WASHINGTON (P) — Military-civilian differences over North Vietnam bombing sharpened Wednesday as the war drew critical discussion both in Washington and at the United Nations.

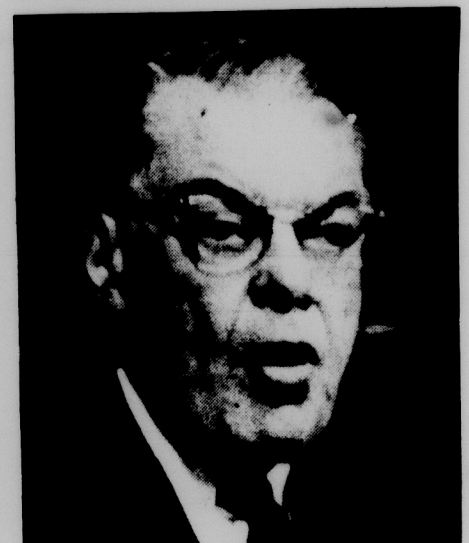

The controversy whirled around these developments:

—Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara reiterated his stand against attacking the Communist port of Haiphong, the major entry point for Soviet aid. "A risk I don't believe we should undertake at this time," he said.

—Newly released congressional testimony placed Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, at odds with the administration's decision making Haiphong a sanctuary from U.S. bombs.

—Republican Sen. Thurston B. Morton of Kentucky, speaking to the Business Executive Move for Vietnam Peace, charged that President Johnson was "brainwashed" by U.S. military and civilian leaders into believing a military solution is possible in Vietnam.

—Canada, in a policy stand voiced by Foreign Secretary Paul Martin at the United Nations in New York, said a halt to the bombing of North Vietnam is the first priority in efforts to start peace talks with the Communists.

—Denmark's Prime Minister Jens Otto Krag told the National Press Club in Washington the United States should "run a limited risk" and stop the air attacks to see whether negotiations might follow.

McNamara, before leaving Washington for a NATO nuclear meeting in Turkey, discounted once again the extent of the military's differences with the Johnson administration over conduct of the war.

The Pentagon chief portrayed Wheeler's testimony as "a balanced appraisal of the potential risks and gains" of raiding Haiphong while Soviet ships may be docked unloading supplies.

But Wheeler, in comments given Aug. 16 to a closed hearing of the Senate preparedness subcommittee, asserted that after considering all factors, "I have come down on the side that we could undertake actions against the port of Haiphong."

The four-star general said that if Haiphong were neutralized and Soviet war shipments halted, he believes an end to the war might come relatively soon.

Wheeler was not more specific with a projection of the war's duration but said if Soviet aid to the Hanoi regime were halted "any sizable conflict would be impossible for the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong."

Wheeler further disclosed the joint chiefs wanted to hit 90 major targets in 16 days' intense raiding early in 1966 but the administration chose a gradual escalation which allowed the bombing of only 22 JCS-recommended targets all last year.

And he revealed that during McNamara's trip to Vietnam in July, commanders were sounded out on the idea of limiting air attacks to North Vietnam's southern panhandle well below Hanoi. They objected to such a concept.

This disclosure stands in marked contrast to McNamara's post-trip statement at a White House news conference July 12 that while in Saigon "only incidentally did we discuss the air war in the north." Morton noted in his speech that his view is a switch from 1965 "When the President began to escalate the war, I supported the increased American military involvement."

"If the President of the United States has been mistaken, so have I," he told his applauding audience.

Morton's "brainwashing" comment apparently was a pointed followup to allegations by Michigan Gov. George Romney earlier this month. The governor said he had been brainwashed by military and diplomatic leaders during a visit to Vietnam.

In this case, Morton said, it was the President who was brainwashed by the military-industrial complex about the prospects of a Vietnam victory.

Johnson, in turn, brainwashed the American people during the 1964 presidential campaign by saying the Southeast Asia war should be fought by Asians, rather than Americans, Morton declared.

The Business Executive Move for Vietnam Peace before which Morton spoke claims a membership of business leaders from 44 states.

The same audience heard former South Vietnam ambassador Tran Van Dinh say the majority of his countrymen oppose the U.S. military presence in Vietnam.

Dinh said that since his country's Sept. 3 presidential election South Vietnam's intellectuals and religious leaders are "openly antiwar and anti-American."

Canada's policy enunciation before the U.N. General Assembly said it seems clear that all attempts to bring about talks between the United States and North Vietnam "are doomed to failure unless the bombing is stopped."

Martin acknowledged, however, that a bombing halt is "only one side of a military equation." If there is to be success, he said, peace efforts cannot proceed "as if the other side did not exist."

Martin depicted an end to air attacks as only the starting point in the process of settling the conflict.

Earlier this month Johnson went to great lengths during a news conference to dispel reports of a serious rift between the administration and the Joint Chiefs of Staff on bombing target selection.

To the contrary, the President said, military and civilian leaders are more in harmony now than in previous years.

But the specific case of Haiphong seemed to indicate that while there may be broad agreements on most policy decisions involving the war, a few deep-seated differences persist.

MARINES HOLD ON

Mud, shelling test Con Thien

CON THIEN, Vietnam (P) — The name Con Thien may not be recorded in Marine history beside Guadalcanal or Iwo Jima, but Marines here will remember these muddy hills as a place where bravery was routine and heroism was commonplace.

Con Thien is a forward position for a detachment of U.S. Marines hanging on grimly in the face of the greatest artillery rocket and mortar siege seen in Vietnam since the French were overwhelmed 13 years ago at Dien Bien Phu.

Although the big shells come from the North, the enemy is all around.

Con Thien is an artillery base and an observation post.

It is the high ground two miles south of the demilitarized zone that divides Vietnam. The topmost hill rises about 500 feet and observers can look across the DMZ into North Vietnam. The hills are scarred and scraped by shell blasts. Red-colored mud covers everything.

Con Thien is many other things.

It is teen-aged warriors in filthy, tattered fatigues, digging their holes deeper in the brief intervals between barrages.

They joke as they dig. Sometimes they laugh.

It is the Marine officer slogging over a muddy field in the midst of a shelling to try to help a wounded man. Unable to lift the man in the thigh-deep muck, he crouches over him to shield him until the shelling lifts.

It is the big staff sergeant whistling tonelessly as he sorts his gear and prepares to move out into "Indian country." He will set up a night ambush. One aim is to discourage probes by North Vietnamese who carry bamboo Bangalore torpedoes to blow up the barrier wire around the slim perimeter.

