

ON NATIONWIDE TRIP

Romney tours LA ghetto

LOS ANGELES — Gov. Romney had a sharp exchange with two militant young Negroes during a tour of poverty areas here Monday, then later was told by a Negro who was in Detroit during summer rioting:

"We don't want help. We want opportunity."

The words typified most of the answers given Romney, who kept asking "What do you want?" He is on a nationwide tour looking first-hand at problems of urban areas. Later the Republican governor, eyeing a bid for the 1968 GOP presidential nomination, headed for Atlanta.

His day began with a breakfast in the predominantly Negro south-central area of Los Angeles. Voices rose as he discussed with two young Negroes health care problems and ways to end violence. Would Romney improve conditions for Negroes should he be elected president, they asked?

"That is why I am making this tour to learn first-hand what the problems are and what is being done to solve them. I want to know what you want, and what you think can be done to find a solution short of violence. . . . If we don't find a solution, there will be violence."

Later, at the Los Angeles headquarters of Operation Bootstrap, a job-training organization established after rioting in 1965, Romney talked to Raymond Griggs, a waiter who said he came here two weeks ago "because I was sick of Detroit."

Griggs told him: "People all over the world need togetherness. That's the only way we'll end the big problem of racism, bring the day when white people will let people like me have a little part of their integrated heaven."

Romney listened to Griggs as he did to dozens of other Negroes, his head cocked to one side. Occasionally he made points of his own, stabbing with a finger for emphasis.

To repeated demands for better education for Negroes, Romney told one impromptu gathering in a hallway: "I agree that better education alone is not enough. It takes a lot of soul searching to know the best way to use the knowledge you gain."

Jesse Robinson, head of a management consultant firm, caught the governor's attention with a plea for government funds to help Negroes establish their own businesses, and for government insurance of real estate loans to Negroes.

Robinson spoke at the home of Baltimore Scott, member of a group known as the Management Council, an organization of businessmen trying to help Negroes find jobs.

There, at an outdoor breakfast, Romney was confronted by the two youthful militants, Tom Jaquette, who wore a sweatshirt emblazoned with the picture of Malcolm X, a Black Power leader, and Lou Smith, president of Operation Bootstrap. His voice rising, Smith said the nation is willing to spend billions in Vietnam and "to shoot rats into space," but little on "poor black people who form a large part of those in Medicare."

Romney, citing health care problems in Britain, said he didn't want government to get so involved in medical care that the present system of medicine would break down under the weight of red tape.

At the end of the breakfast meeting, Romney attempted to sum up what he had learned from the open discussion.

"Apparently the thing that would be most effective," he said, "is a combination of people who want to improve their situation, plus those who are in a position to help them by directing their efforts in education, job-training and enterprise."

Romney on tour

Governor Romney has taken time out from his busy schedule in Michigan to go on a nationwide tour of urban areas. He is shown here buying membership in local chapters of the NAACP in Watts.

Positions open for advisory committees

Positions on student advisory committees for the University College and its four departments are open to all students, regardless of class level or major.

Petitioning for these positions begins today and will run through Oct. 2. Petitions are available in 170 Bessey Hall.

Steve Haynes, a member of the ASMSC Academic Coordinating Committee, which worked with University College Dean Edward A. Carlin in establishing the committees spring term, said the only qualifications were that students must be full-time, in good standing and have completed in class the University College courses of the department on which he wishes to serve.

The four departments -- American Thought and Language, Social Science, Natural Science and Humanities -- will each have six-member committees. Two persons will be elected from each department committee to serve on the college committees.

Departmental committees will be selected by the faculty advisory committees in each department.

Haynes explained that elections for student members could not be held since the University College includes all major fields and has been estimated to have from 10 to 20,000 students enrolled at any one time.

The departmental committees will meet with the department chairmen and the college committee will work with Carlin. Each committee may call meetings at its discretion or they may be requested to meet by the department or college heads. Proposals may be considered either at the initiative of the faculty or the students.

"Acting as an advisory body, each committee can provide the department chairmen or dean with valuable and constant sources for student recommendations," Haynes wrote to the University College faculty. "In addition, the committees may be utilized by the administrative faculty as a 'sounding board' for proposed policies which would benefit from student reaction prior to implementation."

The University College is the third college to implement the student advisory committees which were discussed spring term. Students for committees in the Colleges of Social Science and Arts and Letters were elected in the spring.

Hannah gets ruling today on conflict of interest law

By LEO ZAINEA
State News Staff Writer

Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley will rule today on whether President Hannah's business affiliations outside the University violate the state's conflict of interest law.

Hannah asked Kelley for the opinion last March and offered to resign his positions if they compromised his duties as president.

The law, passed last July, prohibits any state officer "from having a direct or indirect interest, financial or otherwise, in a contract with the state or any of its political subdivisions."

Hannah serves on the board of directors of Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit, Michigan Bell Telephone Co. and American Bank and Trust Co. of Lansing. The University does business with all three.

Because of the ambiguity of much of the law, President Harlan A. Hatcher of the University of Michigan and Trustee C. Allen Harlan, D-Southfield, could also be affected, though neither asked for a ruling.

Harlan is founder and chairman of Harlan Electric Co. of Detroit which has a 50 per cent interest in a Lansing electrical firm that obtained contracts from MSU. However, Harlan has refused to vote on awarding those contracts received by the firm, Central Electric Motor and Construction, 2443 Rundle Avenue.

Instead, he chose to abstain from voting approval for those specific contracts because of his interest in the Detroit operation. He disposed of all stock in that firm when he was elected to the Board of Trustees.

Hatcher, who will be succeeded as president by Robben W. Fleming on Jan. 1, is on the boards of Detroit Edison Co., Tecumseh Products Corp., a refrigeration and auto supply firm and the Ann Arbor Bank, where the U-M deposits most of its money.

A source close to Hatcher said last March that because the law is "so confusingly written" it could embarrass nearly every official in the state. For this reason, Hatcher apparently felt he had no reason to ask for an opinion.

Kelley said Monday that any conflict on Hatcher's part would have to be drawn by analogy since his opinion refers mostly to Hannah. He said his staff has spent months drawing up the ruling, because the law is so vaguely worded.

According to the new law, Kelley is responsible for rendering an opinion on

Sliding tuition scale aids in-state undergraduates

By STEVE GATES
State News Staff Writer

Students who are married, financially independent of their parents or whose parents are divorced may qualify fall term for special deductions on the new sliding tuition scale.

Philip J. May, vice president for business and finance, said that these students, and any others who are eligible for fee reductions, must apply before Oct. 6 if the reductions are to apply to fall term.

Under the sliding tuition plan, any in-state MSU undergraduate whose parents have an annual income of less than $16,700 and who is not subsidized by federal, state or private grants or scholarships qualifies for a decrease in tuition.

According to James H. Denison, assistant to the president, a set of administrative guidelines has been developed for use fall term. These guidelines are expected to cover about 98 per cent of all applications, he said.

The guidelines, approved August 31, designate the following categories for special handling:

--Where the forms submitted do not indicate that they represent the total income of both of the student's parents. In such cases, additional information is requested. If received, regular processing follows.

--For students with divorced parents where there is no indication of remarriage, any legal decree papers and child support commitments are requested. If there are child support payments they are added to the gross income of the guardian parent. The fee schedule is based on the total parental income and child support payments.

--For students with divorced parents where the "guardian" mother has remarried, the combined parental income plus child support payments are added and used as a basis for determining fees.

