

S. Viet civilian candidates consider supporting Huong

SAIGON P--Most of South Vietnam's civilian presidential candidates are reported discussing among themselves the possibility of pulling out of the race to rally behind one ticket, that of former Premier Tran Van Huong.

Informed sources said Thursday the mass pullout, if it comes, would be accompanied by a public denunciation of the government of Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu and Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, who are running as a military team in the election Sept. 3.

They said Thieu and Ky would be charged with everything from police harassment of representatives of the civilian candidates in the countryside to sabotage of the election progress, which would be difficult to check out in the time remaining before the vote.

While the political pot boiled, South Vietnamese police sources reported the police have arrested 23 Viet Cong terrorists, seized several arms caches and broken up elaborate plans to spread death and destruction in Saigon before the election.

They said the crackdown developed after investigation showed a youth arrested at a suburban checkpoint July 26--Nguyen Van Tam, 20--was the leader of a Viet Cong special action platoon, the Communist name for a terrorist unit. Captured Communist documents revealed orders for action intended to disrupt the return of South Vietnam to civilian rule through the people's ballots.

Seven of the 10 civilian candidates earlier announced they were boycotting the government's free transportation to the provinces. They had called off a trip last Sunday in Quang Tri, the first stop, and returned in a huff to Saigon, charging arrangements made by the government for the campaigning were inadequate.

They sent a letter of protest to Thieu and Ky, demanding that they insure adequate facilities and security and asked for an answer by midnight Wednesday. When no answer was received, the civilian candidates met twice Thursday. First they decided to boycott the 22-stop trips to the countryside until they heard from the government.

In the second meeting they were reported to have decided to discuss the possibility of pulling out of the race. According to one source, this would be done "to show to the world that it is not a fair election."

One of Tran Van Huong's campaign managers, Vo Ling Trieu, told The Associated Press: "There is a 60 per cent chance at this moment that the civilian candidates may get out just before the election to show that the military won't give them a fair election."

He said there were rumors that most would withdraw and support Huong.

Trieu is a former minister in Ky's government. He resigned with six other ministers last October in what was called a "Cabinet revolt" to embarrass the premier.

There is no doubt that Huong, considered the leading civilian contender, is respected by most of the other candidates both because of his age--63--and because he is a former premier. He is widely known throughout South Vietnam.

With backing of the nation's armed forces, the Thieu-Ky ticket is considered to have the best chance of winning. Even if rivals back Huong to face Thieu alone, most political analysts consider it is doubtful Thieu would lose.

It often is said that if you get 10 Vietnamese together to form a political party they will form 10 parties instead. Because of this it is unlikely that all of the civilian candidates would pull out to support Huong. But it would not be unlikely that six or seven pull out.

CIA issue looms as NSA Congress starts

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a five-part series on the National Student Association (NSA), whose 20th National Student Congress begins Sunday. ASMSU and State News representatives will attend.

By NORM SPERLING
State News Staff Writer

The National Student Association's (NSA) 20th annual Congress opens Sunday with NSA's recently disclosed involvement with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) expected to be a major topic under consideration.

Discussion of the CIA issue is scheduled to begin next week and NSA officers are expected to speak on it several times. Motions to change or abolish NSA because of CIA involvements are expected at a two-week congress. Backers of the motions charge that NSA has lost credence with students because of the CIA affair.

For total coverage of the NSA conference, State News Executive Editor Eric Pianin will be at the University of Maryland campus Aug. 13-20. He will be replaced by Editor-in-Chief James Spaniol, who will report on the following week of activities.

The Congress will take place at the University of Maryland in College Park, Md.

The CIA started giving money to NSA secretly in 1952 through a variety of innocent-sounding foundations and organizations.

In February, 1967, Ramparts Magazine printed a story disclosing this relationship. NSA had already decided CIA dependency was undesirable, and had cut off all CIA support two months before Ramparts published its expose.

CIA money came to the NSA in amounts up to 80 per cent of the annual budget--sometimes about a half a million dollars. This was known only by a few officers who had been cleared for security and had signed security oaths. Everyone else thought that innocent foundations were financing the international projects.

Through the McCarthy Era and the latter part of the Eisenhower Administration, the CIA gradually wanted more and more influence in the way their money was spent. The purpose was no longer to make sure America would be represented in international student meetings, but to find out what foreign students were thinking.

NSA staffers going abroad were asked to write reports for the files on their experiences with foreign student leaders. The reports apparently went to the CIA.

CIA involvement showed no sign of slackening after President Kennedy took office. While he knew of the relationship (as did Eisenhower and Johnson), there

RIOT COMMISSION REPORTS

Negro guards needed

WASHINGTON P--President Johnson's special commission on riots recommended Thursday that more Negroes be recruited into the National Guard. The President promptly asked the Defense Department to move toward this goal.

The National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders also recommended that riot-control training of both the Guard and the regular Army be improved and expanded, and that greater care be used to insure that the Guard has competent officers. Johnson acted affirmatively on these requests also.

In a memo to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Johnson called the commission's first recommendations "a matter of the highest emergency" and added, "I know you will give it your immediate attention."

The commission, named last month in an aftermath to the rioting which scourged Detroit and other cities, is not expected to make its first over-all report on the causes of and possible cures for the disorders until next March.

But David Ginsburg, the group's executive director, told reporters it was decided to make these interim recommendations after hearing testimony Wednesday from Cyrus Vance, Johnson's special representative in the Detroit crisis.

Ginsburg said the commission decided to write to Johnson after reviewing a state-by-state statistics chart which showed that as of Dec. 31, 1966, only 1.5 per cent of the Army Guard and only .6 per cent of the Air Force Guard is Negro.

The charts show 404,996 officers and enlisted personnel in Army Guard units in the United States, with only 4,638 Negroes. In the Air Guard, only 475 Negroes are listed among a total of 80,222 officers and airmen.

"The commission had the feeling that Negroes are inadequately represented," Ginsburg said.

At the briefing, Ginsburg gave examples of individual states which had a disproportionate ratio of whites and Negroes, including three--Wyoming, North Dakota and New Hampshire--which had no Negro Army Guardsmen.

In answer to a question, Ginsburg said the commission feels more Negroes in the Army and Air National Guards would make them more effective as an instrument of the federal government and in quelling riots in urban centers.

Ginsburg said one of the main factors behind the lack of Negroes in the Guard is the reluctance of some employers to allow workers time for training.

He said also another factor is the lack of National Guard units in areas populated largely by Negroes.

Ginsburg said he discussed the subject with McNamara Thursday morning but the defense secretary did not say how he proposes to implement the commission's recommendations which were transmitted to Johnson in a letter signed by Chairman Otto Kerner, governor of Illinois, and Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, the vice chairman.

The letter, approved unanimously by the panel according to Ginsburg, said the "commission believes strongly that this deficiency must be corrected as soon as possible. To do so will require the combined efforts of the Department of Defense, state officials and the Negro community."

The commission also recommended that special riot-control training be given during the next few weeks.

Ginsburg said the commission "has no intention at this time" to hold hearings in major cities but added that members will visit communities hit by riots and disorders informally to familiarize themselves with the situation.

The commission, which did not meet Thursday, "will hear more witnesses in executive session next Tuesday," he said.

