

O Michigan, my Michigan!

Students traded sunsuits and skateboards for snowsuits and sleds Thursday as the surprising heat wave abruptly ended with a snow storm that swept a 50 to 100 mile wide band of the Midwest.

Plans for weekend sunbathing and picnics quickly vanished as late-risers awoke Thursday to see not sun, but snow starting at 10 a.m. that reached a depth of more than two inches by noon.

The drifting snow, gusty winds, and dropping temperatures gave students good reason to cut classes, but the administration said classes would most likely be held today.

"Never at MSU have classes been called off because of weather," said James H. Denison, assistant to the president.

Thursday's Evening College classes were cancelled and for the first time in MSU history, university employees were permitted to return home if they requested because of the bad road conditions, according to a 3:30 p.m. decision of Secretary Jack Breslin.

Snow accumulation of six to eight inches last night and flurries this morning should diminish by this afternoon with partly cloudy skies and temperatures hovering around 18-27 degrees, according to the U.S. Weather Bureau.

The weekend will remain partly cloudy and cold, but with no snow.

For students leaving campus this weekend, road conditions are still hazardous with slippery pavements, Thursday's blinding snow reduced visibility to 75 yards and all snow plows and every available State Police squad car were in use.

AWS 'no hours' proposal on the way—officially

By DOROTHY LASKEY
State News Staff Writer

The judicial council of the Associated Women Students (AWS) Thursday proposed a "no hours" policy for junior and senior women and all coeds over 21 living in University housing.

An extension of present closing hours from 11:30 p.m. to midnight Monday-Thursday for freshmen and sophomore women was also proposed.

The proposal will be voted on Feb. 9 at the next meeting of the AWS General Assembly, composed of representatives from all women's living units on and off campus. If approved the proposal will be sent to the Dean of Students Office.

Alternatives for the Dean of Students Office are either approval, modification, or rejection, or it may refer the plan to ASMSU and the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs for their recommendations. The final decision on any policy change affecting women's hours will be made by John A. Fuzak, vice president of student affairs.

The presentation culminated a year long study by the seven-woman judiciary council and came in the wake of an ASMSU Student Board recommendation divesting AWS of its judicial power and questioning representatives said the board's actions will not affect the merits of the revision proposal.

Coads affected by the proposed hours change would be permitted to come and go from their living units at any time.

Juniors are designated as students who have earned 85 credits as compiled on the last official day of registration of the term in question. Coeds who reach 21 during the September to June academic year will be eligible for the "no hours" plan beginning fall term of that year according to the proposal.

Reasoning behind the proposal, explained by committee chairman Carolyn Stapleton, San Antonio, Tex., sophomore, equalizes privileges of MSU women who live on and off campus, helps develop maturity among the coeds, and facilitates participation in social and cultural events available on campus.

Miss Stapleton said University regulations have forced women student leaders to seek unsupervised apartments because of the inflexibility and restrictions placed on their activities in living units.

A report of hours control on other Big

Ten campuses shows that the University of Michigan, Indiana University, Ohio State, University of Wisconsin, University of Iowa, and Purdue all have clauses granting "unrestricted privilege" to upperclasswomen and 21-year-old coeds

IFC has 'no comment' following first hearing

By BOBBY SODEN
State News Staff Writer

Interfraternity Council (IFC) held its first hearing Thursday in the case of a fraternity pledge severely burned during pre-initiation games.

IFC Vice President Jeffrey Marcus, Oceanside, N.Y., senior, said following the meeting that fraternity officials would make "no comment whatsoever" on the incident until the investigation is completed.

Marcus indicated that the hearings would continue Friday, and that a rationale would be presented "soon."

The incident may provoke a thorough investigation of fraternity "hell week" practices, said a source in the Dean of Students Office.

Joseph A. Bonus, Detroit junior, received serious acid burns two weeks ago while participating in a pre-initiation game at Sigma Alpha Epsilon (SAE) fraternity. Bonus withdrew from MSU Wednesday for the remainder of the term.

Bonus's father, P. Paul Bonus, told the State News Wednesday evening he would take legal action on the incident. An attorney is presently studying the matter.

Irwin Burdick, the attorney handling the case, said Wednesday that he has not yet determined against whom the suit will be filed and what the specific charges will be. Burdick represents the Burdick, Burdick, Silverstein and Burdick law firm of Detroit.

Charges may be filed against either the University, the local or national SAE organization, or the individual who placed the towel on Bonus's neck. The individual has not yet been identified.

The accident occurred during a pledge relay race, when a fraternity member placed a towel drenched in a chemical varnish stripper on Bonus's neck "to prevent him from seeing from side to side," said SAE president Craig D. Cowell, Royal Oak junior. The pledges were apparently crawling through ketchup and mustard on the floor and were not supposed to look at each other.

Cowell claims that the towel had been used a few days earlier on a work project of revarnishing the foyer and that the stripper on the cloth had been reactivated by water on the floor.

Bonus said he was treated at Sparrow Hospital at Cowell's suggestion to avoid having the University learn of the incident.

Eyes of Texas are on Lucy; women see her in 'tent dress'

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson's younger daughter walked into the Texas House of Representatives chamber Thursday wearing what several women described as definitely a maternity dress, but she declined to say if she was pregnant.

The State News, in a copyrighted story Jan. 18, reported that Luci Johnson Nugent was expecting a child.

The Nugents attended a session of the legislature called to hear an address by U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Luci's dress was unbelted and hung at a slight angle from her shoulders.

The dress had a pattern of small black and light green triangles.

Five women who stood close to Luci as she walked out after the speech all said it was a maternity dress. One said it was a "tent dress." Asked if it was also a maternity dress, all five said yes. "I ought to know," one of them said. "I've got five kids."

Nugent was asked separately when the big day would be.

"What big day?" he asked.

"Well, aren't you expecting?"

"That's what you say."

Then Luci turned and said, "We're not in the announcing business."

Rusk walked up to Luci after he stepped off the podium and planted a big kiss on her cheek.

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said Thursday night the Soviet antimissile deployment has compelled billion-dollar improvements in U.S. missile forces. He warned a further push in the arms race by the Soviets would be "dangerous and expensive."

McNamara spelled out for Congress his case against building an antimissile defense at this time, but indicated one might be desirable later for protection of U.S. land-based missiles.

McNamara's remarks came in a 210-page censored version of his voluminous report, presented before the Senate Armed Services Committee and Defense Appropriations sub-committee.

The document, possibly one of the most significant government papers in years, was cleared by the State Department with full knowledge it will be carefully studied by the Soviet Union.

McNamara's annual military posture report, just made public, laid out heretofore secret figures on American missile strength, and emphasized that the United States will rely on offensive weapons, not defensive, to prevent nuclear war.

"It is our ability to destroy an attacker as a viable 20th century nation that provides the deterrent, not our ability to partly limit damage to ourselves," he said.

McNamara said two significant changes have occurred in the Soviet Union the past year—construction of the antimissile missiles and a step-up in building hardened missile silos which could withstand attack.

But he disclosed officially for the first time that the Soviets are deploying a second type of defensive system against bombers. He said "the weight of the evidence at this time suggests this system is not intended primarily for antiballistic missile defense."

As a hedge against a possible Soviet refusal to halt anti-missile work, the administration has included $375 million in the fiscal 1968 budget for production of Nike X antimissiles and radar components. In addition, $421 million has been earmarked to continue advanced development of the system.

Counting funds left over from last year, the United States could spend nearly a billion dollars on an antimissile system in fiscal 1968—and the matter is certain to get heated congressional study.

ASMSU CONTINUES TALKS

Shoe repair rate study rejected after long debate

By ELLEN ZURKEY
State News Staff Writer

A motion to reveal price discrepancies found in East Lansing shoe repair shops was rejected by the ASMSU Student Board after much debate.

The motion, introduced by Jim Sink, ASMSU member-at-large and member of the price study committee, recommended that students take price differences into account when shoe repair is needed.

Nothing about the quality of the work nor the material was mentioned in the motion.

Jim Graham, chairman of ASMSU, also recommended that a $75 allotment be transferred from the VISA advertising fund to pay for a price study advertisement listing rates at different shops.

"I did not feel it was fair to advertise against just one store when the evidence was not even conclusive," Art Tung, member-at-large said.

"We knew nothing about the profit margins of the stores involved, or the quality of the leather," he pointed out.

Roger E. Jonas, executive secretary of the East Lansing Chamber of Commerce, said if ASMSU was interested in long run achievements it would be better to wait until more information was gathered so a comprehensive booklet could be prepared.

