Stevens urges boycott to back striking pickers

By CHRIS MEAD
State News Staff Writer

Don Stevens, D-Okemos, and chairman of the MSU Board of Trustees, said Monday he is in complete sympathy with the grape-pickers boycott against California grapes and that he opposes any University purchasing of these grapes.

"The people who are responsible for these purchases," Stevens said, "should look into this situation."

He said that although he "supports unequivocally" the grape boycott, he is speaking only for himself and not for any of the other trustees.

"I thought we (the trustees) should reserve comment on this at first," Stevens said, "but I changed my mind."

He explained that a number of questions from students concerning table grapes in MSU residence halls prompted him to read up on the subject over the weekend.

"I did a lot of studying and saw both sides," Stevens said, "and I think the workers conducting the boycott are in the right."

He added that he is definitely putting a stop to purchasing California grapes for the University if this is proved to be true, and that the people in food services hopefully may discontinue this policy before it is forced before the board of trustees.

"On this Thanksgiving Day, while enjoying our bountiful dinners," Stevens said, "let us give some thought to the exploited workers whose work under miserable wages and conditions has produced what the late Edward R. Murrow called 'the harvest of shame'."

He said he is joining the clergy of all faiths and elected leaders of several major cities in the United States and Canada who are actively supporting "these exploited farm workers in their efforts to gain the rights under federal labor laws that have been enjoyed by most workers for over 30 years."

Currently, Mayor John Lindsay of New York City and Mayor Jerome Cavanaugh of Detroit have responded to the plea by the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee that their cities refrain from purchasing California grapes for use in city-operated institutions such as hospitals and schools.

The controversy about California grapes at MSU arose out of a small item in the State News which quoted Emery Foster, manager of residence hall food services, as saying that "at least some" of the 438 cases of grapes purchased by the University July through October "must have come from California."

"I'm not sure we should be placing ourselves in a position of taking sides," Foster said. "If the Administration told us not to buy grapes, we would not."

He said he does not accept the view that "to be fit to eat it has to be a union product."

Stevens originally declined comment but later decided that the seriousness of the situation required "something specific" from one of the members of the board of trustees.

SAC request hearing to halt Library action

The Student Academic Council (SAC) Monday filed a request for a hearing with the Student-Faculty Judiciary to consider an injunction against the Library for closing the second, third and fourth floors of the new east wing to undergraduate students.

Nathan Dickmeyer, chairman of the 16-member student committee, said the action to seek an injunction against the Library was decided at SAC's Sunday meeting and that he thought the chances of getting it before the judiciary were "good."

Dickmeyer said the injunction, which would be directed at Richard Chapin, director of Libraries, and the Faculty Library Committee, is based on a three-point case concerning violations of the Academic Freedom Report.

"The Student Academic Council has to show that there has been some violation of the Academic Freedom Report in order to get the judiciary to discuss this," Dickmeyer pointed out.

He explained that the bulk of the case against the Library is based on section 1.5.02 of the Academic Freedom Report which states that there must be a demonstrable need for any University regulation.

The injunction request, which SAC filed with Eldon Nonnamaker, associate dean of students, may be aired in a special emergency meeting next week, Dickmeyer said.

He said SAC hopes to show the Student-Faculty Judiciary that the decision on the Library jeopardizes the rights of students (section 1.2), violates the conflicting rights clause of students (section 1.5.06) and shows no demonstrable need (section 1.5.02).

Nixon appoints Klein as 'super-press agent'

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Richard M. Nixon tagged his longtime press secretary, Herbert G. Klein, Monday for a newly-created top assignment: riding herd on all federal press agents.

Klein, a California newspaper editor, will become a super-press agent or, to use his formal title, "director of communications for the executive branch."

Before the election, many observers had expected Klein, a Nixon friend since 1946, to serve as White House press secretary in any Nixon administration. However, the president-elect decided to abolish that familiar title and is trying to devise what was described by aides as a new "communications structure."

Klein, who will rank with the top level of Nixon personal aides, said he will coordinate public information activities throughout the federal government, except for the White House.

Declaring that the aim is to channel more, not less, information to press and public, Klein predicted that "truth will become the hallmark of the Nixon administration."

Exactly how he will function as trail boss for the hundreds of press agents throughout government was not immediately clear.

But one thing seemed certain: Klein's involvement in White House affairs will be limited. He will not even have a White House office, but instead will work out of the neighboring Executive Office Bldg.

Nixon earlier had named another, younger man to be his chief White House spokesman: Ron Ziegler, 29, formerly a Los Angeles advertising account executive.

Congress slashes grants to aid Michigan freshmen

By CHRIS MEAD
State News Staff Writer

The University is going to find it more difficult to admit black freshman and other low-income students next year, following a last-minute Congressional slash of federal education grants.

Members of the MSU Financial Aids Dept. today are discussing the implications of a 78 per cent reduction in the federally administered Educational Opportunities Grant (EOG) at a meeting of the Midwest Assn. of Student Financial Aid Administration in Peoria, Ill.

Gordon Sabine, vice president for special projects, expressed his concern over the budget slash at Thursday's MSU Board of Trustees meeting.

He explained that the EOG program was set up to aid financially any Michigan student through the National Education Defense Act loan and through the work study program.

"Because the freshman grant (EOG) has been cut by 78 per cent," Sabine explained, "There will be enough money for only 220 freshman next fall."

President Hannah explained that the hurry-up slashing of EOG funds occurred when Congress took $16 million from the EOG budget and transferred it to a fund for aid to junior colleges.

"There's nothing wrong with that," Hannah said, "but they didn't know what they were doing."

This fall 1,207 MSU students received Educational Opportunity grants made possible through approximately $3 million in federal aid.

Sabine noted that of 357 black freshman on campus this fall 310 are receiving some sort of financial aid, which includes 175 on the EOG program.

"It appears that the nature of Michigan freshmen has changed," he said.

He noted that the freshman class each year has shown increased need for some financial aid which hit a peak this year when 48 per cent of the in-state freshman class was receiving some sort of financial aid.

Obsenity hearing

The Student-Faculty Judiciary will hold an open hearing on the State News obscenity case at 8 p.m. Dec. 4 in the third floor conference room of the Student Services Bldg.

Four State News editors have charged Louis J. Berman, general manager of the State News with violating sections 6.1.2.3, 6.1.2.4 and 6.1.2.5 of the Academic Freedom Report.

Berman threatened to cut the pay of three editors after they printed a story using obscene words without properly informing the printer.

If the slash in federal grants is not compensated for in some other respect, Sabine said, the University will have to seek other means of providing financial aid to students, such as expanding the work-study program.

But, Sabine pointed out, "A great many of these students are not in a position to work more than 20 hours a week on campus."

Sabine said the grant cut is having an immediate effect on the University's admissions procedure.

"We try to have applications wrapped up by February or the first of March," he said, "and we can't offer them money we don't have."

On a national basis, EOG offers "high need" students 100,000 awards annually. If the 78 per cent budget cut goes through, the number of awards for the next school year will be only 22,000.

Enemy jets, missiles down two U.S. planes

SAIGON (AP) — Two American jet planes were downed over North Vietnam Monday after coming under attack by Communist MIGs and surface to air missiles.