--For students with a parent widowed after January 1, 1966, special consideration is to be given on the basis of what the surviving parent certifies his or her current income will be.

--For orphans, information will be requested from the guardian for any legal decree on arrangements for the student. Each case will be handled individually.

--For those single students who qualify on a gross income basis and who claim independence from their parents, there will be:

1) a reduction for those who are 25 years of age or over by January 1, 1967.

2) For those who can document their individual income from wages, G.I. benefits, Social Security benefits or loans from other than family sources of $4,000 or more exclusive of parental assistance will be granted a fee reduction. This assumes it requires $200 per month for living expenses and attending MSU full time.

3) For those who do not qualify under 1) or 2) above, individual fees will be determined finally by the special Fee Determination Committee, with relatively few exceptions made.

--For married students: 1) Those who were married on or prior to December 31, 1965, and who can document income from other than family sources of $4,000 or more exclusive of parental sources will be granted a fee reduction.

2) For those who were married on or after January 1, 1966, the 1967 anticipated income will be used as a guideline for determining fees for the coming academic year, with final determination to be made by the special Fee Determination Committee.

3) Those who have special cases will be provided opportunity to make representation to the special Fee Determination Committee whose action will be final. The Fee Determination Committee is made up of four representatives from four of the administrative offices.

Unusual cases will be handled either by the Fee Determination Committee or Kermit H. Smith, head of the fee determination office.

May added that any students who have already received a fee reduction may reapply if they feel that they are entitled under the fall term guidelines for a further reduction.

The MSU Board of Trustees is expected to consider at its next meeting a similar set of guidelines for winter term.

Avoid student overflow — CUE warns

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a four-part series of excerpts and summary of the report of the Committee on Undergraduate Education.

By BEVERLEY TWITCHELL
State News Executive Reporter

It was appropriate that recommendations of the Committee on Undergraduate Education (CUE) began with admissions. "Every admissions decision, from the rejection of a single applicant to the far-reaching determination of overall size and growth and distribution, every decision affects in uncountable ways not only the vitality of the University's courses of study, but the lives of individual men and women and the capacity of society to realize its best hopes for all its members," the report states.

MSU, whose undergraduate program has doubled in eight years, has experienced what the CUE report called probably "the most remarkable period in the history of any institution of higher learning in the Western world" in the last 20 years. This experience was not only growth in the student body and the physical campus, but a maturation of research and teaching programs, the report said.

"But it seems patently and unequivocally clear to this Committee that the University's drive toward genuine excellence calls for a most carefully managed admissions policy, a policy which above all else will not extend the University at any level or in any single field beyond the resources it requires to do well by those it admits," CUE said.

In this context, CUE made five recommendations on admissions:

1. Sharpened employment of sensitive admissions criteria; a managed admissions policy to keep enrollment by level and by field in step with academic resources available.

2. Transfer of the admissions office from the Office of the Vice President for Special Projects and placed in the Provost's Office for optimum coordination between class size and distribution and faculty resources.

3. Continued diversity in the undergraduate student body, avoiding a drift toward a totally middle-class, middle-western student population.

4. Establishment of a Faculty Standing Committee on Admissions, to advise the Provost and the Director of Admissions on the general direction of the program and the range and diversity of entering classes.

5. Institution of an annual admissions and retention report to be given to the faculty as a whole, possibly as a major

Lynda Bird names Dec. 9 for White House wedding

WASHINGTON — The wedding of Lynda Bird Johnson and Marine Capt. Charles S. Robb, with 14 attendants, is set for Saturday, Dec. 9, in the historic East Room of the White House.

With Lynda, 28, and Robb, 28, off on an Acapulco, Mexico, vacation, the White House announced the wedding date.

It will be an Episcopal service, but other details were left blank, such as the time of day, the minister and the number of guests to be invited.

It's likely to be a good deal smaller than the Aug. 6, 1966 marriage of Lynda's younger sister, Luci Johnson, to Patrick Nugent, when 700 guests went to the national Shrine of the Immaculate Conception for the wedding ceremony and returned to the White House for the reception afterwards.

"A winter wedding affects the size," said Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter, the First Lady's press secretary. She pointed to the limited capacity of the East Room, which seats about 250 for a presidential news conference, and the fact that winter weather means keeping the party indoors.

Nevertheless, the size of the wedding party indicates a good-sized formal affair.

Lynda is the eighth daughter of a president to marry in Washington while her father was in office, and the seventh to be married in the White House itself.

Most of her predecessors also chose the huge gold and white-decorated East Room, with its glittering crystal chandeliers, as the setting.

Lynda, who served as maid of honor at her sister's wedding, will have Luci as her matron of honor.

The maid of honor is Warrie Lynn Smith, 28, of San Antonio, Tex., Lynda's close friend and college roommate at the University of Texas and at the White House for a term in 1964 when they both attended George Washington University here.

Robb picked as his best man, his Marine barracks roommate Douglas Davidson, 26, of Kershaw, S.C.

Cong show no letup in three-week siege

SAIGON P. — The big-gun duel at Con Thien raged with increased fury Monday and the North Vietnamese showed no signs of easing their three-week artillery siege of U.S. Marines guarding invasion routes across the demilitarized zone into South Vietnam.

Again B52 bombers blanketed suspected enemy gun and supply positions with tons of bombs while 7th Fleet warships pounded at the Reds' east flank from the South China Sea. The Marines kept up their intense rate of counterfire: about five artillery rounds a minute.

Since the Communists opened the dueling Sept. 1, 61 Marines have been killed and 785 wounded—most of them in the past two weeks.

Communist casualties are unknown, but Marine officials figure them to be high. Communist broadcasts say there are high civilian casualties on the North Vietnamese side of the DMZ.

While the Communists kept up unrelenting artillery and rocket attacks, the U.S. side let it be known there would be no let up from the south. The U.S. Command reported a massive leaflet drop around the North Vietnamese village of Ben Quang, about 2 miles above the DMZ, to warn civilians they should defect southward or face "the terrible rain of death and destruction" of B52 bombing attacks still to come.

Since mid-August the eight-engine Stratofortresses have dropped 12.5 million pounds of bombs onto targets in and around the buffer zone dividing the two Vietnams.

In Saigon there were two developments indicating the Communists may be feeling the effects of the war far greater than their propaganda organs would reveal.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander, told a South Korean troop ceremony that after two years of fighting, the allies in Vietnam "are now in a position from which the picture of ultimate military success may be viewed with increasing clarity."

A report to allied officers by the crew of the Cypriot freighter Amfala, which spent 36 days in Haiphong this past summer, told of a serious labor shortage that delayed the unloading of ships with supplies and a resulting backlog of war materiel on the docks and streets of the chief North Vietnamese port. The report also described the people of Haiphong as hungry and ill-clothed.

The artillery battle along the North-South frontier remained the chief action in the war news.

Communist gunners opened Monday's barrage with a 300-round attack at 7:15 a.m., while most Leathernecks were still in the sandbagged bunkers and holes. The barrage lasted only 15 minutes and casualties were believed light because the Marines were not out on their usual patrols of the hills around Con Thien, 2 1/2 miles below the DMZ.

This attack was followed by a pair of shorter barrages around midday.

The Marines responded with their own artillery and kept up their firing of 6,000 rounds daily on a pre-planned basis plus uncounted rounds fired in spontaneous counterattacks.

Lynda's love

President Johnson's daughter Lynda Bird has announced her marriage date as December 9, 1967. She will be married to Marine Capt. Charles S. Robb of Milwaukee in the East Room of the White House. Lynda's sister, Mrs. Patrick J. Nugent (Luci) will be matron of honor.

