

'U' failure to 'teach thinking' irks Scholars

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a five-part series on Merit Scholars by staff writers Linda Gortmaker and Steve Gates. Today, Merit Scholars suggest what they would do to improve MSU.

MSU has not fulfilled its role as a University that should "teach one to think," both in academic and non-academic areas, according to a significant portion of 115 Merit Scholars answering a State News questionnaire on MSU's Merit program. "Exposure to college should teach one to think—and sometimes, just sometimes, I think MSU has taught me that," one Scholar reflected.

Many agreed with another student who said "I want room to be an intellectual in an environment conducive more to academics than football, more to study dates than coke dates, more to criticizing society than appeasing it, more to thought than to blind acceptance."

Several students then suggested possible methods of improving MSU's academic atmosphere, including revision of the grading system, introduction of a non-graded program, de-emphasis of multiple-choice exams in liberal arts and social science courses, starting a mid-term week and having essay exams be the basis for the "teacher's grade" in University College courses.

They also suggested the prohibition of all cars on campus during weekdays, offering a Justin Morrill-like program in the College of Business, explanation of orientation tests in some sort of counseling session, lowering the curve so grades would be similar to high school, elimination of compulsory class attendance and liberalization of University requirements in general.

Other areas Scholars complained about in the questionnaire included academic advising, undergraduate research assistantships, freshman orientation, professors and opportunities for non-honors College students.

Comments about academic advising included, "My academic adviser did more harm than good," and "MSU needs better, more personal academic counseling—with it I would have been far happier and more successful."

One student claimed "I was not given any advice on a choice of courses. Most freshmen don't know what they want and there is no counseling of the sort that is needed. I should have been taking much more difficult courses than I have."

Students were also negative about Undergraduate Research Assistantships publicized in the literature sent to them while in high school.

These assistantships are offered to all Merit Scholars and permit them to do research under some MSU professor in the student's field of interest.

Many students complained that they received no information on research opportunities once they were here. They said the research, if offered, was menial, or the professor involved did not have enough time to help the student.

Only two students mentioned that they had taken the opportunity and were reasonably satisfied.

Academic atmosphere?

A student reads in an empty room on what could be a typical football Saturday, when the majority of students fill the Stadium. Many Merit scholars ask for an atmosphere "conducive more to academics than football."

Romney asks State Legislature to cope with civil unrest

By LEO ZAINEA
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Romney declared Thursday that "revolutionary insurrectionists, organized, trained and armed for violence," are prepared to resume "civil government warfare" that would make the Detroit riots "simply a dress rehearsal."

But he told the Legislature in his State of the State message that strict anti-crime laws alone would "play into the hands of the militant agitators" and called instead for a program of "greater justice and better law enforcement."

Romney, a candidate for the Republican nomination for President, made his appeal just hours before flying to New Hampshire for the nation's first presidential primary on March 12.

His remarks on the racial struggle, perhaps the harshest terms he has used publicly, departed from his 10-page prepared text outlining his objectives for the 1968 legislative session. He said:

"Before concluding I want to say a few things plainly and simply."

The governor then spoke more emphatically, and more emotionally. His voice quavered at times, and he pounded the rostrum with his fist.

He warned that if the Legislature failed to enact stronger civil rights laws it would "accelerate the recruitment of revolutionary insurrectionists, who use the latest methods and means developed in Cuba, China and Southeast Asia."

Romney told the legislators and a capacity crowd in the gallery of the House that, through his fact-finding visit to cities throughout the United States and talks with moderate and militant Negroes, he learned they wanted three things, "in this order:"

"They want white people to stop treating them as inferior; they want equal protection and consideration from our laws and law enforcement structure and equal opportunity in housing," Romney said.

"The key issue in our cities is this," the governor said: "Can racial discrimination and human injustice be eliminated by peaceful and orderly changes, or must it be compelled through violence, destruction and bloodshed?"

He said that if the Legislature enacted state fair housing and tenant rights laws "it would strengthen those who seek peaceful, orderly change."

Passage of only law enforcement proposals, he said, would strengthen, not weaken those "who are arming to wreck Michigan and America."

Though he acknowledged that much of the problem of urban unrest is the responsibility of the federal government, Romney called for swift passage of a state fair housing law and for increased funds for the Michigan Civil Rights Commission.

While he strongly advocated broader civil rights legislation, Romney asked for anti-crime and anti-riot laws, "to meet and reverse" . . . soaring crime rates, unsafe streets, disrespect for the letter and spirit of the law, and the new dimension of urban riots.

He urged a redefinition of "unlawful assembly," revision of the "riot act" to make it unlawful to disperse upon command, and called for laws to prohibit:

--willful blocking of streets and highways by demonstrators;

--possession of incendiary devices like "Molotov cocktails";

--interference with firemen trying to perform their duty.

He asked the Legislature to provide police with "better tools to fight crime" and suggested laws:

--to permit court-ordered wiretapping under carefully controlled circumstances;

--to allow circuit court judges to grant witness immunity upon petition of the prosecuting attorney or attorney general;

--to allow circuit court judges to grant subpoena power to the prosecuting attorney or attorney general;

--to provide for the licensing, training and regulation of private police and State Police Reserve for use in emergencies.

KD SORORITY

Fire causes $2,500 damage

A fire Thursday morning at the Kappa Delta sorority house 528 M.A.C. Ave., caused an estimated $2,500 in damages according to East Lansing fire officials.

The fire began between 10:30 and 11 a.m. in the house chapter room said Mrs. Ivah Galehouse, sorority housemother. Its cause is unknown.

Extensive smoke damage throughout the house was caused because a fire door had to be propped open, said Fire Chief Arthur P. Patriarche.

The greatest damage was contained in the basement, but house windows, curtains, and ceilings were blackened by smoke.

An estimate of the damage to personal property could not be made yet, fire authorities said.

The fire was discovered sometime between 10:30 and 11 a.m. by the sorority cook, Viola Dayman. Fire extinguishers were used but with no avail. Jean DiCola, Chicago, Ill., senior called the fire department.

No one stayed at the house Thursday night. Some women were expected to return Friday night, said Anne Barrie, Walled Lake Junior and house vice-president.

Romney 'State' speech gets varied reaction

By WES THORP
State News Staff Writer

Legislative reaction to Gov. Romney's State of the State speech, given Thursday before a joint session of the legislature, was varied.

Romney was forceful in his mention of the need for open housing and lower court reorganization legislation, said Sen. Emil Lockwood, R-St. Louis, Senate majority leader.

"His request for more specific anti-riot legislation should do much to allay the fears of some that our outlook is one-sided," Lockwood said.

Sen. Thomas F. Schweigert, R-Petoskey, Senate president pro tem, said he was "delighted to note the governor's recommendation for greater protection of our natural resources."

Sen. Charles Zollar, R-Benton Harbor, assistant Senate majority leader said he was happy to see Gov. Romney's call for open housing. "I feel it is the fair thing to do," said Zollar.

"I am glad he re-emphasized the determination not to spend beyond our means," Zollar said.

Rep. Robert Traxler, D-Bay City, said he couldn't be more satisfied with the governor's message.

"Romney's program is the same program the Democrats have been advocating for years," Traxler said.

Sen. Robert Richardson, R-Saginaw, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee said he was sorry that Romney did not suggest some specific ideas on how lower court reorganization should be carried out.

One House Democrat said, "either he's a Democrat or I'm a Republican," in reference to Romney proposals.

Sen. Raymond D. Dzendzel, D-Detroit, Senate minority leader said Romney recommended passage of what is essentially the Democratic program of the last few years.

Rescue party climbs to site of plane crash

BATTLE MOUNTAIN, Nev. (AP) -- Two men struggled up a snow-covered mountain Thursday attempting to reach the fire-blackened hulk of a Marine transport plane lying, with no sign of life, in a deep ravine.

The four-engine plane, carrying 18 to 20 Marines, crashed in a blizzard Wednesday afternoon near the 9,978-foot peak of Mt. Tobin, the highest point in the desolate area of northeastern Nevada 32 miles southwest of Battle Mountain.

Forced down by heavy icing on its wings, the plane crashed on its belly, slid 400 feet backward into a deep and almost inaccessible V-shaped ravine and burst into flames.

Wally Swanson and Gene Corbridge were the two men attempting to reach the wreckage. Members of a search party, they spotted the plane while driving on the mountain in snow that was 22 inches deep in level spots.

Aerial observers saw no signs of life or bodies. The plane was largely intact. "Everything on the plane was charred and the black stood out against the white snow," Marilyn Newton, photographer of the Nevada State Journal, said after flying over the wreck which was at the 8,600 foot level.

"The nose, the wings and the tail section look like they are still attached to the fuselage," she said. "It was burned completely."

The plane crashed within an hour after its pilot radioed at 1:50 p.m. Wednesday that icing conditions were forcing him down below the 10,000 foot level.

The C54 was enroute to Seattle, Wash., from Buckley Air Field in Denver, Colo. It was on a 10-day western tour from Quantico Marine Base in Virginia. Quantico said 20 Marines were on the flight. Denver said none left there.

The wreckage was found at dawn Thursday, after the blizzard subsided.

