Antitumor Research

MSU biophysicists Barnett Rosenberg and Loretta Van Camp inject tumorous mice with one of a group of platinum drugs which they discovered to be effective against tumors.

'U' scientists discover drugs to inhibit tumor growth in mice

By BILL CUMMINGS State News Staff Writer

An entirely new class of drugs that inhibit tumors has been discovered by MSU scientists.

Biophysicists Barnett Rosenberg and Loretta Van Camp have discovered certain platinum chemicals that inhibit both leukemia and sarcoma malignancies in test mice.

Leukemia is cancer of the bone marrow that results in invasion of blood by abnormally huge numbers of white blood cells. Sarcoma is cancer of connective tissue such as cartilage, certain bones, voluntary muscle, fatty tissue and parts of nerves.

The drug discovery was accidental, Rosenberg said. He said they originally were testing the effects of an electrical field on bacterial growth.

The bacteria grew enormously long. Cell division completely stopped. The bacteria kept growing without dividing.

When the researchers discovered that platinum contamination from an electrode was halting the cell division of the bacteria and causing the unusual growth.

According to scientific literature, platinum yields no contamination from such experiments, Rosenberg said.

After learning that we could block cell division in bacteria with platinum compounds, we decided to try blocking cell division in animal cells, Rosenberg said. To our surprise we found that the platinum compounds are very effective blocks to tumor growth.

We can now eliminate tumors of a certain type in mice without destroying the mice, he said.

The scientists test the platinum compounds by injecting them into the mice which contain sarcoma tumors. Then the mice are checked daily for signs of failing health, stability, or tumor inhibition.

Tumor inhibition rate in as high as 100 per cent of the animals is achieved with the drugs, Rosenberg said. In general almost 100 per cent of the mice didn't develop large sized tumors and in a few cases even the implanted tumor was eliminated completely.

Rosenberg said he has found that the drug is more effective in combating leukemia in mice when given in one large dose which produces a "sudden sharp shock" in the mouse's system.

The new compound will have to pass through a series of about 16 different tests after the preliminary screening test before human clinical testing can possibly begin.

James E. Trosko, asst. professor of natural science and human development, and Mrs. Virginia Mansour, senior technician, are now testing the platinum compounds for cell division inhibition on human tissue cultures.

Rosenberg views his discovery as "an interesting experimental finding and nothing more than this." He is optimistic that this is a "potentiality for the future."

He emphasizes that the new compound is "not a cure, but a door which we have opened up. I don't consider the discovery a major breakthrough, but it opens up a host of other compounds which may have some effect."

The National Cancer Institute (NCI) has tested several of the compounds with their standard test for possible cancer drugs, a mouse-leukemia test.

Tactics to handle unrest differ from coast to coast

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP)—Strife-torn universities at opposite ends of the country may illustrate the merits and demerits of widely different approaches to handling campus disorders.

Both Cornell President James A. Perkins and San Francisco State College's S. J. Liebowitz, confronted with campuses reeling in disputes focusing on black students' grievances with an angry chorus of radical whites in the background supporting them.

Havakawa took an "hard line" in refusing amnesty for dissidents and denouncing small bands of "trouble makers." Classes were disrupted for weeks.

Perkins went another route Wednesday with an admission unusual for the president of any major university.

It is perfectly clear to me, and I believe to the whole Cornell community, that we have failed in the recent past to surface two key and interrelated matters," the Philadelphia-born Quaker told a crisis meeting of about 1,100 faculty members.

The first is how black and white brothers and sisters are to work out in dignity and equality their respective values and missions.

The second: "In recent years, there has been the notion that the trustees, administration, faculty and students each had their own areas of interest," which did not overlap.

Forums seek student ideas on 'U' head

The Steering Committee of the ASMSU Presidential Selection Board has initiated a program of student forums on the selection of MSU's next president to be conducted in each of the residence halls, the off-campus community and Greek living units.

Members of the Steering Committee and members of the faculty will initiate discussions at each of the forums.

The object of the forum program is to obtain student opinions, suggestions and even nominations for the selection of a University president.

The first forum will concern what direction will deal with the criteria for selection of a president; and the third will focus on the first two forums.

SEEKS COURT AID

Justice Dept. supports drafting war protesters

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Dept. is defending before the Supreme Court the government's speed-up in drafting Vietnam war protesters.

In a brief filed this week Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold asked the court to reject a young Minnesotan's attack on the draft delinquency regulations.

The department official moved carefully, however. He did not specifically approve the reclassification to 1-A of protesters. And he did not endorse a controversy.

ial 1967 memorandum of Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey counseling draft boards to use the regulations against young men who engage in "illegal activity."

David Earl Gutknecht, 22, of Gaylord, Minn., claims he was ordered to induction because he turned in his draft card during an antidraft demonstration in Minneapolis in 1967.

He refused to submit, was convicted and sentenced to four years in prison.

Griswold said the regulations constitutionally authorize the priority induction of registrants who turn in their cards. "The obligation to carry a registration and a classification card at all times," he said "is specific and narrowly defined and involves no conflict with the freedoms protected by the First Amendment."

The delinquency regulations and Hershey's memorandum were under attack earlier this term in an appeal by a divinity student, James J. Oesterreich. He had turned in his draft card to the Justice Dept., was reclassified 1-A and ordered to report for induction.

Griswold, in presenting the government's position then, said the Selective Service appeared to be using the draft to punish antiwar protesters. He said at that time, "There is a serious question whether the delinquency regulations are being applied in a manner consistent with the Selective Service Act and the Constitution."

The court, in December, ruled the reclassification of Oesterreich "blatantly lawless." The 6-3 decision said Congress had given him an exemption as a divinity student and the delinquency regulations could not be used to take it away.

Gutknecht's appeal represents a greater challenge to the speeded-up draft of war protesters. Like the great majority of youths ordered to induction following antiwar actions, he did not have the protection of a congressionally sanctioned exemption.

Griswold advised the court to draw a line between the Oesterreich situation and Gutknecht's. The solicitor general recalled he had told the court in an earlier case "that in some circumstances the operation of the delinquency regulations might raise serious statutory and constitutional questions.

He added: "This was suggested in relation to a situation where application of the delinquency regulations could not validly be applied, where, as here, a registrant not statutorily exempt from service in the armed forces, simply failed to comply with the duties imposed upon him by the regulations."

Postal rates increase due, reform sought

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon asked Congress Thursday for a $635-million increase in postal rates and promised to come up with a plan to reform the postal system which, he said, should be "an example of sound business practices."

Nixon, as anticipated, proposed a one-cent boost in the cost of mailing a letter to seven cents. He wants the post card charge hike to six cents but sought no changes in the 10-cent airmail rate.

Also recommended were increases in charges, for the handling of second and Even while calling for the higher rates, Nixon said.

This administration is determined that the cycle of greater and greater postal deficits and more and more increases will be broken. The only way to break that cycle is through effective, long range reforms in the way the postal system operates.

"Some of these reforms can be implemented by the postmaster general; others will require congressional action. We will be submitting specific proposals for such reform to the Congress within the next 45 days."

Anti-ROTC rally slated to obviate, clarify issues

The new Administration Bldg. will be the scene of an anti-ROTC rally at noon today under the joint sponsorship of the New University Conference (NUC), Young Socialist Alliance and ASMSU.

A spokesman for Students for a Democratic Society said they will be represented by a speaker, but are not to be considered one of the co-sponsors of the rally.

MUC has scheduled Paul Lauter, national director of Resist, the nationwide anti-draft movement, to speak at today's rally. Other groups will have speakers, but a final agenda has not been made.

ROTC is the Army program which has come under violent attack at several major colleges and universities recently.

It has been a voluntary program at MSU since 1965 but still retains academic standing within the University.

Opponents of ROTC on campus claim that its autocratic and non-academic nature should automatically exclude it from the University system. Those who favor ROTC argue that academic freedom means each student should have the opportunity to choose for himself whether to take ROTC.

Tom Samet, ASMSU student board chairman, said the purpose of today's rally is to "keep this thing in front of the University."

The fourth session of the ASMSU Board mandated its representatives to demand from the Academic Council that academic status be denied to ROTC.

Candle kindles Butterfield fire

By RICH BARNARD State News Staff Writer

A melted telephone, warped records, charred bedposts and blackened walls are the legacy that a tipped-over candle left in a Butterfield Hall room shortly before noon Thursday.

Sharron K. Brown, Muskegon freshman, awoke from a doze to find the blanket in which she had draped herself in flames. She had been sitting up on her bed, her back to the wall, with a candle burning on the end table near her feet.

Throwing off the blanket, she ran out of the room and grabbed a nearby fire extinguisher. After unsuccessfully trying to dial the University emergency telephone number, she ran to the room next door to spread the warning.

With the aid of a girl from next door, she attempted to fight the flames which soon engulfed mattresses, a curtain, the heads of both of the room's beds and a small table between them.

In the process, Miss Brown received first and second degree burns to her arms and first degree burns to her legs.

"The breaking of the glass encasement of a fire extinguisher outside my door first made me aware that something was going on," Mary Ann Epker, Trenton sophomore, said. Miss Epker was reading in her room, separated from the first by another room, when the fire broke out.

"I ran out in the hall and grabbed another fire extinguisher," Miss Epker said. "I saw a girl from another floor who happened to be walking through the hall pull the alarm."

Miss Epker said that the smoke had become very thick by the time she got to the doorway of the burning room and she echoed the advice of other coeds in telling the two girls to get out of the room.

All the girls actually involved stayed very calm," Miss Epker said, "and nobody got excited or scared."

Three pieces of East Lansing fire-fighting equipment arrived at the scene in response to a call turned in by a fourth floor resident assistant and quickly extinguished the blaze.

Miss Brown's roommate, Pamela K. Noordhof, Holton sophomore, did not return to Butterfield until after the fire was out. She accompanied Miss Brown in a University Police car to Olin Health Center, where Miss Brown was treated and released.

Butterfield Hall's resident adviser, LaDonna E. Adams, who was eating in the Brody Hall cafeteria at the time of the fire, said that Butterfield had been orderly evacuated and that "there was no panic—the girls handled everything very beautifully."

"Although the fire gutted the room," Mrs. Adams said, "there was no other damage to other rooms other than that caused by smoke and soot."

"We happened to have another room open on the same floor," she said, "so the girls will move in there."

After viewing the blackened walls and the mounds of plaster that had cracked and fallen from the ceiling, Mrs. Adams was sure that "nobody will be living there for the rest of the term."

Sam C. Gingrich, fire safety officer, estimated the damage to the gutted room and the coed's personal belongings at $2,500.

A burning candle was the source of a fire in Butterfield Hall shortly before noon Thursday. The two roommates of room A202 were burned out of a home, but were quickly relocated down the hall.

Anti-rezone proposal tabled Milk chugger champions quench chocolate thirsts

By DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

A proposal presented to the East Lansing Planning Commission by the Committee to Preserve a Residential Neighborhood opposing the city's rezoning plan, was tabled until May 14 by the commission at a public hearing Tuesday night.

This project would designate a 10-block area as a special zone for retail stores, hotels, offices and would encourage the growth of these in a compact area.

The 10-block area slated for rezoning is bounded by Grand River Avenue on the south, Linden Street on the north, and Evergreen Street on the west. The eastern boundary runs on Charles Street from Linden to Ann Streets and on Division Street from Ann Street to Grand River Avenue.

The Committee to Preserve a Residential Neighborhood recommended that the eastern boundary be moved one block west. Under that recommendation the eastern boundary would run on MAC Avenue from Linden to Ann Street, on Charles Street to Ann to Albert Streets, and on Division Street from Albert Street to Grand River Avenue.

In a statement of its position, the committee said that "While this idea has some merit, it is harmful because it will destroy two blocks which contain the homes of citizens, taxpayers, and students."

