pop fly in the general direction of the shortstop.

Penn State shortstop Paul Koors called for the ball. So did third baseman Barry Miller. Both backed off, and the ball fell between them.

Faced with the alternative of calling it a hit, thus helping the batter's average and hurting only the pitcher's statistics or calling it an error on the shortstop or third baseman, hurting the fielder's and the batter's average, the scorer made his decision.

When the final college statistics are published later this year, at least one team will have a new category--team error.

Collision Hurts Indians

NEW YORK, P. --Cleveland shortstop Larry Brown, bleeding from his eye and mouth, was rushed to a hospital Wednesday night along with teammate Leon Wagner after the two collided chasing a pop fly in the fourth inning of the Indians' game against the New York Yankees, which Cleveland won, 2-1. Brown was carried off the field on a stretcher after lying prone on the ground for several minutes following his collision with Wagner. He suffered a possible fractured nose and a probable broken right jawbone or cheek bone.

Both players suffered concussions, Brown's more serious than Wagner's.

War Called Excuse To Undermine Liberty

The war in Viet Nam is being used as an excuse to take civil liberties away from United States citizens, Mrs. Donna Allen said here Tuesday.

Mrs. Allen, national legislative chairman of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, spoke at the Edgewood United Church Tuesday night.

In America the basis of democracy is civil liberties of the citizens, she continued. Congress had this in mind when the first constitutional amendment was added. Freedom of speech, freedom of the press and the right to assemble are essential, she said.

The House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) is the chief cause of this "crisis in democracy," and it is carrying matters too far, she said. She said HUAC asserts that peaceful co-existence is out of the question because the Communists "are still dedicated to world dominance."

HUAC stands against any form of peace activities including trading with Communist countries, said Mrs. Allen, and it can only see an increased war effort as a solution.

The Boys' Clubs of America were listed by HUAC as a Communist front group. Groups for peace have been called unpatriotic by HUAC, Mrs. Allen said she questions whether this sounds like a democracy.

Mrs. Allen wants HUAC ended and civil liberties restored. She quoted Thomas Jefferson, "The fate of any democratic government hangs upon the perilous hope that every citizen can and will do his own thinking."

Mrs. Allen insisted that civil liberties should be preserved so democracy can come to a decision that will be the wisest possible one the people can make.

Seek Curfew Lengthening On May 12

Special permission to extend women's hours May 12 is being considered today at a closed meeting of the Faculty-Student Committee on Social Affairs.

The request is being made to permit women to attend discussion meetings following the Conference on the Widening War in Asia, sponsored by the Faculty Committee on Problems of War and Peace and the Students for a Democratic Society.

Frank Pinner, professor of political science, who will appear before the committee, said no definite time was set for the extension. He speculated that it would be about 12:30 a.m.

When a similar request was made last year for the "teach-in" on the war in Viet Nam, Provost Howard R. Neville gave immediate consent.

This year, however, Neville referred the request to the Dean of Students Office, although "he apparently did not see any objection to it," Pinner said.

He said he expected the decision to be announced following the meeting.

Viet Nam Project

ferences would be relatively rare, I would imagine."

It is difficult to assess the MSU project objectively, said Scigliano, who with Guy Fox wrote the first non-official analysis of the project, a book entitled "Technical Assistance in Viet Nam."

"We weren't there very long," he pointed out. "And other matters, such as the rise in subversion in the late 1950's, interfered with the normal development of the country."

He listed three positive aspects of the program.

1. "Over-all quality of the personnel assigned to the project was very high. I know of nobody who was dumped on the project involuntarily."

Scigliano listed former project members who are now holding responsible U.S. aid positions, or who went on to become professors at institutions such as Harvard and Yale universities.

2. "There was a surprising amount of published scholarly material produced by project participants, both those from MSU and those brought into the project from outside."

3. "Both halves of the project achieved certain limited successes. On the police administration side, training and operating procedures were established which will allow the police forces to improve themselves as they go along," Scigliano maintained.