A Navy helicopter, carrying a paramedic team, hovered over the wreckage. Sheriff George Schwin of Lander County led a four-man party to the area.

The story of the death of the plane was told by radio and by ranchers in the sparsely settled mountain country. The pilot was flying on instruments because of the blizzard.

BLAIBERG BETTER

Fluid removed around new heart

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) -- Doctors at Groote Schuur Hospital Thursday removed fluid that developed around the transplanted heart of Dr. Philip Blaiberg and said they "do not take a serious view of this complication."

It was a setback, nevertheless, for the 58-year-old retired dentist who became the world's third human heart transplant patient Jan. 2. A hospital bulletin said "the patient's condition is not as good today as it was yesterday."

The hospital said that the formation of fluid in the pericardial sac was not a sign that Blaiberg's body was rejecting the alien heart. A member of Dr.

Christiaan N. Barnard's transplant team said that development of fluid around the heart was not uncommon in open heart surgery cases.

The hospital said a needle was inserted into the pericardium and the fluid was removed.

"After this procedure, he feels better," the bulletin said.

A hospital spokesman said a smaller amount of fluid had been present around Blaiberg's new heart for several days, but X-rays on Thursday morning showed much larger amounts, and the sac enclosing the heart had to be tapped.

Blaiberg developed a slight throat infection, but it also was not considered serious, according to Dr. Marthinus C. Botha, the immunologist on the heart surgery team at Groote Schuur.

Botha said the infection was being treated with a gargle.

Botha said Blaiberg is in better shape nine days after the operation than the first heart transplant patient, Louis Washkansky, who developed pneumonia and died 18 days after his Dec. 3 operation.

The doctor said that drugs being given Blaiberg to combat the body's natural tendency to reject foreign organs are being reduced because they also suppress the body's ability to fight infection.

Meanwhile Soviet Health Minister Boris V. Petrovsky criticized South African heart surgeon Christian Barnard on Thursday and contended science should concentrate on development of artificial hearts instead of transplanting human hearts.

In a lecture, Petrovsky said: "Despite the great pioneering work of Prof. Barnard I do not agree with him."

"I am not satisfied with published medical data on his patients and people who inadvertently became donors. If I ever meet him I shall ask him to show me the case histories of these people."

He said Soviet specialists are testing an artificial heart on animals. Soviet surgeons, he added, "will not carry out a single experiment on man" in developing heart transplant methods.

O'Brien acquitted at second trial

By JIM GRANELLI
State News Staff Writer

The trials of former State Senator Bernard F. O'Brien, Jr. of Detroit have ended as far as the legal process is concerned. But the tribulations may haunt the man for the rest of his life.

O'Brien was acquitted in his recent appeal to Ingham County Circuit Court on a morals charge filed by a former MSU coed 17 months ago. He was convicted in October, 1966, in a two-week long trial.

Marion Lukens, a recent MSU graduate from Santa Ana, Calif., had testified in the first trial that O'Brien had approached her and asked her to pose for "stag pictures. Five other MSU coeds identified O'Brien as the man who had made similar advances to them.

O'Brien was acquitted in his appeal because many of the original witnesses were not even in the state to testify, including the prime witness, Miss Lukens.

"Five of my eight major witnesses were not able to attend the second trial," Donald L. Reisig, Ingham County prosecuting attorney, said. "They're all over the country—in California, Massachusetts, New York and even Europe somewhere."

Reisig had called a total of 27 witnesses in building his case against O'Brien in 1966.

"Many people don't understand how O'Brien got a second trial," Reisig said, "but what it boils down to is that a man convicted of a misdemeanor has a right to a second trial."

Miss Lukens sent a letter to Reisig explaining that she would not attend the second trial because she had already "fulfilled her moral and legal obligations."

"My conviction remains that I am justified in retaining my pride and self-respect," Miss Lukens wrote. "Justice has been done, but in the process I was made to feel like I was guilty."

"Even the society . . . which I was trying to protect preferred sensationalism to fact."

"Having been through this and seeing so many people hurt in their efforts to do right, I now feel that I have fulfilled my legal and moral obligations," she wrote.

Christine LeGasse, Honolulu, Hawaii, senior, one of the key witnesses for the prosecution, also expressed the idea that justice was done.

Miss LeGasse said she was told at the beginning of fall term by police to be on the alert for an upcoming trial, but heard nothing more about it.

"He (O'Brien) shouldn't have been acquitted," Miss LeGasse said. "I can't say for sure but if there were another trial I don't think he would have been acquitted."

"I don't think I'd want to go through the whole thing again, but I would if I had to," she said. "I'm sure that man's been through enough."

O'Brien lost the primary race for the state senate in the summer of 1966. The trial "definitely" had something to do with it, he said.

O'Brien who now operates his real estate and insurance business in Detroit said that the prosecuting attorney postponed the trial seven times claiming he couldn't get his witnesses together.

"In dismissing the case, the circuit court judge ordered that all records be expunged," O'Brien said. "It's just like there was no other trial."

When asked if he would enter the political realm again, O'Brien said that he had "no answer as yet."

O'Brien, who was a member of the State Insurance Committee at the time, claimed that the whole thing was "a frame-up" by an insurance lobby who had a running feud with O'Brien. However, O'Brien could neither prove his claim nor establish any acceptable alibi for the jury as to his whereabouts when he allegedly approached Miss Lukens, May 27, 1966.

The alleged frame-up was engineered against O'Brien because he had introduced two bills in his first term detrimental to insurance interests, his attorney theorized. This didn't hold up in court.

Miss Lukens, who was a music therapy student at MSU, was first contacted by a man whom she identified as O'Brien but who had introduced himself as "Larry Angelo," representing an international picture studio May 27, 1966, she said. He had stopped his car at Abbott Road and Grand River Avenue and gestured to her, seemingly seeking directions.

He told her that he was looking for a girl of her build to model sportswear, and later told her that she would be required to pose for "cheesecake" photos, Miss Lukens testified.

"Angelo" asked her to have sexual intercourse with two Hollywood film stars for the "stag" movies, she said. He also asked her several personal questions, she said.

Miss Lukens reported the incident to her resident assistant who told the head adviser of her residence hall. The head adviser then contacted the University police.

For a week detectives investigated the case. On June 2, 1966, they followed her as she was "picked up" by O'Brien at Michigan and Harrison Avenues. He was arrested the following day.

A third key witness, Judy Crawford, a former student from Ferndale, said she knew nothing of the second trial.

"I know nothing about it," Miss Crawford said. "No one ever contacted me about a second trial."

Other key witnesses were unable to be reached for comment.

Kasperak continues to improve

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — The condition of Mike Kasperak, whose life was saved by a heart transplant Saturday night, continues to improve, his doctors reported Thursday.

Use of an artificial kidney has been discontinued, the morning medical bulletin from Stanford Medical Center said, and his kidney function has turned to normal.

"His blood pressure, pulse and cardiac functions are normal," the bulletin continued. "He is still being fed intravenously. The patient is breathing spontaneously without the assistance of a respirator for part of the time. His liver function continues to improve."

Kasperak's physicians were so pleased with his progress they said no further reports would be made until Friday morning unless there is a noteworthy change.

They noted, however, that he remained on the critical list. This was not unexpected. Dr. Norman E. Shumway, chief of the team of surgeons who made the transplant, said Kasperak's condition would be considered critical for several weeks because of the possibility his body may reject the implanted tissue. Kasperak, 54, a retired steelworker, has sat up in bed several times, his legs dangling over the side to facilitate circulation.

NO DOZ ANNOUNCES THE EXAM PILL

(If you flunk, at least you'll be awake.)

Sure you've used NoDoz to help you stay awake the night before an exam.

But have you ever thought of taking NoDoz to make yourself a little sharper during the exam itself?

Well, maybe you should.

Let's say you're one of those guys who doesn't have to cram like mad the night before. (Even so, you're probably not getting your usual amount of sleep.)

And let's say the morning of the big exam, you find yourself heading for class, kind of drowsy and unwound and wondering if The Great Brain has deserted you in the night.

What do you do?

You panic, that's what you do.

Or, if you happened to read this ad, you walk coolly over to the water cooler and wash down a couple of NoDoz, the Exam Pill. And before long you're feeling more alert and with it again.

You see, NoDoz helps bring you up to your usual level of alertness, so you don't just sit there in a fog; it's got what it takes to help restore your perception, your recall, and even your ability to solve problems.

In fact, NoDoz contains the strongest stimulant for your mind that you can take without a prescription. Yet it's not habit forming.

Okay, but what about the guy who goes off all term and has to jam everything in the night before.

Are we saying NoDoz will keep him from flunking out?

Nope.

We're just saying he'll be alert and awake. As he flunks.

WORK-STUDY PLAN

60 jobs available to help students

For students in need of financial aid, there are now over 60 jobs available in the Work-Study Program office, according to Ronald Roderick, program director. Under this program, Roderick said, students may work at an on-campus job for up to 15 hours per week during the term and 40 hours a week during vacations.

The program is sponsored by the Federal Economic Opportunity Act and provides that the federal government pay 84 per cent of the student's wages and the employer 15 per cent.

