U.S., Hanoi still battle on preliminary talk site

TOKYO (AP) -- North Vietnam accused the United States Sunday of "escalating its conditions of the selection of a site for preliminary talks aimed at bringing peace in Vietnam."

Hanoi's communist newspaper Nhan Dan leveled the charge and indicated the North Vietnamese government is still holding out for talks in Phnom Penh, Cambodia, or Warsaw, Poland.

The United States has "cold-shouldered" these cities because it has no diplomatic relations with Cambodia and because Warsaw, a communist capitol, could not be considered neutral.

Nhan Dan once more accused President Johnson of insincerity and of going back on his assertion that U.S. envoys would go anywhere at any time.

"In a word, the U.S. government has, within a few weeks, completely changed its attitude," the paper said. "Instead of being open to negotiations, it has set conditions for contact."

Four conditions listed by the President Thursday asked for assurance that the conference site be accessible to other governments involved in the war, that it have adequate and presumably secure communications; that it be open for news coverage, and that it be a place where neither side would have psychological or propaganda advantage.

"While 'escalating' its conditions for contact," Nhan Dan said, "the U.S. government is stepping up its war acts on parts of Vietnam."

Nhan Dan said Secretary of State Dean Rusk proposed ten ultimate sites in an effort to "make people believe in the U.S. government's word." Contrary to the idea of neutralist country, many of the countries mentioned by Dean Rusk such as Japan and Malaysia, far from being neutralist, are the ones where the ruling circles are serving as satellites to the U.S., or even joining the United States in the aggression in Vietnam, the paper said.

"What is more, many of these countries, instead of being a place where the U.S. government itself, are places where only the United States is represented," Nhan Dan said.

"And last, but not least, contrary to the idea of 'not making propaganda,' the list drawn up by Dean Rusk in itself is a move to court the satellites of the United States and to deceive the public in certain countries," it stated. "This play-acting is too cheap, and no one will buy it."

Nhan Dan did not specifically say that Hanoi continued to insist on Phnom Penh or Warsaw as the conference site. It indicated, however, the claim that the people of the world are "demanding" that the United States select one of the two cities. The Nhan Dan articles were broadcast by the Vietnam News Agency.

In Vatican City, Pope Paul VI lamented the delay in the start of the talks.

He told pilgrims in the St. Peter's Square, "Peace has become the aspiration, the passion of humanity and it is still late in coming. The expectation, the need and the anxiety for peace are growing, and still there are difficulties that delay it and hinder it..."

"It is a peace still blocked by so many questions of prestige and by an insufficient sense of brotherhood..."

Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin stopped in New Delhi on his way home on a visit to Pakistan to discuss Vietnam with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India.

New Delhi has been mentioned as a possible conference site and informants there said that Kosygin and Mrs. Gandhi brought up the question of a place for talks.

Election valid despite bogus ballot tally

By MITCH MILLER, State News Staff Writer

The 100 ballots reported by the State News April 18 to have been cast illegally were found to have been counted in the ASMSU elections of April 11, in a series of rechecks of the ballots held Saturday and Sunday. They did not affect the results of the election.

Saturday, a group under the direction of ASMSU Chairman Pete Ellsworth, Ray Doss, vice-chairman, and Dale Oliver, chief justice of the student judiciary and a member of the Election Review Board, sorted through the ballots and pulled out those stamped with the number "05."

The bogus ballots were stamped with this number, as were those sent in officially by Hubbard Hall. The actual stamps used, however, were different. Along with the specific voting pattern used by the student who submitted the ballots, this enabled the checkers to determine if the ballots were legitimate.

Later in the day, an unidentified person brought the other 79 ballots to Ellsworth, after having removed them from the rest of the ballots only hours before the check was held.

Because of the discrepancies, the ballots were again checked Sunday to determine if the total number of ballots agreed with the totals as announced after the election.

Not including those hand-counted after the elections, the ballots numbered 6,864 when counted by computer on the night of the election.

When recounted Sunday, there were 6,885, only 22 off the original count, which was well within the 100-vote limit set by the Election Review Board as that of human error, Ellsworth said.

In a statement issued Sunday, Ellsworth said, "The elections were honest. There is absolutely no evidence to indicate the results were illegitimately arrived at. The six members-at-large now sitting on the board are the students' choices."

Ellsworth stated that the board has a good idea of those responsible for the hoax, and that those involved on the election staff, "will not be welcome in any capacity in

N. Viet colonel defects, brings assault plans

SAIGON (AP) -- The highest ranking defector yet to fall into allied hands in South Vietnam has surrendered with enemy plans for a second-wave assault on Saigon involving more than 10,000 troops, official sources reported Sunday.

The man who defected was identified as a North Vietnamese colonel and political commissar from the Ninth Viet Cong Division posted northwest of Saigon. The unit was to be used in the attack.

The colonel said the enemy command had originally planned the second wave assault on the capital for this Monday but some unknown circumstances have prompted a delay.

The highest ranking Viet Cong officer to defect in the past was a lieutenant colonel. All other military defectors have been of lower rank.

Two North Vietnamese soldiers defected at Kontum Saturday.

A handful of political officials also have defected but so far as is known, none would be the equivalent of a full colonel.

Anyone with a validated MSU identification card can vote, including foreign, graduate and part-time students.

Voting Significant

Roger Williams, Choice 68 coordinator, says MSU has the potential for the largest student turnout in the country. He hopes at least 20,000 students will vote here.

The University of Michigan, which voted early, cast 11,000 ballots out of a possible 30,000. Only 8,000 voted in U-M student government elections this year.

Choice 68 spokesmen say at least 2 million students must vote for the project to have a "meaningful" impact on national policy.

Some 1,500 universities, colleges and junior colleges, with a potential vote of 6 million, have agreed to participate in Choice 68.

Computerized Vote

The vote will be tabulated by Univac computers, and the results of the poll will be released in New York May 2 or

3. Univac will also give a breakdown of the vote by school.

Choice 68 is sponsored by Time, Inc.

Robert Harris, national executive director of Choice 68, and an MSU alumni, will visit MSU Wednesday and will give a press conference. The time of his appearance is yet to be announced.

TELEPHONE WORKERS

Injunction blocks strike progress

Irate employees

AT&T workers block the doorway of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co. Bldg. in Detroit after more than 200,000 workers in 42 states went on strike April 18 for higher wages. UPI Telephoto

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The AFL-CIO Communications Workers said Sunday that court injunctions obtained by the Bell Telephone System blocked any immediate progress toward settling the union's four-day-old nationwide strike of nearly 200,000 telephone workers.

"It sets us back just at a time when the first sign of a breakthrough had appeared," said Joseph A. Beirne, President, AFL-CIO Communications Workers of America.

Beirne met Sunday with the union's executive board to consider an offer by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to resume bargaining in the nationwide wage dispute.

The union said the Bell system had obtained court injunctions in Alabama and Kentucky which order Bell workers to return to work even if it means crossing picket lines of telephone installers.

The 23,000 telephone installers, communications workers members employed by the Bell subsidiary, Western Electric Co., are picketing in some 40 states.

Beirne's remarks to newsmen were made a few hours after Ben S. Gilmer, president of AT&T, had issued a statement in New York saying management was "heartened by union statements suggesting improved prospects for settlement."

Approximately 140,000 Bell System operators, repairmen, clerks and other employees are striking in 15 other states and the District of Columbia, and 2,000 Western Electric manufacturing employees in Buffalo, N.Y., also are on strike.

Many Bell employees not on strike themselves are refusing to cross installers' picket lines.

"An anti-union strike injunction obtained by Bell in Alabama is so sweeping that it would make instant criminals of all 8,000 of the good and decent people who are our members on strike in that state," Beirne said.