A spokesman for the National Guard Association said the low percentage of Negro members is due in large part to the fact that few Negroes seek admission to the Guard units in which membership is voluntary.

forcement and fire officers and their equipment so that a city in trouble can call on the men and equipment of neighboring cities if needed.

They also recommended the strengthening of the state police to better assist local authorities.

Also attending the meeting were Govs. John Love of Colorado, Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland, John H. Chafee of Rhode Island, Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylv-

Oil-rich region in Nigeria falls to Biafran troops

LAGOS, Nigeria P--A Nigerian government spokesman confirmed Thursday that the oil-rich Midwest region is in the hands of Biafran forces and Nigerian army mutineers.

The Biafrans struck a two-prong attack across the Niger River Wednesday and joined up with army rebels to capture the Midwest region's capital of Benin and the oil port of Warri.

The Nigerian government in Lagos said in a statement that officers of the Ibo tribe "deceived their loyal colleagues into believing that a federal attack on the Eastern region was imminent and that they were to be used in this attack."

The government said that under this guise loyal troops were disarmed. The statement said the government had evidence that food and other commodities have been confiscated and are being transported to the east.

DeGaulle rips foreign policy critics

PARIS P--President Charles de Gaulle, sharply responding to mounting criticism at home and abroad, struck back at his critics Thursday night branding them experts at disparagement and apostles of decline.

Defending his policies, De Gaulle summoned his countrymen to reject his detractors and build an independent France with a role of its own in world affairs.

In a nationwide radio and television talk, De Gaulle brusquely wrote off those who have taken issue with his stand on the Vietnam war, his reluctance to let Britain into the European Common Market, his encouragement of French-Canadian separatists and his domestic reforms.

He declared: "Thus, the fact that France, without disavowing in any way the friendship that it has for the Anglo-Saxon nations, but breaking with the absurd and outdated conformity to self-effacement, is taking a position appropriately French on the subject of the Vietnam war, or on the Middle East conflict, or on the building of a Europe which is European, or on the upheaval which would affect the Community of the Six (Common Market) with the entry of Britain and four or five other states, or on relations with the East, or the international monetary question, or, only yesterday, on the unanimous and indisputable will for emancipation that the Frenchmen of Canada displayed around the president of the French Republic--all this stupefies and exasperates the apostles of decline."

De Gaulle reviewed his actions since his return to power in 1958 in an obvious attempt to counter rising discontent. Nothing, he said, is more important than for France to rebuild its influence and power.

"This is why," he said, "even if the immediate advantage was perhaps not very apparent, we objectively made contact with Peking." This was a reference to his recognition of Communist China in 1964.

De Gaulle repeated his opposition to the power blocs led by the United States and the Soviet Union and said France in withdrawing from the military side of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization left the "system of blocs."

France, by this action, he said, has perhaps given the signal for a general evolution toward international relaxation of tensions.

Ingham County Dem resolution supports sliding-scale tuition

The Ingham County Democratic Committee Wednesday passed a resolution supporting MSU's Board of Trustees for adopting the graduated tuition plan based on ability to pay.

Harold J. Spaeth, an MSU political science professor who drafted the resolution, expressed confidence in the administration's ability to implement the plan.

The resolution said, in part: "The MSU trustees are to be commended for providing flexibility in the administration of the new fee system, by delegating to university officials, responsibility for implementing the ability to pay tuition plan. Given the professional competence of the university administration officials, we are confident of their ability to implement this program with as much success as they have in other areas of the university's concern."

Spaeth called problems raised by the University's new system "a simple-minded smokescreen."

If the administration can develop separate colleges in a short amount of time, said Spaeth, they can handle a specific educational matter such as a tuition raise.

"My premise," said Spaeth, "is that educational opportunities should not be limited by economics."

He quoted two sections of the 1966 state Democratic Platform: that educational opportunities should not be limited by economic resources, and that taxation should be based on ability to pay.

Spaeth expressed confidence that the state central committee, meeting in September or October, and the state convention, meeting next summer, would adopt a similar resolution.

OUR READERS' MINDS

Tuition plan sabotaged

To the Editor:

We are happy to see that Trustee Don Stevens is sticking to his guns on the ability-to-pay tuition plan, and is not being intimidated into abandoning the principle of the graduated plan in the face of the deliberate attempt to sabotage it by the administration.

What is occurring as a result of the new plan is woven into the fabric of American political life ("The President proposes, Congress disposes," updated by Neustadt's insights to "The President proposes, Congress and the bureaucrats dispose of . . ."), and this should not obscure the basic problems.

It is almost inevitable, after the State News reported John Hannah's opposition to the tuition plan, that the administration, in the form of May and company, would find it "impossible" to administer, except by narrow and damaging interpretations.

"Implementation," of course, is the rock upon which many a good principle has bleached its bones. And implementation is up to the administration.

We knew the game as soon as we received the notices for our W-2 and Income tax forms (not copies, mind you), and witnessed the temper of the fury at "invasions of privacy." We, personally, as Case of New Jersey and Hart of Michigan, have nothing to hide from full disclosure of our incomes, but might we point out that the administration could have avoided twisting the knife by some other method of "implementation."

Why not parent statements, notarized, attesting to gross income? But for an administration that doesn't trust its students, this might be difficult to swallow. And accepting affidavits from parents of these students might raise administrative suspicions to the boiling point. Surely, the cry of "impossible to administer" would be heard throughout the land.

The unfortunate aspect of all this is that perceptive students, such as Mr. Friel (State News, 8/7), are pushed into disclaiming what is, essentially, a very innocuous sliding scale plan (as Mr. Shura-leff's State News letter of 8/8 points out in an excellent manner). Of course it is a form of suicide to listen to the elderly, rural bound legislature regarding out-of-state tuition hikes, and of course it is a calculation to continue to oppress the graduate student economically and intellectually, but this should not obscure the fact that across this land there is an interrelated, systematic attempt by the "haves" to protect their privileges, and to crush any equitable treatment to the "have-nots," no matter how innocuous it may be.

Of course May and company could administer the plan by taking into consideration "variations on the basis of an individual's situation," and the hundreds, "undoubtedly thousands" (but we doubt this) of married undergraduates living on their own income, no matter what age, would be able to pay tuition on the basis of their returns.

But they will continue to play politics, and make the rules as rigid as possible. The administration knows what it is doing; they are following their ideological temper, and gaining private approval of powerful allies.

Tuition critics miss point

May I suggest that both your editorials and the letters published on your editorial page have so far concerned themselves with the incidentals rather than the central issue of the new tuition policy at MSU? I submit that the central issue is the percentage of income devoted to one's tuition, and on this basis the new policy discriminates against lower-income rather than higher-income families, though less so than in the past.

The breakdown is as follows for families with one child attending MSU:

Families over $16,667: less than 3 per cent of annual income.

Families $11,800 to $16,667: 3 per cent of annual income.

Families below $11,800: more than 3 per cent of annual income.

When seen from this point of view, your editorial policy appears one-sided in the extreme. Furthermore, the purported unconstitutional features of the new plan seem non-existent, unless one wishes to consider reverse graduation also unconstitutional.