"There's no sense in raising merchant hostility," Jonas said. "It's bad enough now."

The philosophy of the price study committee has always been, and still is, to aim at specific areas Sink said.

"If the motion had been passed it would have shown the merchants that we're serious," Sink added.

At Jonas's suggestion four ASMSU board members will meet with the East Lansing Chamber of Commerce within the next two weeks. At that time the shoe repair price discrepancy will be discussed.

Chase Manhattan cuts prime rate on loan interest

NEW YORK (AP) — Chase Manhattan, the nation's second-largest bank, said Thursday it is slicing its prime interest rate to five-and-one-half from six percent. The cut, effective Friday, could trigger lower interest costs across the country.

The prime rate is that charged borrowers of the highest credit standing, usually large corporations. Other interest rates are scaled up from it.

Chase Chairman George Champion and President David Rockefeller noted that last September they had said their bank would be alert to cutting lending rates. "We believe that the time for adjustment has now arrived," they said Thursday.

They added that an increase in the availability of money in recent weeks has caused a broad decline in the rate structure.

"In view of present money market conditions, we believe that a reduction in our basic lending charge is appropriate," they said.

Degree candidate filing ends today

All degree candidates expecting to graduate at the end of this term must have completed a diploma application card by the end of today, in 106 Administration.

Students should have completed this card by Jan. 25, but Horace King, Registrar, extended the deadline until today because of student request.

The cards, required of all degree candidates, indicate exactly how a student wants his name to appear on his diploma and the commencement program.

Library hours action is now up to students

Library Director Richard E. Chapin commented Tuesday that he would like to hear student opinions on a possible extension of library hours.

The next move, then, is up to the Student Library Committee. The committee represents the student body on library matters.

The committee clearly has a chance to perform a real service to students by opting for a midnight closing hour Sunday through Thursday. The library now closes at 11 p.m.

A member of the committee, Norma Foster, East Lansing junior, commented recently that the committee has not given much attention to the question of extended hours. Rather, the question of raising overdue book fines has occupied the committee's time. It is time then, for the committee to take the question up.

Specifically, a one-term trial for the midnight closing hour should be recommended. In the past the one hour extension has been tried for only a week--and then only during finals week. It received little publicity and, indeed, because the period was so short, was not sufficient to test whether students would change their study habits to take advantage of the longer hours.

Neither problem is inherent in the term-long trial. The period is long enough for students to be informed. It is long enough for students to change their habits and plan a study program to take advantage of the additional time. If, after a term, it was found that use of the library from 11 p.m. to midnight was not sufficient then the plan could be abandoned.

The problem, of course, is money. Chapin estimates the hour extension would cost about $3,000 a term. The money, initially, would have to come from the Provost's contingency fund.

The Student Library Committee could help. A recommendation from them that the trial be made would be the first and necessary step towards obtaining the needed funds.

It is a step that should be taken and taken soon.

Money for med school poses tough hurdle

For eight long years Michigan State has been waiting for the inevitable to happen. Wednesday it finally did. The State Board of Education, by a five vote margin, approved a full degree-granting medical program for MSU.

Since the College of Human Medicine was first conceived in 1959, Michigan's shortage of doctors and schools to train them has become an obvious and acute problem.

Last November, a Citizens' Committee on Health Care estimated that the state of Michigan will need a place for 590 first year med students within 10 years. Currently, the state's two med schools, Michigan and Wayne State, have room for just 325. Even the proposed expansion of Michigan would add only 50 more to the total, far short of the state's needs.

Necessity dictated a new med school. The immense existing academic facilities of Michigan State made it a likely choice. With the many varied and strong departments already existing in the sciences, there was a firm basis to build and draw from.

Success for the new full program, of course, will not be achieved without money. Provost Howard R. Neville indicated Wednesday that a supplementary budget request will be given to the Legislature in hopes of attaining planning money. Funds for a faculty, a teaching hospital and at least one life-science building are needed before the program can get off the ground floor.

Michigan State's medical school program has gotten by a big hurdle. Admittedly, it was an awfully big hurdle. But, considering the state of Michigan's fiscal situation, it will not be the last hurdle the school has to face.

Graham clears air for trip

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to reply to the letter of Michael J. Saxton, in regards to my scheduled trip to Washington, D.C. to consider, with other student government leaders, the present government policy in Vietnam. It at first should be stated that there are some nine student government presidents attending from such schools as Harvard, Minnesota, and U.C.L.A. It should be understood, that after holding a press conference, we will meet with the Secretary of State, Tuesday at 4 p.m.

Mr. Saxton reaches at least three unfortunate and unsubstantiated conclusions within his letter. His first such conclusion, is that I am purporting to represent anyone but myself on this question.

I thought in the past that I had made it implicitly clear that, on this issue, I am only representing my own conscience and that I have no authority whatsoever to represent student government, student body, or university. An enlightened discussion of this question must begin with that premise.

Second, Mr. Saxton concludes that by donating $50 to my trip, that the Student Board--and, therefore, the student body is being "coerced" into adopting my personal feelings. In the past, the Board has donated money to a number of various projects, including civil rights, without ever being officially on the record for or against.

It is a somewhat farfetched and unfounded conclusion to assume that because the Board acted in the way it did, it has taken a position on my feelings. This appropriation must be considered a donation from ASMSU to one student, and not an appropriation from the Board to its Chairman.

The final unjustified conclusion that Mr. Saxton makes concerns my feelings on "opposing" the present policy. He reaches this conclusion without any supporting evidence whatsoever. I have never publicly stated my feelings on Vietnam to this date.

Yet I can assure him that applying the term, "oppose", to my opinions would be hazardous, at best. I have a number of questions to ask of the Secretary of State and others, and my opinion is less set than Mr. Saxton would seem to indicate.

I look upon this trip as a tremendous opportunity to speak to our national leaders first hand. Due to financial difficulties, I appreciate the donation from ASMSU, permitting me to support travel costs. I hope that the students will understand this in its factual light.

Powell's symbolism is off

To the Editor:

Barry D. Amis, writing on Powell (Jan. 16) should bone up on what constitutes symbolism, what dignity is, and what embodies the spirit of the American...man.