Students are matched to jobs according to their skills and their majors.

"We try to place them in the offices of the department in which they are enrolled," Roderick said.

All jobs in the MSU extension of the program are located on-campus. The program allows for jobs off-campus, but thus far there have been enough requests from University departments to fulfill the students' needs, Roderick said.

A student employee earns the minimum wage rate of $1.40 per hour or more if his skills qualify him for a more technical job.

To qualify for the program a student must be enrolled in the University and show financial need.

"We must give priority to students from low income families," Roderick said, "but we will try to help any student as long as he shows a financial need from our assessment of his situation."

Nearly 1,000 MSU students are now employed on the program.

"The students are doing a tremendous job all over campus," he said. "In evaluation forms filled out by the employers, we find that there are few employer-employee differences. Almost everyone is satisfied."

All letters soon to go as air mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Post Office Dept. plans to eliminate air mail as a separate service and send all first class letters by air at the new six-cent rate, Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien announced today.

O'Brien said that for all purposes the Post Office already is sending nearly all first class mail by air.

"Very, very little of this is being handled by the railroad. We have what closely approximates total airlift service now," he told a news conference.

Within the last year, the Post Office has connected more than 500 cities in a nationwide airlift network.

"As a result, 75 per cent of all first class mail deposited before 5 p.m. is now being delivered the day after mailing and 90 per cent is being delivered within two days," he said.

O'Brien emphasized, however, that under the present system, use of a 10-cent airmail stamp still guarantees air transportation until a new single class priority mail service is formally established.

He said that in 1969 the Post Office will ask Congress to eliminate the air postage rate and to merge airmail and first class into the new single class service.

O'Brien said the move is not expected to draw revenue from the railroads. This year the Post Office is expected to spend about $270 million sending mail by train and about $150 million with the airlines.

"Trains will remain a vital link in our over-all transportation pattern, particularly in the movement of containers, parcel post and other bulk mail," O'Brien said.

He noted that about 56 per cent of all U.S. mail volume is first class. Of this, 40 per cent is capable of being airlifted.

The postmaster general said the airlift network became necessary because of the rapid and steady decline of available railroad transportation. The Post Office now has about 741 passenger trains available for moving mail, compared to about 10,000 trains 30 years ago and 2,267 trains 11 years ago.

"During this time, in more than two-thirds of the cases, mail was removed from the trains at the request of the railroad," O'Brien said.

Brautigam, a political science major, won three other awards in contests held at South West Missouri State College and at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle and a fifth-speaker award at Brandeis University.

Brautigam was also a member of the team that took top honors at the University of Kentucky Tournament last October.

Fifty colleges and universities from 23 states entered 60 teams for the USC tournament. MSU placed in the top 16 teams.

The teams debated, "Resolved: The Federal Government should provide minimum annual cash incomes to all citizens."

In Washington, the State Department's press officer, Robert J. McCloskey said: "We are considering what action should be taken." This could mean expulsion of a Polish representative in the United States. Metzger said he plans to leave Warsaw Sunday with his wife and son.

The Polish Press Agency said the "unlawful activities" of Lt. Col. Jefferson were brought "firmly" to the attention of the Canadian Embassy and "further consequences are under consideration."

The Polish Press Agency said the account given by the U.S. Embassy was "contrary to the facts and to the documented proofs at the disposal of the Foreign Ministry."

Soviets ask prison terms for young 'propagandists'

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet prosecutor asked Thursday that four young intellectuals be imprisoned for terms ranging up to seven years for anti-Soviet propaganda and links with a foreign group seeking to overthrow the Communist regime.

But the judge in the closed trial was reported considering reducing any prison terms because of the year the defendants spent in jail awaiting trial.

Reports from Soviet sources who were among the few persons admitted to the literary trial which began Monday gave this account:

The prosecutor demanded a year in prison for Miss Vera Lashkova, 21, charged with violating the law by typing manuscripts the prosecutor labelled as anti-Soviet.

The prosecutor asked a two-year sentence for poet Alexei Dobrovolsky, 29, the only defendant to plead guilty and turn state's evidence. His term could be cut to a year because of the time already served.

A year also could be cut from the seven years demanded by the prosecution for Yuri Galanskov, 28, charged with anti-Soviet propaganda and currency violation. Soviet law provides a maximum possible penalty of up to 15 years on conviction of the two charges.

The maximum sentence for anti-Soviet propaganda is seven years deprivation of freedom, possibly in a hard labor camp. For currency violations it is eight years.

Five years were asked for Alexander Ginsburg, 31, who has acknowledged compiling a book on the closed 1966 trial of satirists Andrei D. Sinyavsky and Yuli M. Daniel.

All defendants except Dobrovolsky have denied that their actions violated the law or were anti-Soviet.

Damn the confusion of the draft!!!

"The draft is confusing, dammit. One minute the law says this, the next minute it says something else."

That might be a typical comment from an undergraduate student considering graduate school. The present draft law remains in a state of limbo. It is there, but it is poorly defined.

The hazy draft guidelines have caused a 40 per cent drop in applications to MSU's graduate school. Apparently, undergrads are waiting for clarification of the draft law before they risk getting drafted after beginning graduate work.

Within the framework of the draft, it is a separate question whether students should be deferred at all, but if deferments are to be granted, they should be clearly defined and in the best interest of the nation.

The National Security Council is expected to publish a list of occupations which are deemed essential to the well-being of the country and would cause draft deferment, but as yet nothing has resulted.

Certainly this list would help undergraduates to decide whether they wanted to apply to graduate school or not. If their planned field was exempted from the draft they would be more willing to continue their education immediately. Those not deferred would have a clear basis for their decision to continue their education at the risk of being drafted or to pursue another course of action.

Although the National Security Council list would help in the exigencies of the present situation, it cannot be justified for long. Presently, undergraduates are deferred, but graduate students are not.

But, the distinction between undergraduate and graduate education has become an anachronism. In many professions a master's degree is essential; the bachelor's degree is only the beginning. Thus, graduate school has become an entirely arbitrary point to begin non-deferment.

Furthermore, using the present standards to determine those occupations essential to the national well-being, scientists and technologists will be deferred. But a society cannot continue with them alone. Where the scientist can contribute greatly to the betterment of life, the social scientist and humanist must cope with new technology and make it relevant to the daily fare of us all.

The scientist may well develop new birth control methods, but the social scientist or humanist must take this method to the people who are to use it.

And who is to cure the ills of poverty, illiteracy and disease? The chemist, the engineer? To be sure, they have a contribution to make, but the brunt of the problem rests with the sociologist, the economist, the psychologist or the social worker.

In a traditionally pragmatic nation, the future often becomes clouded with the now, but if the nation is to survive intact the present war and threats of others not yet begun, the future must be examined.

Draft guidelines narrowly delimiting deferments to a few do not imply a thorough examination of the future. Thus, a reassessment of present policy must be made to eliminate the present confusion in deferment guidelines and the havoc it has brought to graduate education.

MAX LERNER

There are moments when I look at the array of presidential candidates and feel dismay at how little a choice they give us between mediocrities. That seems to be the prevailing mood of most of my friends.

If, as seems likely (they say), the country is offered a choice between Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon, it will be one of the resounding tragedies of our history. For Nixon substitute Romney or Reagan--or even Rockefeller--and you still have a pretty silly array of choices, don't you? Do you? In my more reflective moments I place 1968 in the perspective of the history of presidential elections. Let's take a walk on the wild side through the American history books and see what giants there were in those days as compared with the pygmies of today.

I start with the elections of 1836 and 1840, when the candidates began to be picked by a party caucus and the modern party system first emerged. In 1836 the candidates were Martin Van Buren and Gen. William Henry Harrison; in 1840 they were the same. The first time around the sovereign people picked Van Buren, a good party organizer but little else; his dominating principle was to evade every possible issue, while his ruling passion was trimming and fence-sitting. The second time around they picked Harrison ("Tippecanoe and Tyler, too"), a wooden soldier who had never voted in an election before he ran for President, a man whose last job before he was chosen for the highest office was that of county clerk.

The SAE's of hazing A lesson in Greek

Caution is the word as Sigma Alpha Epsilon (SAE) resumes normal rush and social activities.

Although SAE is technically still under probation, the episode that began last winter has been at least initially closed by action from Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) and by approval of the vice president for student affairs.

The debates over the SAE case have been long and often bitter. Whether or not there will be long range results, or harm to the fraternity remains to be seen. The important point about the incident, in retrospect, is that IFC took action, and forceful action at that.

SAE was an example. Whether or not this was fair to that particular fraternity for their particular "crime" was one of the longest and most bitter subjects of debate.

However, the fact that IFC did take steps should, depending on the attitude of the whole fraternity system, be a first move in the right direction. In several ways the Greek system of Michigan State has failed to keep pace with the rapidly changing student and instead clings to images of the past. The concept of pledge hazing is one of these archaic facets. Perhaps the decline in number of rushees each term is indicative of the Greek system's gradual loss of "fitting in" with the present student citizenry.

IFC, by its action against SAE, and its more recent edict against all physical hazing, has shown concern for the whole Greek system and has attempted to bring it into line with the students it must serve.