The committee further contends that the effects of the rezoning will result in higher taxes and land assessments in turn would result in higher rents.

Mark Charles, chairman of Committee to Preserve a Residential Neighborhood, said that most people present at the public hearing Tuesday night spoke in opposition to the city's rezoning plan.

Affected by the present zoning would be two sorority houses: Phi Mu, 301 Charles St., Alpha Gamma Delta, 333 Charles St. and Howland House, 323 Ann St., a men's cooperative.

Mrs. Charles Spencer, a Phi Mu Alumni and president of the corporation board, represented the sorority at the public meeting.

She said the property would "deteriorate" if the area were rezoned as a central business district.

The committee also gained support from the ASMSU Board in its opposition to the Planning Commission's "B-3" Central Business District project.

Mike Slaughter, ex-officio member to ASMSU to East Lansing planning said Tuesday night that he "sympathized with the concern over the loss of residential character."

He outlined the probable rise in the evaluation of property and the increase in property taxes.

Slaughter said he planned to speak to the organizations in the present boundaries and represent their views in a report he is preparing for the planning commission.

Chug-a-lug

A cheering crowd, 12 gallons of chocolate milk and 17 thirsty contestants participated in MSU's first Chocolate Milk Chug, held in Hubbard Hall on Wednesday.

Two residents profited by their excessive thirsts, and each was awarded $6.95 after a 10-minute, all-you-can-drink contest.

Tom Chase, Wells, Maine, junior, took top honors in the men's competition. Chase downed 15.7-ounce glasses of chocolate milk.

When asked if he would ever drink chocolate milk again, Chase answered, "Not if I can help it."

Carol McMorris, Detroit freshman, placed first in the women's competition. Miss McMorris, who said that she had had no dinner in preparation for the contest, drank 11 glasses.

LEAVING CAMPUS POSTS

Pressures stun presidents

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The pressures of running a university and dealing with campus unrest are causing college presidents to leave their jobs, says the Chronicle of Higher Education.

Some 70 universities and four-year colleges are looking for chief executives, says the Chronicle in its current edition.

The Chronicle listed the following among the institutions whose presidents have retired, resigned or expressed an intention to do so:

Duke, Columbia, Dartmouth, Florida State, Georgia Institute of Technology, Goddard College, Howard University, Lawrence University, MSU, Ohio, Oregon State, Pennsylvania State, Rice, Sarah Lawrence College, State University of New York at Albany, Swarthmore College and the Universities of Alabama, Colorado, Hawaii, Kentucky, Maine, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Vermont.

The chronicle says in some cases the departing chief executives are ending long academic careers for retirement or public service. It cites John A. Hannah of MSU who has been named director of the Agency for International Development by President Nixon.

"In other cases, however, the strains of campus crisis have been the cause of the resignations," the paper says.

The paper noted that Courtney C. Smith suffered a fatal heart attack in the midst of a crisis over demands from black students when he was president of Swarthmore.

Charles G. Dobbins, executive secretary of the American Council on Education, said this month that the current adversary relationship between students, faculty and administrators could result in a massive loss of experienced leadership in higher education.

"Numbers of presidents are quietly letting it be known that they no longer can endure the mental and physical punishment to which they are being subjected by faculty and students alike," Dobbins said.

Owen no longer 'nunnery, open-hours policy passed

With the passage of a compromise measure on Owen Hall's open house policy, the women's wing is no longer a "nunnery."

Wednesday night the hall's executive council passed a measure providing for open hours in the women's hall from noon to midnight Monday through Thursday and from noon to 2 a.m. Friday through Sunday.

After the nine-vote defeat of a 24-hour open house policy on Monday, a group of Owen women residents wrote a letter to the State News charging that the lack of a liberal open house policy could not be justified in the graduate hall since graduate students "are mature enough to handle open hours intelligently."

The letter charged that Owen was "never designed to be a fortress - or a convent."

Al Siegal, a member of the executive council, said that the council recognized that a majority of the women residents wanted more liberal open hours since the measure, which needed 66 per cent of the women's approval to pass, was defeated by such a small margin.

The hall first voted on an open house policy fall term when the 24-hour proposal passed by 90 percent in the men's wing and received on the women's side.

Siegal said that he did not expect much opposition to the council's action.

Living costs in March took the sharpest leap monthly in 18 years despite President Nixon's anti-inflationary efforts, and sent government economists scrambling for explanations.

While the White House insisted the economy was slowing down, last month's jump in these prices, approaching a penny a dollar, boosted the consumer price index to 125.6.

The critical period will probably be sometime in May.

Campus News

Officials at the State University College in Oneonta, N.Y. have turned down a demand by black students for a $35-weekly spending allowance.

President Royal Neitzer announced, however, that the students' other demands will be met. Those demands were for increased admission of black freshmen, more black teachers, and administrators, and discussion of a black studies program.

Dissident black students kept the huge City College of New York (CCNY) closed Thursday.

The students controlled 16 acres of CCNY's upper Manhattan campus. They allowed administration officials inside to negotiate peace and agreed to let President Buell sleep in his own house, which is on campus.

At George Washington University in the nation's capital, university officials prepared criminal action against SDS-lead protestors who smashed furniture and scattered files during a five-hour seige of the Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies that ended early Thursday.

BEIRUT UNDER CURFEW

Lebanon's premier resigns in wake of bloody clashes

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -- Premier Rashid Karami resigned Thursday night, plunging Lebanon deeper into political crisis after two days of bloody clashes between government troops and demonstrators protesting restrictions on Arab guerrillas.

More rioting in the southern town of Tyre left four dead, bringing to 16 the number of demonstrators and police killed in the two days of disorders. Nearly 100 have been wounded.

Karami's resignation came as the crisis appeared to be shaping into a major split between Lebanon's rival Moslem and Christian communities.

Lebanon's population is about half Christian and half Moslem and the government generally has tried to steer clear of involvement in the Middle East fighting.

Karami's resignation was announced after an emergency Cabinet meeting.

Beirut and other major cities were under curfew and Lebanon's 15,000-man army patrolled the streets and Palestinian refugee camps.

Karami, a Moslem, took office in January in the political crisis that followed Israel's Dec. 23 lightning raid on Beirut's international airport. In the past three months, he had tried to appease hawks and doves alike.

While vowing support for the Palestinian cause and expanding the military draft in Lebanon, he sought to prevent Arab guerrillas from using Lebanon as a base for strikes against Israel.

The new rioting involved Tyre's Rashidien refugee camp which has a population of 10,000 Palestinians uprooted from homes in territory which is now Israel.

Details of the rioting were sketchy but one witness said the refugees burned a Lebanese flag in the attack on the police station. Army reinforcements were rushed to the town on the Mediterranean coast 50 miles south of Beirut and the refugees were herded back to their camp. Tyre then was sealed off.

In the Christian village of Hadeth, near Beirut, villagers demonstrated in support of the government and the Lebanese army.

Refugees in a camp near the northern port of Tripoli staged an anti-government protest, without incident. Tension was high.

N. Viets reject U.S. appeal for withdrawal

PARIS (AP)--The United States made a new appeal Thursday for negotiations with North Vietnam on the withdrawal of troops from the South but without any apparent success.

The U.S. bid was made by Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge at the 14th full-scale session of the Vietnam peace talks. It was quickly rejected by North Vietnam's Xuan Thuy.

The main point advanced by Lodge was that the peace talks had been bogged down for 13 weeks in recriminations and it was now time to "get down to the task of bringing the war in Vietnam to an end."

As the first step, he suggested that the external forces of both sides begin withdrawing from South Vietnam and that political talks between South Vietnam and the National Liberation Front be carried on simultaneously with negotiations on troop withdrawals.

Thuy stuck to his previous position that the only solution was unilateral withdrawal by the United States and its allies which, he said, are the "only foreign troops ever found in South Vietnam." Lodge insisted on mutual withdrawals.

Step toward draft repeal?

A recent ruling by a Federal District Court that the Selective Service Act unconstitutionally discriminates against non-religious conscientious objectors also upheld the right of "selective" conscientious objection to particular wars. The decision, which found the 1967 draft law in conflict with First Amendment prohibition against government establishment of religion, will probably lead to a review of the draft law by the Supreme Court and possibly revision or repeal of the law by Congress.

The United States has had conscientious objector problems ever since it first thought of drafting civilians for the Civil War. At that time draft protestors staged riots and lynchings which make today's protests scarcely noticeable by comparison.

No provisions were made for conscientious objection during the First World War, with the result that thousands of men were sent to prison. The government learned its lesson and allowed an extremely limited amount of conscientious objection during World War II under a ridiculously narrow definition of religion. That law, with its infamous "supreme being" clause, sent hundreds of religious C.O.'s to prison during and after World War II until its interpretation was broadened by the Supreme Court in the 1965 Seeger decision.

Removal of the religious requirements for conscientious objection in favor of "moral beliefs," as the recent federal court decision suggests, would detract Uncle Sam and save many sincere religious and non-religious pacifists the trouble of a prison term. Since moral beliefs differ from person to person, and since it is generally held that some wars are less moral than others, provision for morally based objection would immediately raise several serious questions.

The question of selective objection was dealt with in the federal court decision, which held that the sincerity of an individual's moral objection to any particular war could be effectively judged.

The outfit which would presumably be sizing up draftee's morals would be our friendly neighborhood draft board, which represents one of the largest bureaucracies in the world and, selective objection or not, exists for the purpose of channeling manpower (i.e., you and me) into militaristicallyconceived "work in the national interest."

The opportunity of selective objection to particular wars might relieve draftees of considerable strain if they are squeamish about wars like Vietnam--certainly few men will object to having a choice of being able to follow the dictates of their consciences. We support the idea of selective objection, but would like to see it extended to a total abolition of the draft.

Repeal of the draft law would mean elimination of the Selective Service System and its channeling influence on American society. It would mean that Americans would be free to run their own lives without the continual threat of disruption (or death) by involuntary military service.

81 enough for Death Row

We are a nation weaned on violence, and as long as we continue to be nurtured on aggression, there is little reason to believe we shall ever counter violence with anything but more aggression.

Therefore the prevailing justice we have accepted is to take an eye for an eye and a life for a life. As long as there is a law on the books that stipulates a jury has the right to take one life in payment for another, we cannot blame a jury for exercising that condition.

So the death penalty leveled by a Los Angeles jury against Sirhan Bishara Sirhan can probably be attributed, as Grand B. Cooper, Sirhan's chief counsel said, to "an overriding feeling by the community in the entire United States in favor of law and order."

But there are questions which must be asked. What does it accomplish to condemn this obviously deranged criminal to death? One wonders what society has done to help prevent a repetition of his senseless crime in the future.

The fear on the part of many people, possibly including the jury, that Sirhan could be returned to society after seven years if the jury had decided on life imprisonment instead of the gas chamber, does have some justification. But parole would have been a very unlikely possibility in the case of Sirhan.

It is doubtful that Sirhan will ever be put to death. His sentence could be changed by the judge, an appeal may overturn the sentence, or a pardon by the governor is possible. Even if none of these possibilities materialize, however, it is still only remotely conceivable that Sirhan will ever be executed.

Eighty-one condemned men now await death on the San Quentin Death Row. Sirhan may become the 82nd, but it is perhaps evidence of our ambivalent attitudes toward capital punishment that of those men that have been sentenced to death, probably few, if any, will receive the penalty. There is little chance for rehabilitation on Death Row. It functions as an interim between the court sentence and death. What it has now become is a permanent rotting hole for 81 men.

The propriety of the death penalty is not a simple issue. It involves many questions of philosophical, sociological, religious, and political thought. We do not choose to issue a maxim on the issue, but to point out the senselessness of this particular case.

The capital punishment laws are presently on the books, but undergoing intense scrutiny. Each individual should not hesitate to investigate their implications and decide for himself the position most corresponding to his own beliefs.

