Is it worth $25?

In the never ending struggle of student government versus the students it sometimes becomes necessary for government to sacrifice principles in the face of political expediency.

No one questions ASMSU's exertion of principle in last Tuesday's vote to send a token $25 contribution to aid the innocent civilian victims of the Vietnam war. The board was obviously acting in line with a strong and sound moral commitment. But in doing so, it may have picked a fight that simply is not worth it.

Already MHA has started a drive towards including the donation on next week's general ASMSU referendum.

Student resentment is to a large degree based on a misunderstanding of the board's donation. The damage to ASMSU's campus power, however, will nonetheless be accomplished if such a referendum is held.

The value of the token contribution to the total cause is practically insignificant. ASMSU's intent in donating the $25 was originally to show sympathy in the drive to help injured Vietnamese civilians, North and South. The money would go to a project undertaken by several religious groups, both on and off campus, to purchase medical supplies which would be distributed by the International Red Cross.

The wisdom of the board's action must be questioned, not because of the rightness or wrongness of the contribution, but because of the effect ASMSU should have known it would have.

The mistaken impression that the contribution would go towards directly aiding the enemy stems largely from the proposal's poor timing and an almost total lack of discussion on the matter. The dangers of a costly referendum, along with an ensuing fight, were clearly not called for by this issue at this time.

The board has in addition stirred some resentment because of its seeming disregard of the Sleep amendment, prohibiting the use of student tax money for outside political projects. While actual tax money will not be used in this donation, the intent of the unclear amendment is still in doubt and the legality of the donation in question.

The Sleep amendment may be unreasonable, but it is a rule that the board now must follow. The only way to get around the restriction without incurring student resentment is to call for its repeal.

The new board made its biggest mistake, not in giving support to a worthwhile cause, but in failing to consider the consequences of this support. ASMSU must learn to operate within the field of political reality, and that reality dictates the only possible losers in a referendum next week to be the student board itself.

Marching for money

The people of Michigan in their carelessness and unwisdom have allowed their legislators to persist in a short-sighted policy which consigns Michigan State to the last place among state-supported schools.

In an attempt to draw the legislators' attention to the inequality which compels MSU students to pay one third the costs of their education as opposed to about one quarter at Michigan or Wayne, the United Students will rally at Beaumont at 1:30 today and march to the state capitol. If their march is successful, an across-the-board tuition increase of $81 per student may be avoided. Such an increase would be necessary if the governor's proposed allotment of $42 million for Michigan State and $62 million for smaller U-M stands up.

Adequate financing for Michigan State, and, indeed, all Michigan's higher education, depends on the acceptance of the tax reform bill now before the legislature.

The purpose of the United Students' protest march is to impress upon the Michigan House of Representatives the need for this tax reform package and the higher appropriations for Michigan State it might make possible.

It would be platitudinous to point out the march deserves a healthy turnout, even the participation of every student. A small turnout would be worse than none at all; it would likely give the lawmakers the idea MSU students are indifferent to the educational opportunities they now have.

Again the United Students are energetically advancing the interests of the students, and this time they need student support in a degree not necessary to their earlier campaigns.

To advance your own interest in your education, best march with the United Students today.

OUR READERS' MINDS

Who are the murderers?

Send war views

To the Editor:

I was very pleased to see in the State News for Wednesday, May 17, that a number of people here are so concerned about human suffering that they plan to march on the Dow Chemical Company in Midland, Michigan, primary manufacturers of napalm for use in Vietnam. But I would question whether these people are forgetting a large number of suffering humans, for whom very few protest marches are being held by comparison.

I am speaking specifically of the citizens of South Vietnam, who are suffering indignities and death at the hands of the Viet Cong. There have been many acts of violence and terrorism recorded in the press which have resulted in the maiming or killing of Vietnamese civilians. The Viet Cong have been known, for example, to throw grenades into bars. Once in a major city they killed seven Vietnamese civilians and wounded two Americans. Another time, the Viet Cong smuggled a mine aboard a bus, killing many Vietnamese, especially women and children. The Viet Cong, having decided to capture a town, have often been known to enter the town, string up and publicly disembowel a few local leaders, perhaps rape a few women, kill a few children, burn a few huts, and then leave. After enough of this treatment, most Vietnamese peasants will give in to save themselves and their families. (This, incidentally, is the source of most of the Viet Cong's so-called popular support.)

Contrary to the acts of terrorism of the Viet Cong, the United States does not make the civilian population of Vietnam a deliberate target. American bombs and napalm are never dropped specifically onto civilian areas, but rather onto strategic military targets. That civilians are injured or killed is unfortunate, but it is not because they are the deliberate targets of the attack, but rather that they happen to be near a strategic target during an attack.

This is no effort to justify war. War is dirty business at best. However, we are committed to South Vietnam, and we must fulfill our commitment. Anyone who attacks our presence in Vietnam on the grounds that we are killing innocent people had best reconsider his reasoning. He is standing on shaky ground.

One of the problems of the left here is that numerous reforms are happening without them.

The greatest fear to any radical is when he becomes identified with the establishment. That's why there is so much talk of "sell-out" when Blanton is mentioned in leftist circles.

It is not easy to remain a radical, in the true sense of the term, and move into the recognized structure, therefore accepting, at least, a minimum of "their" rules. Since Blanton was never radical to begin with, his admission to the Student Board, Blue Key and Excalibur Honoraries was not really a surprise.

The left on this campus is increasingly limpid and ineffective.

