Nixon lauded for 'great' comeback

Nixon leads

Former Vice President Richard Nixon is leading the Republican balloting for the presidential nomination, Nixon made a campaign stop in Lansing and at MSU spring term.

State News photo by Bob Ivins

Richard M. Nixon, acclaimed for "the greatest Political comeback in American history," was placed in presidential nomination Wednesday night before a tumultuous Republican National Convention already prepared to award him its greatest prize.

Gov. Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland offered the convention the name of the man who had the votes, after long hours of speech making and demonstration for his rivals and favorite son candidates.

There were more to come before the convention finally settled into the business for the roll of states to count their votes.

An Associated Press tabulation of first ballot commitments at midnight showed Nixon with 681 votes, 14 votes more than he needed for a first ballot victory.

His rivals, Govs. Nelson Rockefeller of New York and Ronald Reagan of California, trailed far behind.

Agnew said Nixon was the man "not only to match this moment, but to master it."

He described the former vice president this way:

"A man firm in upholding the law, and determined in the pursuit of justice. A man who can negotiate peace without sacrificing life, land or liberty. A man who had the courage to rise up from the depths of defeat six years ago, and to make the greatest political comeback in American history."

This was a reference Nixon's 1962 defeat in a race for the governorship of California. After that setback, Nixon did a bitter — but temporary — farewell to politics.

Candidate Reagan came to the Convention Hall area, but observed the etiquette of the game and stayed outside, in the white trailer that serves as his communication center.

Senator Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, said by one top Republican to be Nixon's likely choice of a running mate, said he had heard nothing about it.

Nixon was said by aides to be working on his acceptance speech, in his penthouse on the 18th floor of the Hilton Plaza Hotel, a long traffic jam from the Convention Hall.

He had a television set tuned to the convention, talked frequently with his campaign manager John Mitchell, who is in a communication trailer outside the hall.

"Our men are on the floor working and everything is going well," Mitchell told his candidate.

Rockefeller's name was placed in nomination by Governor Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylvania, who called his candidate "a new Lincoln."

"We should nominate Nelson Rockefeller because he is the Republican who can win," Shafer said. Rockefeller partisans responded with constant cheers amid a waving array of placards.

He offers us a politics of realism that tells it as it is to all Americans," Shafer said. He said the party has a chance to serve "and perhaps save the nation by nominating Rockefeller."

And Rockefeller fans responded with another of the long, loud, band playing, sign-waving demonstrations staged on the crowded floor for each of the contenders.

Bursts of "We Want Rocky" interrupted Shafer's speech.

Popping balloons dropped from nets overhead punctuated the well rehearsed out bursts, as the names of the candidates were formerly enrolled.

The speeches droned on for hours, most of them for token candidates, men like Sen. Hiram L. Fong of Hawaii, Sen. Frank Carlson of Kansas, Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas. Each had his manufactured demonstration, his moment in the spot light.

U.S. to release N. Viets, asks freedom for airmen

PARIS (AP) — W. Averell Harriman, U.S. peace negotiator, announced Wednesday the forthcoming release of 14 North Vietnamese sailors held by the United States. He asked freedom for more U.S. airmen held in North Vietnam.

Freeing the sailors was a gesture of goodwill like the recent North Vietnamese release of three American pilots, he said after meeting at the peace table with Hanoi's delegates.

"I asked for a list of those being held as an act of humanity," Harriman told newsmen.

He appealed especially for the names of those injured, and of those held for a long time.

The chief North Vietnamese delegate at the session, Ambassador Ha Van Lau, said his government takes a humane attitude toward the men it holds. The North Vietnamese claim to have captured about 1,000 American airmen. They have released six this year.

A U.S. spokesman said the 14 sailors, captured in 1966 when torpedo boats attacked U.S. vessels, are the last North Vietnamese in American hands and they will be freed soon.

Lau said he would consult his government about how to handle the release. Most North Vietnamese captured by U.S. forces have been turned over to the South Vietnamese.

Harriman had no progress to report from the 16th session of the talks, which are now almost three months old. Another meeting will be held next Wednesday.

The North Vietnamese insisted, as they have from the start, that the United States must stop bombing them before the talks can go on to other subjects. Harriman recalled that President Johnson already had limited the bombing.

So far, he said, there had been no response that would justify the risks that a complete bombing halt would bring for U.S. troops.

"The United States is ready to end our limited bombardment if our restraint is matched by restraint on your side," he added.

Lau replied: "We reject those proposals."

'U' employes to get 6 per cent wage hike

By JIM SCHAEFER
State News Staff Writer

A contract for the new fiscal year, ratified by the nonacademic employees union Tuesday, was signed Wednesday by representatives of the union and the University.

The contract, the third annual, provides for a basic 6 per cent increase in wages, ranging from 12 to 23 cents hourly, retroactive to July 1, 1968.

A previous version of the proposal, submitted by the union's bargaining committee on July 15, had been rejected by union members. The issues were reportedly an increase in pay rates, an across the board raise and a cost of living proposal.

Robert Grosvenor, a union official, said the vote on the proposal was by secret ballot with 56.5 per cent approving the recommended ratification.

In the agreement signed Wednesday, the Union obtained an agency shop measure with the provision that all MSU employees in the classifications covered by the contract either will pay Union dues or an equivalent service charge.

Exempt from the time being are 23 employees who signed letters of personal conviction against joining a union of any kind. Settlement on that is pending between legal representatives and the Union.

A cost-of-living allowance beginning July 1, 1969 was included among the other provisions and benefits. A first for MSU, it is based on a one-center-per-hour boost for each 0.5 point increase in the average Consumer Price Index for the first three

Ike making progress after major attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower was reported making some progress Wednesday, a day after suffering what doctors called another major heart attack.

The outlook was still "guarded," Army doctors explained that the word meant that "in this early period after any heart attack, the outcome is unpredictable."

In his suite at Walter Reed Army Hospital, Eisenhower was being given oxygen continuously. He was being fed a low salt, liquid diet by mouth.

Doctors said they were not permitting him to watch the proceedings of the Republican National Convention on television. But there was backing for their report of progress in the additional word that "he has been appropriately advised by his aides" on what goes on in Miami Beach.

Visitors were restricted to the immediate family, including Mrs. Eisenhower, who has been with her husband since he was brought to Walter Reed last May, and their son, John Eisenhower.

Eisenhower, 77, had been recovering from a major heart attack of June 15 when he was stricken again early Tuesday with his sixth attack since 1955 and third this year.

Asked how the new attack compared with the seizure of June 15, which had been termed a major one, the doctors said: "Equal severity."

The doctors have referred to the latest attack as a myocardial infarction, characterized by damage to the heart muscle.

MSU student loses state representative bid

An MSU student lost a bid for the Democratic nomination for state representative from the 59th district, and the Republican incumbent, Charles J. Davis, Onondaga, easily defeated his opponent in Tuesday's primary election.

See related story, page 10

Mario Fundaro, Warren senior, lost to Terry Black by an unofficial count of 1,269 to 397 in the Democratic contest, while Davis defeated Republican challenger Victor H. Meier by a count of 4,528 to 1,438.

In the race for the Republican nomination for Ingham County prosecuting attorney, Raymond L. Scodeller smothered his opponent Norman C. Farhat by the unofficial count of 10,559 to 5,704. Democrat James J. Weed was unopposed for the same post and will face Scodeller in November.

There was no race for the nomination for Ingham County sheriff as Kenneth L. Preadmore, Republican, and Thomas Steinfatt, Democrat, ran unopposed.

The two nominations for judges of the 2nd district Court of Appeals were won by S. Jerome Bronson and John F. Foley.