This attitude, effectively carried into all endeavors of fraternities and sororities, could potentially prevent the predicted death of the entire Greek system.

POINT OF VIEW

Conspiracy in action

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following point of view column was written by Thomas Gale Moore, associate professor of economics, on the controversy over the alleged local bookstore cartel.

By THOMAS GALE MOORE

The Great-Book-Store-Cartel is a marvelous example of the advantages of conspiracy, secrecy and greed. It demonstrates that under a sagging exterior can lurk the heart of a robber baron. Yet the cartel was to be expected. Economic theory would predict that four sellers would be aware of each other and would therefore refrain from "unscrupulously" cutting prices.

Nevertheless, it is amazing that the book stores felt they needed formal meetings to work the cartel. While such meetings do of course increase the profitability of the cartel, a little common sense would have indicated that they could be dangerous.

Certain high executives of General Electric and Westinghouse spent time in jail for similar convivial occasions. What astounds one is that a public "non-profit" institution should be a party to such an agreement.

What, I wonder, was running through the mind of the manager of the MSU Book Store when he sat in the Union with his fellow conspirators? Did he rationalize his actions like John D. Rockefeller when he squeezed out another competitor by saying he was just stabilizing the market? Or did he feel like Roger Blough when Blough said that only by all of us charging the same price does the consumer get a choice? Or was he simply trying to raise a little extra revenue for a destitute University? Hopefully the latter was not true since it would be hard to devise a more inefficient way of raising revenue. By agreeing to a cartel, some of the profits from higher prices would go to other book stores; it is clear that lowering book prices and changing University fees could have raised the same money and made the students better off in the process.

A successful cartel is usually faced with the problem of new and equally greedy competitors who try to enter its market and lap up a little of the gravy. It is interesting to note that the MSU Book Store has the means of barring such "unscrupulous" people from "destabilizing" the market. The means is the book list that is sold at the nominal price of $40 per month per store. This amounts to $480 per year per store and $1440 for the three together. No bad. If they refuse to sell such a list to a newcomer, his chance of making good in the text-book market is equivalent to Khrushchev's chances at a Mao Red Guard rally.

What prescription can an economist offer for an acute case of oligopoly mixed with a touch of cartel pricing. The Justice Department might take the attitude that the only cure was surgery--break up the existing stores into smaller competitive units. The courts, however, are likely to consider the division of the Student Book Store impractical. How could it be done--make them sell off the first floor? Or perhaps divide up the store by aisles? It might be possible to divide the two branches of the Campus Book Store but that would only increase the number of would-be competitors from four to five.

Perhaps the best solution might be to establish a state run store to act as a yardstick for the others, like T.V.A. But hark we have such a store and it is the leader. Et tu Brute.

Thomas Gale Moore
associate professor of economics

"What our present era needs as much as anything is a sense of history and a sense of humor."

Now take the 1848 election, when the candidates were Gen. Zachary ("Old Rough and Ready") Taylor and Sen. Lewis Cass. The senator was solidly run-of-the-mill, but he was a flash of lightning as compared with the general, whose supporters celebrated not only him ("Old Zach") but also his horse ("Old Whitey"), laying themselves open to the fair comment that horse knew as much as master about running the nation. (P.S. The general won.)

Or take the two elections just before Abraham Lincoln's. In 1852 two men with military records were the nominees, Gen. Winfield ("Fuss and Feathers") Scott was a martinet soldier-administrator. Franklin Pierce was a nobody who got nominated and elected because the Southerners felt they could trust him to do nothing. They proved right. In 1856 the Republicans ran Gen. John C. Fremont, a flashy soldier, explorer and adventurer with the temperament and judgment of a mountain cat. The Democrats ran James Buchanan, a dull, stuffy hack politician with a mind of a city mouse and horizons as spacious as the cupboards it seeks for crumbs in. Buchanan won, an absurd historical figure destined for the crisis of impending civil war.

This brings us to the two campaigns of Ulysses Simpson Grant, a military strategist by sheer instinct, but desperately unprepared and unfit for the Presidency. The first time, in 1868, his opponent was New York politician Horatio Seymour, who would have made a better President than Grant because anyone would have. The second time, in 1872, his opponent was Horace Greeley--newspaper editor, lecturer and firebrand-at-large, who would have been almost as bad as Grant in the White House and who went insane and died a few months after he was beaten.

It was a desert stretch in the history of the American public mind. In 1876 it was Rutherford Bircham Hayes against Samuel Jones Tilden. Both men were honest in an age of scoundrelly politicians, but Hayes--solemn, commonplace, conformist--had little more to recommend him, while Tilden was a rich and able corporation lawyer--he had kicked out the Tweed Ring--but never had a chance. The truth is that Tilden beat Hayes, but had the election stolen from him by a crooked maneuver in the electoral college. In 1880 the Democrats nominated a Gettysburg hero--Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock--to overcome the war stigma. The Republicans nominated James A. Garfield, who had also been a general, but was mainly a lay preacher, professional orator and a politician who looked more like a President than anyone before or after except Warren Harding, but was mostly an oral word-machine. Garfield was the perfect empty candidate and won.

My last two case histories are from the post-World War I period. In 1920 the candidates were James A. Cox and Warren G. Harding. Cox was an Ohio governor who was unequipped to buck a well-oiled Republican machine. Harding was a third-rate political hanger-on, without brain, scruples or morals, who was to prove the perfect tool for the gang around him. In 1924 a corporation lawyer, John W. Davis, ran against Calvin Coolidge--a tight, cold, petty-minded man who had become Vice President via the Boston police strike and President via Harding's death.

Don't talk to me about the sudden political decline of the Republic. The 35 years since 1932 have seen presidential candidates like Franklin Roosevelt, Wendell Willkie, Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower, Adlai Stevenson, John F. Kennedy. Match them, and match even Mr. Johnson and Nixon and Rockefeller, against the assembly of giants I have surveyed. What our present era needs as much as anything is a sense of history and a sense of humor. Copyright 1968, Los Angeles Times

OUR READERS' MINDS

Adams vs. MSU Book: in the students' interest

To the Editor:

I may not agree with all assertions made by Dr. Walter P. Adams, professor of economics, on the issue of MSU Bookstore versus MSU student interest. (State News, January 9, 10, 11) But I must felicitate him for the concern he has shown for the students' interest.

I was under the impression that the MSU Bookstore was our store but I must report my disappointment to MSU family of faculty and students.

For Fall 1967, I had prescribed "History of Indian Epistemology" for my Oriental Philosophy 301 course. The book published in India originally cost less than $3.00. To my astonishment our MSU Bookstore priced it at $11.00. When questioned,

Mr. James Howick explained to me that the book was ordered by air mail. Afterward when discussing with my class I learned that some students had bought it from off-campus stores at $3.50. Later I was also told that the MSU Bookstore lowered its price to $6.50.

Perhaps Mr. Howick humanly forgot to order the book in time and so had to get it by air mail. Also it is understandable that to cater to 40,000 students with hundreds of different courses is not an easy job. But what I cannot comprehend is what was his guiding principle when he priced that little exotic oriental book of $3.00 to $11.00.

'Stress interviews' not likely

By BOB ZESCHIN
State News Staff Writer

Will "stress interviews," the currently fashionable method of executive recruiting by putting the applicant under as much pressure as possible, ever reach MSU's Placement Bureau?

According to Placement Bureau Director Jack Shingleton, most certainly not.

Shingleton was being interviewed on this type of interview, which was the subject of a recent article in Life magazine, which described the process as "punching a man in the stomach and asking him what he thinks about it"—asking the applicant embarrassing, personal questions, taking a generally negative attitude toward him and often being openly hostile.

"This kind of interview is traditionally used to recruit for the higher-level jobs, and the employer hires a consulting agency to do the interview for this person. So, as it was defined by Life, this kind of interview is never used here," Shingleton said.

that he was under considerable stress after what may have been a routine, casual interview."

The State News questioned Shingleton after learning of several advertising majors who had been taken back by the tactics of a well-known national advertising agency that was at the Placement Bureau last spring term.

One applicant was told by the recruiter: "I don't know much about creativity, but if you think you're creative, cut out 30 ads that you think are good, do them over and send them on to us, and then maybe we'll think about hiring you."

Another heard: "So you think you're good enough for us? I'll give you five minutes. Tell me how good you are."

Did this indicate some kind of trend? Had stress interviews finally gotten down to the college level?

Absolutely not, Shingleton said, who described the incident as an "extremely rare and unusual occurrence," the only one of its kind to happen at MSU, and unlikely to happen again.

What makes it especially unlikely is that one of the applicants had written a letter to the president of the agency, who was extremely distressed to find out what had happened and immediately sent a letter of apology to the Placement Bureau and the chairman of the advertising dept., stating that the recruiters were by no means under orders from the agency to act that way, and that the men have been fully reprimanded for their action.

"This is a real fluke," said Louis Wolter, instructor in advertising. "Pure silliness on the part of the individuals. Some people like to take advantage of their position and ruffle feathers."