It is the figures, covered from boots to helmet in red mud, huddled in a ditch waiting for the helicopter that will lift them out because they have "won" three Purple Hearts. If a man is wounded three times, Marine Corps allows him to be transferred to serve the rest of his tour in Okinawa or some other post. Some men have been hit three times in a single day.

It is the medical corpsman using his two hands to try to staunch bleeding from the necks of two wounded men, while he clenches a flashlight in his teeth.

It is the soft-spoken chaplain, standing in the center of a little circle of men, their heads bowed at darkness as he gives thanks for the food, and the day and the night.

Con Thien is all these things on three muddy mounds of earth facing North Vietnam. The Marines moved in last April because it is a "commanding piece of terrain, the important piece in the area," as officers express it.

Almost immediately the position came under enemy guns. In the spring and early summer, the shelling was heavy. Then the intensity dropped. More Marines moved into positions flanking Con Thien. More gunpits were set up 2,000 yards to the south. The artillery at Dong Ha, Cam

Lo and Gio Linh, the other corners of "Leatherneck Square," and the big guns at Camp Carroll, farther west, supported Con Thien. B52 bombers and tactical air strikes pounded the enemy day after day.

A month ago the North Vietnamese again began to show they were still there with heavy guns in the treelines, ridges and mountains. The pounding of Con Thien was stepped up.

There is no pattern to the siege. Sometimes it is quiet for an hour, two hours, three hours. Then there is the shout: "Incoming."

Men race for bunkers, holes and ditches.

Some officers say the nights are mostly quiet because the enemy knows it is easier to spot the muzzle flashes of his guns in the dark. But a bunker may shudder from the exploding shells at 2 or 3 a.m.

The enemy throws everything at Con Thien—artillery, 120mm and 140mm rockets and mortars.

Big Ten won't adopt MSU's tuition scale

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a two-part series by staff writer Linda Gortmaker on reactions from Big Ten administrators to MSU's sliding scale tuition plan.

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

Big Ten administrators say they probably wouldn't adopt MSU's sliding scale tuition plan at their schools and feel its administration would be "difficult" and "terrible."

Financial officers from the other nine Big Ten schools, questioned by telephone Tuesday, commented on the implications of the plan that was adopted in July by MSU's Board of Trustees.

Believed to be the first of its kind in the country, the tuition plan provides that in-state undergraduate students from families with gross incomes less than $11,800 pay $354 tuition per year.

Students from families with an income of more than $16,666 pay $500 per year, while students from families with incomes ranging between $11,800 and $16,666 pay tuition equaling three per cent of their gross family income.

All out-of-state students pay $1200 a year.

Most of the administrators, also questioned this summer immediately after approval of the plan, said Tuesday that their universities hadn't given the plan much thought.

"I would not favor it here," said Elwin T. Jolliffe, vice president for business and finance at the University of Iowa in Iowa City.

Jolliffe said he had heard no discussion on it by the administration or board of regents.

Officials at Purdue University in Lafayette, Indiana, did discuss the plan but "thought it wouldn't be too practical," according to Max M. Hulliner, comptroller.

"Of course, we can't anticipate the future," he stressed, "but MSU's method doesn't seem to go about the financial aid system in the right way."

Neil C. Cafferty, vice president for business and finance at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, does not foresee the plan's use at Wisconsin. But, he added, "We'll see how it works at your school."

"I don't think it would be used at Indiana," indicated Joseph A. Franklin, vice president and treasurer at Indiana University in Bloomington.

Franklin said that he had given information about MSU's plan to their Board of

'Review course offerings'—CUE

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a four-part series of excerpts and summary of the report of the Committee on Undergraduate Education.

By BEVERLEY TWITCHELL
State News Executive Reporter

A primary concern for the Committee on Undergraduate Education (CUE) is the relevancy of course material to the student within the University and within society. Its chapter on "Major Fields of Study" offers 16 recommendations aimed at that problem.

"It could be argued that the most important obligation a university owes to its students is the opportunity to come to know reasonably well a subject of some consequence," the CUE report states.

The report cited that approximately 170 major fields are available to undergraduates. CUE "has become convinced that certain fields now offered do not, by their total lack of connection with or dependence upon the basic disciplines, warrant a place in the University and that still others do not continue to speak to social needs of high priority," the report said.

"We must, in all that we do, maintain a balance between what is needed today and what will be needed tomorrow and the day after."

The committee then recommended that the Educational Policies and the University Curriculum Committee regularly review course offerings, to insure that they meet the requirements stated above. It also called for review at the department level.

With a concern for more flexibility in the structuring of courses, CUE suggested that the departments and colleges consider plans which vary from the usual credit weight and time span presently used.

CUE's suggestions included a twenty-week course, two or three-term tight sequence courses with enrollment for the series at the beginning of the year, a 15-credit 10-week course and more independent study and tutorial courses.

CUE further recommended that more information be available about the constituency of courses, including levels and majors on class lists, possible separation of large multiple section courses into

Board asks East Lansing to clarify voter registration

By TRINKA CLINE
State News Staff Writer

A resolution that the city of East Lansing clarify qualifications for registering to vote and for determining residency was passed by the Associated Students of MSU (ASMSU) Student Board Tuesday night.

The board also discussed a motion by Brad Lang, sophomore member-at-large, to disaffiliate with the National Student Association (NSA).

Harv Dzodin, junior member-at-large, introduced the resolution on voting registration which read "be it resolved that ASMSU demands that the city make known the qualifications of residency and the basis of determining this through the mass media periodically throughout the year and have these available for all to see in a prominent place in the city and that any student who is denied his right to register be immediately given the rationale for the decision in writing."

According to Dzodin, there are cases where students have been denied registration and also denied an explanation for the negative decision. Dzodin said the city clerk holds arbitrary power in the situation but seems to follow no uniform system in determining residency.

The resolution said "citizens attempting to register to vote have been denied this right with no explanation or with vague references to statutes based upon such nonsense questions as 'Do you visit your parents during Christmas?'"

Copies of the resolutions will be submitted soon to the city clerk's office and to Mayor Gordon Thomas.

Members of the board said they felt many students were unjustifiably denied voting rights in East Lansing since legal

Oakland's chancellor quits as bank director

Darward B. Varner, chancellor of Oakland University, resigned Tuesday as director of a Pontiac bank as a conflict of interest ruling by Attorney General Frank Kelley continued to have repercussions around the state.

Kelley's ruling Tuesday stated that a law concerning conflict of interest with "state officers" included the chief officials of colleges and universities, including presidents, vice-presidents and members of the governing boards.