The union said the injunction orders Bell employees to go back to work, and instructs the union against advising them to refuse to cross picket lines of the Western Electric installers.

"Legal advice is that to fully and completely comply we would have to withdraw picket lines and send southern Bell members back to work across picket lines," a union official said.

He said a statewide injunction issued in Kentucky is similar to the Alabama court order.

The text of Gilmer's statement: "Weekend telephone traffic is being handled without undue difficulty and we anticipate service will continue to improve with the resumption of the work week tomorrow. Management people who are filling in at the switchboard are gaining experience, and customer cooperation has been most gratifying."

"We are heartened by union statements suggesting improved prospect for settlement. The Bell Companies have told the Lost diplomatic pouches sought

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — Authorities searched Sunday for U.S. and Japanese diplomatic pouches and $700,000 worth of diamonds in the wreckage of a South African jetliner that crashed here Saturday night, killing 122 persons.

Thomas Taylor, the American diplomatic courier who was carrying the U.S. pouches, was one of six who survived the crash of South African Airways' newest Boeing 707. Taylor, 36, of Tahlequah, Okla., was reported in good condition.

The airline released names of three other American passengers, Dr. H. Fussmegeger, M.R.P. Roche and Ben Thomas. It gave no home towns and did not say whether any of them was the survivor whose name had not yet been made public.

The crash was among the most costly in lives in aviation history. It came just a year after a chartered Swiss plane crashed at Nicosia, Cyprus, killing 126 persons. The worst single-plane disaster was in February 1966, when a Japanese jetliner plunged into Tokyo Bay and all 133 on board were killed.

The South African jet had just taken off from Windhoek's J.G. Strijdom Airport, first of four stops between Johannesburg and London, when it began to wobble and then plummeted out of sight. Horrified watchers at the airport heard a crash and saw flames spurt into the sky.

The plane, delivered from the United States less than a month ago, shattered into four large pieces. Rescue teams had difficulty getting through rough, roadless terrain to the crash site, about six miles from the airport.

The airline said the plane had carried 116 passengers and a crew of 12.

By Sunday noon 90 bodies had been brought to a makeshift morgue in an airport shed for identification. South African Prime Minister Balthazar J. Vorster issued a message of sympathy to the families of the dead.

Police cordoned off a wide area around the crash site as they hunted for the diplomatic pouches and a shipment of diamonds reported to have been en route from Johannesburg to London.

The U.S. State Dept. in Washington said Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Owen Taylor of Tahlequah, has been a diplomatic courier since July, 1958. He is a graduate of Oklahoma State University and served with the U.S. Army in Germany from 1956 to 1958.

U.S. spokesmen in South Africa said Taylor had picked up the U.S. diplomatic pouches in South Africa but could give no further information. Authorities said Japanese diplomatic pouches also were reported aboard the plane.

CZECH LEADERS

Tolerance urged

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia's new Communist leaders served notice to the Kremlin Sunday that they will follow an independent course at the international conference of Communist parties in Budapest this week, demanding tolerance of views opposed to the Moscow line.

An editorial in the Czechoslovakian party newspaper Rude Pravo also urged the meeting opening Wednesday to prepare a Communist world summit conference to make amend to the Romanian party which withdrew its delegation from the preparatory conference in February following attacks on its independent policies.

Echoing the Czechoslovakian party's opposition to centralized Kremlin leadership in Eastern Europe, Rude Pravo said the conference in Hungary should uphold "the principle of non-interference and of respecting the independence of the various parties."

"It would greatly help if the practices of classical diplomacy and behind-the-scenes talks were eliminated ... and if the principles of openness and comradeship were applied," the editorial added.

The appeal for equality among Communist parties was seen here as a sign that the new leadership, headed by party chief Alexander Dubcek, was determined to oppose Soviet attempts to turn the Budapest meeting into another campaign for the re-establishment of control over the world movement.

Dubcek has based his party's new action program on complete autonomy from the Kremlin and a more active role in international affairs.

Without referring directly to the Chinese-Soviet feud, Rude Pravo said many complications and disunity in the past resulted from the "insensitive approach to differing views, the attempts to replace realistic ideas by wishful thinking."

It said the Budapest meeting should not make just another declaration against imperialism as the last one did, but conduct a "sober and thorough analysis of the real situation in the world and come forward with appropriate proposals."

DISCUSS WARS

Kosygin, Gandhi talk

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin stopped here on his way home from Pakistan Sunday for brief talks with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi on Vietnam and the Middle East.

"We came here to meet Prime Minister Gandhi and we have discussed most complicated questions, such as the situation in Vietnam and the Middle East," Kosygin told a news conference. "We also discussed relations between our two countries."

While Kosygin did not say so, he and Mrs. Gandhi discussed the question of a site for preliminary peace talks between the United States and North Vietnam, informants said. They gave no further details, however.

A communique issued in Rawalpindi after Kosygin's departure from Pakistan said the Soviet leader and President Mohammed Ayub Khan had expressed deep concern over the continuance of the war in Vietnam.

"They stated that normalization of the situation in Vietnam could be achieved on the basis of the observance of the Geneva agreements of 1954 and unconditional recognition of the Vietnamese people to decide their destiny without foreign interference," the communique said.

"The interests of universal peace demand that steps should be taken for a political settlement in Vietnam."

Kosygin did not go into any details with newsmen in New Delhi of his talks with Mrs. Gandhi or Ayub Khan.

"I have no comments to make on the talks," he said.

"Mr. Kosygin said all he had to say. That is all."

At the news conference, Indian newsmen asked Kosygin about Pakistan, which is feuding with India over Kashmir and other issues.

Kosygin said the Soviet Union is not contemplating any new initiative to bring India and Pakistan together in another conference like the one in Tashkent, U.S.S.R., in 1966. That meeting developed after India and Pakistan fought a brief border war.

"We do want relations between India and Pakistan to improve," Kosygin said. "The question of a meeting is up to the prime minister and President Ayub Khan. I am sure if they feel the need they will get together."

"Relations between India and the Soviet Union are very good, and we intend to do all we can to improve them further," he said. "At the same time we are in favor of the best possible relations between India and Pakistan and we believe that is possible."

Kosygin did not say what he and Mrs. Gandhi discussed on the Middle East.

The communique issued in Pakistan said he and Ayub Khan condemned "continuing acts of aggression of Israel against Arab states."

Business talk

Robert H. Lakamp, special assistant to the president of J. C. Penny, will speak on "Help Wanted—Brains" at 7:30 Monday, in the Teak Room of Epley Center.

The lecture, sponsored by Alpha Kappa Psi, professional business fraternity, is open to all students, especially business administration majors.

Protestant churches merge into United Methodist group

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Representatives of two Protestant denominations, divided by language in early American history, gathered here Sunday to inaugurate the largest church merger in U.S. history.

It will unite the 10.3-million-member Methodist Church and the 746,099-member Evangelical United Brethren Church (E.U.B.) to form a body of more than 11 million members—the United Methodist Church.

They share common spiritual and doctrinal traditions, going back to colonial times.

"German Methodists" and "Dutch Methodists," the forerunners of the smaller church were sometimes called because of their kinship with the "English Methodists."

But that early language difference, which was a main factor producing the separate denominations, has long since ceased to exist. Now with a plan of union drawn up and ratified by a majority of regional conferences of both churches, their elected representatives will meet to launch their unified communion.

That formal step will come in ceremonies Tuesday, following final separate meetings of the two churches Monday to complete preparations.

A huge, joint celebration of the Lord's Supper Sunday night in the Dallas Memorial Auditorium, led by Brethren Bishop Paul Milhouse of Kansas City, was the prelude to the union.

About 1,260 official delegates, 840 Methodists and 420 Brethren make up the uniting conference, along with hundreds of non-voting staff executives, theologians and visiting clergy and laity.