Shingleton agreed: "These men were just acting on whims. And this wasn't even a stress interview. It was just bad technique."

What did Shingleton personally feel about this type of interview?

"As it was outlined by Life, it is in most cases unnecessary. It suggests to me that the person who favors this kind of recruitment would be undesirable as an employer. These kind of tactics are just not necessary to hire and retain employees on any level."

"I was in New York last week," he continued. "And the fellow sitting next to me on the plane had just come back from one of these interviews. He said it was an eight-hour session, and at the end he felt completely exhausted. He told me that he wouldn't work for that company if it were the last firm on earth."

Top debaters compete

The Fifth Annual Spartan Debate Tournament will be held on campus Saturday.

Approximately 100 teams from 29 colleges will participate in two divisions of competition, novice and experienced. They will debate two rounds in the morning and two in the afternoon with a final championship round in each division.

The topic for debate is: "Resolved, that the federal government should guarantee a minimum annual cash income to all citizens."

The tournament will be held in Bessey and Berkey Halls. The public is welcome.

Volkswagon recalls cars

NEW YORK (AP) -- Volkswagen of America, Inc., said today it is recalling 42,000 of its 1968 cars, trucks and bus-like station wagons for checks of possible safety defects.

The company said it is asking owners of 29,000 of the beetle-like sedans to return the 1968 cars for replacement of a plate in the spare wheel well in the front of the car.

SEEK FAIR PRICE

Farmers to withhold grain

CORNING, Iowa 12--The National Farmers Organization, pledging "no price, no production," launched Thursday another campaign to boost agricultural prices by withholding farm products from market.

Initial target is grain, to be followed at later dates by so-called withholding actions on meat, milk and other farm commodities.

President Oren Lee Staley said the action "is designed to shut down the American agricultural plant until our members get a fair price for their products."

The militant farm group, sometimes called "the angry young men of agriculture," said it is urging its members in 30 states to stop selling grain as the beginning step.

The NFO conducted six previous withholding actions, mainly ones on livestock in 1962 and 1964 and on milk last March. The boycotts resulted in some violence.

Tons of milk were dumped in fields and streets as part of the milk action.

The NFO claimed some success in each action but processors discounted the claims.

Staley said previous actions have forced processors to recognize the NFO as bargaining agent for its members and resulted in some increase in prices.

"The prices have always been higher after an action than they were before," he said.

Although the NFO claims it has members in 30 states, the actual membership number is kept secret. "This enables us to bargain with processors from a position of strength," said Staley.

Staley said non-NFO farmers in all states involved are being asked to join in the latest boycott "to protect their interests. I believe the support will be tremendous."

He said specific instructions calling for non-violence in connection with the action have been issued to all members.

Asked whether a market boycott at this time would not hurt farmers even more, Staley replied: "We can't afford to withhold--and we can't afford not to. If we sell at present prices, we will be the losers anyway, with no chance of recovery."

One western Pennsylvania NFO leader, James Wenzel of Saegertown, said the grain action will hurt farmers in his area immediately since they must buy grain for their cattle.

But he said his members are going along because they expect prices on milk--their chief product--to go up eventually.

The NFO has set a market price of $1.50 per bushel on corn and $2.25 per hundred weight on other feed grains. All other grains would be held for comparable prices.

The price of corn currently is about $1.00 per bushel, soybeans $2.40, wheat about $1.30 and grain sorghums about $1.90 per hundredweight.

During last year's milk boycott, the U.S. Justice Department filed an anti-trust suit against the NFO, then dropped the suit in return for an agreement that the NFO would inform government officials of any further market boycotts.

Seniors of the Week

Bruce Dove Dick Herrold Allan Wechsler

As fraternity rush week reaches its final stages, this week's "Seniors of the Week" await final reactions and results.

Interfraternity Council (IFC) officers Dick Herrold, president; Bruce Dove, executive vice president; and Al Wechsler, administrative vice president, have worked with the officers of MSU's 33 fraternities to coordinate rush.

Dick, a social science major from Middletown, Pa., is a member of Tau Delta Phi fraternity, in which he has held several offices, including the presidency.

As president of IFC, he is a member of the ASMSU Student Board, but feels he represents the interests of the student body in general, rather than fraternities alone, since their interests are usually the same.

Herrold thinks of IFC as more a service organization for fraternities than as a major governing group. These services include coordinating rush, food buying, helping with problems, safeguarding pledges and activities from abuse, and publishing a newspaper. In 1966 Herrold was one of the top ten salesmen in the country for Cutco-Weaver, a subsidiary of the Alcoa Company, for whom he will be a sales manager in Lansing after graduation.

Al, a political science major from Huntington Woods and member of Psi Upsilon fraternity, is active in several areas, including Senior Class Council, Excalibur, Blue Key, and Delta Phi Epsilon, a political science honorary. He is also a former Union Board Treasurer.

Being active, Al said, is "a form of identifying with something and assuming an identity, while at the same time forming ties with MSU."

"A fraternity provides both for itself and the University a closer feeling for your four years here," he said.

Al pointed out two ways in which fraternities have changed recently. First, the academic aspect is emphasized more, and second, he feels they present a more conservative influence today, as opposed to their former liberal trend.

Bruce, a business administration, pre-law major from Washington, D. C., and a member of Zeta Beta Tau fraternity, pointed out that fraternities provide many men for campus leadership positions.

But he said that more are needed, so that one person need not hold as many as three leadership positions at once.

As members of Excalibur, both Bruce and Al felt the honorary serves a useful function of bringing together student leaders from various areas on campus to form some sort of interaction.

"It's like a 13-man fraternity," Bruce said.

Bruce is currently Mr. MSU, a member of the ASMSU-East Lansing Liaison Committee and Blue Key. He is a former Union Board director, associate justice of the traffic court, vice president and secretary of his fraternity, and has served on Greek Week, Water Carnival and Winter Carnival committees.

Symphony holds concert

Conductor Ronald Steele and soprano Janice Harsanyi will perform a program of Handel, Mozart, Wagner and Debussy for the Lansing Symphony's Jan. 22 concert.

Steele, an assistant professor at the University of Massachusetts, is the founder and conductor of the University of Massachusetts Symphony. He was previously concertmaster of the University of Michigan summer orchestra and associate conductor of the Michigan Youth Symphony, while earning a graduate degree at the University of Michigan.

Miss Harsanyi, American born and trained, has appeared extensively in recital and oratorio and on radio and television. She made her debut in 1953 with Eugene Ormandy.

The concert will be held at 8:15 p.m. at Everett High School Auditorium.

In a major change of bag, Diana Ross and the Supremes guest star as nuns in tonight's Tarzan episode on the NBC network. The episode is titled "The Convert." ## 'Clarence' kidnap attempt SAUGUS, Calif. (AP)—Somebody tried Wednesday night to kidnap Clarence the cross-eyed lion, a star of television's "Daktari" series, sheriff's deputies were notified.

The would-be kidnaper apparently did get away with two mountain lion cubs from "Africa, U.S.A.," the 260-acre wild-animal compound where the show is filmed.

A ranch spokesman gave this account:

A trainer, leaving about 10:30 p.m., found cages open and four ailing animals gone from the ranch's animal hospital. He heard a car drive away, spinning its wheels.

Employees found a coatimundi—a creature related to the raccoon—and an African porcupine, but the two mountain lion cubs were gone.

Elsewhere, among the ranch's 600 healthy animals, cages of Clarence and his stand-in, Romeo, were open and empty. The two lions were found about two city blocks away.

"The kidnaper could not possibly dispose of Clarence; he's too famous," said the spokesman. "So he must have been intending to hold him for ransom."

Owner's Ralph Helfer and Ivan

Tors value him at $750,000, his stand-in at $25,000. Deputies said they are investigating.

'Flicks' head weekend fare

By STUART ROSENTHAL
State News Reviewer

Topping this weekend's line-up of activity is the MSU Film Society screening of "Dr. Strangelove."

At 50 cents admission, I doubt that you will find a bigger entertainment bargain this term—the flick is a masterpiece and easily the best commercial cinematic effort of the last 10 years. You can see it tonight in 100 Veterinary Clinic and Saturday night in the Union Ballroom. Shows are at 7 and 9.

Other movies being offered on campus include the very highly acclaimed "David and Lisa" in 108 Wells Hall (tonight only) and "The Deadly Affair," a pretty dead flick being run at 7:30 tonight in the Auditorium.

The commercial outlets are touting mixed fare, ranging from the intricacies of "Bonnie and Clyde" at the Gladmer to the idiocies of "Valley of the Dolls" at the Spartan Twin.

Among the new offerings are "Games," which has received mostly "thumbs down" reports from the critics and the lower case spy stuff of "A Man Called Dagger," notable for its casting of Jan Murray as the villain.

The saloon circuit remains stationary, except for the winter term closing of "The Dells" and the opening of the new slush emporium, "Grandmother's" which is presently presenting the stirring message ditties of "Doug Clark and the Hot Nuts," a show well worth taking in.

Meanwhile, Mickey Shapiro, over at Mickey's Hideaway is biding his time until the Jan. 20 appearance of "The Spinners," with "The Free Rock Caravan."