Let me hasten to add that some of the peripheral issues you raise, such as the difficulty of administering the new plan, are undeniably important. In addition, there is one issue at which you have only hinted, namely the threat of retaliation by the legislature.

On the whole, however, you concentrate on pleas for privacy on the one hand and injustices to special groups of students, such as those who have brothers and sisters at MSU, on the other. Has it not occurred to you and your readers that privacy might not weigh in the balance with equality of opportunity or that under an equal-tuition plan a lower-income family might have more than one child at MSU?

I should also, I suppose, point out that I am not terribly vulnerable to charges of ulterior motives on this subject, since my wife is a part-time student and will apparently be paying fees equivalent to those of a similar student from a family whose income is $16,667, or $50,000, or even more.

More bombing sought, but no answers

Raging almost as fiercely as the actual war in Vietnam, the debate at home received a renewed step-up this week as critics in and out of Congress focused their attention on the air war in the North.

Some of the major developments:

--House Republican leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan says he opposes sending additional troops to Vietnam because he believes high-level orders are hampering air operations. Sources--which he cannot reveal--say top officials have ordered that air strikes spare most legitimate North Vietnamese targets.

--South Vietnam's chief of state and leading presidential candidate, Nguyen Van Thieu, declared more troops are needed to win the war in South Vietnam. However, he stated that, if elected, he would request a halt to U.S. bombing in the North.

--After listening to secret testimony by key military commanders, several senators on the preparedness subcommittee demanded increased bombing of military targets in North Vietnam.

Said Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., and head of the subcommittee: unless these military targets are knocked out and certain "sanctuaries" bombed, the bloody jungle war may "continue indefinitely."

--The Johnson Administration remained cool last week toward rumors that a pause in bombing may be considered within the next few months as a peace move. Officials indicated a concentration of U.S. and allied military efforts was more likely.

--And American soldiers continue to die striving for a military victory where there is not one to win.

Asserting that almost half of North Vietnam's military facilities and defense installations are officially forbidden as targets by high-level policy restraints, Ford and Stennis are in effect calling for an all-out war in Vietnam. Again we ask, is a military victory conceivable? Military escalation appears to be only a blind alley. Even if possible, a decision by force will not create support for a single Vietnamese government, which should be our ultimate aim there.

Negotiations for peace are long overdue. A pause in the bombing would be one step in good faith by the U.S. in seeking those negotiations.

The major issue is not, as Ford and Stennis seem to view it, improved accuracy of air attacks, but a halt to them.

Polarized hatreds hinder attempts at racial harmony

We may not know what will heal the tensions between blacks and whites in the American cities, but we know what makes them worse.

The answer is: polarizing.

It is what happens when the choices on the contesting sides get narrowed, and you are pushed relentlessly to one pole or another. Hate black or hate white--both are all-out polar positions. Total hostility to the whites; total repression of the blacks: these attitudes are forms of each other.

There are still very few on either side who hold these extreme positions, but there are a number of forces at work which are pushing in that direction. The real danger point comes when the polarizing forces on both sides, feeding on the violence, take on momentum and drown out any moderating voices.

At that point only the voices of extremists have any chance of prevailing: "Whoever is not with us is against us," "Whoever doesn't hate Whitey to the death is an Uncle Tom and stands with Whitey," "To Hell with urban renewal, and earn-and-learn retraining programs, and government-and-business partnership slum projects. The only solutions are at the end of a policeman's club and a National Guard gun."

This is what polarizing drives toward. At one pole there is no stopping point except unceasing guerrilla war, with every Negro area bent on getting into the act. At the other pole there is no stopping point short of apartheid.

I have been taking part, here at Washington, in a conference of urban project workers and officials. They don't believe in diabolism as an explanation of what has happened--the theory that some devil has entered the blacks and needs to be exorcised by force.

Nor do they believe in the money theory--that if you will only pour out enough money into the Negro ghetto, all will be well. I found instead a determined experimental drive: toward action, not inaction; but toward action that will have some meaning, rather than a blind emotion-laden reactive action.

Unfortunately the mood of Congress is a grim no-nonsense mood. "We have heard enough," they say, "from the long-hairs, the psychiatrists, the professors, the welfarists, the do-gooders. Now let's have some action and pass some laws."

The first law is to crack down on men like Carmichael and Rap Brown, to keep them from crossing state lines to stir up hatred of whites. But alas, it is much easier to keep men from crossing state lines than to keep ideas and hate-laden pronouncements from flaming across the nation, community to community.

No, we can't improve on the idea of persistent, experimental reflective action. President Johnson is trying hard to cool Congress, cool the anti-Negro Negroes, cool the anti-Negro whites. At a far more dangerous moment, at the height of the bank panic in 1933, Franklin Roosevelt had to speak out against fear ("the only thing we have to fear is fear itself") before he could speak out for concrete anti-depression measures.

Every new law, every new action, yes, every inaction too, must today be measured against what it does to prevent or spread the polarizing of hates. If we can arrest the polarizing drive, then we can win time to build common action on common ground between the races.

The hate carriers don't want common action which would integrate and unite the races because they don't believe there is any common ground. Long ago Georges Sorel, the founder of revolutionary syndicalism, pointed out the role of violence in a revolutionary situation.

What it amounts to is this: When you know you don't yet have the people on your side, you must use violence in order to provoke a greater violence from your enemy--and that violence in turn will bring the people over to your side. This is the deliberate use of violence to polarize hatreds. Hence the fire-setters and the snipers.

The answer must come from the black people themselves. When a riot breaks out, and the large majority of blacks decide they will no longer serve as protective hosts for the incendiaries and snipers, the violence phase will be over.

If only we could get the Vietnam war over too, and the crippling tax burdens, then the nation--white and black alike--could turn to the real business of finding and carrying out solutions for its inner ills.

Sorensen visits Soviets seeking more US trade

MOSCOW (AP) -- Former presidential adviser Theodore E. Sorensen said Thursday his visit to Moscow includes exploratory talks with Soviet trade officials on what he called a "major high-level policy change."

Sorensen met Tuesday with N.G. Osipov, deputy minister of foreign trade, and hoped to meet today with acting Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov.

"The size of the market for American products here is very great indeed," Sorensen said in an interview. "And I think we underestimate the number of things they could sell us."

He said his talks with Soviet officials this week have always included Vietnam, a big stumbling block in efforts to increase U.S.-Soviet trade.

"I keep telling them we've got to get moving on trade before Vietnam is over -- that may be a long time from now," Sorensen said.

"They seem to be responsive to this line of thinking," he said. U.S. exports to the Soviet Union now total about $45 million a year, only about 1 per cent of U.S. foreign trade. Soviet exports to the United States also total about $45 million annually.

3 GIs killed in N. Korea

SEOUL, Korea (AP) -- Three American soldiers were killed and about 16 injured Thursday in two attacks by North Koreans across the demilitarized zone, a U.S. 8th Army spokesman said. At least one South Korean soldier was reported wounded in the latest incidents in a stepped-up Communist campaign of violence along the armistice line between North and South Korea.

The two ambushes brought to 15 the number of Americans reported killed in border clashes since last November. The last previous attack occurred July 16, when about 10 North Koreans overran a U.S. position and killed three Americans.

The Communists have carried out about 110 attacks on South Korean border forces in the past nine months, killing about 80 soldiers. The United Nations Command says 162 North Koreans have been killed or taken prisoner.