"The other portion of the program, public administration, managed to set up as fine a budget system as that in any small country in all Asia, perhaps."

The National Institutes of Administration did get a library which is as good as any civil service library in Southeast Asia.

"Also a few bright young men did get sent to the U.S. for training which they are using today with great success. However, because of the distractions of other projects, this program received less attention than it should have."

Other points mentioned in the speech included the Geneva Agreements of 1954 ("No, I don't think we violated them,") charges that MSU procured weapons ("technically no, realistically speaking, yes"), should a University get involved in countries like Viet Nam ("To say that a University should avoid all difficult situations would be to avoid the question of moral responsibility,") and degree of faculty involvement in policy decisions ("I will admit that there was within the Political Science Dept. at the time a certain feeling that the project was pushed upon the department. All active participants volunteered without pressure, though, as far as I know.")

Asked why the University's estimate of $7.2 million dollars differed so greatly from the $25 million which he and Fox estimated the project cost, Scigliano said:

"President Hannah and I agree on the basic $5 million given in U.S. dollars to the University from the U.S. government. I came up with another $5 million, rather than $2.2 million, because Hannah and I converted counterpart funds by different methods."

"The other $15 million which I listed was actually funded through the U.S. economic aid mission in Saigon. But we developed equipment orders and helped place them, so I thought that we had responsibility for these funds, so they should be listed."

Churchmen Continue Talks

DALLAS (UPI)--After a sharp backstage row, the leaders of eight Protestant denominations agreed Wednesday on a compromise plan for moving ahead with their merger talks.

The compromise averted, at least for the present, danger of a deadlock between denominations wishing to proceed rapidly with the merger and the Methodist church, whose representatives favor a slower pace. With 10.3 million members the Methodist Church is by far the largest denomination involved in the talks.

The other participating denominations are the Episcopal Church, (3.4 million members), the United Presbyterian Church (3.3 million), the United Church of Christ (2 million), the Disciples of Christ (1.9 million), African Methodist Episcopal (1.1 million), The Southern Presbyterian Church (1 million) and the Evangelical United Brethren (750,000 members).

Official delegations from each of the eight denominations are meeting here this week in what is formally known as the Consultation on Church Union. This is the fifth full-dress meeting the consultation has held since it was established in 1962.

Previous meetings led to a wide area of agreement on doctrine, sacrament worship, practices and ministerial orders.

The big issue at the present meeting is whether, when and how to proceed from discussion of general principles to the actual negotiation of a merger.

Methodist delegates complained at a closed-door meeting Wednesday that they were being "pushed" too fast toward a commitment. They called for another year or two of exploratory talks before attempting to draft a plan of union.

Leaders of other delegations responded impatiently to the Methodist go-slow demand. There were pointed remarks to the effect that the other denominations could proceed without the Methodists if necessary.

At this juncture, peace makers moved in on the situation and arranged a compromise which will be presented to the consultation at a public session today.

It calls for the consultation to approve a document listing all of the areas of agreement in principle which have been staked out. This document will be sent to the eight denominations for widespread discussion at the local church level during the coming year.

The consultation will also adopt an open letter to churches of all the participating denominations urging them to become responsibly involved in the unity discussions and contribute their own ideas and suggestions.

Omitted from the list of agreed principles will be the whole question of how the proposed new church is to be organized and administered. This is an area of particular controversy.

Non-Union Painting At Stadium Picketed

Painters Local No. 845 picketed employees of a non-union company working on Spartan Stadium Wednesday afternoon.

The University let the contract for sandblasting and repainting the underside of the stadium to a non-union contractor, said Door Lorraine, Local 845 business agent.

The local union charged the Dalman Construction Co. of Holland on three counts. "The company," said Lorraine, "was not paying standard wages, was not providing safe working conditions and violated state safety laws."

According to Lorraine, the Dalman Co. withdrew from its contract with the University late Monday afternoon. However, University officials could not be reached to comment upon this statement.