"Mickey's" was quite reliable for good times last term, and it seems that Shapiro has no intention of letting a good thing lapse.

Still, with Motown in mind, it might be appropriate to gently drop a plug for a real change of pace television appearance by "The Supremes." The trio will portray nuns on this evening's segment of "Tarzan," to be transmitted at 7:30 via channel 10.

A bit more stimulating, perhaps, is the Friends of UCM screening of the film version of Sartre's "No Exit" followed by a session of relevant discussion at The Scene: Act II, located at 1118 S. Harrison Road. The presentation is, indeed, open to the public.

The only mixer merchants who seem to be operating in this vicinity are the Fee Hall people presenting "Francis 'X' and the Bushmen" at 8:30 p.m. Friday (admission 35 cents) and the East Complex Corporation, sponsoring "The Better Mousetrap" in the Holmes Hall Classrooms 9-12 Saturday night.

One last word to those who would desire exposure through this column, including film societies, mixer magnates and other entertainment and amusement enterprisers: Inclusion is free and immediate upon notification. We can best service you if you provide us with the details of your undertaking by 10 a.m. Thursday (for inclusion in the Friday "Entertainment this Weekend.")

Please mail or deliver said details to the State News offices, addressing them to: "Panorama."

Cagers look for road win at Michigan

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

A new setting but the same old vicious rivalry will be in store Saturday when MSU's basketball team challenges Michigan at 1:30 p.m. at the new University Events Bldg. in Ann Arbor.

The Spartans have met Michigan 84 times before and have won just 33 of those encounters, but the two teams will be meeting for the first time in the $7 million fieldhouse many call the "house that Cazzie built."

Michigan has had just four home contests in the fieldhouse to date and are 2-2 there. The Wolverines lost to nationally ranked Kentucky and Duke in the first two games and trounced Butler and Northern Kentucky in the last two contests there.

Both teams will be looking for their first in the conference race and to stop a current losing streak. Michigan is 4-6 and MSU 4-5 overall.

Michigan has lost two straight and is 0-1 in the conference after a last minute 77-75 loss to Wisconsin last Saturday. MSU dropped its conference opener to Illinois 66-56 last Saturday to stretch its losing string to four games.

"We're not to the slump state yet," MSU Coach John Benington said, "but we could reach it if we lose a couple more and get down on ourselves."

The Spartans are also in need of a road victory in the conference.

Benington has said that at least three wins on the road are a must for a team to challenge for the conference championship and that MSU would need at least one road victory in its first three road games.

"The loss to Illinois makes this game crucial," Benington said. "We won there on the road last year and lost at Michigan and Wisconsin. Now we're going to have to win at Michigan or Wisconsin to stay even with last year."

The Wolverines trounced MSU 81-59 although they ended up dead last in the final conference standings with a 2-12 record. MSU tied with Indiana for first place at 10-4 last season.

"Michigan has steadily improved this year. They run a lot more than Illinois and they're a better rebounding team than Illinois even though they don't play as good a defense," Benington said.

"We've been playing fast, little teams. Michigan is a big road team."

Leading the Wolverines in rebounding and scoring is 6-7 sophomore Rudy Tomjanovich. The Hamtramck native has grabbed 145 rebounds and averaged 19.6 points per game. Dennis Stewart, a 6-6 junior has added 91 rebounds and 6-3 senior guard Jim Pitts has grabbed 72 for the Wolverines.

Lee Lafayette, MSU's leading rebounder, has hauled down 89 rebounds and Heywood Edwards has grabbed 71. Both have played one less game than the Michigan trio.

Lafayette should be near full strength once again Saturday, and MSU should be much stronger physically than it was for the Illinois game.

Probable starters are Lafayette, John Holms, John Bailey and Steve Rymal at four of the positions. Bernie Copeland is likely to start at forward although that position has not been decided yet.

Holms will probably get the job of guarding Pitts, and Copeland is the prime candidate to guard Tomjanovich, according to Benington.

Jerry Geistler was also mentioned as a possible starter by Benington. Heywood Edwards will be resuming his "sixth man" status of last year.

Bob Sullivan, a 6-4 forward, and 5-9 guard Ken Maxey will round out the Michigan starting lineup.

Benington said the new fieldhouse would be, "A nice place to play. There's no big home-court advantage there."

Fedorchik returns to G-lineup

By DON DAHLSTROM
State News Sports Writer

Gymnastics Coach George Szypula is primarily looking for good performances by his young trampoline crew and a healthy Joe Fedorchik in Saturday's dual meet at Indiana.

Sophomores Randy Campbell and Richard Murahata, along with junior college transfer Norm Jolin, will perform against the Hoosiers in trampolines.

"These boys did all right in our Ohio State meet last week, but they've got to score higher to provide us with the all-around strength we need," Szypula said.

That was the only event which the Spartans dropped to the Buckeyes in the meet. Jolin was third with an 8.5 average (10 is perfect) followed by Murahata with 8.4 and Campbell with 8.3.

Fedorchik, a fine sophomore prospect in all-around, missed the first meet because of a leg injury.

"He has looked good in practice this week but still may not be quite ready to go all-around in the meet," Szypula said.

If he isn't ready, ace captain Dave Thor will replace him. Szypula, however, has plans to use both of them in as many events as possible. He especially wants Fedorchik to have some regular varsity competition before the Southern Illinois meet next Friday.

In his preliminary lineup, Szypula has Thor listed for all-around and Fedorchik for vault, parallel bars, and horizontal bar.

Indiana has won three of five dual meets this season but it is 0-2 in the Big Ten, losing to Iowa and Wisconsin.

MSU holds a 14-1 margin in dual meets against the Hoosiers. Last year, the Spartans grabbed a 178.075-171.80 victory.

A total of 16 gymnasts will make the trip to Bloomington, but only 12 are allowed to participate in the meet. The other can enter but only as non-counters. Szypula's preliminary line-ups listed 14 different men in the seven events.

Toby Towson, Murahata, and Norm Haynie are scheduled to enter the floor exercise. However, Towson has a bad shoulder which may keep him out of the meet.

Ed Gunny, Cliff Diehl, and Haynie will go in horizontal bars. Side horse entries are Ed Witzke, Gerald Moore, and Craig Kinsey. Diehl and Gunny are in vault.

Gunny, Dan Kinsey, and Larry

Goldberg will enter the still rings, while Diehl and Haynie complete the lineup in parallel bars.

The other pair of gymnasts making the trip are Dave Croft (still rings), and Mike Van Wormer (parallel bars).

Leading point scorers for Indiana this year have been Dwayne Wiser in still rings and Pat Kivland in all-around.

Wiser finished sixth in the conference meet last season and Kivland was ninth.

Niagra coach plans to quit

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Jim Maloney, embroiled in a controversy with Niagara University over recruiting, scheduling and an "impossible" losing season, resigned Thursday as Head Basketball Coach of the Purple Eagles effective at the end of the season.

Maloney, 32, who was given credit along with fired Freshman Coach Ed Donahue for bringing sophomore sensation Calvin Murphy to Niagara, left the post with a verbal blast at the school's policies.

"I have been hampered regarding recruitment and scheduling," Maloney said.

Pont named college grid Coach-of-Year

NEW YORK (UPI)—John Pont, who gave up job security at an Ivy League school for an uncertain future at Indiana, Thursday was named Major College Coach-of-the-Year for 1967 by the American Football Coaches Assn.

Cecil "Scrappy" Moore, who spent 42 years at the University of Chattanooga, was honored as the small college Coach-of-the-Year.

The two coaches were honored at a dinner during which time they received trophies. They were accorded the honors by 3,000 fellow coaches who participated in the balloting.

Pont, who went to Indiana in 1965 after seven years as head coach at Yale, rebuilt the perennial doormat Hoosiers into a club that gained a share of the Big Ten title and made its first Rose Bowl trip in history.

Ski tryouts

The MSU Ski Team will hold final tryouts for their varsity squad on Saturday at Sugar Loaf Mountain in Traverse City. All interested students are encouraged to enter.

Grapplers head west for meet

By STEVE LOKKER

State News Sports Writer
Horace Greeley said "go west young man," and the MSU wrestling squad is heading his words. The grapplers travel to Arizona State to face the Sun Devils Saturday.

"We expect a real tough meet," said Spartan Coach Grady Peninger. "We got some good experience from wrestling in the quadrangle last weekend, the kind that will help us when we get into a tournament where we have to wrestle several matches in a short time."

The feature match in Saturday's contest will be the heavy-weight match between MSU's top scorer, Jeff Smith, and Arizona's Curly Culp. Both are undefeated this season.

Smith and Culp, last year's NCAA champion, have met once before with Culp taking the decision 12-11 in overtime. At the time, Smith was attending Cerritos (Calif.) Junior College.

NCAA champion Dale Anderson will return to the MSU lineup after missing the quadrangle last weekend with a minor injury. He will wrestle at 137 pounds.

Peninger will be looking for performances from Mike McGilliard and George Hoddy comparable to the ones they turned in against Miami of Ohio, Eastern Michigan, and Central Michigan. "Both did excellent jobs," commented Peninger.