The hippies are on acid so much that they can be counted on for little more than travelling. The Paper, sadly, seems to have set aside the objectives upon which it was founded to become a leftist toy, with no direction but with plenty of rambling articles that maybe one out of a hundred finish. Its great issues this year have centered around pictures of a snow storm, a philosophical discussion of where they are going, and a challenge to an honorary's right to expell one of its members.

SDS is, of course, occupied with the war, as it has been since it was founded. One of the problems for the left here is that numerous reforms are happening without them.

Disillusionment is running high, mainly because some people are beginning to take seriously principles that usually are ignored or compromised. Students are beginning to think just exactly what academic integrity means. All those nice pleasant terms which preface every constitution are taking on meaning. The result is discouraging when one is told that those phrases were never meant to be taken seriously.

The United Students is committed to us by a document which is a little older and sacred than the Williams Report. We have certain rights, under the national constitution, which cannot be forfeited by a certificate of admission to MSU.

Probably what will happen is that ASMSU will end up as the major campus protest group. That's what happened at Michigan this past year, and for the want of something better it could happen here.

ASMSU, with its large financial potential, could prove to be rather formidable in that role. By this time, student government has nearly consumed the United Students, both in their leadership and their issues. If this Jonah trick proceeds at the present rate, it won't be long until we can speak of the US as a thing of the past.

The causes of apathy

that its original tasks of reducing apathy and making the government more effective had been taken care of by the passage of time.

The committee came up with a document that resembled the Articles of Confederation more than a constitution.

The new constitution favored the individual houses with a not-quite three-fold increase in dues allotted to them, and with no control by the dorm government over how the money is spent. Nor is there any way for the houses to influence how dorm money is spent by the elected at large twelve-member all-hall governing board.

Not surprisingly, the committee was made up in large part of RAs, and RA candidates, who would have an interest in such an arrangement.

The committee, rather than simply presenting the new constitution to the residents, actively engaged in campaigning for it, erecting signs, posters, and making their presentations.

The RAs and RA candidates were treated by the Head Resident Adviser and the graduate advisers to a special two-hour presentation by the evaluation committee of its proposal. At the beginning of the campaign, presentations were made at house meetings, with no one opposed to the proposal being invited to speak. Mimeographed material "had all been used up" on occasion when the ad hoc opposition wanted to prepare material.

graph material "had all been used up" on occasion when the ad hoc opposition wanted to prepare material.

Distribution of opposition material was obstructed; rather than being placed in each mailbox by the reception desk, some of the handouts had to be addressed to each room before they could be distributed. No such obstruction occurred to pro-constitution material.

Some RAs and RA cronies, after conferences with graduate advisers, reversed their positions and flung themselves "wholeheartedly" onto the side of the opposition. They, and not the original members of the opposition were invited to speak at other house meetings. Needless to say, their presentations were noted for effectiveness and clarity. Leading opposition figures were permitted to speak at a few house meetings, opposed by speakers who almost inevitably were RAs, RA candidates, or "friends." Their claim was that they were acting as "interested students."

The day of the referendum found the proposition squeezed onto the top 1/2 inch of a ballot, the rest of which was occupied by selections for a "Name the grill" contest. Voting on the girls' side, was without presentation of ID card. On the men's side voting took place only during mealtime, in the line to the cafeteria.

When the voting was concluded, counting of the men's votes took place in the office of the Head Resident Adviser.

Present in that office were one of the graduate advisers, the elections chairman of West Fee, the RA who had chaired the Evaluation Committee, one neutral, and one member of the opposition. All but the latter two publicly declared themselves in favor of the proposal. The elections chairman is now running for chairman of the governing board.

The elections chairman pulled the votes out of a shoebox in which they had been placed, and announced the result of each one. Each of the others counted the votes, which were compared with the number of people who had signed the registry.

The proposal passed by 20 votes. There were eight more votes than registered voters. The member of the opposition objected, but the objection was overruled. The election was approved unopposed.

By the time the counting was over, two woman members of the evaluation committee, both RAs, had come over and announced the contest had been won on their side by 16 votes. When the counters emerged all except the opposition representative joined the Head Resident Adviser of the women's side, and the two woman members of the evaluation committee, in a celebration of victory--grinning happily, exchanging congratulations and their victory, and joyfully clutching one another.

I report all this not because I was opposed to the new constitution, which I was, nor was I shocked by the tactics used by the administration and their cohorts to get it through, because I have been in political campaigns before, and expected it.

I report it because I am sick of hearing the people who want to run students' lives complain about apathy, because apathy is a two-way street. It causes bad student government, but it is caused by governments and people who couldn't care less what students do or think.

Apathy produces them; they flourish in it.

Purple pencil prose

To the Editor:

Inconvenience and annoyance have finally overcome me. Maybe wasting some more time on a trivial subject will save others from the same feelings. I would like to pose the following question.

Is there a lack of pencil sharpeners in Bessey Hall because:

1. dull purple pencils work best on IBM answer sheets?
2. in this age of television and computers, writing is not necessary, hence sharp pencils are not needed?
3. everybody at MSU uses pens and is confident in not making mistakes?

GUARDS OVERPOWERED

Bandits rob Brink's truck of $630,000 near Boston

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP)—Three masked robbers with machine guns waited inside a closed bank Tuesday for a Brink's, Inc. armored car, ambushed the crew and cleaned the truck of $630,000 in cash.