Ballet Film Show Tonight, Friday

May Plisetskaya, a world-renowned prima ballerina with the Bolshoi Theatre Ballet Company, stars in the Russian film "Plisetskaya Dances," to be shown at 7 and 9 tonight and Friday in Fairchild Theater.

The film, directed by Vassili Katanyan, has English commentary.

A short subject, "The Violin and the Roller," will also be shown at the International Film Series presentation.

At the same time no immediate end is in sight for the strike by carpenters and bricklayers that has slowed work on MSU construction projects.

Bricklayers' and carpenters' negotiations are definitely at a standstill according to local company and union officials.

Indian Art A Kaleidoscope Of International Influences

By BEVERLY L. HALL
State News Staff Writer

The basic problems and characteristics seen in contemporary Indian art are not unique to that country, according to a prominent Indian art expert.

"It is the common concern with global conflict and the condition of man which makes contemporary artists of all nations akin," P. R. Ramachand Rao said Tuesday in a lecture at Kresge Art Gallery.

Rao showed slides to illustrate his lecture.

He traced the development of Indian art from the days of the Achaemenid empire, but stressed that the contemporary art is not a direct descendant of traditional Indian art.

Rao said that influences on contemporary painting and sculpture have come primarily from French, Persian, Japanese, Sudanese and Mexican art.

Also influencing Indian art, Rao said, was the British conquest of India, for it spurred the development of art by degrading it. This degradation, he pointed out, came not from contempt of India's art but from not understanding it.

P. R. RAMACHANDRO RAO

The works of the first of the contemporary artists in 1928 were greeted by other artists as "amiable idiosyncrasies." But by 1930, Rao said, the reception was quite different. The value of the new art was recognized.

There are many characteristics of Indian art, Rao said. Certain artists, such as Tagore, express an overflow of emotions in their use of color and line.

Rao pointed out that on the other hand the paintings of Yemef Hussain are functional, showing tension held closely in check.

Many contemporary Indian artists do not function in India, he said. They work instead from London, Paris, even Brooklyn, New York and Detroit. Still, he continued, Delhi and Bombay are the most outstanding centers of Indian art.

One of the main problems in Indian art, Rao pointed out, is that artists are still undecided as to where they should look for their subjects—should they use historical subjects or contemporary ones?

Accountants Get Grants

Receiving doctoral fellowships were George E. Pinches and Paul Pacter, both of Lansing and Frederick Davis, Eugene Sauls, Donald Stevens and I. W. Wagner, all of East Lansing; William Kinney, Stillwater, Okla.; and Glen Sanderson, Memphis, Tenn.

SUPPORTING CAST FAILS

Leads Prevent Mediocrity

By BRYAN F. CARPENTER
State News Reviewer

Judith is a girl. Judith is a saint. Judith is a murderess. Judith is a woman. Existentialist Jean Giraudoux's "Judith" opened Tuesday night in the Arena Theater as all these things and more in a stark philosophical tragedy.

The Performing Arts Company arena production was well adapted to the "round" stage by Director Vance Paul. Lighting and sound work, as usual with the PAC, was polished and effective, but the costuming, while beautifully done, appeared overly colorful for the play's mood.

Giraudoux's message, however, depends not on his setting but on the expression of his characters. Each character must "live" his role to bring the full meaning to Judith's tragedy. The supporting cast failed to do this. Many characters moved and spoke in monotone and static expression.

Earlene Bates as Judith, Eberle Thomas as the conqueror, Holofernes, and Chilton Cunningham as Susanna kept the show above mediocrity with the only consistent, believable, involved characterizations of the evening.

Miss Bates became Judith as she hated, feared and loved with every word and thought. Petulant, silent, proud, furious, cowering and courageous, she held the audience awaiting the change of her mind, the swish of her hair, the shift of her fate.

The interplay between Judith and Holofernes picked up the pieces of a near-boring first act and began to build or rebuild the conflict. Thomas' smooth accomplished delivery and characterization once again attest to his popularity and versatility. Miss Cunningham's feeling for the noble prostitute's character added emotional depth to Judith's tragedy.