Immediately, however, the debate involves one man, and the controversy comes down to rather simple terms.

We do not think Sirhan-Sirhan should become the 82nd man on San Quentin's Death Row.

Peril of preventive measures

If we fail to take the first initiative away from spy versus spy and the political diplomacy that costs thousands of lives in the bargain, then just as Rome and the rest crumbled the United States will follow...

from within her sphere of influence. The Soviet Union and Communist China are not in the same position because of U.S. preventive measures.

But many people will now feel that the preventive measures (a nuclear deterrent, surveillance of the "enemy") have been the forces which have kept this country alive, prospering, and have made it the "Great Society."

I believe this is the absolute truth, but in today's world this is the status quo. If we fail to take the first initiative away from spy versus spy and the political diplomacy that costs thousands of lives in the bargain, then just as Rome and the rest crumbled the United States will follow--eaten away from within her own fifty states and the world area she polices.

The documentation of the strife within our own borders needs no further mention aside from the following: It is only a matter of time before the racial crisis, student revolt, welfare debacle and increasing crime wave merge and demand the orientation of the federal government's financial assistance role toward domestic needs and away from ever-spiraling defense costs.

And in her policeman's role, the United States' government policy of committing her presence in troops and nuclear warheads for lengthy periods of time in and near nations around the world is inviting disorder and animosity.

A prime example of this is the outrage in Japan over Okinawa where the United States is in control and has nuclear weapons and other military equipment. Senator Edmund Muskie has called for the U.S. to relinquish this Pacific outpost in the face of rising discontent from the Japanese. When the United States government reviews her policy regarding Okinawa she would be wise to look at Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Western Europe and Latin America as well.

"What is your answer regarding U.S. foreign and domestic policy?" is the local question I expect readers to pose to me in their minds. I can only say that I am violent opposition to Sen. Richard B. Russell's contention that we need an expansive defense and offense that will allow our hungry the protection in which they can survive. Rather, I believe in the appraisal of Senator McGovern that we don't feed our hungry and take care of our sick, there will eventually be people to protect.

Sen. Russell's statement supports the status quo. It means we are forever doomed to a life in which fear of nuclear war continually hangs above our heads, is a statement in support of Korea, Vietnam, and future Vietnams. In fact, it makes the latter inevitable.

Sen. McGovern, in his viewpoint, provides us with no umbrella of protection from nuclear war. But he does show his belief that the U.S. can and should take the first step in a reduction of world tensions. And this first step away from the policies of over-kill, the Truman Doctrine, containment of communism, will insure the success of the war on poverty and the treatment of our sick.

Either the continuation of the status quo or the following of my views would probably both lead to the downfall of the country. But a dedication to solving the problems inflicting hate and fear upon our own country, will, at least, give us the satisfaction of knowing that we acted in good conscience--and if we can't live in good conscience, we can't really live at all.

OUR READERS' MIND

Arguments for the naive

To the Editor:

If an ROTC manual was to argue that, "The traditional function of the US Army has been to inspire justice for mankind and society aloof from partisan or superficial considerations," we would, each and every one of us, dismiss this statement as something, "conjectural, non-analytical, cheaply moralistic and often blatantly propagandistic." Yet the State News chooses to enlighten us with a statement equally ridiculous, "Academia's traditional function is to inspire critical thinking about man and his society aloof from partisan or superficial considerations."

I am perfectly aware that ROTC falls short of the ideal of intellectual perfection. So, for that matter, does the editorial appearing in the State News April 15.

You don't really mean to claim that the University of Paris was founded to criticize the church nor that Harvard was founded to criticize Puritanism.

The editorial presents two arguments against ROTC--the philosophical and the pedagogical.

The philosophical argument is, in effect, that the "sanctity" of the University must be protected from the "brutal militarism of the outside world." In short, that the ivory tower must not be contaminated by reality.

So much for philosophy. The real argument is not really philosophical at all, it is entirely practical. "ROTC is a part of the war effort. The war is wrong. Hence, one should strike at the war effort by striking at ROTC." All of the jargon--"academia," "pedagogically," "antithetical"--is not much more than cover for the simple argument. Only the congenitally muddled and/or devious would waste so many words making such a simple point. What's the problem? Do the editors think the simple argument to be so lacking in merit that they must distract us with philosophically this and pedagogically that.

Equally, the pedagogical argument is strictly for the naive. If the editors were so intent on eliminating, "rote learning and deference to authority," they would direct their attack to the grading system in general. They would not fix ROTC any more offensive than accounting or cow doctoring. As well, if they think that the essence of education is the purity of the critical attitude and irrelevance to practical problems, Jonathan Swift has already provided a complete and sufficient academy to meet the needs.

The maintenance of status quo

To the Editor:

Monday afternoon (April 7) members of SDS and supporters entered the Placement Bureau and forcibly obstructed recruiting by the Oakland Police Dept. Every day the Oakland Police Dept. maintains a status quo which, for the black working people that live there, means poverty, disease, and material deprivation of every description. No one should think that SDS feels that any other police department in the United States is any less racist. Quite the contrary, all police departments are racist because they defend this system which is essentially and necessarily racist. The capitalist system is governed by a drive for profits. High profits from exorbitant rents in the ghettos, the white-black wage differential, and the downward pressure that that exerts shows that racism is profitable under capitalism.

The justice of SDS blocking the Oakland Police Dept. from recruiting cannot be denied. This is so because no one has the right to oppress and the Oakland police are oppressors of the people.

Some concern was shown in the State News over whether SDS was really interested in dialogue or not. More specifically, some were concerned that President Adams was not sufficiently able to engage in dialogue. It is the opinion of the Worker-Student Alliance of SDS that Adams should not have been allowed to speak at all. This issue here is not "free speech" in our opinion. Rather, it is whether we are serious about fighting racism or not. We, as well as Adams, had made up our minds before the confrontation where we stood on the racist Oakland police force. Adams, as president of this university has the power to permit or not permit recruiting. He threw his support to the Oakland police; we, to the people that they oppress. This being the case, Adams must be seen as much of a racist as the and should have been physically removed. That he was not and that he was able in some measure, deflect our efforts to throw the Oakland police out, must be seen as a result of confusion about free speech. "Free speech" and dialogue in this case mean that all ideas serve the people in the same way and that there is no connection between the Oakland police and black exploitation; that violence could have talked away the contradictions between us and the Oakland police. This is absurd! One does not have discourse with an enemy of the people, a class enemy. One seeks to smash him. SMASH RACISM! BUILD A WORKER-STUDENT ALLIANCE.

Student blood donors earn extra cash, aid community

MSU students do not have to wait for a special blood drive on campus to aid those in need of blood.

"The reason we exist," Elaine Rau, supervisor of the Lansing Michigan Community Blood Center, said, "is that there are not enough blood donors volunteering."

Mrs. Rau said that though the blood center is not affiliated with the American Red Cross, it is not in competition with it.

"Donors are doing a community service whether they donate through us or the Red Cross," Mrs. Rau said.

The center is licensed by the National Institute of Health and the American Assn. of Blood Banks. It employs three full-time registered nurses and has a doctor on call at Sparrow Hospital.

"Much of our blood goes for open heart surgery in the Michigan area," Mrs. Rau said.

She said that about 90 per cent of the approximately 100 donors served per week are students.

"I'm really amazed," Mrs. Rau said. "The students are quite good and truthful."

"None of the students that come is really poor. Most need the money for haircuts and books," she added.

She said that sometimes the money received for blood at the center is used for special projects.

"Two Kalamazoo fraternities come here occasionally," Mrs. Rau said, "and use the money they earn for a worthwhile community project."

The Michigan Community Blood Center with headquarters in Detroit processes about 65,000 pints of blood per year making it the fifth largest center in the country, Mrs. Rau said.

Low real earnings plague 'U' faculty

By MICHAEL CODY

Real spendable earnings have decreased for MSU faculty members despite salary increases, according to a study by Einar Hardin, professor of labor and industrial relations.

In the report, Hardin indicated that despite compensation increases which include salaries and fringe benefits, the consumer price level has also gone up. This results in the slow growth of "real" compensation.

Real compensation has actually declined for professors and associate professors, Hardin said. It has increased only slightly for asst. professors and instructors.

In his report, Hardin indicated that after allowances are made for a 25 per cent income tax, a five per cent contribution each faculty member makes to the TIAA-CREF pension plan and the rise in consumer prices, faculty salaries in terms of real spendable earnings have decreased.

"All levels of faculty have been standing still financially," Hardin said. "Unfortunately this trend has been going on now since 1965 and 1966, when the last significant salary increase occurred."

The findings of the report also indicated that MSU pays professors and associate professors lower salaries compared to the national average while it pays higher than the average for asst. professors and instructors.

Hardin's report listed average salaries and fringe benefits for MSU faculty members and compared them to the grading scale set up by the National American Assoc. of University Professors (AAUP).

The survey found that the average compensation which includes fringe benefits was $18,521 for full professors, $14,322 for associate professors, $12,112 for asst. professors and $9,922 for instructors.

The average salaries without fringe benefits in the four faculty ranks were $16,497, $12,680, $10,671 and $8,680 respectively.

According to the AAUP grading scheme for average compensation, a full professor's salary at MSU was graded B, while an associate professor's salary was graded A. Asst. professors and instructors had salary grades of AA.

The letter grades are based on salary reports sent to the national AAUP. The grade AA represents the top of the scale for faculty compensation with grade D the lowest.

"This indicated that MSU paid relatively lower at the higher faculty ranks than at the lower ranks," Hardin said.

Hardin also compared salaries to the average in the Big Ten colleges. He found that the Big Ten average was higher than MSU at the full professor and associate professor rank.

MSU pays instructors higher than the Big Ten average which includes MSU, Hardin said, while it pays about the same as the average for asst. professor.

"Increase in salaries and compensation are needed in the next few years to offset the unfavorable developments mentioned in the report," Hardin said.

Les Gourmets honor students at convocation

At a recent honors convocation sponsored by Les Gourmets student organization, seven Hotel, Restaurant and Institutional Management majors were cited for excellence in academic and professional work.

Academic honors and cash awards went to John B. Knight, Minnetonka, Minn. freshman, Alan M. Urick, Flint sophomore, William J. Hodges, Paradise Valley, Ariz. junior, and Daniel Pettigrew, Pottstown, Pa. senior.

Richard U. Sirianni of Union City claimed "Freshman of the Year" honors, while two seniors, Joseph N. Koppel, Detroit, and David G. Salzman, Milwaukee, shared the "Outstanding Student of the Year" title.

The world's oldest gourmet society, Confrerie de la Chaine des Rotisseurs, chose Richard G. Lorenz, Plymouth junior, as "Outstanding Restaurateur."

Prof hits Nigerian 'police action'

By CHRIS MEAD
Executive Reporter

The United States should realize that the Nigerian civil war is not merely an African problem and should use its diplomatic resources to invoke a peaceful settlement there, Prof. Emi Njoku said Wednesday.

Njoku is the vice-chancellor of the University of Nigeria in Biafra (now called the University of Biafra) and since 1966 has been negotiating between Biafra and Nigeria. His speech, "The Case for Biafran Independence" was sponsored by the MSU African Studies Center.

"The independence and sovereignty of Biafra is desperately important," Njoku maintained, and added that Biafrans will go on fighting, dying and starving until Nigeria admits their independence.

Nigerian motives in the "police action" also came under fire by Njoku. He charged that Nigeria's purpose is not to preserve Nigerian unity, but "to cut the Biafrans down to size."

He cited early Northern Nigerian antagonisms against Eastern Nigeria (now the Republic of Biafra) as tantamount to the nearly two-year-long civil war.

Njoku said the decision in May of 1967 to form an independent Biafra came only after a series of bloody massacres by the Nigerian government and a denial of revenues Biafra had coming.