The U.S. Command said in a terse announcement an unarmed reconnaissance aircraft and an armed fighter plane—which often accompany reconnaissance sorties—went down over the North in separate incidents.

Details of the encounters were withheld while efforts got under way to rescue the crews. Headquarters said "suppressive fire," presumably bombing and strafing runs, was called in to cover their rescue.

Hanoi radio announced earlier that an American reconnaissance plane was shot down and its pilot captured after he parachuted about 175 miles north of the demilitarized zone. A later broadcast said a U.S. F4 fighter-bomber was knocked from the skies after it showered anti-personnel pellet bombs over Bo Trach village, just north of the DMZ. Its pilot was captured, too, the broadcast said.

The two downings announced by the U.S. Command were the second and third manned aircraft shot down over the North since the Nov. 1 bombing halt. The first one, an Air Force Phantom reconnaissance jet, was brought down Saturday and its two-man crew listed as missing after an unsuccessful rescue effort.

While bombing and shelling of North Vietnam has been stopped under President Johnson's orders to promote escalation of the Paris peace talks, aerial scouting over the North has continued.

North Vietnamese news media had previously reported the destruction of five pilotless reconnaissance aircraft in what they called "more than 190 spy flights" (Please turn to page 7)

Universities face interference

By ROGER PALMS
State News Staff Writer

Partisan politics is blamed by some people as the reason for the Michigan Legislature's attempts to interfere in the internal affairs of the university.

MSU, Wayne State University and the University of Michigan have labeled "unconstitutional" some of the public acts passed by the legislature.

These public acts have sections forbidding the increase of non-resident student enrollment by more than five per cent. A $600 cutback in appropriations is threatened for "each non-resident student enrolled in violation of this section."

The universities are forbidden to enter into self-liquidating projects like residence halls without legislative approval. New or expanded programs without the approval of the legislature are forbidden.

Six months after the trustees and regents of the three universities filed suit against the state legislature charging that these acts are unconstitutional, the Michigan House of Representatives passed another resolution against the universities.

House Resolution 277 stated that the universities would receive cutbacks in their appropriations in proportion to the number of "riotous and undisciplined students" on the campus.

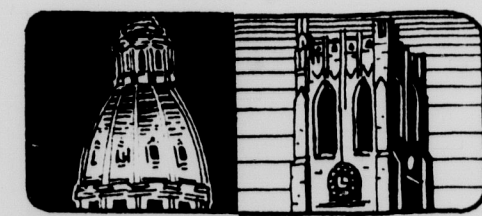

"That was a threat. We have no control over the trustees," Philip Pittenger, R-Lansing, said, who is one of the sponsors of the resolution.

Newly elected James Brown, R-Lansing, said, "This is the only way that the taxpayers can control the institution."

Pittenger said during his campaign for re-election that he felt that these actions came primarily from the Republican members of the legislature because of the Democratic control of the MSU Board of Trustees. "They are laughing at the legislature," he said.

Lt. Gov. William G. Milliken thought that these actions by the legislature were not meant to embarrass the trustees.

The Legislature and the U

Second in a series

"This was not partisan," he said. This was more of a move to have certain activities changed, Milliken said.

Milliken said that there would probably be more attempts by the legislature to control the universities through the purse strings but added that the legislature could not do this constitutionally.

"It gets very political," said Mrs. Harold Currie, voters service chairman of the East Lansing League of Women Voters. She said that educational issues get bandied about in an emotional way.

Mrs. Rose Brunson, president of the Lansing Assn. of Women's Clubs said that the legislature's attempts to control the universities was more than partisan politics.

"It's personalities," she said. It's not just what the public wants, it's what the legislator wants, she said.

"A legislator could be an uneducated person," Mrs. Brunson said. If he is well liked, he gets elected. Yet a legislator like that has his own prejudices and personality problems, Mrs. Brunson said.

"If he had the power to sway people, he could lead up the university," she said.

These are emotional issues, Milliken said. The legislature is responsive to public sentiment. "They could move on and unwisely alter policy," he said.

Students must take 'sour grapes' stand

The American community does not usually place too much significance on grapes. But when the purchase of grapes, in particular—California grapes, affects the well-being of thousands of farm workers, then the significance is of too great importance to be neglected.

The main dispute is between the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee and the growers in California. While the committee has asked the American people to refrain from buying California grapes in support of striking workers, the growers have continued to supply food stores throughout the country with the fruit in question.

What is particular distressing is the fact that MSU now purchases many grapes which come from California, and these are served to the students living in the residence halls. It must be emphasized that students should not eat these "grapes of wrath."

With this student boycott of grapes, the workers' strike would have an improved chance for success. These farm workers have been unjustly treated, especially in terms of wages, by the growers.

Don Stevens, chairman of the MSU Board of Trustees, expressed Monday his support for the grape boycott. He said, "Should this matter come before the board of trustees... I shall recommend and vote to stop all University purchases of California grapes until this controversy is settled."

However, it should be pointed out that the University has not officially taken a stand on the grape situation. Up to now, the University has been tacitly aiding the growers by not taking a position. The University should commit itself on this matter by supporting the farm workers and refusing to purchase the large quantity of grapes now being bought.

By taking this stand, the University will be complying with the boycott now taking place in Detroit as well as in other cities. If the present "nonpolicy" is continued, whereby nonunion grapes could be dumped on the University, then the University will be a major contributor to the forces against the workers.

Only if all of us refrain from buying California grapes picked by nonunion members, will the growers be forced to return the striking workers to their rightful positions.

An urgent, unified effort, not a disorganized reaction is the key to success.

The May controversy: soon a matter of record

Another round of the MSU trustees' favorite game, Conflict of Interest, is over, with MSU Treasurer Philip J. May the apparent loser.

It is unfortunate that this situation took on the monstrous proportions it did, and resulted in the obvious damage to May's reputation, since he is probably not guilty of intentional profiteering from his wife's stock in the Philip Jesse Co., which rented a building to IBM Corp., which contracts to the University.

May's guilt was a case of bad foresight and unforeseen implications. His bad judgment necessitated the action, but perhaps it could have been handled with less austerity and more diplomacy than it was.

It is fortunate, however, that he was allowed to retire with an element of respect left before the new Democratically controlled board takes over, a board which would have been certain to fire him for his recent political comments.

May has handled the bulk of the financial proceedings of the University for the last 20 years, and his performance during that period would not have warranted stripping him of all honor and dignity.

Certainly May is not alone in his guilt for this unfortunate situation. The entire affair was blown extremely out of proportion by muck raking parties, many of whom have themselves ironically been charged with Conflict of Interest in the past.

The damage done to the University's reputation by this incident may take quite a while to heal, but perhaps we can all breathe a sigh of relief that the affair is over, and allow the air to clear without making any more biting accusations that will accomplish nothing.

Let us allow the May controversy to pass as quietly, and as uneventfully as possible so that the University can reassume the integrity it deserves.

