Doves flock to rally

Rally attracts crowd of 300; speakers trace origins of war

By CYNTHIA NEAL

A pre-moratorium rally near Beaumont Tower Tuesday attracted a crowd of about 300 to hear about the history of Vietnam and the experiences and observations of an MSU faculty member who did research there from 1960-62.

Chuck Stockwell, secretary of the steering committee for the Greater Lansing Coalition to End the War Now, opened the rally.

"The kind of support we have here from the students and faculty is very encouraging," Stockwell said. He added that over 5,000 students and 300 faculty members had signed petitions requesting cessation of daily business in observation of the war.

John Donoghue, associate professor of anthropology, and Lawrence Battistini, professor of social science, delivered lengthy talks on the background of the war and U.S. involvement.

Harry Chancey, ASMSU member-at-large, and Sam Riddle, representing the Black Liberation Front (BLF), joined them in voicing opinions of their organizations on the war.

The crowd was attentive and responsive to Donoghue's discussion of his experiences as a member of an MSU research team in Vietnam from 1960-62. The team was there at the request of the Vietnamese government, and financed by the Agency for International Development (AID).

Donoghue said that the team recognized the symptoms of a war in 1960 and 1961, but when the researchers tried to convince the Vietnamese government that a big war was brewing, it would not listen.

Beaumont rally

A rally to support Acting President Adams for MSU president will be held at 3 p.m. today round the rock near Beaumont Tower.

Speakers will include John P. Henderson, professor of economics; Don Stevens, chairman of the MSU Board of Trustees; a black faculty member; and Tom Samet, ASMSU chairman.

He noted that when U.S. airplanes, piloted by U.S. military men, scraped Vietnamese villages, the government said that it was not happening.

Donoghue explained that in 1964 the government finally admitted there was a conflict, but said that it was the people from the north invading the south. This was the National Liberation Front (NLF), he said.

'U' nominees differ on interviews

Edmond Pelligrino, one of the three nominees for the MSU presidency, has refused to be interviewed by the State News.

"Any statement made now would only muddy the water," Pelligrino, vice president for health services at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, said.

Pelligrino was one of the three candidates interviewed by the MSU Board of Trustees in New York during August.

The State News requested interviews with Pelligrino and the other nominees in an attempt to present their views on varied topics to the University, Jim Crate, State News editor-in-chief, said.

The two other nominees, Clifton R. Wharton, economist and vice president for agricultural development at Counseling Inc., a branch of The Rockefeller Foundation; and Stephen Kemp Bailey, professor political science at Syracuse University, have agreed to the interviews. "I'm disappointed by Pelligrino's decision," Crate said. "I feel these interviews to be in the best interests of everyone concerned."

Pelligrino, at first receptive to the offer, declined the interview Tuesday.

"Since no one has asked me to take the job, I think it very inappropriate for me to make any public statements at this time," he said.

Pelligrino said he preferred to adhere to the recommendations of the Search and Selection Committee and the MSU Board of Trustees on public statements.

According to Crate, however, Bailey's agreement to the interview was made only after he said he would check with Dale Hathaway, chairman of the Search and Selection Committee.

When confronted by Crate with the other candidates' acceptances Pelligrino said, "I can't speak for them."

'Association'

Tickets go on sale today for the performance by "The Association" at 8 p.m. Oct. 18 in Jenison Fieldhouse. Tickets are $2.50, $3 and $3.50 and may be purchased at the Union, Campbell's Suburban Shop or Marshall Music Co.

The performance is being presented by ASMSU.

Donoghue maintained that the initial conflict was a civil war, but that the NLF was fighting for self-determination for all the Vietnamese people. He pointed out that while the United States was "infiltrating" South Vietnam, the south was receiving aid from the north.

Donoghue has been speaking out against the war since he returned from Vietnam some six years ago.

"It's been say-six years since American students have become involved in protest of the war," he said. "Six years it has taken for some people in the United States to realize that this is a fruitless war, a diabolical war. I think that the student movement has been a force behind the anti-war sentiment in this country today."