North Koreans were ordered by Premier Kim Il-sung last October to increase their "preparations for war" and to adopt more aggressive guerrilla tactics in South Korea.

Since then, U.S. Maj. Gen. Marvin C. Demler, senior U.N. Command member of the joint armistice commission, has said maintenance of the armistice "has reached a critical point."

South Korean officials have reported a growing number of guerrilla incidents well south of the demilitarized zone.

In one of Thursday's attacks, the U.S. spokesman said, North Koreans used grenades and automatic weapons to attack a truck in the U.S. 2nd Infantry Division area on the western front about 35 miles north of Seoul. Three Americans were killed, and about 15 Americans and a South Korean were injured.

Sources said the American casualties were members of an artillery unit of the U.S. 7th Infantry Division.

In the second attack, four or five North Koreans fired from a distance of about 200 yards on an American patrol about 500 yards south of the demilitarized zone. The U.S. spokesman said one American was seriously wounded and his scout dog was killed.

70% of injured Yanks return to Viet battlefield

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Previously undisclosed government figures show that nearly half of the thousands of servicemen wounded in Vietnam never even go to a hospital.

Seventy per cent of those who are hurt seriously enough to require hospital care eventually return to duty either in Vietnam or elsewhere.

These figures shed new light on statistics which to date list 75,882 Americans wounded in Southeast Asia operations since 1961.

The armed services compiled a numerical breakdown of wounded casualties mainly in an effort to show that the toll is less ominous in reality than it looks on paper.

Records of war wounded between January 1965 and last May disclose that of the 64,189 listed as injured, all but 10,056 have returned to duty.

"In addition, some of the 7,456 men now remaining in hospitals will undoubtedly be eventually returned to duty," a spokesman said.

Of the 64,189, a total of 30,779 or 48 per cent continued on or returned to duty without hospitalization.

Of the 33,410 or 52 per cent who required hospital care, 14,820 returned to duty in Vietnam while 8,534 took up assignments in other areas.

Among the remaining hospital cases, 1,585 were discharged with disability, 1,015 died, and the rest were still in hospitals at the time the figures were drawn up.

There are about 15 hospitals in Vietnam plus the hospital ship Repose stationed near Da Nang. A man goes to one of these if he is likely to recover in two weeks.

If, however, it appears he will require 60 days convalescence, and has more time than that left in his tour, he is sent to a hospital in the Philippines, Okinawa or Japan. After recuperating he may serve out his enlistment in Vietnam.

Those who require a longer period of treatment are returned to hospitals near their homes in

Hong Kong border post seized by Chinese mob

HONG KONG (AP) -- A Communist Chinese mob crossed the Hong Kong border early Friday, captured a border guard post, seized its weapons, and stood over a British official with an ax while forcing him to sign a paper.

A British army officer was held at gun point. Several police and enlisted army men were held hostages for several hours inside the border post station.

A government spokesman said the signed paper was an agreement to remove barbed wire barricades protecting the Hong Kong side of the border and pay compensation to Communist Chinese for a "deliberately contrived and fake accident at the barricade."

"The agreement was signed under the duress and threat of death and therefore is a worthless, nonvalid piece of paper," he said.

It is the most serious incident along the tense Hong Kong-China border since a mob of Communist Chinese attacked across the border July 8, killing five Hong Kong border guards in a burst of rifle and machine gun fire.

After getting the signed paper, the Communist Chinese handed back the weapons they seized, released the men held hostage, and recrossed the border into China triumphantly waving the agreement and jubilantly shouting and singing their own praises.

There were no injuries and an early morning Hong Kong government statement referred to the incident as "a critical situation resolved without bloodshed."

But there could be no disguising the fact that the Communists had pulled off the incident which they will try to use for propaganda effect against the British.

New Negro politicians rise in Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) -- Mississippi's new Negro politicians, cheered by the victories or near-victories of almost half the Negroes who ran for office in Tuesday's Democratic primary, predicted Thursday integrated policies will help improve race relations.

Fifteen Negroes won county offices outright. Of the total of 74 Negro candidates, 19 others won places in the Aug. 29 runoff.

Although a clear majority in the primary is technically only the Democratic nomination, the Negro nominees will apparently have no opposition in the general election in November since the deadline for qualifying has passed.

The election gives Mississippi more Negro officeholders than Alabama, which has fewer than a dozen concentrated in Macon County, a heavily-Negro southeastern Alabama county where Lucius Amerson is sheriff.

Dirksen proposal vetoed by Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Senate rejected 51-35 today an attempt by Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, to prohibit any Export-Import Bank financing of sales or rental of U.S. equipment to Communist nations.

The attempt was inspired by President Johnson's decision to support a sale of $50 million worth of U.S. machine tools for use in an auto plant to be built in Russia by the Italian Fiat Co. Dirksen declared there should be no such deals "as long as Soviet arms are being used to slaughter American boys in Vietnam."

The bill to which the amendment was offered would extend the bank for five years and increase its lending authority by $4.5 billion.

NO APPLICATION NEEDED

Scholarships hiked to meet fee increase

MSU full-tuition scholarships for in-state students will be increased to cover the recent fee hike, it was decided Thursday.

This means that in-state students on full MSU scholarships will not have to apply for fee reductions.

Michigan Higher Education Assistance Act (MHEAA) scholarships will also be increased, said Kermit H. Smith, director of fee determinations.

"We've been telling them (students with MHEAA) it's best to apply for fee reductions so there would be no hangup. Now they don't have to apply," Smith said.

The scholarships will be expanded by the University.

Other scholarship increases will have to be worked out between the University and the sponsor, Smith said.

The decision solved what Smith called the second biggest problem in fee determination--second to the problem of cases involving married and/or self-supporting students or students in other special support situations.

Another problem, he said, is that of students on the GI Bill. Their veterans' aid is considered part of their income, not a scholarship.

Since most of these students are self-supporting, they are being asked for statements of their income and their assistance from the Veterans' Administration.

Smith said his office would start mailing notices of fee reductions by Monday.

Many applications have been received by registered or certified mail, and the forms will be returned by certified mail, he said.

A minimum of information from the tax returns and W-2 forms is being copied for the student's folder and the original materials returned to the parents.

Smith said a total of 2,170 applications have been received since Aug. 3. Students who qualify by Aug. 31 will have their fee reductions printed on their fall term fee cards.

Decentralized counseling offered

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

When a student has exhausted the systematic care of his friends, roommates, and resident adviser, the Counseling Center's staff will offer advice for problems in academics, career planning, or personal relationships.

Located in the Student Services building, the main counseling center has branches in Brody, East Campus, South Campus, and the three small residence colleges.

"Decentralization to the complexes and small colleges was a matter of practicality and convenience," said Ross W. Matteson, assistant director of the counseling center.

Matteson said counselors at the complex level can work more easily with residence hall advisory staffs.

"We also ran out of space in the Student Services building and had to expand to accommodate students," he added. The main counseling center now even has offices in the Student Services basement.

Counselors were first moved to the complexes when Wonders Hall used a full-time counselor in January, 1965. A second counselor soon joined him and Brody's center opened in September, 1965.

Hubbard Hall opened its counseling branch last fall with four full-time staff members.