"Biafra did not start the war," he said. "It is clear that Biafra was pushed out of the federation of Nigeria."

He added that even at the time of the massacres, it was not Eastern Nigeria that advocated the splitting up of Nigeria.

Calling the Biafran secession "purely indigent," Njoku refuted the idea that the Biafra situation was engineered by only a few military leaders, and noted the "unanimity and determination of the people of the people of Biafra."

Njoku further charged that the boundaries of Nigeria were based on "unworkable colonial boundaries" dating to when the area was a British colony.

"Are such boundaries so sacred as to kill people for them?" he said.

Njoku accused the British of taking the Nigerian side for "undisguised economic reasons" and blasted the Soviet Union for trying to move in to exploit black people. The slaughter of civilians by federal forces amounts to genocide, Njoku said, and any African nation which treats a segment of its people that way cannot survive.

"Can 10 million people live in a government they don't want to by force arms?" he asked. "I think they can't."

NEEDS $1,000 Movement falters

Members of the Movement are trying to raise $1,000 to go towards debts and upcoming activities.

Spokesmen for the Movement, a group of students which grew out of the issues of rehiring Bertram Garskof and of instituting open University admissions, said that the money will go towards group functions such as Students for a Democratic Society (SDS). The Paper and the SDS Regional Staff.

SDS, which has had its University account closed because it is $700 overdrawn, currently needs $300. Movement spokesman Dave Freedman, Vestal, N.Y. senior, said. With the University account being closed, SDS has to buy its own supplies.

SDS will not be able to use the University account again until it has balanced its account. The Paper, which has not published in three weeks, needs $175 before it can go into print.

Freedman said that the Paper's staff hopes to publish next week.

The SDS Regional Staff also needs about $300. Freedman said Regional staff members are currently paying for debts with their own funds.

The Movement sponsored an outside dance Wednesday night, in an attempt to raise some funds, which made under $100, he said.

WJIM schedules Biafra show on abiding strife, student support

"Focus on Biafra" will be presented Saturday on WJIM.

Graham Kerr, graduate student and co-chairman of Operation Outrage, and Ums Uzoukwu, president of the MSU Biafran Assn., will appear in the half-hour program at 5:30 p.m. to discuss what Biafra is, why the fighting continues in the face of overwhelming difficulties and why the students continue to show support for Biafra.

A three-minute film of last week's "Lifeline for Biafra" candlelight ceremony will also be shown on the program.

WEEKEND ENTERTAINMENT

'Bedazzled' bursts with hilarity

By JIM YOUSLING State News Reviewer

Before I plunge into wild ecstasies over 'Bedazzled' and other on-campus movies, I should mention that we do have some top-flight live entertainment as well.

For those able to get tickets, the Performing Arts Co. will be going through the grueling rituals of 'Marat Sade' at 8 nightly through Sunday. This timely drama of insanity and revolution provides an unforgettable experience, and even a bad production (which this most definitely is not) would be worth seeing.

The Joint will present Phil Marcuss Esser, a Strong-voiced singer whose material includes humor and music ranging from traditional folk to Bertolt Brecht to the Beatles. The doors open at 8:30 tonight and Saturday. Admission is $1.

Although each of the four on-campus movies borders on perfection, one film in particular calls for dancing in the streets - Stanley Donen's 'Bedazzled.' Mustering whatever restraint I can, I shall simply state that it is the funniest movie ever made.

A deft reworking of the Faust legend, 'Bedazzled' takes on every conceivable aspect of pop culture and explodes it into hilarity. Starring Peter Cook and Dudley Moore (from 'Beyond the Fringe'), this elegant and witty film contains so many great moments (one of which involves three nuns on trampolines) that I cannot imagine a shirt so stuffed that it would not succumb to some of them.

Perhaps the simplest measure of 'Bedazzled's' success is the fact that even Raquel Welch (as Lillian Lust)

By JIM YOUSLING State News Reviewer

turns in a magnificent performance. At 7 and 9 tonight in Wilson, Saturday in Conrad. And the other films are great, too. Anyone who has not seen 'Blow - Up' should. Anyone who has should see it again. Antonioni's masterpiece is one of those rare films which gains with each viewing, and even one visit reveals that this study of reality is one of the most visually stimulating films ever made. At 7 and 9 tonight in 109 Anthony.

Following 'Blow - Up' at 11:00 both nights will be 'The Horror of Dracula,' a recent and unusually well-crafted fear-jerker which remains relatively faithful to Bram Stoker's classic novel.

A much more modest, but no less perfect film that 'Blow - Up' Serge Bourguignon's 'Sundays and Cybele.' Winner of 1962's Oscar for Best Foreign Film, this study of the idyllic relationship between an amnesia victim and a motherless twelve-year-old girl is among the most touching works ever to emerge from France. At 8 in 103 Wells tonight and Saturday.

her) that she won the Best Actress Oscar for a film that wasn't even in English! This taut drama of the effects of war, eventually rape, on a woman and her teenage daughter is a shattering experience. At 7 and 9 in 100 Vet Clinic tonight and Saturday.

Among the new off-campus films, I would like to insert a special recommendation for 'Hell In the Pacific,' a brilliantly acted and directed drama of isolation which might not be in our area long.

As for the others, 'Joanna' is yet another reincarnation of the swinging London myth, starring a fascinating young woman called Genevieve Waite, and 'The Big Bounce' is probably the most relentlessly violent film ever made.

All choked up

Conflict is the word for 'Hell In the Pacific,' now showing at the Spartan Twin East. Two natural enemies, portrayed by Lee Marvin and Toshio Mifune, face the natural elements when isolated on a Pacific island.

'U' sets Classics IV, First Edition concert

Still rocking from the recent Smokey Robinson and the Miracles concert, Jenison Fieldhouse will rock again to the sound of the First Edition and Classics IV at 8 p.m. May 2.

The two pop bands are the second concert of the ASMSU Pop Entertainment Spring series.

The First Edition, all former New Christy Minstrels, are well-known on the campus scene. Two of the records that put them at the top of the national charts are 'What Condition My Condition is In' and 'But You Know I Love You.'

From Atlanta, Ga., the Classics IV have had three No. 1 hits in the last two years - 'Spooky,' 'Stormy,' and 'Traces.' Their latest, 'Everyday With You Girl,' is currently a hit - pick on several Lansing radio stations. The new seating arrangement tested at the Miracles concert improved sight and sound in the fieldhouse and was a complete success. Stephen G. Plichta, Pop Entertainment, chairman said.

Tickets are on sale at Marshall Music, Campbell's Suburban Shop and the Union Ticket Office for $2 and $3.

Grape boycott group to protest

Students for Migrant Workers will demonstrate in favor of the California grape boycott at 6 p.m. tonight in front of Meijer Thrifty Acres.

MSU students, high school students, union members, Spanish Americans and other groups will be among those participating.

Meijer Thrifty Acres is located at 6200 S. Pennsylvania Street.

which comes closer to being an American art film than anything since 'Bonnie and Clyde' The combination of the words 'American' and 'art' implies that the film combines the best of two worlds, as indeed it does. Like the better European films, 'Hell In the Pacific' offers a chance for personal statement from the director. Yet the film never wanders too far from its Hollywood roots. It is still primarily an action picture.

Thus, 'Hell In the Pacific' does for the war-movie myth what 'Bonnie and Clyde' did for the gangster film - raises it to the level of allegory.

Plotwise, we get 'essence of war movie.' Lee Marvin plays a U.S. Marine who finds himself (presumably via air crash) stranded on an island with an equally marooned Japanese officer. And that's it. Two characters, one island. The conflict arises because the two men are 'natural' enemies. Not surprisingly, they unite against the forces of Nature - with - a - capital - N. but their inability to communicate in the most literal sense keeps the tension forever there.

All of this could easily drift into pretension - it does get a bit silly at times - but the situation rarely seems to exist solely for the sake of symbolism. The forces of nature are very real on this island and the characters actually speak two different languages.

The success of 'Hell In the Pacific' on this literal level belongs in no small part to the high credibility of its two performers. Lee Marvin, who previously worked with director John Boorman in 'Point Blank,' seems as naturally gutsy as ever.

PANORAMA: CINEMA By JIM YOUSLING State News Reviewer

The Japanese opposition is played by Toshio Mifune, who equals Marvin in every way. As the star of almost every imported Japanese art film - 'Rashomon,' 'Throne of Blood' - he has developed a small cult of followers in the United States, but it's nice to have this talented actor out before the general public. His more stylized methods, complete with grimaces and heavy breathing, may seem to occasionally rub against the grain of Marvin's cool, but Marvin will undoubtedly look a little foolish to Japanese audiences.

The third star of the film is undoubtedly John Boorman. His ever-moving camera sweeps along the beach and through the jungle like a gifted voyeur, picking up the scent and heat and feel of the locals, and occasionally tossing in a sequence for sheer beauty and atmospheric effect. This is cinema stripped to the essentials. Keeping a near-naked plot interesting is quite a task, but Boorman does it without embarrassment.

The film is playing at the Spartan Twin East theater.

Broadcast experts attend annual promotion seminar

The MSU Television-Radio Dept. will sponsor the Second Annual Broadcast Promotion Seminar today.

The program, which will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., includes speakers from several states, and films dealing with broadcasting.

Andy Amyx, promotion manager for WOOD-AM, FM and TV, Grand Rapids, will explain the duties of a promotion manager. He will speak at 9:30 a.m.

Todd Spoor, promotion manager for WJBK-TV Detroit, will speak on 'Audience Building Promotion' for TV and radio at 10:10 a.m.

Other speakers include George Sperry, promotion manager, WKBD Detroit; Bob Miller, consultant for Nielson Co., Chicago; and Ken Mills, media representative, Katz Agency, New York.

Each speech, held in 30 Union, will be followed by a question and answer period. The public is invited.

For further information concerning the Seminar schedule, call Dean Bennett, 353-6413, or Daryl Ross, 353-5014.

Groups mobilize anti-ABM forces

Several community groups met under sponsorship of Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) Wednesday night to organize a committee to mobilize the anti-ABM sentiment on campus.

Walter Gourlay, ADA head, presided over the meeting that appointed a committee to coordinate the activities of MSU students and faculty to sway government opinion away from adopting the administration's proposed "thin line" safeguard anti-ballistic missile defense system.

Combine roles

The formation of the MSU Stop ABM Committee climaxed nearly a month's efforts to combine the roles of nine Lansing-area political, religious and peace groups. Roy Mathews, asst. professor of humanities, acted as liaison from the ADA in planning Wednesday's meeting.

The community groups are: Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy; The United Nations Assn.; Clergy and Laymen Concerned over Vietnam; Ingham County Democratic Party; Michigan Council of Churches; United Ministers in Higher Education; The Fellowship of Reconciliation; Women's International League for Peace and Freedom; and the Greater Lansing Community Organization.

Form association

These nine groups have formed a cooperative association under the leadership of Thomas Greer, professor of humanities and great issues.

The next meeting of the executive committee of the MSU Stop ABM Committee will be at 8 p.m. Monday in the sun porch of the Union.

Old name to remain for Ad Bldg

The old Administration Bldg. will once again have new occupants, but retain the same old name.

According to Harold L. Dahnke, director of space utilization, eight offices will occupy the building, but until someone comes up with a better name, it will be the Old Administration Bldg.

The Building constructed 1881 and expanded in 1947, has been a library, museum and an administration building.

There is already a research project on public affairs at land grant colleges occupying space in it. The project had been housed in Agriculture Hall while waiting for an office in the building to be vacated.

Three offices that were located in Morrill Hall have joined the research project, including the Ombudsman, the Dept. of Psychiatry and information services for the department of Biology and Medicine.

By fall term, after a few alterations, four more offices from various parts of campus will move into the building.