Arizona State has four outstanding wrestlers on its squad. Bob Shines at 123 pounds and Gene Parrish at 145 were both national junior college champions last year while Dick Johnson at 160 finished second in the junior college ranks last year. Gene Medley at 130 is another top notch performer.

Mike Alsop and Ron Ouellet are battling Cox at the 152 spot but neither has displaced him yet.

State will be carrying a 2-1

Icers look for key against Denver

By TOM BROWN

State News Sports Writer
Spartan Hockey Coach Amo Bessone is a man looking for the missing jigsaw piece.

He'd like to find it for Friday and Saturday nights' encounters with Denver at the Ice Arena.

A lack of scoring is often mentioned, but Bessone feels that this is only part of the problem.

"Nino Cristofoli and Wayne Duffett already have more goals than they had all last year, so our seniors are producing. Now if a couple of our sophomores would get a hot hand, we'd be all set there," Bessone said.

Bessone finds the defense suspect as well. "We have some trouble with our defensive game, but it's not with the defensemen. Junior Bob DeMarco and Allan Swanson, who's only a sophomore, are two defensemen that don't get much publicity but are doing good jobs for us."

"It's the forwards who don't put out on defense when they start thinking about just scoring. I want them to score, but I want them to play defense, too," Bessone added.

In the goalie situation, Bessone said that both Bob Johnson and Rich Duffett would see action.

Bessone thinks that the defense has played the largest part in carrying the Spartans to their present 6-4-2 record.

"Once the offense gets going, the Spartans will begin to roll," Bessone said.

Junior Lee Hathaway, who scored Saturday night's winning goal, is one skater that Bessone would like to count on. A native of Rhode Island and a veteran of the U.S. Army's hockey team, Hathaway waited for the twelfth game of the season before getting his first goal. This puzzles Bessone.

"Lee has all the tools -- he can skate, shoot and pass real well," Bessone said.

If Hathaway has found himself, the 25-year-old married physical education major will have a splendid opportunity to prove it against Denver.

Ken Anstey, the leading Spartan scorer with six goals and eight assists, broke his hand during Saturday's contest against Michigan, and can't be counted on for offense. Hathaway is expected to replace him.

"Denver hasn't been beaten twice on a weekend in four or five years," Bessone said. "The Pioneers recruit big, rough, tough, experienced hockey players. This year's team measures up to any in the WCHA."

Denver is 4-3 in the WCHA and 8-5-1 overall.

Denver will bring an All-America and All-WCHA wing in Jim Wiste, who has 12 goals and 11 assists in 14 games to lead the Pioneer scoring column. Center Bob Trembecky has six goals and 11 assists, wing Craig Patrick follows with six goals and 10 assists and center Tom Miller has six goals and eight assists.

Denver's record includes a victory over the Italian national team, a tie with the Finnish national team, and losses to the U.S. and Russian national teams.

Denver split with North Dakota on the road and dropped Michigan twice in Denver in league play.

Leading the Pioneer's defensemen are All-WCHA Keith Magnuson and Jim Gould. Goaltie Gerry Powers has allowed only 18 goals in seven league encounters, so defense can be considered a strong point.

With a stingy defense and two veteran lines loaded with scoring power, Denver is the best club to test the Spartans since North Dakota was here in December. Bessone will be grateful for anything he can beg, borrow or steal against the Pioneers this weekend.

GO AGAINST INDIANA

Tankers face rugged opponents

By GARY WALKOWICZ

State News Sports Writer

MSU's swimming team will need a better than average effort Saturday for the swimmers over to extend their winning ways over Iowa State and Bowling Green.

The Spartan tankers, who face the pair in a triple dual meet at 2 p.m. in the Men's IM, have beaten Iowa State 22 times in their 25 previous meetings. They have a perfect 14-0 record against Bowling Green.

This year's Iowa State team, however, is loaded with talent and the Spartans are rated the underdogs in the meet.

"We're going to have to swim like maniacs to beat Iowa State," McCaffree said. "This is probably the best team they've ever had. They have a lot of talent and they've done well for this early in the season."

The Cyclones have already met three other Big Eight teams in dual meets and defeated them all. They are the defending Big Eight champions.

MSU defeated Iowa State in a dual meet last year 70-44, but the Cyclones' returning swimmers scored 39 of those points while the Spartan returnees totaled only 34 points.

Bruce Lechler of Iowa State won two Big Eight titles last year, in the 200-yard freestyle and the 100-yard butterfly, and had a second in the 100-yard freestyle. John Westensee is a top sprint man. He won the 50-yard freestyle and finished fourth in the 100.

James Cotsworth is the Cyclones' best individual medley man. He is the Big Eight champion at 200 yards. Still another title-holder is David Rathke, who won the 100-yard breaststroke. Frank Augenstein is a junior college transfer who has a time of 10:43 in the 1,000-yard freestyle.

Iowa State also has returning intact its 400-yard freestyle and medley relay teams, both of which won at the Big Eight meet.

Bowling Green isn't rated highly like Iowa State but should give the Spartans a good battle. The Falcons have a fine freestyler in sophomore Bill Zeeb and are strong in the butterfly with Sandy Kennedy, Ted Wit and Pat Duthie, all of whom placed in last year's Mid-American Conference meet. Bowling Green is 2-0 in dual meets this year. The Spartans will be led by captain Pete Williams. The versatile senior will swim in the individual medley, backstroke, and probably some freestyle events.

McCaffree hopes that sophomore Bruce Richards will perform as well as he did in last week's Big Ten Relays. Rollie Grosz and Don Rauch are expected to lead the freestyling brigade.

One of the meet's best races should be in the 200-yard individual medley where Williams and Iowa State's Cotsworth meet. Williams won in last year's dual meet, edging the Cyclone swimmer by less than two seconds.

The triple dual meet is actually three dual meets at once: MSU vs. Iowa State, MSU vs. Bowling Green, and Iowa State vs. Bowling Green. Each team will have two swimmers in each event.

Lombardi says Green Bay ready to meet Oakland

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) -- Vince Lombardi's ordinarily solemn features melted into a warm satisfied smile Thursday and he congratulated the Green Bay Packers for a "good practice, good workout" after their fine showing in preparation for Sunday's Super Bowl game with the Oakland Raiders.

"We had a great deal more zip today than we had before," commented Lombardi following the one-hour session in sunny, comfortable 80-degree weather, the best the Packers have experienced since arriving here last Sunday.

"We had a beautiful day for a change and maybe it helped us. Yesterday we were rusty but today everything looked fine." Lombardi isn't sure yet whether Ben Wilson or Chuck Mercein will start at fullback against the Raiders in Miami's Orange Bowl Sunday.

"I'm not trying to be evasive, but we're still not sure about Wilson's ankle," said Lombardi. "He's been hobbled a while, you know. Some days he limps, some days he doesn't. He looked fine today but I haven't made up my mind yet whether he or Mercein will start Sunday."

Lombardi said he had no drastic lineup changes in mind for Oakland but admitted "the possibility" of playing Donnie Anderson and Travis Williams together in the same backfield. At the same time the Packers announced the activation of Dick Capp from their taxi squad and the de-activation of Allen Brown.

Capp is a tight end and line-backer who will be used on the Packers' special teams Sunday. Brown, a tight end, suffered a ruptured kidney recently.

From here on in the Packers will be letting up in their workouts.

"We worked more for timing today," explained Lombardi. "We had two pretty tough days for contact before this."

As for getting the World Championship Packers up emotionally for the game with the Raiders, Lombardi said he has no special devices he means to apply.

"I use whatever I have to use to get them up," he said.

"There's no mystique about it. We're pretty basic."

Growing expansive, Lombardi, the 54-year-old head coach and general manager of the Packers whom some speculate might give up one of those titles after Sunday, said, "I'm sure some people (Packers players) are gonna retire after Sunday's game, win or lose."

Green, ex-MSU cager, traded to Philadelphia

SAN DIEGO (UPI)--Johnny Green, a former MSU All-American, was traded by the San Diego Rockets Thursday to the Philadelphia 76ers for a high draft choice and an undisclosed amount of cash.

Green, one of the outstanding players in Spartan history, was a three-time all-Big Ten choice. In 1959, he was the Most Valuable Player in the Big Ten and also an All-American choice.

Noted as possibly the best jumper in the game, he has averaged 13.9 points and 10.1

rebounds for the Rockets this year in 42 games. He is one of the league's weakest free throwers, averaged only 47 per cent.

The 6-5 Green, now in his ninth National Basketball Assn. season, is expected to add depth to the 76ers' forwardcourt in their bid for a second straight world championship.

Rockets' Coach Jack McMahon said, "Johnny did an excellent job in getting our new team off to a good start, but we think our future lies with young players. This gives us a high draft choice from this year's outstanding group of college seniors and an opportunity to develop a young forward."

He was referring to rookie Pat Riley of Kentucky, who has been impressive as a forward but has failed to fit into McMahon's plans to use him as a guard because of his 6-foot-4 height, small for a forward.

The vacancy created by the trade will be filled by the reactivation of guard Jim Barnett, who has been out for the past two months with an injury.