He said that this movement "has forced Lyndon Johnson out of the presidency and will force Nixon to pull our men out of Vietnam." The gathering cheered at this assertion.

Battistini then traced the history of Vietnam from the turn of the century through now. He emphasized that former Secretary of State John Foster Dulles refused to accept the Geneva agreement on Vietnam, which recognized it as a single nation, not to be the object of outside aggression.

Battistini also accused the U.S. government of perpetrating "monstrous canards" regarding its involvement in Vietnam.

He noted, for example, that the State Dept. has no record of alleged Vietnamese requests for U.S. intervention.

Another was the "falling domino" theory, which maintained that if South Vietnam fell to the communists, then country after country would fall.

RESOLUTION PASSED

Campus moratorium gets Council's nod

By DOLLY MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

The Academic Council approved a resolution that would enable faculty and students of MSU to honor a nationwide moratorium for discussion of the war in Vietnam Oct. 15.

The resolution reads: "Whereas, the continuance of the United States involvement in the war in Vietnam is a matter of grave concern to the University community, and whereas, Wednesday, Oct. 15, has been marked as a special day for discussion of the war, therefore, be it resolved:

"It is the sense of the Academic Council that the holding of classes and attendance at classes be regarded as optional on Wednesday, Oct. 15, 1969.

"That prior announcement of any such class cancellation by the instructor be made, together with arrangements for alternative meeting times, and that the University be requested to make available facilities for discussion and debate.

"The intention of this resolution is to insure that no student or faculty member should be penalized for absenting himself from scheduled classroom activity on Oct. 15, 1969."

Controversy raged over the wording of the resolution and tied up the council for nearly two hours. Discussion on the Massey report on Student Participation in Academic Government was postponed until next week.

The council eventually divided into two groups that Lee Deal, associate professor of audiology and speech sciences labeled as "a battle between the goodies and the baddies," the implication being that if you supported the moratorium you were a "goodie," otherwise you were labeled a "baddie."

C. C. Killingsworth, professor of labor and industrial relations, urged the passage of the resolution as purely "faculty sentiment", not that of the administration or the board of trustees.

Walter Johnson, professor of administration and higher education, said he saw "nothing wrong in the institution deciding that it wants to take a day off to discuss an issue."

The resolution on the proposed moratorium was passed by the ASMSU on Sept. 30.

Thomas H. Greer, professor of humanities, said that he thought it was appropriate for the Academic Council, as representatives of the faculty at MSU, to issue the resolution and take a stand.

An extensive debate took place over the provisions in the resolution, eventually striking out parts of the original resolution that deemed the moratorium as part of a protest to end the war.

Hathaway: Adams' status remains stable

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

Dale E. Hathaway, chairman of the All-University Search and Selection Committee (AUSSC), denied Tuesday a State Journal report that a business deal involving Acting President Adams and Bobby Baker would jeopardize Adams' chances of being added to the list of candidates for the permanent presidency.

A story in the State Journal Monday quoted a "highly placed campus source" as being confident that AUSSC would not recommend Adams for the presidency and that the trustees would not name Adams without a favorable recommendation from the committee.

The source said AUSSC is now divided, 6-5, against recommending Adams.

"I cannot verify a thing about it (the story)," Hathaway said.

"I think it's fascinating that the source could predict the committee's vote," he said. "I can't even predict who's going to be at meetings, let alone how they are going to vote."

"Someone has a clear crystal ball," Hathaway said. "As nearly as I can tell, almost everybody outside our committee knows more about it than we do. I have no idea what our committee will do."

Hathaway said he had received no letters or documents about Adams' business deal with Baker, and he didn't know if other committee members had.

He said he had not heard of the Adams/Baker transaction until he read about it in the newspaper Monday.

The transaction involved Adams' 1959 purchase of stock in the Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Co. (MGIC) of Milwaukee and subsequent sale of that stock six months later for double his money.