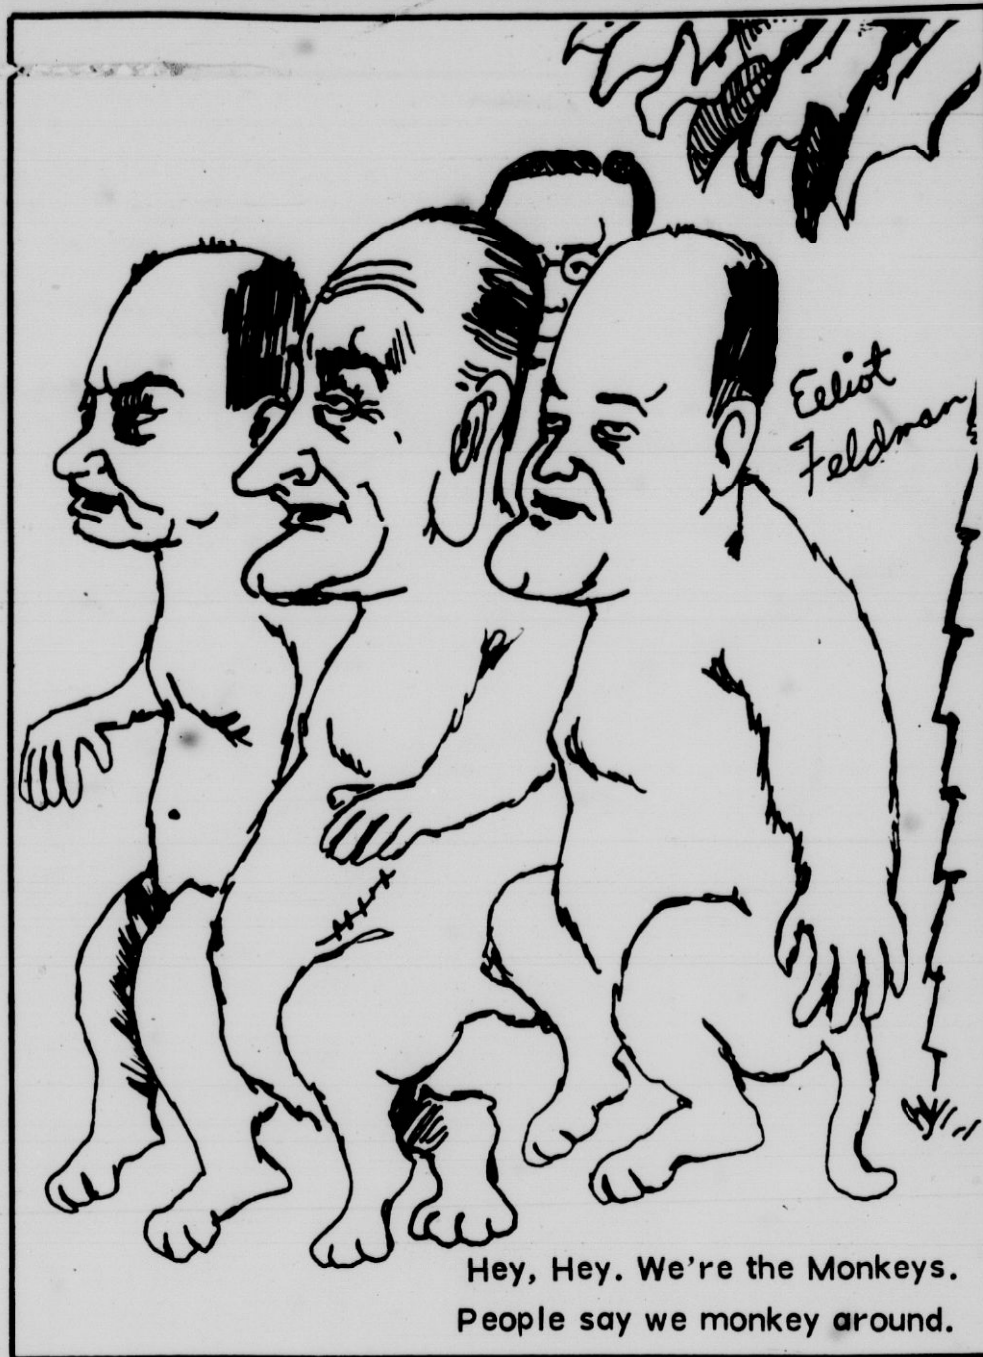

Let's switch colors for example. Do the actions of the Bobby Bakers, etc., who like Powell are outspoken, flamboyant and courageous, "symbolize what a man (black or white) can be in this country? Is the dignity of mankind abolished because of these men?

Let Mr. Amis forget color in his ensuing years and stick to character.

There are too many of the colored race leading noble lives to find it necessary to put Mr. Powell on a pedestal.

If Mr. Amis chooses to have Powell-type activities epitomize the great race of colored people then he places himself in the company of a great minority.

MITCH MILLER

Warren it be loverly

"Well," I said to Poor Richard as I sat down at his table in the Grill, "what do you think of good old MSU, now that you're back."

"Cold," he growled. "And wet. Very wet."

"What made you come back, then?"

"It seemed like a good idea at the time."

"Really? What else is new?"

"I have," he said, in an incredibly pedantic tone, "been cogitating over the vast amount of tripe which has followed in the wake of the Warren Report."

"Do you mean," I asked, "the comments on and questioning of the Report?"

"Exactly."

Tripe or worse

"You are terming sincere questions and well-founded doubts tripe?"

"Or worse," he replied. "Have you read, for example, the famous Life magazine inquiry into the assassination. Or any the writings of Mark Lane, Esq.?"

"Yes, as a matter of fact..."

"And what did you think of them?"

"Well they seemed very thoroughly thought out and..."

"Nonsense. With evidence like that you couldn't free George Washington from a malicious destruction of property charge."

"The whole case against the report is based on the greatest assumption-mongering and conclusion-jumping since the Chicago Tribune decided Dewey beat Truman. Someone says, 'I heard a shot before that,' or 'I saw someone run away' and that is supposed to prove something. Now really!"

"People whose business it is to deal with such things, infantrymen and police have difficulty locating a shot fired while it's quiet in an open area. How can you make a case out of the memories of isolated, frightened, untrained individuals?"

"Just wait a minute", I interrupted. "What about all those people who saw Oswald in other places after the assassination?"

Poor Richard looked at me with the look he reserves for idiot children and graduate assistants. "Even after John Dillinger was shot to death by the FBI, people reported him wandering about, all over the country. Are you trying to tell me that we should still be looking for him?"

"Well then," I countered rather weakly, "what about the Life article with all the Zapruder film frames and Governor Connally's testimony?"

Zapruder zapped

"A veritable masterwork of assumption-mongery."

"The Warren Commission said that two shots were fired at the Presidential car. The first hit both Kennedy and Connally and the second was the one that killed Kennedy. They established the times the shots were fired by examining the individual frames of Zapruder's movie."

"From Oswald's vantage point, there was a tree that obscured the road on which the car was traveling, in front of the Texas School Book Depository. From Zapruder's point of view, on the lawn of the building, there was a highway sign that blocked his camera's shot of the car."

"The Commission's examination of the film indicates that Kennedy and Connally were already hit when the car came out from behind the sign, and therefore, Oswald fired the first shot between the time the car came out from under the tree and the time it emerged from behind the sign, and the second shot some time later."

"Connally agrees with the Commission about the shot that killed Kennedy, but challenges it on the first shot."

Super-governor

"Connally says that he heard the first shot, and didn't feel any impact. Two-thirds of a second later, he claims, he was hit."

"The reason this is important is that it challenges the single-assassin theory of the Commission. Since bullets travel faster than sound, Connally couldn't have heard the bullet before it hit him. If a bullet was fired two-thirds of a second after the Commission says it was, there must have been two assassins because Oswald's rifle could not have been fired, worked, and fired again in two-thirds of a second."

"Connally, then, and Life, are challenging the Warren Commission because he believes he heard a shot two-thirds of a second before he felt an impact."

"Now really, I ask you. How can he be so sure his memory of such a momentous event is perfect? How can he be so convinced of his superhuman sensitivity to claim that he can point out in exactly which movie frame (with a duration of one-twentieth of a second) he was hit in?"

How can he be sure?

"How can Connally say that he can tell you whether he was shot at the beginning or end of a period two-thirds of a second long? Men have walked around for days after being fatally wounded, and he has the temerity to proclaim that he knows that for less than a second he was not yet shot. What kind of proof is that of anything?"

Poor Richard paused for breath. "What about the other evidence?" I asked. "The autopsy report being challenged, or the fact that Jack Ruby got through all those Dallas policemen to shoot Oswald, then died before he could tell everything?"

"Ruby did have a trial, remember? And he was questioned and investigated by the Warren Commission. And nobody ever came up with any evidence that he was anything other than a poor, sick man."

The Great Conspiracy

"There are some people who say that the Warren Commission is covering up for some person or persons, that it was part of the conspiracy", I replied.

"Do you mean", he asked, "some right-wing Dallas multi-millionaire fanatics, the Dallas police force, Parkland Hospital, the United States Navy, the Warren Commission, and Lyndon Baines Johnson, all combined to assassinate the President?"

"It has been suggested," I said. "For what reason would such a conspiracy form? And how would it stay together?"

"And how, in the name of God and the United States of America, would they get Earl Warren, Liberal-in-Chief of the United States, who accused the conspiracy of the crime before there even was an investigation, to make a complete about-face, go back on everything he has stood for and done these many years, and cover up for them?"

Hoffa says jurors 'tapped' in trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — James R. Hoffa told the Supreme Court today a trained FBI wiretapper "bugged" the rooms of jurors who convicted him of jury tampering.

In a new bid to stay out of jail, the Teamsters Union president submitted five pages of affidavits, including one from the alleged wiretapper.

Hoffa asked reconsideration of the high court's Dec. 1 decision that upheld his 1964 jury tampering conviction and eight-year prison sentence.

Previously he had asked the high court to review his separate fraud and conspiracy conviction.

Attorneys for Hoffa and six codefendants claimed the 1964 Chicago trial had been affected by prejudicial newspaper and magazine publicity about Hoffa. Among other arguments raised in the appeal was a contention that the jurors had been influenced by Hoffa's separate conviction, then still in the appeal stage, of tampering with the jury in Nashville in 1962.

Hoffa's jury-tampering conviction in Chattanooga in 1964 and eight-year prison sentence were upheld last month by the Supreme Court. He is expected to ask for reconsideration before the Feb. 4 deadline for such an appeal.

Hoffa's attorneys said that while jurors were being selected for his Chicago trial, magazines and newspapers in the city featured articles portraying him "as a brute, as assassin, and a killer of children."