Complex branches will expand this fall, with three full-time, two half-time counselors and one graduate assistant in Brody, South Campus residents can see the same number of counselors at Wonders.

Hubbard will use eight part-time counselors and one graduate assistant. Justin Morrill College (Phillips-Snyder) will employ a part-time counselor as will the new James A. Madison College (Case) and Lyman J. Briggs College (Holmes). Apartment counselor also works at Bessey Hall.

Of the 9,300 students receiving individual help at the counseling center last year, 26 per cent sought help at the complex branches. These contacts ranged from extended counseling to "routine" changes of major, Matteson said.

Matteson added that the number of students using the complex centers increased nine per cent last year, indicating the growing tendency for students to visit a counselor near their dormitories rather than at the main center.

Students visiting the counseling center for the first time follow a simple procedure. A counselor on "screening duty" talks with the student for 15-20 minutes.

The screening policy started last year, proved successful, and will continue this year.

Counselors check the nature of the student's problem in these interviews and try to determine how the center can best help the student, with either long-term or short-term counseling.

If a student needs immediate help, however, the screening interview itself lengthens into a full session with the counselors.

If the student's problem is not that urgent, the screening committee then reviews the student's case and assigns a counselor, who will schedule either individual or group discussions.

At other times, the student will be referred to the dean or academic department for advising.

With this method, the student doesn't have to sign up in advance for a counseling interview only to discover he should go to another office.

"We try to emphasize the positive and preventative side of counseling rather than therapy and curing," stressed Matteson.

He added that sometimes a combination of problems is involved that fails to fit into the usual categories of psychological, academic or personal-social problems.

"All these conferences are kept strictly confidential," said Matteson. "None of the information divulged by the student is released unless he requests it."

Besides discussions with counselors, advising frequently includes tests (aptitude, personality, interests) and referral to materials in occupational libraries at the main center and branches.

Students also solve problems through groups. Over 80 groups of six to eight students each were formed last year.

These groups included no-preference freshmen, couples interested in marriage counseling, or students with personal or academic problems.

COMPETITION UNDERWAY

Walsh, Williams to swim in AAU Championships

Ex-Spartan swimming star Ken Walsh, the world record holder in the 100-meter freestyle, and senior Pete Williams will be among the competitors at the AAU Men's National Swimming and Diving Championships which begin today at Oak Park, Ill.

Walsh, an MSU star for the past three seasons, set the world mark of 52.6 swimming the opening leg of the United States' 400-meter freestyle relay team at the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg, Canada late in July.

Walsh will be taking a sales training job with a major petroleum company, and will be able to train for the 1968 Olympics.

Williams, who will be one of the key men on the MSU squad during the coming season, will swim the 200 and 400 meter individual medleys and the 200 meter backstroke.

Walsh did not compete in this meet last year, but Williams was fifth in the 200 meter backstroke and 400-meter individual medley at last year's meet. Williams did not place in the 200 meter individual medley last year.

Walsh and Williams will be trying to earn a berth in the Student World Games to be held in Tokyo Aug. 24-Sept. 4.

Podres disabled by tendonitis

DETROIT, Mich. (UPI) -- The Detroit Tigers Thursday placed Johnny Podres on the disabled list because of tendonitis in his left elbow.

The Tigers called up Fred Lasher, 25, a relief pitcher with an 0.54 earned run average, from their Toledo farm club to replace Podres.

The loss of Podres hit unexpectedly as the Tigers prepared for the fourth and final game of a crucial series with league-leading Chicago, the start of what Detroit hopes will be a drive to the pennant.

Podres, who automatically will be sidelined for 21 days under the disabled list league rules, has a 3-1 record this year for eight starts and 12 relief appearances. He has been used as a reliever and spot starter.

Jim Campbell, General Manager, made the move after doctors examined Podres and said he would be unable to pitch for "two or three weeks."

Lasher was hustled to Detroit in time for Thursday night's game. He posted an 8-1 record and 0.68 era with Montgomery of the Southern League before being promoted to Toledo where he has yielded only one run in 16 2/3 innings for an 0.54 era.

Baseball team ends first summer season

Clinic corrected

The National Summer Gymnastics Clinic, which will be held at MSU, is scheduled for August 20-25, not starting Sunday and continuing through the 25th as was reported in Thursday's State News.

The clinic, under the direction of MSU gymnastics Coach George Szypula, attracts gymnasts, physical education instructors and coaches from all over the nation. It will be held in Jenison Fieldhouse.

"It's been valuable for all

MSU's summer baseball team will close out its first season with a game against West Side of the Lansing City League today at 6 p.m. on Old College Field.

The Spartans have gone 6-1-1 against City League teams this summer, sustaining their only loss Tuesday to Roney 4-3.

The Spartans went undefeated against the league's upper division teams, and had defeated Brooks 4-1 last Friday before their defeat at the hands of the league's sixth place team.

West Side stands in fourth place in the City League's second half standings.

Coach Danny Litwhiler said he considered the summer team to be "worthwhile," and said he felt the team would be continued next year.

the players, and it gives the student and area baseball fans some good games to watch," Litwhiler said.

He said the MSU team would probably never get into the league itself because of league regulations and the tight schedule at MSU, but felt that the team could continue to play the league teams and possibly schedule weekend games with other schools in future years.

The pitching for MSU today will number be spread between a number of MSU pitchers.

"It's the last game of the season and I'll try to give them all a chance," Litwhiler said.

Grid program wins 1st place

MSU's official football game program has won a "national championship."

The Spartan publication was awarded first place for 1966 in competition conducted by the College Sports Information Directors of America. It topped the field among collegiate publications with season circulation of 20,000 and over.

The award was made to program editor Fred Stabley, MSU Sports Information Director, at the annual CoSIDA convention last week in Chicago.

MSU also won a national award in a second category in CoSIDA judging, receiving honorable mention in the major college group for its 1967 football schedule card.

Poverty war losing ground

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a two-part series on MSU's Upward Bound Project, which attempts to aid high school students discover a new self concept.

By ERIC PIANIN
State News Executive Editor

If the War on Poverty is losing ground, one of the major reasons is that politics and red tape are strangling it.

According to officials and project workers, much of the money allocated by the federal government to combat poverty and improve educational opportunities never filters down to where it's needed most.

Many of the projects financed by the Office of Economic Opportunity (O.E.O.) have a precarious existence, and often live on borrowed time and political expediency. One poverty program official hinted that the O.E.O. may be eliminated following the next presidential election.

Alex J. Cade, assistant professor in Justin Morrill College and director of the Upward Bound Project at MSU, takes a critical yet pragmatic view towards federally-sponsored programs.

"There is tremendous waste in poverty programs," he said. "Certainly money isn't allocated to be handed out. It was intended to be used to mobilize community resources to combat social problems."

"But there's too much red tape and waste," he said. "Offices in the program are becoming political and the politicians have to hire qualified people to get the job done."

This problem is far reaching, according to Cade.

"The recent congressional committees established to investigate the riots don't have one qualified sociologist on them," Cade said. "It's argued that these people can seek out qualified people to help them, but the problem is they don't even know what they're looking for."

"It's a matter of first defining the problem," Cade said. "Most of them can't even do that."