CAMPUS TOUR SET

Miss Michigan in 'Spartantown'

A visit from Miss Michigan of 1967 will highlight the final two days of the "Spartantown, U.S.A." 12-day celebration.

Toni Jo Abbenante, of Grand Rapids, a 19-year-old coed from Grand Rapids Junior College, will arrive approximately at two this afternoon. She is participating in the celebration welcoming the record 40,000 MSU students.

After her arrival, she will visit the editorial offices of the State News.

She will go on a tour of the campus including stops in the student government offices and the student radio station.

According to Herb Ashley, executive director of the East Lansing Chamber of Commerce, Miss Abbenante will also give a reading to a MSU speech class. She is a speech and dramatics major.

A Chamber of Commerce dinner will be given tonight in her honor at an exclusive restaurant in East Lansing.

Tonight she will return to her home in Grand Rapids accompanied by her mother, who served as her chaperone during her public appearances as Miss Michigan.

Miss Michigan will return to Spartantown, U.S.A. Wednesday afternoon. She will spend most of her afternoon on MAC Ave. meeting students and East Lansing citizens. At this time she will help participate in the drawing for the prizes for Spartantown. MAC Avenue will be closed off Wednesday afternoon and evening to facilitate Spartantown activities.

Miss Abbenante won the Miss Michigan title June 24 in Muskegon, competing against 41 queens from other Michigan communities.

Miss Abbenante will be greeted today by Greg Hopkins, president of ASMSU; Ashley; and East Lansing's Mayor Gordon L. Thomas.

Panel renews plea to U.S. to support two Chinas

WASHINGTON P. — A panel of 26 U.S. business leaders and scholars urged anew Monday that the United States drop active opposition to Red China membership in the United Nations and support efforts for a two-China representation.

If the Communists accept this arrangement, the panel said, they should be permitted to replace Nationalist China on the U.N. Security Council.

It said the call is being pushed again especially in light of three developments in the past year—Red China's H-bomb explosion, the intensified internal struggle in mainland China and shifting of positions on China by other delegates to the U.N. General Assembly.

Both Communist China and Nationalist China have rejected any "two China" representation, each insisting it is the sole government of China.

The panel expressed concern over the implications of a statement by Secretary of State Dean Rusk at a news conference on Sept. 8 that he does not expect that anything much will change on the China representation issue at the U.N. this year.

He said a substantial majority of the membership is not going to vote out Nationalist China in order to admit Communist China.

The panel said this was taken to mean there would be no change in the U.S. position.

The panel's report said "The United States should support efforts now to open the way for mainland China to participate in the U.N."

The report said events of the past year convinced all members of the panel of the urgent need to reaffirm this recommendation.

The confusion, doubt and change in China "create an impelling need for the world outside to make clear to any emerging Chinese leadership that it can, if it chooses, make a new start toward orderly participation in the United Nations and in world affairs," the report said.

Former U.S. ambassador Charles Yost, who represented the United States at the United Nations for more than five years, contended that the United Nations has been handicapped by the absence of mainland China in two vitally important fields.

At a news conference, Yost, a panel member, said Communist China will not be bound by U.N.-sponsored arms control agreements on nuclear weapons and missiles when they have not participated in the U.N. talks.

In the second field, he said, the United Nations has been unable to deal with any major security problems in Asia, including Vietnam, because of the absence of Mainland China from the U.N.

A reservation was expressed stipulating that the option should be kept open for Peking's responsible membership in the U.N. at the opportune time.

V.C. artillery hits Con Thien daily

CON THIEN, Vietnam P. — "Charlie's reveille" was at 7:15 a.m. Monday.

There was the familiar whine coming across the demilitarized zone but no explosion. It must have been a dud.

Then "Charlie's Reveille," came full blast for 15 minutes in which rockets, mortar and artillery shells fell by the hundreds on Con Thien, a U.S. Marine outpost 2 1/2 miles below the DMZ.

Charlie is the U.S. soldier's nickname for the Communist enemy in Vietnam and his "reveille" is one of the barrages that have been hitting the Marines here daily since Sept. 1.

Marines estimated that the Communists fired between 300 and 500 rounds in the 15-minute barrage Monday for the Leathernecks on the three little hills, their Con Thien position. Before noon, two other lighter barrages hit the Marines.

Day after day it is the same pattern as the big North Vietnamese guns in, along or north of the DMZ batter Con Thien.

Marine guns here and at other nearby outposts fire back at the enemy and U.S. air strikes pound the tree-lined, ridges and mountains to the north. Still the Communist shelling goes on.

In Monday's first shelling, U.S. casualties were relatively light. This was because it came early and most of the Marines were still in their holes on the muddy hills. Later in the day, the casualties would be expected to mount, as they have since the Communist forces to the north again picked up their campaign of throwing their heavy metal at the Marines on the high ground.

Cpl. Nathaniel Brennan, a 21-year-old squad leader from Miami, Fla., and his men worked to deepen their little bunker on the northernmost hill.

"This is really something else," Brennan said. "Every time we get dug in they tear it up. This is the impact area. I believe this is the worst spot you can possibly be in but I think I'm going to be here a lot, so like they say, 'never worry'."

His men—all of them 19, 20, 21-year-olds—nodded agreement as their shovels bit into the clinging mud.

A couple of hundred yards to the north of them and near the foot of the little hill, there were strands of barbed wire. Brennan said that every night "Charlie" comes in close and tries to cut the wire or blast it with bamboo bangalore torpedoes.

"He gets right in there," he said, "and then we try and zap him good."

Sgt. W. B. Brown, 26, of Los Angeles, a platoon sergeant, made his plans for a night ambush out beyond the thin perimeter.

"Maybe we can catch him up a little bit and fix him," Brown said.

Capt. Frank Breathy, 29, of Annandale, Va., commander of the company on the northern slope, stood talking with one of his platoon leaders, 2nd Lt. Joe Williams, 23, of Atlanta, Ga.

Breathy caught the sound of an incoming round. They dove for the command bunker and another brief barrage rained in on Con Thien. Within minutes, it was over and they crawled back from the mud of the bunker to the mud outside and picked up their conversation again.

"It's the best place to be," said the lieutenant as he looked around at his hill. "It's better than fighting farmers." He meant the Viet Cong guerrillas operating farther south.

Con Thien is the high ground here and the Marines have committed themselves to holding it. Despite the mounting casualties, the command feels it can and must be held. To give it up would give the Communists a major prestige and propaganda victory. But strategically Con Thien's high ground gives the Marines a vantage point in their continuing guard against a North Vietnamese invasion.

House GOP backs move to cut spending

WASHINGTON (AP) -- House Republican leaders are backing a parliamentary move they hope will force deep cuts in non-defense government spending during the current fiscal year.

They hope to tie to an emergency appropriation bill slated for House action Wednesday a provision requiring the President to reduce spending plans announced in his January budget.

Rep. Frank T. Bow of Ohio, senior Republican on the Appropriations Committee, said no fixed amount for cutting has been decided on but "it will be substantial."

If the move is to succeed, it will require approval by the Appropriations Committee, which has scheduled a session Wednesday morning to act on a resolution providing temporary funds for agencies whose annual money bills for the current year have not yet cleared Congress.

The 50-member committee is composed of 30 Democrats and 20 Republicans, but Bow said he expected some Democratic support. The House is scheduled to consider the temporary funding bill Wednesday afternoon.

Federal agencies which have not received their annual money allotments will be moneyless after midnight next Saturday, Wednesday.