The author of the law on which Kelley ruled, Rep. Jack Faxon, D-Detroit, said that he had not heard directly of anyone violating the ruling, but opined that "everybody is going to get off the gravy-boat now that Kelley has pulled the plug."

Varner, who had been a director of the Community National Bank of Pontiac, with which Oakland did business, was the only Oakland official to be affected by the ruling.

However, other Michigan universities had more than one official involved. Included so far at MSU have been President Hannah, Vice President for Finance Philip May, and possibly one or more trustees.

In addition, several officials at other universities had interests with banks with which their schools do business.

Included in this list are, at Eastern Michigan, Harold E. Sponder, Lewis E. Profit Vice president for business and finance and board members J. Don Lawrence, O. William Habel and Dr. Martin P. O'Hara.

At Western Michigan University, trustees Alfred B. Connable and Dwight Stocker had similar holdings.

At Wayne State University, the only case reported was that of Governor William Hall, who resigned last summer, at the advice of the bank.

FEE REFUND

Student applicants for fee reductions who did not receive the reduction during registration will be mailed a refund at their local address, according to the Office of Fee Determinations. The refunds will be in the mail about Nov. 1, the Office said.

Eban, speaking to the Assembly of the 18-nation Council of Europe, said that such an economic union should include free ports and open frontiers, while sovereignty of the three nations would be respected.

Eban made the suggestion in response to a question following his speech. He was asked, "Would you agree, after the conclusion of a peace treaty, to extend your assistance to the Arab nations?"

Eban replied: "I can respond

Floods aid air squadrons

SAIGON (P) -- Flash floods from storms across North Vietnam's panhandle are helping American air squadrons slow the movement of Communist supplies to the demilitarized zone, from which enemy guns have been hammering U.S. Marine outposts.

U.S. weathermen said Wednesday streams within the panhandle -- the narrow south -- Vietnam -- were swollen in one case by 18 inches of rain over a three-day period. Such a deluge could sweep away bamboo bridges, prevent fording and handicap boatmen.

A hitch in the delivery of explosives may have been a factor in the slackening of barrages the Communists have loosed daily since Sept. 1 at Con Thien, the Marines' hilltop observation post two miles south of the DMZ.

The U.S. Command said enemy action against Con Thien Tuesday was limited to about 50 mortar shells, a huge drop from the more than 1,000 artillery, rocket and mortar rounds that hit the outpost Monday.

Three Marines were killed and 10 wounded swelling losses at Con Thien and other outposts along the frontier this month to 66 killed and 997 wounded.

Associated Press correspondent Peter Arnett reported from Con Thien that there was only a light shelling Wednesday. But Marine officers were not predicting that the lull would continue.

A South Vietnamese operation on the coastal plain east of Con Thien evidently diverted some of the Communist guns Tuesday. They lobbed 850 shells at two government airborne battalions. The troops reported light casualties.

Clearing skies over North Vietnam allowed U.S. Air Force, Navy and Marine pilots to fly 144 missions against targets ranging from DMZ gunpits to the Hanoi-Haiphong heartland.

U.S. Navy pilots from the carriers Coral Sea and Intrepid returned to the port of Haiphong in raids aimed at finishing off two of the city's key bridges, previously damaged. The object is to halt the transshipment by railway and trucks of war supplies, largely from the Soviet Union and Red China, moved into Haiphong by sea.

North Vietnam used heavy anti-aircraft fire and sent up 18 or 20 MIG fighters in an effort to drive off the planes. Hanoi claimed five were shot down.

The U.S. Command said one plane, a Marine Phantom, was lost. Spokesmen said it was shot down in North Vietnamese territory near the DMZ and one of its two crewmen is missing. The other was rescued. The plane was the 684th officially listed as felled in combat over the North.

Weather forecasters expect moderately good weather will prevail for two more weeks. The U.S. Command wants to keep hitting North Vietnam as hard as it can before the northeast monsoon sets in about mid-October.

RURAL PROBLEMS TARGET

Romney tells Carolinans he wants to get insights

FLORENCE, S.C. (P) -- Gov. George Romney of Michigan, a self-styled "old automobile man who believes in keeping to a schedule," set a fast pace in South Carolina today as he heard the end of his quest for a solution to racial problems in the north.

"Unlike a lot of northerners, I am not here to go to a hotel, make a talk and give you some advice," the potential Republican presidential candidate told about 150 persons who met him at the Florence Airport.

"I'm here to learn," he added, "to get some insight into rural problems. Specifically, I'm seeking some solutions to our urban problems."

Romney and his aides, including several political writers, were greeted at the airport by state Republican Chairman Harry S. Dent and national GOP committeeman Drake Edens, both of Columbia.

Mayor David McLeod, a Democrat, presented Romney with a key to the city and called attention to the fact that Florence has won an all-American city rating. Asked about a Tuesday report that he would officially announce as a GOP presidential candidate within the next several days, Romney commented:

"I haven't decided anything yet and until I do decide, anything along that line is strictly a rumor and without a solid foundation."

The Michigan governor observed that the mechanization of agriculture has led many southern Negroes to migrate to the North where they find "a different environment and different social attitudes."

"We face this problem all over the country," he said. "I wanted to get some appreciation of the problem nationally, and I felt I ought to go on this tour."

Romney was escorted around the new downtown Florence "promenade," a no-parking area which McLeod told him corresponds to one in Kalamazoo.

They then boarded a chartered bus for a tour of the Florence-Darlington Technical Education Center. The center was particularly interesting to Romney because of its potential for training unskilled workers and improving their chances of finding good jobs in their native South.

MSU aids in survey of police

A comprehensive survey is now underway to determine the strengths and weaknesses of Michigan's police services, according to Louis Rome, Michigan Crime Commission executive director.

The survey is a joint project between the Michigan Commission on Crime, Delinquency and Criminal Administration and MSU.

"We are circulating a questionnaire to over 700 police departments, constables, sheriffs' departments, township officials and other departments in every community, township and county in the state," Rome said.

It will be necessary to obtain the views and comments of the various police officials in order for state leadership to effectively assist them, he said.

"Police leaders have expressed great interest in the study, and have been extremely generous in helping us develop the project," Rome said.

The questionnaire will enable local police to provide the Michigan Crime Commission with information in eight areas: the community in which they operate, personnel, workload, salaries and fringe benefits, administrative and fiscal matters, identification and reporting of crime statistics, equipment and facilities and relationships with other agencies, he said.