ON BLUE RIBBON REPORT

Ellsworth praise mixed

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a four part series by staff writer Deborah Fitch on the Blue Ribbon Committee and report re-evaluating ASMSU structure and functions. This fourth article deals with the ASMSU chairman's response to the recommendations.

By DEBORAH FITCH
State News Staff Writer

Peter Ellsworth, board chairman and champion of the infant Blue Ribbon Committee, doesn't like everything the committee had to say about ASMSU.

He thinks they did a thorough job of exploring the areas designated in the report, but that other ASMSU areas should have been covered. He does, however, recognize the importance of the areas covered.

Ellsworth spoke first about the committee's cabinet re-arranging recommendations which would disband the cabinet as it now exists and substitute the ASMSU Activities Commission.

"The section on the cabinet is most comprehensive," Ellsworth said. "It is a complete re-evaluation and there are some good ideas there."

He said that his concern over the plan would lie with the proposed commission's ties—or the lack thereof—with the board.

Ellsworth thinks that as long as the board still retains financial responsibility for the actions of the commission, they should retain some sort of authority over its planning as well. In other words, the commission in its current form would be a bit too autonomous for the board's liking.

He also has his doubts about the advisability of the commission electing its own chairman, even though the board would have to approve any election before it went into effect. Another complaint about the commission idea is the commissioner in charge of personnel planning. Ellsworth says the problem with cabinet personnel is "not recruiting people, but keeping them."

His other commission complaint is that, in the report, five of the seven commissioners are listed "undesignated as to area" of responsibility. His opinion is that the areas of responsibility should first be categorized, then be assigned commissioners.

EDITORIAL

The System: bigger than Hershey

"Dump the Hump" groups have had one of their underpinnings pulled out from under them. The vice-president-who-hopes - to - become - President last week announced that he has his own "dump" campaign - aimed at Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System.

Echoing Eugene McCarthy, Humphrey has promised that if he is elected he will fire Hershey seemingly because, as Humphrey stated, Hershey "has indicated that George Wallace would be the best candidate for the presidency for his office to work with."

Humphrey also said that he takes a dim view of Hershey's adamant stands against any reforms in the Selective Service System.

Whether Humphrey's motive is sincere or a political move to meet McCarthy's challenge is uncertain. But the promise to dump Hershey, regardless of motive, deserves wholehearted support.

Though Gen. Hershey is undoubtedly sincere in his office, his conduct is alien to a responsible democracy.

Though 74-years-old and nearly blind, he is among those most responsible for perpetuating one of the most unequal, undemocratic and archaic institutions in this country--the draft. With the need for increased kill-power in Vietnam, Hershey has had to stoop to some rather low tactics to make sure that the armed forces are filled up. Suggesting a blank check for drafting dissenters, and confused inductive against graduate schools, are two examples.

Hershey has had his post for a long time--too long. He was automatically retired in 1953 when he was 60, but President Eisenhower reinstated him and he still remains.

But even though Hershey is open to strong criticism, Congress has hindered him very little. The latest draft law reflects the current mood of "guns and little butter." In this case, it is the butter of education and individual human development.

If Humphrey were elected and the only thing he did was remove Hershey, he'd have a major accomplishment under his belt. But the system is bigger than Hershey. For real progress, that system must be totally revamped.

No matter who is nominated and later elected; Republican or Democrat, one of his primary tasks must be that re-vamping job. The Republican platform calls for a voluntary army after the Vietnam war is ended, and the Democrats may come up with a similar proposal. Hopefully, the nominee who makes it to the Presidency will carry out such a move.

DEBBIE FITCH

How (not?) to save yourself

EDITOR'S NOTE: "I've sat through hurricanes, but tornadoes are new to me," said Debbie Fitch, Tampa, Fla., junior and State News staff writer, when she submitted this column describing her experiences (all true) Monday evening when the area was under "tornado warning."

I was sitting in my garage... me, roommates Ina and Sue, our two dogs, one gerbil and half a bottle of Mohawk wild cherry brandy.

We were waiting for the tornado. By the time I had downed one brandy, I was beginning to feel far more like a wet idiot (the garage door was open) than Dorothy with her Toto.

Ina was a great help. She provided us with her mattresses, a couple of Cokes and enough panic to last through several tornadoes. A hurricane and a good-sized monsoon. She completed her tornado precautions by fitting her head into our various kitchen pots as protection for when "all that junk falls on me."

Sue, the calm one, supervised our hasty exodus to the garage. She figured out that we should be in the south west corner of our abode for the best shelter from tornadoes. This would, in truth, place us in the garage. How grateful we all were to Sue when the radio announcer told us to take shelter in an inside closet if there was no accessible basement, which there wasn't. That's when we entertained thoughts of transporting the whole crew to the bathtub, but I suppose that would have been even more ludicrous.

Sue was philosophical, though "You guys look ridiculous in there," she said from her vantage point in the middle of the driveway. "Come out and look at this interesting cloud formation." She's intellectual as well as calm. Frankly, I think she's been hanging around the dogs too much.

Alfie, the more insane of the two dogs, managed to get back inside the house even though he was chained to the garage side of the kitchen door. In doing so, he nearly throttled Luke, the puppy, who was chained to the same side of the same door. Luke didn't yelp or anything, just peed, since he is still at that charming stage of "pee now, think later." Only he never gets to the thinking part.

The gerbil wasn't particularly upset; he probably knew more about tornadoes than all the rest of us put together. He did jump a trifle when both Luke and Alfie started for him at once, but what with Ina screaming that she couldn't find a pot that fit, Sue looking for candles and giving orders and me laughing, the concentrated attack on Gus (the gerbil) subsided in general damp confusion.

After about an hour of waiting for a tornado--any tornado--I was beginning to get a bit restless. Not Ina, Sue, Alfie and Luke, however.

Ina consumed the brandy and some of her logic course. Sue seemed absorbed in an interesting-looking book of dubious character. Alfie passed out from lapping up the brandy that he knocked over and Luke concentrated on discovering excitingly different and exotic ways to relieve himself.

In the face of all this activity, I went through great strain trying to figure out how we were going to explain our presence in the garage with all our survival equipment to our other roommate when she came home.

Ina is optimistic about the whole experience. "Next time," she says, "we'll be able to evacuate in about 68 seconds."

You and who else, Ina Baby?

JOSEPH ALSOP

Those uninvited guests

EDITOR'S NOTE: At the time of writing, neither Joseph Alsop nor the editors know who will be the Republican nominee for the Presidency as you probably do now. But whether it is Richard Nixon or not, Alsop has some valuable comments on the political mood of the nation.

MIAMI BEACH-- The wisecracks now say that, if nominated by the Republicans, Richard Nixon will assume a middle-of-the-road posture instead of seeking to win a majority in November by stealing votes from former Gov. George Wallace. The majority of old-fashioned politicians are still urging this decision; and Nixon is a pretty old-fashioned politician himself.

Yet, in order to judge the real mood of the country, one must look beyond the confines of the Republican National Convention, as yet so dreary and routine, to the standing among the voters of the rather conspicuously uninvited guests. If you begin with Wallace, you can easily see why some of the harder-nosed Nixon people have been tempted by a bolder, far more right-wing electoral strategy.

The fact is that too many people have been bemused by the more glamorous opinion tests, between Nixon and Gov. Nelson Rockefeller against Vice President Hubert Humphrey and Sen. Eugene McCarthy. Yet the obviously correct way to gauge the national mood is quite different, unhappily.

The glamorous tests appear to indicate that the American center is still predominantly Rockefeller, nearer to the center than Nixon, regularly does better than the former vice president. When it is Nixon versus Humphrey, the latter, again nearer to the center, looks like a very good bet. But this superficial appearance leaves out two key facts.

The first is quite simple. The 35 per cent plus of the voters who automatically choose Nixon are the basic, old-line Republicans who would go for Nixon if he had Fidel Castro on the ticket with him. The second is also simple. The people who choose Wallace would all be Nixon supporters, if the Alabama racist could just be induced to go home and shut up.