Wednesday's measure will extend the deadline another month. Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee has held up consideration of the President's request for an income tax boost until there is clear indication that spending would be reduced.

While Mills has set no fixed figure for cuts, other committee members have talked in the area of $5 billion or more.

Strike nears end, more schools open

DETROIT (UPI) -- Michigan's massive teachers' strikes which had idled more than 500,000 schoolchildren earlier this month came closer to an end Monday as teachers in two more districts returned to their classrooms.

Teachers in the suburban Detroit districts of Highland Park and Crestwood agreed to new contracts and schools were reopened. About 12,500 children and nearly 800 teachers in the two districts were able to end their summer vacation nearly three weeks after schools had been scheduled to open.

"We didn't expect to get much done in the first day back, but at least the schools are open again," one Highland Park teacher said as classes opened at noon.

Of the 36 school districts that failed to start school on time, including the huge Detroit school system, only two remained shut down Monday along with Lake Michigan Community College in Benton Harbor.

Negotiations were continuing in the Detroit area district of Hamtramck and the upper peninsula district of Menominee.

About 5,000 children remained locked out of school in the two districts while some 420 teachers continued their "no contract-no work" pledges. At Lake Michigan Community College, 49 teachers continued to hold out, delaying the start of classes for the school's 2,000 students.

Inching toward participation

Petitioning is now under-way for previously non-existent student positions on student-faculty committees, but whether there will be a wave of student interest is yet to be seen.

And there is an obvious need for students with a keen interest in the educational future of this University. Also in demand is a careful screening structure to be used by ASMSU in selecting students for these seats.

Many months of debate preceded opening doors traditionally barred to student participation on five faculty committees and the Academic Council.

On June 6, the Academic Council approved the recommendations of the Committee on Committees, calling for partial student participation. And now with the Academic Freedom Report in effect and a new academic year beginning, the process of filling those seats begins.

One graduate and one undergraduate student will have non-voting membership on the International Projects, Educational Policies, Curriculum, Student Affairs, and Library Committees.

Also, one meeting of the Academic Council each year will include students, who may make formal or informal presentations and participate in a question-and-answer session.

There will be increased student-faculty communications. However, the non-voting proviso betrays the faculty's continued reluctance to accept full participation by students in University policy formulation.

Even a token membership, to be meaningful, must carry full voting responsibilities.

Rejection of the idea of student membership on the Academic Council is the biggest disappointment. Opening one meeting yearly is hardly more than former policy.

Though compromise was the apparent aim of the Council and the Committee on Committees, there was no concession on this point by the faculty.

Faculty members, it seems, are not yet convinced that students deserve an important role in the affairs of the University they attend.

The formula prepared by the Committee on Committees appears to be a workable, though not completely adequate, first step. Implementation--effective implementation--is the next problem. The success of the first plan is nearly a prerequisite for further attempts at progress in the field of student involvement.

Thoughtful selection of the students for the trial positions will give the venture at least a chance at success. Despite the apparent token quality of this first experiment at student representation, an impressive student response now would keep alive the promise of opening the doors wider in the future.

Hanoi must change pattern with increased losses in South

SAIGON--Are the intransigent noises currently being made in Hanoi a kind of whistling in the graveyard, in the most horribly literal sense of the phrase?

The question arises for two quite different reasons. In Israel, to begin with, Moshe Dayan was explaining the almost inconceivably detailed and farsighted preparations the Israeli general staff had made before their confrontation with the Arabs. This reporter thoughtlessly remarked that all this forethought no doubt explained the trifling figure of Israeli losses.

"Trifling!" Dayan said with some sharpness. "You do not seem to have figured out that for our small Israel to lose 800 men in a week is like your giant United States losing more than 60,000 in a week."

Obviously Dayan was right, as he has a habit of being, to use the population-loss ratio as the correct gauge of a war's cost. Obviously, too, this is the right way to gauge the cost of the war here to North Vietnam, which has a population of approximately 16 million.

It must be said at once that this matter of the war's cost to Hanoi has already produced grave errors of judgment, including grave errors by this reporter. In particular, far too little weight was given to the cardinal fact that at the time of the serious American intervention in the summer of 1965 we were beginning a war of attrition from what amounted to a standing start.

At that time, in other words, the war was costing North Vietnam almost nothing. The military hardware came from China, in the main. The cost of delivery in South Vietnam was then minimal. Hanoi's main investment then amounted, in fact, to the two North Vietnamese divisions, about 25,000 men, that were then in the south, plus the cadres needed to maintain Hanoi's entire direction and control of the southern war.

Hanoi's puppets

The southerners--the true Viet Cong--were then paving all the rest of the bill. And throughout 1965 and early 1966 the largest part of the burden continued to be borne by Hanoi's puppets in the south, for in this period Viet Cong recruitment rates were still maintained at a high level.

By the spring of 1966, however, replacing losses by recruiting in the south began to become more and more difficult. Careful analysis of captured documents has shown that the southern recruiting rate was then 7,000 men a month; and this was not enough to prevent an increasing requirement for troops from the north.

By the spring of this year, further careful analysis of the continuing flood of captured documents revealed that the southern recruiting had dropped to about 3,500 men a month. Another round of analysis is now in progress, with results not as yet exactly predictable. But it is a good horseback guess that the new rate of southern recruitment will not be much above 2,000 men a month.

The southern recruiting rate must in turn be set against enemy losses in battle, in prisoners of war and in deserters that reached just under 10,000 men in January, soared to 16,000 in March, again passed 15,000 in April and dropped to the level of a bit more than 12,500 in July. Adding the very substantial losses along the Ho Chi Minh Trail (often as high as 10% of an outfit in transit), plus the serious toll taken by malaria and other diseases, you get a total enemy loss for July that cannot have been much below 15,000 men and may have reached 18,000.

Let us take the median figure of 16,000 a month, which is probably very conservative. Nearly half this total were soldiers who fell in the particularly heavy fighting along the demilitarized zone and elsewhere in the 1st Corps area. Here the enemy troops engaged are mainly North Vietnamese.

In the 2nd and 3rd Corps areas, too, almost all the big units have by now become predominantly North Vietnamese, even when they have a Viet Cong label. These units have also been fairly heavily engaged. Thus, it is a fair estimate that about 7,000 North Vietnamese were lost in the month of July alone.

Crucial stage

Furthermore, the Hanoi war planners have reached the crucial state where they must choose between replacing very large Viet Cong losses with still more North Vietnamese or quite radically changing their own plans. If southern recruitment is only 2,000 to 3,000 per month, and the overall enemy loss rate is something like 16,000 per month, the north must meet a monthly replacement bill of at least 13,000 per month.

Using Dayan's ratio, the North Vietnamese losses in July are equivalent to American losses of about 80,000 men in a single month. Again using Dayan's ratio the monthly replacement requirement the Hanoi war planners have to meet is equivalent to a requirement for about 170,000 Americans per month. It also exceeds the maximum manpower drain the Pentagon experts long ago decided Hanoi could withstand for any period.

The Hanoi war planners, of course, have the option of changing the war's pattern--by relinquishing their designs on the 1st Corps area, particularly. But that means the beginning of acceptance of defeat. And if they do not change the pattern, the question then arises, how long can they possibly continue at such cost? Not forever is the obvious though lamentably imprecise answer.

The ticket snafu

Saturday's football game against Houston was disappointing in several ways. Second only to the stinging defeat was the student ticket and seating arrangement.