They came from throughout the country. Listed among the regular Methodist delegates is former Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, who is campaigning for the U. S. presidency.

To what extent he will take part in the two-week convention was uncertain. He has some campaign appearances scheduled in this area beginning Tuesday.

A Methodist magazine, World Outlook, calling him "the foremost political symbol of racism in this nation," has claimed his presence as a delegate would cast doubts on the church's efforts to get rid of segregation.

Moves to eliminate a separate Negro Methodist jurisdiction is part of the unification plan.

Both merging churches are results of previous mergers, one in 1946 forming the E. U. B. Church, and northern and southern Methodists uniting into the Methodist Church in 1939.

Both denominations have their roots in rural America of the late 1700's, their traveling preachers roving the frontier settlements.

Membership of the E. U. B. Church is heaviest in the Pennsylvania and Ohio section of the country, where their German speaking ancestors settled, while the Methodist Church, started by English-speaking settlers, is spread throughout the nation.

Search continues for King assassin

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — FBI agents have been given a new identification for the man they seek in the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., but the new identification seems to have muddled even more the mystery of who fired the single shot that killed King here the night of April 4.

The FBI had issued a conspiracy warrant last Wednesday for Eric Starvo Galt. Two days later the agency said a comparison of fingerprints found in the King investigation revealed that Galt in reality was James Earl Ray, a 40-year-old escapee from a Missouri prison.

The second identity was only the latest in a series of puzzles which have surrounded the few known facts of the investigation.

Witnesses who said they saw the alleged assassin in the flophouse from which the fatal bullet was fired said he appeared to be between 26 and 32 years of age. The FBI's Wednesday announcement said Galt had given his birth date as July 20, 1931 which would make him 36. Friday the FBI said Ray was 40.

The FBI also said Galt was said to be an avid dancer and took dancing lessons in New Orleans in 1964 and 1965, in Birmingham during September and October 1967 and in Long Beach, Calif., from December 1967 to February 1968.

But during the time Galt allegedly took dancing lessons in New Orleans, Ray was serving part of a 20-year term for armed robbery in the Missouri State Penitentiary at Jefferson City.

At the time Galt was attending a bartending school in California, a duplicate Alabama driver's license was mailed to him at a rooming house in Birmingham.

The woman who runs the flophouse here said the man to whom she rented a room just three hours before King was slain had a Southern drawl. The FBI said Galt liked country and Western music and drank beer and vodka.

In Jefferson City, an inmate of the Missouri prison, who said he "ran around" with Ray, said Ray-listed as a native of Illinois—did not have a Southern accent. "Jim didn't drink, except a little prison home brew," said the convict, who asked not to be identified. "He never talked about himself very much and never expressed any liking for music, dancing and he was too tight to gamble."

Galt seemingly was a free spender. Aside from the dancing lessons, which cost him about $500 in California alone, he paid $2,000 cash for a white Mustang that is now impounded in Atlanta, and attended the bartending school.

"He was tight as a tick," the Missouri convict said of Ray. "Boy, if you owed him money, even a few cents, he'd bug you to death."

The penitentiary inmate said he did not think Ray was the kind of man who would kill for profit. And the warden, Harold Swenson, who remembers Ray, added, "It's odd, but I won't believe he killed King until it is proven."

THE THINKING MAN'S CHOICE...

You can't just wish your way out of the kind of problems we've got today. You've got to think them through—and that takes a lifetime of getting ready.

Think about Viet Nam. A brutal conflict that tears the nation. A new kind of war against a new kind of enemy, that requires new concepts of concerted military, political, and diplomatic effort. This is a time when we must explore every avenue toward settlement—but keep up our guard against the temptations of a camouflaged surrender.

Think about your dollar. Weakened and shrunk by buy-now-pay-later politics, eaten by taxes, threatened by the balance of payments and the gold drain. It's going to take skill and understanding to get an $800 billion economy back on the track—and keep it there.

Think about your children. About their schools. Their college. Will there be a place for them? And the world they inherit. Will it be worth inheriting? Will they have a world to inherit?

Think about the cities. About the civil war ripping our nation apart. About violence and crime and despair. About the need for both the rule of law and the light of hope. About the new statesmanship needed to make our nation whole again by making our people one again.

Think about the world. Its complexity and its challenge. Russia. China. NATO. SEATO. the OAS, the UN. Europe. The Middle East. Africa. Latin America. Asia. Nuclear arms and diplomatic maneuvers. A world entering the most dangerous period in its history, and looking to the United States for leadership that can take it safely through.

Think about the Presidency. Its awesome powers and its lonely responsibilities. The range of things a President has to think about, know about. The great decisions that he alone can make, and that may determine the fate of freedom for generations to come—and even the survival of civilization.

Think about the one man who is best qualified for that office. With the sure hand, the balanced judgment, the combination of seasoned experience and youthful vigor. The one man who has gained a perspective on the Presidency unique in our time—from 20 years in public life, eight of them at the very center of power—followed by a rare opportunity to reflect and re-study, and to measure the pressing needs of America and the world in this final third of the 20th Century. The one man prepared by history for the world's toughest job—the one man who can really make a difference in these troubled, dangerous times.

Some right white action

Prejudice can be a subtle thing. It's internal; a predisposition that may be hard to define; a negative emotion that doesn't necessarily manifest itself in violence and disorder.

Discrimination is a more organized, less personal thing. It's a group function. One might not sell a house to a Negro—not for personal reasons, but rather because of reaction to the "community."

Both are made and perpetuated by man. Both are responsible for ghettos and riots... and things less obvious, like alienated individuals (you don't have to cross any "color" line to find that), angry youth, the neglected el-

...Awareness is a big thing—people don't like to admit discrimination or prejudice. Many people rationalize their attitudes away and shift the blame to someone else, anyone else.

Awareness—with this and more in mind, nearly 100 students have organized the Students for White Community ...Action. The name? Shades of militancy in its sound? White. WHITE groups have been criticized for attempting to "aid" BLACK communities -- it strikes some with a note of condescension.

But this organization has a new angle in mind—white people working with the white community to stir a recognition of subtle—or not so subtle—individual bias.

The organization is encouraging white students on campus to reach beyond token sympathy with the black community by active support, on the belief that white Americans can best understand and relate to other white Americans. It will take dedicated white Americans to shake down the status quo.

More frightening than any riot is a white response of indifference, counter-violence and rationalization. Without condoning rioters, it is at least possible to understand the forces and feelings that motivate them. The irrational, misdirected response of much of white America sends shivers down the spine today.

MSU's exceptionally large student population. Officials have noted that MSU could have the nation's largest single turnout. The results of CHOICE 68 will be announced sometime before the Indiana primary which is held on May 7. So, it could have considerable impact on the race between Democrats Robert Kennedy and Eugene McCarthy. And it could have great impact on the political climate in this country, but only if there is a large turnout nationwide.

That leaves it up to the individual student to decide whether he believes his opinion is important enough to go out and vote today, Tuesday or Wednesday. —The Editors

Students for White Community Action have taken a tiny, but necessary step towards channeling the efforts and emotions of white America towards the proper ends. Our only hope is that the start they have made now will not peter out after several weeks of enthusiastic effort.

For a project such as this to have any worthwhile impact, it will be necessary for those who are excited now with the first inception of the idea to continue their dedication in the future.

Hard work without visible rewards will be the only way to keep the organization alive. —The Editors

By MAX LERNER These are the weeks of the most important invitations in American society—the invitations to attend a college. Letters from the admission offices have been arriving at homes all over the nation, in cities, suburbs, small towns, ghettos. They carry the bursting lights of a Yes or the gloom of a No or the suspended limbo hope of a waiting-list Maybe.