Cade, who is also an educational consultant for the National Community Action Program, under O.E.O., heads a project here that gives 62 high school students a firsthand understanding of college life. The project attempts to to get these students into college.

"The most important goal is improving the kids' concept of themselves, whether they go to college or not," Cade said. "We're trying to instill self-respect."

"We're not trying to manipulate people, or shove them into college," he said. "We probably could get a majority of them into a college if we maneuvered and tried hard enough, but this isn't the purpose."

Cade's project is financed by a federal grant of $17,645 and a University grant of $10,374. The staff is comprised of 13 instructors, counselors, resident advisers and clerical workers, and 17 tutors who are students in Justin Morrill.

The project was originally designed for 65 students. Three left the project—two of them for disciplinary reasons.

"It was a bad period just after we let the two kids go," Cade explained. "The students rebelled because of our disciplinary action."

However, conditions improved considerably after the establishment of a student government. Class attendance, which was the biggest problem at the beginning of the summer, was improved as a result of the formation of student government, according to Cade. Now, student government demands rigid class attendance of its constituents.

"Contact is the most important thing, and we do this through our tutors, who live with these students," Cade said.

Two resident advisers are responsible for keeping order in Gilchrist Dormitory, where the project is housed. They also provide some emotional support to the tutors.

Cade has little contact with the instructors and counselors in the program, but devotes most of his time to consulting with the tutors.

The project is a form of field study for the tutors, and they get class credit for their work. However, they lack the educational background and emotional maturity of the regular staff, according to Cade.

Cade set two criteria for selection of his regular staff: sensitivity and emotional maturity.

"They're all qualified academically if they have a degree," Cade said. "But they've got to be people whose egos are not easily threatened."

Ideally, they should have a minimum of biases and preconceived notions, Cade said.

Cade and his staff have adopted the philosophy that nothing is a mistake. The entire project is an experiment, and constant adjustments are the keystone to success.

However, the program has had some noticeable shortcomings.

An experiment in group counseling, which placed about six Upward Bound students in a group with one or two tutors and a professional counselor, was a flop. It was thought that both the students and tutors would learn more about themselves by discussing personal problems in these groups.

At first, this type of counseling was mandatory. The students rejected it and did not cooperate. Finally, it was abandoned and made voluntary.

"It wasn't successful, but you've got to keep in mind that there are no right ways or wrong ways," Cade said. "Nothing is a mistake. At first, we compelled the kids to attend counseling to make them aware of it."

"Once they are aware of something, they have the right to reject it," he said. "You've got to first expose them to it, and then let them decide."

While Cade contends that class attendance has greatly improved, some tutors and R.A.'s, who are in closer contact with students, consider it still an unsolved problem.

Too many of the students are here for a good time, and nothing more, it has been charged. Discipline, they say, is still a serious problem.

improve these students' self-concepts.

Originally, the program was designed for students who have completed the tenth or 11th grade by June, 1967, but it was altered to include high school graduates. The program is aimed at students whose parents would be financially unable to provide pre-college experience of this type for their children.

"We change so much during the program," Cade explained. "The traditional and the institutional processes won't work. We do what is expedient."

Cade rejects the idea that Upward Bound was designed solely

Planning commission OK's Alpha Xi Delta rezoning

East Lansing's Planning Commission approved a request Wednesday night by Alpha Xi Delta sorority to expand its present house and annex at 520 and 514 Linden Street.

A public hearing at the commission's monthly meeting brought protests and approvals from nearby residents and sorority representatives. Mary J. Slavik, city clerk, read two letters and one petition protesting the expansion before the hearing.

Unanimously approved by the commission, the ordinance rezoning the area will be considered for final approval at the Aug. 21 city council meeting.

The rezoning would permit the sorority to add a west wing, demolish the present east wing, and build a new east addition. The addition would increase the house capacity from 44 to 50 girls and parking space from 9 to 22 places.

Fourteen property owners near the sorority house signed a petition protesting the expansion for three reasons:

--creation of an undesirable larger parking area.

--Increases in noise after 11:30 p.m.

--Increased traffic hazards due to the nearby elementary school.

Carl G. Card, 358 Division St., said that the rezoning would be detrimental to his property. Citing boisterous parties of non-sorority members in the area, Ronald Abbey, 515 Linden St., favored the rezoning and said the sorority's parties "weren't loud."

Herb Ashley, executive director of the East Lansing Chamber of Commerce, called sorority women "some of East Lansing's best citizens," and personally recommended the rezoning.

Explaining the sorority's desire to expand, Margaret Griffin, corporation secretary of Alpha Xi Delta, said MSU's rising enrollment prompted the sorority to increase membership to 50-55 women.

MSU media workshop instructing educators

In tomorrow's classroom, much of what the teacher does will be via television, tape recordings and teaching machines, a group of educational media specialists were told this week.

Representing colleges and universities from 27 states, the 45 educators are taking part in a five-week U.S. Office of Education-sponsored institute for advanced study in instructional media.

Among the wide range of subjects covered by the institute, the participants are learning this week how instructional media can be used in teacher training programs.

"Everyone is a learner," pointed out Wesley C. Meler, Henry of the University of Nebraska. "The student is a learner, the teacher is a learner, and the teacher of the teacher is a learner."

"Universities such as MSU are using instructional media to personalize and individualize teacher-training," Charles

Blackman, professor of secondary education, and curriculum told the group. "In finding broader roles in the future, we must be sure we don't use instructional media techniques just to extend the numbers of students being served. We must stress the quality and individualized approach that instructional media gives us."

The MSU workshop is aimed at providing media personnel with enough information on all aspects of the field so that they can return to their colleges and universities and either expand existing programs or develop new ones.

"Our prime mission is to help the teachers-of-teachers," pointed out Horace C. Hartsell of the Instructional Media Center and institute director. "The use of instructional media plays an important role in this process."

SOUTHERN DEMS IN SUPPORT

GOP offers alternative for Johnson programs

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outnumbered congressional Republicans are taking the offensive in a bid to demonstrate they have politically salable alternatives to President Johnson's domestic and foreign programs.

With the presidential election 15 months away, GOP leaders in the House and Senate have launched a campaign to convince voters there is a Republican choice if they don't like the way Johnson is running the Vietnam war or coping with city rioting.

The action Wednesday by Senate GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen in picking up the ball quickly after a House Republican-Southern Democrat coalition rewrote the President's anticrime bill pointed toward a coordinated attempt to paste a Republican label on riot-curb legislation.

Dirksen's prediction that the Senate will go along with a House decision to let the states spend the anti-crime funds—rather than channel them through the attorney general as Johnson requested—could be fulfilled only with Southern Democratic support.

In this instance Dirksen and House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford didn't seem to shun the presence in their camp of Dixie segregationists, with whom Ford said previously Republicans didn't want to associate politically.

Ford's solo demand a day earlier to take the wraps off the bombing of North Vietnam put the Republicans in the position of pointing toward a quicker way of ending the Asian conflict than Johnson's limited warfare course offers.

Southern and some Western Democrats supported Ford's contention that vital military targets have been kept off limits to U.S. bombers.

Repeat finals

Students repeating final examinations for University courses must sign up no later than Friday.