OUR READERS' MIND

Grape issue everyone's concern

To the Editor:

There is presently an issue which is growing on campus which I believe deserves more attention from the students and faculty. The problem to which I refer is the question over whether the University should support the boycott effort of the National Farm Workers Assn. I cannot help but wonder if the student body is aware of what the National Farm Workers Assn. is really seeking? I wonder how many know that farm workers are denied union representation under the National Labor Relations Act of 1935? I wonder how many are aware that a worker's average income for 1965 was about $1,350, or how many know that the cost of field labor to the California grower is only 2 cents to 5 cents on the dollar? Willard Wirtz has pointed out, even if growers doubled wages, they could pass on the increase to the consumer without raising prices much. On a head of lettuce for example, Wirtz estimates that such an increase would amount to about 1 cent. I wonder how many know that lacking toilets, women workers were obliged to squat down between rows, or that in one camp workers were charged for water?

I wonder if people know how much misery can be caused through apathy. This is not an issue for any faction of the University to become involved in. This is an issue for all, even those who thought they would never become involved in any issue over University policy.

I wonder how many know how the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy felt about the National Farm Workers Assn. In February of 1968 Sen. Kennedy attended a mass following the end of a hunger strike by Cesar Chavez (the head of the NFWA) in which he gave a short speech which he ended by saying "Viva la Causa" "Viva Cesar Chavez!" "Viva all of you!" I wonder if those who supported the senator could have forgotten so quickly what he stood for and believed in? Maybe they have or maybe now they are ready to make a stand.

Poor alternatives

To the Editor:

There seems to be a general "non-partisan" kind of enthusiasm around sparked by Dr. Leroy G. Augenstein to alter the method presently used to select the members of our statewide educational board. I would like to suggest that while there are irrational elements in the present method, it is probably superior to either of the proposed alternatives.

No. 1 alternative is for the governor to appoint the boards. But as long as governors are elected, they will make political appointments to these positions. Therefore, we will not escape political considerations of one kind or another and be no further ahead.

The second alternative is to hold the elections so that we can "weigh the candidates on their own merits." This is a craftily designed scheme to insure perpetual Republican control of our educational institutions. It is a well known fact that the poor, alienated, uneducated, and those in minority groups tend not to vote except in general elections; but it is these very groups who should have increased representation on the educational boards.

Therefore, I suggest that whatever faults the present system may have it is in fact better than the proposed remedies and ought to be preserved until something more perfect is devised.

On leadership

To the Editor:

A lesson for today's college students from whence comes the bulk of the leadership of tomorrow—

You have to admire the cautious efficiency of the Russians who to date have not gotten themselves involved in pointless wars they cannot win, aligned with allies they cannot depend upon to help themselves, all the while you can observe the mighty United States with 500,000 men, absolute sea and air dominance, 800,000 South Vietnamese allies and enormous material and financial resources unable after four years to knock out an estimated 400,000 impoverished natives 10,000 miles away and no clear and present danger to the United States. Shades of King George III!

And you can observe also the clear and present need to do something constructive about our problems here at home including the causes of racial and economic justice.

Coincidentally, this same United States has permitted the establishment of a Communist government 90 miles off our shores.

Moral considerations aside—the United States has been misled into an intolerable state of affairs against some competent military advice of long standing: "avoid land wars in Asia."

The democratic process?

To the Editor:

On Nov. 9 of this term, various friends and I in Bailey Hall were quietly enjoying the company of a young lady when we were rudely interrupted at 3:30 a.m. by a R.A., and the asst. head adviser, who sent in their report to the proper authorities concerning our violation of a University Regulation. The wheels of justice have been slowly grinding and our trial has finally arrived at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, in room 152, Student Services Bldg.

We think it would be nice if the students of MSU would come to Student Services at 7 p.m. to show support for our stand and perhaps observe the democratic process at work. I intend to ask for an open hearing since secret sessions behind closed doors are not the American way and with Andy Pyle, our defense counsel, we intend to raise a vigorous defense and receive a verdict of not guilty. We have discovered some interesting things in the Academic Freedom Report which will support our case and have far reaching implications for the entire student body.

But obviously we see this as more than a simple legal case to be cranked out and then forgotten since there are important moral aspects to this case. We were in no way impinging on anyone else's life.

liberty, and pursuit of happiness; so what right has the University to determine my social life, blah, blah, blah. But you've heard all this before, and arrived at your decisions. Now is the time to act, and the first act is to be present at our trial. Then the University will be forced to reveal itself to you.

Will the hearing be open or closed? Will we be acquitted or convicted? Will we be punished?

After the University makes itself clear, we will be able to plan a further course of action. Until then, what you can do is show us three your support. Thank you.

A word from our sponsor

Earlier last week one might have been entertained, if he had chosen to tune in, by NBC's Monday and Tuesday night commercials between 9 and 11 p.m. Although these two hour spans of "messages of importance" entail pitches for a wide variety of unrelated products and thereby lack an overall continuity and cohesiveness, they do create a kind of rhythmic tempo that builds up recurring images of Tareyton black eyes and Fresca snowstorms.

The rhythm pattern goes something like this: national spot -- national spot -- local spot--station identification--national spot, and repeats itself into a crescendoing effect that inexorably draws the viewer into a swirling vortex of Madison Avenue imagery and brings him to a state of phosphorescently induced mental limbo in which his identity merges with the total pattern, leaving him muttering with glassy eyes, "Buy, buy."

While attempting to merge with the overall pattern of these seemingly innocuous messages from the lower atmosphere, however, I found my concentration disturbed by repeated interruptions during which some Spanish knight had frequent love scenes with a beautiful woman and occasionally rode off to fight the Moors.

At first thinking these interruptions were some noise in the air-break reception of the movie being shown on a transcontinental air flight or the prank of a precocious neighbor child, I would occupy myself preparing a sandwich or paring my fingernails until the commercials returned and I could direct my attention to them once again.

My roommate shattered my viewing orientation by informing me that these interruptions which bothered me were actually scenes from the great motion picture epic El Cid. That, he went on, was the actual program content and the repeated bursts of short work that I had been observing were advertisements by the various firms who had made it possible for this motion picture epic to be brought into our living room.

He even had the audacity to suggest that not only was this the way television presently operates, but also that this was the underlying concept upon which the industry was based.

This, of course, was wrong. As anyone knows, great motion picture epics, but more often, not so great motion picture pinnacles, are brought into our living rooms to make it possible for various firms to capture audiences for their advertising, not the other way around. The service is done at the receiving, not at the broadcasting, end of the medium by those who are suffered to sit through innumerable "words from our sponsors" in order to view a few minutes of entertainment.

In the tragic case of the television showing of El Cid, for instance, a motion picture of considerable spectacle was broken down into what must have been a feeble and uninspiring remnant of what its producers intended.

Part of the difficulty is common to anything that is produced for one medium and used in another. A great deal is lost when vast panoramic scenes of great spectacle and color such as those in El Cid are reduced to 21-inch "picturettes." The dramatic effect is lost, and what was once awe-inspiring becomes tedious.

This difficulty is accepted by most viewers, and little can be done about it until the masterminds at Zenith can mass produce a giant screen handcrafted of course that one can have built into a wall or propped against a convenient giant marble column.

Another difficulty need not, and should not be accepted. It is the repeated interruption of dramatic content by several back-to-back commercials. This is especially felt in viewing movies such as El Cid which are constructed to the scale of spectacle, which means long dramatic scenes moving slowly and powerfully in a certain direction.