Adams purchased the MGIC stock on a tip from Baker, then secretary to the

Sergeant refuses to testify at Army conspiracy hearing

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sgt. Maj. William O. Wooldridge, once the Army's top enlisted man, said Tuesday he will invoke the Fifth Amendment at Senate hearings—but does not consider himself guilty of anything.

Speaking under the supervision of his attorney in a Senate corridor, Wooldridge, told reporters he has been sickened by the accusations heaped on him. He said his name has been unfairly blackened and his 28-year Army career ruined.

The attorney, David L. Thomas of Huntsville, Ala., said that on his advice Wooldridge will invoke the constitutional protection against self-incrimination when he is called to testify Thursday.

Thomas said the Senate panel investigating an alleged multi-million dollar conspiracy by Wooldridge and a clique of sergeants has already prejudged Wooldridge.

"I'm convinced a military court-martial would give a fair trial," Thomas said. "But with all this political pressure it may be difficult."

Wooldridge expressed amazement at the wide range of allegations by military investigators and others that include protection by influential generals including the Army chief of staff, the concealing of vital records and the control of assignment of military personnel to strategic club positions on three continents.

How, he asked, could a man with only a tenth grade education do all of those things?

Wooldridge denied he has enriched himself and said his wife has difficulty paying bills at the end of the month.

He said he is worried about what effect the notoriety will have on himself, his wife and his four children—two in college, and two at home in Junction City, Kan.

"I could never serve effectively in another command, because this thing would always follow me," Wooldridge said.

He did not indicate if he is considering resigning.

These are Wooldridge's responses to some of the allegations against him:

Allegation: He is a part owner of the Meredem Corp., which allegedly sold millions of dollars of supplies to clubs controlled by members of the clique.

Answer: He bought Meredem stock last year after clearing it with the Judge Advocate General who assured him there was no conflict of interest, and so far he has received $3,500 in dividends.

Allegation: That he attended so-called summit meetings of sergeants at Ft. Benning, Ga., and Lake George, N.Y., to set up a scheme to invest illicit proceeds from service clubs.

Answer: Wooldridge said he has been to Ft. Benning only twice, both times in his official capacity of sergeant major of the Army. He said he has never been to Lake George.

Allegation: That he and other sergeants controlled the club system at the 24th Infantry Division in Germany during a period when $350,000 annually was skimmed from slot machine receipts.

Answer: His only connection with the NCO club was that he saw copies of the minutes of a monthly board meeting in his capacity as division sergeant major. He said he visited one of the clubs about twice a week, but said he was never involved in thefts.

U. S. officials pleased with 'Intercept' results

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are pleased with results of Operation Intercept and say the anti-drug campaign along the Mexican border will continue indefinitely.

The U.S. commitment to the program is expected to produce at least some unpleasantness when officials from the two nations renew talks here Wednesday on the subject.

While both countries are in agreement that some form of drug control is necessary, they disagree as to how best to go about it.

Since the program started Sept. 21, U.S. officials report marijuana supplies from Mexico have virtually disappeared from every major American city they have checked.

"We're thrilled with the results," said one U.S. source close to the program. "We plan to continue the program indefinitely."

U.S. officials say that 53 arrests have been made and that marijuana seizures ranging from two ounces to 1,000 pounds have been registered. They conclude that the operation has been so successful that pot users in the United States have had to resort to the less-potent grass grown in the American Midwest.

Before Operation Intercept, 80 per cent of the marijuana and 20 per cent of the heroin consumed in the United States were produced in Mexico, according to government figures.

U.S. officials say all but two of the arrests have been made during checks at 31 entry points along the 2,000-mile-long border. The others were smugglers who operated by plane and boat.

Mexican anger centers chiefly on the U.S. policy of inspecting each individual who crosses the border, and, if he has one, his vehicle.

The Mexicans say the American tactics are heavy-handed, damaging to their national image, harmful to the friendly relations the two countries have long enjoyed, undignified, time consuming and devastating to the border economy.