"These highly inflammatory tales," including a Life magazine article about an alleged plot on the life of then Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, "were obviously written with the cooperation, if not at the instigation of the attorney general's office," the appeal said.

The articles, the brief went on, "could not help but influence any reader."

Kennedy, now a U.S. senator from New York, went to Chicago while the jury was being selected. And, the appeal said, other articles reported he had "asserted these allegations as proven facts."

"So these articles further emphasized the image of petitioner Hoffa as a criminal-at-large while prospective jurors were free to read and discuss them," Hoffa's attorneys told the high court.

The appeal also criticized locking up the jury at the Great Lakes Naval Station, calling this an "insinuation of guilt" that "reaffirmed all the accusations and innuendoes which the mass media had carried to the jurors."

110 ENEMY KILLED

Allied forces slash Cong

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marines and South Korean infantrymen slashed into Viet Cong ranks today in sectors 200 miles apart. They reported 110 of the enemy were killed. Ground action elsewhere throughout South Vietnam was reported light.

U.S. B52 bombers staged three raids, one only 32 miles north of Saigon in support of the allied drive to clear the Iron Triangle of Viet Cong. Bad weather again limited air missions over North Vietnam. There were only 52 such strikes Wednesday.

A reshuffle within Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's government was expected after a round of top-secret meetings Friday of the ruling generals. Ky returned amid heavy security precautions from a goodwill visit to Australia and New Zealand to cope with problems raised by the dismissal of Lt. Gen. Nguyen Huu Co as defense minister and deputy premier.

Though demonstrators marred some aspects of his visit, Ky told newsmen the two allies now "understood us better and both governments are willing to give us more assistance." Australia has 4,500 fighting men in Vietnam. A 180-man artillery battery represents New Zealand.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland's command announced U.S.

military strength in Vietnam topped 400,000 last Saturday.

American casualties dropped in all categories last week from the record of 144 dead, 1,044 wounded and six missing in the week of Jan. 8-14. But over-all losses of both the allies and the Communists rose.

JFK book may be runaway best seller

NEW YORK (AP) — Reports from the book industry indicate that William Manchester's "The Death of a President" may be one of the runaway best sellers of the 20th century.

A spokesman for Harper & Row, the publishers, said orders were piling in so fast that they have not been able to fix the size of the first printing.

"It looks as if it may have the largest advance sale in our history," the spokesman said.

Another publishing source declared: "You can safely speculate that the book will have the biggest advance sale of our time."

In Chicago, Wendel Goodpasture, buyer for the major book-dealing firm of Kroch's and Brentano's, said: "I have seen nothing like it in nearly 50 years in this business."

The retail price of the book is $10.

"It's the hottest thing in the book industry since the Gutenberg Bible," was the word from Laura Rivers, advertising executive of the May Co. stores in Los Angeles.

Many dealers said they expected a flood of orders as soon as the publication time tentatively early in April is fixed by Harper & Row.

MSU Med School meets difficulties

MSU's proposed four-year medical school, which cleared a major hurdle Wednesday by gaining the State Board of Education's approval, still has a long, and possibly rough, road ahead in the Michigan legislature.

In a press conference Thursday, Gov. George Romney said he did not expect to include any appropriations for the medical school in his current budget proposals.

Romney said the state board's recommendation came too late. "It will not be dealt with in my budget message which I had to put to rest before the (board's) action was taken," he explained.

The governor said he had received no official word from MSU on anticipated costs of expanding MSU's present two-year College of Human Medicine.

University Secretary Jack Breslin said MSU currently has a $10 million capital outlay request in its budget for the first Life Science building and $875,000 for operations of the present two-year school.

Breslin said supplemental requests in the operations budget are being planned to start development of the full medical school but that no definite figures are yet available.

He added that it is difficult to devise a timetable for medical expansion but that if plans go through without setbacks, the four-year school could be in operation by 1969.

This could be the week John Benington plays army and calls on his reserves.

The Spartan basketball coach indicated he expects Wisconsin to utilize a zone defense when they play the Spartans Saturday and said, "I'll be more ready to yank someone out early."

Heywood Edwards, 6-5 junior forward from Brooklyn, N.Y., has been playing more in practices this week. Edwards has seen action in eight of 11 games this season, and scored 36 points for seventh place on the team.

"I'm not worried about the zone defense," Edwards said. "The zone keeps you from getting inside for a shot, but you can get to the boards easier, and rebounding is one of our strong points."

Edwards said coming off the bench is no problem for him. He said it takes about four times running up and down the court before he feels right. "That first shot means a lot," Edwards said. "It gives you that confidence you need to keep shooting."

Reserve guards Shannon Reading, Vernon Johnson, and Richie Jordan are two subs who are likely to see action, mainly because of their outside shooting ability. But, if Benington is worried, he doesn't show it. "We plan no radical changes this late in the season," he said. "It only disrupts a team."

He might have some difficulties with Matthew Aitch. The 6-7 center sprained his ankle slightly at Wednesday's practice, but Benington says he expects Aitch to start.

While Benington was working the Spartans hard in practices this week, Wisconsin quickly recovered from a 10-day exam lay-off to beat South Dakota Wednesday, 94-53. The victory brought Badger Coach John Erickson's season record to 7-6. The Badgers are 2-1 in the Big Ten and in a three way tie for second place with MSU and Indiana.

Wisconsin has beaten Purdue (79-76), Michigan (98-90) and has lost to Illinois (87-74).

The Badgers are a young team. Their probable starting lineup will consist of three sophomores and two juniors. Six-five Center Chuck Nagle is the Badger's top scorer, averaging 22.7 points in Big Ten action for fifth place. He is averaging 18.3 overall.

Forward Joe Franklin, 6-4, could be Benington's toughest problem. He was the second leading scorer on the team last season and the leading rebounder. He scored 27 points against Michigan. Is twelfth in the Big Ten with a 17.7 per game average. He leads the conference in rebounds with 15 per game. He is averaging 15.6 points in all games.

Benington singled out Jim McCallum, 6-3 junior guard, as a much improved player. McCallum lost his starting job earlier in the season but won it back with a 26-point performance against Michigan. He is averaging 11.1 points per game in all games, and 21.7 in Big Ten action. MSU Asst. Coach Gus Ganakas, who has scouted Wisconsin, says McCallum is a good outside shooter and a hustler.

Other starters will be sophomores Jim Johnson at forward and Bill Mitchell at guard.

"They have a small front line, but are good jumpers, especially Franklin," Ganakas said. "They like to use a combination defense, switching from man-to-man to zone, depending on the situation."

The battle will be the Big Ten's televised "Game of the Week" and will start at 4 p.m. Athletic Director Biggie Munn has announced that Saturday will be "Special Guest Day." Both youngsters and adults will be charged $1 for general admission to the game.

Track co-captains aim for two championships

By NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

Co-captains Gene Washington and Das Campbell both feel that the start of the indoor track season this Saturday at Ohio State will mark the beginning of an ambition that will take all year to accomplish, the winning of two more Big Ten championships. "We have three championships in a row now, and we all hope to get these next two (indoor and outdoor)," Washington said. "I realize this is my last year and I want to end my career on a good note."

Washington passed up a trip to Hawaii and an opportunity to play football in the Hula Bowl in order to run track this year. Had he played in this game, as Clint Jones did, he would have been considered a professional and been ineligible to compete.

Although only practicing strongly for two full weeks, Washington ran his specialties, the 70-yard high and low hurdles, in excellent times. He equalled his record of 0:7.9 in the lows and finished the highs in 0:8.4, only one-tenth off his record.

He will be running both of these, along with Spartans Bob Steele and Charles Pollard, on Saturday.

Campbell feels that the best thing about the triangular this Saturday against Ohio State and William and Mary is "that I'm running."

He broke his foot before the indoor season began last year and was unable to compete effectively. After a slow recuperation period that lasted through the summer, he feels he is in better shape now than ever before.

Campbell feels the team this year should be tougher than the

SKATERS AT DULUTH 'S' in battle-royal?

By JOE MITCH
State News Sports Writer

Hockey Coach Amo Bessone's warnings to his players not to fight in games may not be heeded this weekend when the Spartans tangle with Minnesota-Duluth at Duluth in a two-game series.

The Bulldogs, only in the Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. (WCHA) since 1965, have been known for their rugged style of play in the past.

And whenever Duluth and Michigan State get together, games have always been marred by brawls and numerous penalties. Last season when the Bulldogs visited the Spartan Ice Arena, there were more fights thrown than goals scored.

MSU won the series, 6-5 and 5-2.