The holdup brought to nearly $5 million, almost all in cash, the amount stolen in eastern Massachusetts since 1950. The series began in January, 1950, with the theft of $1,219,000 in cash from the Brink's counting house in Boston.

Obviously following a carefully prepared plan, the gunmen confronted a truck guard and a bank official when they entered the East Side branch of the First County National Bank.

The guard quickly divested of his hat and jacket. One of the robbers donned them to masquerade as a Brink's guard and surprise the guard who stayed outside in the truck.

The two guards and the bank employee were bound about the head with adhesive tape, only their noses and the tops of their heads showing. Then they were shoved into an anteroom and handcuffed to a gas pipe.

The gunmen, wearing stocking masks, dashed to the unguarded truck and drove to an isolated woodland road near the town line of Abington.

As the thieves were transferring the money bags into two passenger cars, Abington patrolman William Donaldson, 39, chanced on the scene. He was patrolling the area for stolen cars often abandoned in the area.

Donaldson said a man leaped from the truck "and pointed a machine gun at me. They made me lie face down on the road and I heard them use the name 'Eddie' several times. I thought I'd never live to see my 40th birthday."

Donaldson said he stayed on the ground until he heard the two cars drive away. When he went back to his cruiser, the radio had been ripped out and the ignition key thrown away.

He ran to nearby Quincy Avenue, flagged a passing motorist, and rushed to headquarters.

The exact amount of loot was subject to confusion for several hours. Reginald Cole, bank president, estimated the gunmen made off with $430,000 in cash and up to $10,000 in checks.

Another bank official put the loss at some $700,000 which he said included $460,000 in cash receipts from Raynham Dog Track.

The guards, Richard E. Halley, 61, of Brockton, and George Le-

Moine, 53, of Bridgewater, and the bank employee, Richard Guttererson, 38, were freed by police after a passerby reported noises coming from the closed bank.

Cole said he had no idea how the robbers got into the bank which was not due to open until 10 a.m. The truck arrived about 9 a.m.

Det. Capt. Francis Machini said the bandits apparently picked the front door lock which he said was not connected with the bank's burglar alarm.

Machini said the trio must have been in the building "quite some time because there were empty potato chip and sandwich bags littered about the floor."

Also found, he said, was a whiskey bottle, "just a pint, enough to keep their spirits up, but not enough to get crocked."

Fingerprint experts dusted the truck but there was no disclosure if prints were found. About $6,000 in change was left behind in the truck by the robbers.

Guttererson, who entered the bank with Halley, said the gunmen "all of a sudden appeared from different angles, one behind me and two in front." He described the leader as "very polite," telling the others not to hurt Guttererson or Halley.

Middle East again faces prospect of general war

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP News Analysis

The fierce hatred between Jews and Arabs in the Middle East dates back exactly 50 years, and there is no prospect that it will abate while Israel remains an independent state. That hatred has been responsible for years of turmoil and a succession of world crises. Now the world looks at another which could involve the great powers.

What seems an eternally insoluble problem had its beginnings in World War I. Before America lent a hand in 1917, the Allies' backs were to the wall. Russia was collapsing in revolution. England looked everywhere for straws to grasp. The search led to negotiations with Zionist and world Jewish leaders in what Winston Churchill called a "practical measure" seeking world Jewry's aid in the war effort.

The result was the Balfour Declaration, promising Britain's "best endeavors" to realize what Zionist leaders dreamed of - a Jewish nation in the ancient Biblical "Promised Land" of Israel - Palestine.

When the war ended, Britain received a League of Nations mandate in Palestine.

World War II hastened the pace of history. Nazi Germany's brutal treatment of Jews aroused world sympathy and, after the war, applied steam behind the Zionist cause. Jewish immigration increased sharply.

The United Nations, trying to apply reason to growing chaos, adopted a partition plan in 1947. It would give 56 per cent of Palestine to a proposed Israel, 44 per cent to a proposed Arab state. Jerusalem would be internationalized, accessible to all three great faiths, Jewish, Christian and Moslem.

Again the Arabs cried "betrayal." Arabs said Jews owned less than 10 per cent of land which would be given them, and Jews were by far the minority.

The Zionist underground mounted a campaign of terror against the British to end the mandate, and against Arab villages and towns, driving out the inhabitants. Before the British mandate ended May 14, 1948, Zionist forces occupied much of what had been set apart for Arabs and most of Jerusalem's proposed international zone.

News Analysis

A U.N.-sponsored truce ended the fight in mid-1949. Arabs withdrew in defeat.

In Egypt in 1952, a young officer named Gamal Abdel Nasser overthrew a corrupt monarch and Egypt became a Socialist leaning republic.

The Arab east's future changed abruptly in 1955 with a sudden intrusion of Soviet and Communist bloc influence in the form of arms to Egypt. With new strength, Nasser in 1956 announced nationalization of the Suez Canal. Britain and France conspired with Israel to attack Egypt that fall, and Israelis drove all the way to the canal as Egypt's army collapsed. U.S. and Soviet pressure brought the ill-starred adventure to an end.

The crisis subsided, but not Arab hatred. For two years thereafter, the Arab east was almost in permanent crisis. The climax came in 1958 with a rebellion in Lebanon, which brought a landing of U.S. Marines, and a bloody revolution in Iraq, ending the monarchy and the Baghdad Pact. Jordan's throne almost collapsed along with Iraq's.

Egypt turned inward to internal economic difficulties. Syria seceded from Nasser's United Arab Republic after a brief and restless union.