If you look at what would happen if Wallace, by some miracle, were persuaded to go home and shut up, you find that, as of now, Nixon would have a commanding majority in a race against Humphrey. And you further find that if Nixon could only steal 60 per cent of Wallace's current support, he would still be in the lead, albeit by a much narrower margin, in the country as a whole and even in the states above the Mason-Dixon line.

As of now, in short, adding Nixon's old-line Republican support to Wallace's racist and white supremacist support, you find that the country's mood is further to the right than it has been in a good many decades. This is the real meaning of the sudden stir of conservative resistance to Nixon balancing the ticket with a running mate from the opposite wing of the Republican Party.

Whatever that stir may lead to, one thing is already clear. If Nixon is the final Republican choice, the campaign he will wage will be directly keyed to this national mood. By October he will be seeking to pick up votes among the Wallace enthusiasts, without regard to his vice presidential choice.

That leads, in turn, to the other uninvited and conspicuously absent guest here in Miami Beach. Vice President Humphrey is the virtually certain Democratic nominee. He will inherit the leadership of a discontented, divided and depressed party.

Even without reaching for the Wallace voters, Nixon is also the unique Republican, except maybe Gov. Ronald Reagan, who can be counted on to unite and to revivify the Democrats. If the Republicans should make a public nonsense of the wisecracks by nominating Rockefeller, the salvation of the Democrats would then be unimaginable. Their divisions, their dispiritedness, their backbiting would all be stimulated instead of cured.

As of now, to be sure, the conventional wisdom is that even Nixon cannot work a rapid cure of the Democrats' internal ills. But anyone who looks a few weeks ahead can see that the conventional wisdom is pretty certain to be proved wrong by the middle of September or the beginning of October. Given the patterns of national feeling, Nixon can hardly refrain from doing and saying just those things that will bring the Democrats together again.

Yet the question then will be whether a united Democratic Party, with a decent, moderate, obviously good man at the head of the ticket, can compete successfully in the disturbingly right-wing climate that now exists. No one can be sure until November.

OUR READERS' MINDS

Theology vs. action

To the Editor:

I am disappointed to see an article such as Religion's Modern Stance, with the worst inaccuracies, and the most constipated jargon, by an author who apparently has no idea of what she is saying.

Miss Anstett speaks of "... truly progressive theologians" fighting for social reforms, and cites William Sloane Coffin and the directors of St. John's Student Center, who allowed a black student leader to speak there. Rev. Coffin and St. John's directors may be commendable, but are not theologians, nor are these activities theological. Such mudslinging indicates that the distinction between theology, and social involvement is for her nonexistent.

While Christian social action inevitably

Sewage ditch

To the Editor:

I suggest that you run an editorial on that sewage ditch... er, Red Cedar River, that runs through the campus. That polluted sludge is the only sore spot in an otherwise beautiful campus. The rulers around here should decide to have a sewage dump or a river. If they want a river, they should clean the Red Cedar and dump their sewers elsewhere.

I realize that that would take money. However, through student and alumni contributions, and grants from anti-pollution organizations, I think enough money could be gathered. For an applied project, perhaps various departments (Chemistry, Natural Resources, etc.) could get teachers and students working on it.

springs from a love of God, and lack of social concern violates scriptural injunctions. Miss Anstett is evidently unaware that the Church's central function is God's worship. She speaks of how, "Even many scripture-based denominations are modifying their religious direction," and "If the ideal priesthood of the believers is to exist, the church cannot subordinate laymen to the 'firm believer' role of a sorrowful penitent." If the church is only a social action agency, why not put our religious energy into VISTA? But if it insists on recognition of man's imperfect nature and provides spiritual and moral regeneration, so that then men will be better able to initiate social reforms, why does Miss Anstett seemingly approve the turning away from theological necessities of repentance, regeneration, and obedience, which necessarily motivate the Christian to social involvement? And anyway, why is she so sloppy that she calls social action theology, yet appears to discount the theological reasons for Christian social involvement?

Miss Anstett means well, but should learn the difference between theology and social action, and the Christian teaching on worship and social concern, before she speaks again on "Religion's Modern Stance."

MISSOURI SENATOR

Long calls primary loss 'victory for wiretappers'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Missouri's Democrats dumped incumbent Sen. Edward V. Long in Tuesday's primary and he promptly called his defeat "a great victory for the wiretappers, snoopers and federal bureaucrats who violate the constitutional rights of our citizens."

Long had been under fire by Life magazine articles suggesting he misused his office to help Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa and to make work for the Steamfitters' Union in St. Louis.

He called the articles a smear and an attempt to influence the primary.

As the returns neared completion, Long wired congratulations Wednesday to Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton, who snatched the Democratic senatorial nomination from him.

"The citizens of Missouri have spoken and the campaign is over," Long said.

Then he gave a newsman his bitter appraisal of victory for the "wiretappers, snoopers and federal bureaucrats."

Long, 60, was appointed to the Senate in 1960 upon the death of Sen. Thomas C. Hennings Jr., and won election to a full term in 1962.

In Missouri's 1st Congressional District, William Clay won the Democratic nomination and Curtis Crawford the Republican nomination, guaranteeing that Missouri would send its first black to Congress this year.

And the Democrats, approving a familiar name, nominated James W. Symington to Congress in the 2nd District. Symington, who resigned as U.S. chief of protocol to seek the nomination, is a son of Missouri's senior senator, Stuart Symington.

He will run against another familiar name-republican Hugh Scott, namesake of Pennsylvania's Republican senator.

Elsewhere in the nation, Rep. Bob Dole won the Republican nomination to the Senate in a Kansas primary, defeating former Gov. William H. Avery.

Dole will face William I. Robinson, a Wichita attorney, for the seat of Republican Sen. Frank Carlson, who is retiring.

Rick Harman, businessman and former college basketball star, was nominated by the GOP to contest the Kansas governorship with incumbent Democrat Robert Docking, who was unopposed for renomination.

State Sen. Keith Sebelius beat two fellow Republicans for the right to seek Dole's House seat; George Meeker was the unopposed Democratic nominee.

Newell A. George, former U.S. attorney, won the Democratic nomination for Congress in the 3rd District.

Hansen's House seat will be sought by Republican State Sen. Orval Hansen—no relation—and Democratic State Rep. Darrell Manning.

In Michigan, 19 congressmen were renominated, only three with token opposition.

Democratic Rep. John Conyers Jr. was assured of re-election, with no opposition in either party.

The indictment says the defendants set up two firms—Scientific Electronics and Bregman Electronics Inc.—each to be "a dummy corporation subject to the direction, control and use by the defendants as a conduit for the diversion of monies fraudulently obtained."

These dummy corporations, the indictment says, prepared purchase orders and invoices for items "that Chromcraft would not and did not purchase nor acquire," but for which the firm charged the government.

The indictment says, and the funds eventually landed in the hands of Hans Senn of the Bank Fur Handel and Effekten and Walter A. Lips at the Union Bank of Switzerland. Senn and Lips and Senn's bank were listed as co-conspirators but not as defendants.

The amounts transmitted to Switzerland were listed as $2,227,592.13 and $1,180,692.10.

Last spring, Alisco issued a public announcement that it was under Justice Department investigation and said Stone and Rosenbaum had resigned. Stone and Rosenbaum had been barred a year earlier as procurement sources pending investigation.

A telephone call by the Associated Press two weeks ago to Techfab headquarters in St. Louis, determined that Stone is listed as president of the subsidiary and Rosenbaum is a member of its board of directors. They could not be reached for comment.