The Athletic Ticket Department goofed in their guess of student attendance. As was noted during the game, it was the second largest opening day crowd in Spartan Stadium history, with more than 75,000 spectators.

Actually, the ticket department cannot be flatly condemned for its error. It faced several unknowns new to its estimatory skills. It displayed, however, an unnecessary shortsightedness.

With three days of registration and only two days of classes last week, it was felt that the usual formula of selling reserved seat tickets to seniors and graduate students on Monday, juniors on Tuesday, etc., could not be followed. Thus students were sold tickets to sections, according to class standing, during the whole week.

To complicate matters, there was a greater number of senior tickets sold than usual. This was attributed to larger enrollment in the senior class and the graduate schools. (Graduate students get senior ticket privileges.)

As if this weren't enough to crowd the senior sections, the ticket distribution by sections made it easy for students with less desirable seats (underclassmen) to sneak into the better ones. Seniors, therefore, found themselves in a special pinch.

With all these difficulties, things still could have been planned better. The ticket department knew it would be Band Day, knew students would be on campus, knew there were high expectations for the game.

A better plan would have been to sell reserved seat tickets to students, in sections according to class standing, during the three days of registration. Those students who hadn't bought tickets by Thursday would then be sold the tickets left in any section irrespective of class. This could have eliminated many of the problems, while remaining reasonably fair.

Since the regular ticket distribution system will be followed for the rest of the season, Bill Beardsley, Athletic Ticket Director, has guaranteed that seating for the remaining games will be better.

But, with several more games like Saturday's, Beardsley may have no worries anyway.

McNamara's goal: halt China

WASHINGTON--The important speech by Defense Secretary Robert McNamara at San Francisco contained more than the expected decision to build a "thin shield" of antiballistic missiles (ABMs) to protect the United States from missile attacks. It contained also the most sweeping (and morbidly fascinating) overall public statement of American nuclear defense strategy since the "posture statement" that McNamara gave to a congressional committee in February, 1966.

As such it requires analysis by students of military strategy and decision-makers involved with strategy, all over the world, and by citizens who look beyond the messy Vietnam war to a possible nuclear holocaust that may be unthinkable but is not impossible.

One thing you will find in the McNamara talk is that without neglecting defense against Soviet power America is more concerned with what the Communist Chinese regime might do. For at least a decade there has been a strategy battle among American nuclear planners between putting a lot more research and money into the intercontinental ballistic missile system and putting it into the ABM system. It has been a battle between putting the emphasis on offensive weapons that will penetrate the enemy's defense screen and putting it on defensive weapons that will set up a strong screen of one's own.

McNamara has consistently supported the position that the best defense is offensive strength, and he still does--at least toward the Soviet Union. But toward China he has now agreed on a defensive defense, too.

Policy change

This means, I am convinced, two things, perhaps even three. First, it is a signal that America does not believe in the existence of a global Communist monolith, but distinguishes between the Soviet Union and China, and regards a nuclear threat from China (either accidental or deliberate) as more possible in the 1970s than one from Russia. If this is true, it marks publicly a change in American foreign policy and defense policy that has been going on quietly since Khrushchev backed down on the Cuban missile crisis and signed a test-ban treaty with the United States.

Second, it means that, at the very moment when the Russians are helping Hanoi mightily in the Vietnam war and when American bombers are punishing Haiphong which has become practically a Russian port, America still keeps the door open and the lamp burning for the Soviets. McNamara and Dean Rusk are still anxious for long-range joint action with Russia on nuclear arms-control and even stockpile reduction.

In the face of a formidable coalition of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the congressional defense bigwigs (Sen. John Pastore, Sen. Henry Jackson, Rep. Mendel Rivers), McNamara is still resisting their pressure to beat out the Russians and build a stronger defensive ABM system than they are already in process of building.

His reason is that there is no sense or profit in a nuclear-arms-race-to-the-death with the Russians: if America builds a big ABM system, Russia will build a bigger ICBM system to penetrate it, and America will again respond, and you get an intensifying of the crazy deadly spiral of action-reaction which is already crazy and deadly enough.

So much to the good. It is a healthy thing to have the most brilliant defense minister in the world, in charge of the most massive weapons structure in history, put the damper on a nuclear arms race. Perhaps mankind is not wholly doomed to madness.

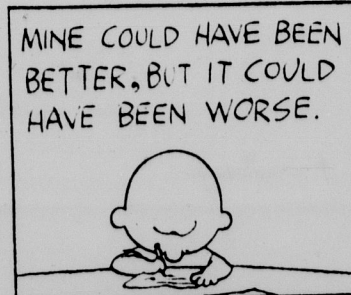

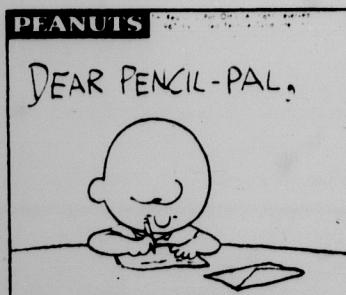

Yet there is a third possible meaning in McNamara's decision--a warning to the Russians that if they go on with their ABM buildup and if their hawks persist in ignoring America's wooing on nuclear peace, America might have to build a tougher ABM system, too. For once America gets into "the ABM business," as it has been called, the pressures will be strong to move from a thin shield to a heavy one. The Russians should know that even McNamara won't be able to hold off the American nuclear hawks indefinitely and that if he is pushed out of his post his successor may not have his strength of resistance.

McNamara human

A few years ago, for my sins, I wrote a book on overkill weapons and their political consequences. It has meant studying McNamara's methods and policies with some care. A lot of nonsense, along with some sense, has been written about his computer mind and his unyielding personality. The fact is that with all his brilliant qualities and his miscalculations on the Vietnam war he is a deeply human person, with a humanist commitment that anyone can size up by reading his Montreal speech of May, 1966.

His mixture of toughness of will, precision of language, fact-mindedness, sweeping view and infuriating belief in his own rightness--the whole McNamara mix--will be found in his most recent speech, too. One will also find in it an illustration of a great sentence in President Kennedy's Inaugural: "remembering on both sides that civility is not a sign of weakness, and sincerity is always subject to proof."

Underground plant almost complete

Demolition of the remaining part of the old North Power Plant will begin this week and be completed by mid-October, according to Howard Wilson, associate director of the Physical Plant.

The new distribution center there for steam, water, compressed air, condensate return and electricity is almost complete, Wilson said. It will be completely underground, covered by part of the plaza leading from the new Administration Building to Agriculture Hall.

The underground room of the Old Plant will continue to house all but the electrical facilities. While steam and electricity will no longer be generated there, lines from Plant '65 and the Shaw Lane Plant will supply power and the underground facility will distribute it.

The old plant was inefficient because of small and outdated equipment. The continuity of lines had to be kept, however, or new cable and pipelines would have to be laid over the entire campus.

The new electrical switching vault is now complete and roofed over with concrete. It is just south of the old plant, it will lie a little east of the main concourse of the plaza.

The rooms will be checked daily by physical plant personnel when construction is completed.

The steam distribution center serves about one third of the total building space heated on campus, most of it in the older buildings of North Campus. One quarter of the electrical power generated on campus will be distributed from there—seven megawatts of the 28 megawatts that the campus uses. Of those, 11 megawatts are generated at the Shaw Plant and the rest at Plant '65; when the demand is lighter, the new plant supplies the whole load.

MSU frosh is charged with drunk driving

An MSU student faced court action Saturday.

