Armed hijacker forces Delta jet to fly to Cuba

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—A Delta Airlines jet with 109 persons aboard was hijacked at gunpoint Wednesday seven minutes after takeoff from Tampa Airport and forced to fly to Cuba, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

The Coast Guard in Miami and Delta Airlines said at 4:45 p.m. the plane had landed safely at Havana.

Delta said in Miami that an armed passenger used a stewardess as a hostage and forced the crew to fly the $8 million craft from Florida to the Communist island.

The plane, with 102 passengers and a crew of seven, was diverted to Cuba at 3:37 p.m. EST by a gun-wielding passenger as the craft flew at 31,000 feet between Tampa and West Palm Beach.

The aircraft was Flight 843 from Chicago to Miami by way of Tampa and West Palm Beach.

"A passenger came up the cockpit accompanied by a stewardess," a spokesman said at Delta headquarters in Atlanta. "He had a gun in his hand and told the crew they were to proceed to Havana."

J.D. Seale, traffic control tower chief at Tampa International Airport, said the airliner did not give "descent clearance" to the FAA in Miami, an indication it was overflying its scheduled destination.

In Miami, Carlton W. Hamilton, operations officer at Miami International Airport tower, said at 4:15 p.m. "The aircraft by this time should be very close to the Cuban shoreline."

The flight was followed by radar monitors at the FAA Air Route Traffic Control center in Miami, the Delta spokesman said. He said the plane was flying toward Miami.

The assistant area manager of the FAA in Miami, J. M. Frazier, said, "To my knowledge no interceptors were sent up from Homestead Air Force Base or anywhere else to meet the plane."

The Naval base at Key West said at 4:30 p.m. it was unaware of the hijacking.

Meeting with President leaves Thant unmoved

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson and U.N. Secretary-General U Thant talked about Vietnam Wednesday without evidencing any progress toward negotiations to end the war.

U Thant received red carpet treatment for the one-hour White House session, which he termed useful. A presidential spokesman described it as friendly.

The U.N. officer reported on his just-concluded trip to India, Russia, Britain and France in search of a formula to get peace talks going. He met with North Vietnamese diplomats in New Delhi and Paris as well as with the leaders of the countries he visited.

Administration sources here said U

Thant apparently was not encouraged by what he found. The secretary-general was understood to have uncovered no particular shift in Hanoi's position—the United States must unconditionally halt its bombing in order to get North Vietnam to the conference table.

LBJ firm

Johnson did not shift his stance either, according to a brief statement issued by the White House upon U Thant's departure.

"The President reaffirmed our continuing desire to achieve a peaceful settlement and the continued validity of the San Antonio formula," the White House communique said.

IN THE UNION

SDS to hold book sale in defiance of 'U' ruling

By DAN BRANDON
State News Staff Writer

Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) will sell books in the Union today despite a ruling by Assistant Secretary Starr Keesler that it will be in violation of University regulations.

Jim Holleman, faculty advisor to SDS, told the ASMSU Board Tuesday night that SDS will sell paperback books at cost to students despite Keesler's unwillingness to grant an exception to the regulation which prohibits the selling of non-student publications on campus.

"Our intent is to go ahead and test the denial by selling the books beginning at noon Thursday," Holleman said.

There is some confusion over which regulations, if any, will be violated if SDS sell their books. The Academic Freedom Report contains a section on student publications, but none for non-student publications.

Louis Hekhuis, director of student activities, said that it could be in violation of the regulation prohibiting soliciting.

"We should look at the spirit of the ordinance," Brad Lang, sophomore member at large, said. "To interpret it to apply to student organizations is a mistake. They are selling the books for educational and not fund raising reasons."

Among the books which SDS proposes to sell are the "Autobiography of Malcolm X," "Free World Colossus" by David Horowitz, "Vietnam" by Marvin Gettleman and "Containment and Change" by Carl Ogelsby.

According to Mike Price, an SDS member, all the books are used as texts in at least one class on campus. Price said the books are being sold at cost which is up to 40 percent less than retail price.

Doubt remained among Board members as to who actually denied SDS the sales right. Holleman said that he asked for an exception and Keesler said no. He added that Keesler had asked him the nature of the books.

A suggestion that the denial order came from higher up in the administration was questioned by W. C. Blanton, senior member-at-large. "I can't see Breslin, (University Secretary Jack Breslin) coming from his legislative lobbying or President Hannah from his numerous tasks to approve the selling of books by SDS," Blanton said.

In other action, the Board passed a motion after nearly two hours in closed session concerning alleged corruption in the Student Traffic Appeals Court.

The motion made by Jim Friel, Off Campus Council president, directed the Board to instruct the vice chairman to submit in writing such evidence as he considers adequate to prove corrupt practices or possibilities thereof on the part of the Student Traffic Appeals Court or any members thereof to the Student Board next week.

The motion further stipulated that all evidence must be either in written documented form or in the form of first-hand accounts.

Visit brief

Courtesy and restraint marked the brief visit. Johnson waited hatless and coatless in 14 degree weather at the south portico of the executive mansion to greet his U.N. visitor, who strolled in on a red carpet between honor guards.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk gave a luncheon for U Thant at the State Department immediately after the White House gathering.

Presidential press secretary George Christian said Johnson and U Thant spent most of the time alone. They were joined briefly afterwards by U.N. Undersecretary Ralph J. Bunche and several U.S. officials.

U.S. participants at the White House and State Department discussions also included the ambassador to the United Nations, Arthur J. Goldberg; the incoming secretary of defense, Clark M. Clifford; the President's national security affairs adviser, Walt Rostow; and Joseph Sisco, assistant secretary of state for international organization affairs.

of learning. The truth is that most good things in society are not done for the sheer joy of it."

Ebel said that this part of the report referring to extrinsic and intrinsic behavior "must be examined more carefully."

He does believe, however, that the Cr-N plan would be "most appropriate for courses having no specific objectives."

Marines trade damages with enemy in Hue fight

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marine jets exploded a Communist ammunition dump and Red gunners blew up a fuel-laden American Navy landing craft Wednesday in the battle for Hue's Citadel.

The tit for tat exchange lofted flames and black smoke over the old imperial capital, ravaged through three weeks of warfare that allied authorities said has cost the lives of 3,000 enemy soldiers, 400 South Vietnamese troops and about 100 Americans.

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong held up in the Citadel spurned a surrender-or-ultimatum broadcast to them by Marines. Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, commander of South Vietnam's 1st Army Corps, estimated 300 enemy were fighting on in the force once believed to number 800.

Low-hanging clouds lifted somewhat and Marine fighter-bombers returned to the battle for the first time since last Friday. Four A4 Skyhawks set off the Red ammunition dump with 250-pound Snake Eye bombs and 500-pound napalm canisters.

The target, near the massive stone wall of the Citadel on the north bank of the Perfume River, went up with a spectacular flash. Marine machine gunners cut down a dozen small groups that darted from the scene of the blast.

The Communists countered late in the day with shots that touched off the fuel cargo of a Navy landing craft steaming up the river. The fuel went up in a ball of fire. The craft's four crewmen jumped overboard and were picked up by other Navy vessels. Spokesmen said there were no casualties.

The action in Hue and a threatened renewal of action in Saigon were the centers of attention, although widely scattered clashes occurred across the country. For the second consecutive night Saigon was filled with rumors of an impending Viet Cong assault on the city as a followup to the lunar new year offensive and the widespread attacks of last Sunday.