5 Mideast countries consider new pact

LONDON — Five Middle Eastern oil states were reported yesterday as considering a new defense pact Thursday night after hearing of Britain's provisional decision to quit her Persian Gulf bases by 1971.

Senior diplomats said the highly secret moves, initiated by Iran, have Britain's support. The Iranians are even bringing such hostile neighbors as Iraq and Bahrain into the picture. Other countries involved, according to the informants, are Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

Already Iran has won Russian backing—$100 million worth of arms aid—for an over-all $800-million program to re-equip and modernize her armed forces. A Foreign Office minister, Gordon Roberts, returned Friday from the Gulf region, where he has been warning local monarchs and sheiks to expect an early announcement of Britain's withdrawal.

Other British retrenchments will include a total military pull-out from Malaysia and Singapore by 1971 and a cut, or cancellation, of the order of 50 American F-111 swing-wing strike bombers.

Possibilities of modifying all, or some, of these decisions were under discussion in Washington by Foreign Secretary George Brown and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

The Americans had hoped for at least two things: —That the British would have delayed any decision to quit Southeast Asia at least until the Vietnam war had approached a conclusive stage or a phase of negotiations.

—That the British would have stayed on in the Gulf at least until the purpose of Russia's naval buildup in the Mediterranean had been clarified and the over-all situation, especially on the Arab-Israeli front, had improved. But some British authorities have been arguing that Russia's naval power buildup can in no way compare in firepower with the American 6th Fleet, in Britain's view.

FEW NEGRO EXECUTIVES

Employment study shows white collar discrimination

WASHINGTON — A series of government reports shows that whatever may have been done to end employment discrimination on the lower levels, the key to the executive suite is still tagged mainly for the white, Anglo-Saxon Christian.

The reports, by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, are to be made public at hearings in New York City next week. The hearings were called to explore employment discrimination on the white collar level in some of the nation's largest businesses.

This is the first time in the commission's 21/2-year history that it has moved primarily into big business white collar employment, although it tackled drug industry discrimination last fall.

The commission has prepared at least four reports to back up its findings, and is prepared to listen to industry representatives explain what they have done to try to eliminate racial, religious and sexual discrimination in employment.

The commission studies are based on data which employers were required by law to submit concerning their employment patterns in 1966 and 1967. The reports are focused on New York City.

One report details the employment patterns of 100 major New York City corporations, and these firms, while headquartered in New York City, account for nearly 16 per cent of the nation's total output of goods and services and employ about 10 per cent of the 26 million persons covered under the commission's employment reporting system. The report covers, however, only their New York operations.

Separate reports cover the financial industry—banks, insurance companies, brokerage firms—and the communications industry: advertising, book publishing, newspapers, magazines, radio and television.

There also is a report dealing with charges of discrimination against Jews in top level management.

Although the commission would not release the reports prior to the hearings, sources indicated these are some of the findings:

—Although the New York City population is about 18 per cent Negro, and its total work force is 8.8 per cent Negro, among the firms reporting to the commission Negroes represented only 6.7 per cent of white collar employment in banking and 5.9 per cent in insurance, Puerto Ricans, at 10 per cent of the population, held 5.1 per cent of the white collar banking jobs and only 2.8 per cent of insurance jobs. Most of these posts are at the clerical level.

—The commission found that the 100 major companies headquartered in New York City "fail to match their economic leadership role with leadership in equal employment opportunity." Negroes held only 2.6 per cent of their white collar jobs and Puerto Ricans 2 per cent. The commission said that while these corporations have large resources which would make it possible to recruit on a broad scale, they "are, in fact, the laggards."

—The communications industry also employs few Negroes and Puerto Ricans. But the commission found that opportunities for women above the clerical level "generally are better" in this area, although the financial industry comes close to treating women as well. It found the communications media also provide generally better opportunities at all levels than do the 100 largest corporations.

—The commission found that the city's Jewish population—New York City is about one-quarter Jewish—is under-utilized at the management level in all industries, and its tiny representation among corporate executives contrasts sharply with the high educational level of the Jewish community. Jews account for about half the college graduates in New York City.

This report relies heavily on data supplied by the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. Much of the material already has been published, but the commission financed a study by Dr. Philip Harris of the Baruch School of the City College of New York, and his findings substantially confirmed those of the two major Jewish groups.

Specifically, the commission found that Jews are under-represented not only in New York City, but nationally in top-ranking jobs in such industries as insurance, automobile, manufacturing, banking, shipping and even in law where Jewish law school graduates are paid less than their gentile colleagues when they are hired for their first job with a law firm.

An interesting sidelight, Harris' report says, is that some employment agencies require their own employees who have "unusual" or "foreign" names "to assume and use names which can aptly be described as 'Anglo-Saxon.' These names are agency property." Harris feels these names are assumed because of patterns of excluding those with foreign-sounding or unusual names.

In a statement announcing the hearings, Clifford L. Alexander Jr., commission chairman, said "the existence of many minority workers in some firms refutes other excuses that qualified minority applicants cannot be found."

He said the four commission plans to discuss this disparity in the hiring records of different firms, and to suggest ways that less successful firms might improve.

Service functions such as rescue operations and handling domestic disputes today overshadow the traditional role of the police as a crime prevention agency.

Treasury reports savings bond loss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite yearly drives to increase sales of savings bonds, the Treasury Department is paying out more money under the program than it takes in, and has been for several years.

Treasury officials from Secretary Henry H. Fowler on down have just taken part in the annual two-day rally of the U.S.

Industrial Bond Committee in an attempt to step up sales through the payroll savings plan.

This year's goal is to sign up two million persons to buy bonds where they work or to increase the amount they buy.

But the Treasury's own figures show that in every month last year, the department paid out more to individuals who cashed in bonds than it collected from new bond purchases.

The redemption price includes the amount originally paid for the bond plus any interest which may have accrued during the months or years the bond was held.

At present, series E and H savings bonds, the types bought by the public, pay 4.15 per cent interest. A series E bond, for example, purchased for $18.75 can be redeemed in seven years for $25.

Officials acknowledged the net outflow when questioned about it Thursday but said the program has important advantages both to the treasury and the individual.

Total holdings of savings bonds—which now exceed $51 billion—have continued to rise because of interest which has accrued on bonds not redeemed.

One source said the program offers an easy way for the little man to save money without creating an inflationary impact on the economy. It also reduces the need for the treasury to borrow money in the open market where interest rates are higher.

Fowler said the bonds have these other advantages for individuals—safety, convenience, tax benefits and easy access to cash when needed. No tax need be paid on interest accruing on a series E bond until it is redeemed.

Since last May 1, the Treasury has sold a new type bond called a Freedom Share but many officials concede privately their disappointment in sales.

Merit Scholars

Merit Scholars also had some mixed comments about their professors.

"Most of the faculty members here are truly interested in teaching, but they are hampered by laws that are out of place in an intellectual establishment."

Another said, "I am surprised the profs seldom take the trouble to learn the students' names (even in classes of less than 20 students). They usually are helpful during office hours but never stimulate interest in a group. They seem just to communicate facts and sometimes force students to think, although usually in structured, pre-determined patterns."

Answered another student, "I have found most professors, particularly of 300 and 400 level courses, eager to discuss some of the issues in their own or related academic fields. With the bind on their time, professors should at least be entitled to discuss these things only with students who are not too lazy to read the assignments and maybe more, and not too unoriginal to THINK about what they have imbibed."

Concluded another Merit Scholar: "MSU needs to stop expanding and start concentrating on making available to students the BEST in everything—professors, books—especially in the library—and courses."

"This is potentially one of the great universities in America—the students, Merit Scholars and all, are generally as bright as any students in the nation—brighter perhaps. Give us the teachers we need!"

Freshman orientation, controversial when the survey was mailed, drew only one comment: "Orientation, I think, should consist of placement tests and registration as it does now, plus introduction to the mechanical aspects of surviving here. They let the kids get to know each other and the campus on their own."

"That's as favorable a picture as they can get in two days, and they won't blame anyone for lying to them if they're disappointed later."

Drawing many sympathetic comments from the Merit Scholars was the lack of special opportunities offered those who were neither in the Honors College nor Merit Scholars.

One student, evaluating this group, suggested "These are the Merit Scholars who don't quite make it—who for one reason or another are not quite ready to work at college. They are called underachievers and poorly motivated when, in fact, many of them are merely differently motivated."

"But the case in point is that if they do not make that magic cut-off GPA of 3.5 for their freshman year, they are largely ignored by the same people who make MSU so attractive to them. I think that, were this aspect of the program strengthened to include more and better attempts to reach this group, a lot of the dissatisfaction with MSU's Merit Scholar program would dissolve."

Romney

A part of his address, which lasted about 45 minutes, alluded to the decline of American morality as the major cause of much of the civil disorder and suggested that "effective action against crime begins in the home."

The recommendations made on anti-crime legislation were the result of a Special Commission on Crime, Delinquency and Criminal Administration he named a year ago, Romney said.

In the message, Romney also mixed occasional criticisms of the federal government with pleas for an increase in the state's $1.25 minimum wage, and a $435 million state bond issue to finance recreational facilities and water pollution control.
