

Editors feel LBJ image hinges on Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP)—Many newspaper editors think history will judge Lyndon B. Johnson as a good president and, if he succeeds in settling the Vietnam war, perhaps even a great one.

These editors say Johnson's place in history will hinge largely on what happens in the coming final months of his administration.

The opinions were expressed in a random poll of 60 editors at the American Society of Newspaper Editors' 1968 convention, which opened Wednesday.

"Inevitably he'll be a good president," said Frank Angelo, managing editor of the Detroit Free Press. "The measure of greatness will be the perspective of history on Vietnam."

"If he settled the Vietnam war, it will judge him extremely well. If not, mediocre," said J. Edward Murray, managing editor of the Arizona Republic.

Several editors compared Johnson to President Harry S. Truman, who they said has grown in historical esteem in the years since he also announced he would not seek another term in a period of unpopularity.

One-third of the editors asked to estimate how history would rate the self-proclaimed lame duck President said it is too early to tell, particularly while Johnson is still proving for peace in Vietnam.

Of the 40 who expressed opinions, 24 predicted history would look quite favorably upon Johnson. Eleven foresaw mixed or average ratings. Five listed the President as below average.

"I think he's been a good president," said Cy King, executive editor of the Buffalo Courier-Express. "I think he's had a rather incredible string of untoward events, including the Vietnam war which he inherited."

"In the domestic field he's done many things that will become part of our permanent social setup," said Vermont Royster, editor of the Wall Street Journal. "Only history will prove whether he's been right in Vietnam, but he's been resolute, and I think that required courage on his part."

"His defense of our commitments in Vietnam, although politically unpopular, is really in the tradition of strong presidents," said Sylvan H. Meyer, editor of the Gainesville, Fla., Times.

"I think he'll probably be rated as a great man," said Charles H. Hamilton, managing editor of the Richmond, Va., News Leader.

Bower Hawthorne, executive editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, said history's verdict will depend on Vietnam, the soundness of the dollar and civil rights developments this year.

William B. Smart, editor of the editorial page of Salt Lake City's Deseret News, said history will find Johnson a poor president because of "lack of control of domestic economy, and obvious failures in foreign policy."

Robert J. Leoney, executive editor of the New Haven Register, said, "I think he'll turn out to be a middle-ground president who had integrity enough to step back when circumstances closed in on him."

"I believe he'll rate above average," said Leroy A. Simms, editor and publisher of the Huntsville, Ala., Times. He added: "Of course, the average is not very good."

In a similar sampling of 80 editors, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey was stamped as a more than 2-to-1 favorite to defeat Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Humphrey outdrew Kennedy 46 to 20, Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., winner of primaries in New Hampshire and Wisconsin, did not receive a single vote in the poll, but Johnson was named as the probable Democratic nominee by four editors despite his disavowal. Ten editors were undecided.

Richard M. Nixon was a clearcut Republican choice as the likely nominee by a 62-14 count over New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, California Gov. Ronald Reagan was mentioned by two editors.

N. Vietnam rejects U.S. sites; asks bomb halt, withdrawal

TOKYO (AP) — North Vietnam, its tone seeming to harden, rejected Wednesday U.S. proposals for preliminary talks by the United States for preliminary talks on the Vietnam war.

A Hanoi broadcast once again claimed that world opinion demanded the Americans stop creating "difficulties" in the selection of a meeting place. It coupled this statement with a reassertion of its hard-line stand, that if the United States really wanted peace, it should immediately halt all air raids over North Vietnam, withdraw troops from South Vietnam and "let the Vietnamese people settle their own affairs."

The broadcast coincided with disclosure in Tokyo that Japan had informally asked the Soviet Union to help arrive at an early decision on selection of a site for the talks. The request was made by Foreign Minister Takeo Miki at a meeting on another subject with Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky. The Soviet envoy was reported replying noncommittally that the Soviet Union also was "looking forward to early peace" in Vietnam.

The United States has proposed Vietnamese sites, Geneva, Switzerland, New Delhi, India, Jakarta, Indonesia or Rangoon. North Vietnam has proposed Phnom Penh, Cambodia and Warsaw, Poland. The Americans have no diplomatic relations with Cambodia, and reject Poland because it is a Communist-ruled nation and thus could not be considered neutral.

At the United Nations in New York, a U.N. spokesman said Secretary-General U Thant and U.N. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg had discussed on Tuesday several possible sites "likely to be acceptable to both Washington and Hanoi," and that Thant was in touch with Hanoi on this matter. The spokesman declined to name the prospective sites but pointed out that Paris was among the places Thant had suggested to a Hanoi representative in France.

Hanoi's latest broadcast accused President Johnson of distorting facts by saying Monday in Honolulu that Washington had not received an official reply to site proposals from the Americans. Hanoi said a North Vietnamese statement broadcast Saturday was an official Foreign Ministry reply.

Nhan Dan, the official North Vietnamese Communist newspaper, claimed that arguments of the United States against Phnom Penh as a site were "utterly untenable," since the United States had sent a representative there to talk to the Cambodians and had met with no communications difficulties.

The United States now says it wants the contacts to be held in a country where it has diplomatic representation," it added. "Well, why did it reject Warsaw as the site? Everybody knows the United States has adequate communication facilities, and the Polish government has shown its willingness to create conditions for the contacts."

In South Vietnam, the Saigon government's concern about what might come from U.S.-North Vietnamese contacts was evident in Premier Loc's Cam Ranh Bay address in which he said Saigon would have nothing to do with a coalition government or with recognition of the liberation front "as a separate element from the North Vietnamese Communists, whose disguised tool it actually is."

These remarks were directed at several core U.S., South Korean, Philippine and South Vietnamese officials on hand for a bridge dedication. Workers of those four nations, allied in the Vietnam war, built the bridge.

Premier Loc said his government welcomed all efforts to work out a "genuine peace in liberty, freedom and territorial integrity."

McCarthy calls for replacement of Rusk

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy said Wednesday night Dean Rusk should be replaced by a new secretary of state to give evidence of administration "willingness to change its course" in the Vietnam war.

He said that it would be an encouraging sign that the White House is prepared for "a process of joint conciliation" with the Communists to end the fighting.

The Minnesota senator roamed Pittsburgh from the gates of a steel plant to the office of Mayor Joseph M. Barr in a day of campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination.

McCarthy said he wants to face Sen.

Robert F. Kennedy of New York in a man-to-man, televised debate before the Indiana presidential primary May 7.

He suggested a format similar to the presidential campaign debates between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon eight years ago.

McCarthy said he already has received and accepted an invitation from the American Broadcasting Co. for a joint appearance with Kennedy. He said he hopes Kennedy will accept, too.

He said debates would be valuable to help voters choose between two candidates with similar positions on most issues.

ABC said in New York it hadn't heard from Kennedy. The network said no date has been set, but such a debate would probably be carried sometime between the June 11 Illinois primary and the Democratic convention Aug. 26.

Kennedy said in Eugene, Ore., "I have said I will be glad to meet all the candidates and debate them, but I would like it to involve all the candidates."

McCarthy said the dispatch of 13,500 new troops to Vietnam, the callup of 25,000 reservists and the heavy air raids waged on the Communist north all "must leave the impression that our initiatives are not serious and that our actions belie our words."

FBI charges conspiracy in King case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fugitive warrant charging an Eric Starvo Galt with conspiracy in the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was issued Wednesday by the FBI.

In the first official mention of a conspiracy in connection with the April 4 assassination of Dr. King in Memphis, the FBI said the alleged plot involved also a man Galt described as his brother.

And the FBI issued a photograph which it identified as being one of Galt, and John Willard.

The FBI said a warrant was issued in Birmingham, Ala., on the basis of an FBI complaint which charged that Galt "and an individual whom he alleged to be his brother, entered into a conspiracy" which began around March 29 at Birmingham and ended about April 5 to "injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate Martin Luther King Jr."