The Bulldogs are fresh from a rugged series with the University of Minnesota last weekend when they split two games. There were 46 penalties in the two games, including three misconducts. Duluth's Pat Francis was given two of the misconducts Friday and sat out the Saturday game.

Francisco, though, isn't the rabble-rouser of the Duluth team. Leading the way is senior Keith Christiansen, who not only is the penalty king on the team but also the leading scorer.

"Christiansen could well be the best player in the league," said

Coach Bessone. "I'll say this much, he's the best stickhandler and cleverest skater in college hockey. He's quick and a shifty puck carrier."

"It will be a tough series with Duluth, playing there and against Christiansen. Duluth is a penalty prone and scramble-type team. If we play their type of game, we'll be in tough shape."

"If we keep our temper and play position type hockey, we'll be alright."

Christiansen, a possible All-American candidate, is leading the WCHA in scoring with seven goals and 13 assists for 20 points, in seven games. In 14 overall games he has 13 goals and 18 assists for 31 points.

His 38 total penalty minutes is tops on the team, but he is third in the number of penalties with 11.

Minnesota - Duluth is in seventh place in the WCHA with a 3-8 record. They trail the Spartans by a game and a half. MSU is sixth with a 4-6-1 mark.

The Bulldogs have surpassed the Spartans in the season standings. They have a 6-8 record for a .429 percentage while the Spartans are 7-10-1 with a .417 percentage.

Duluth, in 14 games played, has averaged 4.4 goals per game, connecting on 62 total goals so far. MSU has a 3.4 goals per game average in 18 games.

While the Spartans will be alternating goalies in the series, Duluth will go one -- Dave LeBlanc. He has given up 61 goals thus far in 14 games for a 4.3 average. He is averaging 35 stops per game.

For the Spartans, Gaye Cooley and Jerry Fisher will be in the nets. Cooley has worked 13 games for MSU and has a 4.6 average. Fisher, who owns the Spartans' lone shutout, has worked six games and has a 2.6 average.

Fisher's 2.0 average in the WCHA is tops in the league. He has let in eight goals in four games.

In WCHA play Volmar has 14 points on nine goals and five assists.

Center Tom Mikkola and wing Sandy McAndrew rank 2-3 in the Spartan scoring race. Mikkola, who missed the season's first four games with an injured wrist, has 19 points on seven goals and 12 assists.

Success certainly hasn't spoiled the MSU wrestling team. Even after gaining a victory and a tie against Oklahoma and Oklahoma State last weekend Coach Grady Peninger's matmen aren't too proud to take on lowly Purdue at Lafayette, Ind., on Saturday.

As a friendly gesture, Peninger won't even start two of his regulars against the Boilermakers. George Radman, 11-0 for the season at 167, and Mike Bradley, 8-2 at 177, will be given a rest for this meet.

In place of Radman will be the winner of a wrestle-off between Rod Ott and Mike Gudiness, while Mike Johnson will take over for Bradley.

The rest of the Spartan lineup will be the same as it was against the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 ranked teams last weekend. Gary Bissell will go at 123, Don Behm (13-1) at 130, Dale Anderson (13-0) at 137, Dale Carr (8-3) at 145, Dave Campbell (5-4-2) at 152, Don Cox (4-4) at 160, and Jeff Richardson (2-0-1) at heavyweight.

MSU takes a 7-0-1 record into the meet.

Purdue, a 25-3 victim of the Spartans in last year's dual meet, finished in a tie for eighth in the Big Ten last season. The Boilermakers have eight returning lettermen from last year's squad.

Top man on the Purdue squad is Ralph Trail, co-captain and 130 pounder. Injured last season after taking second in the Big Ten at 123 in 1964 and fourth in 1965 at 130, he has been given another year of eligibility.

"Trail once rode Behm for Behm's entire period down," Peninger said. "And he's about the only guy to ever do that."

Probable starters on the Boilermaker squad will be Larry Katz at 123, Bill Trujillo at 137, John Goss at 160, and John Williams at heavyweight.

Both Purdue and MSU took part in the Northwestern Invitational Tournament January 7, with MSU taking the tournament title and scoring 67 points. Purdue finished last, with 23 points.

"We don't think they're going to be very tough," Peninger said. "But you never can tell."

After the Purdue meet, MSU will face Big Ten opponents Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois and Michigan in dual meets before the Big Ten and NCAA championships.

Narcy solves diving dilemma

By LARRY WERNER
State News Sports Editor

Spartan Swim Coach Charles McCaffree used to bemoan the fact that diving events were included in swimming meets.

His reasons were obvious. He had no talented divers and, in fact, didn't even have a diving coach.

The story has changed. The diving events which McCaffree used to feel were not legitimate parts of swimming meets gave the veteran coach his first victory in 11 years over Michigan.

The big victory was last weekend. The score was 63-60. McCaffree's swimmers did their typically commendable jobs, but it was victories by a pair of sophomores—Doug Todd and Duane Green—in the one-and three-meter diving which gave MSU the incredible triumph. Senior Fred Whiteford chipped in with second and third places.

And no small amount of credit is due to the man who recruited, polished and primed these divers, Michigan State's first diving coach ever, John Narcy.

Narcy is a motor-cycle-driving, tennis-playing father of two. He's a rugged coach and a nice guy.

And he's the greatest thing that has happened to Spartan swimming since the Men's IM was built.

Diving at MSU used to be a joke. Michigan State has never had a Big Ten diving champion. It's not difficult to see why.

Before Narcy was hired as diving coach, at the beginning of the 1965-66 season, there was no one to instruct Spartan divers. Narcy, captain of Michigan's swim team in 1957, took over and began to change the image.

He immediately convinced Fred Whiteford, a junior college All-American, that State was great. He then persuaded state champions from New Trier High in Illinois and Battle Creek Central, namely Todd and Green, to become Spartans.

JOHN NARCY

Pretty good work for a U-M alumnus.

He now has one of the toughest diving corps in the Big Ten, and perhaps the country.

Narcy offends those sensitive to criticism. He's not gentle. "He's a very forceful coach," Todd said. "He gets you doing things you really don't want to do."

Green has been subject to Narcy's "wrath" also as the former Wolverine All-American developed him into a Big Ten competitor.

"He's strict and hard," Green said. "He can get mad at you and fight with you. But you know that you're still friends."

Both of Narcy's first-year pupils swear that Narcy is "the greatest diving coach."

A large part of diving is concentration and psychology. MSU's diving coach displayed his psychological knowhow with a note left in the divers' lockers, prior to the Michigan meet.

The note read: "If ever a team needs someone or something, it's now. The points in diving could break this meet wide open. We, the team, need those points from diving. You've got to do the job for your team so that we can win the whole damn meet. Not just diving. You can if you think you can."

Psychological warfare at its best. Narcy, a former Wolverine, is now a Spartan at heart.

According to Todd, Narcy is trying to build "a diving dynasty at Michigan State."

When Biggie Munn and the athletic department decided to bring MSU swimming out of the Middle Ages with a renaissance called John Narcy, they made a fortunate decision.

Narcy, sitting boyishly on the seat of his BSA, swinging a racket on the tennis court, or screaming at Spartan divers, is very much a part of Michigan State.

He's a welcome part. And McCaffree, who used to condemn diving as out-of-place in a swim meet, finds that diving is one of his major strong points, thanks to Narcy.

Spartans win triple-dual

The MSU swim team decisively defeated Ohio University and the University of Wisconsin, Thursday evening, in a triple-dual swim meet at the IM Pool. Wisconsin defeated Ohio in competition between these two teams.

Tankers meet UofI, Purdue

By JOHN LADD
State News Sports Writer

It is perhaps difficult to generate much enthusiasm over swimming the ninth and tenth place teams in the Big Ten just a week after defeating second place Michigan. But that is exactly what the MSU swimmers must do Saturday in swimming a triple-dual meet against the Fighting Illini of the University of Illinois and the Purdue Boilermakers.

Though the teams are not among the best the Spartans will swim, the team perhaps looks

Lacrosse meeting

The MSU Lacrosse Club will be meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in 203 Men's L.M. Anyone interested in joining the club is invited to attend the meeting.

forward to this trip more than any other all year. The center of enthusiasm is a restaurant and motel called Morris Bryant's. This motel is well known among Big Ten sports fans for the smorgasbord it serves for lunch and dinner every day.

Last time the team was at Lafayette, Morris Bryant's offered "all you can eat" of such things as lobster tails, chicken, blue-point oysters and four kinds of shrimp. To make sure that his swimmers do not overdo their feasts before the meet, Coach McCaffree has promised his swimmers they could eat there after the meet.

