Over 100 black students shut down Wilson Hall cafeteria Monday to protest the alleged harassment of three full-time black employees.

Black Students' Alliance (BSA) said the three employees walked off their jobs because of comments of a racist nature by Joseph Trantham, food service manager of Wilson, and Jennie Miller, asst. food service manager.

Shortly before 5 p.m., the black students took over the cafeteria and refused to allow dinner to be served. "If those who rule or govern the operations of this University cannot control their racist employees who are in positions of management, black students will do their job for them," the statement said.

The students plan to occupy the cafeteria until Thursday, when they will hold an open forum with Acting-President Walter Adams.

A spokesman for BSA listed three grievances which the alliance wants rectified. First, that the two food service managers be fired. Also, that the University employ more black full-time help and, finally, that a worker who quit because of harassment be rehired to a position of responsibility.

Prior to the sit-in, the three black non-student employees who walked off their Wilson cafeteria jobs, presented a list of grievances at a meeting with Trantham and the South Complex hall supervisors.

Gary North, asst. director for South

BSA today announced that an open session will be held in Wilson cafeteria at 3 p.m. to discuss BSA demands and grievances and to outline its reasons for the sit-in.

Complex residence halls, said the former employees seemed to indicate that they thought the meeting was generally productive and the outcome of the meeting was in no way influenced by the black sit-in which occurred after the meeting let out.

"Although the meeting was not a decision-making meeting, it was decided that the employers and employees would continue to get together and work out their grievances," North said.

Neither Trantham nor Mrs. Miller could be reached for comment Monday night.

Several administrators met in the cafeteria with the black students to discuss solutions to the problem. Besides Adams, Eldon R. Nonnamaker, associate dean of students, Donald Adams, director of residence hall programs and Lyle Thorburn, manager of residence halls, sat with the students to hear their demands.

Black faculty members and administrators were also present on behalf of the students. Robert L. Green, associate professor of educational psychology and asst. director of the Center for Urban Affairs, said, "This is the culmination of a series of incidents. I wholeheartedly support the shut down. The two managers should be fired. I am willing to stake my job and reputation on this demand."

White Wilson Hall students were served in Case, Wonders and Holden halls while a make-shift meal was prepared for the black students in Wilson.

ABSA spokesman said that from now until Thursday they would conduct a teach-in and discuss among themselves problems related to blacks on this and other campuses.

Only one incident at the rally resembled a physical confrontation. When a State News photographer continued to take pictures despite demands to stop, several black students forced him against a wall and took the roll of film from his camera. Later a black spokesman said the film would be returned.

Approximately 200 white students filed into the Wilson Kiva to direct questions concerning the sit-in to Acting President Adams. Adams answered student questions in a 30 minute session.

Sam Riddle, South Complex BSA representative addressing the crowd, said, "If I were to look at it (the sit-in) from a white person's aspect I would say, 'What the hell are those niggers doing in our cafeteria.'"

Acting President Walter Adams discusses the grievances brought to him by black students Monday as they occupied the cafeteria of Wilson Hall. BSA spokesmen scheduled a teach-in in the cafeteria to last until Thursday when a University hearing will be held to consider the grievances.

Board member charged with violation of duties

By WHIT SIBLEY
State News Staff Writer

A newly elected member of the ASMSU Board has been asked to appear before the All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ) tonight to answer charges of voting irregularities in the April 9 ASMSU elections.

Gary Klinsky, general member-at-large, has been accused of violating his student duties as stated in Article 1.2 of the Academic Freedom Report "to refrain from interference with those rights of others which are equally essential to the purposes and processes of the University."

Pete Ellsworth, past chairman of ASMSU and a member of the ASMSU Election Review Board, said, "Generally speaking, we are charging Klinsky with tampering with the voting at one of the polling places."

Sandy Fenster, chairman of the review board, said that the board thought that it could not sit in judgment because it was not "100 per cent unbiased" and therefore asked for a hearing before the AUSJ.

Klinsky is also charged with violation of Article 1.4 of the Freedom Report, Article 2.3 of the ASMSU Election Procedures and Article 15 of the MSU Student Handbook.

"I know that I am innocent and that it will take tomorrow night to prove it," Klinsky said Monday afternoon.

Steve Bensko and Tom Verburg, who will defend Klinsky at tonight's hearing, said that they will ask for a dismissal of the trial because there have been no specific allegations leveled against Klinsky.

"According to a statement formerly made by the Student-Faculty Judiciary, Articles 1.2 and 1.4 of the Freedom Report are preambles," Verburg said, "and one cannot be charged with violating them."

Letters reveal trustee rift over successor to May

By STEVE WATERBURY
State News Staff Writer

Two Democratic trustees clashed Monday over the procedure to be used in the selection of a new MSU vice president for business and finance.

A rift between Board Chairman Don Stevens, D-Okemos, and Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, was disclosed in an article appearing in a Detroit newspaper Monday which quoted at length letters exchanged between the two men.

In the letters, Stevens advocated consultation first with Democratic party leaders before filling the post, while Huff favored bi-partisan consultation.

The last holder of the vice presidency for business and finance was Phillip J. May, a Republican, who resigned Nov. 30 in the wake of conflict of interest charges.

Stevens opened the correspondence with a letter to Huff dated March 19. He wrote:

"In view of the political activity by former Republican MSU Vice President for Business and Finance Phillip J. May, especially in the last two campaigns it would seem appropriate to me that we five Democratic trustees seek the advice and counsel of Democratic Party leaders of the MSU Democratic Academic Resources Council (DARC) and the leadership of the Democratic State Central Committee in filling this post."

Stevens listed several candidates for the office who were also Democrats, and concluded:

"Finally and frankly, after experiencing the agony of the way the Republican trustees, Thompson, and Merriman, worked hand in hand with former MSU Vice President May, I, for one, couldn't care less whether they agree, disagree or indeed violently oppose our choice of a president, an acting president, a vice president for business and finance or the creation and filling of any positions that we might create by using our five votes to amend the bylaws."

Before May's retirement last winter Stevens had accused him of trying to rig an election-eve trap for Democratic trustees in a complicated deal involving the leasing of cars at reduced rates.

Huff replied to Stevens in a letter dated March 23 that, "I find myself at variance with this position. I think it is the duty of a chairman to endeavor to achieve unity among members of the board."

"I do not fear divided votes," Huff continued, "but think these divisions should be on the basis of convictions, not party lines. I welcome the views of any group of individuals having an interest in the University, whether they be Democrats or Republicans."