Hanoi broadcast a declaration that Communist forces captured "a number of American fliers and crewmen" in the attack on the Tan Son Nhut field last Sunday.

A U.S. 7th Air Force spokesman denied it. Although American authorities ordinarily decline comment on Communist propaganda stories, he said there was no penetration of the base and no prisoners were taken.

PSYCHOLOGIST'S VIEWPOINT

To grade or not to grade; consider the 'motivation'

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

A credit-no credit system of grading at MSU would "inevitably reduce motivation," while a ten-grade system could "improve the accuracy of students' self-perceptions," according to an educational psychologist at MSU.

"If a student were taking credit-no credit (Cr-N) courses and graded simultaneously, he'd probably find that when it came to cutting corners, he'd do it with the Cr-N ones," said Robert L. Ebel, professor of counseling and personnel services.

Ebel has written the book "Measuring Educational Achievement" (Prentice-Hall, 1965) which includes an entire chapter devoted to "Marks and Marking Systems."

The Educational Policies Committee's (EPC) report on a proposed revised grading system released last week includes a quotation from this book in the report's rationale section on grades and motivation.

The EPC report consists of 17 specific recommendations to change MSU's grading system, centering on the elimination of letter grades and a limited Cr-N system.

A numerical system of ten grades from 0 to 4.5 would be used and students could take specified courses outside their major on a Cr-N basis.

One part of the EPC rationale behind the grading reads, "A limited credit-no credit system is introduced to take a step toward reducing the emphasis on grades. Hopefully, this will encourage intrinsic motivation."

"Most purposeful behavior in life, however, is intrinsically motivated," Ebel said. "We are sometimes led to believe that we should learn for the mere job

Canadians jeer as Pearson seeks confidence vote

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson brought his government's future to the floor of the House of Commons Wednesday, but a confidence vote needed to save it was temporarily headed off after cat-calls and howls of laughter from the opposition drowned out the 70-year-old leader.

Opposition party members turned down a move by Pearson for an immediate confidence ballot. Without unanimous consent, Commons could not begin debate on the confidence issue before Friday.

Pearson was seeking to prevent his five year-old government's fall on the defeat of its income tax surcharge bill in Commons Monday night. When he called the defeat "not a vote of nonconfidence," the opposition benches erupted.

Riot-bloodied campus under guard

LORMAN, Miss. (AP) — Students milled around under the wary eyes of highway patrolmen Wednesday on the campus of all-Negro Alcorn A and M College, where a bloody riot Tuesday left three persons wounded by bullets.

"I didn't have anything to do with it, but I'm getting out of here until the campus gets quiet again," murmured a Negro boy who refused to give his name.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the southwest Mississippi college raised doubts as to what actually started the shooting.

The officers said they were forced to fire on 200 rioting male students when they cleared a burning dormitory with teargas and were then shot at by a shotgun and several pistols. Fire was limited to one room in the dormitory.

Two persons were taken to a hospital at nearby Port Gibson, one with a bullet wound and the other gashed by flying glass. Two other students wounded by bullets or shotgun pellets and five others cut by debris apparently were not injured seriously enough for hospital treatment.

"Students were firing guns, throwing bricks and chairs and they set one building on fire," reported Dan S. McCay, chief deputy sheriff of Claiborne County.

The deputy blamed the riot on three suspended students, who he said "came back on the campus and agitated the others." McCay said, "One was suspended for drinking and the other two for cursing the school's president."

But Negro leader Charles Evers, a candidate for Congress, claimed the three unidentified students were expelled for distributing his campaign literature among the 2,300 students enrolled. The college denied it.

Asked what specifically caused the students' obvious resentment, the college spokesman said, "Wouldn't you be if somebody had gone in your dorm and beaten your head when you weren't necessarily the one causing any trouble?"

"There was some shooting out here—but there is a question of who was shooting at what," he said. "I certainly cannot deny the students were shooting, because I was not there."

The spokesman added that he did not think the highway patrolmen were lying and they at least thought they were shot at.

Students said the rioting had been over for at least two hours before highway patrolmen entered the dormitory, throwing teargas containers.

PRE-DAWN BOMBING

Soviets protest embassy attack

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government lodged a strong protest with the United States Wednesday against a pre-dawn bomb explosion that damaged the Russian Embassy in Washington.

The note was a "strong protest in connection with the criminal act against the Soviet Embassy in Washington, the Tass News Agency said.

The Foreign Ministry handed the U.S. Embassy a note demanding "strict punishment of those guilty and the immediate adoption of effective measures to insure the security of the U.S.S.R. Embassy in the United States and its staff members."

Tass said the only reason no one in the Embassy was injured was because the explosion came early in the morning before the beginning of working hours.

"The criminal act against the Soviet Embassy took place only because the American authorities ignored their rudimentary duty of insuring the inviolability and security of the U.S.S.R. diplomatic mission," the Foreign Ministry declared.

The ministry said that only on Feb. 15 the Soviet government had requested U.S. authorities to take appropriate security measures at the Embassy.

"The American side, however, is declining to fulfill its direct duties in accordance with generally accepted norms of international law," the note added.

The Tass dispatch also said "this crime is a result of the growing anti-Communist hysteria that is being fanned in certain quarters in the United States."

It did not elaborate, but on the Georgetown University campus a few miles from the Embassy, a three-day mock trial of international Communism drew to a close Wednesday.

A State Dept. spokesman termed the Soviet charge of connivance "nonsense and absurd." Secretary of State Dean Rusk "personally expressed his regrets" to the Soviet ambassador both by telephone and in writing.

In an official statement, the State Dept. said it "must condemn in the strongest terms the senseless act of terrorism."

Other officials, meanwhile, disclosed an anonymous letter threatening the Embassy came into government hands last month. They refused to disclose its contents, but said it was not a bomb threat.

Police Capt. W.R. Bishop said Washington policemen are not routinely assigned to full-time duty outside the Embassy, a 58-year-old, four-story brick-and-stone townhouse at 1125 16th Street NW.

He said an officer who patrols the area of mostly business and office buildings was two blocks away when he heard the explosion about 5:45 a.m.

Police cordoned off the area, but a few newsmen and photographers were allowed a close-up inspection of the damaged Embassy.

The bomb appeared to have been placed on the first floor ledge between a black iron grating bolted to the front of the building and a heavy mesh screen attached to the wooden window sill.

The explosion ripped away chunks of the stone window ledge and twisted the inch-thick iron bars outward. But the mesh screen apparently saved the interior of the Embassy from heavier damage.

Although a large wooden desk near the window was damaged, glass in a bookcase across the room was not broken. Ornate statuary on the white-painted wall above a fireplace appeared intact.

A leather chair was the only other piece of furniture that reporters could see in the room. Bricks, pieces of wood and other debris littered the floor. Police said an adjoining reception room suffered lighter damage.

There was no fire.

Because of the early hour, a spokesman said, few employees were inside the Embassy when the bomb exploded. A few hours later, a workman tacked a heavy plastic sheet over the damaged window as other workers swept up the debris.