A message or moral is not spelled out for the viewer. Giraudoux has superimposed saintliness on sacrilege, purity on self-indulgence and allowed Judith's fate to judge her. With a starkly simple framework and outstanding characterization, "Judith" emerges from mediocrity to a moving and profound climax.

Woods' appearance is the second in a series of five programs sponsored by Zeitgeist's, W.D. Snodgrass, poet, read his works at St. John's Catholic Church in February.

The purpose of this and future programs is to give MSU the chance to hear and meet representatives of new trends in American literature and art, said Pat Vinge, business manager of Zeitgeist.

Woods has served as poetry consultant for the Indiana University Press and is also poetry editor for the Aural Press.

The reading and discussion will be open to the public. Tickets are $1 and will be sold at the door.

John Hollander, professor of English at Yale, will deliver his reading May 12.

his 12th year in the Senate, had been a strong supporter of federal aid to education, although he himself had never completed high school.

He also was a leader in the fight to obtain passage of hospital insurance for the elderly through social security.

The senator was active in labor, but he never was paid for serving as senatorial high offices. He served as the unsalaried president of Pipefitters Local 636 (AFL) for 20 years.

He was also vice president of the Detroit and Wayne County Federation of Labor.

McNamara entered the 1954 Democratic senatorial primary unknown except in Detroit, and defeated Republican Senator Homer Ferguson in a stunning upset.

SINGING POLITICIANS--The Democratic Straw Hat Singers will make their 1966 debut at 8:15 p.m. Friday in the Variety Show sponsored by the Ingham County Democratic Women's Organization to be held in the Union Ballroom.

Dems Plan Variety Show

Zolton Ferency's Democratic Straw Hat Singers step out of the political limelight and into the musical comedy spotlight at 8:15 p.m. Friday in the Union Ballroom.

Joining Ferency will be state Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley, and state Representatives H. James Starr and Robert Dingwell of Lansing.

The variety show, sponsored by the Ingham County Democratic Women's Organization, will include the Democratic Rockettes, Earl Nelson and Roosevelt Ruffin, the Capitol Hill Chorus and Tom Clark and Delores Adsit.

The Honeyman Trio and the Thunderball Dancers are also on tap for the evening's merry-making.

Coordinator for the show is Mrs. Frank Rutledge, wife of MSU speech and drama instructor. Maurice Crane, professor of humanities, is master of ceremonies.

Tickets for the show are $1.25 for adults and 75 cents for children. They can be purchased either at the door or from a member of the Ingham County Democratic Women's Organization.

SOAP FOR SOLDIERS--ROTC men on campus are packing soap to send to U.S. troops in Viet Nam. The shipment is being made in response to a recent telegram from the commanding general of the Marine Corps there, saying soap is badly needed for refugees.

Scigliano On MSU And CIA

Reports from Jakarta quoted Malik as saying Indonesia was ready to call off the confrontation policy in the interest of the Indonesian economy and that he expected peace talks to be held soon.

The dispute flared when Sukarno refused to recognize the Federation of Malaysia, formed in 1963 by Malaya, the Borneo States of Sarawak and Sabah and Singapore. Singapore withdrew from the federation last August.

Sukarno denounced Malaysia as a "British neo-colonialist plot" and vowed to "crush" the federation. Bands of armed Indonesian infiltrators were sent by boat and plane into Malaya but were killed or captured by Malaysian security forces.

There also were numerous clashes along the Indonesian-Malaysian borders on the island of Borneo.

He also pulled Indonesia out of the United Nations in protest against Malaysia's seat on the Security Council.

The abortive Communist-led coup against Sukarno last October, however, touched off a chain of events which observers predicted would result in sweeping changes in Indonesia's foreign policies.

Sukarno handed over broad powers to Lt. Gen. Suharto, in the face of mounting public and military criticisms, and was reduced to little more than a figurehead.

The first clear cut change in Jakarta's foreign policy came when Malik announced Indonesia's decision to recognize Singapore.