Stevens closed the exchange with a letter to Huff dated Mar. 27. He wrote: "In my view, this appointment is a matter which should be discussed first with Democratic trustees and Democratic officials of DARC and MSU, and officials of the Democratic State Central Committee."

Stevens added that the matter should be placed on the agenda of the Democratic State Central Committee.

When questioned about additional points brought out in the letter exchange, Stevens stated Monday, "I don't release personal letters."

Refusal to cut hair costs 'U' track star trip to Drake meet

Does an athletic coach have the right to dictate standards of appearance for his athletes?

MSU Track Coach Fran Dittrich says yes.

MSU track star Bill Wehrwein says no. The result of this disagreement was that Wehrwein, MSU's record-holding track star, was left behind when the Spartan track team competed in the Drake Relays last weekend.

Dittrich said he would not let his star runner compete in the meet because Wehrwein refused to get his hair cut.

"We (MSU) have an image to uphold because we are known all over the U.S. for gentility and neat appearance," Dittrich said.

"He (Wehrwein) didn't comply with regulations and he didn't go."

ELECTION PENDING

French presidency falls to Senate head Poher

PARIS (AP) — Alain Poher, an unknown outside France, received the powers of the presidency of Charles de Gaulle's fifth Republic without ceremony Monday, but his only major task is to set up a presidential election.

De Gaulle remained behind the green iron gates of his country estate at Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises in eastern France, where the tolling of the church clock at noon marked the end of his 10 years of rule.

Noon was the hour De Gaulle himself had selected for leaving France "to its destiny."

His resignation—the result of a sharp defeat in a referendum calling for decentralization of power and Senate reform—stirred up all kinds of guessing in Europe and around the world. Gold and currency markets encountered a new flurry of trading. The French franc hit new lows and gold new highs in Paris, underscoring the uncertainty some felt about the French economy without De Gaulle.

The British looked with renewed hopes at the European Common Market. The West Germans and others foresaw the possibility of a more flexible France and European political unity. De Gaulle kept Britain out of the Common Market and sought for France the leading role among European nations. Israelis expressed a hope for a change in what they regarded as De Gaulle's pro-Arab policies and the Arabs considered they had lost a friend.

At Elysee Palace in Paris, secretaries, clerks, administrative assistants and top-level members of the De Gaulle secretariat cleared personal papers and property out of their desks and vacated the offices. Trucks rolled out through the gravelled courtyard with De Gaulle's personal possessions, including a great variety of gifts that he had collected from chiefs of state on official visits.

When Poher got to the Palace in the afternoon, the household staff was on duty, plus a few secretaries, a military aide and a protocol representative to show the interim president around the deserted premises.

Premier Maurice Couve de Murville arrived a short time later for a 45-minute talk with Poher.

The transfer of power to Poher was accomplished with a complete absence of formality. A letter from the Constitutional Council advising him that a vacancy in the presidency existed, automatically moved Poher, as the Senate president, into France's No. 1 job.

Poher told newsmen that a Cabinet meeting would be called after Thursday to set the date for the election of a new president. June 1, June 8 and June 15 have been mentioned as possible dates for the two rounds of voting.

In a brief radio-television address, Poher did not mention De Gaulle, but he said "on the evening of this decision which I regret, I wish first of all to express the respectful sentiment of all those for whom the present difficulty will never cause to be forgotten the eminent services of the past."

He said that the unity of the nation must be preserved and "we will heed, scrupulously of the law which the interim president, the government which remains in office, the elected assemblies and all Frenchmen

VIETNAM PROTESTERS

Supreme Court to rule on draft delinquency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether draft boards can order college students into the armed forces for turning in their draft cards as a Vietnam war protest.

The court had been urged by the Justice Dept. to reject out of hand claims that the draft delinquency regulations are being used to stifle outspoken opponents of the war.

Instead a hearing was set for next fall—a move that puts the Selective Service System on the defensive. Federal officials will have to overcome claims by war protesters and their Civil Liberties Union lawyers that the draft is being used in a punitive, unconstitutional way.

Centerpiece to the controversy is the memorandum the draft director, Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey sent local boards in October 1967 counseling them to speed the induction of young men who engage in "illegal activities."

In one year's span, 357 students were stripped of college deferments for giving up their draft cards, according to Justice Dept. data.

The department reacted acily to the courts' move. A press officer asked to query officials for observations, responded a few minutes later. They don't have any observations. They'll put them in the briefs.

At Selective Service headquarters Col. David D. Omer, the deputy director, said the action is welcome because the office feels federal courts have created an unfortunate situation by giving conflicting rulings on the regulations. A conflict he expects the court to resolve.

Omer, who is also the general counsel, said the draft boards have not acted against opponents of the war generally, but have restricted use of the regulations to those who give up their cards and don't try to reclaim them or otherwise change their minds.

Added voices welcome in campus dialogue

Friday's rally at the Administration Bldg., sponsored by ASMSU, Young Socialist Alliance (YSA), and the New University Conference (NUC) might be the beginning of a new dialogue on campus.

Centered around the ROTC debate, several groups, formerly primarily preoccupied with drinking matches, have joined into voice their beliefs.

It is a new vitality which can be invaluable to the academic community.

Not everyone is approaching the debate with equal honesty—such as the Committee of 39 which posts its vitriolic, but conservative flyers on various surfaces around campus—but we hope even they will soon join in openly and rationally.

ASMSU, with its co-sponsorship of the rally, has put its foot in the right direction. This augurs much for an active Fifth Session and hopefully increased student involvement along with it.

A high point at the rally was Tom Samet's concise statement calling for an end to ROTC on the campus. This statement from Samet, though chairman of ASMSU, was spoken for himself, and he spoke as a student leader deeply concerned about MSU issues.

Undoubtedly, ASMSU, SDS, YSA, and some faculty members will have their hands full rounding-up more supporters than the 150-odd individuals who attended the last rally. SDS's reasons for its lack of sponsorship of the rally are probably complex, but its "dislike" for the capitalist system and resistance to work within the committee format help to define its motives.

However, SDS's half-hearted attitude might instead help to attract many to ASMSU's stance on ROTC who otherwise would have stayed away if SDS joined the other groups.