When this type of scene is frequently interrupted, the result is a detrimental loss of continuity. The television industry itself has a code which establishes a minimum ratio of advertising to program content and specifically prohibits "triple-spotting," the annoying back-to-back screening of several commercials. Apparently the code is enforced more stringently in cases of "questionable" program content than in questionable proliferation of advertising.

When "The Robe" was shown on television early last fall, its producers insisted that it be shown uninterrupted. Ford Motor Co. sponsored the show with a long and interesting message at the beginning, a shorter message in the middle where the intermission would normally occur, and a final one at the end. The result was an enjoyable evening's viewing and good public relations for Ford, who came out more like a public-spirited benefactor than a typically ogre-like, hard-selling sponsor.

More of this is needed if viewer faith in commercial television is not to be trampled to death by charging white knights or drowned in an effluvia of gimmick-ridden catchphrases.

NEWS summary

A capsule summary of the day's events from our wire services.

"I have these season tickets and . . . well, I guess I was just hoping for two miracles in one day."

International News

• The official Chinese Communist press warned Monday that the army's role is to work as well as to fight. This suggested that supporters of Mao Tse-tung are tightening the reins of state power against the possibility of opposition to some of Chairman Mao's recent edicts.

The warning was contained in a joint editorial of People's Daily, the main party newspaper, Liberation Army Daily, the armed forces organ, and Red Flag, the theoretical journal.

• Several persons perished and scores were injured Monday in a renewed outbreak of rioting in Alexandria, travelers returning from Egypt reported.

Thousands of students and workers threw the Egyptian port city into turmoil, and demonstrators spilled over from the university district into the city's main squares and thoroughfares, the reports said. There was no official count of casualties.

National News

• Less than eight hours after his wife gave birth to quadruplets, three girls and a son, Gustave Putter of Redford Township explained his presence at a football game saying he was "hoping for two miracles in one day."

Putter, 34, was at Dearborn's Oakwood Hospital at 4:58 a.m. Sunday when his wife Pamela, 31, began her delivery and also when it was completed at 5:22 a.m. with the birth of the boy. He was also around for the beginning and end of the Detroit-New Orleans National Football League game which wound up in a 20-20 deadlock and thus snuffed out Putter's hopes for a second "miracle"—a Detroit victory.

"I wouldn't have come, if the nurses hadn't assured me that Pam and the kids were doing fine," Gustave said. The Putters have two other children, Brian, 6, and Todd, 1.

• Henry H. Fowler, secretary of the treasury, expressed confidence Monday that weekend decisions in Western Europe have averted the threat of an international monetary crisis.

The actions, he told a news conference, also will "not affect the value of the U.S. dollar in any way." One side effect, he said, could be to make American goods more competitive in Germany and other countries outside France.

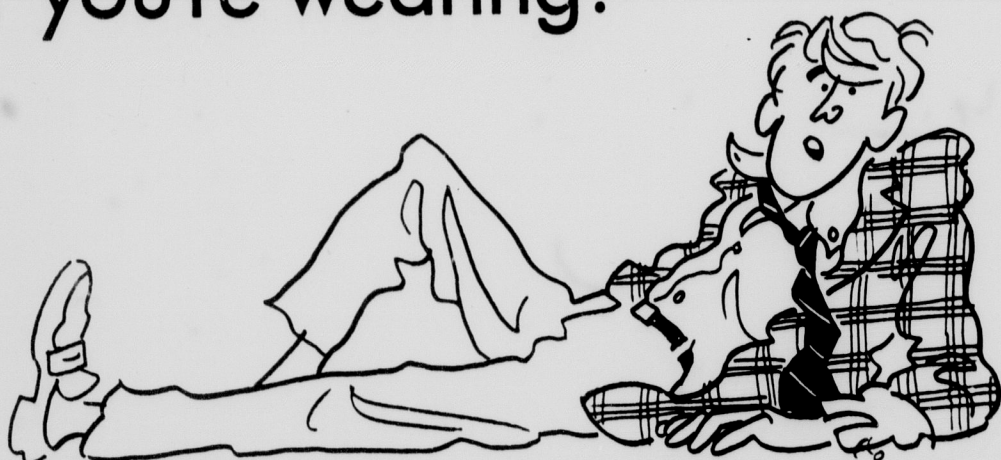

• A new 174-foot boat, trying to move an oil drilling barge in strong winds, sank suddenly before dawn Monday. Sixteen men were rescued from the chilly waters, off the coast of Santa Barbara, Calif., and another nine were being sought by planes and ships.

• Tired and frightened, 3-year-old Brenda Ann Maquar returned home Monday after being carried more than halfway across the country by an abductor.

Brenda was kidnapped last Wednesday from a stroller left in front of a neighborhood grocery store by her young brother and sister who were given money by a man to buy balloons in the store. She was returned to New Orleans after being found in a Needles, Calif., hospital with Frank Willis Castile, 39, of Fresno, Calif., who was charged with the kidnaping. Brenda and Castile were taken to the hospital after an auto accident on Interstate 40.

• Vice President Hubert Humphrey said Monday he intends to lead the Democratic Party back from defeat by healing old wounds and attracting young blood.

"And then she said, 'Wow, what's that after shave you're wearing?'"

We keep warning you to be careful how you use Hai Karate® After Shave and Cologne. We even put instructions on self-defense in every package. But your best silk ties and shirts can still get torn to pieces. That's why you'll want to wear our nearly indestructible Hai Karate Lounging Jacket when you wear Hai Karate Regular or Oriental Lime. Just tell us your size (s,m,l) and send one empty Hai Karate carton, with $4 (check or money order), for each Hai Karate Lounging Jacket to: Hai Karate, P.O. Box 41A, Mount Vernon, N.Y. 10056. That way, if someone gives you some Hai Karate, you can be a little less careful how you use it.

MANNINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — A small explosion spit a puff of smoke from a coal mine's portal Monday, but it crippled hopes of sending more rescue teams to search for 78 men trapped more than five days in its smoldering tunnels.

The blast was the 13th to wrack the Mountaineer Coal Co. No. 9 mine near this tiny community and was given great importance because it indicated the heart of the big mine was still ablaze.

The first explosion thundered through the labyrinth of passageways early last Wednesday as the 99-man midnight shift was about to quit work. Twenty-one men escaped or were rescued.

Two rescue units poked through the mine's tunnels Sunday night and found no trace of the 78 who have not been contacted since the initial explosion. The eruption Monday ruled out the immediate possibility of sending in more search teams.

"As long as we have no assurance the fire is out," said Alder Spotte, an engineer for Mountaineer's parent firm, Consolidation Coal Co., "we cannot send men down."

"These puffs are what scare the hell out of you," Spotte told a late morning news conference. "The new explosion confirms the theory there is an explosive mixture of methane gas and coal dust."

Spotte said, however, there was no thought being given at that time to sealing the mine.

Rex Lauck, public relations adviser for the United Mine Workers, told a later news conference that "the effort being made to save the men is being done at the risk of human life and we believe these men are alive."

Officials and relatives of the entombed men crammed into the small company store for the noon news conference. Lauck was asked what kind of benefits the men were found dead.

"Hell, man, they don't want to hear that," a man shouted.