Union Board's Autonomy Restored In Cabinet Shuffle

ASMSU Student Board changed the status of the Union Board in the ASMSU cabinet structure at the board meeting Tuesday night.

Last term Student Board moved, upon the recommendation of the Union Board Evaluation Committee, to dissolve and disband Union Board and create a cabinet vice presidency for Union affairs.

Tuesday, the board semi-reversed itself, by returning Union Board to its former autonomy, but retained Union Board's affiliation to the ASMSU cabinet.

Under the previous motion, all Union Board functions were transferred to the ASMSU cabinet. The vice president for union affairs would be appointed by the cabinet president, and the Union Board of Directors would be appointed by the vice president for Union affairs.

All this was eliminated under Tuesday's motion, and Union Board will retain its current autonomy with the president of the Union Board of Directors also serving in the ASMSU cabinet as the vice president for Union affairs.

In essence, the motion places Union Board in an analogous position to the executive council of the senior class. Union Board is restricted in that all its activities must be approved by the ASMSU Student Board.

Student Board made the motion after listening to five members of the Union Board of Directors plead for the autonomy of Union Board.

The five were: Bruce Reaves, Vienna, Va., freshman; Janice Lynch, Dearborn sophomore; Kathy Hastedt, Dearborn sophomore; Earnie Cadotte, Southfield sophomore; and Marcie Ellis, St. Ignace junior.

Reaves read the board statement of the purpose of Union Board, quoting selected passages from University documents, and discussed the need for communication between ASMSU and Union Board, but stressed that incorporation into the ASMSU cabinet structure was not the solution.

Cadotte said that the kind of activity Union Board sponsors belongs to Union Board, and Union Board alone.

Reaves said, "Union Board in the past was not what it is supposed to be, but the board is now in a transition period. We want to prove ourselves by showing we can meet the students' needs."

Richard Hollander, former ASMSU vice president for finance and operations, told the Student Board that there had been duplication and confusion when ASMSU and Union Board tried to jointly sponsor closed circuit television broadcasts of Spartan away games last term.

Hollander also said Union Board had been reluctant to cooperate with ASMSU in evaluating Union Board's European tour.

"We want to keep our identity, we don't want our programs to be taken over by anyone else," Hastedt said.

NATO Inadequate, Says French Speaker

France sees a necessity to update and modify the Atlantic alliance in order to maintain the balance of powers and peace.

This statement on French foreign policy was made by Hubert Debois, deuxième conseiller à l'ambassade de France, as part of a weekly lecture series in the humanities and social sciences sponsored by Justin Morrill College.

The alliance between Western Europe and the United States has not given sufficient emphasis to the use and control of atomic weapons, he contended.

Debois stressed two major French objections to the alliance. In eight years France has not been able to engage in any productive talks with her allies. Secondly, the international command is not sufficiently prepared to deal with atomic warfare.

France has a vocation given to her by history—a vocation to lead, Debois said. She is now trying to develop an active policy in all parts of the world. The effectiveness of conferences is the basis for peace.

France has now achieved government stability and looks forward to the future with confidence, Debois said. The strength of France's influence can be seen in her power in the common market. She is also attempting to awaken an interest in Latin America. President de Gaulle's visit to Latin America was aimed at strengthening relations.

Debois added that although France does not condone Peking policies, she recognized the Peking government because it represents an effective control of almost 700 million people.

Pay Amendment Gets WIC Approval

The members of Women's Inter-Residence Council approved by an unofficial vote Tuesday night a proposed amendment to the ASMSU Constitution concerning Student Board compensation.

The proposal was approved for referendum to the student body at a Student Board meeting later Tuesday night.

The amendment, if passed, would check formulation of compensation through a committee of representatives of the major governing groups.

According to the amendment, the committee would decide if there were to be compensation and what that compensation would be, not exceeding 3 per cent of the previous year's student taxes.

A disadvantage to the proposal, as brought out by Detroit junior Linda Garcia of Van Hoesen is that there will be no referendum to the student body concerning a direct vote on whether or not it wants compensation.