They are crucial invitations because college and post graduate education has become the new imperative for social mobility and for an expressive life. They are crucial, also, because the university is no longer a decorative, cultural arabesque on the American landscape. It is taking its place alongside the business corporation as one of the two central power institutions of American life, as witnessed by what has recently been happening to Gene McCarthy and (in a negative way) to Robert Kennedy.

Inevitably, the university is the focus of the adolescent's dreams. To "make" the university of one's choice is to be part of the swirling currents of life; to be rejected is, for a time, a kind of death. Like it or not, that is what is happening in the inner world of the young—and, therefore, of their parents, too.

Don't underestimate the tensions that beset the entering college student. In the old days the question was how well the classes and grades would go, and for a girl, whether she would find someone to marry. Now the questions are more complex: how much political activism and commitment will there be? What about the drug subculture? For the girl, how free a sex life will she lead, and how openly? For the boy, what will be his attitude toward the draft when the time comes? For both sexes and races, what will they feel about Negro fellow-students, about black power, about the Afro-American societies that are coming to prominence on every important campus? And will they go on to postgraduate training or find work and a career right after college?

These are hard questions. They all have to do with the problem of roots, ties and values, or the lack of them. As I see the best of the new college generation, they are tearing up roots, breaking ties and rebelling against established values. But they are also looking to find new roots, to form new ties and develop values of their own. The two groups whom Prof. Keniston at Yale has so well studied—the "uncommitted" and the "young radicals"—don't comprise the whole of the important segment of the college generation. There is a third, less-defined, group which doesn't fit well either into the category of the estranged or the category of the New Left. They are more moderate about both politics and "hippiness." I call them the value rebels, and I am convinced that they will inherit the earth.

Take the Linda LeClair case at Barnard College as a starting point. Outwardly, it looks, at least to many parents, as if the daughter of a well-to-do family is caught in an unexcused sin. Linda had set up house more or less openly with a Columbia junior, and was seen to the Barnard authorities about her residence and her job. She is up for a hearing before a mixed board, largely of students, with some faculty and administration on it, and faces possible suspension. Sixty other Barnard girls have signed a statement saying that if Linda is guilty they are, too, because they have been doing much the same thing.

This is in itself an interesting event, an outgrowth of the draft resistance movement at various colleges. In effect, it is the tactic of shared guilt, as a form of participatory rebellion, if not participatory democracy. What they are saying is, "Don't expel one, expel us all," on the theory that if one is guilty, everyone is.

In moral terms, while it says that the sexual code is no longer there, it fails to deal with the question of truthfulness. If you allow yourself to lie about where you live, then why not about term papers, exams and the whole relation of a student to his work? It is this question of integrity, rather than the question of the sexual code, which is at the heart of it. And on this question the value rebels, who are re-examining the draft, marijuana, sexual behavior and almost everything else, are likely to come down squarely on the side of truthfulness, with others as with oneself.

I like the emphasis on the right of privacy which I find among many students today. The trouble with the LeClair case on this score is that the one unquestioned victim of it has been privacy. My own approach on the question of codes is that codes are needed for a life with meaning, just as roots and values are needed, but that they don't have to be the codes of a past age. The girls and boys grow into men and women—they will find codes and roots and values of their own. To help them do this, the college must meanwhile bring the students into the rule-making process and then ask them to live up to the rules they have themselves shared in making.

A political barometer: measure of individuals

For the next three days, MSU students have an unusual opportunity to express their views on the major issues of the day. Voting in CHOICE 68, the national collegiate presidential primary, starts today and will continue through Wednesday.

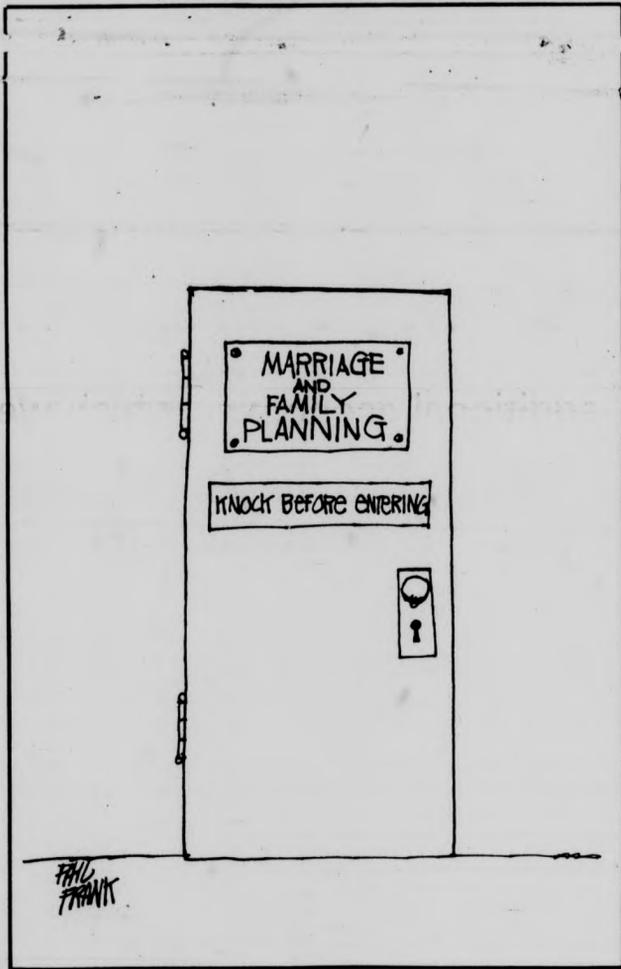

As well as voting for their presidential preference among 13 alternatives, students will also vote on three referenda questions, two of them on Vietnam and the other on the "urban crisis."

Most of the 1,500 participating colleges and universities will vote on Wednesday only, but the MSU CHOICE 68 organization chose to keep the polls open for three days in order to maximize the vote from MSU's exceptionally large student population. Officials have noted that MSU could have the nation's largest single turnout.

The results of CHOICE 68 will be announced sometime before the Indiana primary which is held on May 7. So, it could have considerable impact on the race between Democrats Robert Kennedy and Eugene McCarthy. And it could have great impact on the political climate in this country, but only if there is a large turnout nationwide.

That leaves it up to the individual student to decide whether he believes his opinion is important enough to go out and vote today, Tuesday or Wednesday. —The Editors

POINT OF VIEW

The truth concerning U.S. chemical warfare

EDITOR'S NOTE: Burke Zimmerman, asst. professor of biochemistry, wrote the following point of view to clarify some of the statements he was reported to have made during his Academic Days of Conscience lecture last week.

By BURKE ZIMMERMAN The State News last Thursday carried on page 6 an article covering my Academic Days of Conscience lecture on chemical and biological warfare. Unfortunately, your reporter confused a number of statements I made, and, as a result, I was seriously misquoted in a number of instances. It is possible that she equated the word "deployed" with "used" and thus attributed to me the statement that lethal nerve gas was being used in Vietnam. In any case it is necessary that my statements be corrected at once before I am accused of not knowing the subject or of deliberately making false, melodramatic statements for the sole purpose of arousing public indignation. Therefore, I shall repeat in this letter certain points which I made in my lecture which should be sufficient to clarify the matter.