Galt was charged with conspiring to violate King's civil rights.

An FBI statement said Galt has given his date of birth as July 20, 1931, has brown hair, wears his hair in a brush cut, reportedly has blue eyes, a straight narrow nose, is between 5-foot-8 and 5-foot-11 and weighs between 160 and 175 pounds.

The FBI said "the fugitive is said to have a nervous habit of occasionally pulling at an ear lobe with his left hand. His left ear protrudes farther from his head than his right ear." The FBI statement said that Galt, on or about March 30, bought a rifle at Birmingham. The bureau did not say specifically that this was the rifle that killed King.

Society's optimistic dream may bring universal justice

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

The great American 19th century myths are in a crisis, but they have some validity that may yet bring about a universal justice. Alfred Kelly, chairman of Wayne State University's History Dept., said Wednesday at Fairchild Theater.

These myths created the optimistic American dream, he said. "Society had a dream of social justice that rested on ideas of intrinsic human mobility," he said. It was a dream that awarded status because of virtue and merit rather than position or privilege, he said.

Kelly said that the society believed that the dynamism of the American social order could eventually achieve justice. For example, he said, "If I can't go to college, I can dream that my son can."

The American society in the 19th century did not see any irresolvable conflicts in society. They believed in a harmony of interests, he said.

American society looked at their problems as mathematical challenges; it still does. This is what I call the liberal mentality," Kelly noted.

"Since the Revolution, Americans have held these notions of rational problems solving, of dynamism and of a harmony of interests—and they have been very lucky," he said.

"The tragedy of the last 15 years is that the concept of national interests being the same as world interests has broken down hopelessly, Kelly said.

The collapse of this ethic is also evidenced in the Negro revolution, he commented. The Negro people feel alienated from the traditional myths, he said, and will become increasingly so. The Negro revolution itself is a shattering blow to the American myth of justice, Kelly said.

"The optimism of the United States, however, is not damaged beyond repair and we cannot treat it so," he said. America has the dynamism to re-establish the concepts to a new level of justice, Kelly said.

"But I see in the process of society, a technique of problem solving in the development of a concept that power relationships are the only real things and power shifts must be brought about by direct confrontation," Kelly said.

He said, "The continuity of constitutionalism can formulate a new justice and a new myth universal in character."

100 bogus ballots cast in ASMSU election

By MITCH MILLER
State News Staff Writer

At least 100 bogus votes were cast in last week's ASMSU election, which were not noted or rejected by election officials.

The student who cast the votes told the State News that "anyone who knew how the elections were run could have swung the election anyway he wanted. For all I know, that's what happened."

The votes were sorted, placed with all the other ballots, then computer-processed. They did not affect the final outcome of any contests.

ASMSU officials refused to comment on this Wednesday, but said they would make a statement this afternoon.

The student said that elections commission personnel discussed with him the "security" arrangements for making sure the elections were honest, invited him to see if he could "break" the security, and then supplied him with information which was helpful, although he believes not necessary, for successfully entering the illegal votes.

The project began Thursday morning when he obtained entry to the Student Services Bldg. at 3 a.m. by calling WMSN, asking them to open a door, then going upstairs to ASMSU's offices and into the unlocked Spartan Room, where the ballot boxes were kept.

A ballot box was obtained from a stack of unused ones there. The next morning, the perpetrator of the hoax went to a residence hall polling place, voted, and then palmed several sign-up sheets.

He then had to get the ballots, and in order to do this he made up several documents necessary to circumvent the election commission's "security."

Noticing that the ballots were to be scored by computer, he reasoned that other computerized material might be used. "I went over to the Computer Center, selected some attractively colored white and purple cards, and typed out ASMSU ELECTION RETURN PASS on them."

"Then I took a sheet of notebook paper, wrote 'ASMSU Election Pass Control Sheet' on it, then added a couple of polls, names, and students numbers, and then went over to Bessey."

At Bessey Hall, he told the person at the polling place, "Al (Allan Huss, Elections Chairman of ASMSU) sent me to give you this card so you can return your ballot box."

TV to launch regular study of Negro life

NEW YORK (AP)—National Education Television (NET) said Tuesday that it will launch an experimental black magazine of the air in mid-June to concentrate on news and cultural developments in the American Negro community.

The hour-long program will be broadcast once a month on Monday nights over NET's 140 affiliated stations, said William H. Kolin, NET vice president for programming.

"The program will provide Negroes and whites with a continuing view of what is going on in black America, from politics to business and from education to the arts," Kolin said. He said it would be the first network program of its kind in the United States.

Kolin said the program is in line with recommendations of the President's Commission on Civil Disorders.

ASMSU MARATHON Cabinet president picked by board

By DAN BRANDON
State News Staff Writer
The ASMSU student board deliberated for nearly 12 hours Wednesday before electing Greg Owen, East Lansing senior, to the post of cabinet president.

Owen was chosen on the fifth ballot at 7:15 a.m. by a vote of 12-0. There was one abstention.

When the meeting began Tuesday evening, there were six candidates. On the first ballot, Owen had eight votes to six for Allen Mintzer, previously a candidate for senior member-at-large.

After several hours in closed session, Owen was unable to gain the nine votes which he needed.

At 5 a.m., Leigh Burstein, director of course evaluations, entered the race. Burstein received eight votes, but was unable to get the required two-thirds majority.

Finally, Burstein and Mintzer dropped out of the race and Owen was elected.

Owen's experience dates back six years to the days of the All-University Student Government (AUSG).

He has held posts on the elections commission and the evaluation committee which wrote the current ASMSU constitution. He was also director of student legal aid and is currently a member of the Student Services Building.

Owen said that it is highly important to keep the cabinet efficient and to continue to provide good services to the students. The cabinet is the administrative body through which all the ASMSU services are controlled.

Owen was questioned by the board about possible problems resulting from the age difference between him and the rest of the board, Owen is 23.

"I don't think it will be a problem. In absolute figures, there is a difference, but I have always kept in touch with the University community," Owen said.

When asked about the need for a tax increase, Owen said that he would not ask for one now because the students wouldn't approve it. "They don't see the services which are available to them," Owen said. "Until we get things going and can show them some set projects and goals, we will never get a tax increase."

Owen said he would like to see more controversial speakers brought to campus through the Great Issues series and indicated that he would attempt to get cheaper Popular Entertainment.

"The key right now is to get the best possible personnel to work in the cabinet," Owen said. He asked that any interested students contact him at the Student Services Building.

U.S. denies Soviet charge of attache 'open espionage'

MSOCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union charged Wednesday that five U.S. military attaches and one from Canada had pushed too hard at their intelligence gathering "missions" and entered the area of "open espionage" at a shipyard and a military base last week.

strongest assertion in years of diplomatic rights, said the attaches immunity was violated and that the incidents had been "staged."

Precedent indicated the Soviet government would not expel the men. Its official newspaper, Izvestia, said they had gone beyond the bounds of permissible behavior April 8 at a Leningrad shipyard and entered a closed military area at Borisov April 9.

"They crossed the border of curiosity and ended up on the path of vice," Izvestia said.

The American reply said that the attaches were engaged in activities "which are perfectly normal and accepted on the part of military attaches the world over, including military attaches of the Soviet Union in the United States."

It charged at the same time a series of violations of immunity that have "ranged from minor such as short detention, to various serious ones involving prolonged detention, forcible search perity.

The embassy said the incidents involved "violation of accepted international norms for the treatment of diplomats."

The latest incident was protested on Monday, the U.S. statement said. It possibly touched off the Izvestia article, giving the Soviet versions, as well as official Soviet complaints earlier in the day.

Representatives of the American and Canadian embassies were called separately to the Soviet Foreign Ministry Wednesday and presented with the charges.