FACES TRAVEL CHARGE

Brown refuses to pay bail

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — H. Rap Brown, a militant Black Power crusader charged with violating federal gun laws, flew here from New York today and vowed: "I'll go to jail before I'll pay $100,000 bail." Brown headed for a hearing in federal district court on charges he violated rules of his $15,000 bond on the pending gun case by making an unauthorized trip to California last weekend. His lawyer, William Kunstler, accompanied the lank Negro. Before take off in New York, Kunstler said he hoped to have Brown back in New York City tonight "unless they revoke the bail." The $15,000 bond was posted last September after Brown's arraignment on charges he illegally transported a rifle from New York to New Orleans, then back to New York. However, Monday, U.S. Dist. Court Judge Lansing Mitchell temporarily revoked the bond and set a new one at $100,000 because of Brown's California trip. Brown is also due to appear in court at Richmond, Va., on Friday. A $10,000 bond was revoked there because of the trip. Brown, arrested at a Manhattan apartment Tuesday morning on a request by the federal court in New Orleans, was released in Kunstler's custody about 9 p.m. after day-long detention by federal authorities. A judge ordered Brown to appear in the court in New Orleans this afternoon. A court hearing here for Brown, 24-year-old head of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, was delayed to await the return of Kunstler from the West Coast. At the hearing before federal Judge Marvin E. Frankel, Kunstler said Brown was arrested at a friend's apartment without the warrant from New Orleans and he contended that the arrest was illegal. Kunstler also argued that Brown had a right to be with his lawyer—even if it took him to California. "I was in the area. He was with me," Kunstler said. Mitchell ordered in New Orleans last September that Brown's movements under bail be restricted to New Orleans, New York or SNCC headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., unless he obtained permission to travel elsewhere. Brown appeared last Saturday at a rally in Oakland, Calif., to raise money for a Negro accused there of killing a policeman. The government alleges that he made a similar appearance in Los Angeles before returning to New York. Rep. Edwin E. Willis, D-La., chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, said in Washington Tuesday that the committee had alerted the Justice Department to Brown's plan to travel to California despite the terms of his federal bonds. As a result, Willis told the House, the department acted promptly in courts. Willis said that at the department's request, the U.S. District Court in New Orleans issued a bench warrant for Brown's arrest and ordered his bond increased to $100,000. Willis commended the department and its chief, Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, for the prompt action.

Kirk hits NEA for walkout; substitutes can't keep order

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Growing unrest among students Wednesday created serious discipline problems in many of Florida's public schools where a wave of substitutes and volunteers replaced thousands of resigned teachers. As discipline weakened, Gov. Claude Kirk returned from a week-long West Coast speaking trip and said Florida was being invaded by the National Education Association (NEA). He promised to meet with teachers in Miami and end the statewide walkout. State attorneys charged in Tallahassee that the NEA and Florida Education Association officers had violated a temporary court order barring them from inducing Florida teachers to resign. A hearing on a request for a permanent injunction was set for Feb. 28. More than two-thirds of the county systems remained open but many schools were understaffed. There were numerous reports of cases where students roamed the hallways, left school without permission in large numbers, and in some places set up picket lines demanding the return of their regular teachers. Two students were arrested at Forrest Hills High School in Jacksonville after leading a walkout of 150 students in protest against the substitute teachers. "Educate me with educators!" declared a sign carried by a student picketing Oakland High School in Haines City. Another demanded, "Baby sitters go home!" Only a handful of the school's hundreds of pupils were in classes.

At Seabreeze High School in Daytona Beach, students tried to gain possession of the auditorium for a protest meeting, and when they were denied many left the building. About 200 Hollywood High School students staged a sit-in on a football field in sympathy for the striking teachers. Deputies arrested nine after threats to overturn a newspaper reporter's car. The number of teachers off the job held steady at about 26,000 of the total 60,000, according to an Associated Press survey of the 67 counties. About 500,000 of the state's three million students remained out of school. Schools were shut in nine counties. In 12 other counties some schools were kept open but in many cases only for seniors trying to complete credits for college entrance. The FEAs said most of the schools in 46 other counties were open "in name only" because the substitutes could not do the job.

Garbage and teachers;
public strikes increase

At least 556,155 students of 1,300,000 enrolled in the Florida public school system were out of school Monday as a result of the nation's first state-wide teacher walkout.

For nearly 100 days, Detroit, the nation's fifth largest city, has been experiencing a newspaper blackout.

Tons of garbage accumulated in the streets of New York City when sanitation workers struck illegally for nine days. That one resulted in a blow-up between New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, who threatened to put the city's 10,000 sanitation men under state control, and New York Mayor John V. Lindsay.

More than 11,000 workers were idled Feb. 13 when the United Auto Workers struck two General Motors Corp. plants.

One strike illegal. The legality of another one questionable—Florida teachers resigned to side-step the state law barring strikes by public employees. All temporarily inconvenient, but all hopefully for improvement in the long run.

The process of collective bargaining has added significantly to the status and level-of-being of workers, skilled and unskilled, in far more than one field. It has sought to provide a balance between the working man and his employer.

But lengthy public strikes are becoming increasingly common. There have been dock strikes; airlines have been shut down; and firemen strikes; railroad strikes, subway strikes, steel strikes...

Perhaps required "cooling-off periods", as provided in the Taft-Hartley Act on a national level, would ease the situation in some cases. There is undoubtedly no one-step answer. Collective bargaining cannot be eliminated and written off "in the public interest."

The fact that workers must sometimes turn to illegal actions in the practice of collective bargaining does not reflect a cognizance of present trends and needs. Perhaps legal and social institutions must be revised to reconcile both public interest and employee demands.

State take-overs during strike periods, mobilization of substitute teachers and supervisory personnel, calling in the National Guard or printing strike-time publications are not the answers.

Heaps of garbage, months without newspapers, idle runways, burning houses and the interruption of education for American youth are not progress and hopefully are not signs of the future.

Conflicts of ROTC - -
a channel to solution

Some of the inherent problems of a military program at a university may be alleviated with the recent appointment of the Military Education Advisory Committee. This committee, composed of four civilian faculty members, will review any complaints or problems which arise from the ROTC program at MSU.

The stated purpose of the committee is to become familiar with the history and present programs of military education at MSU, as well as with federal agencies and concerns of the academic community regarding military education. Most importantly the committee is to provide considered opinions and judgments as to how military education at MSU may best serve the university, the state, and the nation.

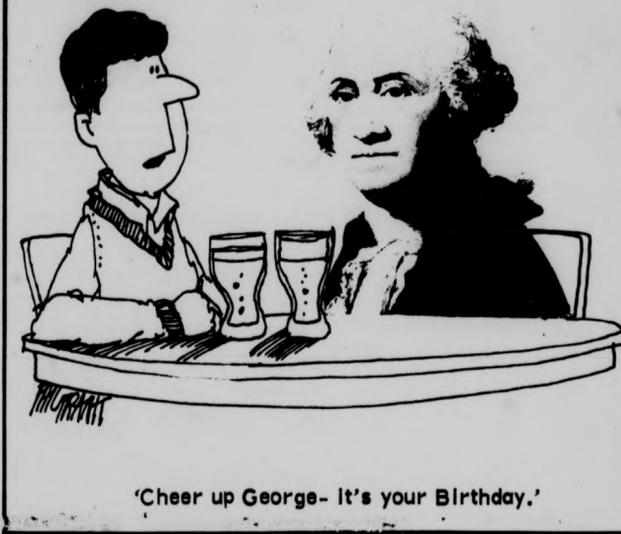

In light of the current criticism of the ROTC program, this last aim is a vital one. Before the committee was established, there could be a considerable amount of shouting, but there was no one to shout at. The faculty group should open channels of communication between those with grievances and the military science department. Both the University and the ROTC program will have a better guideline with which to judge each other, and the aims of both can better be brought into congruence.