But the trip will be by no means a culinary cruise. The team has a long way to go before the Big Ten and NCAA Championships.

Seemingly insignificant teams like Purdue and Illinois can give them the competition they need in individual events to prepare them for those important meets.

Purdue, especially, may give the Spartan breaststrokes and sprint freestylers some competition. In their meet against Michigan two weeks ago, the Boilermakers showed some individual strength such as they have not betrayed in some time.

Don Milne's 0:21.4 in the 50 could give problems to Spartans Gary Dilley, Don Rauch or Gary Langley. John Lee's 200-yard breaststroke time of 2:19.0 could challenge MSU's Greg Brown, Jack Marsh and Carl Weber. Illinois' Kip Pope, a high-school All-American, will add another fast sophomore breaststroke to the event.

Bob Bachman and Dave Florio, Illinois freestylers, are probably their team's best swimmers, but they should give the Spartan freestylers little trouble. The Spartan divers should also get a short rest from the challenges they received from the Wisconsin divers Thursday night.

CLARE BOOTHE LUCE

Writer says Pope may approve pill

Clare Boothe Luce this week predicted that Pope Paul VI will eventually approve the birth-control pill for Catholics.

"The only other alternative," Mrs. Luce said in a McCall's column, "is to trust population control to that evil trinity of all our darkest history—war, pestilence and famine."

Mrs. Luce, a convert to Catholicism, predicted that when his "painful indecision" ends, the pontiff "will follow the course of courage, which is likewise the course of prudence," and approve artificial birth control methods.

She expressed her personal belief that the Pope will move forward with the movement of history and with the progress of moral-scientific thought, in conformity with Catholic tradition, which is the tradition of progress.

"The authority of the papacy will be more secure for this progress," she said.

Mrs. Luce said word has "leaked out" that "a majority" of the Papal Commission for the Study of Population, the Family and Births, named after the second session of Vatican Council II, concluded that "means other than the highly uncertain rhythm method" were not necessarily beyond moral sanction.

"Whether or not the Pope is in doubt about approving the commission's majority report," she commented, "much of the Catholic world believes he is."

"And human nature being what it is, in the matter of the pill, unknown numbers of Catholics will continue to give themselves the benefit of the doubt and practice artificial birth control.

"I hope with all my mind and heart that Pope Paul will yet receive enough new evidence from scientists, and support from bishops and theologians, to enable him to accept the findings of the majority of his commission," Mrs. Luce said.

During the commission's three years of life, enough babies were born to populate 100 cities the size of Rome.

"It takes neither a scientist nor a theologian to figure out that at some point the population of the world must be stabilized or regulated by birth control," she said. "Whatever God's will for man may be, surely it is not that population is best controlled by starvation, disease and nuclear holocaust."

The rhythm method is not adapted to the use of the very people who need it most, such as the poor and illiterate populations of the Catholic Latin American countries, Mrs. Luce commented.

"Even educated Catholics in our affluent society find the rhythm method difficult," she said. "The Pope must be cruelly aware that his rejection of this report would be viewed as a regressive action by most of the world's political, scientific and religious leaders, and quite possibly by a great number of communicants."

The present position of the Roman Catholic Church holds that any chemical or mechanical agent that destroys or obstructs life-giving sperm or aborts life-giving ovum is against the natural law. The use of such agents is immoral.

According to rumor, however, the papal commission's report suggested that any physically harmless birth-control measure short of sterilization and abortion might be acceptable to the Church.

Religion, Barnum-style

The Saturday issue of the Los Angeles Times is well worth buying, if only to read the World Church advertisements on the religion page.

Studded with stars and exclamation points, this week's advertisements in inch-high prose: "Miss Velma's Foundation presents Miss Velma in 'The Campaign of Youth! Magnificent illustrated sermon! Miss Velma will descend high out of the sky out of the stars! Flying in seven blazing torches from out of the stars! Amazing! Beautiful! In Color!"

And right in the center of the ad is a photo of Miss Velma herself, the leading practitioner of the God-a-go-go school of theology, a matronly, white-haired figure in a jeweled robe.

In her sermons (productions is a better word) Miss Velma combines all the qualities of P. T. Barnum, Walt Disney, and the Folies Bergere. Each one is a triumph of stagecraft, spectacularly staged, costumed, and choreographed.

During her last campaign Miss Velma brought forth a series of productions so ornate and bizarre that even blasé Los Angeles residents were stunned into admiration.

In one, the stage was hung with golden cages full of frantically frugging girls in go-cosumes, the center cage being occupied by Miss Velma.

In another, a huge spaceship was lowered onstage and Miss Velma popped out for her sermon in a gold lame spacesuit. In another, she preached from a red and white flaming chariot suspended in the air that jammed during its ascent toward the ceiling.

The climax came on Easter morning, when Miss Velma and her husband, Rev. O. L. Jaggers, presented the "Mighty Transubstantiation Miracle," modestly touted as the "most beautiful event in the history of mankind."

Two dozen elders in jeweled robes and crowns assisted Mr. and Mrs. Jaggers as they announced the "creation of the eighth wonder of the world." This was a massive, jeweled altar 144 feet in circumference surrounded by a jeweled river, with jeweled streets and trees.

This triumph past, Miss Velma has gone on to new projects.

Her current theme is "Campaign of Youth!" with sermons on "The mighty miracle of the restoration of youth." Miss Velma plans to appear as "Batwoman" and "Miss Rip Van Winkle" to bring about her belief that God has chosen her to help restore youth to people.

"God has told me three things," she said in an interview in Christian Century Magazine. "First, He would perform the great miracle of history by restoring people to their youth. Second, the restoration would be complete in the people causing their bodies, minds, and spirits to become young again."

"Third, I am to gather the 144,000 saved people from the earth and anoint them to restore their youth and bring about fellowship among them. My goal is to bring perfect health to people, including fellowship and reconciliation through the forgiveness of sins."

Despite the lavish theatricality, Miss Velma and Co. seem to be apparently sincere in their aims—their current project is to build seven churches around the world. And their productions are attended by overflow crowds who ooh and aah at Miss Velma's aerial antics and stream down the aisles when she asks the audience to come forward and become anointed with "the oil of youth."

Naturally, many established churches scoff at Miss Velma as a fraud and some even hint at misappropriation of funds. But she can't win the approval of everyone. After all, that's show biz.

Many workmen
Built a huge hall of masonry
Upon a mountain-top.
Then they went to the valley below,
And turned to behold their work.
"It is grand," they said;
They loved the thing.
Of a sudden, it moved:
It came upon them swiftly:
It crushed them all to blood.
But some had opportunity to squeal.

IN MEETING SECULARISM

Buddhism best for south Asia

The fate of the religions of southern Asia depends on their ability to come to terms with western "technocracy," man's extensive control of nature, according to Herbert C. Jackson, associate professor of religion.

Christian technocracy, Buddhist Marxism or Hindu spiritualism are the alternatives to the secular state, Jackson said Tuesday night at Akers Hall.

Technocracy brings with it the Christian world-view, and hence the possibility of conversions to Christianity, but in southeast Asia Buddhism is a more likely option, he suggested.

Technocracy develops because the under-developed nations want to be developed nations, Jackson continued. Man all over the world is keenly aware of the potential all men have for the creation of what our President likes to call the "Great Society."

But technocracy brings with it Christianity -- not the western institutional expression of Christianity, but the Christian world-view, the Biblical faith which asserts that the world was made for man and that man has the ability to master and use nature, Jackson said.

This world-view was what led to western technological development. He added that the spread of western civilization grounded in this view of the world is actually the coming of Christian incognito.

Jackson raised the question of what will happen when technocratic man eventually begins the search for ultimate realities once more.

"Some ideology with a religious orientation must captivate this technocracy," he said. The now-unanswerable question is whether Christianity will be ready and able to grasp the situation and effect the establishment of the Christian faith on a tremendous scale.

Christianity, as we know it, is not an influential force in southern Asia today, Jackson said. Hinduism, the dominant religion of India, also has given way in many respects to the secular state. However, in southeast Asia Buddhism is still a vital force.

"Historically, Hinduism and Buddhism prescribed the rise of the industrial age in southern Asia with the conviction that this would not move man in the direction of more humanness," he said.

Buddhism is not the pessimistic, world-denying, thoroughly individualistic religion it is often thought to be, he said. "There is no religion, not even Christianity, which has always been so concerned about man as he is in the situation in this world."