Earlier Wednesday another Soviet newspaper accused the leader of an Indiana University student tour, Stephen P. Soudakoff, of spying for the United States when he was in the Soviet Union last summer. He reportedly was expelled from the country.

Izvestia accused three of the attaches of taking pictures of the Leningrad shipyard. They were assistant naval attaches, Lt. Cmdr. Robert Hamer, Franklin Square, N.Y.; Lt. Cmdr. Ralph N. Channell, Darien, Conn.; and Marine Lt. Col. Wayne E. Richards, Calusa, Calif.

The Canadian Lt. Col. J.V. [Name obscured] refused to address them, but he denied the accusation.

The newspaper charged that U.S. assistant Army attaches, Lt. Col. Hugo W. Matson, Ballston Spa, N.Y., and Lt. Col. Gerhard L. Jacobson, Terrace, Minn., entered a closed military area at Borisov in White Russia.

Izvestia warned that it is "high time for certain military diplomats to see the line of division between activities specified by their status and open espionage."

Izvestia charged that Matson and Jacobson told Borisev authorities they did not speak Russian fluently, but said, "profanity was constantly spewing from the mouths of the Americans in good Russian."

The Canadian told a reporter that Hamer, Channell and Richards were walking down a street when a Soviet policeman stopped them, asked for identification and detained them in conversation for about an hour.

They were not taking photos, Watson said, and were not considering it. He said they were unaware they were in a sensitive area.

Izvestia said that Matson and Jacobson "feverishly crumpled something in their pockets" when an inspector questioned them. This "something" was later determined to be their alleged "intelligence" notes.

Prisoners' strike results in 5 dead

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—A hail of buckshot fired by guards into a crowd of more than 400 rioting prisoners Wednesday left five inmates dead and 75 wounded at North Carolina's Central Prison in Raleigh.

Two prison guards and two highway patrolmen were hit by ricocheting shots, and another guard was struck in the face by a thrown brick. None of the officers was seriously injured.

The gunfire abruptly halted a demonstration which began as a sitdown strike by about 500 prisoners at the maximum security prison Tuesday and erupted into a torch-throwing melee about 1:30 a.m. Wednesday.

State Correction Commissioner

V. Lee Bounds said guards and state troopers regained control of the prison after skirmishing less than 10 minutes after the gunfire.

The strike began when prisoners refused to return to work after the noon meal Tuesday. They presented a list of grievances to prison officials. They said they would not leave the prison yard until they could discuss their grievances with Bounds, who was out of the state at the time.

Bounds returned later in the day but refused to negotiate under pressure from prisoners.

Before the violence erupted, 66 of the striking prisoners returned to the cells. Prison authorities had called for 200 extra guards and 95 state and city police reinforcements to help break the strike.

Prison guards, armed with chemical mace and nightsticks, but without guns, were on the ground blocking the demonstrators' access to other areas of the 75-year-old brick walled structure.

Guards stationed on the walls and roof carried both shotguns and rifles.

The inmates began throwing lighted torches at unarmed custodial officers," Bounds said, and the order to fire was given.

A volley of shotgun blasts rang out from the walls: a brief skirmish ensued; and the guards regained control of the yard.

"Had they broken through the guards," Bounds said, "they could have gone to other areas of the prison. They had access only to the clothing house and the chapel."

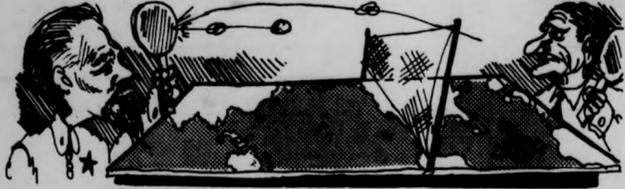

Bounds said at a 4:30 a.m. news conference. "It was clearly a case of acceding to demands under pressure or of taking command of the institution. I chose the second choice."

In their grievances, the prisoners had said they wanted implementation of an incentive pay plan which would pay them up to $1 a day for work in prison industries, a grievance committee to meet monthly with prison officials, longer visiting hours, four instead of two television sets in the cellblocks, hot lunches instead of cold cuts, and return of 37 men in disciplinary single-cell confinement in the general prison population.

Bounds won legislative approval for the pay proposal last year.

Quibbling on site
for talks must end

America's olive branch still seems to possess a thorn or two. Certainly not as many as before, but there lurks a hint of them behind the leaves.

Repeatedly, President Johnson has said U.S. negotiators will meet anywhere, at any time, with those from Hanoi. Yet, after several suggestions for talks about the cessation of hostilities toward the North, a site has not been agreed upon.

Washington has its reasons for refusing Phnom Penh—it has no American embassy or consulate which would ensure speedy and accurate communications between it and the White House. Warsaw, Poland, within the Communist Bloc, gives the psychological advantage to the North Vietnamese. Other sites suggested by both sides, have similar drawbacks for one or the other.

But continued unacceptance by the United States will only tend to lend further credence to the belief that the American government does not mean what it says.

President Johnson's candid speech to the nation two Sundays ago brought back a preliminary trust. In order to maintain that trust, the bombing of the North should be completely stopped. And no other step will more assure the success of the preliminary talks.

Though the present peace feelers are only preliminary to the ending of the war, they are a first step. That first step could be best forwarded by a complete bombing halt in the North.

There are certain advantages to having the preliminary talks at a specific site, but if the United States continues to quibble on the meeting place, the opportunity that has been presented may disappear. The next step would be escalation by both sides, and the final day of peace would be further from our grasp.

The proposed talks may only be a beginning, but the most important step now is to bring the parties to the bargaining table and end the hostilities in Vietnam with all haste.

ASMSU's new talent;
and much responsibility

New faces on the ASMSU Student Board must not merely replace their forerunners, but also establish a positive image.

The ASMSU Student Board faces an immediate "must"—that of determining an outline of priorities for the coming year. The year-long task of the board will (should) center on developing a positive image that does not exist now and on making themselves relevant to the students of MSU.

New faces, campaigning on the same grandiose ideals for the coming year, must be hopefully more capable of accomplishment than the old.

Some old faces still will linger on with advice, encouragement and criticism for the board.

Two faces—Pete Ellsworth and Harv Dzodin—carry-overs from the past. And they are two who should have learned the lesson of a lack of credibility, priorities and unity of purpose.

Those who have had token familiarity with student government are often awed at the slowness and pettiness of its normal operations. The others will also soon find out to what depths ASMSU operations can sink. Some of the awed ones have vowed to erase that nothingness; some of them will most likely be disappointed at best, converted at worst.

There is talent on the new board, and also ideas and capability and desire. But a year ago, these same attributes were present on the board; and now a year later, no one familiar with student government looks back with pride.

Another year similar to the last, with an accomplishment level no higher than the last, could spell the end of student government in its present form.

This responsibility weighs upon the talent and potential of the fourth session of ASMSU.

VISTA's new frontiers

VISTA's on campus this week. You remember VISTA, Volunteers in Service to America. The Domestic Peace Corps, they formerly called it.

Well, VISTA's grown up since the last time it came to MSU more than two years ago. It bills itself no longer as the little brother of the Peace Corps. VISTA people now believe that they have surpassed the organization that first changed the concept of volunteer service in the early sixties.

"We are more relevant, more urgent, more immediate, and frankly more effective than the Peace Corps," Padriac Kennedy, the second in command at Vista, said.

"The action today is right here. The crisis today is in the ghetto. The tragedy today is the agony of the poor all across this country," Kennedy said.

"These are problems more immediate than those of Zambia, Chad, or St. Lucia," he said.

The tone is perhaps a little bitter. But, as Kennedy spoke to a small group of college editors gathered in Washington to meet with VISTA executives several weeks ago, he was more than resentful of the Peace Corps, out of whose shadow VISTA is really just beginning to emerge.