U.S., Viets clash in 'rocket belt'

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. battalion clashed with an enemy force Wednesday in the "rocket belt" 12 miles south of Saigon, said to be a staging area for rocket and mortar attacks against the capital.

Military spokesmen said sketchy reports indicated at least 50 of the enemy were killed. Infantrymen of the 9th Division, supported by helicopter gunships, were still engaged in heavy fighting at nightfall.

The new battle coincided with intelligence reports that the enemy plans to launch battalion-sized ground probes around Saigon or the key northern cities of Hue and Da Nang. Stepped up terrorist attacks and shelling also are expected this week.

The U.S. Command reported that a task force of 1,000 U.S. 9th Infantry troops and 500 South Vietnamese marines have killed 219 soldiers in a week of scattered fighting deep in the Mekong Delta. No allied soldiers were killed, and six Americans and three South Vietnamese were reported wounded.

The fighting in three provinces centered about 125 miles southwest of Saigon on the fringe of the U Minh Forest, a Viet Cong sanctuary virtually untouched by government troops for more than 20 years. Spokesmen credited U.S. Navy gunboats, armored troop carriers, U.S. helicopter gunships and artillery with killing most of the enemy dead.

They said the allies smashed a Viet Cong factory for repairing weapons, overran an artillery school and seized an abandoned command post. Two prisoners were captured and the allies seized 73 rifles, about 200 pounds of documents, a radio system and an old French 75mm howitzer.

U.S. Marines and South Vietnamese paratroopers reported killing 75 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese in two clashes Tuesday south of Da Nang. The allies lost 11 dead and two missing.

North Vietnamese troops also attacked a small U.S. Marine unit on Hill 606, near the abandoned Khe Sanh combat base. Four Marines were killed and six were wounded. Enemy casualties were unknown.

East of Khe Sanh enemy gunners shot down a Marine CH-46 helicopter, but the crew and passengers were rescued unharmed.

U.S. B-52 bombers flew 10 missions Tuesday and Wednesday against enemy targets near the Cambodian border and in the northern provinces south of Da Nang. Some of the raids were within 23 miles of Saigon.

Over North Vietnam, U.S. pilots flew 109 missions Tuesday and reported destroying or damaging 35 supply-laden junks, 15 trucks and seven gun emplacements.

North Vietnam claimed Wednesday it killed or captured 12 commandos sent north by the United States and South Vietnam to pinpoint bombing targets and conduct sabotage.

U.S. sees lowest birth rate since 1945 Census report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lowest U.S. birth rate in history was recorded in 1967, the Census Bureau said Wednesday.

The net increase in population was 1.08 per cent, lowest since 1945.

The 1967 birth rate was 17.9 births per 1,000 population, the bureau said. The previous low was 18.4 in both 1933 and 1936.

Total population last Jan. 1 was estimated at 200,248,000, an increase of 2,138,000 in 12 months. The gain last year, the bureau said, resulted from 3.6 million birth, offset by 1.9 million deaths and 443,000 persons added by immigration.

The bureau reported also that as of Jan. 1, there were only 96.7 males for every 100 females. Until the 1940s, men were in the majority.

The median age of the total population was 27.7 years. In the mid 1950s, the median was 30.2 years but the nation's youth wave is ebbing, the bureau said, as the number of births decreases.

'Futbol Americano' awaits the Lions

The Detroit Lions and Philadelphia Eagles meet in the first U.S. professional football game ever played outside the country.

Thousands of Mexican fans are expected to witness the exhibition contest between the two National Football League teams in a game that will be televised nationally across the U.S.

Although it will be the first pro game in Mexico, American football was introduced 40 years ago when a Boston reporter, Arthur Constantine, helped finance the first team at the national university.

Today, interest is mushrooming and high schools and colleges are fielding teams and forming leagues. A great deal who televise their games south of the border and have a huge following in Mexico City.

Many Mexicans are reportedly "fascinated by the lust for brutality" Americans show and wonder how they can feel sorry for a bull facing a matador and then cheer for "human beings getting smashed around."

The "violent sport" will be complete with the American-style halftime show complete with dancing girls and also will feature traditional Mexican folklore ballet, with Aztec Indian dances.

One tradition the American players could do without, however, are the riots which frequently take place after soccer matches.

Szygula fires up for S gym clinic

After shepherding MSU's National Gymnastics Clinic, Coach George Szygula says he is starting to really enjoy the job.

"It is really getting exciting," Szygula said. "This is the best clinic we've ever had."

I know that every coach that holds a clinic says that it's the best he's had, but ours has really improved in the last three years.

Szygula says that the clinic has had great success in the last several years in attracting an outstanding clinic staff.

One of the biggest factors, the Spartan coach allowed, is a move toward greater cooperation between the Amateur Athletic Union and the U.S. Gymnastics Federation. Szygula said that this has made it much simpler to secure the services of many outstanding female gymnasts.

In the past, Szygula noted, it was nearly impossible to attract the ladies because they were threatened with possible suspension if they participated in the clinic.

And then there are the kids.

"These kids are just tremendous," Szygula said. "They get better every year, especially the little ones."

"You'd have a hard time convincing the big ones," Szygula added smiling, "but I think the little kids are better."

In the past ten years, Szygula's clinic has been instrumental in popularizing gymnastics in Michigan. The effect is felt strongly in the high schools where Szygula said a program did not even exist until about six years ago.

Enthusiasm runs high among the participants and that enthusiasm rubs off on Szygula.

While Szygula is officially the director of the clinic, the MSU coach moves around like a highly charged yoyo.

Apparently incapable of standing still, no matter of the clinic is so insignificant nor any would-be Olympian so small to not warrant Szygula's attention.

Hustling about the Jenison gymnasium, the man with the bandy legs and the big chest confers with judges and 10-year olds with equal amenity.

One part of the clinic that remains a Szygula favorite is the annual "Nite of Stars" spectacular, scheduled at 7:30 tonight in the I.M. Sports Arena.

Featuring some of the greatest performers in the nation in addition to the cream of the clinic, Szygula uses the clinic to show people what gymnastics is all about.

Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children and those who attend will leave amazed by Szygula's "little kids."

But then they amaze Szygula, too.

Montreal team reprieved

MONTREAL (UPI) -- Montreal's major league baseball ambitions may have received yet another reprieve Wednesday following talks between civic officials and National League President Warren Giles.

Giles, emerging for a luncheon recess from a meeting with Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau and top aides, indicated the almost star-crossed venture had encountered new problems but that solutions may not be impossible.

"What couldn't be agreed to today, Aug. 7, might be agreed to by the 15th," Giles said.

Giles said he "doubted" any final decision on the franchise recently given to a Montreal group of financiers headed by distillery heir Charles Bronfman would be reached Wednesday.

Bronfman himself did not attend the morning meeting, but was represented by legal counsel.

Giles said the latest problem to plague the promoters centered on leasing of the Autostade, the Expo '67 Island World's Fair site which previously had been set aside as the home of the still unnamed Montreal baseball club.