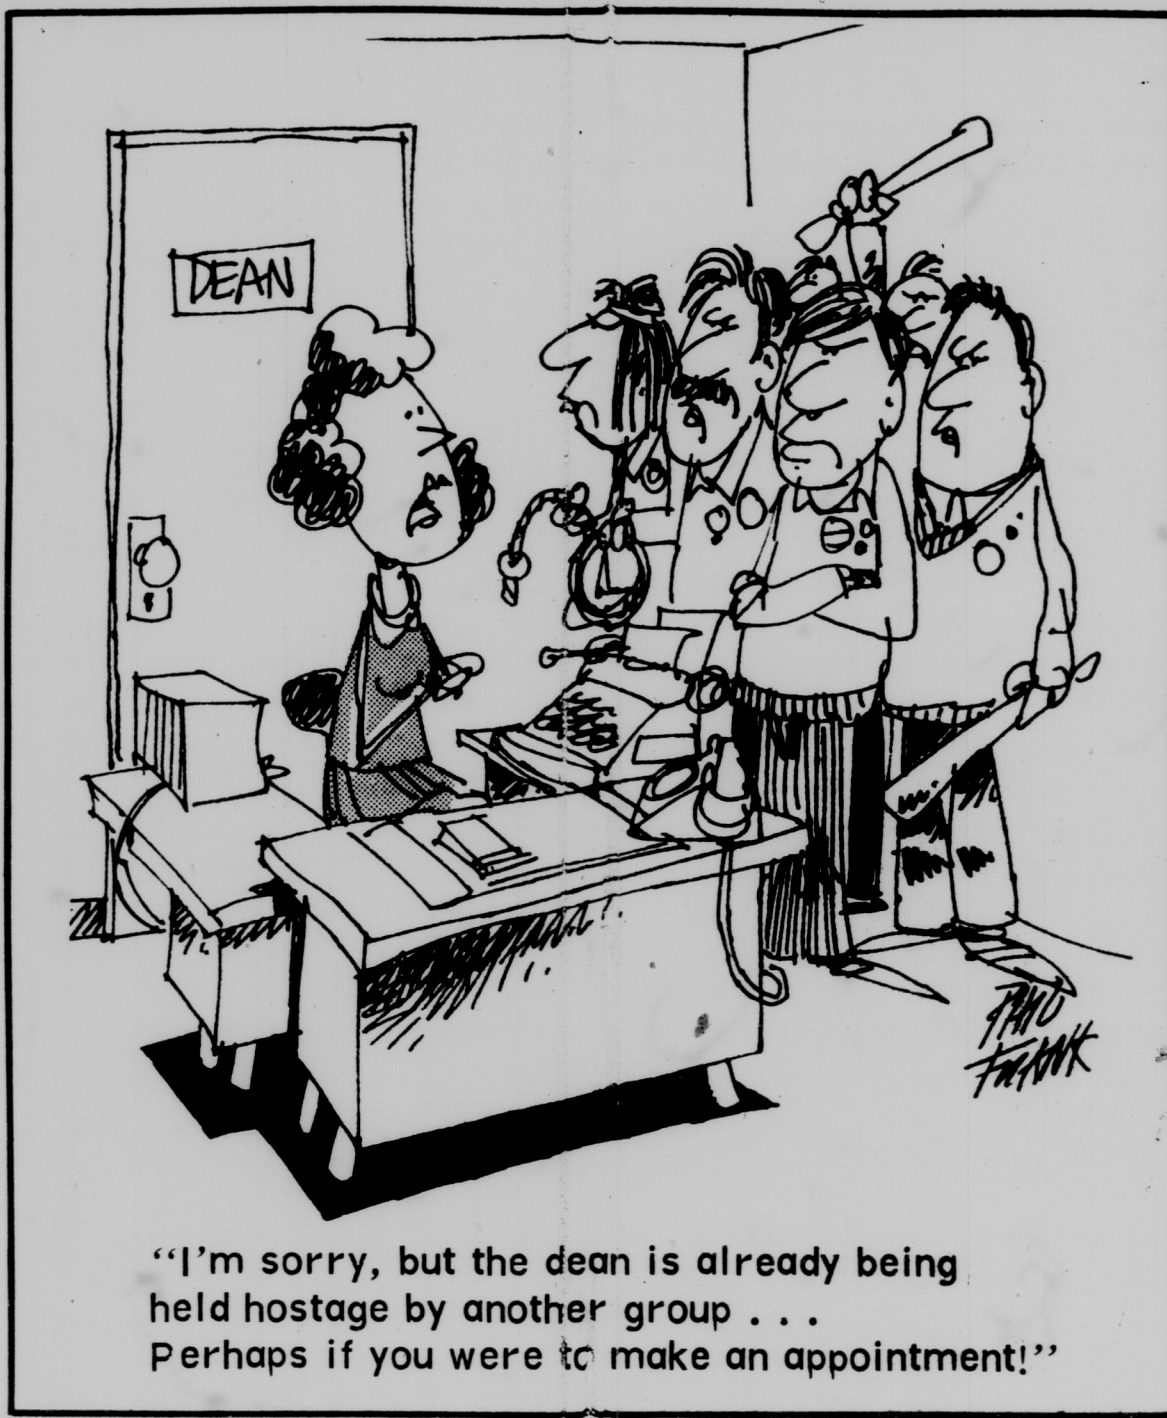

At present, ASMSU is standing behind Acting President Adams' formation of two committees to look into the place ROTC has on campus—if it has a place at all. But if the committees should deliberate at a slow pace and/or decide that, after all, ROTC should remain as before, ASMSU might be provoked into action.

Until the committees report, anti-ROTC rallies would be a welcome sight on this campus. With other universities across the country in turmoil due to demands that ROTC be abolished, forums, such as the one which occurred last week, could provide an atmosphere of intelligent debate.

It is now up to the Committee of 39 whether it wants to remain undercover and puerile in the eyes of the community or whether the time to enter into a meaningful dialogue, without hypocritical tactics, has come.

We would welcome a verbal debacle, within the bounds of rational discussion, on this campus.

OUR READERS' MIND

Wayne Morse for 'U' President

To Dale E. Hathaway, chairman All-University Committee of Search and Selection:

To the Editor:

This is to nominate for the presidency of MSU:

The Honorable Wayne Morse, J.D., LL.D. Former U.S. senator from Oregon.