He demonstrated too much of the groping, troubled, and yet prideful attitude that characterizes the entire organization. He attempted to enumerate some of the problems and frustrations that face VISTA today.

He told of the poor, the depressing housing conditions, and school facilities that are available.

VISTA volunteers are frustrated with the "monumental indifference" of the white middle class, and "with their own inability to solve the problems they encounter every day," Kennedy said.

But there are other things haunting VISTA that Kennedy didn't mention, and in many ways these are the real things, preventing VISTA from progressing.

The war in Vietnam is taking up a large share of the funds that all the Office of Economic Opportunity programs need and prevents many students that VISTA hopes to recruit from taking part in any government project.

Also, militancy creates a myth that white volunteers can no longer be effective in the ghetto. Charles Jones, member of the steering committee of Washington's Black United Front said, "White volunteers increasingly are going to be dangerous and irrelevant."

But, for the youth of today, and for the communities it is helping, VISTA can be relevant. Its task now is to get across the message of what it is really doing.

and to shy away from the sweet public relations story that might be needed to appease congressmen, but won't win college recruits who want to do something effective.

When VISTA is effective, it can be a thorn in the side of the local established power structure, as it was in West Virginia when the governor asked some "troublemaking" volunteers to pull out.

When VISTA is effective, it can give politically unawared, underprivileged neighborhoods (be they black ghettos, migrant camps, or Indian reservations) the knowledge and tools to at least start winning through political pressure some of the things they need and deserve.

It might seem like a futile effort to some, but VISTA is doing something. Sure, VISTA isn't going to solve our country's racial and poverty problems all by itself. It's not even trying to, but it is one agency of our government that devotes its efforts to fighting the right war.

Nowadays, this in itself is saying quite a bit.

Student uprising in Europe

Americans are not alone. There is trouble in Europe, too. There have been student riots, sit-ins, occupation of college buildings in Spain, Italy, Poland and now in West Berlin and West Germany. In each of these there has been a different situation into which the student demonstrations fit.

But the two basic patterns are those of Poland and West Berlin. In Poland (as also in Spain) the student protest was an effort to liberalize a totalitarian regime, as the Czech regime is today being liberalized. In West Berlin, in the riots over the wounding of Rudolf Dutschke, the aim is to paralyze a tolerably democratic regime which is an ally of the United States. This follows the pattern of similar student riots in Japan and Italy.

The pace of student activism in West Germany has accelerated in a very brief period. When I lectured in the summer of 1966 at a number of German universities, I reported on militant student groups on every campus, but they were militant chiefly about student grievances. The only exception was the Free University of Berlin, operating partly with American foundation funds, where the feeling was strongly political and anti-American.

That trend has now reached the other universities. In Berlin the wounding of the charismatic student leader, Rudy Dutschke, by a demented young Nazi has given the students on the left their dream opportunity to stage a series of new demonstrations around a hero-martyr and to include America in their cry of "Nazi swine" against the police.

In their political orientation the Dutschke forces are as far left as you can get without becoming openly Communist. They are scornful of the Russians for having become staid and settled as a world power, they identify with Castro, they admire the Chinese as world revolutionaries.

For German reasons, they don't want to

"... one must ask who is really totalitarian in spirit: the Berlin government breaking up the demonstrations or the demonstrators trying to silence a press they disagree with."

stage joint actions with the East German Communist regime which has extended them a fraternal embrace. They are, of course, obsessively anti-American and have not allowed their Vietnam demonstrations to be altered by the fact that Washington and Hanoi are about to start the first phase of peace talks.

The question about them is this: What do they want? Dean Acheson once said about the British that they have lost an empire but have not yet found a role. The Berlin students have found a role, in being what they call an "extra-parliamentary opposition," but they have no imperium for which to use it. They are caught between an American imperium they hate, a Soviet imperium they scorn and a German regime they despise.

Their thinking is vaguely in a Left-Socialist direction, but their only action is anti-American. They cannot aim at power for themselves, as the Spartacist movement did almost half a century ago under Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg; whatever hurt they do to the Kiesinger-Brandt coalition can only help the deeply reactionary Communist regime of East Germany. They remind me most of the fable of the poor, foolish donkey dressed up in a lion's skin.

The avowed target of the demonstrators is Axel Springer's press empire, on the theory that the Springer papers whipped up feeling against Dutschke and thus provoked the assassination attempt. But whether or not this is true—and it sounds pretty hysterical—it makes no sense to use it as a reason for violence against the Springer plant, trucks and workers.

Despite the anti-Nazi slogans of the Dutschke group, one must ask who is really totalitarian in spirit: the Berlin government breaking up the demonstrations or the demonstrators trying to silence a press they disagree with.

Every free newspaper must stand with the Springer papers on this issue of press freedom from political violence. So should every student who cares about a competition of ideas. If the press in Germany is to be cowed by left-wing violence, it will be cowed by right-wing violence as well—and that is the path back to the Nazis.

What makes the European picture even more dramatic is to compare the patience of the West German regime toward this violence with the way the Polish regime treated the protests of its own students.

The Polish regime responded with repression, showing the naked fist of an old-line Communist state when faced with intellectual criticism. It also responded with an anti-Jewish propaganda barrage, seeking to "unmask" the student response as really "Zionist" in intent. Finally, it responded by a shakeup of top military officials and a government purge.

Actually, the impact of student protest frightened the regime in Poland far more than in Germany or the United States although it brought negative results. The Berlin students will continue to make more noise and get more headlines in the next few weeks. But the unanswered question remains: What do they want, other than to throttle some newspapers? And where do they want to go?

Liberals' irony

To the Editor:
I find it ironic that we "white liberals" are quite willing to include Negro history in the curriculum as long as "they" approach us properly, without rancor and in the spirit of sweet rationality.

It seems the American Negro in his search for identity has grown weary of concealing his rage behind a deferential facade. He has no strength left to plead for right, he can only demand.

Yet, we, in our self-righteousness, have the gall to suggest that Negroes suppress the anger aroused by a lifetime of injury and approach injustice with reasonable, well-researched suggestions.

The need now is for full acceptance of the American Negro as a human being—a human being with a heritage, and above all, a human being with feelings. If we can learn to accept his feelings as they are, the day may come when we can discuss problems rationally together.

Sincerely,

blacks and whites deserve to know the truth about our Congressman's behavior on the recently enacted open-housing bill.

On a crucial vote taken just prior to passage of the bill, our "Man in Washington" Congressman Chamberlain, voted in favor of railroading the bill into a conference committee to water-down the open-housing provisions. When this attempt failed, and passage of the bill became inevitable, our "Man in Washington" reversed himself and voted in favor of the bill.

At a time when the soul of America is sick and reeling, Chamberlain has chosen to place his personal political ambitions above the welfare of our nation and her people.

A return to comfort: white sox

To the Editor:

I feel we have enough ridiculous traditions and fashions passed on to us from other generations without creating any new ones. Why does this generation look at generations before it and laugh, and at the same time condone some of the most irrational practices or fads? Is a person living in this generation and wearing white shorts and white tennis shoes always going to find himself swimming in his own sweat of social stupidity? Someone please tell me why our generation is so irrational that it coerces people to go without sox whenever they choose to wear white. I have

Mr. Chamberlain may well have been representing the views of his constituents when he attempted to weaken the open-housing bill, although I doubt it, but he was not representing his constituents when he resorted to chicanery, deception and dishonesty by attempting to destroy the meaning of the bill and then having failed, sending telegrams to his constituents assuring them that the bill passed with his support.

Mr. Chamberlain, by his actions, did not contribute to the narrowing of the credibility gap, nor did he restore our diminishing confidence in politics and politicians.

Grid defense--poverty amid plenty

By TOM BROWN
State News Sports Writer
The defense remains a paradox for MSU's football team during spring drills, for it is the most set, and at the same time the most unsettled, in the Spartan grid picture.