The undergraduate department of the college of social science will come from Fee Hall; a training program in instructional media will move in from the computer center; some mathematics offices will come from Baker and Kedzie Halls; and the American Assn. of University Professors will have an office in the building.

These moves were triggered because expanding departments need more room. Lyman J. Briggs College is taking over the natural science laboratories in Holmes Hall. These laboratories will go to Fee Hall thus displacing the Social Science department to the 88-year-old building.

Awards of bronzed cans prepared for Water Carny

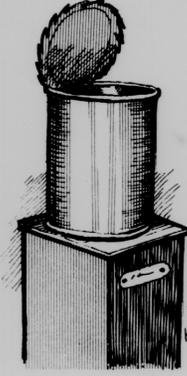

The most dubious distinction of all in this year's Water Carnival weekend is the awards-bronzed tin can trophies.

The bronzed cans will be awarded to the floats best illustrating "Dubious Distinction," which is the theme of this year's Water Carnival.

Water Carnival is an annual event which includes a parade of floats down the Red Cedar River, canoe and go-cart races and presentation of the Blue Key and Excalibur awards.

An example of the theme "Dubious Distinctions" award should be awarded to the 1969 Water Carnival Executive Board for being able to preserve this declining 42-year tradition.

"A chain of frustrating circumstances has confronted us with great difficulties in producing this year's show," Hal Evans, Water Carnival chairman said.

The last two Water Carnival productions have shown a downswing in popularity among MSU students. Realizing this trend, ASMSU initiated a re-evaluation committee last summer to study problems of the traditional event, Evans said.

The findings of the committee included:

-The price of tickets was too high for the entertaining value of the show.

-The archaic repetition of the format of the show hindered repeat sales.

-There was a lack of participation from on-campus living units.

The committee's report led to the creation of Spring Carnival Weekend. This spring gala is a concentration of events that produces an "action packed" weekend. The scheduled events are the Mad Hatter's Midway, Thieves' Market, Parent's and Alumni Weekend and the Water Carnival Show.

"The Water Carnival Show will be drastically changed this year," Evans said. "We've designed a more creative and entertaining show which will hopefully be worth the $3 ticket."

The planned Spring Carnival was jarred by the Big Ten Baseball Conference which was scheduled for the same weekend.

"Due to the baseball game we were unable to obtain bleachers for our Saturday production, scheduled for May 24," Evans said.

"Since the Mad Hatter's Midway could only contract the carnival rides on the weekend of May 22-25, we will be unable to include them in the Spring Carnival Weekend program which was moved up into May 16 and 17.

'U' club holds yearly business 'war games'

Business students from 41 colleges across the nation will conclude their annual "war games" this weekend in Kellogg Center.

The eighth Intercollegiate Marketing Competition and Conference, sponsored annually by MSU's Marketing Club, is a miniature simulation of the decision-making strategies of the corporate world of business.

The conference, largest of its kind, is the only competition-conference that is totally organized, operated and managed by students, according to Marketing Club president, David F. Potyraj.

40 executives from 15 of the nation's largest corporations join 270 business students at the two-day session, representing the 12th and final round of the complex computerized game.

STRIVE FOR COMPANIONSHIP

Big Brothers guide youth

By DIANE PETRYK State News Staff Writer

It takes a man to help a boy—and Big Brothers to bring the two together.

Big Brothers is a Community Chest-funded organization which strives to provide adult male companionship and guidance for those boys who lack such guidance at home.

Basically Big Brothers aims to prevent boys from going bad by helping them learn to live with their environment.

Bert Swope, head of the Lansing branch of Big Brothers for 16 years, can recall innumerable success stories. He explained how the organization works.

"We look for men who have some free time and are sincerely interested in helping boys," he said. The "ability to accept the other person and become part of that person's life" is of primary importance.

Shingleton book to aid job-seekers

John Shingleton, head of the MSU Placement Bureau, has completed a new book called "Which Niche?" in which he answers the most frequently asked questions of high school and college graduates seeking their first jobs.

Some of the questions answered in the book are: Do women make as much money as men on comparable jobs? How do you handle the group interview? Are employers interested in candidates going into military service?

People Power organized to act with students on national issues

Work for the defeat of the proposed Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) system will be the first project of People Power, a nonpartisan organization which hopes to effectively present student opinion on national issues.

The organization, which started at the University of Pennsylvania, hopes to have autonomous chapters on campuses across the country.

Bills being supported now include bills for abolishing the draft, lowering the voting age and abolishing the electoral college.

Anyone interested in forming a People Power chapter at MSU is asked to contact friend—someone he can count on.

The little brothers are chosen from a waiting list of referrals that come from various social agencies, schools, police, social workers, and sometimes the mothers of the boys themselves. Many of the boys are ADC children.

An important consideration in accepting big brothers is that they are willing to stay with it for a significant length of time. When a big brother leaves, whoever the reason, in some cases the boys are hurt by being made to feel unwanted. This is the main problem with student big brothers. They don't stay around long enough.

"It's always a thrill when a former little brother comes back to be a big brother," Swope said.

One such former little brother is Dean Peterson, East Lansing sophomore, now a big brother to a Lansing 12-year-old. He was a little brother himself at age 12.

The objective of Big Brothers, Peterson said, is "to try to help kids before they get to be a problem." He and his little brother get together about once a week.

"We go skating or bowling or to a movie, but the important thing is being together. Right now I'm teaching him skeet shooting," he said.

Peterson added that there is very little expense involved other than the fact that a big brother must have a car. As for the time spent, "it's very enjoyable."

Once every couple of months the big brothers get together to talk over their experiences and discuss ideas.

According to Swope, to the volunteers, Big Brothers is a "vehicle for fun and sharing experiences. It also presents an opportunity to learn about the community. Maybe most of all it offers the satisfaction of seeing a boy grow up."

Offensive consistency Duffy's goal--Y not?

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

"You can only find out who your good football players are by scrimmaging," Coach Duffy Daugherty sums up what he feels spring ball is all about.

So at 2 p.m. this Saturday, Daugherty will send his green-shirted offense against his white-shirted defense in another helmet-rattling scrimmage at Spartan Stadium.

The main focus of attention will be on the new offense this Saturday.

"We're still trying to get our basic offense working in practice as it does in theory. We aren't going to make any changes in personnel until we start getting some consistency in performance," Daugherty said. "Right now we are looking for a cohesive offense."

Several interesting individual battles should come to the fore Saturday afternoon. Among the best is the three-way battle at tight end between veteran Bruce Kulesza and a pair of 260-pound freshmen--Gary VanElst and Jim Nicholson.

Another position up for grabs is fullback, where Gary Parmentier, who was moved from roverback to fullback this spring, and senior letterman Kermit Smith are waging war. Both players performed well last week in the first scrimmage.

Five players are in competition for the three linebacking positions. Returning starters Don Law and Mike Hogan are battling seniors Ken Little and Cal Fox along with junior Tom Barnum for starting jobs. Little, a defensive end last year who has tremendous speed, started the scrimmage a week ago. Barnum came into the scrimmage during the early stages and played most of the way, turning in an impressive performance.

But the showpiece will be the battle for the two half-back positions where four men are fighting for two positions in the new full-house backfield.

Last year's top three rushers--Tom Love, Don Highsmith and Earl Anderson--are facing some stiff competition from a little freshman--5-10, 170 pound Eric Allen. All four players will have plenty of opportunities to show what they can do with the ball under their arms in Saturday's lengthy scrimmage.

But Daugherty also plans to exploit the passing game.

"We are going to open up and do a little more passing in this scrimmage. Last week we stuck pretty much to the ground," Daugherty said.

Decision still pending on turf in stadium

By JEFF ELLIOTT
State News Staff Writer

If the price is right, MSU players, students and followers will join the elite few who can claim the use of synthetic turf in their stadiums.

The price everyone is waiting for is in the neighborhood of $250,000. Presently there are two companies who have shown a serious interest in matching this figure.

The Monsanto Chemical Co. of St. Louis, Mo., specializing in Astro-Turf, has already submitted its bid. The other company--Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing of Minneapolis, Minn., handles Tartan-Turf but has yet to submit a figure to the board of trustees as to the cost of its product.

John Laetz, MSU athletic business manager, said the University is still receiving bids and is still looking at different products. He is hopeful for a decision fairly soon.

Head Football Coach Duffy Daugherty is anxiously awaiting that decision.

"There are other factors which should be taken into consideration other than it would make for a better playing field," Daugherty said. "The maintenance would certainly be cheaper and the versatility would be unlimited."

Football squads, soccer, IM sports and the band could all practice on it without worrying about harming it," Daugherty said.

According to statistics kept last year, knee and ankle injuries--two of football's greatest hazards--were greatly reduced when players were on synthetic grass. The Spartans suffered several knee and ankle injuries to top personnel last season--including this year's co-captain, Rich Saul.

IM News

The deadline for entering residence hall and independent teams for intramural tennis is noon today. The open weightlifting deadline is also at noon. Anyone wishing to enter should do so at the Men's IM Bldg.

Forget the mower

Netters win third, defeat Wayne 7-2

By JOHN VIGES
State News Sports Writer

The MSU tennis team Thursday raised its record to 3-2 for the season with a convincing victory over Wayne State University 7-2.

The Spartans, playing without the services of their No. 1 man, Tom Gray, took four of the six singles matches and captured all three of the doubles matches.

John Good led the team with a victory in singles and a win while teamed with Rick Raines. He defeated Wayne State's No. 1 man, Ron Gatow, 6-2, 6-2. Good's doubles win was by a score of 6-2, 6-4.

Three other Spartans came through with victories in both singles and doubles. John Bufe defeated his man, 6-4, 6-4, in the number four singles and he teamed with Wes Ichesco for a 9-7, 6-4 victory in doubles. Ichesco also defeated his singles opponent, 6-2, 6-4.

Dave Mitchell was the other dual winner for the Spartans. He was forced to battle for his 6-3, 2-6, 6-4 singles victory but he cruised to a 6-4, 6-0 decision when teamed with Andy Vollweiler in doubles.

The only matches lost by the Spartans came in the No. 2 and 3 singles. Andy Vollweiler took his Wayne State opponent to the wire before going down, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5. The other Coach Stan Drobac said he was pleased with his teams performance in the match. He also said that Gray would probably be ready for the Spartan's next match.

Rugby club entertains Kent State

The MSU Rugby Club will try to find to regain their winning form this Saturday when they face Kent State. Game time is set for 2 p.m. on Old College Field.

The game will make the first rugby meeting between the Spartans and the Ohio school.

The Spartans will be led by senior back John Harvey. Coach Mike Auer calls Harvey a typical rugby player, "kinda lazy in practice but one whole of a player come game time." The 6-0, 185 pounder from Saline has scored six tries for the Spartans this year, including a season and personal high of four against Illinois.

Only Michigan has kept the versatile back from crossing the goal this year. Harvey and his teammates will be out after the club's second win of the season against three losses.

'S' batsmen fall to EMU, 3-2

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

Eastern Michigan exploded for three runs in the eighth inning then used a double play to hold MSU off in the ninth for a 3-2 win over the Spartans at Kobs Field Thursday. Spartan starter Phil Fulton nursed a 1-0 Spartan lead, picked in the first inning, up until the top of the eighth. EMU catcher led off that fateful frame with a bloop hit to left center field that fell in among three Spartans. Then Huron pitcher Tom Allen laid a bunt down the first base line. Spartan first sacker Tim Bograkos tried for a force play at second but threw the ball into centerfield, sending runners to second and third.

Fulton got the next hitter on a pop foul, but Jerry Warkentein followed with a triple to deep left center, driving in EMU's first runs of the game. Third baseman Jeff Peck followed with a Texas League single to center to bring in the third run of the inning.

MSU used a couple of Huron misplays to pull close in the last of the ninth.

Spartan shortstop George Petroff's fly to deep right was dropped for a three-base error and he scored on a wild pitch to close the gap to 3-2.