Student pressure felt in academe

By DOLLY MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

Eldon R. Nonnamaker, associate dean of students, told members of the Faculty Club Tuesday that the Massey Report is only the beginning of a massive trend of student participation in academic government.

The report advocates that students have a direct voice in the formation and adoption of academic policies throughout the University and provides for committee participation for over 50 graduate and undergraduate students on such University committees.

Nonnamaker said he sees an increased pressure on the part of students for more participation in academic affairs.

He said students are looking for "some voice in curriculum changes and in deciding curriculum relevance."

"There is an increasing student pressure in faculty evaluation, faculty selection, promotion, tenure and participation in faculty government at all levels," he said.

"Students are asking for a more meaningful participation in all functions of the University."

Nonnamaker said that if students are invited to participate on academic committees, and their participation is made "meaningful," that students enjoy participation.

"But if the students see it as a move to mollify student pressure, student participation in these committees drops off rapidly."

Nonnamaker urged better communication between students, faculty and administration and advocated a gallop poll-like assessment of student opinions.

He felt this would provide a "sound assessment of student sentiment on issues usually considered by this kind of a resource."

"If it is kept as confidential, and an anonymous sort of thing, I don't think there would be trouble getting students to take part.

"Unless things change radically and drastically, the students will have a more significant voice in the entire arena of faculty government and faculty affairs."

Nonnamaker said that the Academic Freedom Report grew out of an incident concerning a graduate and his non-academic student rights.

"Since then, the Academic Freedom Report has been a landmark for all American colleges and universities in designating and outlining certain rights of students," he said.

He said that the Massey Report "picks up where the Academic Freedom Report left off in guaranteeing student rights."

REGRETS CONFISCATION PLEDGE

Turner collects, sells guns

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Army's former top policeman testified Tuesday he regretted signing a statement affirming he would not use personally some confiscated guns he later sold.

But Maj. Gen. Carl C. Turner, Army provost marshal until he retired last year, said Chicago police officials knew when they gave him the guns that they were for his own collection.

Turner said Chicago Police Supt. James Conlisk offered the guns to him while Turner was serving as the Army's representative at the Chicago riots in April 1968.

"But those guns were not military guns, they were not used by the military and they gave them to me," Turner said, emphasizing the "me."

But Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., chairman of the Senate subcommittee probing the gun sales and alleged misuse of enlisted club revenues overseas, noted the receipts from the Chicago police contained the disclaimer: "... all of said property will be retained by the U.S. Army..."

"I questioned this," Turner said he told Conlisk. "I said these are not for the Army. He said: 'Well, this is the only way we have to clear our records.'"

"But how would you feel about ... signing a statement that is so patently false?" Ribicoff asked.

"Sir, this is hindsight. And I recognize I should not have," Turner said. "But, when that man tells me it is okay, I have great faith in that man because he is a fine chief of police."

Chicago Police Lt. Paul T. Duellman, who said he led Turner to the discard bins to select the guns, said he never heard Turner say the guns were for his own use.

EDUCATION PACKAGE

Milliken's reform attacked

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken is expected to present his educational reform package to the legislature Thursday, but has received plenty of criticism on the proposals already.

Several of the legislators, who returned to session Monday following a two-month recess, have begun reworking and denouncing some of the governor's announced plans.

House Speaker William Ryan, D-Detroit, and Senate Minority Leader Sander Levin, D-Berkley, Tuesday sent Milliken a letter expressing concern that the educational structure may become "overcentralized."

Besides replacing the State Board of Education with a single appointed head, a plan that already has caused wide repercussions, Milliken would reduce the number of school districts and replace the intermediate district system with 10 to 15 regional districts.

The two Democrats said they do not reject elimination of the state board as a means of "pinpointing authority," but adequate quality education would suffer if the board were no longer to function.

They also came out in favor of a graduated income tax, a move the Milliken has announced he will not accept.

Ryan and Levin said the flat rate tax allowed by the constitution "places an unfair proportion of the tax burden upon low and middle income families."