It is set in contrast to the offense, because the defense is loaded with returnees with experience. But on the other side, the amount of experience varies and several top candidates such as Dave Schweinfurth have no game experience. The problem is compounded by the load the defense must carry. Last season the defense spent most of the time on the field, when the Spartan ball control game stalled.

Defensive Line Coach Henry Bullough said that while several of the 1967 cripples appeared to be mended, the quality of the defense rests on numbers.

"You can only play 11 men at a time, but you have to have the players that are ready to take their place," Bullough said. "Right now, I'm only working with 17 players. We moved Ken Little to defensive end, and he's got to be good. because he's the only right end I've got right now."

Rich Saul works the other end slot, with Charley Bailey and Rich Benedict at the tackles and Jack Zindel at middle guard.

Bullough put Zindel in the middle following Nick Jordan's Tuesday injury. The veteran Jordan suffered a sprain of the left elbow and will be sidelined for up to a week-and-a-half. Also, Mike Mahady was lost indefinitely with a concussion.

The linebacker positions have ten candidates, but Linebacker Coach Dave Smith doesn't feel swamped with talent.

"They are quality boys, so we'll hope that the cream comes to the top," Smith said. "We can't keep three strings. If we can use the other boys somewhere else, we'll use them."

Smith said that Schweinfurth, Don Law, Bob Milten-berger and Frank Traylor were top candidates.

Team captain and all-America candidate Al Brenner is working the defensive backfield, as is flanker Frank Waters. Brenner, Waters, Frank Foreman and other receivers are being tried in the backfield in an effort to shore up a vulnerable spot in last year's Spartan defense.

NHL semis tonight

MONTREAL (UPI) -- Montreal's well-rested Canadians, bidding for their 15th Stanley Cup hockey title, were declared fit and ready Wednesday on the eve of their semi-final round tonight against the inspired Chicago Black Hawks.

Both teams are riding the crest of four-game winning streaks. Montreal disposed of the third place Boston Bruins in four consecutive games. Chicago dropped its first two games to the New York Rangers. But the Black Hawks stormed back to take the next four in a row.

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)--Search would be continued for a Negro coach.

Jim Owens, University of Washington athletic director, said Tuesday that acts of discrimination have occurred within the athletic department. He promised positive measures to insure that such incidents will not happen in the future.

Before a packed news conference at the University, Owens detailed findings of a faculty committee which had been formed to investigate grievances expressed by the school's 14 Negro athletes.

Owens said the committee was convinced he had sincerely believed that discrimination was not practiced in the athletic department.

"Nevertheless, the committee feels that, intentional or not, discriminatory acts have occurred," Owens said. "Owens said these steps would be taken:

Garvey's 2 homeruns key twin sweep over Albion

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer
A home run by MSU's Steve Garvey wrecked Albion's best chance of beating the Spartans since 1907 and boosted MSU to a doubleheader victory over the Britons 6-2 and 3-1 Wednesday at Old College Field.

Garvey's three-run homer in the fifth inning of the nightcap provided all the offense the Spartans needed, but until Garvey's blast it looked like Albion might gain a victory over the Spartans after 25 straight losses.

The Britons picked up an unearned run off Spartan starter Mel Behney in the second inning, and Albion pitcher Jim Horner had pitched out of a jam in the second inning to hold the lead going into the Spartan half of the fifth inning.

With one out in the fifth, MSC's Tom Hummel reached first on an error and Rich Miller singled to right field and stole second bringing Garvey to the plate.

The 5-10, 188 pounder, who had hit a home run in the first game also, stroked a 1-2 pitch 400 feet, easily clearing the left-center-field wall.

"It was a curve ball, waist high and over the plate. I could see it real well," Garvey said. "I just tried to get good wood on it and snapped my wrist."

Garvey now has five home runs, two more than any Spartan hitter could gain all last season.

Behney picked up his sixth win in the game, allowing the Britons to score one hit, striking out 13 and walking three.

Horner allowed the Spartans just five hits, one each to Garvey, Miller, Tom Binkowski, Bill Lane, and Steve Rymal.

In the first game, MSU came from behind with a three-run rally in the fourth inning and another three-man rally in the sixth to provide sophomore pitcher Phil Fulton with his first victory as a Spartan.

Fulton gave up an earned run in the fifth inning and an unearned score in the sixth in hurling a six-hitter.

The Spartans picked up three runs in the fourth inning on only two hits.

Hummel, walked but was out at second by Harry Kendrick. Garvey reached first on an error, Kendrick moving to second on the play, and Binkowski scored Kendrick with a single to right.

A triple to center by Miller scored Garvey and Binkowski. Garvey's bases-empty homer leading off the sixth inning started the second three-run rally.

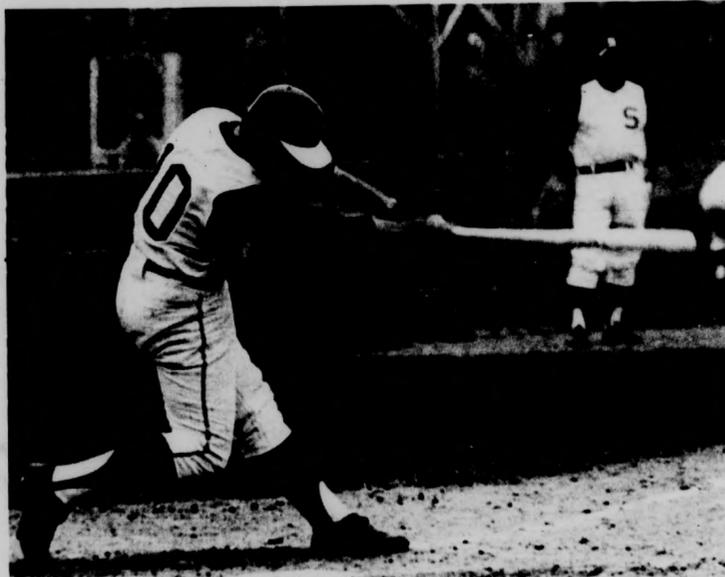

After Garvey had driven a low inside curve over the 340 foot sign in left, Binkowski walked, stole second, and scored on a single by Rymal. Rymal went to second on a throw to the plate trying to get Binkowski.

Rymal went to third on a ground out by Rich Vary and scored when Fulton's fly ball to left was dropped by Albion outfielder Tim Cooper.

MSU is now 14-5 overall and will not play again until a single game with Notre Dame April 23.

Golf association head defends scoring rule

NEW YORK (UPI)--The president of the U.S. Golf Assn. today defended the scoring rule which deprived Robert De Vicenzo of a tie in the Masters Golf Tournament as the "best known solution" to the problem of keeping score in major tournaments.

Hord W. Hardin, president of the U.S.G.A., said that the association "would welcome any constructive suggestions for improvement of the rules."

De Vicenzo was deprived of a 72-hole tie with Bob Goalby last Sunday in the final round of the Masters at Augusta, Ga., when he signed an incorrect scorecard for the last round--a card which showed him shooting a "4" on the 17th hole instead of the "3" he actually shot. The extra shot gave him a 278 total to Goalby's 277.

Under the current rule of golf, No. 38, a player is obliged to check the scorecard (which is kept during the match by his opponent) and then sign it to indicate he accepts it as correct. Once a card is signed, no alteration is permitted. De Vicenzo, in his excitement, failed to notice the error.

CONSERVATIVE PROGRAM

Reagan a silent candidate

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

Ronald Reagan, governor of California, is officially "doing nothing to encourage" his nomination for the presidency of the United States.

But many of his political adversaries have different ideas. One fan club in Owosso has been carrying on a "Reagan in '68" campaign since January, 1966.

In California, where he has been governor since January 1967, Reagan is implementing suffered from Reagan's tightening of the state budget.