Dick Vary followed with a double to right, sending Allen to the showers and bringing in EMU righthander Rick Krumm.

A passed ball sent pinch runner Dennis Lazar to third and Krumm then walked pinch hitter Bill Linne.

Joe Gavel lofted a fly to centerfield for the second out. Spartan Coach Danny Litwhiler waved Lazar home from third, but the Spartan runner was out on a close play at the plate on a relay throw from the pitcher.

Until the eighth inning, the game was a well-pitched duel between Allen and Fulton. MSU scored in the first inning on a hit batsman and singles by Rich Jordan and Tim Bograkos.

Allen struck out pinch hitter Gary Boyce to retire the side. Fulton was just as effective, scattering five singles until the eighth.

Two - out hits by Bograkos and Rick Miller put two runners in scoring position, but MSU is now 14-6, while Eastern upped its mark to 11-4. The two teams will meet in Ypsilanti Saturday for a doubleheader.

MSU is now 14-6, while Eastern upped its mark to 11-4. The two teams will meet in Ypsilanti Saturday for a doubleheader.

Slidin' Spud

Stickmen to play odd foe: 'proletarian' lacrosse club

By DAVE WEST
State News Sports Writer

The MSU stickmen will run into a different kind of competition at 2 p.m. Saturday when they meet the Chicago Lacrosse Club on Old College Field.

Because lacrosse is a growing sport, the Midwest Lacrosse Assn. is divided into three different kinds of teams. College varsity, college club, and non-college club, all compete within the M.L.A. and the Spartans play them all.

The Chicago Lacrosse Club is a non-college club, composed of working men who have all played lacrosse in college.

"They won't have the team depth that a college team would have," MSU Coach Turt Kauffman said. "They won't have the conditioning either."

"However, they do have several All-Americans playing for them, and they will be great in one-on-one competition. But I doubt if they can run with us," Kauffman said.

The Spartans, who are 3-5 on the season after their 10-6 loss Wednesday to Bowling Green, will be looking for a big win at home.

"We looked the best we have all season against Bowling Green, and I know the boys will be going for a win on Saturday," Kauffman said.

Golfers to compete in 6-team tournament

The Spartan golf team will meet their stiffest Big Ten competition yet this season when they take on Purdue Saturday in Lafayette, Ind.

The Boilermakers, who have the home course advantage, demonstrated they are the team to beat a week ago with a first-place finish in the Illinois Invitational.

Indiana, winners of the conference crown last year, Ohio State and Iowa, impressive in early outings, and Illinois will also compete.

Coach Bruce Fossum sees the meet as a final tune-up before the big upcoming tournaments.

Fossum will take eight players instead of the usual six. A pair of sophomores—Mark Engelman and John Peterson — and senior Dick Hill are vying for the open spots.

The trio of Lynn Janson, Rick Woulfe and Larry Murphy should again show the way. Graham Cooke is coming on strong after a poor start while Tom Stinken is ailing from a knee operation last fall.

DRAKE RELAYS

Spartans aim at titles

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa—Spartans will be shooting for high places in three relay events, in addition to a unique individual honor, this weekend at the 60th annual Drake Relays in Des Moines, Iowa.

Spartan Coach Fran Dittrich is entering relay squads in the distance medley, mile and shuttle hurdle relay events.

Herb Washington, the Spartans' frosh sprint ace, has been billed as the star attraction in a special 100-yard dash, set up since the young Spartan is ineligible for varsity competition because of the Big Ten freshman rule.

Charlie Greene, a three-time Drake winner, will duel opposite the Spartan star in what meet officials hope will be a replay of the last Greene-Washington match-up.

The veteran Nebraska sprinter won a controversial judges' decision over Washington in an indoor 50-yard sprint at a Milwaukee meet last year. Many observers, however, felt Washington should have won the verdict.

MSU's chief competition in the distance medley relay, which Dittrich is stacking with his four aces, should be a Jim Ryan-led Kansas team which swept to a world record 9:33.1

at Lawrence, Kan., last Saturday.

The Spartan quartet, the reigning Ohio Relays titlists, should consist of half-miler John Mock, Bill Wehrwein of the quarter-mile leg, Roger Merchant for 3/4 mile and Kim Hartman on the anchor mile.

The Spartan mile relay, seventh in the NCAA meet indoors, but winless after two outdoor efforts, should find its toughest competition coming from Kansas, Texas, Wisconsin and Missouri.

Likely MSU runners include Mock, Merchant, Wehrwein and Pat Wilson.

The Spartan shuttle hurdle will seek to defend the MSU record of firsts or seconds in this race over the past few years. In 1966 and 1967 MSU swept to national collegiate records and convincing triumphs, but last year Kansas won while MSU took runner-up honors.

Kansas will be the favorite again, but MSU's team will attempt to get untracked and give the Jayhawk's a rough ride. Spartan runners are Steve Derby, Wayne Hartwick, Rick Elsasser and Rich Paull.

Women's liberation: total freedom

By SUE BROWN
State News Staff Writer

Women's liberation does not just mean sexual freedom. A movement is underway all over the country to relieve women from the economic barriers that they have encountered in the business world.

The prejudice against hiring women occurs in almost every phase of business. Women who work for Time magazine have limousines at their disposal but, with four years of college, are assigned to clerical work.

Many women are liberal arts graduates who apply to large business concerns are given a typing test, while their male counterparts are given aptitude tests.

One Detroit News woman reporter said that women are almost sure to be put in the women's section of a big newspaper.

Exceptions
"Only rarely do women cover national or political news. And these women are exceptions to the rule," she said.

Margaret Mead, noted anthropologist, said in the Science Yearbook for 1968: "The very fact that formal barriers are down reduces women to battling feather-soft barriers — no closed doors to batter down but there is a life style that makes it more difficult for a woman to attain any degree of success in the business world."

Two speakers at the Sexuality Colloquy, Mrs. Sidney Callahan and Violette S. Lindbeck, both called for women to prepare for the time when their childbearing days are over.

Speaking of the "other American dilemma," Mrs. Lindbeck, professor of philosophy at Southern Connecticut College, said that the prejudice women encounter is similar to racial prejudice. She said that women threaten men's roles when they move into traditional male fields.

On campus, male professors greatly outnumber women professors. Most of the women professors who were asked their views of the situation thought that they had encountered barriers in their career that men have not.

Twice as good
"I think in general a woman has to be twice as good as a man," Anne C. Garrison, asst. professor of business law and office administration, said.

She said that part of the problem is that women set their private ambitions too low. She said that too often they settle for something that will not satisfy them all their lives.

She said that women should stop preparing themselves "to be good little wives" and start preparing to operate in the world.

"It's going to be a man's world until women wake up and smell the coffee perking," she said.

Elizabeth H. Rusk, professor of English and education, said that although she had never felt handicapped, she "might have been lucky."

She said that she felt women generally had the same chance as men except at administrative work. She said that few heads of departments are women.

"If women are qualified I think they should be considered, and I'm not sure they are," she said.

Double standards
Donna O'Donnohue, president of Women's Inter-Residence Council, said that she does not think there is a double standard in the University although she believes that such standards might exist in the business world.

She cited the election of a girl to represent undergraduates in the presidential selection committee as an example of coeds' equal status with males.

Miss O'Donnohue said that abolishing the female member-at-large position in ASMSU was good because women no longer felt separate from men. She felt women would get more in-

Jazz ensemble to study origins on TV program

"Roots of Jazz: Today and Tomorrow" will be presented by the MSU Jazz Ensemble on GAMUT, on WMSB, Channel 10 at 11:30 Saturday.

The program will feature original compositions by ensemble members that demonstrate new trends in jazz. Numbers include "Twelve Seventeen" by Gregory J. Hopkins, Berkley senior, and "Black is the Color of My True Love's Hair," by Michael G. O'Sullivan, White Plains, N.Y., senior.

"Roots of Jazz" is produced by George West, director of the jazz ensemble, and directed by Bruce Gray.

involved in student government now.

At present there is no organized movement on campus working for women's liberation. A spokesman for the Movement said that it had become "de-emphasized" due to the need to focus on new admissions and hiring policies.

Susie Taylor, Southfield junior, said that the Worker-Student Alliance faction of Students for Democratic Society is working to get women to understand that they are being economically exploited.

She said that the belief that women are inherently inferior is being used by capitalists to exploit both men and women. She said that women are being used as "scab labor" to keep wages low.

"The important thing is for women not to fight men, but the system," Miss Taylor said. "We don't want women to fight men for roles."

She said that under capitalism, women can not be liberated. She said that women must examine men's actions and their own and criticize where they see manifestations of the male supremacy myth.

Women's liberation means much more than burning bras and girdles and refusing to wear make-up. It is hoped that someday women will topple the "feather-soft barriers" that stand in the way of complete equality.

Winners named in book contest

The Library has announced the winners in the annual Undergraduate Book Contest.

First prize of $100 went to Rita Berens, Dubuque, Iowa, sophomore, for her collection of science fiction books. Second prize of $50 went to Theda Skoepol, East Lansing senior, for her sociology collection.

There was a tie for third place of $25 between Paul Lamb-Lansing senior, for his sociology collection and Larry Morse, Dayton, Ohio senior, for his collection of botanical books.

Miss Berens, a geology major, has been collecting science fiction for three years. She has nearly 700 volumes of books and 300 magazines.

The judges felt that her collection demonstrated unusual subject knowledge, discrimination and imagination.

Miss Berens is not a senior so she is not eligible for nomination for the $1,000 national Amy Loveman award, sponsored by the "Saturday Review" and the Book-of-the-Month Club.

The winners were decided by a faculty committee. The 41 contestants who did not receive a major prize will each be given a certificate for $2, to be used for the purchase of a book of their choice at a local bookstore.

Riegle eyes '76 presidency

By GEORGE BULLARD
State News Staff Writer
Donald W. Riegle Jr., MSU alumnus and U.S. congressman from Flint, has begun to stir the city of Washington with candid revelation of his aspirations to the presidency. Riegle, a Republican, admits that he has "interests along these lines." He also concedes "interest" in unseating Michigan Democratic Sen. Philip A. Hart when Hart comes up for re-election next year.

A Detroit newspaper recently quoted Riegle as saying to a senior congressman, "I'm going to be president one day and I'd like you on my team." Riegle said in a State News interview that he does not recall the statement. He put his ambitions toward the White House in the context of the "American Dream."

"Sure, I'd like to be president," he said. "It is impossible for a man to serve in Congress, wanting to change things for the better, and not think that the best place for himself is in that executive office."

"Most find a way to hide their ambitions," he continued. "Perhaps I have been more candid than most. I think that not enough guys have this ambition."

Riegle does not rule out his chances for the Republican nomination in 1976, but expects that he will be "far down on the list."

"Robert Finch (secretary of Health, Education and Welfare) is the most likely Republican candidate in 1976," he said.

Riegle predicted that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., will be a prime contender for the Democratic nomination in both 1972 and 1976.

In the interim, Riegle's attention will be centered on the possibility of entering the 1970 Michigan Senate race.

Though interested, he said that he would not run against former Gov. Romney, if the latter chose to resign his Cabinet post and run for the Republican nomination.

It has been reported that Romney may step down as secretary of Housing and Urban Development to make the run for the Senate.

In his two years as congressman, Riegle has gained a degree of fame in Washington as an articulate critic of the U.S. policy in Vietnam.

"All the evidence we can find indicates that our present level of commitment in Vietnam was never anticipated," he told House members last year, "nor was it ever formally justified by the (Johnson) Administration as being in the strategic self-interest of the United

Ad. Dept. head says profession needs blacks

Not enough blacks are seeking careers in the field of advertising to meet the present demand, John W. Crawford, chairman of the Dept. of Advertising, said in a recent interview.