Permission to take the exams may be obtained from the Assistant Dean of the University College, 170 Bessey, or the Student Affairs Office at 109 Brody, S33 Wonders Hall, G36 Hubbard Hall.

Fire goods found

University police have recovered a "hard-hat" and an axe stolen at the site of the E. Wilson Hall fire Sunday night.

They have also apprehended a suspect in connection with the theft whose name was not released. The value of items stolen, police said, was about $42.

O'Brien says Dems need new image

WASHINGTON, P. -- The Democratic party will have to work hard next year to retain voters it traditionally has taken for granted: Negroes, big-city whites and liberal, young students, one of the party's top political strategists said Thursday.

Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien said Democrats must spend a lot of time explaining the administration's stand on the Vietnam war to a public he believes doesn't fully understand it.

In an interview, O'Brien indicated strongly that Democratic strategy next year will be to blame Republicans in Congress for blocking administration measures designed to solve the ills of riot-torn big cities.

He said also that state and local party organizations, which have shown signs of disintegration, had better rebuild.

O'Brien conceded that the war, this summer's riots and President Johnson's request for a 1 per cent surcharge on personal and corporate income taxes are "areas of potential political difficulty" for the Democrats.

"Anyone who knows me says I'm a pessimist," O'Brien said, "yet, in the middle of a hot summer with difficulties domestically and at the water's edge, I am optimistic about 1968," he said.

Defections from the party? Disunity? Not a bit. "I am completely confident that the leaders of the Democratic party will be marching shoulder to shoulder next year."

Turning to the war, O'Brien said "the realities of our involvement must be repeatedly spelled out. Of course, in an involvement that is all too little understood by many Americans, you will always find people that resent and resist the effort."

High school musicians perform

High school students here for three weeks of intensive music training stage one of four public concerts under the direction of Joseph Scott. Their study at MSU will include appearances on radio and television in addition to their daily routine of practice and classes in composition, theory, conducting, literature, history and acoustics.

Degree program offered in landscape architecture

A new degree program for landscape architects, designed to help relieve the short supply of trained personnel in this profession, will be offered beginning this fall.

According to Myles G. Boylan, director of the School of Urban Planning and Landscape Architecture, there is unprecedented demand today for professionals involved in the design of outdoor space.

"We could place at least five times more graduates than we have each year, and MSU already has more students in this field than any other school," he says.

The new program provides an optional one-year supplement to the four-year bachelor of science degree program now offered in landscape architecture.

Students who enroll for the additional year will earn another degree--bachelor of landscape architecture--in addition to the B.S.

The fifth year will immerse students in professional and technical courses not offered in the four-year program, Boylan said. Greater concentration will be on specifics such as urban design, climate and ecology, conservation of open space, and the use of computer techniques as they relate to the profession.

Eventually, the five-year program will be a prerequisite for entry into the master's program. Reasons for today's shortage of qualified landscape architects, he says, include the anticipated doubling of world population in the next 35 years, increased leisure time and mobility, and urbanization.

FACULTY FACTS

MSU researcher wins national prize

An MSU animal husbandry researcher has received national recognition for his basic studies of animal nutrition.

Duane E. Ulrey, an associate professor of animal husbandry, was presented with the American Society of Animal Science award at the University of Nevada.

The award is presented annually to the scientist who has produced significant animal nutrition research during the preceding three years.

Ulrey is the third MSU animal scientist to receive this research award. Others were Elwyn R. Miller, professor of animal husbandry, who won the award in 1965 and R.W. Luecke, professor of biochemistry who was presented the award in 1956.

David K. Berlo, chairman of the Dept. of Communications, has been appointed Director of the Ingham County National Foundation - March of Dimes 1968 campaign.

Berlo will organize and coordinate the drive to obtain contributions for the March of Dimes fight against birth defects.

Berlo said planning for the campaign has already started, including scheduling of the traditional Mothers' March of Dimes next Jan. 25.

Emery G. Foster, manager of Dormitories and Food Services, will be second vice-president of the 20th annual conference of the American College and University Housing Officers (ACUHO) scheduled for July, 1968 at Western Michigan University.

Foster was elected to his post by ACUHO's 19th annual convention, held this year at the University of Washington July 30-August 2. About 400 delegates from 150 major colleges and universities in the nation attended.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

Chromosomal damage, birth defects linked to acid

Hippies "trip" with it, Timothy Leary based a religion on it, and now medical scientists link physical deformities and abnormalities to it.

The current issue of Saturday Evening Post magazine cites recent circumstantial evidence linking LSD, the "powerful mind-altering drug," to infant deformity, broken chromosomes, leukemia-like abnormality and convulsions.

Cases cited by the Post article include eight young men, LSD takers, who volunteered blood samples for microscopic studies. Investigation showed that six of the eight were found to have broken or damaged chromosomes. The other two (the heaviest LSD users of the group) had "chromosomal abnormality that seems to be identical to one seen only in the first irreversible stages of leukemia."

In another instance, a young mother took a single dose of LSD in the first month of pregnancy. The resulting baby had a defective lower intestinal tract interfering with bowel movements and hyperplasia of the face; the right side of its head had developed far more than the left.

Researchers stress that this case just provides circumstantial evidence, but one geneticist declared "The drug could be as dangerous to the developing fetus as Thalidomide."

Medical specialists also report cases in Canada and Los Angeles where persons taking LSD suffer from epileptic seizures. A graduate student took black-market LSD for the first time and 50 minutes later went into a typical grand mal seizure.

X-ray tests at the hospital confirmed two accompanying fractured vertebrae, but brain tests did not reveal the peculiar brain dysfunction usually present in epileptics.

Cases of LSD patients being admitted to psychiatric wards continue to mount. Dr. William A. Frosch of the New York University Medical Center says that more than 200 patients yearly are admitted to the Bellevue Hospital psychiatric wards because of LSD-caused paranoia and schizophrenia.

A New York geneticist, Dr. Maimon M. Cohen, published the first word on possible genetic damage from LSD use. He placed normal human blood cells in a test tube, added small amounts of LSD, and studied the chromosomes under a microscope. The results showed the same kind of chromosomal damage that accompanies radiation.

After publication of these results, Cohen started another research project with LSD takers in New York to confirm his findings. Cohen examined the blood cells of three mothers who used LSD and their four children. With the same "frightening" breakage of chromosomes occurring, the babies are now being scrutinized for abnormalities.

Six-year LSD user Eddie Schwartz shrugs off all these findings, as circumstantial as they are. A Leary follower and artist, Schwartz termed the new genetic findings "just scare tactics by the Government."

"I'm not at all worried about what the doctors find. Doctors are programmed to the illnesses of the world, not the happiness. You can't cure happiness."

Romney suggested as riot probe witness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Thursday that Senate riot investigators are getting a distorted view of racial outbreaks, and urged that Gov. George Romney of Michigan and Richard J. Hughes of New Jersey be called as witnesses.

Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat, made his complaint and his request after the Senate Judiciary Committee heard a fifth day of police testimony.

"To date, the witnesses have presented a distorted view," the senator said.

Joined by Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., Kennedy asked Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., to broaden the inquiry so that it will cover social and economic aspects of city turmoil, as well as racial agitation and law enforcement.