Nasser was impelled to support Syria in a quarrel with Israel over border clashes. The crisis mounted slowly but steadily since last fall, as if by its own momentum.

Now, once again, the Middle East looks at the unwelcome prospect of general war.

Globtrotters sold to Metromedia

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Metromedia Inc. announced Tuesday it had purchased the famed Harlem Globetrotters from the estate of founder Abe Saperstein for an undisclosed sum of money.

The announcement, made by George W. Eby, president of Metromedia's Ice Capades and Live Entertainment Div., said the acquisition is subject to the approval of the probate court handling Saperstein's estate.

"I'm quite confident that Abe would be delighted that his Globetrotter family has found a new home at Metromedia and will be part of its live entertainment group," Eby said.

"It is our hope that the Globetrotters, through Metromedia, will be seen and admired by additional millions of people around the world."

"Abe Saperstein's Harlem Globetrotters is one of the remarkable stories of our time and we are both proud and delighted that they will become a part of the Metromedia Group."

The Globetrotters were formed by Saperstein in Hickory, Ill., in 1927, when he was 24. Since then the team has played in 300 American cities and in 87 different countries, in many cases sponsored by the State Department.

The organization now consists of two separate teams.

Saperstein, who claimed to have done more airline flying than any other passenger in the world, completely owned the organization, which at one time featured such crowd pleasers as "Sweetwater" Clinton, Marquis Haynes, Reece "Goose" Tatum, and "Meadowlark" Lemon. He and the team starred in a movie story of the Globetrotters. Saperstein died in 1965.

Metromedia owns radio and television stations, advertising firms and motion picture production firms.

KENNEY SPEAKS OUT

By DENNIS CHASE
Associate Sports Editor

Gene Kenney says soccer will never replace baseball.

"Baseball is a fine game, a tremendous sport," said the MSU soccer coach. "They may speed up baseball because people seem to like a faster game nowadays. But it'll never be replaced."

Kenney was optimistic about the future of soccer in the United States six months ago. Nothing has happened since to change his outlook.

"I saw a soccer game one Sunday," he said. "It was slop-pily played, possibly because of the rain.

"But a great crowd turned out in St. Louis. It was the first time pro soccer had been played there."

Kenney called the crowd of 35,000 that a Houston game drew "encouraging." But, he said, the average crowd over the long haul will be around 11,000.

Kenney said the key to soccer's success lies in the high schools and junior colleges.

"Grand Rapids and a Livonia junior college, and 12 suburban high schools in Michigan have started playing soccer," Kenney said.

Kenney has been busy lining up new teams to play MSU next year. So far, he has signed the University of Denver for an Oct. 6 away game, and the Air Force Academy for Oct. 8.

Denver dropped football for soccer three years ago and is undefeated in soccer.

The Spartan soccer team had an unusual season last year. They were undefeated, and yet had the distinction of starting MSU on its string of ties by losing to Long Island in the NCAA semifinals, 2-2. The game was decided on the fewest number of corner kicks. Long Island had five to MSU's six.

"We outshot them 3-1, and could very easily have won," Kenney said. "But we have no alibis."

Terry Bidiak, outgoing captain of last year's team, said this year's players have talked about changing the corner kick rule.

"It would be better to play another game if, after two or three overtimes, no team can break the tie," Bidiak said.

Both Kenney and Bidiak are optimistic about MSU's chances next fall. Kenney said his biggest problem is deciding whom to play.

"We'll have more subs than ever before," he noted. "There are at least 16 players who could start for us. I won't decide who will start until the day before each game."

"We'll have no real lineup," he said.

One of Kenney's brightest prospects is sophomore Ernie Tuchscherer. Tuchscherer is a member of the U.S. Olympic soccer team.

sex-handle with care

Half of all teen-age brides are pregnant at the altar. Students agitate for "sexual freedom." Old codes crumble before a tide of sex-obsessed movies, books, magazines, even tv commercials. And between parents and young people a gap opens that neither seems able to bridge. Sex is the silent battlefield of the generations.

"They don't understand," says the boy or girl. "They don't understand," echo the parents.

And both are right. Yet both look for understanding, as the young person flounders in his revolt, and his elders cling to standards that once protected the home. Sex is natural, wonderful, God-given. But it can also be destructive, unless handled with care.

This frank new booklet offers deep insights for both generations. It helps you evolve a meaningful Christian approach to sex and marriage. It may help solve some of your problems -- to find understanding between generations, or between partners. It's free; send for it.

Jews urged to adapt to fit modern society

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

The problem Jewish society faces today is to understand Jewish law in terms of today's concern for the individual, Rabbi Eugene Borowitz said Monday at Akers Auditorium.

"The Jew in the Western world is a man who is of hybrid cultural nature," said Borowitz, a professor of Education and Jewish Religious Thought at Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion.

The Jew must adapt himself to fit into modern society, he said. Judaism has changed in modern times to fit this way of life, he noted. The Jews of the 19th century found Kant's emphasis on ethics and Hegel's emphasis on history handy intellectual tools to help get them out of the ghetto, he said.

Today only a small minority question whether Judaism can be adapted to the modern world, Borowitz said. "One can be both Jewish and modern," he said.

Jewish human values can be seen in the reaction of the Jewish community to the death-of-God theology. Thomas Altizer, leading proponent of the God-is-dead theology, made it clear that the implication of the death of God is moral decay, Borowitz said. But a Jew cannot be a Jew without a statement of morals, he explained.

"Even in its most secular state, the Jewish community has not been able to get to the point where it can take a free stance," he said. Thus there has been little response to Altizer in the Jewish community.