But they added that "Democrats will work in a spirit of nonpartisanship and cooperation on vital questions of education."

Rep. Jack Faxon, D-Detroit, announced Tuesday that he requested the Legislative Service Bureau to prepare a constitutional amendment that would return the function of education to an elected superintendent of public instruction, restoring a provision of the 1908 constitution.

It would also eliminate the State Board of Education.

Rep. Martin Butth, R-Comstock Park, said he would urge the governor to include a plan for state financial support to ward local school construction costs in the educational reform program.

The reform package is limited to supporting operational costs of the local districts.

Metallurgy prof wins ASM teaching award

Howard L. Womochel, professor of metallurgical engineering at MSU, will receive the Albert Easton White Distinguished Teacher Award of the American Society for Metals (ASM).

The White Award is presented annually to recognize unusually long and devoted service in the teaching of metallurgy.

Womochel will receive the award Oct. 15 at the Annual ASM Awards and Distinguished Service Luncheon in Philadelphia.

Womochel is a recipient of a Distinguished Teaching Award from MSU, and is an active member of ASM.

Housewife complains about high prices

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The housewife leader of a burgeoning meat boycott tangled with a House subcommittee Tuesday just how to go about pinning the blame for the price rise.

Mrs. Ross De Lorenzo of Levittown, N.Y., said "the housewife is angry, confused and helpless."

She accused Chairman John S. Monagan, D-Conn., of refusing to let "experts" testify and said the subcommittee hearing list was heavy with cattle organization representatives and congressmen from cattle-raising states.

Monagan said the committee's staff administrator, Louis I. Freed, angrily denied any group had complained to him about getting a chance to be heard.

Mrs. De Lorenzo said she is convinced the farmer is not getting the extra money, but wants to know who is.

She said the meat boycott she started on Long Island succeeded in bringing prices down 20 to 30 cents a pound in some local stores without a corresponding decrease in wholesale prices.

After seven months of bargaining, the United States and the Soviet Union announced Tuesday in Geneva, Switzerland, they had agreed on a draft treaty banning nuclear weapons from the ocean floor. They called on other members of the 25-nation Geneva disarmament talks to approve the document quickly.

The compromise proposal would outlaw all weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear mines and any installations designed for storing, testing or possible use of such weapons from the ocean floor and its subsoil more than 12 miles off any coast in the world.

Red China announced Tuesday an agreement to talk with the Russians at a deputy foreign minister level on their border dispute. At the same time, Peking warned Moscow against "war maniacs" who might "dare to raid" strategic Chinese sites.

The announcement appeared to reflect Peking worry about recent reports that the Russians are weighing pros and cons of a pre-emptive strike against China's growing nuclear power. The Chinese have just touched off their 10th nuclear test.

An American youth testified Tuesday in Jerusalem that Australian mystic Michael Denis Rohan boasted of having spent $1,000 to bribe Moslem guards at the sacred Al Aksah Mosque he is accused of burning.

Testifying for the prosecution, Arthur Jones, 25, Burbank, Calif., told an Israeli court that Rohan admitted he had set the fire that enraged the Moslem world against Israel.

By military order, Gen. Emilio Garrastazu Medici was proclaimed Tuesday as president of Brazil.

The cavalry officer had been favored to succeed Arthur da Costa e Silva ever since the army, navy and air force ministers set themselves up as a caretaker junta Aug. 31. That action came after Costa e Silva suffered a stroke.

The appointment established a precedent by which the armed forces constituted themselves as a sort of electoral college to install one of their peers without so much as a glance at civilian politicians. The last election of a chief executive by direct popular vote was in 1960.

New Jersey's Public Utilities Commission Tuesday placed most of the blame with the Penn Central Railroad for the death of two persons watching Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's funeral train, it was reported from Trenton.

"We find," the commission said, "that the gathering of spectators in such large numbers on railroad property, because of their desire to pay respect to Sen. Kennedy, should have been reasonably foreseen with the need for special safety precautions."