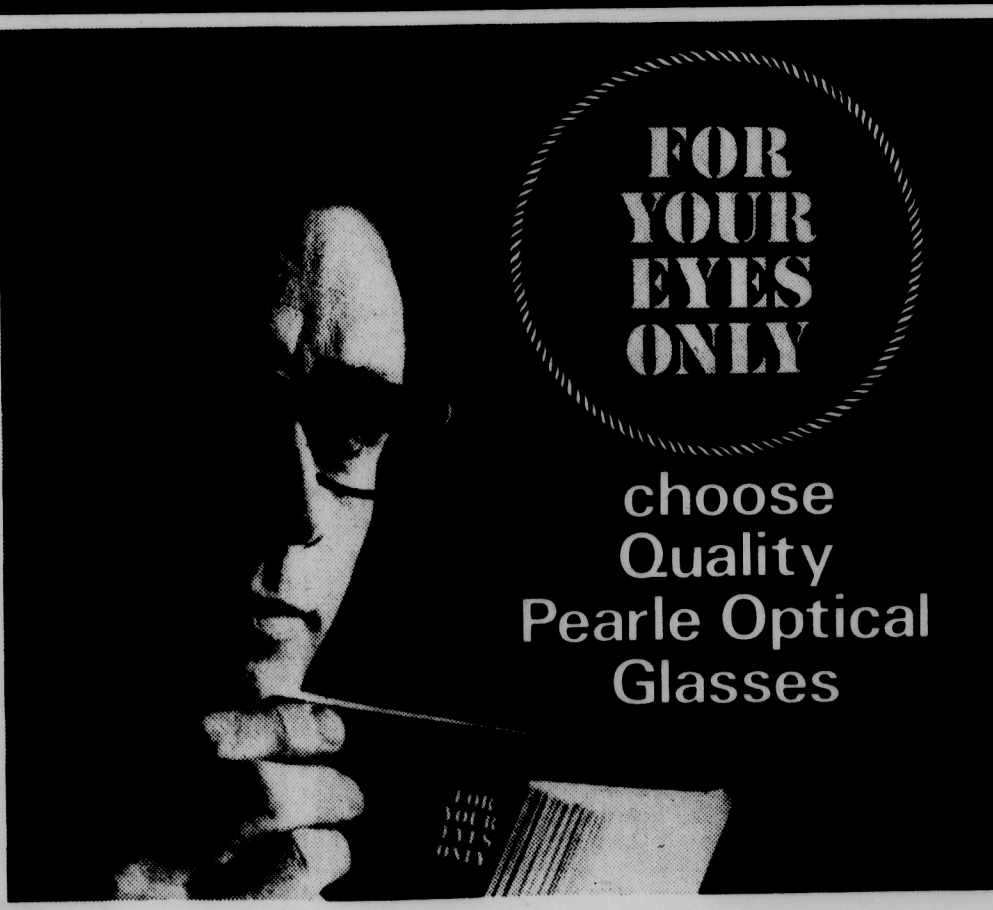

"It's important to get into the Autostade. There's a problem about the lease, and it's a late development that just came up," Giles said.

Of foreign students and university unrest

By CHRIS MEAD
MSU NEWS STAFF WRITER

Students, student demonstrations, revolution, hippies—familiar terms to American students, but what do they mean to students from another country, another culture?

Representatives from the University community ranging from a distinguished professor to a member of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) tried to answer these and other questions of American student unrest in a panel sponsored by the Foreign Student Orientation program in Case Hall Tuesday night.

The panel was composed of Ernest Melby, distinguished professor of administration and higher education; Albert Cafagna, instructor of philosophy; Jack Sattel, SDS; Ron Diehl, The Paper; Dharendra Vajpeyi, president of the International Club; Jim Bever of Student Liberation Alliance and David Gilbert, director of College.

Eldon Nonnamaker, associate dean of students, was invited to participate but did not attend.

By bringing together members of the University community of varying opinions and encouraging dialogue between the panel members and the audience, the program broadly intended to determine who the "unrested" are and what are the issues they rally behind.

"Not all students are actively dissatisfied," Bever stated. "The degree of dissatisfaction and awareness varies, but the greatest amount of student unrest can be found in the large, urban universities, he said.

Mainly foreign students

Speaking to an audience that was made up mainly of foreign students who will be studying at several American universities and MSU student activists, Bever said the problems facing the student are two-fold—those arising from his relation to the university and those arising from the community at large.

"The people who make the most noise and are most active in protest movements are the intellectuals," Gilbert said. "Much of the intellectual unrest at MSU, he added, is because many of its course offerings are not challenging, there are no regularly scheduled debates and no forums for speaking out.

"Many professors don't encourage contributions from students," Gilbert maintained. "Intolerant professors, huge classes and the quest for grades all combine to frustrate students and foment unrest, he added.

War machine in America
"Industry in America, the war machine in America, and society in general has become a machine for producing war, the universities, he said.

He said that universities which are tied up in research contracts and consulting relationships with government are fertile ground for student unrest.

"Faculty members in our universities have many responsibilities beyond teaching," Melby said. Teaching has gone down on the priority list for many professors, he added.

Melby urged student activists to go to their professors and administrators and demand meaningful dialogue and warned against the type of rebellion that occurred at Columbia.

"I believe that student protest is a good thing," Melby said, "especially when it doesn't take violent forms." Referring to the recent marijuana busts, Melby said that "students can't decide what laws they can obey and what laws they cannot obey."

"The University is run like a business," according to Diehl, "and some administrators come from business backgrounds."

Business 'U' vs. Academic 'U'
Diehl said that much student unrest stems from the conflict between running a university in a business way and in an academic way.

Vajpeyi, an Indian student, said that there really is not much student power in the United States when compared to his native India. "Students in India are not so afraid to meet the troops," he said.

He explained that policemen cannot enter Indian universities unless the president of the university specifically "invites" them. Another Indian student in the audience added that there are no university policemen on Indian campuses.

Jack Sattel of SDS differed with one of the panel members who said students are potential revolution-makers.

"It is a revolution when the structures that maintain the power of society are destroyed," he said. "Students will never make such a revolution."

Columbia was right
"The students at Columbia were absolutely right in doing what they did," Sattel said. He said that they argued for four years with the administration over Columbia's defense contracts and 21½ years over its slumlord business in Harlem without any result. The Columbia rebellion was their only recourse, he said.

Bever pointed out that the earliest universities were formed and run by students and were later run jointly by students and faculty. "It seems now to be a coalition of government and business that produces the universities," he said.

on the part of the administration. There is a big gap between what they say and what they actually do, he said.

Cafagna called Melby an "enlightened administrator" but said there were inherent contradictions in his statements condoning student power and his condemnation of the Columbia rebellion.

Citing the need for students to teach the teachers, Cafagna said, "Columbia is one of those lessons."

Melby adopted the position that gradual change, not revolution was what is needed in student unrest movements.

"With all of America's faults, more has happened in social change in America than under any other government," he said.

Attacks contention

Bever attacked Melby's contention that students should engage in dialogue with administrators rather than take more direct action. He said that those with power seem to be willing to talk only to those who also have power and not students.

"Students are out to get more equal distribution of power in society, not to destroy society," Bever explained.

When asked by a foreign student if there was anything that characterized student unrest on an international scale. Sattel said that students from all nations tend to be anti-imperialist, anti-bureaucratic and anti-authoritarian.

Prof power

The foreign students also wanted to know what effect the MSU demonstrations had on the public. According to Bever they have had very little direct effect so far but they did serve to make people more aware of problem situations and draw previously uncommitted people into activism.

Gilbert said that public reaction to the demonstrations was largely determined by the mass media. The local radio stations took every opportunity to give bad coverage of the situation, he added.

Students were... can students should make legal- ization a rallying point.

Drugs a minor point
Bever explained that drug legalization is only a minor point in student unrest and is one which the press and the government likes to play up beyond proportion. What students want is not just drug legalization, Bever said, but the right to decide for themselves what they may or may not do as long as it is not harming other members of society.

Speaking from the vantage point of a foreign student, Vajpeyi said that he thinks foreign students should stay out of student movements while studying in the United States. He cited several examples of foreign students being sent back to their home country as a result of taking part in political activities.

"Our job as native students is to make this a place where foreign students can particiwas. Bever said that one definition might be a person who took Timothy Leary's advice to tune in, turn on and drop out but skipped the first two steps.

In response to a question on what will become of radicals in the future, Bever admitted that some would probably settle down into a comfortable middle-class situation.

Mealy-mouthed liberals
"The radicals of the 30's are now the mealy-mouthed liberals of the 60's," he said.