There are at present seven chemical agents standardized for use by the U.S. military as described by the Army technical manual TM 3-215 "Military Chemistry and Chemical Agents." They are Sarin (GB) and VX, both lethal nerve gases; HD, a purified version of the mustard gas used in World War I; BZ, an incapacitant which temporarily slows or alters normal physical and mental activity and three so-called "riot control" agents: DM, a vomiting agent with effects lasting up to three hours, which "is not approved for use in any operation where deaths are not acceptable"; CS and CN, both of which are of the tear gas type and which have effects lasting only a few minutes. While all seven chemical weapons are being manufactured and deployed in areas of the world where they might be used at some future time, only the latter three, those of the "riot control" type, are authorized for use in Vietnam and can be used in military operations at the discretion of the field commander. One of these, DM, can cause death in massive doses or to weakened individuals but is not usually lethal. The nerve gases, mustard gas and the incapacitant BZ are not to my knowledge authorized for use anywhere. An executive order would be required for their use. However, the most serious chemical weapons used in Vietnam are not the so-called "riot control" gases, but the herbicides which have been used to destroy 1 million acres of crop land and defoliate a considerably larger area of jungle. Aside from being used to perpetrate the short term horror of starvation, the long term ecological effects resulting from the destruction of the land may be irreparable.

In the second paragraph, the State News article implied that I stated that many lethal chemical weapons were currently in use. In my lecture I referred to the lack of public outrage at the use of chemical weapons in general but emphasized the use of the three "riot control" agents (including the occasionally lethal DM) and herbicides in Vietnam and particularly the use of lethal nerve gas by the UAR against two villages in Yemen in early 1967, the only known use of nerve gas thus far.

To clarify other points stated incorrectly in the article:

- (1) No biological weapons are authorized for use without executive order. (2) The Germans did not use a lethal nerve gas in combat in World War II. They developed and manufactured the nerve gas Tabun (GA) in a plant eventually captured by the Russians and moved to Russia. Tabun is the predecessor to Sarin (GB) being made by the U.S. (3) With regard to the morality of using such weapons, I pointed out that children and old people would generally be more susceptible to chemical agents than an army of healthy young men. This was a bit garbled by the State News. (4) The reporter confused research grants with postdoctoral fellowships awarded for continuing study to those who have completed their doctorates. The postdoctoral fellowship stipends offered by Ford Detrick are approximately double those awarded by the National Institute of Health and the National Science Foundation. In addition, with Vietnam war expenditures having greatly reduced government funds available for basic research, many established scientists are turning to Defense Dept. supported research projects in chemical and biological warfare.

If anyone is interested in reading further on the subject of chemical and biological warfare, I recommend the articles by Elinor Langer in the Jan. 13, 1967, and Jan. 20, 1967, issues of Science, available in the library, and the August-September, 1967, issue of Scientist and Citizen. These references provided the principal sources of information for my Academic Days of Conscience lecture.

Program to help for disadvantaged

To the Editor: Recently, MSU performed a service that exemplifies one of the ways a university can contribute its resources to a program seeking to alleviate some of the educational and economic problems of the disadvantaged members of our society. The University hosted 165 people from the Detroit Urban Area Employment Project (UAEP) and conducted a series of talks describing the kinds of tasks performed by the various service departments on campus. The Detroit UAEP is one of five experimental demonstration programs currently being conducted in school districts throughout the country and is supported by the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity. The program has three interrelated objectives: to provide trained aides to assist the professional staffs of inner city schools currently faced with crowded classrooms and insufficient equipment and facilities; to provide meaningful jobs for the disadvantaged unemployed of the inner city in which they may develop marketable skills leading to economic self-sufficiency; to provide a channel of communication between the school and its surrounding community by which mutual trust and cooperation might be further developed.

The program is administered by the Detroit Board of Education in cooperation with the Mayor's Committee for Human Resources Development. After ten weeks of training, the aides are assigned to selected schools where they are employed as teacher aides, neighborhood aides, and clerical and monitorial service aides. Although the program is barely five weeks old, the aides have already demonstrated that they can contribute competently to increasing the educational effectiveness of the schools.

The Learning Service arranged for the aides to visit the MSU campus on Monday, April 15, to learn about some of the occupations in the service departments of a large university. Each department arranged to present a short talk describing its operations and the kinds of jobs performed by its personnel. The success of the tour was due to the willingness of the University staff members to expend time and effort in careful planning and scheduling, and to the informative talks presented.

I should like to convey to the following University staff members, who participated in the tour, the gratitude and thanks of the Detroit Board of Education and of each aide: Mrs. Phyllis

M. Goossen and James C. Totten, Information Services; Jack D. Seibold, Student Services; Miss Greta Lundquist, Miss Grace M. Masuda, Lyle A. Thorburne, and Mrs. Helen Widick, Food Services; Nelson Baines and Robert J. Emerson, Kellogg Center; Miss Donna Browell, Lauren P. Brown, and David E. Marquette, Central Services; Burt D. Ferris and Charles F. Kell, Grounds Maintenance; and Mrs. Patricia J. Lee and Miss Patricia C. McGuire, Learning Service.

For most of the aides this experience was their first opportunity to learn about how they might participate in the world of work toward which they aspire.

Lawrence T. Alexander, Professor and Assistant Director, Learning Service Consultant to the UAEP

Context missing

To the Editor: Needless to say, I was somewhat surprised to see a letter I submitted on Feb. 24 printed in Thursday's State News. Although it may still be relevant, the letter was written as a response to your editorial of Feb. 23, entitled "What price, Negro history?", in which you attacked the tactics of a group of black students who "demanded" inclusion of Negro history in the ATL curriculum. The publication of the letter would have been more appropriate had its intended context been mentioned.

Choice 68 candidates' views debated

By LINDA BEDNAR
State News Staff Writer

Nine MSU representatives of five Choice 68 candidates debated Friday night that their man had the best solutions to the Vietnam and urban crises.

Bill Greulich, Buchanan freshman, speaking for former Vice President Richard Nixon, called the urban crisis the "greatest crisis in the United States today."

He said that Nixon wants less governmental action as a solution, and more private enterprise action. Nixon would allow tax credits to private enterprise to "put more money into the slums to help people get out of the slums," and would use computers to find out who the poor are and what their qualifications are for jobs.

Greulich said that despite the Republican Party's reputation as a warmonger, "Nixon hopes for an honorable peace."

Tom Helma of Campus Alliance for Kennedy, a graduate student living in Spartan Village, cited the New York senator's record of support for urban legislations.

Robert Kennedy has proposed an Emergency Employment Act whereby "slum areas can get quick jobs," and he has sponsored an Industrial Incentive Bill and an Urban Housing Incentive Act to give tax incentives to businesses, Helma said.

He quoted Kennedy on government slum programs: "But I, their strongest advocate, must admit that they are not enough."

Bob Van Ravenswaay, Swarthmore, Pa., freshman, said Kennedy would negotiate a settlement over Vietnam. The first step would be to halt bombing of North Vietnam, he said.

An international inspection team including "all political elements" in Vietnam would be set up, Van Ravenswaay said. "The ultimate end must be to have free elections in North and South Vietnam," he said. "The present government in South Vietnam must cease to exist."

Ginny Osteen, Ft. McPherson, Ga., freshman, speaking for Fred Halstead of the Socialist Workers Party, said that "as long as the major parties continue to follow the policies of forcibly intervening in the affairs of other nations," no one man can hope to alter the system.

Miss Osteen called for the immediate withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam. "We believe in the democratic right of self-determination for all people," she said.

The Socialist Workers Party sees riots as "a legitimate rebellion by an exploited people against the government," Miss Osteen said. The party advocates black control of black communities, right of black people to bear arms under the Second Amendment to the Constitution, and federal funds to be placed in the hands of representatives of the black community.

Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., believes that the bombing of North Vietnam is not advancing our military or political objectives, and calls for permanent cessation, according to Phil Johnson, a graduate student living in University Village, and chairman of MSU Young Democrats.

McCarthy's program for ending and negotiating a settlement ing the war calls for reversing U.S. military escalation and negotiating a settlement, Johnson said. In arranging negotiations, he said, the U.S. must:

- stop the bombing and make a sincere effort to begin negotiations;
- halt U.S. search-and-destroy missions;
- draw back American troops and force the South Vietnamese to take the initiative.