Committee members are Frederick Williams, associate professor of history; Richard Featherstone, chairman of the Dept. of Administration and Higher Education; Lawrence

Von Tersch, acting dean of the College of Engineering; and James McKee, professor of sociology. It is a very diversified and capable assemblage. As such the University and the ROTC department can both expect decisions and advice beneficial to each of them and the society they serve.

A military program within a university is bound to lead to conflicting interests. A committee such as the Military Education Advisory Committee, with members the caliber of those now sitting on it, can go a long way toward solving the problems of an ROTC program and making it an acceptable part of the University environment.

The president as a person

President Johnson has been our President for nearly four and a half years. He ascended to office in a time of national grief; he won the Presidency on his own by an overwhelming landslide, built a consensus, pushed more legislation through Congress than any other President in the 20th century.

But in the last two years, the consensus has crumbled. The Vietnam war has gone from bad to worse and the trend continues. The nation's cities have been ravaged by riots and the relationship between whites and Negroes has never been more tense. Johnson critics have doubled and quadrupled both at home and abroad, from the right and the left.

In short, the nation is tired and divided by the war and uneasy about the domestic scene. And Lyndon Johnson is our President. To many, including myself, the thought of Lyndon Johnson in the White House for another four years is not a pleasant one.

But a group of student body presidents and college editors who were in Washington to formulate a ballot for CHOICE '68 saw a side of President Johnson somewhat different from the stereotypic caricature.

In an hour and a half informal session in the White House, the President projected to his small audience in a way that he has never been able to achieve through television or the other media.

He strode easily into the Oval Room where we had been waiting and talking with White House aides. He moved quickly around the room shaking hands with each guest, as waiters circulated with pizza and tacos.

At first glance, the President looked very old, much older than his pictures. He looked tired and haggard. His eyes were bloodshot and almost shut. His skin literally hung from his heavily furrowed face. Later he quipped that the press was now referring to the lines in his face as "crevices."

One's first reaction was, this man most certainly won't seek the Presidency again. But by the time he had finished speaking and answering questions, the verdict was much less certain.

He gave a few prepared comments from a lectern in which he softly criticized the younger generation for not voting in larger numbers (presumably for our benefit).

Speaking in rather quiet and flat tones, he emphasized the extent of present and proposed domestic spending, using spending figures from the Kennedy and Eisenhower Administrations as comparisons. His references to the Kennedy administration, while not openly bitter, were far from kind.

He then moved away from the lectern and sat down, noting that anyone who had to leave could do so, but everyone else was welcome to stay and ask questions.

No one left. This is when Lyndon Johnson the Great Persuader went to work. In about an hour, he answered six questions, ranging from the war in Vietnam to urban unrest.

He talked solemnly about our commitment in Vietnam, stating emphatically that we would "stick it out," but added we "are ready to talk peace tomorrow and will let them write the agenda and name the place."

Grabbing his head with both hands, he said emotionally, "We want to reason with our minds instead of with our teeth like cannibals or animals."

He walked back and forth, gesturing overtly, waving his arms frequently, pounding his fist, raising and lowering his voice to make his point. He spoke of his youth, how he protested certain policies as a college editor, and made analogies with the past. Then he walked slowly toward his questioner, towered over him and looked him straight in the eye and made his final appeal.

It was at this point that one came to realize the powerful persuasiveness of the man.

Surprisingly, the President also displayed a sense of humor, even a slight flair for wit. He admitted there was a credibility gap and joked about his relations with the press. After introducing Lady Bird, he made a subtle comment about her incident with Ertha Kitt. And then as we were leaving, he pulled out some large photographs of his new grandson, Lyn.

"Here's one where he looks like Krushchev," he said.

Reflecting back on the meeting, I am left with a number of impressions. First, that President Johnson is real, a fellow man, something neither he nor the media has made entirely clear in the past. He is deeply committed to his policies no matter how wrong or ill-fated they may be and appears much more sincere on a person-to-person basis than he does when speaking to a group and is able to transcend his Texan folksiness.

And while Lyndon Johnson has brought much to the Presidency, not all of it favorable, the office has also taken a great physical toll from him. For today, or at least that day, he could have been mistaken for a 75-year-old man.

Today, Lyndon Johnson is a troubled man, an unpopular President, and is faced with more burdens than perhaps any President in recent times. And one cannot help but wonder if the Presidency, which has grown so much in size and complexity, can be successfully grasped by any man today, even a master politician and pragmatist like President Johnson.

Wallace's bid no surprise

WASHINGTON—Last week, the near-Wagnerian music of the war all but drowned out the highly important sound of the other shoe dropping. Yet former Alabama Gov. George Wallace's announcement that he will be a third-party candidate, come hell or high water, is sure to prove one of this year's major political events.

One reason this announcement attracted relatively little attention was the fact that everyone expected it. Yet in reality it was one of those events that can never be absolutely counted upon, until it actually happens. Wallace, one may be certain, had to resist formidable pressures not to enter the big race.

Racist candidates like Wallace are generally heavily dependent on support from very rich men on the extreme right-wing fringe of the American political spectrum. This year, however, the ultraconservative fat cats have coalesced around the candidacy of former Vice President Richard M. Nixon and the potential candidacy of Gov. Ronald Reagan of California.

Thus they did not want Wallace in the race as, God knows, Nixon and Reagan did not want him. The point here is that the key to every conservative Republican strategy for winning the Presidency is taking away from Lyndon B. Johnson the 100 or so electoral votes of the Deep South states, where race is the predominant issue.

Wallace spells the all-but certain doom of that strategy. Not only is he far more likely to get those Deep South electoral votes than either Nixon or Reagan, in addition he will cut deeply into the Republican-conservative vote in other Southern states like Texas, this aiding Mr. Johnson to pick up additional electoral votes that he might perhaps have lost.

The thing does not stop there, either. According to the pollsters, the former Alabama governor has been gaining ground lately, rising from 10 to 12 per cent of the nationwide vote in a three-cornered race with Mr. Johnson and Nixon. Above the Mason-Dixon Line, moreover, he now gets 8 per cent of the vote in such a three-cornered race. And of these eight in every 100 for Wallace, five come from the Republican ranks.

Wallace is not mainly aiming for 1968. He is mainly preparing for 1972, in the belief that continuing racial trouble in the cities will by then transform him from a fringe-candidate into a real candidate for the Presidency. California and elsewhere, he has already proved to have a disturbing power to attract prejudiced white voters.

What happened last week when Wallace announced his candidacy was, in fact, nothing less than the launching of an American apartheid party. The more violent black power advocates among the Negro leaders are also demanding something preciously close to apartheid. Wallace looks to this type of black power-shouter to help realize his dreadful dream, by causing more and more trouble in the cities and more and more prejudice among whites. All this is very grim to contemplate, but ugly facts must also be faced.

OUR READERS' MINDS

The campus witch hunt begins

To the Editor:

The University seems to be in the curious position of witnessing a witch hunt of the Military Science Dept. Indeed, there are similarities to the civilian police review boards which are often initiated by alienated political activists.

To avoid the legitimate criticism of "McCarthyism in Reverse," or more currently "Muzzling the Military," I submit that the scope of the board should be expanded to include all curricula and all courses. The activists could have a University-wide name-calling contest. The winner could announce that all 35,000 MSU students participated; he would be The All-Powerful Adjudicator. He alone would possess sole authority to determine which courses were "objective" and "factual". If a member of the faculty, he could single out his colleagues who disagreed with him, burn their publications at a mass meeting, and take away their parking permit, exiling them to lot Y-2. He would be given the plushiest office in Student Services Building, a red phone and two pretty secretaries. ASMSU could levy 25c from all students to make the All-Powerful Adjudicator financially independent and beholden to no one. Prerequisites to candidacy would be Soc. 100, Poly Sci. 100, and Garskof's psych. course.