"That's a question that should not have been brought up."

"We don't want to hear it," two women yelled. "We're not worried about that."

The men were found dead. "Hell, man, they don't want to hear that," a man shouted. "That's a question that should not have been brought up."

A sensitive microphone lowered through two of the borings produced no sound of men's voices—just the bubbling of water and falling pebbles.

A sample of air from one section of a tunnel, sucked up through a slim copper tube pushed down the bore hole, was another setback.

"The air was not good enough for men to live in and breathe in," James McCarthey, a Consolidation representative said. Spotte said the puff of smoke at the Llewellyn shaft—scene of the first explosion and six later blasts—was a setback.

He said he could not estimate whether the explosion Monday morning increased the mine fire either in intensity or scope.

One unit worked its way toward the Llewellyn shaft and penetrated 4,500 feet into the mine, to within two and one-half miles from the Llewellyn portal. They turned back when carbon monoxide became noticeable.

Stevens stresses board should set own initiative

By ADRIENNE MOORE

Don Stevens, chairman of the MSU board of Trustees, said Sunday night that he supports the California grape strikers in their effort to become unionized, but that now is not the time to force the board to take a stand on the issue. Stevens made the statement at a discussion on "Grapes and the Ghetto-Fair Employment Opportunity," held at St. John's Student Center. Venustino Olguin, representative of the United Farm Workers organizing committee, was guest speaker.

Stevens told the students that he hoped the University and the city of Lansing would hold a position on the boycott, but that in the University's case he "could not be sure that the board would be sympathetic now."

He prefers to wait until January when he said he feels a position would do the most good.

Some of the Students singled Stevens out of the group because they said that he had failed to take a stand last week when questioned on the California strike. They said that they hoped to force the University from buying California table grapes, which it now purchases from leading strike-ridden growers.

Olguin, making a 10-day sweep through Michigan, told the students that they must plan positive action in requesting the University take a stand. He said that the move must be continuous for an effective period of time in order to arouse more student support on campus and in other areas.

Calling himself a "trouble-shooter for UFW president Cesar Chavez, Olguin explained the union's position in the strike.

The United Farm Workers are requesting collective bargaining rights, preferably under federal legislation of the National Labor Relations Act. They are asking the growers to allow them to have secret ballots and a redress of grievances.

They are also requesting a three-year contract setting the minimum wage at $1.90 per hour with a 10 cent increase each year of the contract, he continued. Unemployment insurance, end to arbitrary dismissal, interracial discrimination, child labor laws, political power in small farm towns, and medical services are all stipulated in the union contract.

Israeli, Jordan forces exchange fire across river

AMMAN, Jordan (AP)—Jordan and Israeli forces exchanged mortar and machine gun fire across the Jordan River Monday. A Jordan army spokesman accused the Israeli forces of firing on Jordan troops six miles south of Sheikh Hussein Bridge. He said the Jordanian forces returned the fire and the clash lasted 18 minutes. There were no casualties among the Jordanians.

BRENNER 2ND TEAM PICK

O.J. heads UPI All-America

NEW YORK (UPI) — MSU Football Captain Al Brenner was named Monday to United Press International's second team All-America defensive unit.

Brenner, Niles senior, was the only Spartan player named to the two-deep "Dream Team" selected by 202 of the nation's sportswriters and broadcasters.

Two other members of the MSU defensive unit were given honorable mention—linebacker Rich Saul and middle guard Charlie Bailey. Southern California's O. J. (Orange Juice) Simpson, who has done many fabulous things on a football field, did something just as amazing in the voting booth when he was unanimously named to the All-American College Football Team.

In a year when no candidate received a majority in the ballot race for president of the United States, Simpson showed 'em how by getting his name on all 202 ballots.

The previous closest approach to perfection on the UPI team—the only team chosen by direct vote of the nation's sports writers and broadcasters—was by end Charles (Bubba) Smith of MSU who came within seven votes of a perfect sweep on the 1966 team.

Simpson was joined on the honor squad by one other teammate on Southern California, currently the nation's No. 1-ranked team—defensive back Mike Battle. However, Notre Dame took top team honors on the squad by grabbing three places—and Notre Dame will be Southern Cal's last foe of the season this Saturday.

Ther versatile Leroy Keyes of Purdue was runner-up to Simpson in total ballots with 191, and that was a repeat of the 1-2 finish of last year. Keyes received 1962 of his votes on offense and 29 on defense.

Taking over from the South, the Midwest dominated the honor team this year. Midwestern players took six of the 22 first-team places against five each from the South and Far West, and two each from the East, Southwest, and Midlands.

West Chester State 'S' booters next foe

By PAM BOYCE
State News Sports Writer
A title-hungry Spartan soccer team in quest of its second consecutive national title travels east this weekend to butt heads with the West Chester State Rams.

The Spartan booters tackle the Rams in Philadelphia this Saturday in the semi-finals of the 1968 NCAA tournament. MSU is defending its 1967 title which it now shares with St. Louis.

who was eliminated from this year's tourney by Maryland last weekend.

The Rams, sporting a 9-2 record, are ranked No. 1 in the New Jersey-Pennsylvania-Delaware region and have defeated several top teams in the East, including Fairleigh-Dickinson, East Stroudsburg State and Pittsburgh. The only teams to hand them defeats have been Navy, 3-2, and Baltimore, 2-1.

The Rams' scoring attack is led by Joe Elwell, junior, who has 18 goals to his credit. Co-Captains Craig Shellhamer, the Rams' goalie, and Don Weller lead the defense.

The Rams have outscored their opponents, 37-17, this season. After 12 games, MSU has denied the opponents' nets 71 times, allowing only four goals, all accumulated in their first game with Akron.

West Chester State has been represented in the NCAA tournament five times in the past.

LEE LAFAYETTE

Cagers battle tonight

BY MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

An optimistic freshman basketball squad will be out to break the varsity's domination of the Freshman-Varsity game when the two teams meet tonight at Jenison Fieldhouse. Game time is 7:30.

"It should be a much closer game than in the past," Head Coach John Benington said. "A game like this brings out the best in the frosh because they will be underdogs, and it should make for an unusually competitive game."

Benington can watch this game as an impartial observer because he is turning the coaching reins over to his assistant Gus Ganakas. Bob Nordman will handle the coaching duties for the freshman team.

For Benington, the game may provide him with an answer to his No. 1 problem, the forward situation. As it stands now, the forward positions are up for grabs among four holdovers: Bernie Copeland, Jon Holms, Jim Gibbons, and Bob Gale. The test of the lineup is set with 6-6 Lee Lafayette at center, and 6-2 Harrison Stepter and 5-9 Lloyd Ward at the guard slots. Benington says that 6-10 Tom Lick has looked very impressive in practice and will see plenty of action.

Nordman plans to start a lineup of 6-5 Ralph Simpson and 6-1 Gary Pryzbylo at the guards, 6-6 Ron Gutkowski and 6-3 Pat Miller at the forwards, with either 6-7 Bill Cohrs or 6-9 Craig Larsen at center. "The lack of experience will hurt us, most of the boys have never experienced the kind of defensive pressure that the varsity uses," Nordman said. "The varsity is bigger, stronger, and smarter at this stage and they have played together as a unit for several years."