Eastland said he will take up their request at a closed session of the Judiciary Committee within a few days. "We've got to set down guidelines," he told newsmen. "We've certainly got to hear from people who oppose the bill."

The bill is a House-approved measure which would make it a federal crime to cross state lines with intent to incite riot. Police men from riot-scarred cities have unanimously endorsed the measure.

Sgt. John Ungvary of Cleveland urged the committee to toughen and broaden the measure. "This should be changed so that a single act of violence by one person who is a member of a mob will bring the bill into play," Ungvary said.

He urged also that Congress enact a program of federal assistance for the development of new riot-control equipment.

Among the items he envisioned for future police arsenals:

--Night vision devices, speedy armored vehicles, lightweight body armor.

--Weapons that would take a rioter out of action without killing him. "New nerve gases along these lines have been developed," Ungvary said.

--Luminous paint to spray and thus mark troublemakers.

--New devices to contain disorderly crowds, using laser beams or electric eyes. He said such equipment could be linked with a weapon that would fire automatically to stun or wound anyone who crossed a police line.

"The riots in Cleveland were planned and plotted," Ungvary testified. "The Communists attempted to exploit the riots."

Ungvary said also that people involved in the anti-poverty program are among Cleveland's racial agitators. He mentioned one name: Harlell Jones.

GOP governors

he said, "and thus we want to demonstrate that we want to take action on the most pressing of national problems."

"I know that we will articulate specific suggestions in the area of racial tensions," Chafee said.

A Rockefeller aide said that on July 28, Rockefeller sent a telegram to Gov. William Guy, D-N.D., chairman of the National Governors' Conference, asking Guy to call an immediate meeting of the group.

Three days later, the aide said, Rockefeller was told by a Guy assistant that the conference executive committee, meeting Aug. 26 at Osage Beach, Mo., would include the urban problem on its agenda.

Rockefeller next conferred with Love, chairman of the Republican Governors' Association. On Aug. 2, Rockefeller sent copies of a state-focused draft his staff developed to members of the Republican Governors' Association Policy Committee and two days later, called Thursday's meeting.

Last Tuesday, in Rockefeller's New York City office, representatives of members of the policy committee reshaped the state-focused draft to expand its scope to a national level.

Detroit riot area residents demand control in rebuilding neighborhoods

DETROIT (AP) — The residents of Detroit's riot-devastated near West Side are demanding control over the rebuilding of their burned and pillaged neighborhoods.

About five persons, mostly Negro, met Wednesday night in the City-County building to discuss grievances in the aftermath of the riot and ended up naming a committee to present their demands to city officials.

And a near West Side neighborhood planning group, formed more than a year ago, is struggling to keep its voice from being drowned out in the clamor over plans to rebuild the area.

The meeting Wednesday was called in response to the naming of the New Detroit Committee by Mayor Jerome Cavanagh and Gov. George Romney.

The committee, chaired by Joseph L. Hudson Jr., head of Detroit's largest department store, is charged with organizing the rebuilding effort.

The committee has been criticized for not having enough residents from the riot areas among its members.

The Rev. Albert Cleage, a Negro militant, said at the meeting: "Our committee will tell Hudson and Cavanagh and Romney and LBJ what we want done in the city of Detroit. These people here at the meeting are speaking for all black people of the city of Detroit."

Neighborhood residents, who have long had their own ideas about what should be done in rebuilding the area, were worried they lacked a voice in the planning.

In related developments: --Some 15 owners of buildings in the riot area not only had them destroyed by fires, but now are being ordered by the city to pay for demolishing them as safety hazards.

Some city officials, who didn't sound happy about issuing the orders, said federal funds may be available to defray at least part of the cost.

The owners don't have a choice. If they fail to comply with the order in the time allotted, the city after a hearing will tear down the building for them and charge the costs against the value of the vacant lot, said William Reither, a city inspector.

--Army officials have offered to repair public school grounds chewed up by their tanks, personnel carriers and heavy trucks during the riot week.

Biafrans seize oil region

The breakaway Eastern territory, which calls itself the Republic of Biafra, has been short of food since the federal government clamped a navy blockade on the eastern coast.

The federal government is determined to restore the situation in the Midwest to normal, the statement added.

Asked about a Benin radio report that Lt. Col. Victor Banjo is now in charge of the Midwest region, a government spokesman said, "I wish him luck. He will not last long."

He said there had been no material resistance to the rebels throughout the Midwest region, except in Benin where shooting continued until early evening Wednesday.

Because the Biafrans are extending themselves into the Midwest, the spokesman said, "the push to Enugu will be much easier now."

Enugu is the Biafran capital in the northern part of the breakaway Eastern territory and the headquarters of Biafran leader Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu.

Ojukwu ignored a federal government warning Wednesday against bombing civilian targets and sent one of his aircraft--probably one of two B26 bombers--to hit Lagos.

Five civilians were injured and a number of houses damaged.

Nigerians took delivery of two Czech Delfin jet fighter-bombers, which could reciprocate with a raid on Ojukwu's capital.

Four more Czech jets are reported on their way to Nigeria, along with a quantity of arms from Britain, reported to include anti-aircraft guns.

The spokesman said Lagos International Airport has been closed at night "to avoid any incidents." Four ships arrived in Lagos Thursday evening from the oil port of Warri in the Midwest region bringing 200 British and American evacuees, including women and children.

NSA focuses on CIA

was little change in it--the majority of NSA's budget, and almost all international program funding, came from the CIA.

It was not until 1965 that someone decided NSA shouldn't be taking all that money from the government's spy agency, Philip Sherburne, NSA's vice president for international affairs, was shocked when he learned of the arrangement, and finally resolved to get it terminated as fast as possible.

With this in mind, he ran for president of NSA and won. Immediately, he put together a small staff whose mission was to dig up funds for specific projects. The eight people Sherburne chose finished the year with $400,000 in grants for their efforts.

With the termination of the need for CIA support, all such money was stopped. And for the last eight months, all NSA funding apparently has been completely independent of the CIA.

The NSA is run by the National Supervisory Board, which was never told of the CIA relationship. When Ramparts put the case into the public spotlight, they wasted no time in completely disavowing the CIA. Their statement of February 17 this year details the involvement, but also leaves no uncertainty about what they thought of it. They state:

"1. At no time, for any reason, was the penetration of the CIA into our organization justified.

"2. The penetration of the CIA into other organizations must be terminated at once.

"3. The U.S. government owes an enormous apology to the National Student Association, its officers and staff and to an entire generation for using NSA in this manner."

"The NSB has unanimously ordered the complete and permanent severance of all ties with the CIA."

On an honest footing they are, now trying to rebuild the image of the National Student Association, with a heavy domestic emphasis and support from foundations that doesn't originate with the Central Intelligence Agency.

Dem backing

The Democratic committee in this county, with 24 official members, he added, reflects the composition of the party throughout the state.

"Those most capable of paying --ought to," he said.

"If I had my way, the scale would be changed," said the professor, "to go from nothing to $500."

This should be no additional work for the administration, Spaeth continued.

Spaeth brushed off questions on the two other contested issues of the tuition plan: submission of income tax forms, and the legality of graduation for tuition.

Some kind of evidence will have to be used for the state income tax, he said, to substantiate income. The ability to pay problem has been referred to the attorney general.