When the data has been collected it will be analyzed by MSU's Institute for Community Development and Service, Rome said. The findings will probably be made public early in 1968.

Sinking peace hopes in a widening war

General Westmoreland's latest comment on the Vietnam war should cause renewed questioning of our country's conduct in Southeast Asia.

"We are now in a position from which the picture of ultimate military success may be viewed with increasing clarity," said Westmoreland.

One implication of this statement is that a new step up in American bombing and overall military action is needed in order to bring the war to its conclusion, meaning an American and South Vietnamese "victory." General Westmoreland's statement, and all that it implies, can only lead to a new cry of warning.

It is impossible to be sure that more American build-up will not be matched by more enemy forces. It is also impossible to be sure that the Chinese will not enter the war upon further bombing near their border, despite the "reassuring" statements of American State Department officials.

Indeed, the history of American involvement in Vietnam can only show us that more American military pressure will be effectively countered by those Vietnamese who oppose us. Thus we are left with an increasingly bloody stalemate.

The strategy of trying to win the war in Vietnam by military might is doubtful, to say the least. But even if the U.S. should eventually force the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese to quit the battle, this would not in any way solve the political or economic problems that plague South Vietnam. A military victory, even if assumed possible, could not guarantee support for the government currently holding power, or unify in any way the Vietnamese people.

Hopefully the pressure now will build toward a move for peace. A temporary bombing halt, advocated by no less than the Secretary General of the United Nations, would be a first step. Diplomatic moves which might bring enemy forces to negotiate, possibly through the United Nations, should be attempted.

As we sink deeper and deeper into the Vietnam war, relying increasingly on military force, the chance for peace may be sinking with us.

Later library hours — a modest proposal

Among the many items left unresolved over the summer was that of improving service at MSU's library. While matters requiring a substantial increase in the library budget cannot be dealt with directly, extension of library hours should be considered immediately.

Last year, the 11:30 women's closing hours, combined with the early suspension of bus service, made later library operation an unjustifiable proposition.

But now that hours for upperclass women have been abolished, the library's 11 p.m. closing becomes more inconvenient than ever.

Students with night classes, and those who work afternoons or evenings, find use of the library almost impossible. In addition, those students who can get there find the short evening hours make competition for the library's limited facilities almost unbearable.

When term papers start coming due, the library will reach a level of activity far above what it can handle, and the confusion caused by construction and remodeling makes the problem even worse.

By extending library hours, more books, periodicals, and readings would be made available to more students. Even though longer hours might create some problems, the advantages in terms of better library utility make later closing a top priority item.

During this period of construction and confusion, a midnight closing should be tried, and as finals week approaches, even later times considered. Only in this way can a true determination of the plan's worth be judged.

The new world of 2000: A challenging inheritance

One might argue that the most important world event in the first third of the 20th century was the dissolution of Europe's world power, that for the second third it was the movement of American power into the vacuum left by Europe all over the world and that for the final third it will be the decline and dissolution of American power. In fact, that is pretty much what Prof. Samuel Huntington argues in the current issue of the scholarly quarterly, Daedalus.

My own feeling is that he is right in his first two propositions, but shaky on his prediction. "It ain't necessarily so." Clearly, the Pax Americana which is being tested in Vietnam is not a success. The world is too full of hate and creeds to be policed by one nation, however powerful. But American power will continue to be massive not only until the end of the century, but well beyond it.

The key question is whether the United States will learn how to work in harness with the leading nations on the more developed continents: with the Soviet bloc as the first among equals, with the West European bloc in Europe; with Japan and India, China and Indonesia in Asia; with Brazil, Mexico, Argentina and Chile in a Latin-American bloc. That question will define the chief headaches for heads of state between now and 2000. If they don't resolve it, and thus shape a new world order, the century will see a series of great death-happenings.

Of the leading Republican candidates today, Ronald Reagan is riding the wave right now, and next to him is Richard Nixon. If they are headed off, it will be by some second saving thought of what chance America would have, under them, of mending the Pax Americana and recasting it into an instrument of partnership in a world of equals. If that second saving thought comes—as it did not come with Barry Goldwater until too late for the Republicans—then the presence of Nelson Rockefeller as an alternative may prove to be the solution. For Rockefeller is the only one of the whole group who does not make the thought of his being head of state somewhat ridiculous.

The case of the Democrats is in one sense worse: President Johnson has bogged them down in an impossible war; while he has severely cut his own former high chances of winning again in 1968, he has prevented anyone else from making a stab at it. The efforts to displace him with another Democrat in 1968 seem to me futile and, for the Democrats as a party, so divisive as to be suicidal. Mr. Johnson by now has had impressive experience in domestic and world politics, as he has a flair for power. He is able and knowledgeable, but, alas, so many of the things he knows are inadequate or irrelevant. If the war is still on, the election will be close; if it is over it will be hard to beat him, even with a Rockefeller-Reagan team.

Between now and 2000 there will be eight elections, and probably not more than five or six Presidents, possibly only four. Who will the new ones be? Among the Democrats, Sen. Robert Kennedy seems most likely to be in the White House at some point. But Vice President Hubert Humphrey, whose political stock has fallen while he has walked in Mr. Johnson's shadow, cannot be written off, especially if the President wins again and supports him strongly in 1972.

Among the Republicans, the most likely to be in the White House at some point in the calculable future are Reagan, Rockefeller and Charles Percy, with Nixon having an outside chance. This doesn't count, of course, the host of new young Republican governors and senators that came in on the 1966 tide in the off-year elections. The most likely contest in 1972 will be between Kennedy and Reagan, and by 1976 Kennedy and Percy, and the target audience will be the young voters, from 21 to 30—perhaps from 18 to 30 if enough states change their voting laws to include the 18-year-olds.

In the 1980s and 1990s the internal problems of most nations will be those of food supply and population control and of racial tensions and struggles; world politics will be the politics of regional, economic and political federalisms, of atomic rivalries and atomic policing and of new ideological struggles that will run in racial rather than class terms.

In America the party struggles will be those of urban and racial politics, as elsewhere. That is why, as Cardinal Koenig said on his recent visit to the United States, the world today is watching what America does with its racial problems. In the White House at the turn of the century will sit someone who is today between 12 and 20, who may be in college now or in an antipoverty project in one of the cities, and will have seen service in Vietnam before the war is over. He will be tempered in the fires and struggles of the days immediately ahead to deal with those of his own day.

OUR READERS' MINDS

Is ROTC teaching university values?