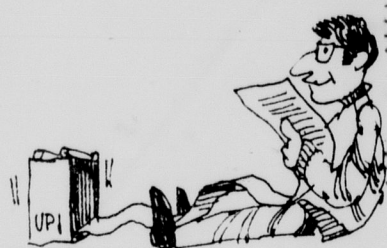

But with a player of Simpson's caliber on the court anything can happen. He was one of the top five players in the country in his senior year in high school, and Benington feels he could become an outstanding college player.

Ralph is an exceptional shooter and potentially the best prospect to come to MSU in some time," Benington said. "I think he could be a super player in college because he is dedicated to being that kind of a player."

Nordman's boys feel they can beat the varsity, a feat that is very rare in college basketball but it has happened at UCLA and at Notre Dame, so it can be done.

Tickets are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students with the receipts going to the MSU Varsity Club.

NEW YORK—The MSU cross country team finished 13th Monday in the NCAA championship meet held in New York's Van Cortland Park.

The Spartan harriers, who won the Big Ten title a week ago, scored 304 points to finish well behind champion Villanova's 83-point total.

MSU finished fourth behind Villanova in the ICA meet which was run last Monday on this same site.

Villanova, which won the NCAA title for the third straight year, was followed by Stanford and Southern California.

Ken Leonowitz, junior, led MSU by finishing 16th which will earn him All-America recognition.

Kim Hartman finished 54th in the field while Roger Mer-

USC remains No. 1

NEW YORK (UPI) — Southern California, unbeaten in nine games this season, maintained a slim lead over second ranked Ohio State Monday when the 35-member United Press International Board of Coaches awarded them 21 first-place votes and 332 points. Penn State (9-0) held third with 287 points. Georgia moved up to fourth and Kansas took fifth with Texas, Tennessee, Arkansas, Notre Dame and Oklahoma completing the top 10. Houston held 11th and Purdue moved up to 12th, followed by Michigan, Oregon State and Alabama. Missouri slipped to 16th, unbeaten Ohio University (10-0) captured 17th, Florida State was 18th and three teams—Southern Methodist, Stanford and Minnesota—tied off 19th.

Why does a perfect size 7 look perfect only 21 days every month?

It has nothing to do with calories. It's a special female weight gain... caused by temporary water-weight build-up. Oh, you know... that uncomfortable full feeling that sneaks up on you the week before your menstrual period. This fluid retention not only plays havoc with your looks but how you feel as well. (It puts pressure on delicate nerves and tissues, which can lead to pre-menstrual cramps and headaches, leaves emotions on edge.)

That's why so many women take PAMPRIN. It gently relieves water-weight gain to help prevent pre-menstrual puffiness, tension, and pressure-caused cramps. PAMPRIN makes sure a perfect size 7 never looks less than perfect. Nor feels less than perfect, either.

PAC sets 'Pinocchio' in matinee

If there is an important little an important part of you is a little boy or girl—you will want to be sure to get tickets for the Performing Arts Co.'s (PAC) special production of the children's classic, "Pinocchio," playing at 2 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Fairchild Theater.

Originally written as a novel by Carl Colloidi, the irresistible tale of the puppet-boy with the growing nose has been adapted for the stage and directed by John Baldwin of MSU's Theatre Dept.

In case anyone is unfamiliar with Pinocchio, he is a mischievous puppet, cruelly treated by the wicked puppetmaster Mastoroni. With the aid of Glissandra (the Blue Fairy), Pinocchio escapes and goes to live with the kindly woodcutter, Geppetto. Having been promised that he will be turned into a real boy if he is good and tells the truth.

"Pinocchio" stars Jim Fineman in the title role, with Paul Meacham (Geppetto), Janet Strazzulla (Glissandra), Mike Oberfield (the Fox), Alice Foster (the Cat), John Peese (Mastoroni), and Roger Powell as Pinocchio's companion, Candlewick.

The Fairchild Theater box office will be open today and Wednesday, 12:30-5 p.m., and 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Friday-Sunday for those wishing to purchase tickets. Admission for each of the matinees is 75 cents. Doors open at 1:30 p.m.

INTERNATIONAL UNITY

Club rules out conformity

By GLORIA SNEED
State News Staff Writer

In a world where conformity is the rule, 25 years of promoting understanding of differences among the people of the world is quite an accomplishment—but this is exactly what the International Club has done.

"I think the club has had its tides and ebbs, but it has done a lot for foreign and American students," Dharendra Vajpayi, club president, said.

Celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, the club has not allowed "old age" to cause stagnation.

This year witnessed its expansion to sponsor a bi-monthly newsletter and informal gatherings where students have an opportunity to meet people from all over the world.

In addition, it began sponsoring special seminars to deal with the understanding of social and cultural changes facing Asia, Africa and Latin America. Later these will be expanded to include the different countries that help these areas in their social and economic development.

With the purposes of encouraging friendliness and fellowship among foreign and American students here at the University, as well as the promotion of appreciation of American and foreign cultures, the International Club has grown from 30 students representing 14 different countries in 1944 when it was founded, to more than 500 students from 40 different countries.

All in all, with more than 1,063 foreign students from over 80 countries, the University has taken on the atmosphere of a miniature world's fair with sari just as much a part of the scenery as mini skirts.

With its office located in the U.N. Lounge of the Union, the club works closely with the 16 nationality clubs in coordinating and planning programs.

The social aspects of the club center around the International Ball which was held this month and judged a large success by Vajpayi, the International Dinner normally held in the winter and the International Festival held in the spring. It also sponsors a Christmas party, nationality nights and stage shows.

Membership in the club is open to all foreign and American students who are interested

Film flouts farcical 'Flea'

Reviewing comedy is a risky business, since one man's humor often proves another man's boredom. But even comedies have their dramatic frameworks, their production values and their acting, so it is upon this basis that "A Flea In Her Ear" must be both lauded and condemned.

Although it is based on a French bedroom farce, directed by the Frenchman who made it a stage success, translated into English, performed by a British cast and filmed in Paris for an American producer, "A Flea In Her Ear" somehow withstands the pressures of international co-production. Its farcical nature and turn-of-the-century setting make it more of air than of earth, freeing the play from national restrictions. Strong, Dry Wit

And Feydeau's play, as reviewed by State News, does not seem to have lost in the translation. The dry wit of Mortimer's lines often reminiscent of "The Wrong Box," is indeed the film's strongest facet. A maid asks in all seriousness, "If I give you five francs, will you save my life?" A lawyer explains his early return from the office with "I just had a short rape today. It didn't take long." And it continues like that for two hours.

As for dramatic framework, let it suffice to say that after the initial set-up, which consists of a suspicious wife sending an anonymous proposition note to her husband to test his fidelity, the plot reaches such an awesome complexity that it defies description.

Hollywood Leer

I realize that my summary contains all the hallmarks of a Doris Day atrocity, but somehow, the French remain devoid of the leering quality which Hollywood always adds to its sex farces.

The entire production emits a sense of stylized nostalgia, with both the wit of Oscar Wilde and the slapstick of the silent era. The performances (which are uniformly excellent, from Rex Harrison down to the tiniest bit) have the fierce speed of an old screwball comedy and, unlike those in more recent farces, maintain their dignity throughout.