"Buddhism has the deep conviction that man can know himself well enough that he can grapple successfully with the problems of our human situation without any supernatural help," Jackson explained.

Long before the appearance of Christianity, Buddhism had established hospitals all over southeast Asia, he added.

Because Buddhism believes the material world must be kept subservient to the humanness of man, it is incompatible with Communism, he said. But Marxist socialism is actually essential to this form of Buddhism.

"I contend that Buddhism in its great cultural periods has always effected a socialist state, even though its political structures were monarchies," Jackson said.

"The question is will Buddhism be able to combat Communism and inculcate its traditional personal values so that technocracy will become a servant of Buddhism, and evolve a new culture?" Jackson said.

"I think it will," he added. "I would say Buddhism is a far more live option in southeast Asia than Christianity today." Similarly, Hinduism must radically revise its basic suppositions so that it can accommodate technocracy and the suppositions necessary for it, Jackson added.

"Hinduism is essentially a spiritual oriented and concerned religion and directs all man's attention to what might be called the metaphysical," he said. "Hinduism denies the reality of the material world."

CLASSIC FILMS

Eden and anti-hero

EDITOR'S NOTE: The films "Rebel Without a Cause" and "East of Eden" began Thursday at the State Theater as part of a nine-day series of classic films, sponsored by the American Thought and Language Dept. The first two films, which run through Saturday, are reviewed today by William Chamberlain, instructor of ATL.

"East of Eden," based on the last third of John Steinbeck's novel, presents as a background for its protagonist a version of the America (California) of the World War I era, capturing the sadness and richness of an age about to end.

Director Elia Kazan and cinematographer James Wong Howe use the color camera and the Salinas Valley location to evoke sometimes with great feeling a nostalgia for the farmland, small towns, people, parades, and carnivals of 1916-18.

Images that come to mind which establish the place and time and the Americanness of the film are a county fair ferris wheel, Julie Harris in a Red Cross volunteer nurse's uniform, and the Trask parlor with its heavy oak table and glass lamp globe, the thick varnish and massiveness of wood door frames and of the bed in which Adam (Raymond Massey) lies dying.

Kazan has assembled a superb cast, mostly Actor's Studio graduates: Jo Van Fleet (who won an Academy Award for her performance as Kate Trask), Julie Harris as Aron's, then Cal's girl, Richard Davalos as Aron, the "bright" brother, James Dean as the black sheep brother Cal, Burl Ives as a sheriff, and Raymond Massey as the patriarch of this Genesis-like family. Cain (Cal in the film) is driven out into the land of Nod which is to the east of Eden, after he kills Abel (Aron).

Kazan's innovation is the de-emphasis of Kate, who is central in the novel, and a focusing of attention on Cal. Because of his style of playing (like Brando in some ways) and because the roles in the films which were to follow "Rebel Without a Cause" and "Giant" exploited the style, and very importantly because of his early death in his sports car not far from where "East of Eden" was filmed, Dean turned into a legend.

American films have had anti-heroes before, rebels with whom a wide audience vicariously identifies—the gangsters of the '30s and '40s; Bogart fixes the type. Then there was Brando and motorcycle jackets, etc.

It was the year everyone was carrying around a copy of "The Lonely Crowd" and talking about alienation and other-directedness. Juvenile delinquency was a popular topic. Pauline Kael writes of this new type, "...not too good at school... sexually active... he doesn't care about words or ideas. Yet this lack of intellectual tendencies is projected as evidence of sensitivity and purity of feeling;

The character Kazan and Dea: have contrived to set forth is non-verbal because words have been ruined by hypocritical men like Adam (or his 1950s counterpart); yet Cal's own values are not always consistent; he means well, but he hurts people. His cunning as a "businessman" makes him, finally, only another war-profiteer. He needs to have power in order to be taken seriously, and "good" and "bad" means are not distinguished.

When he is good, his goodness is spontaneous—as when he rushes to the defense of the old German whose rose garden is being trampled by a patriotic mob. The ending of the film emphasizes personal salvation through love; father and son are transformed by the power of mutual forgiveness.

SDS anti-draft plans 'go'

By BOB IMLER

State News Staff Writer

After two hours of discussion Wednesday night the MSU chapter of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) voted to form an anti-draft union as the final step of a three part anti-draft program.

The union and program will implement the society's decision last week when it adopted the national SDS draft resolution and asked for volunteers to map out an anti-draft program.

To join the union, young men of draft age sign a statement reading in part: "We, young men of draft age, certify our refusal to serve in Vietnam or to submit to conscription in any form."

Persons not eligible for the draft will sign a petition certifying they support those who refuse to serve in Vietnam or submit to conscription.

"This makes the conspiracy a little larger," said Mike Price, former MSU student.

SDS set up workshops to organize the other two parts of the anti-draft project. One deals with counseling on alternatives to the draft, and the other works in communications, occasionally referred to by the members as agitation and propaganda.

The "agitprop" program will endeavor to recruit for the anti-draft union and increase political non-cooperation with the draft.

"We want to reach the person who is vacillating between commitment to opposition and being sucked in," a member said.

"The main thing is to get a network of communication and agitation set up in the dorms."

Plans take shape

Mike Price outlines plans for the anti-draft union at an SDS (Students for a Democratic Society) meeting Wednesday night.

LANSING-EAST LANSING

Teens against society: 'rebels' in mansions

"Rebel Without a Cause", directed by Nicholas Ray and starring James Dean, Natalie Wood, Sal Mineo, and Jim Backus (as Dean's father), is constructed around the same anti-hero archetype as that presented in "East of Eden." The title, but not the plot, is the same as Dr. Robert Lindner's psychiatric case study. The film appeared the same year as "East of Eden" (1955) and rides the crest of other films about young people in trouble with society, notably "Blackboard Jungle."

But perhaps significantly, the high school in this film is located in upper middle-class Los Angeles. No one is economically deprived. The frustrations reflected (and exploited) by the film are not those of the have-nots or of a persecuted minority.

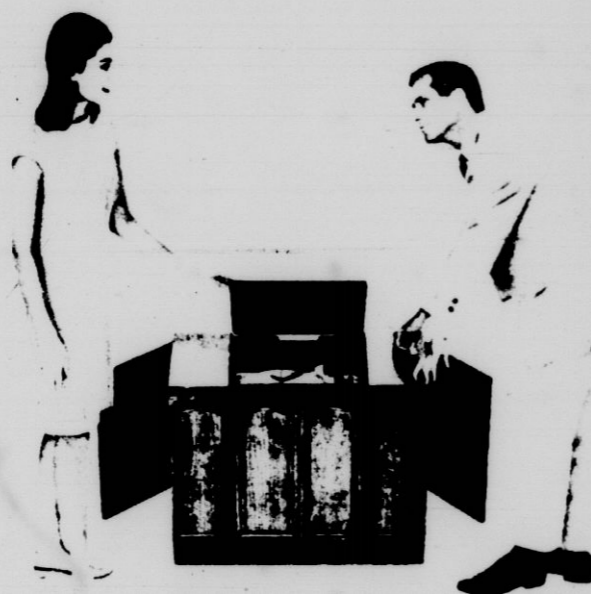

More generally it presents as it were undeniable that something in the affluent society is paralyzing the minds and smothering the spirit of its young. In fact, the parents of Miss Wood and of Dean do not seem very much more terrible than any others and have the look and sound of typicality one recognized as the norm of TV commercials and slick magazine advertisements.

The plot is conventional for the genre, deriving some of its better effects from bizarre locations: a deserted Hollywood mansion, and for the gunfight at the climax, Griffith Park Observatory and the surrounding hilltops.

Sal Mineo does well with a psychotic type, a meaty role for method acting, but Dean once again is central. The legend was already in effect (publicity about his own antisocial behavior had seen to that), and in at least one instance it allows for an irrelevant parody by Dean of Jim Backus's Mr. Magoo voice.

For all the implicit criticism of society disintegrating at its moral core, this film, like East of Eden, ends on the hopeful (perhaps false hopeful) note of love as a cure for all problems; the society may be incurable, but at the level that counts, within the family, forgiving, TRYING to understand, the art of loving is better than trying to die, the art of compulsive self-destructive revolt.

The Considerate Console

The new KLH* Model Twenty-Five is not like most consoles.

To start with, it is relatively small. About as long as the distance from your chin to your outstretched hand, and not much taller than a three-year-old. The Twenty-Five will fit gracefully into any room and any decor. It won't take up the better part of a wall, or crowd a comfortable chair into an uncomfortable corner. Its compact design makes particular sense for the small apartment where the furniture value of a console must be balanced against the valuable space it consumes.