Cafagna said he doubted that today's radicals would become tomorrow's middle-class liberals because current student unrest is a unique situation.

"Students have become disaffected from their country, they have no love for it, they haven't made peace with the system," Cafagna said.

"Students of this and other countries," Bever said, "usually come forth as the conscience of society."

LBJ compromises on steel price hikes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A price battle between the White House and the steel industry appeared ended Wednesday with both the government and companies compromising on modest price increases.

U.S. Steel, the nation's biggest producer and usually the pacesetter, announced it was boosting prices on steels used in making such major products as auto bodies, refrigerators, stoves, machinery and buildings.

But the hikes were not as high as the nearly 5 per cent across-the-board increases announced a week ago by the No. 2 producer, Bethlehem, and Bethlehem immediately fell in line, chopping its boost to 2.4 per cent.

It seems almost a certainty that the rest of the industry will follow suit. Two other big firms, Inland and Armco, announced within hours that they would remain competitive, meaning that their prices would be brought in line with U.S. Steel's. All the price hikes are effective Aug. 16.

At the Texas White House, President Johnson was quoted as saying the moves by U.S. Steel and Bethlehem are a "substantial improvement from the general inflationary trend."

Arthur M. Okun, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said, "It is gratifying that the U.S. Steel action significantly reduced the threat of a large and general inflation in steel prices."

One industry observer described the price adjustments as a compromise. Another commented that the day's developments appeared to mark the end of the latest government-industry hassle over prices.

The confrontation between the White House and the companies was the most dramatic since 1962 when the late President Kennedy angrily forced the industry to roll back a general $6-a-ton price boost.

Since then, the industry has soft-pedaled its price boosts, increasing a produce here, another there.

But Bethlehem, Republic, Armco and Inland broke this practice last week by announcing virtual across-the-board price hikes after the industry had reached a billion dollar-plus labor settlement with the United Steelworkers union.

Other firms, including U.S. Steel, had remained selective. U.S. Steel boosted prices on tinplate products—used for beer and soft drink cans—and some structural steel shapes—used in the construction industry. The big steel firm then remained silent until Wednesday.

Even with its latest selective increases, U.S. Steel indicated that more price increases may be in the offing.

FINALLY GETS PERMISSION

Pastor visits prisoners

by STEVE JAMES and
CHRIS MEAD
State News Staff Writers

After several days effort the Rev. Brian Keleher was admitted Wednesday to the Ingham County Jail to speak with the persons arrested in last week's narcotic raids.

The Rev. Keleher, pastor of a Russian Orthodox Church in Baltimore, Md., said he was in Lansing attending a Sunday School Convention and was ready to leave when he heard about the busts Thursday.

He went to the Ingham County Jail, where the persons are being held, talked to one of the prisoners and was told by a desk clerk that he could talk to the rest Friday morning.

The Rev. Keleher said that when he returned the next day an undersheriff told him that the Rev. Francis M. Donahue, pastor of the East Lansing Russian Orthodox Church, informed jail officials that the Rev. Keleher did not have "a license to practice" in Lansing and therefore should not be allowed to see the prisoners.

The undersheriff also said, according to Keleher, that Ingham County officials had checked with the University police and found that Keleher had "communist leanings" on his record.

Donahue however, stated that he had told both the Rev. Keleher and the police only that the Rev. Keleher was repre-cal parish or the University Orthodox student group, in as much as none of the people arrested are members of the parish or had requested that anyone from the church visit them.

According to a Michigan statute, prisoners are allowed to see clergy from their own congregation and after that it is up to the sheriff to decide what clergy can be admitted to see prisoners.

The Rev. Keleher called the American Civil Liberties Union in Detroit which advised him to get in touch with Kenneth Laing, a Lansing lawyer.

The Rev. Keleher filed an affidavit with Laing stating his denial of access to the prisoners and threatened to get a lawsuit or an injunction against the authorities.

On Tuesday the Ingham County sheriff's office was allowed to see the prisoners and when he went to see them the undersheriff, according to the Rev. Keleher, apologized and said, "What's so bad about communism anyway?"

The Rev. Donahue took his action, Keleher said, because he believes that clergymen should not become involved in marijuana issues.

Sunday about 12 to 18 students handed out leaflets in front of the Rev. Donahue's church.

The leaflet protested actions of the Ingham County Jail police and the Rev. Donahue in allegedly aiding denial of constitutional rights of the prisoners.

"The kids are going stir crazy in varying degrees," the Rev. Keleher said. After seeing the rest of the prisoners Wednesday morning, the Rev. Keleher returned to Baltimore.

Posting bonds of $10,000 each on charges of selling marijuana were Kenneth A. Carlisle, 18, 361 Bailey St.; Connie Lee Comstock, 19, 116 N. Clemens; and Michael Hickok, 23, 2046 Phillips, Holt.

Richard Harris, 3456 Lake Lansing Road, was freed on $5,000 bail on a charge of selling LSD.

Charles Fink, 20, 400 Gunson St., who was arraigned on two counts, possession and sale of marijuana, waived preliminary examination and will be bound over to Circuit Court Friday.

Repair crew

Grand Trunk Railroad workmen recently replaced the most eroded sections of timber covering tracks at the Harrison Road crossing. The repairs were made after a group of Spartan Village Residents protested the condition of the crossing.

Agency rules railroads, MSU must repair crossing

The Michigan Public Service Commission ruled Tuesday that the Chesapeake and Ohio and Grand Trunk Western railroads and MSU must repair the substandard condition of the railcrossings at Harrison Road.

A member of a local interest group said Wednesday.

Dick Walter, of the VICTIMS of the Harrison Road Rail Crossing, said Hugh Clarkin, an inspector for the commission, gave the Grand Trunk railway 45 days to bring the crossing up to standard, at which time another inspection would be held.

The C&O repeated a promise made last week to repair their crossing within six weeks when the necessary timbers are delivered, he said.

MSU, which owns a spur of the railway, has already contracted for the siding to be repaired and the work should be done within a month, Walter said.

At the hearing which was held at the Harrison Road crossing, VICTIMS presented Clarkin a petition which had been signed by 1,752 residents of Spartan Village, protesting the unsafe condition of the crossings.

Walter said the members of VICTIMS present at the hearing were satisfied with the overall results, but expressed dissatisfaction with the Grand Trunk representative's attempts to evade responsibility by claiming that only minor repairs were needed, and with his initial demand that it be proven that his company's crossing had caused damage to any vehicles.

After the representative left, Clarkin picked up a still warm muffler shaken from a passing vehicle and promised to give it to the Grand Trunk representative at a later date, Walter said.

PHONY DISTRESS

Passport waives cut; abuse cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Tuesday that false distress appeals for permission to go abroad without proper passports, are forcing it to curtail the waiver privilege it has been granting for emergencies.

Foreign governments have complained about the growing number of Americans who show up without valid passports, and officers in the department have been harassed at night and on days off by the phony distress pleas, said Frances G. Knight, director of the Passport Office.

Miss Knight sent letters of concern about the growing abuse of the waiver privilege on Friday to the heads of all the airlines and steamship companies serving the United States.

She said the false claims of need to travel without passports because of dire emergencies have come particularly from New York's Kennedy International airport.

She said it appeared that some persons apparently had coached potential passengers, when they showed up for European trips without passports, about requesting waivers.

That is indicated, she said, by stereotyped answers to questions about the nature of the claimed emergencies.

Miss Knight added that requests for waivers occur so frequently on weekends that she can only conclude that dire illness, accident and death strike most heavily in European countries on Saturdays and Sundays.

Within the past two weeks several countries have complained, and one country has served notice that any U.S. citizen arriving without a valid passport will be refused entry and returned to the origin point of his flight, Miss Knight said.