The Jewish version of the death of God is the death of God in history, he said.

Rabbi Rubenstein of the Hillel Foundation of the University of Pittsburgh contends that if something like Auschwitz can be allowed to happen, there must be no God, Borowitz said.

"But if there is no God why should you be so indignant? If there is no God, why shouldn't men be beasts?" Borowitz said. This is the paradox which surrounds contemporary Jewish thought.

There needs to be a basis for affirmation of human values, he said.

"We somehow know that it is good to be a person," Borowitz said. "What passes between persons is more important than ceremonies."

Institutions, he said, should be concerned with us as persons, not as digits.

"If you understand the difference between the use of the 'I-it' and the 'I-Thou,' you have a yardstick for measuring human value," Borowitz said.

The genius of existentialism is that it has a high regard for life, Borowitz said, yet living for oneself without recognition of man's relationship with humanity is impossible.

Deaf teens learn dances

A former go-go girl on a Lansing television show is heading a program to teach deaf and hard-of-hearing teenagers contemporary social dances.

Joy McConochie, East Lansing senior, has met with 15 teenagers at the Lansing YWCA every Wednesday night for four weeks.

Their progress will be seen at 2 p.m. Saturday on the "Swing Lively Show" on WJIM, channel 6.

The Lansing Community Council, which sponsors the teaching program, is looking for MSU students to participate in service programs in the Lansing area.

IN-DEPTH SERIES

New Nat Sci for next fall

By STEVE GATES
State News Staff Writer

A more in-depth approach will replace programmed learning in the basic Natural Science sequence next fall term.

In its first overall curriculum revision since 1957, the University College Department of Natural Science is offering a new 191, 192, 193 sequence to replace the familiar 181, 182, 183.

Nat Sci 191 will correspond to the present 183, 192 to 181, and 193 to 182.

According to Emanuel Hackel, chairman of the department, each new course "is aimed at a higher intellectual level," which, he hastened to add, "we feel our students will welcome."

Part of this upgrading will eliminate the present programmed learning sequences—a move which Hackel suggested will be less restrictive to students.

However, programmed texts will still be available to students for study guides, he said.

The new courses will emphasize the role of science in society. While the old introduction said, "The main objective of this course is to foster an understanding of the nature of science," the new one will begin, "This is a book about science, its nature, methods and humane dimensions."

According to Hackel, the emphasis change is a result of the department's increasing familiarity with its own aims and the philosophical development of science.

The new texts will emphasize concepts rather than details, he noted.

"If you try to snow students with minutiae, you will kill them," he said.

Hackel gave a "firm and dogmatic yes" to the question whether books would cover more modern topics of interest. The treatment bears a "closer relation to the social problems we face," he explained.

Texts for the new courses will be hardbound and have separate laboratory manuals.

Waivers and repeat exams will be initially somewhat complicated by the changes. Students wishing to waive NS 191 fall term will take the 183 waiver, since waiver exams for the new courses will not be ready until one term after the courses are introduced.

Students attempting fall term to remove a D grade in NS 181, however, will enroll in 191, though the subject matter is not the same.

Nat Sci 181 will not be offered fall term, and 182 and 183 will be eliminated in the two succeeding terms.

Red Chinese ousted

TOKYO (AP)—Red China has denounced officially by name a second high party member, ousted Defense Minister Peng Te-huai, Radio Peking said Tuesday.

Peng Te-huai was ousted in 1959, long before the current purge of party chairman Mao Tse-tung's foes began a year ago. The first to be denounced officially, Peng Chen, former Peking mayor and Politburo member, fell in the purge.

But like Pen Chen, Peng Te-huai has been assailed in wall posters since the purge broke, indicating that he has been active among Mao's foes.

Under the ground rules of the so-called "cultural revolution," no foe of Mao can be denounced officially until the word comes from the Central Committee. The idea apparently is to wait until it is certain an enemy can be crushed.

So far, for example, no official publication or broadcast has mentioned by name President Liu Shao-chi or party Secretary Teng Hsiao-ping, Mao's chief enemies.

Students, faculty to receive honors

The graduating Class of 1967 will honor six fellow students and five professors at a banquet at 6 tonight in Kellogg Center.

Faculty members to be honored are: Marjorie E. Gesner and James R. Hooker, associate professors of history; Russell B. Nye, distinguished professor of English and Pulitzer prize winner; William E. Sweetland, professor of education; and Allan Mandelstamm, associate professor of economics.

The faculty were chosen from nominations made by the senior class.

Sweetland Hooker

at large and voted on by the 67 members of the Senior Club, a group of this year's most outstanding seniors.

The names of the six seniors to be honored have not been announced.

President John A. Hannah and his wife will present the Board of Trustees' annual "High Achievement" award to the two men and two women who have maintained the best academic record during their stay at MSU. Two seniors will receive awards for the most outstanding activities at MSU this year.

MSU's Singing Statesmen will provide entertainment.

ASMSU members honored

Members of the second session of the ASMSU Student Board and Cabinet were honored Tuesday at a luncheon in the Union.

Former student board chairman Jim Graham presented the former Student Board members with certificates and plaques, and former cabinet vice presidents and directors with certificates.

Marti Ehrhart, Frankfort junior, was named outstanding cabinet member by Cabinet President Terry Hassold. Miss Ehrhart served as co-director of personnel development in the second session and is director of the same office for the third session.