No candid person would suppose that the Military Science courses stand up in content or scholarly appeal to most advanced undergraduate or graduate courses. The MS courses will depend, like any other course, on the instructor as well as other criteria.

If good teaching were the sole criterion, I fear it would wipe out a sizeable percentage of the faculty. If "truth and objectivity" were the criterion, and God would deign to come down, to us—no, Garskof and Thomas are not acceptable substitutes!—and determine the good from the bad, I fear we'll lose another chunk of the faculty.

Differences in indoctrination between MS courses and other courses are but a matter of degree, with a few exceptions. Anyone who fails to understand this simply hasn't seen the old Honors College file of courses or the unofficial evaluations kept by various groups.

Dogmatism is no monopoly of the conservatives. Some bearded professors—believe it or not—are just as closed-minded as the military they accuse. Take a walk around and visit some classes in almost any field. At most, critics can accuse the military of not having Ph.D.s and beards, but—Hold it, Lothar, I'm coming—some of our civilian faculty fail here also! Yet these accusers do not know the body of military knowledge, however small, being taught. These dogmatists would snub Eric Hoffer!

If we enforce a Let-he-who-is-without-sin-cast-the-first-stone criterion, I suspect we'll have no one left to point the finger. Alternatively, where will the witch hunt end?

Student boards offer social aid

By MARION NOWAK and JENNY POPE
State News Staff Writers
Services offered by a student government, while often limited to sponsoring entertainment and holding referendums, have at many of the nation's larger universities moved closer to a form of student social service.

Many services are geared to entertainment. Most recently a move toward enabling the student to save money and securing the means to express his opinion and attain his rights has manifested itself in national student governments.

"Our business," stated Michael Davis, administrative vice-president of U-M's Undergraduate Student Government (USG) "is to do for students what they can't do individually."

USG attempts to fulfill this function. Currently, for instance, USG is forwarding a rent strike intended to achieve the goal of lowering rent costs, improving apartment service and, perhaps most importantly, insuring that students may sign only eight-month leases on apartments.

The eight-month lease protects the student from having to sublet his apartment in the summer, or else lose four months' rent.

While the strike is now directed against the firm of Apartments, Ltd., several management agencies have already begun to offer only eight-month or a student-chosen alternative of eight- or twelve-month leases, to students.

On the basis of a recent price survey of Ann Arbor laundries, USG now offers U-M students a laundry service at a savings of nine cents per shirt.

USG also sponsors a health insurance program, draft-counseling, and this fall will publish its first course evaluation booklet. The 400-page booklet has cost $12,000 to produce.

Another USG function is legal aid to students who need it. The student pays two dollars for his first 15-minute talk with a lawyer. Any time over this is paid for by USG.

Fall term last year, a USG-sponsored teach-in on drugs was held. This spring, a similar teach-in on functions of the university is proposed.

Currently, the student government at U-M has attempted to get administrative approval for a 25-point student bill of rights. Also, the group is attempting to insure that a student's university records be released only with specific permission from the student.

Pennsylvania State University's student government also sponsors a legal aid service for students. Based on the ethic that, as one student government official stated, "each student has the right to his defense," the service provides legal aid counseling, on student request, in any type of case.

Lawyers are retained at a cost of $250 annually.

Currently the body is fighting a proposed tuition hike of one hundred dollars.

In the past, the reinstatement of a National Defense Student Loan cancelled by the Board of Trustees was largely effected by PSU's student government.

The University of Oregon is similar to ASMSU in its sponsorship of such functions as a minimum-charge printing shop, Sunday movies and student-opinion referendums.

Additionally, Oregon's student government provides a decreased cost insurance program similar to U-M's and PSU's.

The Student Association of the University of South Florida last week passed a 10-point student bill of rights that is reportedly favored by the majority of the student body. While the bill must still be approved by the university's Student Affairs Committee and ultimately by the university's president, one member of the Association estimates that the bill has "a strong chance of passing." Other Florida universities already have established the precedent of student government-sponsored bills of rights, administration-approved and currently in effect.

Other benefits presented by the body include free legal counsel, access to public defenders and a bail-bond service.

As U-M's Davis stated, the student government must work for the individual student's rights; it "must speak for them and it must fight for them."

Physics prof cites increase in possibility of nuclear war

As more nations get closer to becoming nuclear powers, the possibility of nuclear war is increasing, Richard Schlegel, professor of physics, said Tuesday night.

In his speech, "Control of Nuclear Weapons," Schlegel said, "The nuclear weapons situation is escalating. The three major nuclear powers, the United States, Russia and Great Britain, have recently been joined by France and China."

"Any nation with nuclear reactors is a potential nuclear power," he said. "The fact that India, Japan, Canada, Switzerland, West Germany and Israel are all capable of producing nuclear weapons within one year, increases the possibility of irresponsible leadership making irrational decisions involving nuclear weapons, Schlegel said.

Thus the need for a non-proliferation treaty is urgent and important, he continued. So far nuclear arms have been controlled by the Test Ban Treaty of 1963 and the Outer Space Treaty.

The Test Ban Treaty, signed by the United States, Russia and Great Britain, was designed to stop atmospheric testing and thus lower the level of radiation in the atmosphere.

Schlegel said this treaty is deficient because France and China are not included in the agreement.

"Also the treaty has not slowed down the arms race nor has it stopped development of new weapons," Schlegel added.

CONTINUES MSU PROBE

Dewey questions athletes

JOHN DEWEY

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer
John Dewey, assistant Big Ten commissioner and the conference's chief investigator, has completed the first phase of his probe of the Michigan Daily's accusations of illegal aid to MSU athletes.

Dewey arrived at MSU late Tuesday afternoon and began his investigation by interviewing several MSU athletes, mostly football players. He has completed questioning and will check athletic department records today.

Dewey was the central figure in the Big Ten's investigation of Illinois last year and has been looking into the Daily's charges against the University of Michigan athletic department for the past week and a half.

erick) Williams, Burt Smith and I talked to six or seven athletes Tuesday," Dewey said Wednesday. "We expect to finish our interviews this afternoon and we'll have talked to about 30 or 35 athletes by the time we're finished interviewing."

Fuzak is the chairman of MSU's Athletic Council and the representative to the Big Ten. Williams is a history professor and vice chairman of the Athletic Council. Smith is MSU's assistant athletic director.

Dewey said he had talked mostly with football players but had also questioned players who competed in more than one varsity sport at MSU.

Dewey said he posed two basic questions in the interviews. They were: "Were you offered anything over and above room and board, tuition, fees and books to attend a Big 10 school?" and "Have you received anything over and above room and board, tuition fees and books?"

Dewey said he elaborated on the questions by listing possible illegal offers or concessions. Each interview took approximately a half-hour.

Dewey would not comment on the results of the interviews, but said that the results will be included in a report he will present to the board of Big Ten athletic directors upon completion of his investigations here and at the U-M.

The next scheduled meeting of the Big Ten Athletic Directors is March 6, 7 and 8, but Dewey said he would not have his report prepared by then.

"I've got a lot to do at Michigan yet. The investigation is not even half way through, but I don't think it will take over a month to complete," Dewey said.