Thomas J. Tonkin, Escanaba freshman, was arraigned at Lansing Township Justice Court on a charge of drunk driving. He pleaded guilty to the offense that occurred early that morning and paid fines and court costs amounting to $100. University police said.

Power Failure

Workmen finally succeeded in demolishing the old power plant by the computer center. The new one will be completely underground.

'Suspicious' police posters taken down after protest

The posters encouraging the public to report any suspicious action to the police are being taken down.

"The language was apparently offensive to many citizens and we don't want to offend anyone," Richard O. Bernitt, director of the Dept. of Public Safety, said.

The criticism stemmed mainly from the use of the word "suspicious" more than anything else, Capt. Adam J. Zutant, commander of the University police said.

"However, we still need help from the public," Bernitt said. "Taking down the posters does not change that fact."

"The Dept. of Public Safety, in fact, every police and safety department across the nation, is in dire need of citizen aid in an effort to reduce crime," he said.

Bernitt said he is willing to listen to any plans, not necessarily for posters, but for any means in which the police and the public could work together.

Bernitt mentioned that the department is not closed to any opinions. "We appreciate any constructive help," he said.

Unlocked doors allow six thefts

Six apartment thefts were reported over the weekend, East Lansing police said.

"Unlocked balcony doors have resulted in many of the thefts," according to Lt. Steve Naert. "The intruders would climb up to the second level balcony of the apartments and go through the sliding glass doors left unlocked by the occupants," he said.

About $150 in cash and $1450 in commodities were reported stolen. All the thefts were the result of unlocked doors.

A suitcase also was taken from the Greyhound bus terminal on Grand River Avenue.

Twin theaters to open

Safety Island

Circle Drive is being changed so that a pedestrian safety island can be erected in front of the new Administration Building.

State News photo by Jerry McAllister

Within a month, the number of indoor theaters in Lansing will jump from 4 to 6.

The new Spartan Twin Theater in Frandar Shopping Center, about a mile from campus should open sometime during the first half of October.

For those who are unfamiliar with the concept, a twin theater involves two separate auditoria under a single roof. Each of these is equipped with its own screen and projection facilities.

At the "Spartan," the theatergoer will have to select one of two features and purchase his ticket at the proper box office. Inside the lobby is split by a common, enclosed concession stand. Passage between the two lobbies is, of course, prohibited.

The West screen will be equipped for high density, high clarity 70mm projection with a stereophonic sound system. The East screen will be a combination of 35 and 70mm. The theater will not, for the present, use Cinerama; this is more of a booking problem than an equipment one.

The East and West houses will have seating capacities of 999 and 651 respectively and the seats will be staggered, an arrangement which has been patented by the American Seating Company. The aisles will be overwide allowing maximum leg room.

Opening features for the Twin will be "Rough Night in Jerico," a Dean Martin western, and the Elizabeth Taylor-Richard Burton rendition of "The Taming of the Shrew."

Saving Bond

Whether or not James Bond only lives twice remains to be seen as the search continues for a successor to Sean Connery's throne among the secret agents and box office block busters.

Albert Broccoli, one of the masterminds behind the Bond Bonanza has stated his intention of continuing the incredibly successful motion picture series. In addition, Saltzman has said, "We are going to go ahead with the series without Sean. We don't want an actor to appear in films he is not enthusiastic about. Even if Sean changes his mind, that will not affect our decision. We are looking for a new James Bond."

Israel wants Arabs to negotiate

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Israel stood firm Monday on its demand for direct negotiations with Arab nations as the only course to peace in the Middle East and indicated no weakening of its strong grip on Jerusalem.

Foreign Minister Abba Eban, in a major address to the U.N. General Assembly, declared that "a call to Middle Eastern states to negotiate the conditions of their future coexistence is the most constructive course which this assembly can take."

In his speech, Eban renewed Israel's pledge to respect the present cease-fire arrangements and said that his government stood "ready to negotiate their replacement by treaties of peace which will ensure the security of all Middle Eastern states and establish conditions of stable coexistence."

But he said that any settlement must include an end to the Arab belligerency against Israel.

Ignoring assembly resolutions calling on Israel to rescind the steps it has taken to annex the former Jordanian sector of Jerusalem and refrain from further such measures, Eban denounced Jordan as a "predicament which made Jerusalem a military frontier, which separated its citizens into two hostile camps, and which by obstruction of access desecrated some of the holiest and no less sanctified in the history of mankind."

"After 20 sordid years of division, war and strife," he said, "there is now unity, peace and the assurance of access to the Holy Places."

Earlier, U.N. delegates heard sharply contrasting views on the racial situation in southern Africa.

Foreign Minister Hilgard Muller of South Africa, whose government is constantly under fire here for its policy of apartheid, or racial separation, pleaded for a "spirit of cooperation, good-neighboredness and tolerance" among nations as the U.N. Charter demands.

Prime Minister Lesetsoa Jonathan of Lesotho, a small new African country entirely surrounded by South Africa, took a more moderate tone and offered his government's good offices for a dialogue between South Africa and the rest of the world.

'S' VS. CALVIN TODAY

By NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

Even after his team defeated Purdue University 11-0, Saturday, Soccer Coach Gene Kenney still isn't sure about his offense—for today's game here against Calvin College at 3:30 p.m.

Not that he doesn't have a scoring threat, he just doesn't know which players to use.

Kenney's big dilemma is at center forward, the position team co-captain Guy Busch has started at the past two years. But sophomore Trevor Harris started there Saturday and scored five goals.

Busch injured his ankle earlier in the practice season and did not start against Purdue, but played the final three quarters and scored three goals.

"I'm not completely set on the starting lineup," Kenney said.

Kenney will work different combinations against Calvin and probably decide something definite for the weekend game at Pittsburgh, considered one of the toughest games on the schedule.

When Busch came into the lineup Saturday, he played center forward and Kenney moved Harris to outside left, replacing Tom Kreft.

Harris is big enough and fast enough to play practically any position on the forward line.

Starting at inside left against Calvin will be Ernie Tuscherer, while Tony Keyes will play inside right. Gary McBrady will start at the right wing.

Defensively, Kenney will go with the same combination that held the Boilermakers to only six shots on goal.

Joe Baum will be goalie and will have good assistance from fullbacks Terry Sanders and Tom Belloli and halfbacks Barry Tiemann, Bert Jacobsen and co-captain Peter Hens, in front of him.

The defense may find Calvin as offensively impotent as Purdue was. In nine meetings with the Knights the Spartans have been victorious, scoring 50 goals against two for Calvin.