Miss Knight explained to a reporter that she introduced the waiver practice a number of years ago because of the real need of some citizens to go abroad immediately, before passports could be issued.

The practice has been for the Passport Office to call the U.S. embassy involved, and to have a consular officer meet the person, get him through the entry procedure and escort him to the embassy to document emergency papers.

"But as usual there are always people who press a good thing to the extreme, who take advantage and thus terminate or restrict efforts to help serve," Miss Knight said in the letter.

Eight wounded during gunfire

HARVEY, Ill. (AP) — Seven policemen and a woman were wounded by gunfire during a disturbance by black youths late Tuesday night.

Scores of state, county and local police brought order to the troubled area shortly after midnight.

Authorities said the morning hours passed without incident, and out-of-town officers left Harvey, a suburb south of Chicago, after a curfew was lifted at dawn.

Three of the injured policemen were admitted to hospitals and reported in good condition. The others were treated and released. All of the policemen are white. The wounded woman, a black, was treated at a hospital and released.

City and county officials planned a meeting for later today to determine if extraordinary measures would be needed tonight.

The police department issued a report at midmorning saying that in its opinion the trouble was "a spontaneous movement by a small group of malcontents who were bent on causing a disturbance."

"It was not a racial conflict," the police report stated. "It should be strongly emphasized that these few individuals who caused this disturbance in no way reflect the attitude of this community."

ABILITY TO COMMUNICATE

Education helps couples reach marital satisfaction

EDITOR'S NOTE: The relationship between marriage and education is discussed below in the third of a four part series by Pat Carrel on married students.

By PAT CARREL

State News Staff Writer

Few Americans praise the education they received at their alma maters or high schools for helping them attain a successful marriage relationship. Yet evidence exists that perhaps such praise is long overdue.

According to the 1960 Census, the combined divorce and separation rate for the male population having one to three years of high school was 1.2 per cent higher than those who graduated from college. For the female population, the difference was 1.8 per cent.

A recent study measured the attitudes of 80 couples after eight years of marriage and found that marital satisfaction was not related to the number of years married. Marital satisfaction and years of schooling, however, showed a positive relationship. Age at the time of marriage also appeared unrelated to marital satisfaction.

Mrs. Hilda Parker of the MSU Psychology Clinic noted that college educated couples are likely to be more verbal and introspective, a distinct advantage in facilitating communication.

"Educated couples learn better problem-solving methods and counseling is more effective as a result. There is also a more equal relationship found in couples from a higher socioeconomic level," Mrs. Parker said.

Robert O. Blood, Jr. and Donald M. Wolfe, in a survey of 909 families in the Detroit area during the years 1955-59, measured the effects of education and other environmental factors brought to a marriage.

They found that companionship was the single most valued aspect of marriage among the young, childless couples. Among these couples, educational differences had a greater effect on companionship than age differences. Hence, couples with the greatest educational similarities ranked the companionship rewards of marriage as the highest.

The survey also found that satisfaction with love increased with the amount of education.

The authors explained that greater skills in communication and habits of self-expression are developed by high school graduates and those who go to college. Such skills make it easier for couples to express affection as well as to communicate information and opinions.

Many marriage counselors contend that undergraduate marriages can be relatively happy ones despite their unique problems.

Mrs. Cecile Frogh, a Family Service Agency counselor, said that financial and academic pressures for undergraduate couples are no greater than other pressures and are not a critical problem if the couple is mature.

A study of the undergraduate and single population at Syracuse University supports Mrs. Frogh's views.

The study found that the majority of married students surveyed expressed no displeasure over marrying early.

The survey ironically contrasted these relatively happy couples to the few single students who rated their personal lives as mostly happy and without worry over academic pressures.

KELLEY RULES

Administrators may teach

By United Press International

ruled Wednesday that members of the State Board of Education may teach at colleges and universities while serving on the board.

At the same time, Kelley held that persons serving on state profession licensing boards may also serve on the Board of Education.

questioned the information, Kelley said that although the board has the power to make recommendations to the legislature on financial requirements of colleges and universities, a board member who teaches at a college does not hold incompatible positions.

"Based upon a study of the controlling provisions of the law, there is no incompatibility between the position of employee of a Michigan institution of higher education granting baccalaureate degrees and the public office of member of the state board of education," he said.

Five board members, Carmen L. Delli Quardi of Houghton, Marilyn Jean Kelley Stout of Ann Arbor, Peter Oppewall of Grand Rapids, Charles E. Morton of Detroit, and Leroy G. Augenstein of Holt all have taught—or are teaching—at colleges and universities.

All five, except Oppewall, had been teaching at colleges and universities.

In Oppewall's case, who is a professor of English at Calvin College, Kelley issued a separate ruling holding that Oppewall's employment by a private college and as a board member were not incompatible.

"There is no basis to assume that the person occupying the office of member of the state board of education will not fairly discharge his duties . . . because he is employed by a private institution of higher education . . ."

In fact, he went on "It could bring extra insights into the planning of future public institutions of higher education based upon his own experiences as an educator in a private institution of higher learning."

Kelley also ruled that board members serving on state boards of licensing—apparently, meaning Board of Education President Edwin Novak of Flint who was a former member of the State Board of Examiners in optometry—did not serve in incompatible jobs.

Detroit paperboys win pay increase

DETROIT (UPI) — Carrier boys will get about 70 per cent of their requested increase when the city's record newspaper blackout ends. The Detroit News and Detroit Free Press are working on a deadline that should see them on the streets Friday.

But the publishers emphasized Tuesday that the carrier pay increase was decided, as a part of the delivered newspaper price increase, before the last of the seven major striking unions settled the two papers Monday.

"The boys began protesting before they knew they were getting more money," said a spokesman for the Free Press circulation department.

In a feeble two-day protest, less than 30 parents and boys paraded asking for a penny-a-paper increase. There are 17,500 carriers.

Carrier boys will get 5.5 cents more per weekly subscriber at the News, or a total of 26 cents profit per customer a week. At the Free Press, the boys will get a 4.5 cent increase.

Negotiators for the two papers also were mopping up remaining contract agreements with small, nonstriking unions.

The 700,000 pre-strike circulation afternoon News plans to hit the streets with a first edition Friday morning, and the 600,000 circulation morning Free Press plans a first edition Friday evening.

A Teamsters strike last Nov. 16 closed the News and triggered the 266-day shutdown. The ITU mailers, the last of the seven striking unions to reach agreement, ratified a new contract Monday.

Detroit papers increase rates

DETROIT (UPI) — Home delivery rates for the Detroit News and Detroit Free Press have been increased to 90 cents a week, 15 cents more than the service cost when the newspapers were shut down by a strike nearly nine months ago.

Subscribers were told Wednesday both papers had boosted home delivery charges, as well as increasing the price of Sunday editions from 25 to 30 cents. Daily newsstand prices remain at 10 cents a copy.

Spokesmen for Detroit's two major dailies revealed the price boost Tuesday, when telling 17,500 carrier boys they will get about 70 per cent of an earnings increase they requested. The carrier boys staged a two-day demonstration to demand a penny-a-paper more, unaware an increase already had been granted.

Clay conviction appeal opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former world heavyweight champion Cassius Clay's appeal against his conviction and sentencing for refusing induction into the armed forces was opposed by the Justice Department Tuesday.

In a brief filed with the U.S. Supreme Court, prior to the court's reconvening Oct. 2 following summer recess, the department urged denial of Clay's petition to the court to review the appeal.

The former boxing champion, who prefers to be called Muhammad Ali, last month asked the Supreme Court to overturn his conviction, his five-year jail sentence and $10,000 for refusing induction.

Free on $5,000 bond, Clay is seeking either a ministerial exemption or status as a conscientious objector based on his beliefs as a member of the Black Muslim faith.