In Wayne Morse, MSU would have as president a world figure, a man whose wisdom, vigor, integrity, and dedication to the general good are a matter of unquestionable public record—a record as a labor arbitrator (called upon by several U.S. presidents in nation-wide crises), a vigilant conservationist and civil-libertarian, a sponsor (as chairman of the education subcommittee) of major education bills, and a foreign affairs expert (long-time chairman of the subcommittee for Latin-American affairs) whose independent, sometimes unpopular, views have repeatedly been borne out by later history.

In Wayne Morse, MSU would have a president of unquestionable academic credentials, as professor and dean (for 24 years) of the University of Oregon Law School.

In Wayne Morse, MSU would have a president whose record as a civil libertarian and watchdog of the military-industrial complex would quiet fears of racial bias and control by "The Establishment," and whose proven fairness and negotiating powers would assure all sides, always, of being fully, intelligently, and responsively heard.

This nomination is on the initiative of the undersigned alone.

ROTC credit is justifiable

To the Editor:

As a 1966 graduate of MSU and the ROTC program, I'd like to say that I was extremely happy to have the chance to take ROTC and subsequently serve for two years in the U.S. Army. For me, the military service was a fulfilling experience and educational in itself.

I feel that credit is justifiable for ROTC courses as long as it is granted for such courses as physical education (dancing, paddle ball, etc.), bookkeeping, accounting and a few others. Courses of this nature don't seem to provoke much more thought or intellectual curiosity than you say ROTC lacks.

The military leader including squad, section and/or fireteam leaders (often low ranking enlisted personnel) is constantly making decisions which affect the lives of those about him.

Situations change continuously which require quick analysis and positive action. Therefore, charges that the military provides robots to carry out wishes of some god are completely ridiculous. Why, it was even my frequent experience that those authoritative martinet, who happened to be military instructors at the time, teach a "school solution" to a problem which is even discussed and/or questioned by the students. Imagine that! The military instructor is quick to point out that there are no "right" and "wrong" ways to accomplish a mission. A leader's decision is based on many variables which may be interpreted many different ways by many different people.

Personally, I'd have taken ROTC whether credit was granted or not. I didn't even need it to graduate, as I'm sure is the case with many others. My main concern is that taking away the academic standing of ROTC is just another step backward against student pressures which of late are becoming extremely irrational.

Radicals, activists and others are always singing the praises of what our founding Fathers accomplished and how they upheld man's greatest ideals. I suggest you

A new organization in support of apathy

Due to an overwhelming lack of interest, the local chapter of the Students for Apathy will hold its second annual meeting this week or next week in the MSU experimental sheep research barns.

The last meeting of the mid-Michigan chapter held on the loading dock of the A & P was a total success when 40,000 students, including 5,000 from Lansing Community College, did not show up.

During that meeting the rank and file of the non-organization voted total abstention in the non-election of officers.

The Students for Apathy is a non-registered non-organization and is not recognized by the University.

Members need not register if they do not feel like it and attendance is not necessary. A national apathetic convention might be held Memorial Day in Clement, N.D., the last resting place of G. J. Wombat, the most apathetic student in collegiate history.

Wombat is still very much alive, though Clement, N.D., was the last place he stopped to rest, and he hasn't moved since.

"I just don't care to move," Wombat said.

Wombat, Hamtramck graduate student in welding, has received degrees from 17 Big Ten Universities and has never once seen nor attended a football game.

Wombat is the heroic figure of the apathetic movement in this country. Having never voted in a national, state or local election, he has kept his personal record free of opinions, commitments and contentions.

Having remained completely neutral on every issue of any importance, he was nicknamed "wishy-washy Wombat" by his closest friends, his mother and his dog, Schlep.

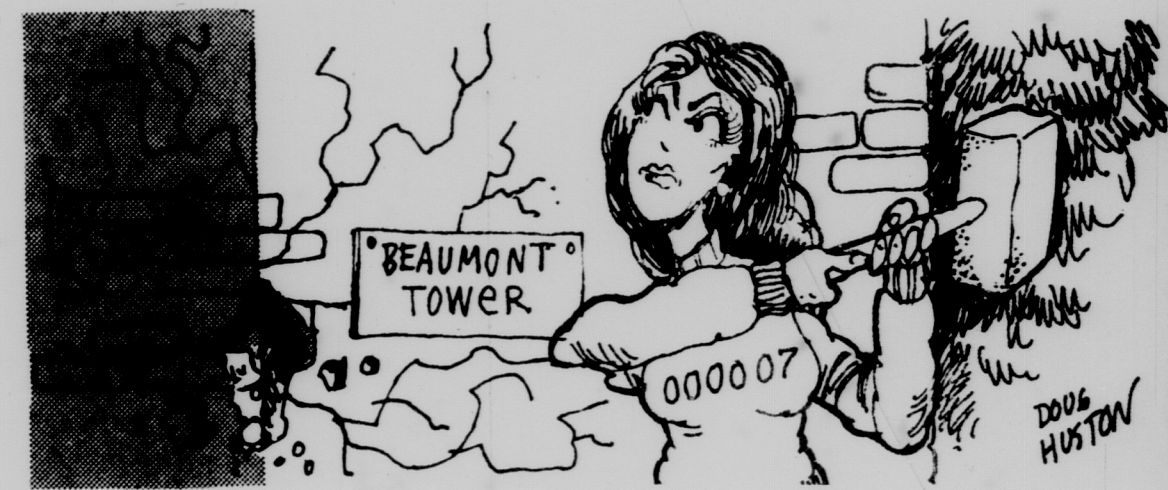

Wombat formed the non-organization in 1959 (which Schlep maintains is one of the most worthless years in American history).

That summer Wombat and Schlep organized a movement (contrary to his nature) to have the year abolished.

A national referendum to delete 1959 or have it rewritten by Truman Capote received the following votes: 3 Yes, 0 No, 19 for Richard Nixon, and 180 million or so not voting.

This spurred Wombat to form the Students for Apathy "to gather all the apathetic into one huge disinterested group."

Reached in Clement while resting, Wombat did not care to comment on anything.

Young adults' controlled

To the Editor:

To East Lansing Management Co.:

Re "OPEN HOUSES ARE AN INVASION OF YOUR PRIVACY" etc., after reading your advertisement it seemed to me that you were asking for it so bad I feel honor-bound to dish it out. I won't insult you by pretending to believe that you're really concerned about the pathetic

"victims" of the new open house policy. But I find it hard to swallow the line about "many adults are finding apartment living . . . blah blah blah. If you are going to play that little game then you'd better stop throwing "adults" into crummy "luxury" apartments with plastic chairs and paper-thin walls (don't try and deny that one), candy machines in the basement and bunks in the bedrooms just like in the (ugh) dormitories; in ugly buildings you put up in a month, you ask these "adults" to pay $50-$75 a month for HALF A BEDROOM!