The report came after a long investigation into the accident at Elizabeth, N.J., where two persons were killed when they were struck by a second train as they watched the Kennedy train.

Apparently the automakers are beginning to hear the yelps about high costs of service and repairs.

Two manufacturers are now including do-it-yourself instructions in their owner's manuals.

They are Ford, which limits its instructions to its new compact Maverick, and American Motors, while emphasizing items which can be serviced on its new Hornet, says its instructions can be applied to the full AMC line of cars.

President Nixon, unhappy with the pace at which Congress is moving on his legislative program, plans to prod it with a special message Monday listing the status of 40 proposals he has made.

"When you add up what has been requested and what has been done," said house Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford, R., Mich., "there is no doubt this had been a foot-dragging Congress."

Ford reported Nixon's displeasure with Congress after Tuesday's White House meeting between the President and his House and Senate leaders.

BLF fact-finders fail to clear case

By ROSANNE BAIME
and
JEANNE SADDLER

Disagreement on the facts surrounding the alleged assault of a black student at Eastern High School lingers after the Black Liberation Front's (BLF) fact-finding team met with Eastern's principal Tuesday.

Don Johnson, the principal, has been accused of restraining and assaulting Roy Williams last week when he returned to the school after being suspended. According to the BLF, the principal admitted restraining Williams on the floor, but said that Williams had not been beaten. Johnson was not available for comment.

Williams' story, according to Ernie Boone, editor of the Westside News, is that he was outside the school, shouting that he was "going to get" another student for beating up his cousin.

He was then physically taken outside the school, with the principal twisting his arm behind his back, and into the principal's office. Williams then claims that he was restrained on the floor and kneed in the groin and in the head.

John Marrs, Lansing public schools' information officer, said Tuesday that witnesses at Eastern High School said no beating took place.

"The student, Roy Williams, had been suspended early Thursday and returned to the school later that day," Marrs said.

According to Marrs, Williams created a disturbance outside the school which later moved inside. Williams confronted the principal and was arrested for use of abusive language by a plainclothes policeman who was on the premises.

Teachers present during the incident said that Johnson did not beat Williams.

Although Lansing school officials claim Williams was not beaten, Sparrow Hospital records indicate that Williams was admitted Oct. 3 for lacerations. He was released Oct. 5.

It is still unknown whether or not Williams' family will press charges of assault against Johnson due to the possibility of a counter-charge of extortion against the boy. Williams has admitted taking 25c from another student several days before the incident with the principal.

Marrs said that if Williams pressed charges against Johnson he would put himself in "an awkward position." Although he did not refer to any extortion charge, Marrs said that the school would only like to do what "was in the boy's best interests."

Marrs said the school board has looked into the situation but has not taken any action as yet. "It has been the school board's policy to follow established procedures in a structured manner," he said. If any complaint is filed in behalf of Williams, it will be followed through with "proper judicial procedures."

Kelley asked for opinion on impromptu meeting

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

Leroy Augenstein, member of the State Board of Education, Tuesday requested an opinion from Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley concerning executive sessions of the board.

Such a meeting has been called for today to discuss naming a successor to Ira Polley, who resigned Monday as state superintendent of public instruction.

Augenstein requested the information within "the next 24 hours" and a spokesman for Kelley said the attorney general would give it immediate attention.

Augenstein, MSU biophysics professor, said in a letter to Kelley: "As you undoubtedly know, a recent executive meeting of the State Board of Education has had far-reaching repercussions, including the resignation of the superintendent of public instruction. Some members of the board apparently now want to have another executive session to accept Dr. Polley's resignation and to select his successor."

"I would appreciate knowing under what conditions an executive session of an elected group is legal."

James F. O'Neil, treasurer, tried to oust Polley, but the eight-member board was deadlocked 4-4 on the issue.