Dewey plans to end his present stay here either tonight or Friday. He said there will be no other conference official included in the investigation, but did not know if Commissioner Bill Reed would make a trip to MSU to review the charges.

Crew of little divers 'best ever for MSU'

By GARY WALKOWICZ
State News Sports Writer
They average only 5-9 in height but they're "big men" as far as the MSU swim coaches are concerned.

Head Coach Charles McCaffree and Diving Coach John Narcy agree this year's crew of diminutive divers, Jim Henderson (5-9), Duane Green (5-4), and Doug Todd (6-0), are the best they've ever had at MSU.

And that goes back 57 years when McCaffree first became associated with MSU swimming.

The trio has held their own in dual meet competition against Big Ten opponents considered to have some of the top divers in the nation.

"The guys have been doing a real good job so far this year," said Narcy. "We've only had one bad meet, the one against Michigan. Their last performance in the meets with Wisconsin and Minnesota were their best of the season."

The Spartans have taken both diving events in seven of the 11 dual meets this year. MSU has lost both events just twice, to Indiana and Michigan.

Henderson has been leading the Spartan crew with 11 first place finishes. The Lansing sophomore has beaten two of the league's best divers, Chuck Knorr of Ohio State and Julian Krug of Wisconsin, in one-meter contests.

"Henderson has the potential to go right to the top," said Narcy. "He has the necessary abilities."

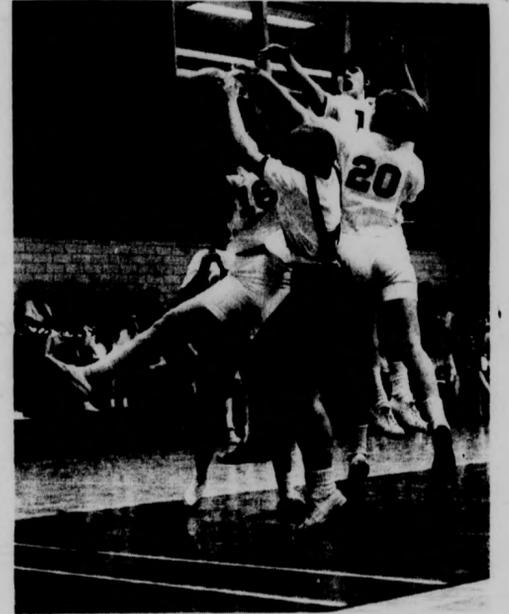

Green has garnered three first place finishes so far. He scored in last year's NCAA meet by placing 10th in the one-meter. He finished 20th in the three-meter. He was named All-American for his work in the one-meter.

Narcy said that Green's biggest assets are his strength and his willingness to work hard.

Todd, the third member of the group, missed several weeks of competition earlier in the year because of a ruptured eardrum suffered in practice. He has gained one first place in dual meet competition.

At last season's NCAA meet Todd was 26th in the one-meter and 15th in the three-meter.

"I think that we can hold our own with anyone in the upcoming Big Ten and NCAA championships," Narcy said. "The competition will be extremely close."

Undefeated Tartars test fencers tonight

By GREG LORIA
State News Sports Writer
The Spartan fencers will face perhaps their stiffest test of the season tonight, meeting Wayne State, a favorite for the NCAA championship.

Undefeated with a 11-0 mark, the Tartars are led by two All-Americans, Don Parshall at foil and Andy Haliw in sabre.

MSU will be attempting to raise its current 5-5 mark above the .500 level. Coach Charlie Schmitter's crew will have three remaining matches between the Big Ten meet following the MSU encounter.

Tartar Coach Istvan Danosi has turned out an All-American every year except two in his ten year tenure at Wayne State.

Parshall, who has 26-1 slate, will go against the Spartans sophomore sensation Glen Williams, who has a fine 18-8 record. Parshall's ability was shown a few weeks ago when he won five of five matches, while limping on a badly sprained ankle.

MSU will also send junior Don Satchell in the foil competition. Satchell, who has a 15-15 mark, will duel WSU's Paul Stuart, who has amassed a 21-7 record.

Spartan captain Charlie Baer, also a favorite for All-American honors, will face Haliw. Baer, the backbone of the Spartan squad with a 25-4 slate, will be the underdog to Haliw, who stands at 28-2.

MSU's Dean Daggett will also have his hands full with WSU's Ray Fuel, who sports a 23-8 won-lost record.

The Spartans' Bill Kerner, the leading epee man, will probably go against the Tartar's Louis Fox, who possesses a 15-10 mark.

Wayne State's victims this year include Air Force, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois.

MSU has peewees on ice

By TOM BROWN
State News Sports Writer

Call them the peewee line, the pony line or the rookie line, but no matter what you call them, Pat Russo, Bob Pattullo and Chuck Phillips may be the most prolific little men in Spartan athletics since the 1953 Spartan pony backfield.

The two sophomores and the junior bombarded Colorado College's Don Gale, a goaltender that Spartan Coach Amo Bessone calls "one of the best in the league."

Making the line work in the middle is 160-pound Pat Russo.

Bessone calls Russo a slick playmaker who figures strongly in future Spartan title bids.

"Russo was our outstanding freshman," Bessone said, "but he came back too heavy this year. He should be right up there with Kenny Anstey as our top center next year."

If Bessone knew what to expect from the 5-7 sophomore from Sault St. Marie, the other sophomore on the line came as a complete surprise.

"Bob Pattullo is a fellow we hadn't counted on at the beginning of the year," Bessone said of the 5-10 product of the Dearborn Recreational League.

"I knew the coach wasn't really counting on me," Pattullo said. "It was getting me down. I wasn't really playing a lot. I wasn't even dressing for the games."

That all changed in Colorado Springs when the 156-pound Pattullo scored two goals and added two assists.

"When the team has had an eight-game losing streak, and you finally get a chance to make a contribution to the team, it feels real good. I'm on the top of the world right now," Pattullo added.

Phillips, at 21 and a junior, is the old man of the line. At 146-pounds, however, the Copper Cliff, Ont. native is the baby of the hockey team.

"We're the smallest men on the team, but if you don't go looking for trouble, it's all right," Phillips said. "You just have to stay away from the big guys."

A capable performer early in the season, Phillips had drawn Bessone's ire recently.

Colorado changed that, too. "It was working well," Phillips said of the pony line. "Bob was working hard in the corners, digging the puck out to Pat who was in front of the net. I think that we got more shots on goal than any other line last weekend."

Bessone feels that the rookie line's secret is position. "I tell these fellows that if they stay where they belong, the puck will come to them and they'll get the shots," Bessone said.

Pattullo plays position out of a lack of experience. "I am not too experienced," Pattullo admitted. "Whenever the coach says, it's just something that I've got to do. If he tells me to go play somewhere, then that's where I play. I respect his knowledge of the game."

Big 10 champion Iowa better

By DON DAHLSTROM

It doesn't seem possible that a gymnastics team which won the Big Ten championship and finished third in the NCAA's in 1967, would be better in 1968. However, that is the story of MSU's Saturday opponent -- the Iowa Hawkeyes.

The Spartans own a 5-1 conference record compared to the Hawkeyes' perfect 6-0 mark. A win for MSU would throw the dual-meet portion of the season into a tie. The championship would then be decided at the conference meet to be held here, March 1 and 2.

Iowa is rated the top team in the country by most experts with a perfect 12-0 overall record. Among its victims is Southern Illinois, the defending national champion. The Hawkeyes won, 188.55-183.25, to snap the Salukis' dual meet winning streak at 68, extending over a period of almost seven years.