We've tried to make the Model Twenty-Five the most considerate console on the market. We've even given it a considerate price. $425.

Mixers highlight weekend

The snowed-in MSU student population may be in for a slow weekend with a lack of scheduled entertainment. Skiers fortunate enough to escape to the hills won't be missing much activity on campus as movies and Friday night mixers dominate the entertainment scene.

The Spikedrivers, a Detroit folk rock group recording for Reprise Records will be in the Disc Shop in East Lansing for an autograph party from 3-5 today. This group will highlight next week's "Freakout" sponsored by Friends of The Paper.

The International Film Series movie "Candide" will be shown at 7 and 9 tonight in Fairchild. The Arena Theater will continue its presentation of "Desire Under the Elms" at 8 tonight through Sunday. On Monday and Tuesday it will be presented at Wonders Kiva at 7:15 p.m.

The movie "Day of the Triffids," sponsored by Men's Hall Council and Women's Inter-Residence Council will be shown at 7 and 9 tonight in Conrad Auditorium. Admission is 25 cents.

The art display "The Plate, Block, Stone and Print," presented by The Associated American Artists at Kresge Art Center will continue through Sunday. There will be a graduate piano recital given by Henry Ross Jr. at 8:15 tonight in the Music Auditorium.

The Tonks will play tonight at a mixer sponsored by Bailey Hall at Brody from 9-12.

Shaw will have its regular Friday night mixer from 9-12 with entertainment provided by The Vessels of Wrath.

A mixer in Hubbard Hall classrooms from 9-12 tonight will feature Francis X and the Bushmen.

Dance fanatics will have to find themselves a party on Saturday night because there will be no mixers.

The MSU sports line-up for Saturday includes basketball with Wisconsin at 4 p.m. and gymnastics at 1 p.m. with Indiana.

The Saturday travel film will be "Egypt, the Golden Land," shown at 8 p.m. in the Auditorium.

The Second Annual Inter-Collegiate Jazz Festival will be presented at 2 and 8 p.m. Saturday in Erickson Kiva. Featured will be the MSU Jazz Ensemble, the Swingin' Chips from Central Michigan University, Western Michigan University's Modern Lab Band and The University of Toronto's Lab Jazz Ensemble.

Movies in town this weekend include "The Professionals," a suspense-filled Western filmed in Mexico, starring Burt Lancaster, Lee Marvin, Jack Palance and Claudia Cardinale at the Michigan Theater.

"Rebel Without a Cause" and "East of Eden," starring James Dean, will be playing at the State tonight and Saturday. Sunday the State Theater will present O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms" and "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

"The Endless Summer" continues to splash at the Gladman in Lansing as "Alfie" continues its run at the Campus.

OPENS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Faculty Club sets plans

Two major steps toward the completion of a faculty club building are now under way, John Marston, chairman of the faculty affairs committee of the MSU Faculty Club, told members at the club luncheon this week.

"The first and most important step is to sign up a sufficient number of members," Marston said.

To encourage early sign-up, the charter membership fee will be $175 until April 1 and $225 after that date. The charter fee can be paid in installments by a payroll deduction plan, Marston explained.

The building project, which will cost an estimated $900,000, was first announced November 8, 1966 after several years of study and discussion.

Plans for the building call for recreation rooms, a dining room, a bar, a swimming pool, and outdoor recreation facilities for picnics and winter sports as well as parking for 350 cars.

The new club will be open to both male and female members of the faculty and staff. The Men's and Women's Faculty Clubs have been merged into a single MSU Faculty Club to provide for the joint membership.

The club's site is on Forest Road adjoining Forest Akers Golf Course. Half the land for the club was provided by a grant from the late Forest Akers, and a grant of $550,000 from the late Dr. Floyd W. Owen will help finance construction.

Marston said the club is hoping for a sign-up of from 500 to 600 charter members to provide further operating capital for construction of the recreational facility.

A booklet including rough architectural sketches and a detailed plan of the site will be sent to members of the faculty and staff soon, Marston said.

The second step presently being undertaken is the completion and approval of architect's plans for the building which will probably be completed by May of 1968, Marston said.

The talent competition will be held Jan. 31 and Feb. 2 to determine the 10 finalists who will enter final competition in the Miss MSU pageant Feb. 18.

Judges for the talent competition will be faculty members from the departments of Art and Music, and the Colleges of Communication Arts and Health, Physical Education and Recreation, as well as a representative of the East Lansing clothing stores. As yet, judges for the final competition have not been named.

Davis new ASMSU secretary

One of the two non-voting positions recently added to the ASMSU Student Board which was vacated early this week has been filled.

Hank Plante, former secretary of ASMSU, submitted a letter of resignation early in the week to Jim Graham, chairman of ASMSU. Graham accepted the resignation and recommended that the student board approve Dave Davis, Royal Oak senior, for the position.

Davis's appointment was approved by the board Tuesday. Plante's letter to Graham said, "During the course of anyone's student government relationships, it often becomes necessary to make, change, and break many value judgments. Unfortunately mine have reached that point at which my choice comes—and I must choose appropriately.

"I would hope this is not a complete exit from ASMSU," Graham called Plante's resignation a loss to student government.

$1.50 survival kit

Plans for a boycott of East Lansing merchants appeared dim as United Students (US) announced the possibility of peaceful price reform. Reports of the US price study committee Tuesday night indicated that meetings with merchants have lacked the anticipated hostility.

The committee is comparing prices of merchants in East Lansing and Lansing to find discrepancies. They hope to force concessions on this basis.

The US price study committee was designed to develop a more complete price research program than the student government ASMSU study, said a spokesman. Comparisons of local prices will be made with branches in Lansing, Ann Arbor and surrounding towns.

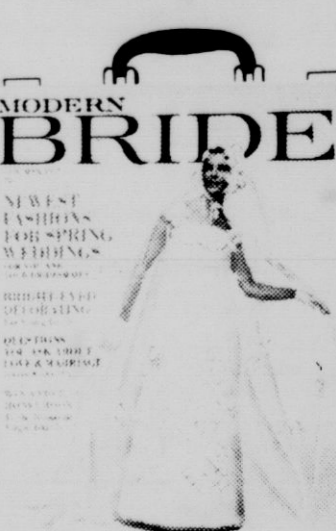

Revision of the present grading system which would include a pass-fail program or the introduction of plus-minus system was also discussed. Further action on this topic awaits the results of an ASMSU questionnaire, designed to measure student opinion on the proposals.

In a discussion of the residence hall open-house policy, US said that it would support recommendations made by the Men's Halls Association (MHA) and the Women's Inter-residence Council (WIC) Policy Review Committee. The up-coming MHA proposal on a visitation policy, which would be more liberal than the present was also approved.

at least on the weekends. Their philosophies, coinciding with the ideas voiced by the AWS judicial council, are based on the grounds that practice of self regulation is necessary and conducive to maturity and responsibility.

Extension of the current closing hours for freshman and sophomore women would enable women to participate more easily in campus activities explained the committee.

Jean Fisher, AWS president, mandated the general assembly to study the report, explain it to the living unit residents they represent, and then vote on the revisions as instruction by their living unit.

Miss Fisher explained that she and the judicial council will be available to speak at the living units about the proposal during the next two weeks.

She also explained that voting will be on the plan as a "package." She said any amendments should be suggested through the Pan-Hellenic Council, Women's Inter-residence Council (WIC), Off-Campus Council (OCC), or the ASMSU student board.

While Garfinkel expects the first class to be "overwhelmingly freshmen," he personally feels that any upperclassmen who are interested should be able to enter the college.

Robert Brumbaugh to open Plato series

The first of four lectures on Plato in the Isenberg Lectures series will be held at 8 tonight in 137 Akers. Robert Brumbaugh of Yale University will speak on "Symmetry, Truth and Beauty: the Balanced Structure of Plato's 'Republic'."

The discussion of Greek ideals of beauty and structure and the importance of the "Republic" to such disciplines as political science and history will give the lecture a wide base of interest, the Philosophy Dept. said.

Brumbaugh has been interested in the role of the myths and mathematical models in Plato's work. His books include "Plato's Mathematical Imagination" and "Plato for the Modern Age." It is expected that he will refer to the Myth of Er and the "law of nine" and the "Republic."

The Isenberg Lectures have been a feature of the Philosophy Dept. since 1965 and cover a different topic each term. They were instituted in memory of Arnold Isenberg, a long-time member of the department.