E. Lansing streets blocked Oct. 15

By BECKY O'GRADY
State News Staff Writer

The East Lansing City Council approved the blocking of two main East Lansing streets for an hour on Oct. 15 to allow those participating in the Moratorium on Business as Usual to march to the state Capitol.

The streets affected by this action are Grand River Avenue from Abbott Road to Michigan Avenue, and Michigan Avenue to the city limits. They will be blocked to traffic from 1:45 to 2:45 p.m. John Davis, B422 Armstrong Hall, appeared before the council to request this action from the city.

Councilman Wilbur B. Brookover, in other action, said he is suspicious of collusion among three salt companies who submitted identical bids to the City Council for salt to be used this winter. He called for the incident to be referred to Frank J. Kelley, attorney general of Michigan.

Earlier, a representative from Morton Salt Co., had appeared before the council to request that his company's bid be accepted. He said that his company had originally submitted the bid and that the others revised theirs downward.

The council also agreed to pay $38,000 an acre for three two-and-a-half acre parcels of land to expand Henry Fine Park.

In other action, the council decided to purchase seven voting machines for the city from the Automatic Voting Machine Co. They also voted to give $1,200 to the Safety Council of Greater Lansing.

The appointment of 10 members of the 13-member Recreation Advisory Committee was also approved.

Underscoring our effort for the Adams we know

"We must recognize that we cannot go home again to the yesteryear of the quiet campus life, and maybe we shouldn't want to. Campus is not a place to go to escape reality of life."

"Rather than look upon these young people as a problem for America, I look upon them as the strength of America."

"I have this faith, that given enough time, if people can explore the implications of their thoughts and actions, ultimately reason and rationality will prevail."

"Find the ways, the means and the resolve to effect the essential changes-within the established channels."

Dr. Walter Adams: Utrecht High School, New York City; B.A. degree, magna cum laude from Brooklyn College, 1942; M.A. and Ph.D. degrees, Yale University; Bronze Star Medal for heroic conduct, World War II; economics instructor, Yale University; professor of economics, Michigan State University since 1947. Member, American Economic Assn.; Phi Beta Kappa; author of numerous economics books.

But that isn't the Dr. Adams we know. The Dr. Adams we have admired for the past six months is the cigar-smoking, white-haired, (which seems to be getting a little thinner since his stint as acting president) scholarly gentleman with the wit and cool to maintain his confidence through any crisis.

In a small way, Adams has replaced a little of our faith in "the established channels," and assured us that, in the end, "ultimately reason and rationality will prevail."

For six months, we have watched Adams in action; and what we have seen has been impressive, not only to students, but to nearly everyone who has had the opportunity to witness the control and competence with which Adams directs the president's office.

Now here we are, Oct. 8, 1969, students at a University deeply embedded in political maneuvers, counter-maneuvers, muckraking and all else that goes along with the game called politics.

The committee established by the trustees to recommend prospective candidates has already done its job once, but because four trustees were more concerned with their political futures than the future of the university, the board was deadlocked and forced to ask the Search and Selection Committee for more names. Perhaps this time a name will appear on the list that will be beneficial to the Democrats politically -- or at least some trustees are hoping.

So that is where we are today -- or nearly. Add to all this 912 faculty signatures and over 15,000 student signatures supporting the man who already sits in the president's seat. Fifteen thousand student signatures out of a student population of 40,000. In last year's mayoral race in the City of Lansing, 12,485 votes elected the mayor out of the entire voting population of the city (over 100,000).

Our signatures are directed at the Search and Selection Committee to let them know that faculty and student sentiment is most definitely behind Dr. Walter Adams. It would most certainly seem that we have shown that.

But the race we run is too crucial, too immediately important to allow us, as students and faculty, to applaud ourselves and pat the backs of everyone who worked so hard to achieve this goal. Today is Adams' day, and the easy part is over. It took only about two and one half seconds to sign your name on a petition, provided the kid that handed it to you did so with the petition right side up.

It will take a little more effort to pull your physical entity over to Beaumont rock around 3 p.m. today and lend your being to the rally in support of the cigar-smoking gentleman who has so ably filled the shoes of president.