To the Editor:

In a community of scholars each student and teacher, and each department is committed to the principles of truth and scholarship. I believe this to be generally true at our university. But I had some doubts about the commitment and role of the ROTC department. Does it ascribe to the same principles of truth and scholarship as other academic departments? Or is it in some way, specially immune so to speak? If ROTC is special, then, of course, a serious question must be raised by the rest of us as to the continued presence of ROTC on our campus. To find out something about ROTC I enrolled as an auditor in freshman ROTC. I was given the text books, class outline and plan to take careful notes the remainder of the term. A reading of the textbook quickly convinced me that I had a responsibility to share my newly acquired information as widely as possible in the community because it is obvious that there are, indeed, serious questions to be raised.

I intend to publish any material which seems relevant to the questions I posed above. For a start I would like to quote from the text, entitled "United States Army and National Security," 1962, ROTCM 145-45. In Chapter 3 entitled "The Threat" on page 50 is stated the following dictum:

In the social-economic-political area the most portentous of the new influences has been the acquisition of power under the banner of the fanatical political philosophy of communism. Through the medium of the U.S.S.R., this philosophy is the current threat to our way of life and the civilization that the United States represents. Although a study of history will reveal the rise and fall of other challenges, such as those offered by Genghis Khan, Napoleon, and Hitler, this is the most serious threat yet faced by the United States.

On page 51: This political development has resulted in a bi-polar world. One end of this world believes in aggressive expansion by force to serve the ends of a materialistic philosophy; the other believes in the self-determination of people and individuals. I ask all scholars, particularly those in the history and political science departments to examine these quotes and the rest of the "text" to determine if truth and scholarship can be served in the atmosphere created by the text and by the military setting in the ROTC building.

The next 4 lectures deal with the following: Communism and the USSR, Communism and China, Why Korean war, Why Vietnam war. Why are these topics "taught" in freshman ROTC? Are they really taught in a way which would stand up to the scrutiny of objective scholarship? Do we care?

Part-timer forced out

To the Editor:

Last Wednesday I was working my way through registration at Michigan State University as I have done several times before. When I received my fee cards I found, to my surprise, an assessment of $117.00 for the eighth credits for which I had intended to enroll, an increase of over 40% from last term.

I had been in contact with the fee processing office prior to my enrollment date, both by phone and letter, and received absolutely no indication of a distinction between full-time and part-time students. I also found that for an additional $2,50 I could enroll for any number of credits I wished (if my request for fee reduction was accepted).

Because I feel it is economically impractical for anyone to pay the tuition rate for a full schedule of courses and only enroll for half as many, I have withdrawn from the University. My job does not allow me to take advantage of the full-time rate, nor can I quit working for I would not have the funds to continue my education.

I feel this is one of the more inequitable and obviously discriminatory aspects of the new tuition plan. The ineligibility of part-time students for fee reduction has absolutely no basis whatsoever! I urgently suggest and hope that something is done immediately to correct this injustice.

Sad incident--big issue

To the Editor:

It was a sad incident that brought me, as a foreign student at MSU, in direct interaction with a TV & Radio store-owner located at 2727 E. Kalamazoo.

I took my 3 year old portable TV set to that store to have it repaired and asked an old lady who happened to be in charge of the store at that time to let me know how much it would cost to get it fixed. I enjoyed a few minutes conversation with her. She got the information necessary for the repairman written on a piece of paper and, for some reason, she forgot or neglected to mention anything about my request concerning the estimate.

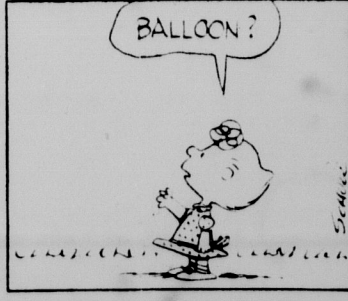

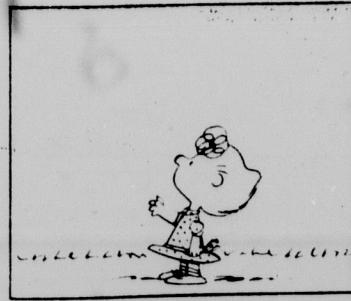

I went to the store on the following day to find that the TV set was already repaired. She expressed a kind of sorrow that I would have to pay $38 to get back my set, which is not worth more than $40. I felt very bad and asked the old lady why she did not call me to tell me the estimated cost. At that moment, her husband came in, and after he could slightly understand the story he interrupted, saying that he was not ready to listen and that he had an ulcer. I felt sorry for him and told him that I had no intention to cause any trouble if he could be fair.

Unexpectedly, his wife interrupted and said, "I know you... You are causing us troubles everywhere."

I was shocked by her statement and could not talk anymore. I went home and began to ask myself, "What trouble have we, foreign students, caused that lady? Could it be the pinch of the income taxes associated with increasing foreign spending that has caused such unfriendly attitudes? How well do the lady and many others like her understand the politics and economics of foreign aid and foreign spending? How does she understand that the well-being of Americans and that of other nations have become closely related? I really wished to discuss all that with her but I was in deep shock. I thought that maybe someone else can do the job, but, who?

The only thing I could do was to give up my TV set in order to give the store-owners a feeling of being compensated, hoping that someone, someday will be able to help them develop better understanding of foreigners and of this country's international interests.

Thomas, cigar-a team

Danny Thomas lit up one of his famous cigars. "I smoked Dutch Masters when I sold them," he said. "And I pitched them. But I made them roll them for me--roll them all the way. Same tobacco, but I couldn't smoke them when they were diced up and wrapped in a couple of leaves like the cigarettes. I'm a tobacco chewer. I bite the end of a cigar and the thing comes apart in my mouth."

At this point Thomas made terrible facial contortion which left the small assemblage of reporters in paroxysms of laughter.

Danny Thomas returned to Michigan last Monday in conjunction with his annual tour on behalf of St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Memphis, Tennessee.

His real name is Amos Muzyad Jacobs and he was born in Deerfield, Michigan, the son of Lebanese immigrant parents. His father, Thomas said, was a huckster who peddled his hardware throughout Michigan before moving to Toledo which Thomas considers his hometown.

Thomas has high hopes for his new NBC-TV series of drama and comedy specials. He has mixed feelings about canned laughter and recently experimented by filming one comedy episode of his series without an augmented soundtrack. "People in the industry thought we were crazy," he said. The critical commentary ranged from enthuslastic approval to one writer's observation that "it didn't get any laughs." Nonetheless, the entertainer affirmed that he would not hesitate to do another program without a laughtrack if the storyline warranted it.