This latter is purely rhetorical because obviously you don't have trouble renting anyway—I've noticed most places around here don't; that's why I've always been treated so well by East Lansing realtors—and WERE the dummies: WE fill up your plastic apartments every year and never get smart enough to have a rent strike like they did in Ann Arbor. So I guess you've got a pretty good thing going.

When a "young adult" spends a few years in a place where everyone on or off campus or in the vicinity recognizes him as a student and treats him accordingly while patronizingly calling him an "adult," he begins to realize that in his environment he is not controlling but subtly being controlled—and he feels like going out and wrecking all the University buildings so they know he's more than a six-digit number.

But I wouldn't expect you to understand all this, anyway.

My country

To the Editor:

I am neither a radical or a reactionary—I am an American. As an American, a proud American, I readily and heartily support the institutions that have made our country what it is; the most powerful and glorious on earth.

It is the secondary institution that lends support to all the others. One of these is ROTC. I detest war as an unnecessary evil, but as long as war exists we must support our interests at home and abroad. With a sense of human dignity we must strive to protect and defend, in any way possible, our interests and ideals.

When our country seeks my service, I will answer the call, whether it comes from Saigon, Moscow, Peking or Washington. I will serve my country to the best of my ability because it has given me all I have today.

Let us not heed to the call of the sick or misguided mind; let us not participate in the subversive activity which threatens to destroy our nation; let us not abandon our duty to the ideals and aspirations of America. Rather, let us voice our support of America—once more—with feeling.

A script writer's dream

Anyone who has watched the current crop of commercials recognizes that some television opportunities have opened up for black folks. And there have even been some breakthroughs in regular TV series.

We now have our own TV Western featuring a black cowboy, though it might be better not to call him "boy." The name of the show is The Outcasts, and you can tell by the name that it features "us." I understand next season there will be another black cowboy, so that this black cowboy will have someone to kill.

Sometimes the current black cowboy does get to kill someone. But it poses such a problem for the scriptwriters. They have to work so hard "dirtying up" a white cowboy so that the viewing audience will not resent the black cowboy killing him.

Some time back I did see the black cowboy kill a white bad guy. The white cat had just finished raping a blind, paraplegic . . . Salvation Army Worker. But that is not the reason the black cowboy killed him. It turned out the white cat had stolen 2,000 polo-turf canisters and marched off with all the dimes.

Of course, there is ample material from the pages of American history, if the true story of the black cowboys was ever told. Philip Durham and Everett L. Jones in The Adventures of the Negro Cowboys (Bantam, April, 1969) provide some excellent script material. More than five thousand black cowboys roamed the trails north from Texas during the years following the Civil War. They were an exciting, humorous and daring lot, and their adventures would make the staid life on the Ponderosa quite dull by comparison.

Most of the first black cowboys were slaves who came West with their masters from the plantations of the Old South. Just when these slaves had learned to adjust to the long hours and hard labor of the cotton fields, they were forced to master a new trade—breaking horses and handling long-horns.

All-black cattle crews were common in Texas, and some free blacks owned ranches even before the Civil War. Aaron Ashworth was a black ranch-owner who had 2,500 head of cattle and employed a white schoolmaster to teach his children. Now there is material for a series to rival Bonanza, with Ossie Davis as the ranch-owner and Hugh O'Brien teaching sons Clarence Williams and Rosie Grier.

And in the favorite location of TV Westerns, Dodge City, there was a much more colorful figure than Matt Dillon, Bat Masterson or Wyatt Earp. His name was Ben Hodges, born of a black father and a Mexican mother. Ben Hodges was undoubtedly the first ghetto hustler, and he put the schemes of Kingfish to shame.

When Ben Hodges rode into town and heard a rumor that much of the range land surrounding Dodge was part of an old Spanish land grant, he immediately began circulating word of his ancient Spanish ancestry and laid claim to ownership of the land. Sporting the Old West equivalent of an Eldorado, Hodges rode around Dodge on an extravagant saddle, wearing the most expensive spurs and carrying the best gun made.

Even when his hustle was exposed, Ben Hodges was able to call up the resources of a ghetto ingenuity. A whole herd of cattle turned up missing one day and all the circumstantial evidence pointed directly to Hodges. Since he was broke, friendless and without a lawyer, Ben Hodges decided to defend himself.

For two hours, Ben Hodges held the jurors spellbound with interest, amusement and bewilderment. At one point in his summary, Hodges cried out, "What! Me? The descendant of old grandees of Spain, the owner of a land grant embracing millions of acres, the owner of gold mines and villages and town situated on that grant of which I am sole owner, to steal a miserable, miserly lot of old cows? Why, the idea is absurd. No, gentlemen, I think too much of the race of men from which I sprang, to disgrace their memory."

Later in the summation, Hodges portrayed himself as a poor but honest cowboy, being harassed and falsely accused by personal enemies. The whole display was too much for the jury, and it acquitted Hodges.

A few days later the missing cows came home, leaving tracks which told the whole story. Hodges had indeed stolen them and hidden them in a canyon, leaving the cattle unguarded. Weather forced the cows to start moving. But the condemning evidence showed up a little too late, and the accused remained a free man.

The legendary Billy the Kid rode with blacks. When Bill and his gang were trapped in a burning building, blacks were right in there with them. And, outside, black troops surrounded the house.

There are countless other blacks who made a substantial contribution to the legends of the Old West—Cherokee Bill, Jesse Stahl, Deadwood Dick, Bill Pickett and Bose Ikard to name a few. Their lives and activities should be a scriptwriter's dream. Unfortunately, the reluctance to fully utilize existing black talent which still plagues the television industry, would also make such new series a casting director's nightmare.

Prof lists tactics to curb violence

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

Leroy Augenstein, member of the State Board of Education, urged his fellow board members Monday to follow four lines of action designed to prevent violence on Michigan campuses.

In a letter to his colleagues, the chairman and professor of the MSU Biophysics Dept. said he wanted to enlist their support for the program "to protect Michigan against the increasing violence which a tiny, noisy minority has forced on so many of our college campuses around the country."

While he expressed reluctance to act on this matter in the past in order to preserve college autonomy, he said, "the point of no return was passed when the group of gun-toting rioters forced the Cornell officials to submit to their demands."