Graham spoke at the close of the luncheon and reflected on the year and on student government in general. He commented on the "remarkable change" from the old All-University Student Government (AUSG) to ASMSU.

"It was a trade away from an ineffective system that had plenty of representation to an effective system that has a problem with representation," he said.

"The responsibilities and obligations of student government on this campus are tremendous," Graham said.

Graham also thanked advisers Lana Dart, George Hibbard, Louis Hekus and Norman Hekke for the perspective which they provide, even though the board did not take their advice automatically or without challenge.

He concluded with a suggestion to the third session of ASMSU that it attempt to communicate understanding of student government and its issues, as well as facts, to the student body.

Improved library facilities to be available winter term

By PHYLLIS ZIMBLER
State News Staff Writer

New and improved library facilities, including the new graduate wing, are expected to be completed and available to students by winter term.

The Sullivan Report, prepared by an ad hoc committee six years ago, provided the program for the expansion of present library facilities and the construction of the graduate addition.

Plans for the new library call for a separation into undergraduate and graduate libraries. The second and third floors of the present building will house the undergraduate division, with the remainder of the library, including the new addition, housing the graduate library.

The graduate and undergraduate libraries will be changing collections. A computer will determine what books circulate, and how often. In this way books which seem to be used more by either grads or undergrads will be placed in the appropriate library.

According to Richard Chapin, director of the library, most research books will be in the graduate library at the start of the new program. The undergraduate library will mostly contain copies of heavily used books from the graduate library.

After the completion of the new addition fall term, various walls will be knocked out in the present building. Extensive remodeling will be done to improve all library facilities.

During remodeling of the present building fall term, all books, whether destined for the graduate or undergraduate libraries, will be moved into the new addition. Floors will be remodeled separately so others can be used for reader space.

The plans call for utilization of present wasted space. Seating capacity will be doubled, and more individual study spaces will be available.

Group study rooms with blackboards for demonstrations will be added. Typing rooms will also be available, some with typewriters for rent and others empty so the student can bring his own. Individual carrels will be increased in number.

All assigned reading will be together on the second floor. At the present time, such reading is scattered throughout the library.

The library now has approximately 1,300,000 volumes. The normal growth is an additional one hundred thousand books per year.

The new library facilities will cost $4.3 million, according to Dale Pretzer, assistant to the director of the library. The state of Michigan will provide $3.3 million and the federal government is financing $1.3 million of the cost.

Pretzer said the new addition will add 151,442 new square feet to usable library footage. This will bring the total useful area to approximately 300,000 square feet.

The undergraduate library will continue having open stacks for everyone. The graduate library stacks will be open to graduate students, but closed to undergrads.

Graduate students, according to Pretzer, will present IDs for access to the graduate library. Undergrads will be able to use the books in the graduate stacks, but they will have to call for the books they want.

The new library facilities are to be geared to more individual needs. As Chapin explained, the graduate wants ten different books on a topic and the undergrads want ten copies of the same book. These differing needs will be serviced better by the separation of the two libraries, he said.

The card catalogs will remain in their present position, but they will be remodeled. These catalogs will serve both libraries.

Pretzer said that it is hoped that the bulk of the circulating books will be changed over to the new IBM card system by the opening of the divisional libraries Jan. 1.

Because the majority of circulating books will be in the undergraduate library, plans are for this library to be completely under the new IBM card system when it opens. The books remaining in the graduate library under the old system will be changed as soon as possible.

The new library set-up will abolish some jobs and add some new ones. Pretzer feels that it is quite possible the subtraction and addition of jobs will balance out.

Building blocks

The building blocks of knowledge employed in construction of the new library addition have increased in quantity since this glimpse of construction, taken last fall. Work is scheduled to be completed by Winter, '68. State News photo by Larry Fritzelan

EARNINGS UP

Living costs rise

WASHINGTON (AP)—Living costs climbed three-tenths of one per cent in April for the sharpest rise in six months, and declining food prices appeared about to swing upward again, the Labor Dept. said Tuesday.

While lower food prices in April helped offset higher costs for housing, clothing, transportation and medical care, preliminary May figures show wholesale farm prices rising.

"We're not out of the woods," commented Commissioner Arthur M. Ross, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, on the spur in prices.

The April rise boosted the government's consumer price index to 115.3. This means it cost $11.53 to purchase items worth $10 in the 1957-59 period on which the index is based.

But Ross said he still believes the nation this year will not experience price increases as big as last year's 3.3 per cent, the highest in a decade.

Wholesale prices dropped four-tenths of one per cent in April, but preliminary figures for May showed a five-tenths rise because of a sharp upturn in prices for farm products and foods, the bureau said.

Food is subject to the sharpest fluctuations of any item checked by the government in measuring both wholesale and retail prices.

In addition to food, prices were lower in April for new cars and appliances.

Housing costs were up three-tenths of one per cent, clothing four-tenths, transportation eight-tenths and medical care four-tenths.

The bureau also released a new report showing that 44 million American workers - more than half the labor force - gained 40 cents a week in after-tax earnings, but 25 cents of it went down the drain in higher prices.

The report said workers with three dependents averaged $89.15 a week after taxes, and single workers averaged $81.75, but purchasing power was slightly below last year because of higher taxes and prices.

About one million workers, mostly in the auto and related industries, will get cost of living pay hikes of two cents an hour because their labor contracts are pegged to the consumer price index.

Doctors' fees, hospital costs and other medical items - the fastest rising item on the index - are more than 9 per cent above a year ago, Ross said.