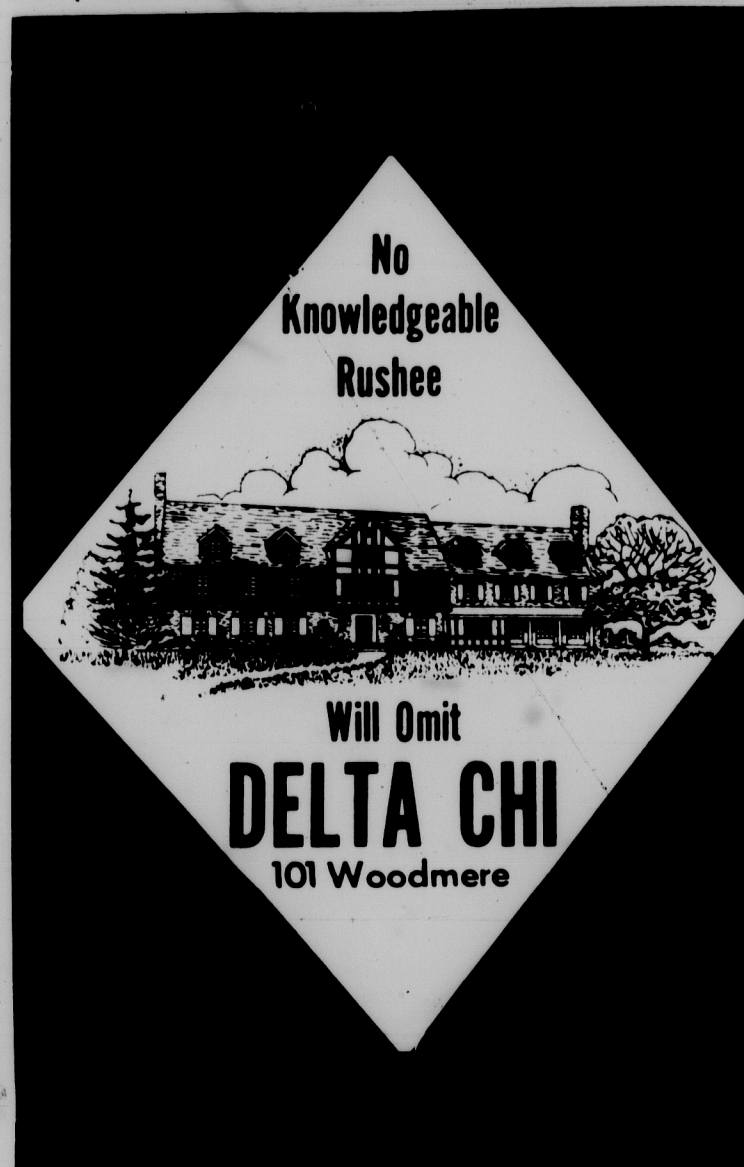

The Knights were defeated by Maryknoll, 5-1, in their only game this season.

Last year, MSU defeated Calvin 13-0.

Trevor Harris (right), the Spartan soccer team's top sophomore, will be in the lineup today when the booters meet Calvin College at 3:30 p.m. Harris had five goals against Purdue Saturday.

Daugherty claims Spartans not that bad

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

The usually jovial Duffy Daugherty wasn't himself at Monday's press luncheon.

His Spartans had just suffered a bitter loss to Houston Saturday in the opening game of the season and face an even tougher opponent in Southern California this Saturday.

Daugherty had reason to be worried. But he made it clear he wasn't completely discouraged by the Spartans' 37-7 defeat to Houston.

"I don't think we're as bad as would appear after Saturday," Daugherty said. "We didn't have a good third quarter, but everyone will admit that at the half it was still anybody's ball game."

"We did what we thought we had to do to beat them in the first half—control the ball. But as I've said before, ball control is effective only if you score."

"We missed some great opportunities to score which would have made our ball control offense more effective."

Then Daugherty turned to the one all-important opportunity that was missed in the closing seconds of the first half and explained what went wrong.

"It wasn't Jimmy Raye's fault at all," Daugherty said, clarifying earlier reports. "In the time out before we had third and five, we planned two plays."

"The first was to run Bob Apisa at tackle, which we did, and if it came up short to put Reggie Cavender in to block and let Dwight Lee run the ball."

"We had 55 seconds left, and Jimmy was going back to call a huddle but an offensive lineman read the clock wrong and started yelling for everybody to line up."

"When Cavender came in both Apisa and Lee left, but Apisa didn't make it out of the end zone and we were called for too many men on the field."

With the play broken, Raye decided to run it himself, but bumped into Cavender and slipped down.

Daugherty said that Houston coach Bill Yeoman felt this was the play that gave the Cougars the incentive they needed to turn the second half into a rout.

A 77-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter put MSU 10 points down and took away the ball control game.

MSU's defense was the next topic for the coach's comments.

Pointing out corrected statistics showing MSU running 74 offensive plays to 54 for Houston, and throwing the Cougars for losses on 13 of those plays, Daugherty said, "I think that shows there's hope for our defense, and that we have potential."

"We weren't bothered by Houston's dive option offense, it was those long runs and passes and most of them came on long yardage situations."

"On both those plays we didn't have Jess Phillips, our fastest man in there, and we don't have the great speed we had before. Jimmy Summers saved us a couple of times in the last two years by catching guys from behind."

Phillips sustained a knee injury in the game and along with defensive end George Chatlos is doubtful for the Southern Cal game.

"They certainly won't be atop speed Saturday if they do play, and everyone knows we'll be hurting without them."

"Tody Smith hurt his foot again, and I don't think we'll be able to use him for the rest of the season."

Preliminary plans are to have either Jim Juday or Bob Lange take over at Chatlos' end position, and move either Bob Super or Paul Lawson to Phillips' rover-back spot.

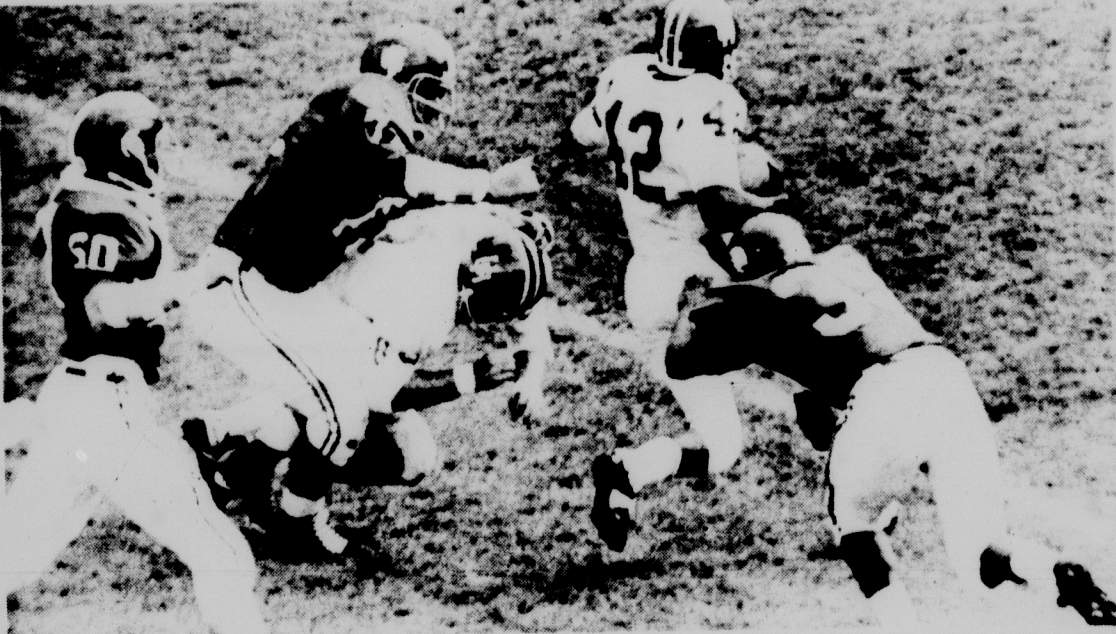

Bill Ware would then move in at the safety position.

If Drake Garrett doesn't recover from leg injury, sophomore Steve Garvey could replace him Saturday.

Injured gridders

Not only did MSU lose to Houston but it may have lost the services of Tody Smith (left) for the season and George Chatlos (top left) and Jesse Phillips for the Southern California game. Smith suffered a severely injured ankle, Chatlos an injured ankle and Phillips a bruised leg.