"This cannot be allowed to happen here in Michigan," Augenstein continued. "We must clearly draw the line between legitimate debate aimed at constructive change and illegal disruption designed to destroy our educational structure."

Augenstein's four preliminary areas of concern are:

--To change the laws so that unauthorized persons cannot take guns onto the campuses.

--To change the laws or campus rules to prevent agitators from disrupting the functioning of a school, especially those who are neither students nor residents of the state.

--To consolidate information from the state and nation as to the dimension of the problems and to the nature of those who foment and participate in disturbances and riots in order to best determine the causes and develop ways of preventing disorders. The provision of a forum for the collection and exchange of information among college officials of how they can best establish and maintain an academic atmosphere in which reason can prevail.

A member of the senate committee investigating campus disorders he said he was "dumbfounded to find that someone can go waving a rifle around our campus and as long as they don't point it directly at someone or threaten them in specific terms they are not breaking the law."

MSU regulations prohibit the storage of any firearm in residence halls and require all students to register pistols. But University police confirmed that there is nothing illegal in carrying an uncased rifle on campus.

Augenstein said the federal law that prohibits crossing state lines to incite a riot must be re-examined to better define riot. "If you watch campus disruptions, you soon see the same people all over the country."

"We must increasingly oppose that small minority who subvert reason by force and supplant debate with guns so as to destroy the academic atmosphere which is so essential if the majority is to get the education they desire and deserve," he said.

He said he hoped to begin tackling the problem at the next meeting of the board on May 14.

PRESSURED BY UNIONISTS

Ireland's O'Neill resigns

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) -- Prime Minister Terence O'Neill resigned Monday under mounting pressure from his divided Unionist party and threw strife-torn Northern Ireland into another political crisis.

O'Neill blamed the failure of his six-year fight for reform and moderation on "wicked men" on both extremes of the ancient feud between Protestants and the Roman Catholic minority in Northern Ireland.

O'Neill's departure in the wake of renewed civil rights violence last week climaxed a long power struggle in the Protestant-based Unionist party. The party, allied with Britain's Conservatives, has ruled Northern Ireland for nearly 50 years.

In his resignation statement, O'Neill, 54, a former captain of the elite Irish Guards, said he was quitting to serve "the cause of reform," hoping that the next prime minister would not be hampered "by personal animosities." He pledged to support any new leader fully committed to Catholic-Protestant equality.

Apparent favorite to succeed O'Neill was Brian Faulkner, former deputy prime minister. Faulkner resigned from the O'Neill government last year in a dispute over tactics, but he favors granting electoral reforms sought by the Catholics.

The other leading contender for prime minister was Maj.

James Chichester-Clark, who has come out in opposition to reforms. Chichester-Clark, a kinsman of O'Neill, quit as agriculture minister last week.

The succession is to be decided by secret ballot of the Unionist party's 36 members of the provincial House of Commons, a process that should be complete by Friday. Until then,

O'Neill remains caretaker prime minister.

There were cries of triumph from extreme Protestants whose slogan has been, "O'Neill must go." They accuse him of selling out to the Catholic-based civil rights campaign and giving in to its street demonstrations which several times have erupted into bloody rioting.

Feliciano solos with heart

By MARK McPHERSON
State News Reviewer

"Felix, felix," Latin, that is, for happiness, or that which induces a pleasurable state of mind. "Feliciano," a person, Latin again, but by any other name, would mean the same.

Sunday night we got by the Impossible Mission force and watched this chap "Feliciano-Very Special" (NBC) was a program which, as the title would imply, was no ordinary bit of TV fare.

Jose Feliciano, the star of his first special, comes over in solo form as even more than what he seems—one of the most talented performer-writer-folk rock artists today.

It takes a certain something to make us groove to a guitar today, what with the forests of cord and cordless models by which we have grown used to growing deaf. It takes a voice and some talent to boot to make the difference. The voice must have a mood to it, a temperament, the sort of thing which has been bottled by a number of artists and labeled "soul." Whatever it is, Jose Feliciano has it, and uses this talent well.

Blind from birth, the Puerto Rican Feliciano, product of a Spanish Harlem background, grew up to the music of people like Wes Montgomery, Luis Bonfá, Otis Redding and Sam Cooke. Such traces linger yet in his own unique style, and have come to boost the 24-year old artist from Greenwich Village coffeehouse audiences, to TV spots, to record contracts, and even to the debatable height of singing the Star-Spangled Banner to a jam-packed stadium crowd in Detroit last autumn for the Fifth World Series Game.

The latter incident, or incident as it became, concerned Jose's own "musical departure" in interpreting the national anthem as a "soul song." The uproar still echoes, and the cries of the DAR and Minutemen are yet to be heard below the din of the multitudes who enjoyed Feliciano's idea.

Perhaps as "defiler" of national tradition, Jose Feliciano made some anti-establishment folks tune in Sunday. As for the rest, it could have been accident, or the inability to carry out the impossible mission of certain other shows at this hour. Or, they could easily have been Feliciano fans, or Dionne Warwick followers, or those of Msrs. Glen Campbell, Andy Williams or composer Burt Bacharach. These people too appeared on "Feliciano-Very Special." A guest roster like this could even have assured a good rating for George Romney; however, the massive support was not really necessary.

Dionne Warwick conjured her usual brand of magic, appearing for the first time with Bacharach, with now-classic versions of "This Girl's In Love With You," "San Jose," and "What the World Needs Now."

Andy Williams and Glen Campbell were on hand to give Jose an assist if he needed it. Seeing them together makes one wonder how long until Senor Feliciano himself will be doing his own thing on regular air time. Not long, judging from the effect of his funky rendition of "High-Heel Sneakers," the standard "Light My Fire," or the classical "Malaguena."

Feliciano is professional in his work, and it shows. There is a certain type of stage presence here, the type generated by Ray Charles or Stevie Wonder, yet also distinct. He is an entertainer as well, and proved it by mimicking Dylan, Tiny Tim, and Satchmo Armstrong with great success.

He sang it straight with Andy Williams and blended smoothly with Glen Campbell in a Country-Western duet of the now-ancient, "Muleskinner Blues." Versatile, pleasant, what more do we want from a man? Feliciano, given the chance, could well make the change into television that swings, from the kind that died in the tube. "Viva la revolucion!"

Soul singer's special

Jose Feliciano staged his first TV special with success Sunday evening as he performed his many hits, with guitar accompaniment. The blind singer put soul into his compositions and showed the viewing audience why he is one of today's most popular recording artists.