Besides defeating all the conference schools, Iowa also has picked up victories over Nebraska, Western Illinois, Ball State, Oklahoma, and Iowa State. The Hawks have scored over 188 points in eight of their meets including highs of 189.85 against Ohio State and 189.95 against Michigan. The latter is the highest score recorded in the nation this season and an all-time Iowa record.

No one has come closer to them than 3.1 points so far.

Iowa has eight of 12 lettermen back from last year's squad. Coach Sam Bailie has called his sophomores "the finest group in the country."

Leading the team this year are co-captains Neil Schmitt and Bob Dickson who both compete all-around.

Two years ago as a sophomore, Schmitt finished third in all-around in the Big Ten with 50.9 points and also third in both floor exercise and still rings. Dickson climaxed his sophomore year in 1967 with a second place finish behind MSU Captain Dave Thor in all-around with 51.325. He was third in parallel bars also.

Lazar (parallel bars), Keith McCanless (side horse), Paul Orni (floor exercise and rings), and Marc Slotten (side horse), Hatch and McCanless are juniors.

McCanless is defending conference and national champion on horse. He is rated first in the event with a 9.49 average. Slotten is second with 9.46.

Hatch tied Spartan Don Hatch for the Big Ten title in rings last season and is rated first this year with a 9.44 average.

Their sophomores include Jerry Bonney (floor exercise, trampoline, and vault), Jim Morlan (trampoline), Rich Scorza (vault, parallel bars, and high bar), and Phil Farnum (high bar).

Students dial 'O' for everything

By IRA SAPERSTEIN

It's Friday night, the candles are lit, your roommates have been lured out of the apartment, and your date is due in an hour, expecting a quiet dinner for two.

The wine is chilling, and everything is ready—except the cold lonely-looking chicken thawing in soggy cardboard.

What can a guy do when there is no one to turn to? In desperation he dials campus information, hoping to become a gourmet chef in one easy lesson.

Maureen Kavanaugh Detroit, junior, recalls this as her most unusual experience while working as an MSU operator.

"Friday nights always produce the funniest requests for information," Maureen said. "Guys will call asking where mixers, girls, parties, girls, movies or girls are," she said.

"During finals week I get a lot of requests for word spellings and final exam room numbers," she said. "Once in a while I recognize a friend's voice, who is always surprised when I say 'hello,'" she said.

Maureen is one of 36 operators who are often called to provide information far beyond that of student or faculty phone numbers.

The operators are under the supervision of Mrs. Eva Beckley, who came to MSU 15 years ago from Michigan Bell Telephone Co.

"We try to help people in every way we can," she said. "This requires keeping abreast of campus and local events," she said.

The operators handle more than 3,000 calls each day. Many of them are unusual requests. Here are a few from a list compiled by the operators.

"Could you tell me if I could take my guests to the Union with shorts?"

"This is Story Olds. Please can you help me. One of our customers just gave us 100 baby chicks. Who can we give them to?"

"Can you tell me what building I'm in? I'm from out of town."

"Why are all the fish dying in the Red Cedar?"

"I don't want a number, but I'm sure you can help me. How much salad should I have and how much would the cost be for 35 people?"

"Please, can you help me find a girl from Dayton. I don't know her name."

"Can you tell me what to do with a dead elephant. I just shot one."

"Do you know why fir trees cry? I just stood under one and got soaked."

"Give me your Science Building. You know, that gimmick you've got on campus."

"I want a secretary in teacher education. Her last name reminds me of a watch."

"Give me the dean. Any dean. It's about a quarter horse, a gift I'm going to give to the University."

Give me a girl named Janette in marketing. She's tall, blond and robust."

"Would you tell me what size sheets they use at married housing."

"Would you give me the number of a girl going to Wayne State. Her name is Marie."

"How do you cook a pig outdoors? Barbecued, of course."

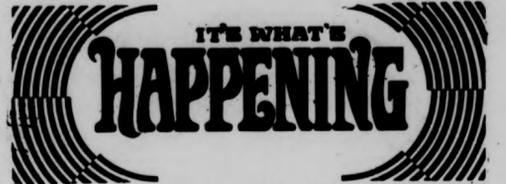

"Give me the new sky building." This person wanted the Planetarium.

"Give me Case Hall." "Which side, north or south?" "No. Inside."

"Call my mother. She works in the Union. She cleans toilets."

"I'm an area junior high school teacher. I've got to know what to tell my students about sex. They are asking me all kinds of questions. I don't know how, I just don't know. Can you help me?"

The operators don't just thumb through phone books all day. They have to know everything from A to Z.

Fee Hall initiates theater company

From Fee Hall to the Auditorium, two different groups with diverging motivations are mobilizing to broaden the scope of the theater available to those at Michigan State.

Ves Spindler, Detroit sophomore and spokesman for the vanguard of residence hall drama, cites dissatisfaction with undergraduate opportunities in existing University performing arts programs as a primary influence in the initiation of a theater project in Fee Hall.

The Hall government has advanced $600 dollars for the production of "The Fantasticks" to be staged this weekend and next in the McDonel Kiva with the stipulation that if $400 worth of tickets are sold, plans may proceed for a spring term rendition of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf."

"The PAC is a graduate group," said Spindler, "and there are very few openings for undergraduates in their plays." The Fee shows, he hopes, will offset this situation.

He has expressed dissatisfaction with the PAC because they have refused to rent props to the Fee company and would not permit use of University facilities in the Auditorium. This, Spindler believes, constitutes an effort on the part of the PAC to stifle outside productions on campus.

Frank Rutledge, head of the Performing Arts Company (PAC) and director of Theta Alpha Phi's (national theater honorary) production of "Miss Julie" which will also be staged this weekend, explains that the situation is actually to the contrary.

"We're happy to see this kind of things," Rutledge said. "It's been far too long in coming."

"If we were to become a supply source for these groups, though, from a pragmatic point of view they would no longer be independent of the establishment theater."

Pointing out that PAC currently has two plays on tour, an opera coming up this week and "The Would-be Gentleman" in preparation, Rutledge noted that their stock rooms are almost bare.

In addition, as a University unit, the speech department cannot accept money for the rental of materials.

Rutledge also elucidated the blacklisting system, another PAC casting practice which Spindler objected to.

to the rule. These include personal reasons and offers of a better part in some other production. Each student who additions is given a tryout card on which he may stipulate roles and types of roles which he is not interested in playing; these requests are honored.

Blacklisting, then, is merely a matter of expedience for the director and casting personnel.

Speaking about Strindberg's "Miss Julie" and the Theta Alpha Phi effort to bring "intimate theater" to MSU, Rutledge expressed his belief that the play's author was the best of those influencing the modern theater. "Miss Julie" is his selection for the finest of the playwright's studies of feminine insanity. Strindberg hated women.

A few alterations have been made in the script, cutting out most of the references to Miss Julie's father which Rutledge thinks are superfluous. He has also modernized the servant who seduces her.

"Miss Julie" performances are at 4 p.m. Friday and Sunday and at 8 p.m. this Saturday.

Curtain time for "The Fantasticks" is 8:30 p.m. Feb. 23 and 24 and March 1 and 2.