Old officers and members of WIC were presented awards at the end of the meeting. New hall presidents will compose the major membership of WIC for the rest of the year.

Pranksters Install Artillery At Holmes

A bright blue cannon presently adds color to the Campus Police quonsets.

A Campus Police patrol car discovered the 75mm artillery piece in front of Holmes Hall early Tuesday morning, police said. Pranksters had apparently moved it there during the night.

The police called a wrecker, which had difficulty hauling the welded wheeled gun across campus.

Upon arrival at police quonsets, one of the officers recalled having seen a similar cannon in Olivet, a small town about 30 miles southwest of East Lansing.

Sure enough, the city had been missing the gun since early Sunday morning.

"It's part of a veteran's display in Olivet Memorial Park," said an Olivet police officer.

Officers think it may have been taken by MSU students, as a prank.

The officer said that a pickup truck would pick up the cannon tomorrow and return it to Olivet.

Why is the cannon painted bright blue?

Sheriff Clark Cries Foul

SELMA, ALA. (UPI)—An election dispute flared Wednesday over the closely fought sheriff's race between Wilson Baker and incumbent Jim Clark, the man who became the symbol of resistance to the historic Selma-to-Montgomery civil rights march.

Baker, former Selma safety director, grabbed a slight lead over Clark, and Clark filed a protest, claiming he had found several voting boxes unattended.

The local Democratic Executive Committee was to meet later Wednesday night to decide what to do about the dispute.

Meanwhile, tabulation of the race was halted. At last count, and on the basis of 74 of 80 boxes, Baker had 7,537 votes to 7,445 for Clark.

The two men once cooperated with each other on law enforcement in Selma. But they differed sharply over who was to blame for Selma's racial woes, and Baker quit his post to run against Clark.

Another man who worked with

Clark during the hectic days of Selma, and who was unpopular with Negroes—former Highway Patrol Director Al Lingo—lost a bid to win the nomination for Sheriff in Montgomery County (Birmingham).

Ironically, Lingo made an appeal for Negro votes, but lost out to a man who refused to do so -- incumbent Sheriff Mel Bailey.

Lingo, Clark and Baker were central figures in last year's Selma violence, when scores of Negroes were clubbed and gassed when they first attempted to cross Edmund Pettus Bridge on the march to Montgomery.

Lingo's troops fired tear gas into the ranks of the marchers and Clark's mounted posse chased the fleeing demonstrators back to the city. Baker's officers also were involved, but acted with more restraint.

The march later was conducted under the guard of federalized troops.

Because of the new federal voting rights act, thousands of additional Negroes were able to vote in Tuesday's primary, but one of their most notable victories was watered-down by a late vote count.

Engineering Displays Here

Some of the latest products of engineering know-how by high school and college students will go on public display this weekend at MSU.

The occasion is MSU's annual Engineering Exposition and the Junior Engineering Technical Society (JETS) Midwestern Regional Exposition Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the Engineering Building.

The JETS exhibit, featuring the work of high school students from 13 states, will include a homemade computer and a sonar guidance system designed for blind persons.

Included in the exposition of MSU engineering student projects will be an evaluative and instructional system designed for use in classroom programmed instruction.

The JETS display will be open noon-9 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday. The engineering college exhibits will be on display noon-9 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m.-9 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

There will also be a physics open house, including the Cyclotron Laboratory, 1 to 5 Friday. Awards will go to the best JETS displays and to the high school students presenting the best technical papers. The latter will be judged in cooperation with the Michigan Junior Academy of Science, Arts and Letters, also meeting here this weekend.

Also scheduled during the exposition is a meeting of the JETS national board of directors, state coordinators of the organization and teachers of students participating in the exposition. They will discuss various aspects of engineering education.

The MSU engineering department exhibiting the best series of displays will receive the Dean's Trophy, to be presented Saturday night at the Engineering Hall.

Industrial firms who will exhibit this weekend include Armco Steel Corp., Dow Chemical Badger Northland Co. and Harry Diamond Laboratories.