Hundreds of requests for black advertisers are coming in now because it is the "popular thing," he said, but this may not be a permanent situation.

"I cannot promise a black freshman or sophomore a job in the next few years," Crawford stated. Crawford recently resigned as department chairman and was named head of the School of Journalism at the University of Oregon.

The black man feels that there must be a job at the end of the line and he wants a guarantee, Crawford asserted, and the Dept. of Advertising has not been able to give such a guarantee.

"We are not totally responsible," Crawford added. "The employer has to take some of the blame. We must persuade him that he has a stake in this too."

He suggested that it is the "security motivation" that leads blacks to select careers in fields like education, where jobs are more certain.

Black-oriented advertising is becoming more necessary because of the growing trend in segmented audiences, Crawford said.

In the past, he explained, it was desirable and indeed possible to address advertising to all people simultaneously.

"I no longer think this is true," Crawford said. "In the course of the last 30 years, we have come to think of people as homogeneous groups due to income, education, geography and interests."

No stress is put on black orientation to advertising in department courses, Crawford admitted, but there is good, vigorous preparation in reaching fractionated audiences in all courses.

States or the free world."

Riegle startled one secret subcommittee meeting by prodding Rutherford M. Poats, deputy director of the Agency for International Development (AID), into admissions that subcommittee Chairman Otto Passman, D-La., called "frightening."

Riegle, who received a double M.B.A. in finance and marketing from MSU in 1961, now has a chance to discuss AID directions with his old boss, former President Hannah who is the new director of AID.

Outside Congress, Riegle has achieved recognition of his legislative accomplishments.

In 1967, he was chosen as one of the country's 10 outstanding young men by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. He was also selected by "The Nation" magazine as one of the two "best congressmen for the year 1967."

CAMPUS SHOWPLACE

'U' gardens serve as labs

In the peak seasons of spring and fall, between 4,000 and 5,000 people will visit the MSU Horticulture Gardens to view nearly 20,000 plants.

The gardens, which are over 35 years old, once extended over the land now occupied by the Student Services and Natural Science Bldgs., but now cover an area between the Horticulture and Student Services Bldgs.

These gardens are used as both a teaching laboratory and a showplace. There is some research done at the gardens, but most of it takes place at the Horticulture Center, 3291 College Road.

The large number of visitors, although welcome, do create a major problem, Roy A. Mecklenburg, asst. professor of horticulture, said, because they wear foot paths in the grass.

One problem Mecklenburg says he is glad he does not have, however, is the unlawful picking of flowers. If some flowers are lost, children, not students, usually pick them.

Class members do most of the maintenance but one full time gardener is employed year-round and four or five part time students each spring.

"I've been impressed to find that it's relatively easy to find a lot of people who enjoy gardening," Mecklenburg said.

In caring for the plants, it is necessary to pump about a quart of water to each plant every week. About 5,000 gallons a week comes from the Red Cedar River through an underground sprinkler system.

Many of the leaves raked during fall are ground down and spread among the plants by students. This keeps in water, cools the plants, moderates the temperature extremes and controls weeds.

When the weather permits, each Monday and Tuesday the plants are sprayed with 50 gallons of insecticide to keep them healthy.

Roses receive the most insecticide of any plant, around 89 per cent.

"Considered as the aristocrat among flowers by some, the rose requires a great deal of care," notes Mecklenburg.

This year the gardens will feature a large variety of pansies among the 5,000 plant varieties, including a new vigorous hybrid that is heat resistant.

Pansies grow best in cool temperatures.

One major improvement has been made in the gardens this spring. The Boxwood hedges in back of the Student Services Bldg., which were 30 years old, have been cut down. Mecklenburg says they were damaged from the heavy snow in the 1966 winter but should grow back in one or two years.

Each spring 30,000 seeds are planted in greenhouses and then transplanted to the gardens after they reach two or three inches of growth in May.

"As insurance, we plant more seeds than we need and transplant more than we need because 20 or 30 per cent will die," Mecklenburg said.

Most of the flowers planted are annuals that die each year. This leaves space for new plants for the following year.

Library files 'underground' lit

By MARYANNE GEORGE
State News Staff Writer
The Garskof pamphlets and handbills that you walked on and may have thrown away winter term may be the source for your children's term paper. Deep in the "underground" corner of the MSU Library the Special Collections Division is building a file of current literature printed by radical student movements. This file attempts to document the history of the entire reform movement in the United States since the 1930s. Pamphlets from the labor union movement of the 1930s and handbills of the American Communist Party can be found in this file. Some included are the only remaining copies of these pamphlets.

to obtain what they could collect for free now," he said. The division has subscribed to 40 student movement papers in an attempt to augment this file.

Wilkinson said that the decision as to what papers to subscribe to is made on the basis of personal recommendations and papers that they feel are the most representative of the student movement. Such papers are the Rag from the University of Texas and The Teaspoon Door.

Attempts have also been made to collect literature from the Radical Right, but Wilkinson has found this more difficult as their literature is scattered throughout various periodicals.

The file is available to students through the subject catalogue in the card catalogue.

MSU builds observatory for study of star brightness

The stars will seem a little clearer to East Lansing in the near future. Construction is proceeding on MSU's new astronomical observatory, due to be completed by spring of next year. This observatory will house a telescope with a mirror measuring 24 inches in diameter, ground and polished to within a fraction of a wavelength of light of the desired curve. The mirror serves to concentrate light into a small beam for visual, photographic or electronic observation. A 24-inch mirror has about 5,000 times the light-gathering power of the human eye.

Built entirely from University funds at a cost of $660,000, the facility will be used primarily by faculty and graduate students. A course in observatory practice will be offered next spring term, however, in which undergraduates will be given assignments using the telescope.

One of the most important applications of the instrument will be the determination of the brightness of stars at various wavelengths, known as spectrophotometry. Thus, the telescope was designed with this purpose in mind. "We have traded size for efficiency," Albert P. Linnell, head of the Dept. of Astronomy, said.

Three optical arrangements will be possible with this telescope. The first setup gives a photographic field of one degree by one degree with good clarity. Two other arrangements give higher magnification and consequently smaller fields of view. One, known as the Coude focus, brings the image to an indoor room where special equipment can be used to analyze it. Focal length varies from F 8 to F 34.5.

In choosing a site, consideration was given to many factors. The site selected, south of the railroad tracks on campus, will offer the advantage of acceptable observing conditions at a nearby location. This will allow easy commuting to and from the site, and make the development, in the laboratory, of equipment for the observatory much easier than a distant site.

Linnell noted that some of the equipment developed for the observatory will be easily transportable. This would make it possible for faculty members to take their equipment with them to a new large telescope observatory being built by U.S. government agencies in Chile.

The southern sky, which is not entirely visible from the Northern Hemisphere, has been much less thoroughly observed than the northern sky. Thus, the Chilean observatory will allow opportunity for much new exploration.

Critical 'U' airs relevant education

Critical University will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Room 30 of the Union.

Four persons will speak on how faculty and students can organize within the University to make their education more relevant. Two of these will be Bertram Garskof, asst. professors of psychology, and Christopher Sower, professor of sociology.

Top brass orders National Guard to shave beards

SOUTH HAVEN, MICH. (UPI)—National Guard members have been ordered by the brass to shave their beards when they are due for a weekend bivouac.

About half of the 50 Guardsmen of the headquarters co. of the First Battalion of the 246 Armored Division, have been growing beards along with other South Haven residents for their centennial celebration.

The Fifth Army regulations previously permitted growing of beards in the past under such circumstances but the regulations were amended last December.

VIET SOURCE BOOK Fishel edits 'war anthology

By MITCH MILLER
Executive Reporter
Once again, controversial MSU professor Wesley R. Fishel is in the news.

William H. Hinton, who had been scheduled to be keynote speaker at the Annual Winds of Change seminar, canceled his appearance (via collect telegram) when he found that Fishel was faculty adviser to the program.

"Fishel's record," Hinton charged, "is stained with the blood of countless Vietnamese patriots." Stained or not, the record of this colorful man, who holds appointments in both the Dept. of Political Science and in James Madison College, is highlighted by his editing of "Vietnam: Anatomy of a Conflict," an 879-page anthology, which may be described as a guide to the Vietnam War.

Probably the most surprising material, in terms of the conflict and its effects in Vietnam and the world, are statements by other Southeast Asian leaders (Lee Kuan Yew, Norodom Sihanouk and Souvanna Phouma) regarding the war.

All of these men, contrary to the widely held view that world opinion unanimously condemns the United States, support the American effort-void the recent decision on Cambodia's part to move to resume diplomatic relations with the United States—and all of them recognize that if the United States pulls out of Southeast Asia, their countries will cease to exist.

Also very interesting and little-known are the results of a public opinion survey conducted by the Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton and the Center for Vietnamese Studies, a Saigon organization for CBS News. The survey found, among other things that only 6 per cent of the Vietnamese want to see the National Liberation Front (Viet Cong) represented in a post-war government, and three out of four are opposed to any Viet Cong participation.

Statistics vital
Approximately 40 per cent favor the American role, slightly less feel we should get out of the war in one way or another and the remainder do not know or will not say.

Perhaps most startling of all, the survey found that no one felt they would be better off under the Viet Cong, and nine out of ten feel they would be better off under Saigon government. Confounding the image of an apathetic peasantry are the statistics that only 3 per cent of the Vietnamese say it does not matter and only 7 per cent say they do not know which would be better for them.

The book is much more heavily oriented than most on the war to the publication of material from the period of the Geneva conference and throughout the Diem regime and the events that followed.

It attempts to provide an objective historical record of the situation and the decisions that led to our current problems.

While some may claim that the book is not "completely objective," whatever that may mean, it is undeniably more so than the overwhelming majority of the other works on the subject.

Reflects position
Certainly the book reflects Fishel's position on the war, a position which, while over-shot in the fury of polemic fire and counter-fire, is probably the most rational anyone can hold.

His position is that while the war has a noble end, its course has been a miserable one, primarily due to the decisions made by the U.S. government, as well as other governments, agencies and private citizens, which have been based on incomplete, false or misleading information—or on no information at all.

The new Mercedes-Benz 280SE: "Nips through traffic like a sports car."

The new Mercedes-Benz 280SE explodes the myth that a so-called "fine car" has to be a huge car. Compared with its major rivals, the 280SE gives away nothing in interior room, yet measures a full two feet shorter on the outside. You can nip through traffic with the ease of a sports car. If the 280SE handles like a sports car, perhaps it's because its fully independent suspension first appeared on a World Championship Mercedes-Benz racing car. It gets a ferocious grip on the road, yet individual suspension at each wheel actually gives you a smoother ride than those spongily sprung "luxury" cars. The 280SE's engine is straight out of the famous 280SL sports car. (The "E" in the 280SE's name stands for "Einspritzmotor" or fuel injection engine. Fuel injection is an ingenious device that boosts horse-

OPEN HOUSES ARE AN INVASION OF YOUR RIGHT TO PRIVACY

BY EAST LANSING MANAGEMENT CO.

Residents of dormitories, fraternities, sororities, etc. are flocking to apartments this year to avoid what will approach insanity. Eager to be able to take a shower in private and read the latest serious novel in their "grubbies", many adults are finding that privacy is the foremost feature in apartment-living. The parking facilities of apartment buildings are far superior to those of most fraternities, but are still too crowded to allow hordes of guests. Muscled managers are employed to keep the neighbors from getting out-of-hand. Apartment doors have locks to keep out visitors during private times when residents want to be alone. Some apartments are located more than a mile from campus to make them difficult to find and secluded in suburbs to blend into the scenery. See a model apartment at Burcham Woods on Burcham Drive between 1 and 4. Call during those hours for information at 332-3711. Visit us alone!