Over the past two years, Danny Thomas has performed four editions of his "Wonderful World of Burlesque," before a live audience. "Burlesque wouldn't work today," he admitted. "At least not every day, because baggy pants comedy is a thing of the past."

Assuming a didactic mien, Thomas addressed the small gathering of reporters as he might speak to one of the seminars which he holds at UCLA.

He asserted that today's humor is sick and cannot possibly last. Enduring humor, he insisted, deals with the foibles of the common man. "Mirror him, let him associate with you, let him care about you, and you've got comedy. You want to laugh? Watch your neighbor--he's the funniest guy in the world--but always remember that he has his eye on you too."

Taking the cigar from his mouth, Thomas paused. "Ya know," he smiled, replacing the cylinder beneath his hawkish schnozz. "Every time somebody takes a picture of me with this cigar in my mouth, my cigarette sponsor dies a little."

Editor explains contest

Carol Nicklaus, college competitions editor of Mademoiselle magazine, will speak on Mademoiselle's annual contests, Tuesday, 7 p.m. in 34 Union.

Miss Nicklaus supervises the magazine's fiction, poetry, art and photography contests. In addition, she reads entries to Mademoiselle's College Board Competition.

For Mademoiselle as a guest editor in 1964, will answer questions about the competitions and college careers for women during her speech.

She is sponsored by AWS.

Trailer storage lot opens on campus

The magazine's five annual contests are open to all college women.

The twenty winners of the College Board Competition are named guest editors of Mademoiselle. They spend the month of June as salaried employees editing the August college issue.

Winners of other competitions have their work printed in the August issue of the magazine. Miss Nicklaus, who began work

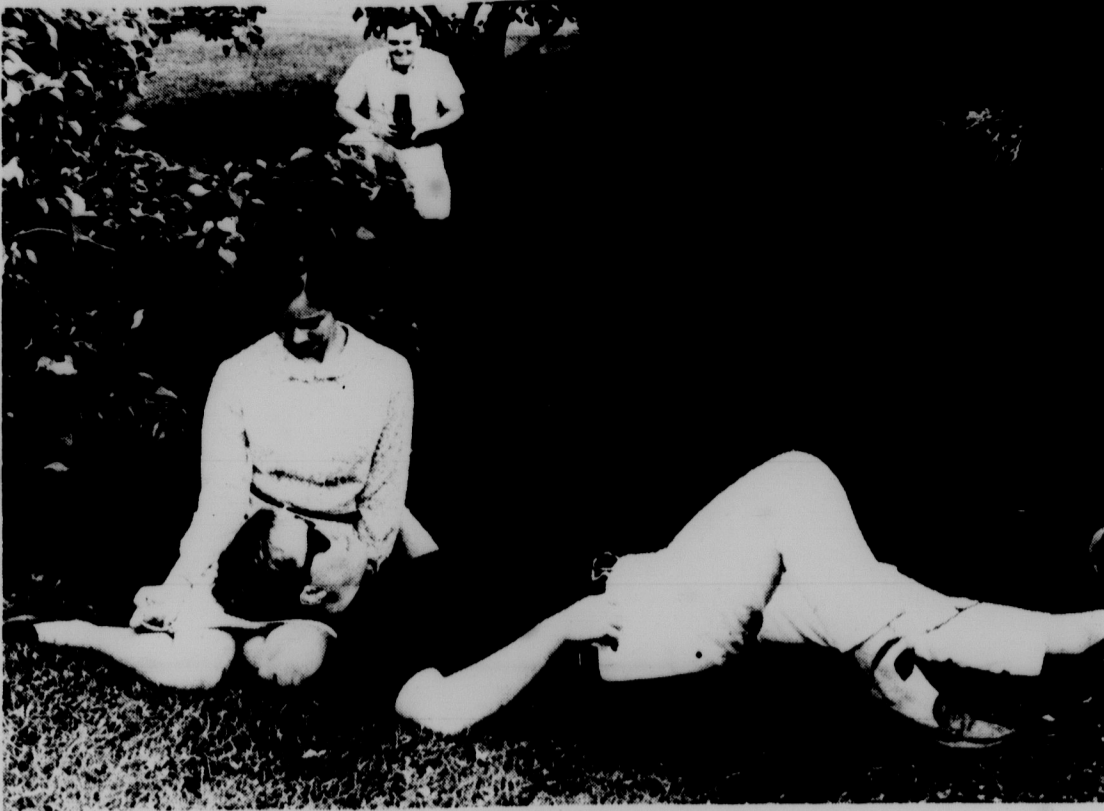

A parking area on south campus is now available for student's trailers used to haul belongings to campus.

The storage area is located on the north side of South Service Rd. near Power Plant No. 65. Many trailers have been left in the parking bays around campus and especially in the married housing section, according to John Roetman, manager of married housing.

"With parking on campus as tight as it is, these trailers have created quite a problem," Roetman said.

Roetman said a letter would be circulated next week to residents of married housing, notifying them of the new trailer storage lot.

In late October, he said, University Police will begin ticketing the trailers. If the trailers are not moved then after 72 hours, they will be taken to University storage until the owner is located or the trailers will be sold if no owner is found.

Machines OK'd for magazine sale

Vending machines would be the most practical means of selling magazines in the dormitories, according to the findings of a magazine committee established by Men's Halls Association (MHA) last spring.

The machines would probably be run by outside vendors on a lease basis in each hall that requested them. The major problem lies with the selection of magazines. The machines would not be able to handle a wide enough variety to suit the needs of all students.

The machine would probably have a selection of ten magazines, according to John C. Manners, chairman of the magazine committee. Such vending machines are already in operation in the Detroit area.

Student interest is the main factor in the success of the idea, according to Donald V. Adams, director of residence hall programs. "As long as the individual general councils recommend the sales, I foresee no resistance on the part of the administration," Adams said.

After favorable student response to the idea posed by Andy Mollison in the State News last spring, ASMSU passed a resolution endorsing magazine sales in the dormitory complexes.

Now it is necessary to exchange one's I.D. for limited use of a magazine from hall reception desks. Also, magazines that have been placed in the lounges for students have disappeared quickly.

Impulse buying is also discouraged by the long walks to East Lansing or the Union.

The committee decided that behind-the-counter sales would not be practical because most students like to see the magazines before purchase.

Magazines were sold once before in the Brody Grills, but due to a lack of student interest and excessive mutilation, sales were discontinued.

Martin asks bomb halt

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Canadian Foreign Secretary Paul Martin warned Wednesday that efforts to open negotiations to end the war in Vietnam are "doomed to failure" unless the United States halts its bombing of North Vietnam.