-press the Saigon authorities to bring civilians into the government, including members of the National Liberation Front. Jerry Frendt, Smith Creek senior, speaking for California Gov. Ronald Reagan, said Reagan sees the United States committed through the SEATO treaty to uphold our commitment in Vietnam, and would "go in and finish the war "with a military victory."

Archery, tennis start this week

The individual archery tournament will begin at 5 p.m. today. Participants should call the I.M. office for their pairings.

Fraternity team tennis will begin at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Noon Friday is the deadline for entering residence halls and independent tennis teams, and sign up for the individual track meet.

Reservations for the I.M. tennis courts will begin today. The court lights will be on until 9 every evening, weather permitting.

Answer to OCC plan in 2 weeks

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

A decision on Off-Campus Council's (OCC) proposal to permit sophomores to live off campus with parental consent should come within the next two weeks from the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

T. Clinton Vobb, committee chairman, said the committee spent nearly all of Friday's meeting on the proposal and will discuss the financial aspects this Friday.

"We thought we were going to avoid that," he said, "but we can't." The group will talk with Roger E. Wilkinson, acting vice president for business and finance.

Allan B. Mandelstamm, chairman of the off-campus subcommittee working specifically with the OCC proposal, said that the subcommittee's report Friday was tentative and was meant more for preliminary discussion.

"We're not quite ready to say what we are going to do on the proposal," Mandelstamm said, "but I would anticipate that this Friday's meeting will be the last meeting to discuss the proposal." He said that there may be, however, a final wrap-up meeting to give final consideration to the proposal.

The committee's final report will concentrate on these three aspects:

- financial matters
- educational aspects
- the equities and inequities in giving permission for students to live in off campus housing.

The original OCC proposal was approved by OCC and ASMSU in November. ASMSU added an amendment that the proposal pertain to students who have been at MSU for three terms instead of to those of sophomore standing.

Cobb said then that some of the areas that needed consideration included ability of MSU to pay dormitory debts, apartment increases in East Lansing, and feelings of fraternities, sororities and parents.

If the proposal received approval by the faculty committee, it would need approval by Milton B. Dickerson, vice president for student affairs, and the Board of Trustees.

Other committee action included referral of a series of five ASMSU proposals to subcommittees who will be working on them this week.

These proposals, passed by ASMSU last week, would essentially shift the responsibility for governing student groups away from the administration and into the hands of the students.

N.Y. FAVORITE SON

Rockefeller: possible draft

By LINDA BEDNAR
State News Staff Writer

Nelson A. Rockefeller's name is still on the Choice 68 ballot although he recently withdrew from the presidential race for his third time in less than 10 years.

On March 21, the date of his withdrawal, he said: "I have said that I stood ready to answer any true and meaningful call from the Republican Party to serve it and the nation. I still so stand."

But he added, "I expect no call. And I shall do nothing to encourage such a call."

The 59-year-old New York governor supported Gov. Romney's candidacy for president last year. But after Romney dropped out of the race on March 1 this year, Rockefeller failed to get the support he expected. He received only about 10 per cent of the vote in the New Hampshire primary.

April 2, after his withdrawal, he received about 1.5 per cent of the GOP vote in the Wisconsin primary. He will not run in the Oregon primary in which he had his only great success in the 1964 race.

Rockefeller now finds it "clear that a majority of the party's leaders want the candidacy of former Vice President Richard Nixon."

But he will attend the national Republican convention as a favorite son, and he will accept a call from a majority of the delegates, he said.

Rockefeller was born in 1908, the son of John D. Rockefeller Jr. and Abby Aldrich Rockefeller. At Dartmouth College, he majored in economics, and was graduated as a member of Phi Beta Kappa in 1930.

In 1940, he was appointed by Franklin D. Roosevelt as co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs to investigate Nazi activity in South America.

After the war, Rockefeller founded the International Basic Economy Corp. and the American International Assn. for Economic and Social Development to provide assistance in such areas as education, health and roads.

In 1950, he was appointed to Truman's International Development Advisory Board. He served in the Eisenhower administration as chairman of the Advisory Committee on Government Organization; Undersecretary of Health, Education and Welfare; and Special Assistant to the President for Foreign Affairs.

In 1958, Rockefeller defeated Averell Harriman for governor of New York by over 500,000 votes, and was re-elected in 1962 and 1966.

During his nine years in office, Rockefeller has greatly expanded New York's higher-education system; built a $500 million complex of state offices in Albany; poured $300 million a year into the state transportation system; and implemented a $1 billion bond issue to halt pollution throughout the state.

In 1962 he divorced the former Mary Todhunter Clark, and in 1963 he married the former Margaretta Fittler Murphy.

Rockefeller has not stated his views on Vietnam. At his March 21 press conference he said that he disagreed with President Johnson's Vietnam policy.

"I think that our concepts

as a nation and that our actions have not kept pace with the changing conditions."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following are biographical and issue sketches of two more Choice 68 candidates. The national collegiate presidential primary begins on campus today and will continue through Wednesday. See story on page one.

Stassen: eternal candidate or formidable competition?

By DICK STOIMENOFF
State News Staff Writer

If persistence were the qualifying factor for a presidential aspirant, Harold Stassen would be a shoe-in this November.

Stassen, a 60-year-old Republican from Philadelphia is now entered in his fourth presidential race since 1948.

Las Vegas gamblers rate him darker than most horses at 1,000 to 1 odds. He is the constant butt of political jokes, witness a Johnny Carson monologue in which he told of the time Jack Benny checked in to a swanky hotel in New York. The clerk asked him if he'd like the Presidential suite. Benny declined, saying he'd like something as far from the Presidential suite as possible.

"OK," the clerk said. "We'll put you in the Harold Stassen room."

Even Stassen's own campaign manager admits his chances are extremely slim. But Stassen refers to himself as "an old political warhorse who can't stay away from the battle."

HAROLD STASSEN

Stassen's motives, however, show he is more of a politically concerned American rather than presidential candidate. His stand on the big issues bear this out. He believes the United States should halt all bombing of North Vietnam, cease all offensive action in the South, pull troops back to the population centers, and bring in the United Nations.

These ideas, he believes, will only be taken seriously if they come from a presidential candidate. "What happens to me as an individual is of no consequence," Stassen says. "The important thing is to get my ideas across, and I can do that best as a presidential candidate."

"I couldn't move any other Republicans on Vietnam," Stassen adds. "So I decided to run myself."

Stassen has at least one and twice re-elected. He achieved national recognition during these terms when he supported a labor law which provided for a cooling off period before strikes.

In 1945 he was a delegate to the San Francisco Conference and was a major figure in the drafting of the charter which founded the United Nations.

From 1955 to 1958 he served as Special Assistant for Disarmament to President Eisenhower. After that he lost some political prestige in unsuccessful bids for the governorship of Pennsylvania and later for mayorship of Philadelphia.

Stassen is a tireless campaigner but fails to attract the crowds of a Nixon or a McCarthy or a Kennedy. In Kenosha, Wis., a few nights before the primary, Stassen addressed a group of 50 students and professors at Carthage College. In the meantime, Richard Nixon was speaking to 3500 persons and assorted newsmen in Beloit.

But Senator Eugene McCarthy's unexpected success in the New Hampshire primary has caused many Republicans to take a second look at Stassen and his peace ideas.

Stassen recently told newsmen, "He's no threat to us here, but we're not laughing at him either. His peace campaign is attracting real support, especially among the students."

When Stassen isn't busy campaigning, he can be found in Philadelphia working at his successful international law practice.

World's shortest CPA aptitude test.

Problems stimulate me.
 Problems upset me.