SEX-CRIME FILM

Actors flatten 'Big Bounce'

By JIM YOUSLING
State News Staff Writer

Making a thriller somewhat resembles the feat of William Tell: Missing the target by an inch or two is more frustrating than blowing it altogether.

"The Big Bounce" has many qualities going for it—a good supporting cast, technical excellence and a frequently unusual script. The fatal couple of inches however, are provided by two inept performers, Ryan O'Neal and Leigh Taylor-Young.

The plot remains a matter of taste (or tastelessness), being the exploitation and glorification of two beautiful kids who get sexually turned on by crime. The film makes no attempt to say something about violence or to relate it to audience experience, as "Bonnie and Clyde" did. Instead, we remain voyeurs throughout, forced either to admire this amoral stance or to reject it altogether.

It takes a little longer to tire of the naked and semi-naked bodies of the principal players. But the coy posing and peekaboo camerawork (which presumably prevented an "X" rating) ultimately distracted from the plot, which could not afford much competition.

Since I never saw "Peyton Place"—and that is a mere fact, not a boast—I do not know how well these two lovebirds usually function. On the big screen, however, their talents look skin-deep.

Miss Taylor-Young proved in "I Love You Alice B. Toklas" that within her acting limitations she can be most appealing, and during most of "The Big Bounce" she is exactly that. Unfortunately, some scenes, particularly the climactic room-smashing, require more than she can give, resulting in the same embarrassment that Marilyn Monroe's early serious roles ("Don't Bother to Knock") often evoke.

The Big Bounce
Directed by Alex March; produced by William Dozier; written by Robert Dozier from the novel by Elmore Leonard; photographed by Howard R. Schwartz; music by Michael Curby; distributed by Warner Brothers-Seven Arts; in Panavision and Technicolor.

CAST:
Jack Ryan . . . . . Ryan O'Neal
Nancy Barker . . . . . Leigh Taylor-Young
Sam Mirakian . . . . . Van Heflin
The Woman in No. 12 . . . . . Lee Grant
Ray Ritchie . . . . . James Daly
Bob Rogers . . . . . Robert Webber

O'Neal, on the other hand, is an embarrassment from start to finish, comparing rather unfavorably with early Troy Donahue. He wears his wardrobe well, removes it occasionally and registers all emotion via fist-fights.

Put them together and you get "Barbie and Ken Go Batty." A pity, because these plastic lovers are surrounded by skill, most obviously in the form of an excellent performance by Van Heflin, who, as a colorful-old-coot type, steals scene after scene.

The most totally satisfying part of the film, however, lies in its production values. Alex March's direction smoothly captures the atmosphere of the California coast without resorting to gimmickry, and the sets and lighting are so meticulously detailed that their perfection could easily go unnoticed, which is as it should be. Why on earth anyone should want to infiltrate this production with the worst musical score in film history, I might add, totally escapes me.

In closing, I can only wish March and his cohorts the best of luck on their next production, hope that Miss Taylor-Young picks her next vehicle more carefully, and bemoan the failure of a potentially exciting film.

Booklet tells students off-campus living tips

A new booklet published by Off-Campus Council might not solve all the problems of off-campus living, but it could come pretty close.

Dedicated "to whom it may concern," the booklet proposes to "offer the off-campus student the added opportunity to become more aware and knowledgeable about the nature of the off-campus living situation in the hope that he will live more comfortably within it."

The booklet supplies "a simplified guide for moving off-campus" and includes advice for making and breaking leases, breach of contract and eviction procedure.

No more will students wonder "who has to fix it," for this 69-page booklet outlines housing regulations and responsibilities of owner and operators.

The publication also offers a guide to economical shopping.

MAAS HURLER IN HOME CONTEST

Batsmen out to tame Broncos

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

MSU faces one of its toughest tests of the 1969 baseball season today when the meet Mid-American Conference power Western Michigan at 3:30 p.m. at Kobs Field.

The Broncos will enter the game with a 17-6 record and a No. 15 rating in the latest collegiate baseball ratings. Western is ranked ahead of Big Ten power Minnesota, the favorite in this season's conference title race.

Coach Danny Litwhiler's Spartans won three of their five games against WMU last season. One of the losses, however, ended MSU's 15-game winning streak—the longest in Spartan history.

KIRK MAAS

Maas is unbeaten in two decisions this season and owns an ERA of 2.36—third best on the Spartan staff.

Western's powerful hitting attack is led by a trio of hard-swinging outfielders.

Dal Mackie is second on the team in batting average with a .353 mark. John Schlykebir is batting .272 with a team-leading 24 RBI's, while Dave Shumake holds a .329 average and is tied for the team lead with two home runs.

Third baseman Tom Nicklaus is the squad's top hitter at .370.

For MSU now 16-6, the game will be its last before it begins the Big Ten season in earnest at Indiana and Ohio State this weekend.

Litwhiler named sophomore Kirk Maas as his starter for today's encounter, but plans to use at least one other pitcher in the contest.

Water-logged netters travel to WMU today

By DENNIS COGSWELL
State News Sports Writer

The Spartan tennis team which has battled the weather the last two weeks will hope for more familiar competition today against Western Michigan in Kalamazoo.

MSU will be slightly weakened as Tom Gray, the Spartan's No. 1 singles man, is still recovering from a bout with the flu.

Gray was too sick to play in Thursday's 7-2 victory over Wayne State, but Coach Stan Droba expects him to be able to go against the Broncos.

"We're going to let him hit a few and see how he does," Droba said. "He'll still probably be pretty weak though."

The Spartans have won their last two matches and would like to get some momentum going for their next five meetings—all against Big Ten teams.

With one third of the conference schedule behind them, Michigan holds a commanding lead. The Wolverines have won 35 of 36 matches thus far.

Indiana is a distant second with 18 points, followed by Illinois, Minnesota, and MSU. Wisconsin, Northwestern, Purdue, Iowa and Ohio State bring up the rear.

Aircraft replaces defense armada

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon Administration is scaling down the U.S. show of naval strength off Korea and will rely mainly on South Korea-based aircraft to defend intelligence flights in the area.

This became apparent Monday when the Pentagon announced breakup of the 29-ship armada that was rushed to the Sea of Japan after North Korea shot down an unarmed EC121 aircraft April 15.