Quality Weekened

But what waters down all this quality—and it is quite watered down—is the film medium itself. Certainly the play could have made a memorable movie, but the director Jacques Charon (who also directed it for the stage) has inserted just enough shots of bicycle-riding, just enough lavish sets, and just enough added material to pull us away from the action and set us oohing and aahing at the glories of Paris.

Funny Lines Buried

He undoubtedly did these things with the purpose of more fully utilizing the film medium. But in what is essentially an artificial stage piece, these distractions may spell disaster. The gloriously funny lines become buried in the "Gigi"-like gloss.

Still, I don't want to be too picky. Most of "A Flea In Her Ear" has the type of light-hearted exuberance which I thoroughly enjoy. But if it all sounds a bit stupid to you, I could not disagree.

Hubbard paper supports petition abolishing SN tax

By SUE REBECK
State News Staff Writer

The first issue of the Hubbard Hall newspaper, the "Damn Straight, or 24 Floors of Gore," has been partially devoted to the promotion of the controversy over the State News tax.

A story in the newspaper advocates the petition which has been circulated around campus. This petition states:

"We the undersigned full-time undergraduates of Michigan State University favor a referendum on the following proposal:

Proposed: No all-University student newspaper or other publication may be supported in whole or in part by a tax on the students. No student may be denied registration in the University for failure to subscribe to any student publications. This proposal shall not affect residence hall newspapers or similar publications of limited circulation.

Supporting the petition are Hubbard residents, Tom Sleeter, Port Huron junior, Phil Singer, Grosse Pointe Woods senior, and Steve Hanna, Fortville, Ind., junior.

The article stated that the State News should not be tax supported in a free community, because such support hinders the production of other newspapers. The Paper and The Campus Observer were cited as examples of two newspapers unable to function because of the State News monopoly.

ASMSU is currently considering a tax split between the State News and the Observer, but the petition advocates the elimination of any such tax.

Sleeter stated that the persons supporting the petition are "not connected with the Hubbard Hall newspaper."

Sleeter said that he would like to have the students get both sides of the story," and thought that this was the reason the article was printed in the Hubbard newspaper.

The referendum sought by these Hubbard Hall students will be presented to ASMSU or the MSU Board of Trustees when 4,000 signatures have been received.

MARRIED HOUSING

Students air grievances

By CINDY NEAL
State News Staff Writer

Married Students Association (MSA) met Sunday to discuss problems voiced by residents of University married housing.

The major topics of discussion included the heating in the married housing units, children's recreation areas, an adult recreation and study center, and the availability of government food stamps to married students.

Mark Hardwick, East Lansing graduate student, lead the discussion and expressed his opinion on the idea of a married student council. Such a council, he believed, would be responsive to the needs of students in married housing, and would be a useful channel through which the students could present to the University their needs and complaints.

Unique problems;

At the present time, MSA is represented on ASMSU by Off Campus Council (OCC) an office of the major governing body. Hardwick felt that allegations and support of the temperature of heating units reaches 140 degrees, dust on the units creates air pollution which causes health damage.

State Channels:

Although there are no state or local building codes regarding uncontrollable heating, the state attorney general's office offers consumer protection. Residents could file a complaint form, sign petitions, and get doctors' support, then return this information to the attorney general's office. If the state office considers it a valid complaint, they would then send a letter to the households, recommending improvements.

Desire services:

Another report at the meeting concerned the availability of food stamps to married students. People interested in taking advantage of this federal plan, which would provide stamps in exchange for food, should register at the Social Services Office. Their eligibility would be dependent on the number of children in the family, the amount of income and the amount paid for rent.

Married housing residents also expressed a desire for more extensive recreational and counseling facilities. This included not only new playground equipment for children, but also a study and recreation center for adults.

Hardwick felt that organization was the key to getting response to requests and complaints. If tenants organized their efforts on any one of these it would set a precedent for future action.

Fall blood drive donations end short of expected goal

MSU's annual fall blood drive ended Friday 741 pints short of its goal of 2,001. The final total, 1,260 pints of donated blood, was below last year's total of approximately 1,683.

"There could have been quite a few reasons," Norm Elwood, chairman of the drive, said.

"We have no specific idea as to why we failed to reach the goal, but we think we know what we will do differently next year," explained Robert Freehan, publicity chairman.

The drive was sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega and Gamma Sigma Sigma, national service fraternity and sorority, in cooperation with the American Red Cross.

"Residence groups didn't give us the enthusiasm of other years," Freehan said, "with the exception of West McDonnell who did a much better job than any other living unit on campus."

In addition, Freehan revealed that a greater percentage of people turned out to give for the first time than in other years. "Those who have a record of giving didn't turn out in their usual number," he said.

West McDonnell Hall was the highest contributor in the living unit competition with 105 pints. Because of their effort West McDonnell residents will receive a plaque of appreciation.

Other winners of the competition, based on the percentage of donating residents, included Gilchrist Hall, Farm House fraternity, Alpha Xi Delta sorority, and Uley House cooperative living unit.

Freehan noted that the faculty and staff gave 43 pints—better than they normally do.

violations" of North Vietnam this month. The U.S. Command has maintained a policy of not commenting on reports of unmanned flights over the North.

In the South, U.S. troops and air forces reported killing 155 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers in three clashes in the Mekong Delta and along the Cambodian border.

About a mile from the Cambodian boundary, American troops from the 1st Air Cavalry Division ran into about 150 North Vietnamese troops at daybreak. While the U.S. troopers pursued them, helicopters firing machine guns and rockets raked them from the air and Air Force bombers attacked their positions. Fifty-two enemy and five Americans were killed and 10 Americans wounded.

Five miles away, scout helicopters spotted an estimated 200 enemy soldiers and a fleet of helicopter gunships lashed the enemy with rocket and machine-gun fire for three hours, killing at least 54. No American casualties were reported.

Franc flow policed at borders

million last Tuesday. One kilogram—2.2 pounds—sold at $1,348, up from 1,289 last week. The sales suggested some lingering lack of confidence in the franc. Turnover in Zurich was eight tons, well above the six-ton average.

The franc was quoted in Paris at 4.9575-4.96 to the dollar after reaching 4.974 last week. The official price is 4.937, about 20 cents to the dollar.

Despite the upturn in the franc, there was some nervousness in Germany as to France's monetary measures. Said one dealer: "The money market is in a very high state of instability. It's nervous. We don't know what will happen tomorrow."

Dealers in Germany reported few transactions in francs.

The French Cabinet called a special session for Tuesday to approve a series of economic and financial measures, including a cut in government spending, tougher tax collection and incentives for exports. These will be spelled out in detail to the National Assembly Tuesday by Premier Maurice Couve de Murville.

De Gaulle acted Monday after sketching the broad lines of the program Sunday to seal off the French borders. The borders leaked more than 1 billion French francs from Nov. 14 to the close of the markets last week because of fears the franc would be devalued.

It was this flight of the franc that provoked the monetary crisis and prompted Western finance ministers to meet in Bonn last week and pledge $2 billion in credits to keep the franc afloat.