"We accept without reservation our obligation to help the aged, disabled and those unfortunate who, through no fault of their own must depend on their fellow men," Reagan said. "But we are not going to perpetuate poverty by substituting a permanent dole for a paycheck."

In 1967 he slashed funds for medical care for the indigent and aged by $210 million and called for removal of patients from public and private hospitals after eight days.

"What I propose," he said "is a program restricted to those people of demonstrable need. Why should those who earn enough to pay their own doctors provide better care for others than they are able to pay for themselves?"

Education has also felt the effects of Reagan's cutbacks. In 1967 he reduced the allocation for education by $40 million.

Reagan advocates elimination of the free tuition system which prevails in state-supported colleges and universities in California. He wants to charge students $400 per semester in tuition in addition to the fees already collected.

"Most college students," he said, "are from middle income families. They should not be taxed to subsidize them."

To reduce crime Reagan tends to give more authority to the local communities and "see to it that police are not handicapped in their job of protecting society."

"When demonstrators take to the streets in disorder and rioting then you have to invoke the law no matter who is breaking it," Reagan said. "We have to turn to the responsible leadership in the Negro community and ask for their help instead of sitting down at a table with the self-appointed leaders who are the ones whose first reaction is to take to the streets in violence."

In his political views Reagan has made a great change from his liberal Democratic ways of the late 1930's to his present conservative Republicanism.

He was, in the 1930's, a member of the Americans for Democratic Action and the ultraliberal Hollywood chapter of the American Veterans committee.

"I was a near-hopeless hemophiliac liberal," he said. "I bled for causes."

The change to Republicanism was gradual. During World War II he was appalled by the waste and inefficiency of wartime bureaucracy. A post-war exposure of Communists in the film industry hastened his move to the right.

In 1952, after an unsuccessful marriage to actress Jane Wyman, he married Nancy Davis, the daughter of Loyal Davis, a world-famous neurosurgeon and devout Republican conservative. It was that year that he first voted for a Republican: Dwight Eisenhower.

In 1960 Reagan headed California's Democrats for Nixon Club and in 1964 he toured the state as the Republican chairman for the election of Goldwater.

Now he describes himself as "an unhyphenated Republican. I'll stand up and speak for any member of my party."

Reagan, who is one of the West's several actors-turned-politicians, began his career in show business in 1937 when he did a screen test and was hired to work in a film with Errol Flynn.

His acting career consisted mainly of playing juvenile leads to Flynn, Humphrey Bogart, Dick Powell and James Cagney. His two most famous roles were George "the Gipper" Gipp in "Knute Rockne, the All American" and a young man whose legs were amputated by a sadistic doctor in "King's Row."

Reagan also served six terms as president of the Screen Actors Guild and emceed two television shows, "The General Electric Theatre" and "Death Valley Days."

at tax reductions, enacting a law granting labor union members the right to secret ballots on union policy matters and reducing crime by increasing the penalties.

"Today the combined tax load—federal, state and local—is almost 40 cents on each dollar earned," the 56-year-old Republican said. "That's too high and I believe that cutting taxes starts at the state and local levels."

And he started that cutting by scrapping plans for a new governor's mansion and a new building for the state highway patrol, curbing travel by state employees and purchase of office supplies, and halting production of tourist road maps, brochures, pamphlets and park and recreation magazines.

Halstead on Choice ballot; seeks peace, black power

By LINDA BEDNAR
State News Staff Writer

Fred Halstead, Socialist Workers Party Presidential candidate, is probably the least-known man on the Choice

He has never held political office. He is a cloth-cutter by trade, and lives in a public housing project in the Chelsea district of Manhattan.

Nevertheless, Halstead hopes to put his name on 30 state ballots this November.

FRED HALSTEAD

He and his running mate, Paul Boutelle, a taxi driver and black liberation activist, have been on campaign tours since August.

The Socialists campaign centers around two slogans: "Bring the GIs Home From Vietnam" and "Black Control of the Black Community." Their platform also calls for "a planned, democratic socialist America;" support for "labor's fight against inflation and government control;" a crash program of public housing and other public works; and "support for the demands of American youth," including the vote for 18-year-olds.

Halstead, 40, is the son of a Eugene Debs follower and a Wobbly member of the Industrial Workers of the World. At 18, Halstead became involved in the postwar "Bring the Troops Home" movement, and in 1947 he joined the Socialists Workers Party.

In the following years Halstead became active in union activities. He helped organize for the United Automobile Workers and Garment Workers in Los Angeles, and he was arrested twice at a Square D Electrical Workers strike in Detroit in 1954.

In 1955, Halstead joined the staff of The Militant, the official Socialist party weekly.

He has participated in various protest movements. He helped organize a "Hands Off Cuba" demonstration in New York City during the 1962 missile crisis, and in 1964 he participated in the rent strike movement in New York's Lower East Side.

He has been a member of the New York Fifth Avenue Vietnam Peace Parade Committee since 1965, and the National Mobilization Committee in various protest movements.

Halstead has written several pamphlets and a book, "Hullum Stars," which concerns the 1964 rent strikes.

NO EFFECT ON OUTCOME

Prof discusses chem. warfare

By PAT ANSTETT
State News Staff Writer

The advancement of biological and chemical warfare research and its increased use in the Vietnam war has been virtually unopposed by congressmen and the public, Burke K. Zimmerman, asst. professor of biochemistry said Wednesday.

"There is a definite lack of public outrage against the use of such weapons, many of which are lethal," Zimmerman said. "If these attacks are allowed to continue, it will establish a precedence for their use," he said.

Biological and chemical drugs received a major impetus for use as war-like weapons in 1959 with "Operation Blue Skies." According to Zimmerman, this program, which stressed "the continued use of incapacitating drugs," received great support from congressmen. "They wanted this program expanded," he said.

A majority of chemical and biological weapons are developed or researched at Fort Dietrich, Md. Research of pathogenic disease there is greatest. Eighty-five per cent of the findings are available there on a "need-to-know" basis," Zimmerman said.

Zimmerman then described several biological and chemical weapons, one of which is lethal, can be authorized for use without even an executive command," he said.

A series of these weapons, some highly lethal and others causing excessive vomiting, nausea, and drowsiness are being used in Vietnam. The most dangerous in use is a nerve gas that was used by the Germans in World War II.

Another category of weapons, which includes several incapacitating gases, is used not only for war but also for riot-control purposes.

Zimmerman discussed the morality of these weapons. "It may be a question of stabbing someone in the back rather than just shouting them down," he said. He said that chemical and biological warfare was "indiscriminant" in that it struck down both children and old people alike.

Zimmerman explained that many scientists were doing research in chemical and biological warfare because of a lack of research grants. Doctoral research grants only offer approximately $6,500 a year while Fort Dietrich offers $10,000-$12,000 stipends. "The financial reward in this field is often quite irresistible," he said.

A possible conflict of interest may also occur between government warfare projects and many university officials, Zimmerman said. "One of our biochemistry professors is serving as an adviser to Fort Dietrich," he said.

WKAR manager

gets national post

Richard Estell, manager of radio stations WKAR AM and FM, has been elected to the National Educational Radio (NER) board of directors for a three-year term.

The six-member board, composed of educational radio broadcasters, advises the executive board of the National Association of Educational Broadcasters (NAEB).

Estell is chairman of the NER Network Program Advisory Committee which screens all radio programs for the nation's educational radio stations. He has served in this capacity for the past four years.

Estell was appointed to the NAEB National Convention Advisory Committee last year. This is a standing committee which assists in both site selection and program planning for the national convention.

Estell, a resident of Williamston, was in commercial radio in Coldwater and Bad Axe from 1950 to 1957 when he joined the WKAR staff. He became manager of WKAR in 1964.