Pentagon spokesman Daniel Z. Henkin said 21 ships of Task Force 71 are either already in port or headed for ports in Japan and the Philippines, with only eight others remaining near Korea.

Pentagon sources said later U.S. air units in South Korea have been strengthened with the addition of an Air Force F4 Phantom squadron which was diverted from an assignment in Vietnam.

Two other F4 squadrons also are due to go to South Korea in the next few weeks to relieve F100 squadrons manned by National Guard personnel who were activated after last year's Pueblo crisis.

The Phantom is the standard U.S. jet used for aircover or escort missions.

Before the U.S. intelligence-gathering ship Pueblo was seized by the North Koreans in January 1968, the United States had only attack aircraft in South Korea.

Air strength there now stands at about 150 planes, including several squadrons of F4s and earlier generation F100s, nuclear capable F105s and F106 interceptors.

The cutback in the American naval force near Korea was signalled Sunday.

BSA teach-in

"There have been overt and rather blatant actions on this campus against BSA," Wilson said. "The BSA is a place we thought it would have to be stopped."

Riddle said that the blacks "didn't want any physical confrontation" but if "the administration doesn't do its job to corral and throw out racist people like these then we're going to help make them."

Riddle called for a hand count of the white students support of the black actions. Approximately half of those present raised their hand in support of the sit-in.

The BSA statement further adds that "the black students at MSU consider the harassment of black employees a direct insult. Undoubtedly this University is only trying to buy black students off. The University gives us $1.5 million which shows their commitment. However, this does not tell black students anything as long as blacks are still being de-humanized."

Haircut

Dittrich said Wehrwein would not compete in any more meets for the Spartans until he complied with the order to get his hair cut.

The Spartan Coach added he felt that Wehrwein had not been working hard enough in practices lately, but his refusal to get his hair cut was the principal reason for leaving him behind on the Drake trip.

"This is a team sport and everyone has to work along certain lines," Dittrich said.

Wehrwein did not appear at the Spartans' regularly scheduled practice session Monday and was not available for comment.

Wehrwein was one of the nation's top performers in the 600-yard run during the past indoor season.

He won the 600-yard title at this season's Big Ten indoor meet.

Two weeks later, he became the second Spartan in history to win an NCAA indoor track crown when he took the 600-yard title with a time of 1:09.8.

Wehrwein also took the 600-yard event at both the Highlander Games and the U.S. Track and Field Federation indoor meet.

The Roseville junior twice broke the American and world indoor marks for the 600, with a 1:08.6 time.

Stadium basement serves as antique storage house

By SUE REBECK
State News Staff Writer

The historical past comes into clever focus with the collection of artifacts and relics that has been housed under the MSU stadium since 1957.

In a space twice the length of the football field, the Museum storage area holds objects of value and interest to antique-lovers.

Two years ago, Val R. Berryman, curator of historical artifacts for the Museum, decided to organize and resurrect the antiques in the storage area.

Berryman said that he tries to build each collection complete enough to be able to choose objects that will fit the period of the desired exhibits. With these collections on hand, the Museum can plan displays knowing that the items are available.

"The storage area is not open to visitors," Berryman said, "but anyone doing historical research in a particular area is welcome to come and use the collections."

Berryman said that each category was arranged to "show the development of a particular invention from its most early stages to the most recent developments that people can remember."

A collection of furniture dates from a Spanish-American bench of the 16th century, to the roll-end couch of the late 1800s, to the over-stuffed chairs of the 1930s. Quite often the furniture, as well as various pictures and paintings, are used in MSU theatrical productions.

The storage area houses many household inventions, beginning with spinning wheel, butter churns, and looms, and continuing with sewing machines from 1860 to 1900 and World War I vacuum cleaners. A washing machine collection ranges from primitive plunger and washtub to the 1918 mechanical Maytag.

Most of the clock collection will be taken from the storage area and arranged with jewelers' equipment in a Museum display of an 1890 clock and watch repair shop. Berryman said that arranging articles in authentic settings gives the observer a better picture of history. "It kind of brings the era alive to the viewer," he added.

Transportation pieces include carriages, sleighs and an 1880 horse-drawn hearse. A license plate collection contains the first, pre-World War I plates which were made by the individual out of leather with metal numbers.

According to Berryman, the most unusual display is the sporting equipment collection. "Few museums today have bothered with such collections," Berryman said. There are rods, reels, and fishing tackle as well as hunting decoys and athletic equipment.

One humorous article in the pharmaceutical collection is an old pain-killer that contains 35 per cent alcohol, 1.2 grain opium, and chloroform. Although many are on display in the Museum, there is a good collection of children's toys in the storage area. There are tin pull toys, lead soldiers, sleds, tricycles, and some mechanical banks dating from the 1890s and valued at $50 to $200.

The storage area boasts 150 feet of costume and clothing articles arranged chronologically from 1820 to the middle of the 20th century. American and foreign outfits, including wedding gowns, military uniforms, and accessories fill the collection.

Berryman said the most of the objects were donated to MSU for preservation for future generations. The Museum is responsible for the articles, but leaky expansion joints in the stadium create preservation problems.

Berryman has approached the University, unsuccessfully, with appeals for repair work for the Museum storage area.

"There is a quarter-million dollars worth of antiques here that are in grave danger of water damage if the leaks are not repaired," Berryman said.

Draft-eligible students prompted to hunt jobs

Senior men are encouraged to use the MSU Placement Bureau even though they face the draft after graduation in June. Edwin B. Fitzpatrick, asst. director of the Placement Bureau, recently advised.

"Most employers will interview any and all qualified candidates who come to the Placement Bureau," Fitzpatrick said.

Membership in ROTC or other reserve components will not affect job interviews, he said.

"If a person gets drafted after becoming employed," Fitzpatrick said, "his employer is required by law to rehire him after discharge from the service."

A newly established service at the bureau is the Credential Referral System set up to aid alumni in finding employers. This system bypasses recruiter interviews and sends the graduate directly to the employer, Fitzpatrick said.

This method has helped a great number of alumni seeking employment after discharge from the service, he said.

Salaries and job opportunities should continue to rise for this June's graduates, John D. Shingleton, director of the bureau, indicated. He said the greatest demand is for accountants and technical majors.

An extra effort by many firms to recruit black graduates is apparent this year, the director added.

"Blacks don't really believe that opportunities exist for them in industry," Shingleton said, "and they traditionally go into education or government."

He pointed out that firms which send black recruiters are finding that the effort aids in signing well-qualified personnel.