Clay also asks reversal of his conviction because of alleged systematic exclusion of blacks from the local and appellate draft boards which decided his draft status.

The Justice Department said in its brief, however, that Clay consistently referred to himself on Selective Service forms and questionnaires as "professional boxer," "heavyweight champion of the world" and other such terms describing his occupation.

"On various dates in 1966, prior to his assertion to a ministerial exemption, he wrote letters seeking permission of his local draft board to leave the country to defend his boxing title," the Justice Department brief said.

Noting a Court of Appeals denial of a ministerial exemption for Clay, the brief declared "there is nothing in the record to indicate he is the leader of a congregation or a group of lesser members of his sect."

The brief further states that Clay "did not have a conscientious scruple to participation in all war, but only to certain wars depending upon particular circumstances."

On the question of Clay's claim that blacks were excluded as members of draft boards, the Justice Department contended that there was no bias or prejudice of Clay's case by the local boards, allowing for the fact they did not include black members.

No Viet sellout--HHH

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP)

Humphrey drew cheers from as he promised not to preside over a "sellout" in South

Vietnam if elected president.

Humphrey, sounding tougher on the issue of Vietnam than he has in recent days in his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, addressed a Catholic War Veterans convention. He urged patience with American negotiators, seeking a "peaceful and honorable settlement" in Vietnam.

But, Humphrey said, departing from his prepared remarks, "Let me make it crystal clear. This nation has no intention-at least I believe the people of this country have no intention-of leaving the peoples of South Vietnam at the mercy of an aggressor."

Humphrey said he didn't think Americans "have any desire to do that" and he added:

"I think the people of this land want a peaceful settlement of this struggle and want it as soon as possible. And they don't want to sell out, and if I'm President of the United States they won't get a sellout."

This brought a burst of applause and cheers from an audience of about 300 men and women at the meeting at a

Minneapolis hotel.

And, Humphrey added, to more applause, "Let me not be misunderstood--the present

President of the United States is not going to let any sellout happen either."

The vice president, Hubert

H. H. Humphrey, also warned about the dangers of

"Before you can build a

Korean seamen marooned near Manhattan

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of 26 Korean seamen were marooned on a lonely island off the coast of Manhattan last week, according to a statement released by the U.S. Coast Guard. The seamen were on board the ship Galveston, which was en route to Galveston, Texas, when it ran aground on a rocky shore. The ship's captain, Hong Jo Yoon, said the seamen were marooned on a small island with no food or water. They were rescued by a U.S. Coast Guard cutter on August 1. The seamen were taken to a hospital in New York City. They were in good health and had no injuries. The ship's cargo, which included 800 tons of mahogany and other goods, was salvaged. The ship's owner, a Korean company, is now trying to get the ship back to Galveston. The seamen are now being cared for by the U.S. Coast Guard. They will be repatriated to Korea as soon as possible.

Kremlin claims Prague loyalty

The Kremlin leadership apparently wants to show the Russians it handled the confrontation with Czechoslovakia successfully and is assured of continued loyalty to Soviet-style communism. That seems to be the purpose of a communique, front-paged in the Moscow press Wednesday, which proclaimed satisfaction that the six-nation meeting in Bratislava Saturday produced a pledge of "irreconcilable struggle against bourgeois ideology and against all anti-socialist forces."

This document, issued by the Soviet Communist party Politburo, ignored concessions to the reformist leadership of Czechoslovakia. It did not mention the acknowledgement that each Communist party has the right to "consider national characteristics and conditions" in running its own country.

The communique was in line with earlier press comment in Moscow on the showdown at Bratislava.

This appears to have a double purpose:

--To counter possible charges that the Kremlin bungled by playing up the crisis with Czechoslovakia, then backing down and accepting the liberalization movement.

--To remind Prague the Soviet Union takes a dim view of the freedom of speech and press which last month produced such things as attacks on the Warsaw Pact and accusations of Kremlin interference in Czechoslovak politics.

The Presidium of the Czechoslovak Communist party obviously got the message. It appealed to Czechoslovak newsmen in a communique issued in Prague Wednesday to show restraint in commenting on national and international affairs, "especially in the field of foreign policy."

Although some reports from abroad interpreted Bratislava as complete Soviet acceptance of the Czechoslovak liberalization movement, the indications here have been that it fell short of that.

The Politburo communique, read out on television and radio Tuesday night in advance of publication, appeared to be further confirmation that Moscow regards Bratislava as having produced a compromise, not an all-out victory for Prague.

"It is a prime international task of fraternal parties to carry the provisions of the statement the Bratislava declaration into life," the Politburo said.

The communique stressed the "high appreciation" here of what it called the pledge in the Bratislava declaration of "success in strengthening the positions of socialism and communism and rebuffing the machinations of imperialism."

The pledge also covered, according to the Politburo, "unshakable loyalty to Marxism-Leninism, education of the mass of the people in the spirit of the ideas of socialism and proletarian internationalism, and irreconcilable struggle against bourgeois ideology and against all anti-socialist forces."

Voters approve reforms

DETROIT (UPI) — Michigan voters approved the first amendments to the state's five year-old constitution Tuesday.

The three amendments create a commission to investigate allegations of wrongdoing by judges; establish a commission to set the salaries of the governor, lieutenant governor, legislators and supreme court justices, and restore to the governor the authority to fill judicial vacancies.

Although hundreds of amendments have been proposed by legislators since the constitution was enacted in 1963, the proposals on Tuesday's ballot were the first to reach the voters. They had passed both houses of the legislature with bipartisan support.

The most controversial proposal, to create the seven-member executive compensation commission, passed 291, 741 to 244,349 with 74 per cent of the state's precincts counted.

The commission, which will be appointed by the governor, is limited to meeting 15 days in a two-year period. The salary recommendations of the commission can be rejected only by a two-thirds vote of each house of the legislature.

The proposal to establish a nine-member judicial tenure commission was approved by more than a 2-1 margin. The vote, with 3,874 of the state's 5,354 precincts counted, was 391,251 to 158,522.

The commission can recommend that the Michigan Supreme Court take disciplinary action against a judge who is convicted of a felony, suffers a physical or mental disability which prevents performance of his duties, commits misconduct in office, consistently fails to perform his duty, or shows habitual intemperance or conduct that is clearly prejudicial to the administration of justice.

The commission can recommend the judge be censured, suspended with or without pay, be retired or removed from the bench.

Goldberg hits 'bad' crime bill

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Arthur J. Goldberg, former U.S. Supreme Court Justice, said Wednesday some sections of the crime bill passed by Congress last June "are both ill conceived and of dubious constitutionality."

Goldberg, addressing a breakfast at the 55th annual meeting of the American Judicature Society, did not specifically point out what he termed the bad sections.

Goldberg, who recently resigned as U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations said "the kind of stress, even more than cases, make bad law."

He said the so-called omnibus crime control and safe streets act of 1968 was pushed through because of "great public concern with the wide-spread violence in our country and the rising incidence of crime."

Goldberg said "the troubles of our cities should serve to remind us that law rests on much more than coercion."

"Law must have the police power, but it is by no means synonymous with police power," Goldberg said. "All the police power in creation could not long uphold a system of law that did not meet the reasonable expectations and legitimate needs of people and correct their legitimate grievances."

Ukrainians storm Soviet Embassy

LONDON (AP) — About 200 students, mostly of Ukrainian descent, scuffled Wednesday with about 60 policemen barring them from storming the Soviet Embassy.

The students splashed paint on policemen and their cars and hurled stones, breaking several embassy windows.

The demonstrators were protesting against recent arrests of Ukrainian writers and poets. They sang the Ukrainian national anthem, shouted slogans and distributed pamphlets. They burned a red flag.

They were escorted by police out of the area.