Viet war resumed after truce

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. and allied troops resumed operations Wednesday after a 24-hour cease-fire broken by 50 clashes and incidents that took the lives of 10 American soldiers.

The order from the U.S. Command to "resume normal operations" went out to American troops as the truce expired at midnight. There was no word of immediate renewed fighting.

The truce was in honor of Buddha's birthday. The Communists had announced a 48-hour cease-fire Monday and Tuesday.

In the sporadic fighting Tuesday, the U.S. Command reported 17 Americans as wounded, it listed 22 enemy killed and two suspects captured.

All through Tuesday U.S. planes flew reconnaissance missions over North Vietnam. Tass, the Soviet news agency, said in a dispatch from Hanoi that some American planes flew over that North Vietnamese capital. Hanoi radio said one U.S. plane was shot down over the capital but there was no confirmation in Saigon.

All was quiet in the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam, where U.S. Marines and South Vietnamese troops were pulling out of the southern half, apparently ending the first phase of an operation in the zone.

A dispatch from Da Nang near the zone said one of three Marine battalions sent into the buffer area last Thursday to root out North Vietnamese regulars had been withdrawn.

One battalion of the 4th Marine Regiment still remained well inside the southern half of the six-mile-wide zone, set up by the 1954 Geneva conference that ended the war in Indochina. The third battalion was dug in about 50 yards inside the zone.

On the right along the 17-mile-long eastern stretch of the zone, the six South Vietnamese battalions pulled out. They were helping resettle 11,000 civilians from the zone in order to clear a field of fire.

ASMSU assembly votes to modify its structure

The ASMSU General Assembly met Monday--without a quorum--to decide if it should dissolve itself.

The assembly, formed last fall, was originated as a communication link between the student board and students. Since that time a quorum has been present only once--at the first meeting. The assembly voted not to dissolve but to modify its structure in some, as yet unspecified way.

Some comments on the assembly from representatives were: --the assembly has succeeded so well in informing students that it has defeated its own purpose. Students feel they know enough about ASMSU now not to have to come to the meetings;

--there is no sense in having a deliberative body which has no power;

--there is a growing interest in student government, so students are going into hall government where they have some power.

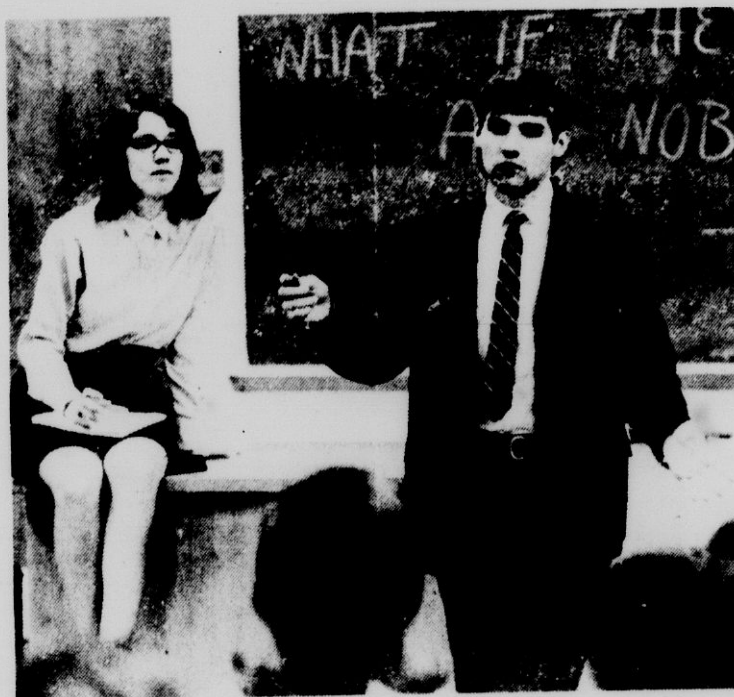

The assembly has no power over student board and can only recommend actions to the board.

In addition to discussing ways to improve the assembly, representatives also questioned members of student board on the handling of the women's hours proposal and the $25 allocation for the Committee on Compassion. Men's Halls Association has called for a referendum on the appropriation.

The recently passed Sleep amendment forbids the allocation of monies for a political purpose.

The $25 will go to buy antibiotics for the South Vietnamese people.

FOR WEST-SIDE TEENS

Home Ec, shop programs sought

By TRINKA CLINE
State News Staff Writer

A Lansing school official is considering a proposal to permit Lansing teenagers to use industrial arts and home economics facilities in the area's junior high and high schools.

The suggestion to Russell Maples, vocational education consultant for the Lansing school district, stemmed from last summer's disruptions on Lansing's West Side.

Saturday night dances and skating parties have been arranged to relieve some of the tension.

West Side youths commented recently, "It's a nice try, but sometimes boring. The same thing over and over."

An MSU graduate student who lives in the area suggested that more educational and practical programs such as wood working instruction would be of value.

When the idea was relayed to the Lansing Dept. of Parks and Recreation, which sponsors the present junior high programs, Asst. Director Theodore Haskell said the Board of Education controls use of the school's vocational facilities.

Programs in the industrial arts and home economics rooms would have to coincide with the parks and recreation programs, according to Maples.

"It would be mainly a question of organizing personnel and supplies," Maples said. "We'd need funds and trained help to work with the students. You can't use thousands of dollars worth of equipment for playthings."

Maples said he'd never really thought of this type program and would be interested in ideas on how to organize and conduct it.