Drug inhibits tumor growth

 "The institute found that one compound was very effective in blocking leukemias in mice," Rosenberg said.
 The NCI has tested over 120,000 compounds for tumor inhibition, but only a handful of those have been metal compounds.
 The NCI is actively pursuing the compound's antileukemia activity and are now testing the platinum compound to evaluate possible side-effects in normal animals, Rosenberg said. Hopefully the next step will be testing on humans.
 Rosenberg said he has found that extensive damage of the cells of the intestine results when large doses of the drug are administered. He had also found that the spleen often shrinks.

 However, this last side effect may be advantageous, as many leukemia patients undergo surgery for the removal of the spleen, he said.
 Rosenberg pointed out that no drug will work against a tumor cell and not react with normal cells because the two are so similar. He said side effects are often minimized in medicine by using a combination of drugs which help to counteract side effects.
 Reports from the Cancer Institute's tests on mice show that the platinum drug has a very marked inhibitory effect. In one test 30 per cent of the test mice showed no tumors, and the average life expectancy was increased by more than 83 per cent.
 As further tests are run on the platinum compound, other mammals including a primate will be subjected to treatment with the drug. Hopefully this testing will begin in June, Rosenberg said.
 If these tests are successful the drug will be put out for clinical testing in humans possible by the middle of this fall, he said.
 "Only then will we know if there is any value in platinum compound," he added.
 The new group of inorganic antitumor agents includes other metal compounds of the platinum group such as rhodium and ruthenium metal compounds," Rosenberg said. "We have only scratched the surface."

Rosenberg and his assistants estimate that the class of possible antitumor agents contains about 1,000 compounds, most of which had never been tested, but any of which are likely candidates for tumor inhibition qualities.

Campus unrest

 About 100 blacks, some armed, occupied the student union building at Cornell for 36 hours over the weekend.
 Although Perkins did not amplify his remarks, they seemed to add up to an admission that the basic complaint-lack of sensitivity to real needs-made by black activists has considerable merit.
 On the black subject, both Cornell's Afro-American Society and San Francisco State's Black Students Union have this as one of their major premises:
 Black students, because they have been kept separate from white society for most of their lives, will not fit neatly into an educational system designed primarily for whites.
 At Cornell, as at San Francisco State, the black student leaders argue that ordinary university courses do not give them the information they need to effectively fight the problems they find wherever black people live.
 Last fall, Cornell set up a black women's cooperative residence because black students complained they felt uncomfortable with, or were misunderstood by, white coeds.
 Incidents ranged from racial insults to an accusation of marijuana being smoked in the black girl's room-the white accuser was unfamiliar with the smell of hair-straightener solutions.

"Black students have repeatedly received telephone calls threatening them with this, that or the other thing," Perkins told newsmen Wednesday.
 The Cornell president also acknowledged that however ugly he may have found the arming of black students who had seized a university building, there may have been enough mistrust and rumor on his campus to prompt their stated fears of white reprisals.

Postal rates

 Postmaster General Winton M. Blount told newsmen that "we're dealing really with decades of mismanagement." He said he is "certain" this department can be run far more efficiently than it has been run.
 Nixon said that in the absence of higher rates, the Post Office Dept.'s deficit would approach $1.2 billion in the fiscal year that begins July 1.
 Higher rates he said, would help control inflation by strengthening the budget and would "make it easier for the postmaster general and his associates to provide better postage."
 Besides recommending that the projected deficit be whittled through rate increases, Nixon said his administration has found ways to cut department spending by $140 million in the next accounting year.
 Second class mail rates for newspapers and magazines circulating outside the country in which they are published would, under the Nixon plan, be boosted by 12 per cent on July 1, 1970. This would be in addition to an 8 per cent increase already scheduled to take effect next Jan. 1.
 Before leaving office, former President Lyndon B. Johnson had proposed that the letter rate be raised to seven cents and that airmail service be merged with regular letter service at that price.

Dorm fire

 said, "The greatest cause of residence hall fires in the last two years have been candles."
 Advising students to at least be careful when burning candles, he compared such warning to "telling someone who is driving 60 mph in a 25 mph zone to drive carefully."
 "I can't very well tell students not to fall asleep while candles are burning," Gingrich said, "but if they are going to burn them, they should at least put them in safe containers and not leave their rooms while the candles are lit."
 Gingrich pointed out that candle-burning is prohibited by various residence hall rules.

Campus Hill is designed for student living!

There are no other apartments quite like them. That's because Campus Hill apartments have been designed specifically for four MSU students.

How do we design an apartment for MSU students? Well, we start with two soundproof, spacious bedrooms. Then we add five spacious double closets and a bath with double vanity. Next comes a kitchen with deluxe appliances, including dishwasher.

Add a large living room, so isolated from the bedrooms that you can have a party in it while your roommate sleeps comfortably. Finally, add central air conditioning, plush carpeting, and furniture, and you have the most comfortable luxury apartments available.

You'll like the price at Campus Hill, too. Only $58.75 per month per person. See Campus Hill today. Call our resident managers in Apartment 103 A (351-3372) or 101E (351-3510).

Marriage losing societal support

By CAROL CORRIERE
Religion Editor

The future of marriage—if it even has a future—is uncertain according to both a Catholic marriage counselor and the asst. professor who is teaching the MSU School of Social Work's basic course on marriage.

"The future of marriage depends on those of us who care about marriage," Urban Steinmetz, executive director of the Family Enrichment Bureau in Escanaba, told married students at St. John's Student Center Sunday.

Steinmetz said that the institution of marriage is being faced with something that it had never seen before—it is losing many of its traditional societal supports.

Less Pressure
"There is a loosening of social pressures on marriage all the way down the line," he said.

Twenty-five years ago, marriages were expected to last forever, Steinmetz said, but today divorce has become so socially acceptable that in states like California, there is a divorce for every marriage. Joseph P. Miller Jr., asst. professor of social work agreed substantially with Steinmetz in this area.

In an interview Tuesday, Miller said that society in general has taken over many of the specific services that the family used to provide such as general education, teaching of skills, medical care and welfare services.

Societal Trends
Miller said that due to these societal trends, he foresees several possible courses that marriage could take.

As government and automated industry take over more and more of the traditional family functions, the family could dissolve itself.

This would lead to a "1984" or "Brave New World" type of society, he said.

Another possibility can be seen in the Israeli kibbutz way of life in which the marriage institution remains but most of the rearing of children is done by the society as a whole.

Personal Relations
Miller said, however, that he

MILLER

foresees and hopes that the family of the future will become a unit for close personal relationships in an impersonal society.

The family is the one available grouping in which people can let down their masks and be themselves, he said.

"Today changes in society are forcing the individual within the family to become more individualistic," Miller said.

In order for the family members to truly be themselves there will have to be an openness and willingness to communicate among the members, he said.

Must Communicate
"People have to be able to recognize the fact that when they express their feelings the group it is not just a personal attack."

Steinmetz also emphasized the importance of honest communication in making marriage more meaningful and thus giving it a more hopeful future.

"I have only one message," he said, "communicate."

In nine years of marriage counseling, he said, 85 per cent of the couples he had advised had sexual problems, 50 per cent had financial problems, 70 to 75 per cent had in-law problems but all had communication problems.

STEINMETZ

Human Insecurity
"Even the people who have the better marriages have problems communicating," Steinmetz said.

He attributed this lack of good communication to basic human insecurity.

We are taught to be afraid and defensive, Steinmetz said. When we listen to others, we concentrate on defensive plans rather than what they are saying. We have to stop defensive listening and learn to listen intelligently.

When we listen intelligently, he said, we find out about ourselves. Often we don't want to face the facts we find about ourselves, but this is the only way we can become mature human beings, he said.

Mature Union
"Marriage should be the union of two maturing individuals," Steinmetz said.

This maturity can be achieved through loving, honest and open communication.

Steinmetz said that married people have to realize that open communication can lead to conflict but that this is not necessarily bad.

Each of us is incomplete as an individual, he said, and we search out other people to fill the gaps in our personalities.

We deliberately search out and then marry people who are totally different from us, Steinmetz said, and then we expect to always agree with them. This is an impossible task.

Fill Needs
Instead married couples should strive to fill each other's needs, he said. This is the structure and basis of love: the continuous building of one another by helping each other mature personally.

"Marriage is a continuous building, creating society," Steinmetz said, "whose function is then turned over to the family."

The future of marriage depends on people being willing to build each other into lovable people," he said, "and beyond this to then bring their love to the community as a whole."

Protestant protector

This supporter of the Rev. Ian Paisley, militant Protestant leader, keeps a one-man vigil outside Stormont, seat of Ulster Government. Unionist M.P.s and Senators gathered for a Parliamentary Unionist Party meeting over the "one man, one vote" issue in Northern Ireland.

Priest: politics means religion in N. Ireland

The recent rioting and sabotage in Northern Ireland stems from long-standing political and social discrimination by Protestants against the country's large Catholic minority. "Politics in Northern Ireland means religion," Father Richard O'Neill, an Irish priest, said in an article in "Ave Maria," an American Catholic magazine.

Housing is controlled by local councils which are Protestant dominated and tend to discriminate against Catholics in allocating available housing. The Catholics are fighting now for voting rights so that they can more effectively counter the Protestant discrimination in housing.

CHRISTIAN ATMOSPHERE

Religious living units offer choice

An alternative to dormitory life and apartment living is offered students through off-campus religious living units.

The Asher Student Foundation and the Bethel Manor offer an atmosphere conducive to Christian living, but are not officially associated with any church.

The Asher House, composed of members of the Christian Science faith, offers an environment for furthering beliefs and practices in the religion," Marshall McNutt, Asher Student Foundation resident manager, said.

Adjacent to the students' suites are quiet rooms, exclusively for the reading of Christian Science matter. The non-profit organization is overseen by an elected board of trustees, composed primarily of alumni.

The co-educational foundation is structured similar to the dormitory system. Many laws abandoned by the dormitories are still being enforced at the house, including hours for women and a no open house policy. The fact that Asher House is the only off-campus living facility approved for freshmen explains the utilization of dorm policies.

Financing rests on fees, which are the same as in a dorm, and on subsidies from people within the Christian Science faith.

Resembling a fraternal organization, Asher House takes an interest in extra and inter-curricular competition. To remain a member, one must maintain a 2.0 average.

Bethel Manor, a co-op, somewhat different from the Asher Student Foundation. According to Marvin Konha, adviser to Bethel Manor, residence in the manor averages $100 less than life in a dorm.

The interdenominational organization is not run by a church but by the group of men living there. Even the kitchen is run by the men.

Belief in a particular faith is not a prerequisite for membership in Bethel Manor and a recruitment program is therefore unnecessary. Since the Christian Science faith is a minority religion, Asher Foundation finds launching a recruitment campaign beneficial in securing membership.

Parish to study change in liturgy

St. John's Student Parish is in the midst of a seven-week Parish Liturgical Program aimed "to develop a deeper understanding of the reasons for the changes in the liturgy," according to Fr. Dactian Batt, a priest at the Center.

The program consists of Sunday homilies or film strips on liturgical change and week-night discussions.

The Mass, the main ceremony of Catholic worship, will receive much of the program's emphasis.

"The Mass will probably be radically restructured in the future," Batt said.

He cited a breakthrough in liturgical history in 1935 when scholars began to discover that parts of the Mass developed in many different places.

Although the core of the Mass passed on by the Apostles remained intact, Batt explained, the rest of it did not develop according to any specific plan.

"Now that we see the whole picture, we realize that some parts of the Mass have been given too much emphasis," Batt said. "It's like a play in which one act is too long."

Some of the changes that are now being considered are dropping the prayers at the foot altar, shortening the liturgy of the word, restructuring the prayers in the Canon of the Mass and receiving Communion under the forms of both bread and wine.

A two-part film strip series on the history of the Mass from the early Christian era through present reforms was shown at all the masses on the last two Sundays. Wednesday there was a discussion on "Community."