In a speech to the U.N. General Assembly, Martin said that cessation of the bombing "is a matter of the first priority if we are to start the process of deescalation and to open the door to the conference room."

At the same time, Martin told the 122-nation assembly that a halt in the U.S. bombing was "only one side of the military equation."

"We cannot proceed, if we are to have any hope of success," he said, "as if the other side did not exist."

He pledged Canada's continued efforts through the International Control Commission—in Indochina, India and Poland are the other commission members—to help "to lead the parties to the conflict in Vietnam to the conference table and to assist in every way to achieve the establishment of an equitable peace in Vietnam."

In another speech to the Assembly, Argentine Foreign Minister

Nicanor Costa Mendez called for an active U.N. participation in the search for peace in Southeast Asia.

It is unreasonable, he said, "to contend that the international organization, could remain alien to such an obvious case of a breach of both peace and security."

Both Canada and Argentina are members of the U.N. Security Council, which discussed the Vietnam war without result in early 1966. Soviet and French opposition blocked any constructive council action.

Martin threw cold water on the possibility of any U.N. involvement—in part because some of the key parties to the war are not represented here and also because "the great powers are divided on the causes of the conflict and the measures required to terminate it."

The two assembly statements on the Vietnam problem came against a background of continued private meetings of key high-level officials in which Vietnam conspicuously was not among the reported topics of conversation. Secretary of State Dean Rusk entertained Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at dinner Monday night, and U.S. sources said they had not discussed the war. Rusk said what was described as a courtesy call on Secretary-General U Thant Tuesday, and again, a spokesman reported, Vietnam was not discussed.

The Vietnam problem also was left on the sidelines at the dinner Tuesday night given by Thant for the Big Four foreign ministers and their U.N. ambassadors.

But it still remained a possible subject at the Gromyko dinner for Rusk Wednesday night at the Soviet Mission, the last scheduled meeting of the two men while Gromyko is in this country.

The Big Four dinner—at which French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville and British Foreign Secretary George Brown were guests with Rusk and Gromyko—produced "nothing substantive."

The sources said, however, that things were not worse than they were before the dinner and perhaps "an infinitesimal bit better."

A British spokesman, asked whether anything encouraging had emerged from the meeting, replied "no."

U.N. spokesmen said the Big Four ministers and Thant had discussed the Middle East, including Thant's request for authorization to appoint a special representative in the area, the Cyprus question and Thant's proposal for periodic closed meetings of the Security Council at a high level to discuss world problems.

Thant suggested specifically such a meeting in the early days of the assembly session in which foreign ministers would take part. This appeared unlikely to bear fruit, however, since Brown had arranged to leave for home Wednesday night.

FACULTY FACTS

Two MSU electrical engineers explained Thursday at an automotive conference a plan for computerized traffic control which could result in faster and safer freeway travel.

John B. Kreer and Jeffrey Goodnuff outlined their theory at the 1967 Automotive Conference of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, Inc. in Detroit.

The researchers proposed a system to regulate the entrance, freeway travel and exit by a centralized control, probably a computer, for the entire highway. When a master control becomes operable, it could establish a relatively constant traffic flow even under changing weather conditions and special events, such as a football or baseball games.

Mary A. Gardner, assistant professor of journalism and a lieutenant colonel in the Women's Marine Corps Reserve, spent six weeks of active duty in Quantico, Va., doing historical research for the Marine Corps Museum this summer.

"Ball control is only effective if you score. We don't have a come from behind offense. We've run up scores like Houston did against a lot of teams, but we never have been that far behind..."

--Duffy Daugherty

DUFFY DAUGHERTY

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

There are two basic facts about football, you can't score without the ball and you can't win unless you score.

MSU had the ball enough last Saturday against Houston. The Spartans ran 77 plays to 53 for the Cougars. But the Spartans could only score once while Houston scored five times.

Duffy Daugherty will probably take similar statistics when it comes to total plays against Southern California Saturday, but it's a cinch MSU will have to capitalize on scoring opportunities better against USC than they did against the Cougars.

"I've said before that ball control is only effective if you score," Daugherty said.

"We missed some great opportunities to score and to use our ball control offense more effectively against Houston, and once we got so far behind we just didn't have the come-from-behind offense necessary to catch up."

The great opportunities that Daugherty referred to were two drives that penetrated inside the Houston 10-yard line without scoring.

Once Houston got a 24-7 lead, MSU's attempts to get quick touchdowns and come from behind were ineffective. The Cougars scored twice more after intercepting Spartan passes.

"We've never been that far behind before, and I hope we're not in that position again."

"We've run up scores like that against a lot of teams, but never been that far behind ourselves. When the shoe's on the other foot it pinches and I didn't like it."

Last year's offense was the ball control type which Daugherty has come to be known for. But All-Americans Clint Jones at halfback and Gene Washington at end made the Spartans more of a come-from-behind threat.

This year's offensive personnel is especially made for ball control.

Dwight Lee, Bob Apisa, Reggie Cavender and Lamar Thomas could all be classified as power runners who can be counted on in short yardage situations, while quarterback Jimmy Raye and halfback Frank Waters are tricky runners, though neither possesses a sprinter's speed.

AL race tightens, Twins lose

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (UPI) -- Former Twin Don Mincher ignited a four-run fourth inning with his 22nd home run as the California Angels "spoiled" Minnesota's pennant drive Wednesday, scoring a 5-1 victory over ace righthander Dean Chance.

The defeat left the Twins one-half game ahead of the runner-up Chicago White Sox with a 91-79 record. The White Sox, who played Kansas City in a two-night doubleheader, hold a one-game edge in the loss column, however.

Mincher, dealt to the Angels last winter along with Jimmie Hall and Pete Cimino in exchange for Chance, led off the fourth with a 412-foot homer in the right-center field bullpen, snapping a scoreless tie.

Chance, seeking his 21st victory, suffered his 13th defeat.

Seeking MVP honors

Harmon Killebrew of the Minnesota Twins and Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox are fighting it out for the Most Valuable Player Award in the American League. Both are tied with home runs, 43, and Yastrzemski leads in RBI's, 115 to 112.

Boston shutout, trail Twins by 1

BOSTON (UPI)-- The Cleveland Indians pounced on 21-game winner Jim Lonborg for four runs in the second inning Wednesday and went on to deal the Boston Red Sox a stunning 6-0 defeat.