Panel discusses research regs

By STEVE GATES
State News Staff Writer

A petition for a formal regulation forbidding classified research was the outcome of a panel of three MSU scientists speaking to a Justin Morrill class. However, the petition is apparently superfluous, because there is a long-standing University policy forbidding any research which cannot be published, Herman L. King, asst. provost, said.

The panel included Harold L. Sadoff, professor of microbiology and public health, Robert R. Brubaker, asst. professor of microbiology and Burke R. Zimmerman, asst. professor of biochemistry. Also participating was the class instructor, Albert Cafagna, instructor in philosophy. The panel prompted the petition by a discussion of the correlation between funds for microbiological and chemical warfare, and funds for research in the universities.

Panel members described the problem of MSU scientists as being one of finding private funds for their research efforts, most of which are highly expensive.

MSU, which is already "grant-poor," Sadoff said, also faces with other universities, a nationwide tightening in the main source of non-government funds, the National Science Foundation (NSF).

At the same time as this tightening of funds, the panel noted, the U.S. Dept. of Defense has started a huge new program of research, known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, which distributes funds to 50 universities in the United States.

These funds were directed primarily toward universities, such as MSU, that have not had large government support in the past.

The panel was particularly concerned because MSU now has under consideration three proposals for research under Project Themis, after rejecting two other proposals because of their possible use in the design of weaponry.

These three proposals do not contain any request for classified research. However, the panel members were concerned that some of the research would tempt MSU scientists to accept later contracts for related research, which would be classified.

The panel agreed that even supposedly innocuous unclassified research could possibly be used by government researchers for construction of biological or chemical warfare weapons.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the combined story of classroom discussions held Tuesday and Wednesday as part of Days of Conscience—a classroom evaluation of the Vietnam War.

The theory of a "just war" remains only a theory and does not affect a nation's decision to go to war, Charles McCracken, instructor in philosophy, said Wednesday.

In a special lecture to his history of philosophy class, McCracken outlined the approach of the Christian theologians regarding war, and detailed their justifications for war.

"In the first two centuries of Christian history, the Christian theologians were strongly against wars of any nature," he said. If a Christian joined the military, he was excommunicated, McCracken added. However, as Christianity grew, it became more worldly and, by 416 A.D., only Christians were allowed in the Roman army.

Theologians of the 16th century Renaissance established specific determinants of a "just war," McCracken said.

To them, a "just war" was one declared by a proper authority, one in which the authority's motives were just, a war conducted only if arbitration failed, one not carried out against noncombatants, one in which there was a reasonable chance of success, and one in which the expected good would outweigh the evil created by the war.

McCracken said that by these criteria, modern wars cannot be considered just. Modern weapons of mass destruction cannot be rectified with the dictum that the war not be carried out against noncombatants, he said.

McCracken said, however, that by making the moral decision to engage in war lie with governments and not with the individual, the theory is rendered useless. All governments insist that their war is a "just one," he said.

ALFRED B. HUDSON
"Ethnic Diversity in Vietnam and Its Bearing On the War" was discussed by Alfred B. Hudson, professor of anthropology, in his Anthropology 467 class.

Hudson's talk stressed that the North Vietnamese are not puppets of Red China nor are they likely to submit to Communist China's control.

He said that the Vietnamese have been fighting China for the greater part of 1500 years, trying to rid themselves of Chinese domination.

The feeling against China has become so strong, Hudson said, that only one per cent of the North Vietnamese are Chinese, a much smaller group than is found in other Southeast Asian countries.

Breaking Vietnam's population into ethnic groups, Hudson said that 85 per cent of them are pure Vietnamese, four per cent are Tai, three and a half per cent are Chinese and the rest come from a variety of Asian groups.

All the minority groups cause friction within Vietnam because of long-standing antagonisms between them, Hudson said.

NORMAN RICH

Norman Rich, professor of history, said that not until there is a strong native opposition within a country and the local government is "screaming for help" can Western powers go in and really make their weight felt.

In his class on the "History of the United States," Rich expressed doubt as to whether the United States handled the Vietnam situation properly from the start. He said the free elections, called for in the 1954 Geneva Accords, were not permitted to be held due to "the gem that a one-man democracy" was not what Western powers wanted.

Rich said that the Vietnam War was doing Russia a good turn, in that it was drawing Red China's attention away from potential disturbances on their common border.

He said that he had refused to sign the Days of Conscience petition because he disagreed with its attack on American institutions. "I think our institutions are first class," Rich said. "It is how we are working within them that is wrong."

JOSEPH RADELET

Addressing a Justin Morrill religion class, Joseph Radelet, a senior at Sacred Heart Seminary, said that in spite of discussions on college campuses about the Vietnam War, most people do not come to a personal decision.

"I would encourage other people to follow their own consciences. We do have a responsibility to make a personal decision," Radelet said.

He said that a complete withdrawal of United States troops from Vietnam would not be realistic. But, he added that since the war is an internal affair, a gradual withdrawal should take place.

Radelet said the United States is cutting itself off from its "former" allies, such as Great Britain, and that it is not able to attend to its domestic problems.

"About 10 years ago, a seminary student would have had little concern about the war," Radelet said. "My basic reason for objecting to all wars would be because I'm a United States citizen," he added.

Radelet said there will be war as long as there are "haves" and "have-nots" and noted that the bishops of the United States are generally in favor of the administration.

"The bishops of the United States are very slow," Radelet said. "They are quicker to follow the government than they should be."

BATTISTINI

L. A. Battistini referred to the war in Vietnam as "one of the most senseless wars ever fought." "Other wars, unfortunately, have sometimes made sense," he said.

Battistini said, that at the present time, about two-thirds or more of the world is in a "revolutionary condition." "In country after country in various parts of the world, absolute structures exist, elite groups rule and the social structure is that belonging to a past world. The bourgeoisie stand in the way of social justice," he said.

"The U.S. itself is a creature of revolution, so it ought to understand revolution," he said. "The policy of the government for the past 20 years is not that of understanding revolutions. Peaceful change is desirable, but if all the routes to peaceful change are exhausted it is not a crime to resort to violence."

Battistini said that since World War II the role of the U.S. has been counter revolutionary. He added that the U.S. believes its power and wealth is so great that it can do everything alone.

He said America is neither involved in Vietnam to stop the Communists, or is it there because the Vietnamese government asked it to come.

"We are going to demonstrate in Vietnam that a revolution we're against can't succeed, especially if it is remotely related to communism, especially if it is a so-called 'Peoples War,'" he said.

Battistini estimated that nearly 80 per cent of the Vietnamese people "fully support or sympathize with the Viet Cong."

Department refuses prof right to speak

EDITOR'S NOTE: The story on Burke K. Zimmerman's speech is on page 6.

By PAT ANSTETT
State News Staff Writer

R. Gaurth Hansen, chairman of the Biochemistry Dept., refused to let one of his assistant professors speak on the aspects of biological and chemical warfare as part of the "Days of Conscience" program.

Forced to hold this lecture outside of class Wednesday, Burke K. Zimmerman, assistant professor of biochemistry, is petitioning it as a possible infringement of the Academic Freedom Report.

Zimmerman, one of the team teachers on a Biochemistry 800 series, planned to participate in the "Days of Conscience" program with his lecture.

ZIMMERMAN

"Chemical and Biological Warfare" because "it seemed consistent with the course curriculum," he said.

Willis Wood, professor of biochemistry and organizer of the team lectures, told him that he could not use class time to speak on this subject.

Zimmerman said, "Wood refused to let me speak on this subject because he said 'that I did not have the authority.'" Wood said that it was an irresponsible and uncooperative act, it is the function of a biochemistry instructor to teach only the course content, and that I was not qualified to teach the proposed lecture."

Zimmerman then said that Wood had threatened to disrupt the class if he proceeded to hold the lecture.

Wood was out of town this week and was not available for comment.