If you want to earn a living in a field that constantly offers new and exciting perspectives—new problems to solve—consider the work of the CPA.

A CPA has to grasp the essentials of many different fields, and have the independence to form objective opinions about them.

He's more in demand than ever before, by corporations, non-profit agencies, government bodies at all levels.

Why? Because the increasing complexity of business requires new concepts of fact-gathering, problem-solving, and communication of economic information.

The CPA, for example, is one of the leaders in planning new ways to use computer systems. He might also be called upon to weigh the relative merits of social programs in terms of available resources, helping to shape an urban renewal program.

So if problems intrigue you, and if you have aptitude for concentrated, meticulous, creative thinking, you might make a good CPA—in a public accounting firm, in industry, education or government. At some point, you might even decide to form a firm of your own.

Talk with your faculty advisor. He can tell you about the courses that could lead toward a CPA certificate soon after graduation. Or you can do graduate work.

You can also learn about the work of a CPA in a booklet we'll be glad to send you. Drop a note or card to: Dept. A10, AICPA, 666 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10019

ACLU sends protest letter

A letter of protest over the closing of MSU classes and offices on Good Friday was sent to President Hannah and the Board of Trustees Tuesday by the Lansing branch of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Harold Hart, chairman of the Lansing branch, said in the letter that the Union regarded the action as "a violation of one of the important principles upon which this country was founded: the separation of church and state."

"We believe it particularly inappropriate that a public, tax-supported University officially recognize in this manner a ceremony peculiar to one religion," Hart continued.

Hart said that holidays of other religions on campus were not similarly recognized. He said students who did not wish to observe religious services had been deprived of part of the education they had paid for.

The action also used some public tax funds to pay faculty and staff while they attended church services, according to Hart.

Demonstration explores ESP

Herb Beyer will give a demonstration of extra-sensory perception at 7 tonight in Wonders Kiva.

The demonstration is open to the public without charge.

Prof favors truth in conversation

Misunderstanding in conversation was discussed by Donald Davidson, professor of philosophy in science and language at Princeton University, Thursday night at the term's first Isenberg Memorial Lecture.

Davidson's speech, "The Theory of Meaning in Metaphysics," dealt with truth and its relation between the speaker, the time and the sentence in a conversation.

"There must be a truth definition for the speaker and for the language," Davidson said. "In sharing a language we share the feeling of the world. Any acceptable translation will make listeners' and speakers' beliefs true."

Davidson defined misunderstanding as "error about what the other person (in the conversation) believes." Davidson stressed the conclusion that "increase in disagreement means decrease in intelligibility."

Misunderstanding occurs at either the point of translation or when the message causes a divergence from the receiver's own doctrines.

Davidson also stressed the importance of a speaker's location in time and space in metaphysics.

In order to promote better understanding in conversation, Davidson recommends concentration on "using verbs as predicates that relate to objects and events."

The cables, providing service to a North Lansing residential area, were cut sometime between late Saturday night and early Sunday morning, the company said. The cables were cut by vandals, said George Voorhis, area commercial manager for Bell.

The company immediately posted a $5,000 reward, which would remain in effect until July 1, for information leading to the arrest of the vandals.

Michigan Bell said it put together an overtime effort, and had all the phones working by Sunday morning. Some of the severed cables had been patched together by Saturday night.

Voorhis said, "It's more than a coincidence," when asked if the vandalism was related to a strike by 18,200 Michigan Bell workers, part of a nationwide phone strike.

"You'd really have to know what you're doing to cut them where they were cut," he said. "Some were cut right inside an apparatus cabinet. You need a special tool to get into the cabinet."

LARGEST GRANT TO AID

'U' receives funds

Gifts and grants totaling $3,325,498.75 were accepted Thursday by the University's Board of Trustees.

Included was a grant for $549,000 from the Agency for International Development (AID) to continue a study for the government of Thailand on how to improve graduate education in Thailand.

The study, which began in 1967, is being conducted by the Institute for International Studies in Education Dr. James T. Bowen, professor of agricultural economics, and Dr. Glenn L. Johnson, professor of agricultural economics.

The Agency for International Development granted $330,000 to the Consortium for the Study of Nigerian Rural Development (NSRD) to complete a three-year-old research and planning program on rural development in Nigeria.

The consortium, which has its headquarters at MSU, also includes Colorado State University, Kansas State University, the University of Wisconsin, the federal government, and the Research Triangle Institute, a private foundation in North Carolina.

Since its inception, researchers have produced 27 major documents on the development of agriculture and related subjects in Nigeria. Dr. Glenn L. Johnson, professor of agricultural economics, is director of the consortium.

Terrence Carey, director of admissions and scholarships, will administer a $295,649 grant from the National Merit Scholarship Corporation of Evanston, Ill. The funds provide grants from $100 to $1,500 to the 662 Merit scholars attending MSU.

Grants are based on need and scholarship. Additional research in the diffusion of innovation in rural societies is being supported with a $254,340 grant from the Agency for International Development. Dr. Everett M. Rogers, professor of communication, is director of the program which has been underway since 1964. The research, which has been conducted in India, Brazil, and Nigeria, will produce information on how to communicate new agricultural methods to peasants.

The Instructional Media Center received a $200,000 grant from the U.S. Office of Education to continue developing instructional media for faculty who teach undergraduate courses. The grant will be administered by Dr. Elwood E. Miller, assistant professor of education.

The Head Start Evaluation Research project received a $144,206 grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity to continue its research and evaluation in Head Start programs in Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Head Start was established to assist the culturally disadvantaged. Dr. Robert P. Roger, associate professor of home management and child development, directs the MSU program.

Bill Stout, professor of agricultural engineering, will continue his research of agricultural mechanization in Africa under a $125,000 grant from the Agency for International Development.

A $114,260 grant from the National Institutes of Health will provide continuing support for MSU's graduate training program in animal behavior. The five-year program, completing its first year, is designed to train about 30 doctoral and postdoctoral animal behavior scientists. The grant is directed by Dr. James C. Bradlock, professor of zoology.

The National Science Foundation has granted $104,600 to 20 MSU physicists for continued theoretical studies of electronic processes in solids.

Scholarship funds totaling $330,839.95 were also accepted by the Board.

'Big bang' theory links stars to mystery of elements

By STEVE GATES
State News Staff Writer

Why is there air, earth, fire and water? According to the theory of a noted California Institute of Technology astrophysicist, the basic chemical elements were formed successively in a "big bang," in supermassive stars, and then in normal stars like our own sun.

The problem of the origin of the elements antedates science itself, said William A. Fowler, professor of physics at Caltech. However, the problem has become increasingly more complex, as the number of known elements has grown from the four postulated by the ancient Greeks—air, earth, fire and water—to the 104 elements and approximately 1,500 isotopes of those elements known today.

The big breakthrough in the search for an explanation of the elements, said Fowler, was the discovery of the neutron in 1932.

Using various combinations of neutrons, with the already-known protons and electrons, scientists could then theorize the building of any element or isotope.

The theory advanced by Fowler to explain the existence of the elements is a modification of the "Big Bang" theory suggested by another noted physicist, George Gamow.

The theory states that the universe was formed over 10 billion years ago in a single explosion of a huge mass of extraordinarily concentrated electrons, protons and neutrons.

This explosion, suggests Fowler, produced primarily hydrogen and helium, the two lightest elements, and a tremendous quantity of heat. In fact, if the recently-discovered existence of a uniform "temperature" of space radiation of 2.7 degrees Kelvin (barely above absolute zero) is the result of this explosion, then the explosion can be calculated to have produced temperatures of about 10 billion degrees Kelvin.

After a brief few million years of forming a number of the elements, these heavy stars then presumably exploded, scattering their elements throughout space.