The loss, Boston's 70th against 90 victories, left the Red Sox two games behind in the loss column in the frantic American League race pending the outcome of the Minnesota-California game and the two-night doubleheader between Chicago and Kansas City. The Red Sox have only two week-end games with the Twins remaining.

The Indians, winning for only the fifth time in 18 games against Boston this season, picked up a run in the sixth off reliever Lee Stange on rookie Richie Scheinblum's single and Joe Azcue's hit-and-run double. They got their other run in the eighth off reliever Ken Brett on Scheinblum's single and Azcue's triple. Cleveland's Sonny Siebert was credited with his 10th win after losing three games to the Red Sox this season. He pitched a four-hit shutout into the sixth when the Red Sox loaded the bases with nobody out.

Ron Saul doubtful for MSU

Sophomore Ron Saul, who worked his way to a starting position at offensive tackle, suffered a sprained elbow in practice Tuesday and his status for the game against Southern California Saturday is questionable.

The injury occurred in a light contact scrimmage against members of MSU's freshman team.

Saul was taken to Olin Health Center where the elbow was treated by team physician, Dr. James Feurig.

Feurig was optimistic about Saul's chances for Saturday.

"The way he's been reacting to the treatment I think he'll be ok," Feurig said, "but we'll just have to wait a little longer and see."

Dave Teehlin worked at the tackle position in Wednesday's practice for the Spartans.

Sport briefs

Redemption of freshman and sophomore coupons for Saturday's Southern California football tickets will be made today at Conrad Hall from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., instead of 11 a.m. to noon as was reported in Wednesday's State News.

Tickets for the MSU-Michigan football game Oct. 14 will go on sale today in rooms 38-39, Union, starting at 10 a.m.

The tickets are part of a $10 package deal sponsored by Spartan Spirit. Included in the package is bus transportation to and from Ann Arbor, a box lunch, a game ticket and a football game souvenir.

Trustees for consideration. The "closest thing" Indiana has to an ability-to-pay plan is its parking system, said Franklin.

Only effective for faculty and staff members, the plan provides that those employees with salaries $5,000 or less buy parking permits for $7.50 or less.

"If your salary is between $5,000 and $8,000 you pay $15 for a permit and $37.50 if it's over $8,000," he said.

"The big problem seems to be the difficulty in administering," said Cafferty. "Will the term 'gross family income' include salaries of brothers and sisters and mothers or what?"

Jolliffe termed the University's implementation situation this summer "terrible, just terrible."

"There will undoubtedly be some definitional problems," said Lyle H. Lanier, when questioned this summer. Lanier is the executive vice president and provost at the University of Illinois in Champaign.

"It sounds like a fairly complex situation to determine criteria for judging income levels," he added.

Hullner stressed that it would be "very hard to find out the salary income of people, even with W-2 forms, not a true measure of a family's assets."

"For instance, farm families do not have the same type of income showing as urban families," he said.

He felt there must be a "great deal of criticism developed because of the necessity of divulging family income."

Gordon B. Curson, vice president for business and finance at Ohio State University at Columbus said the plan would necessitate a carefully controlled watch of monies.

Five recommendations were presented to help students identify with the departments, primarily through student-faculty interaction and newsletters. CUE also suggested freshman seminars, departmental meetings with majors, student advisory committees and undergraduate assistantships.

For continuous review of curriculum changes and innovations, such as those suggested in the CUE report, the committee recommended that faculty be directly involved in the process for change.

The Honors College was also a topic of discussion for the Committee on Undergraduate Education. While the purpose of the Honors College remains the same, CUE recommended that some of its operations be revised.

CUE called for a standing faculty Committee on Honors to review the program regularly, to develop guidelines for and to approve of departmental honors programs and to review and revise the graduation honors and awards system.

CUE also recommended that admissions standards for Honors college be based on more than the grade point average, including such things as faculty recommendations and participation of departmental and college representatives.

The creation of three residential colleges at MSU is part of a trend across the country toward reorganization of undergraduate studies. These colleges are designed to experiment with curricula and work for closer student-faculty relationships in a smaller, controlled environment.

In an experimental situation of this kind, CUE said, departures from all-University policies are often required, and they urged that this be clearly defined and approved, either in the establishment of such colleges or through the regular faculty review process.

However, CUE also felt that the residential college system should be evaluated before other such colleges are established. This should be done after graduation of the first class from each of the colleges, in 1971.

But before further experimentation is handled in the residential colleges, CUE recommended that a Consultative Committee for each college be appointed to review the college programs.

Six recommendations from CUE were designed to facilitate the processes of academic advising, registration, enrollment, and retention of students.

Sheer size is a problem in some departments, causing an overloading on some advisers. CUE therefore recommended the establishment of college advisement centers, staffed by advisers thoroughly acquainted with the university and academic requirements. These advisement centers would be in the deans' offices.

CUE also recommended that advising be focused on juniors and seniors majoring in the department. Enrollment would also be handled by these advisement centers.

CUE concluded its report with suggestions for further study of the library, urban youth and special undergraduate programs.

beginning a test case in court or seeking a ruling by the attorney general.

In other action of the student board:

--Lang moved that ASMSU declare intent to disaffiliate with NSA. Lang said he felt a student referendum on the issue would support withdrawal from NSA which he feels will "fall apart" if a recent trend toward a national student union continues.

Many student representatives from other universities are considering formation of a student union, according to Lang. He predicted an independent student organization will rise "from the ground up" and said he hoped MSU joins the movement.

"I don't see that NSA has any benefits to offer. I think we were somewhat railroaded into re-affiliation with NSA," he said and quipped, "To use an expression of our governor, we were brainwashed."

Pete Ellsworth, vice chairman, said he would not advocate disaffiliation. "We spent $800 going to the convention this summer and around $300 in dues. I'm not yet convinced that NSA is worth the dues either, but first let's wait and see." The motion was referred to the agenda committee and will be discussed at a later meeting.

--Paul Lavrakas, Birmingham senior, and Cindy Johnson, Norwalk, Ohio, senior were approved and will fill vacancies on the All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ).

--W.C. Blanton was appointed ASMSU's non-voting representative to the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

--All - Campus Radio WMSN was granted permission to tape student board meetings for broadcast within 48 hours. WMSN news director Paul Weisenfeld, Oak Park sophomore, explained that only discussions during business portions of the meetings would be used on the edited tapes.

--Dzodin moved that ASMSU consider sponsorship of a closed circuit television broadcast of the MSU-U-M football game Oct. 14. The motion was referred to the agenda committee for further information. ASMSU lost between $1,000 and $1,500 on a closed circuit showing of the Ohio State game last season.