Hansen, according to Zimmerman, agreed that as a state employee, Zimmerman would be abusing state funds if he spoke on this subject. He then informed Zimmerman that he could only speak on this subject outside of class, at a time other than the normal class schedule.

"This issue is important for several reasons," Zimmerman said. "It is a question of how much authority does a course organizer have, if instructors are hired and assumed to be competent," he said.

"There is also the question of 'Days of Conscience' programs are held in the future, of how much authority course organizers have in determining class content," he said.

Zimmerman presented his views on the issue at the rally which climaxed the "Days of Conscience" program last night.

TODAY, THEOLOGY STARTS WHERE YOU ARE

Today's theologians start with human nature as it is, and the world as they find it. They start with the concerns that concern men most: human relations, individual existence, sex, war, the discoveries of science, and with all the thought currents of the anxious world we live in.

Joseph Fletcher, of the Episcopal Theological School, is still making waves with his pivotal bestseller Situation Ethics: The New Morality—which argued that virtually any act, even murder, could be morally right under certain circumstances. THE SITUATION ETHICS DEBATE, edited by Harvey Cox of Harvard Divinity School, contains reactions from reviewers, theologians, housewives, editors, students—and even such arbiters of morality as Time and Playboy. Plus a sharp reply from Dr. Fletcher himself. Cloth $3.95; paper $1.95

In MAN: THE NEW HUMANISM, Professor Roger L. Shinn, of Union Theological Seminary, shows that religious thought can face up to the modern world. His brilliant survey traces the effects of recent developments in biology, psychology, social science, existentialism, Marxism, and modern theology upon Christian self-awareness and the Christian doctrine of man. (New Directions in Theology Today, Vol VI) Cloth $4.50; paper $2.25

LIVING WITHOUT GOD—BEFORE GOD by David O. Woodyard, Chaplain and Professor at Denison University, Ohio, is a lively excursion touching upon such subjects as recent plays and movies, Black Power, the "Death of God," Marilyn Monroe, Martin Luther King, and the Kennedy assassination. Severely realistic, as is most of the new theology, it develops Dietrich Bonhoeffer's idea that we must learn to live—in God's presence—as if God did not exist. Paper, $2.45

Intolerance blasted in Griffith film

David Wark Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" is a standard highlight of any discussion of the history of the motion picture. Yet, the saga of the Civil War seems almost primitive with respect to his last great film, "Intolerance."

Griffith was a southerner by birth and blatant sentimentalist by nature, qualities which along with an embryonic messiah complex found frequent expression in his work. Nevertheless, Griffith was vehement in his self-righteous proclamations of morality as in "Intolerance."

It is generally held that the indignant response that "Birth of a Nation" drew from certain northern quarters as a result of its depiction of the reconstruction era Negro and its sympathetic disposition toward the Ku Klux Klan, was the triggering force which prompted Griffith to turn "The Mother and the Law," originally planned as a simple feature, 1916 style, into one of four supports for an epic tirade against those who were intolerant of the rights and beliefs of others—especially Griffith's.

So, at a cost of $2.5 million, the director cut back and forth between four separate stories, held together only by the thread of thematic unity provided by the title voice. Each plot develops separately and independently of the others, blending into four highly melodramatic conclusions during the final minutes.

The Babylonian story is the most overwhelming of the quartet, and was shot on an outdoor set which rivals anything used by DeMille. Here you will find the prototype of every ancient battle scene ever filmed—the scaling of walls, toppling of towers and mutilation of bodies. In fact, Griffith's special effects are every bit as sophisticated as today's tricks, as evidenced particularly by one shot of a Persian combatant who suffers decapitation at the hands of one of the Babylonians.

The Babylonian story treats the jealousy-motivated betrayal of Balshazzar to Cyrus by a high priest of Bel who feels pangs of insecurity when his incumbent god is threatened by the installation of Ishtar, a rival deity, on an "attend the god of your choice" basis.

Meanwhile, back in 1916, the "Vestal Virgins of Uplift," the local biddies' reform club is making things difficult for factory workers who are squandering their time on frivolities like dancing, drinking and probably sleeping. The brunt of their blows is felt most intensely by the heroine (in typical Griffith fashion she is referred to only as "the Dear One") who is judged an unfit mother by the "Virgins," a decision which leads to confiscation of her baby and ultimately contributes to the framing of her husband (known as "the Boy") as a murderer by a "musketeer of the slums."

The remaining stories are played down in relation to the Modern and Babylonian bits, but the St. Bartholomew's Day massacre of the Huguenots by Catherine de Medici provides action which almost equals the Persian fracas. The Judean story of the crucifixion is a minor segment of the film and appears to have been thrown in to add a fourth drama.

The MSU Film Society's print, which will run at 8 p.m. Friday in 109 Anthony, is a gigantic two and one-half hours long. And although it's certainly not fare for someone seeking casual entertainment, film history devotees will find it most worthwhile, as will anybody who is willing to expend a modicum of energy in concentration and attention.

For the people who shy away from silents, the Society is offering a pair of fine comedies Saturday night, Mae West's "Belle of the Nineties" and the Marx brother's fabulous "Duck Soup."

The latter film will be shown twice, once at 7 and again at 10. It is stock Marx brothers, which is always good, and sets a frantic pace with the siblings' non-sequiturs, puns and sight gags. The sequence in which Chico impersonates Groucho's reflection is a classic.

The Mae West opus will be shown once at 8:30 p.m.

MSU to participate in teacher programs

MSU is one of four universities participating in a new project for development of teacher programs.

Under the Education Professions Development Act of 1967, the U.S. Office of Education is sponsoring the development of programs in teaching teachers. Known as the TTT Project, the program calls for the development of proposals on a regional basis utilizing four universities as catalytic agents.

William B. Hawley, assistant dean of special programs in the College of Education, is in charge of MSU's participation in the project.

"The TTT Project is based on the assumption that the preparation of teachers is our most basic educational need," Hawley said.

Under the project, 60 task forces from interested universities, colleges and school systems will meet in regional conferences. MSU will hold the Midwest conference.

On May 1, the USOE will examine the program plans and ask that appropriate ideas be drafted as proposals for teacher preparation programs.

It is hoped that the TTT programs will be in operation in the fall of 1969, providing Congress appropriates the funds.

Chamber music presented

The faculty of the music department will present a program of chamber music 4 p.m. Sunday in the Kresge Art Center. This is an annual event initiated some years ago by the Beaumont String Quartet.

The performers this year include David Renner, piano; James Niblock and Theodore Johnson, violins; Lynn Bod-

Illegal ballots cast

Then, on the pretext of opening another polling station, he obtained 25 ballots, counting them out, and having the pollwatcher confirm the count and sign out the ballots.

Repeating the same gambit at the Union, he obtained a four-inch stack of ballots, which contained 500 ballots, this time without counting them out.

Filling out the tally sheets with 100 names selected at random from the phone book, the next step was to stamp the ballots. This was done with an ordinary date stamp.

The 100 ballots that were voted were divided into five groups of 20 ballots, each group having a specific voting pattern. All 100 ballots, however, voted for the first name in each voting category, and "yes" to both referendum questions.

After putting the sign-up sheets into the ballot box, he placed his own lock on the box and took it to the Spartan Room, where the votes were to be counted.

In the meantime, he had told his inside man on the elections commission about the ASMSU ELECTION RETURN PASS that he had made. "I wanted to see," he explained, "what they would do when a few people showed up with these phoney cards. But what happened was, they adopted the card, only they added a three-digit number to it."

So, when he entered the Spartan Room with his ballot box, and signed in the name of a non-existent fraternity, he found that several of the checkers, who were in on the plan, challenged the box.

When asked if the inside man was necessary, he replied, "Not at all. All the ballot boxes were not signed out, nor were they all checked, to make sure the right number came in."