Running for daylight

Houston's Warren McVea gave the Spartans' defense fits all day Saturday, rushing for 155 yards and one touchdown. McVea is a similar runner to the one MSU will meet this Saturday, Southern California's O. J. Simpson who led the Trojans to a 17-13 victory over Texas last weekend.

Twins lose, lead tied again

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (UPI)—Jim Fregosi collected three hits and drove in three runs Monday to give the California Angels a 9-2 victory over Minnesota and drop the Twins into a tie with the Boston Red Sox for the American League lead.

The loss gave both Minnesota and Boston identical 90-68 records with each team having four games remaining.

The Angels, who got a total of 15 hits, touched Twins' starter Jim Merritt for a run in the first on consecutive singles by Fregosi, Rick Reichardt and Bubba Morton and finished him with three runs in the second.

Angels' starter George Brunet and Leo Rodriguez singled before Fregosi delivered a two-run triple. Fregosi scored the third run of the inning on Reichardt's single.

The Angels added three more off reliever Dave Boswell in the fourth. Fregosi, Reichardt, Jimmie Hall and Don Mincher hit consecutive singles to account for two runs and Roger Repoz sent in Hall with a sacrifice fly.

Rodriguez' two-run bases loaded single in the seventh accounted for the Angels' final runs.

The Twins scored their only runs in the fourth on singles by Bob Allison, Rod Carew, pinch hitter Rich Rollins and Ted Uhlaender.

Strike continues - attendance drops

NEW YORK (AP) -- The nation's largest public school system reached a point of almost complete collapse Monday as negotiations with striking New York City teachers dragged into a third week. About 88 per cent of the pupils stayed home.

With peace talks bogged down, School Supt. Bernard Donovan dropped out of the bargaining to keep a date in Washington to discuss school funding matters with federal officials.

Of the 1.1 million normal classroom enrollment, only about 130,000 pupils reported at the city's 900 public schools--by far the smallest number on any day the schools have been open. Many were sent home, few received any formal instructions.

The strike began Sept. 11, the first day of the new term. Schools were closed completely last Thursday and Friday in anticipation of a reopening Monday. Prior to that, attendance had dropped daily from the opening day total of about 600,000.

Albert Shanker, president of the 49,000-member United Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, said negotiations with the Board of Education were "a quagmire of no situation."

A tentative settlement of the strike had been announced Sept. 21, based on a $135-million wage package for the union. However, in the process of reducing the agreement to writing, the board and the UFT split anew and Monday's scheduled resumption of classes fell through.

Tighten admissions policy: CUE

agenda item for the fall meeting of the Academic Senate.

Junior colleges

CUE also saw the need to keep two-year colleges in Michigan informed of programs offered at MSU, and recommended that:

6. The University should continue to develop relationships with these junior colleges and attempt to attract more of their top transferring students.

Orientation, considered part of the over-all admissions program, "begins, as it must, where the students are," the committee said, "but it does not take them very far beyond this point."

Two recommendations of orientation from CUE were presented to emphasize academic character in the university community:

7. Optimum faculty involvement should be sought for the total orientation program, with student aides limited primarily to non-academic duties.

8. Use of post-admission newsletters and lectures to acquaint new students with the history, recent development and future hopes of the University, including a general essay on "the idea of the university."

The second and longest chapter in the CUE report is devoted to "Quality of Teaching."

The most common complaints in this area, the report noted, were the large lecture courses, due to increased enrollments and the increasing distance between the professor and his student. But, other problems were also noted.

Publish or perish

"The phrase 'publish or perish' outrageously misstates the issue—but there is an issue here," the report states. "The ideal combination of teaching and research can easily degenerate into teaching versus research. Rewards flow more easily to achievement measured solely by scholarly productivity and conscientious teachers become seriously discouraged."

Other problems pointed out are "the indiscriminate use of untrained (and occasionally unqualified) graduate students," and lack of an adequate teacher-evaluation process.

The report defines a good teacher as one who is committed to both the course and the students, and one who is prepared. "But perhaps the most telling characteristic of the good teacher is the manner in which he draws his students into the act of learning," CUE said. "Knowledge is always incomplete, and the best teacher manifests the humble attitude of a learner among learners, rather than the arch manner of an accomplished expert who knows all there is to know and whose lectures and reading assignments must be taken at face value."

While good teaching is an individual commitment, CUE pointed out that the University can help create an atmosphere which stresses the importance of undergraduate teaching and can provide an adequate reward system. Therefore it recommended that:

9. A Committee on Teaching be established in each undergraduate department to supervise the training and work of teaching assistants, orient new faculty, involve all faculty in sharing experience and ideas, conduct studies and experiments aimed at improving instruction, and recommend to the department changes for possible improvement.

10. These committees would be in constant contact with the Provost's Office through the departmental chairmen and deans for campus-wide coordination. About one-fourth of the faculty who responded to a CUE questionnaire spring term cited large classes as the major weakness of the University.

Larger faculty

Class size and the ratio of students to full-time faculty are two indications of possible student-faculty interaction. The report cited statistics of an increased average section size in undergraduate courses from 27 in 1955 to 43 in 1966. Also in 1966, there were 287 undergraduates for each full-time faculty member in the 70 departments teaching undergraduates. But this does not account for those members of the faculty who were (and are) not teaching full time at the undergraduate level.

CUE thus recommended that:

11. Departments with large and increasing ratio of students to faculty should continue to have top priority in allocation of new positions for undergraduate teaching; and these departments should respond by increasing participation of regular faculty in teaching undergraduate classes.

12. The Educational Development Program should be strengthened as the major organization involved in studies aimed at improving instruction.

CUE presented three recommendations for qualitative and not necessarily quantitative value of technical assistance in the classroom:

13. Faculty should be encouraged to consult with the Learning Service and the Instructional Media Center, which should be available to departments at no charge.

14. Faculty should also be encouraged to use the consultative, test scoring and test analyses services of the Office of Evaluation Services to improve classroom examinations. This service should be continued at no charge.

15. The Office of Space Utilization should continue to identify inadequate facilities; when identified, these facilities should be renovated or no longer used.

CUE also stressed the importance of adequately trained teaching assistants, but added that "the graduate teaching assistant should be an assistant. He should help the professor to provide the best opportunity for students to learn."

The committee strongly supported 13 recommendations made by the faculty standing Educational Policies Committee in 1964, but further recommended that:

16. The Provost's Office develop a system of awards for excellence in teaching by graduate assistants.

17. Departments should be encouraged to use graduate students holding fellowships as teaching assistants, for extra compensation where possible.

Evaluation of teaching, both by students and faculty is needed, CUE felt, to properly identify and reward exceptional teaching and to improve the general quality of instruction.

"The important question is not 'Are these evaluations going to be made?' the committee pointed out, "but rather, 'How are they going to be made?'"

The question of whether students are qualified to evaluate teachers is irrelevant, CUE said.

"All teachers are concerned with student learning," it said. "Consequently, if a student's perceptions, attitudes and beliefs interfere with his learning, the existence of these perceptions, attitudes and beliefs is important even if they are not accurate."

In brief, the importance of two-way communication in the classroom cannot be overestimated," CUE said. "Students will learn from their instructor and he in turn can and should learn from them."

ROAMERS

Any red doggin' American who appreciates the added quality of hand-sewn detailing is likely to make a play for your Roamers. Just tell him that both male and lady Roamers are built from the same choice leathers... hand-stitched by the same select craftsmen... and, for about fifteen bucks, he can strut around in a pair of his very own. However, for your dainty feet, Roamers are priced from as low as eleven dollars.

Men's from $16. Women's from $11.