The government decreed that French tourists could take no more than 700 francs—140—out of the country, at least until Dec. 31. The money is broken down into 500 francs—100—worth of foreign currency at the official rate and 200 francs—$40—in French currency.

Newspapers over the weekend had been using cartoons showing French tourists carrying baggage filled with francs out of the country in order to speculate against their currency in Switzerland and Germany.

Businessmen were told they could have only 200 francs—40—a day and must limit their expenses on a single trip to 2,000 francs—$400. When Frenchmen leave the country for less than 24 hours the allowance is 50 francs—$10.

Library injunction

After studying the Library decision to close the Library stacks, SAC decided that the policy would be ill-advised for three reasons:

—the undergraduate library is "grossly inadequate" and therefore its research must remain open to all students.

—students will be "unfairly restricted" in finding books until the computerized check-out system is fully implemented.

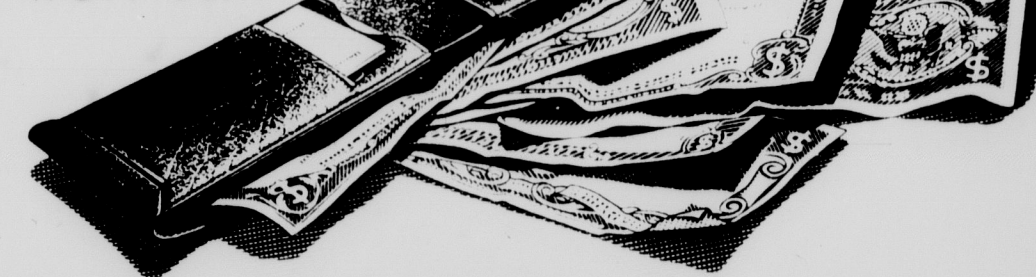

—the proposed stack closing demands that shelf listings be brought up to date, which they are not now, imposing hardships on anyone trying to do research under a closed stack system.

"The legal aid department of ASMSU is helping us a great deal in this case," Dickmeyer noted.

SAC, in its second year on campus, is made up of student representatives from the advisory boards of each college plus student representatives from the student-faculty committees. These include Educational Policies, Academic Rights and Responsibilities, Curriculum and Library committees.

Drugs reflect lack of communication

By DONNA WILBURN
State News Staff Writer

The initial invitation to drugs often develops from a lack of communication between people, and dope serves as a substitute for interaction. Dr. Judianne Densen-Gerber said recently at an informal question and answer session.

Dr. Densen-Gerber is the founder and director of Odyssey House, a drug rehabilitation center in New York City. Well qualified for this undertaking, she is a psychiatrist with a law degree, and is able to inform addicts of not only the psychological and medical aspects of drugs, but the legal element as well.

Also offering views about the drug scene of modern America was 25-year-old James Murphy, associate director of Odyssey House and a former addict himself.

The rehabilitation program, which began in January 1966 with 17 patients, today bulges with more than 150 addicts and many more "out" patients.

The purpose is two-fold. First, they strive to prevent juvenile addiction, and second, they hope to make the community aware of the problem of drugs.

Informality is communicating and interacting is one of the basic factors in the recovery process. "Communication leads to better understandings," she said.

This is the approach used to treat drug addicts. They communicate with other addicts and also non-addicts and "cure themselves." "A change can only occur through personal efforts; the actual healing process takes place within the individual," she noted.

The three-phase treatment consists of gaining a motivation for recovery, many levels of therapeutic treatment and helping to addict to rejoin society. Dr. Denison-Gerber observed.

No drugs are allowed on the premises. "Cold turkey" abruptly eliminating all narcotic intake is considered an excellent way to get that initial motivation, Murphy noted.

On college campuses, drug addiction is on the uprise, according to Dr. Denison-Gerber. "When you talk about a 'pusher' at a university, you talk about a student," she said.

Law enforcement cannot repress all drug activity, she said. "Students must be able to police themselves, it cannot generate from the administration. Laws are as effective as the people want them to be," she said.

"Drugs reflect the unawareness of Americans to realize and eliminate the communication and inadequacy problems of individuals. 'We don't have all the answers,' Dr. Densen-Gerber said, "but we are raising the questions."

'U' students disapprove closing of Library stacks

By SUE REBECK
State News Staff Writer

A random telephone poll has given evidence to the fact that many students, graduates as well as undergraduates, disapproved of the action taken by the Library Committee to close the Research Library to undergraduates.

Many of the freshmen contacted had little or no opinion on the subject. Many were not even aware that access to the graduate library stacks will be limited to them after January 1, 1969. Many said that they could care less and still more said that they had never been in the library.

Mike Bentford, Hemlock freshman, was aware of the limitation and commented, "I don't understand why they did it; it's all part of one library."

Susan Ohm, Norman, Oklahoma said, "I don't like it. I like to browse around in the graduate stacks."

Grads react

Reaction from the graduate students seemed also to be quite negative. Dave Komitor, Worthington, Ohio, graduate said, "I'm against it. The undergrads should be able to use the resources in the library."

Kiyoto Mizubah, graduate student in administration and higher education, was in favor of the action taken. He stated that the library was a mess last year and that some type of solution was needed.

Mizubah did not know whether this limitation was the answer to the problem of misplaced and lost books, but he thought that it ought to be tried.

A third type of response to the survey was one of indifference by many graduate students. Jim Culley, Cleveland, Ohio graduate, said, "It doesn't matter one way or another to me."

Reactions vehement

Other comments from undergrads opposed the action. Some reactions were quite vehement such as that voiced by Heidi Allgaier, Wayne senior, who said, "I think it's rotten, terrible, obnoxious... all three and worse."

One undergraduate who is employed in the library stated that she was in favor of the closing of the stacks. She said that she realizes that it will be difficult for some of the students, but she also stated that "the undergrads don't understand that they will be able to use the books."

She thinks that the work that will be saved for the library staff makes the limitation worth a try.

Another staff member felt that the new system would call for more work on the part of the librarians. She said that students paging for books must have the specific number of the book and that there will be a lot of trouble for the book staff trying to locate these books. With the old system she said, many students could find books for themselves if they were allowed entry into the stacks.

Hard for papers

One junior thinks that it will be difficult for her to write papers without access to the Research Library.

One sophomore thought that the ratio of the undergraduates to the graduates merits the use of the Research Library by the undergrads.

Sweden grants prof top education prize

LULEA, Sweden—George Borgstrom, professor of food science and geography at MSU has won Sweden's top educational award, the International Socrales Prize.

The award has been described by the Swedish press as "the Nobel Prize in education."

Borgstrom received the prize during the annual meeting of the Swedish Educational Assn. recently.

He is only the second person ever to be chosen for the award, which recognizes "outstanding contribution of lasting value to adult education."

He was selected by a special jury appointed by the association.

Borgstrom first attracted wide notice in 1954 with his major study, "The Earth—Our Destiny." His best-known book in the United States is "The Hungry Planet," in which he documented the widening gap between the world's ability to produce food and its growing population.

Borgstrom's sequel to "The Hungry Planet" is scheduled to appear this spring. Its title is "Too Many—A Study of the Earth's Biological Limitations."

In all, he has written nine books, many of them dealing with food technology and processing. His research has centered on utilization and preservation of fish, fruits and vegetables, and food protein.