Movie Messages
Ossie Davis who plays a runaway Negro slave in the upcoming Burt Lancaster picture, "The Scalphunters" claims that his part is "worth one Roy Wilkins and six Martin Luther Kings, valuable as they are. I think this picture is going to make a strong impact on the total racial situation because of its comedy."

gages Lancaster in what United Artists describes as the "dirtiest fight in movie history... and after the brawl is over they are so covered with black mud that their complexions are indistinguishable—a fact that makes its own point."
Costarred with Lancaster and Davis in the pre-Civil War western are Telly Savalas as a sadistic hunter who scalps Indians for the territorial bounty and Shelly Winters as his traveling companion.

Renegades

Ossie Davis and Burt Lancaster begin covering themselves with mud in this fight scene from the upcoming United Artists release, "The Scalphunters."

New St. Louis archbishop to continue civil rights work

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) -- The new archbishop of St. Louis hopes to carry on the work of his predecessor in civil rights.

That was Bishop John J. Carberry's first reaction after his appointment Wednesday by Pope Paul IV to succeed the late Joseph Cardinal Ritter.

He called Ritter a "great champion of civil rights" and said "I pray to follow in his great work in this."

Expressing awe at the tremendous responsibilities of his new assignment, Carberry said "surely there will be various projects in the field of ecumenism."

The 63-year-old bishop of the Columbus Diocese received an ecumenical first in Ohio religious circles last month. The Ohio Pastors Convocation, sponsored by the Ohio Council of Churches, awarded him a life membership, its highest recognition. He was the first Roman Catholic to receive the honor in the 49-year history of the convocation.

Carberry, Columbus chairman of the Bishops' Commission on Ecumenical Affairs, termed the award symbolic of a mutual recognition among churches.

There are differences, he said, "which some day, with the help of God, we'll understand and help make disappear."

The Brooklyn-born bishop is the seventh to head the Columbus Diocese which has 182,000 members in 110 parishes.

Carberry said he was called to Washington Feb. 14 by Archbishop Luigi Raimondi, Apostolic delegate to the United States, and asked if he would accept the appointment. Cardinal Ritter died June 11, 1967.

Carberry received formal word of his appointment Monday. He expects to be installed as archbishop March 25, three years to the day after his installation as Bishop of Columbus.

ASMSU EVALUATION

Students rate profs, courses

ASMSU course evaluations began this week and will continue through March 8, according to Leigh Burstein, committee chairman. Course evaluations are now being conducted in an effort to obtain student opinions and rating of professors in different courses, Burstein said. This term a wide variety of basics and electives as well as several upper-level courses are being surveyed, he said. Questionnaires will be distributed to history 121 and 122; math III and 425; Management 409, physiology 238 and 288, psychology 151 and 225 and philosophy 137. Also under evaluation are sociology 241, accounting 201 and 202, political science 170, 200 and 201, advertising 305 and communications 100. Other courses to be evaluated are computer science 110, biological science 211 and 212.

Evaluation of the questionnaires will be done sometime before fall term. It is the committee's hope to distribute a booklet containing the data from the questionnaires. These will be distributed to freshman at orientation and also at fall registration. Burstein said that there would be a charge for the initial book, but supplements would be issued as different courses were evaluated and the information tabulated. Questionnaires from last term are still being processed. Completion of these is expected in mid-March. Professors were given a chance to comment on the committee's work fall term. Little reply was received, according to Cabinet President, Terry Hassold.

Foreign newsman to discuss Mao

A Chinese native who is foreign correspondent for the Toronto Star will discuss "Mao's China" at 8:15 p.m. Friday in Fairchild Theater. Mark Gayn, one of the few Western newsmen to interview Mao Tse-tung, Premier Chou En-lai and Red Chinese president Liu Shao-chi, will replace Russian poet Andrei Voznesensky in the Lecture-Concert Series. Voznesensky was scheduled to speak Thursday, but the Russian government would not allow him to fulfill his U.S. lecture engagements.

Union leaders plan LBJ aid

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) - AFL-CIO leaders planned Wednesday to raise a political war chest of $2 million or more to help re-elect President Johnson and labor friends in Congress. George Meany, president of the 14-million member labor federation, told a meeting of AFL-CIO political strategists that the outcome of the November presidential election is crucial to organized labor.

Germany program extends deadline

The deadline for applications for the Junior Year in Freiburg program has been extended to March 8. William N. Hughes, chairman of the German and Russian department said that the extension was due to the late application deadline of Feb. 15 and the hesitation on the part of interested students over the proposed federal travel tax.

Germany program extends deadline

The labor political strategists also speculated that voluntary collections from union members are expected to climb well above the $1 million 1967 level in this election year. They also authorized an extra "voluntary assessment" of 5 cents for each of the 14-million workers in AFL-CIO unions. The expected $700,000 this will raise will go for voter registration and get-out-the-vote drives on election day.

Germany program extends deadline

Students interested in the Junior Year in Freiburg can obtain applications and further information from Hughes in 717 Wells Hall or telephone 353-8477.

allow the Library to employ four people on the work-study program and one full-time staff member for the later hours.

"Something has got to be done to provide better study facilities at a later hour," Dzodin said.

"If one floor could be open until 1 a.m. it would be good for the student body," he added. The motion was referred to the Policy Committee for further study.

"If we give them the money and the Library director refuses, we will know he has ulterior motives and that he is not really sincere," Dzodin said.

The Board appropriated $100 to the Ski Club to allow them to compete in a ski tournament at Sault Saint Marie this weekend.

In the wake of alleged arbitrary policy changes made by the administration last week, the Board passed a resolution mandating Chairman Greg Hopkins to contact Milton B. Dickerson, vice president for student affairs, to indicate the Board's feelings on the matter.

Last week, the Board charged that the University business office had made a change in policy governing student organizations which, according to the Academic Freedom Report, is illegal.

The resolution stated that students shouldn't be affected by arbitrary decisions or policy clarifications and that, in the future, students should be included in making policy clarifications.

The Board also approved the revised election regulations for 1968.

Grading

"The system would be good for courses based on general experiences, for example, music appreciation," he said. "These types of courses could use an absence of evaluative grades."

Ebel also did not think the Cr-N system would create much change in a student's willingness to take courses outside his major.

"I think if a survey were taken asking students the question 'What courses did you want to take and didn't take because it was outside your major and you feared grade competition?' most students would answer 'none.'"

In most courses, prerequisites present more of a deterrent to students "broadening out" than fear of low grades, he said.

Ebel sees the establishment of a ten-grade "refinement" system as a definite improvement.

"If these types of grades were given properly, there would be no difference for working for maximum achievement than working for the highest grade," Ebel said.

He disapproves of complete elimination of grades and said it would have a "devastating effect on students."

"Besides, people who work hard to achieve something want to know what they've learned. They don't trust their own perceptions," he said.

Ebel emphasized that low grades are not intended to be any type of punishment.

"We're just saying to a student, 'This didn't come off very well and why don't you try it again?'"

Pearson

The prime minister had earlier described the 84-82 vote against the Liberal party tax measure as an accident because 46 of its legislators were absent for the balloting.

The Conservatives, backed by Canada's third largest party, the New Democrats, demanded the Liberals quit and hold a general election. "If the government had any principle at all," Michael Starr, a Conservative floor leader said, "it would resign. This is unheard of. The government just can't keep reversing votes just to suit itself."

The opposition also threatened to boycott all Parliament committees until the Liberals step down.

Pearson has maintained that if all legislative defeats suffered by minority governments like his own were regarded tests of confidence, the nation would be subjected to continuous elections. Since the Liberals first took power in 1965, they have gone to the polls three times.