With the facilities available, the questions remain on which schools to use, who to supervise and how to pay for students' supplies.

The Department of Parks and Recreation was recently appropriated funds to provide recreation and informal gatherings in five junior high schools beginning July 1.

Academic garb denotes degree

Black appears to be the most popular and fashionable color this spring.

With Senior Swing-out and graduation close at hand, graduating seniors, master's and doctoral candidates and faculty members will be garbed in gowns of basic black which fall in straight lines from an elaborate yoke.

The code governing academic apparel originated in 1895 in the Intercollegiate Commission. The degree and field of study of each participant is illustrated by the cap, gown and hood worn.

The style of the gown gives the clue to the degree to be granted to the wearer. The distinguishing feature of the bachelor's gown is long, pointed sleeves.

The master's candidate wears a gown with crescent-shaped sleeves while the doctoral candidate adds velvet sleeve panels to his bell-shaped sleeves. Faculty members wear the gown of their highest degree.

Colored tassels on the mortarboard or Oxford style cap are used to denote the field of study. While some universities use black tassels, MSU and other colleges and universities use tassels in the colors of the fields of study.

The colors for the academic areas, designated by the American Council on Education, are white for arts, letters and humanities; drab for business administration, commerce and accounting; lilac for dentistry; copper for economics; light blue for education; orange for engineering.

Brown is worn for fine arts; russet for forestry; crimson for journalism; purple for law; lemon for library science; green for medicine; pink for music; silver gray for oratory; olive green for pharmacy; dark blue for philosophy; sage green for physical education; peacock blue for public administration; salmon pink for public health; gold for science; citron for social science and gray for veterinary science.

The hood holds the heaviest symbolism. The size of the hood and the width of the velvet trim denote the level of the degree. Bachelors have the smallest hoods and doctors the largest.

The color of the velvet trim on the outside edge of the hood represents the field of study while the color of the lining signifies the institution which awarded the degree.

At Michigan State master's and bachelor's candidates by tradition do not wear hoods, but doctoral candidates and faculty members do.

Commencement will take on a new look this spring, according to Assistant Provost Herman L. King. All graduates will cross the platform to receive diplomas. The deans of the colleges, rather than President John A. Hannah, will award the degrees.

'Yes, your friends will be green with envy'

If you're counting on a new VW, you can stop at $1,855.32

total delivery price, including Tires, License and Michigan tax

In fact, when it comes to money, a VW will save you a lot of counting after you buy it, too. On gas bills. (It gets about 27 mpg.) On tires. (They average 40,000 miles.) It hardly ever needs oil between changes. And, since the engine is air-cooled you never have to dish it out for anti-freeze. So if you don't like to count, buy a Volkswagen. It figures.

Mobil M-3
Built for people who like to drive a bargain.

We've printed the price big because it's so little.

But where does it get you? And what?

The M-3's a workaday tire. A good reliable tire for short-trip driving. It'll get the kids to school, your wife to the shopping center, and you to the bowling alley. That sort of thing.

So drive in and drive a bargain.

US march

"The student board further endorses the US petition opposing legislative cuts and urge all genuinely interested students to join in the rally and march on the State Capitol . . . Every student stands to lose financially and educationally through complicity and inaction . . ."

The resolution is to be mimeographed and distributed to state legislators and presented to Lt. Gov. William Milliken and other state officials Thursday afternoon.

The US petitions currently being circulated have about 1,200 signatures, according to Marty Lechowicz, chairman of the US Committee on Tuition.

US members are to present the petitions to the governor's office while marchers listen to speakers on the Capitol steps.

MSU trustee Claire White and State Sen. Roger Craig have said they will speak at the Capitol.

Dzodin and sophomore member-at-large Brad Lang said Tuesday they would speak at the Beaumont Tower rally.

Jim Friel (Off - Campus Council), Dick Herrold (Interfraternity Council), Pete Ellsworth (vice-chairman), Hal Lashlee (Inter - Cooperative Council), Bill Lukens (Men's Halls Assn.) and Cindy Mattson (female member-at-large) also said they would participate in the march.

Chairman Greg Hopkins and Women's Inter-Residence Council president Joan Aitken said they did not know yet whether they would be there.

The board also voted to make sound equipment available to US for the rally, if not also for the meeting at the Capitol, and to appropriate paper for leaflets.

Petitions are to be turned in at living unit desks, where US members will pick them up, and at the US booth in the Union.

The petitions are available to be signed at Berkey and Bessey halls and the Union, as well as from individual students. A copy of the petition appears on page 2 of today's State News, and may be signed and turned in in the same manner.

Marijuana survey

Since ASMSU established the marijuana study committee it has talked with doctors and law enforcement officials on the medical and social implications of the drug.

The committee has also researched about 75 books and studies on the subject of marijuana.

One of its reports, from a presidential committee on drugs, states that marijuana should be reclassified. Reclassification would in turn make the drug available without a prescription.

The marijuana study committee will hold an open hearing on marijuana at 8 p.m. Monday in 31 Union.

The committee has invited a representative of the University to speak on MSU's position on marijuana, a doctor, a lawyer, and a state legislator.

Tuesday the marijuana committee will submit a final report to the ASMSU Student Board. It is expected at that time that Jim Sink, head of the committee, will request that ASMSU establish a standing committee to work toward the legalization of marijuana.

Sen. Roger E. Craig, D-Deerborn, plans to introduce a bill into the state legislature asking for the legalization of marijuana. Craig has been invited to speak at Monday's open hearing.