Vandals clip phone cables in Lansing

By UPI
Telephone service for 1,600 residents of Michigan's capital city was restored Sunday morning, after vandals had "pretzily" cut seven main cables as a strike by Michigan Bell Telephone Co. workers went into its third day, the company said.

The cables, providing service to a North Lansing residential area, were cut sometime between late Saturday night and early Sunday morning, the company said. The cables were cut by vandals, said George Voorhis, area commercial manager for Bell.

The company immediately posted a $5,000 reward, which would remain in effect until July 1, for information leading to the arrest of the vandals.

Michigan Bell said it put together an overtime effort, and had all the phones working by Sunday morning. Some of the severed cables had been patched together by Saturday night.

Voorhis said, "It's more than a coincidence," when asked if the vandalism was related to a strike by 18,200 Michigan Bell workers, part of a nationwide phone strike.

"You'd really have to know what you're doing to cut them where they were cut," he said. "Some were cut right inside an apparatus cabinet. You need a special tool to get into the cabinet."

'Good, Bad and Ugly' a satisfying film

By STUART ROSENTHAL
Entertainment Writer

The most violent thing about "The Good, The Bad and the Ugly" is the going over that it gives the conventional western. As such, it is one of the most satisfying commercial films to play in Lansing this year.

Sergio Leone raked in several "fistfuls of dollars" with "Fistful of Dollars" and "For a Few Dollars More," the infamous pair of quickie Italian westerns which substituted a conglomeration of violence and sadism for plot and set critics and protective mothers to gnashing their teeth. This time Leone has turned against the very elements that he has heretofore successfully exploited, mercilessly puncturing all of screenland's cowboy clichés.

My favorite bit involves the talking shootouts that are so vital to the "adult" horse opera, with the villain tracking down the good guy, or vice versa, and lecturing the poor target for five or ten minutes on his motivations and hang-ups. This time when one of Teco's (Eli Wallach) nemesis, cornering his prey in a tubfull of suds, launches into the obligatory harangue, he gets a soap-coated slug for his effort.

"Senor," Wallach addresses the corpse, "when you have to shoot, shoot—don't talk."

There's no point in questioning Teco's absurd practice of bathing with a pistol in the water; it's typical western happenstance as is every other incident throughout the flick's quickly passing two and a half hour duration. Even the plot is irrelevant and subordinate to the sham violence and contrived suspense. This is to say that, in fine satiric form, "Good, Bad and Ugly" is structured exactly after the stock American western.

The same concept finds its way into the camerawork with its profusion of tight closeups of faces and trigger fingers. Cinematically, virtually every sequence will strike you as having been lifted from some long forgotten oater.

The film will disappoint blood and guts gluttons and tongue in cheek lovers because of its consciously absurd nature. The violence is too excessive to be objectionable (another salient point of satire) and although the corpses accrue rapidly, the viewer never becomes well enough acquainted with the victims to be emotionally affected by their passing.

There is no real violence without mental anguish, an element that is unequivocally absent in this and most other westerns. This constitutes criticism of the lack of personal interaction between character and viewer in the usual prairie spectacle.

It should be noted that Leone goes even beyond the level of surface satire in his lambasting. Most of his symbolism is obvious but pointed, such as playing the final triangular showdown in what appears to be an arena encircled by slopes of graves extending on all sides beyond the range of the camera.

With this work, the Italian director seems to have adequately covered the western. But if "The Good, The Bad and The Ugly" is any indication of his potential as a satirist, it might be hoped that Leone will turn his attention to other American film cycles. I can hardly wait for "Fistful of Dollars on Wheels" or "The Good, The Bad, and the Ugly Go Hawaiian."

"Secret War of Harry Frigg"

"The Secret War of Harry Frigg" is Paul Newman's first straight comedy vehicle and it might have been a lot better had Newman not been in it.

The method actor who established his style in such hits as "Hud" and "Cool Hand Luke" apparently cannot turn his technique to comedy. Despite the adaptation of a new set of mannerisms, the title character is transparent and more often ludicrous than humorous.

Newman is a World War II private who has spent more time in the stockade for insulting officers than he has in the ranks. Consequently, he has become the number one escape artist in the armed forces and is assigned to effect the breakout of five allied brigadier generals being held by the Italians.

The catch is that the officers are being treated as royalty in the chateau where they are imprisoned, a situation which somewhat diminishes their desire to be liberated, so they use their equality of rank as a point of dissension forestalling the formulation of any plan of escape.

The officer-hating Frigg, then, is given an instant promotion to the rank of major general, permitting him to 1) command the unit of top brass and 2) give vent to his intense contempt for officers. He, however, falls victim to the charms of the widowed countess whose castle is being used as a makeshift prison-hotel.

The developments are mildly amusing, but not particularly side splitting with Newman's slump-shouldered, back-home, a couple of weeks to a mild turnout. Perhaps it's best, as far as Newman's reputation is concerned, that Harry Frigg's War remains as secret as possible.

"Billion Dollar Brain"

It seems as though it is impossible in a series of films to maintain a consistent level of quality, especially in the secret agent market.

James Bond and Derek Flint created considerable stir with "Dr. No" and "Our Man Flint" but by the time "Thunderball" and "In Like Flint" make the rounds, the excitement had worn down to less than a quiver's worth. The disintegration was even more drastic in the case of the Dean Martin-Matt Helm adventures which began with the veritable fun-fest, "The Silencers" and immediately decayed into the tripe mold of "The Ambushers" which dismayed even Martin's most fanatic fans.

The most disappointing decline, however, is Michael Caine's descent from the highly acclaimed "Ipcress File" to "The Billion Dollar Brain," the current Harry Palmer opus which just opened at the Lansing Drive-in Theater.

In this one, the bungling Palmer is pitted against one of those lavish organizations which populate all of today's espionage tales. The "Crusade for Freedom" is the brainchild of one self-styled General Midwinter who perceives of himself as the messiah of the downtrodden Reds. "God," he insists, "told us to fight the Communists. And He has made me His tool." Opining that the air in his home state is the only really wholesome air in the world, Ed Begley's performance falls right into line with every other "eccentric Texas bigot" portrayal of the last five years.

While Begley plans the Latvian uprising with the able assistance of his billion dollar computer complex, Karl Malden is capitalizing upon his knowledge of cybernetics by feeding the machine phony data which induces it to place into his hands a million dollars in salaries for non-existent agents.

In trying to recapture the wonderfully haphazard, sloppy appeal of the "Ipcress File" which waned considerably in the subsequent "Funeral in Berlin," the "Spying is a rotten, dreary business" and "Everybody is out for themselves" routines have been emphasized. Even at that, "Brain" is much too slick to fulfill the promise of the initial Palmer film.

Good, Bad, but not Evil

Clint Eastwood, The Good, takes a break with Lee Van Cleef, The Ugly, in the hilarious satiric western "The Good, The Bad and The Ugly," now playing at the Gladmer.

CHOICE '68 is unique. CHOICE '68 is important. CHOICE '68 has impact. And CHOICE '68 needs YOU. You can make CHOICE '68 a success. By simply casting a ballot. More than 1500 colleges and universities representing 6 million students are participating in this first national collegiate presidential primary. Liberals and conservatives, radicals and reactionaries, politicians and non-partisan officials will carefully view the results. And no one can ignore the millions of opinions registered in a single election. So, if you're concerned about potential Presidential candidates or the war in Vietnam or the urban crisis then CHOICE '68 is for you. Register your opinion. Join the movement. And help make this the year of the CHOICE, the year in which students could not be denied. VOTE TODAY. Voting will be held at residence halls, greek houses, Bessey and Berkey Halls, the International Center and the Union. And as a special convenience for students, a mobile polling booth will be circulating the campus.