Underscore your two-and-a-half second effort with a trip to Beaumont.

OUR READER'S MIND

Police have long way to go

To The Editor:

Daily we hear the outcry of police brutality in the streets. No one seems to think of the police brutality in the classrooms.

I recently participated in an orientation for residence assistants. During one phase of the program, the MSU Police Dept. was called upon to make a presentation on the use and administering of drugs. In this presentation, a strip film was used to show the different types of drugs and their application.

The very first slide of the film was a scene showing an area of black populism with the local bar, drunks leaning on the corner light pole, and inviting prostitutes standing on their doorsteps awaiting their next trick.

In this slide, the presiding officer set the mood of the presentation very carefully. He hesitated on this slide so all could absorb it in depth. Then he said to these students, who were about to embark upon their duties as R.A.'s (or, rather, the overseers/advisors of the dormitory houses), "This is the dream of an addict," implying that areas where there are a concentration of blacks are the centers and basis of the drug problem, so beware of those houses in which there is a concentration of blacks.

I fail to understand the basis of this statement when, during the remainder of the presentation, it was stated that the police contact with drugusers deals with students on the college campus where more than 99 per cent of the population is white.

I am sure that addicts tell the police that whenever they are on a trip, they go to the black ghettos. Being that, the whole is the sum of its parts shows that this incident is a part of the grand scale of propaganda to brainwash white youths into thinking that blacks are the nucleus of the degradation of our society.

I consider this truly police brutality against blacks on a metaphysical scale. This also shows that the MSU pigs have a long England swings?

To The Editor:

A "Lesson from England" is a perfect example of Britain's smug superiority complex about America. The fine examples of English good nature are similar to those I experienced, but decent human beings exist everywhere -- even in the uncultured colonies.

My objection is to your glib generalities of American life compared to specific incidents in England. This is their style of argument. Violence is not romanticized, but lewd tales of sex and crime are a major part of every newspaper. Some of the best reporting in the Times wouldn't get past the editor's desk of a respectable American daily.

Social laws, to England's credit, are more liberal; but their archaic social system eliminates opportunities we can take for granted. A student's chance for higher education is predicted at age seven by streaming, and cemented at eleven by the eleven-plus exam. If a kid is a late developer, he's in the wrong country.

England isn't forced to live in the past, she's enamored with it. Despite acute housing shortages and incredibly crowded living conditions, the country is a museum-attic of memorials which nearly outnumber the living English.

All the good things you say about friendliness, fashion and the arts are true. England is a beautiful, fascinating nation, but she is as far from Utopia as we are. In desire for change further.

Perhaps the mother country could take a few lessons in revolution from us.

Hart's proposal sound

To The Editor:

We are appalled by the attack which Leroy Augenstein has launched on Sen. Philip Hart's very reasonable proposal that a study be made by appropriate government agencies to determine whether marijuana is a truly dangerous drug.

To quote from "Science", a professional journal which publishes articles in Augenstein's field and with which he should be familiar (Vol. 162, Pg. 1234, Dec. 1968). "It is feasible and safe to study the effects of marijuana on human volunteers who smoke it in the laboratory."

This is the first of 10 conclusions reached by a research team at the Boston University School of Medicine.

It is surprising, indeed, to find a scientist suggesting that we bury our heads in the sands of emotionalism and avoid seeking objective information. Sen. Hart sounds like a statesman who is trying to solve a difficult problem. Professor Augenstein sounds like a politician eager for headlines.

For the past two years (since I came to MSU), my roommates have been complaining that I start to grind my teeth together from side to side in my sleep. I thought they were putting me on until they made a tape recording of it one night and played it back for me.

This has me worried. Why would anyone grind their teeth in their sleep? Is this going to wear my teeth out? The tape also revealed that I talk in my sleep, but I don't remember what I talk about. Is any of this serious? And is there anything I can do about it?

The problems you and your roommates are facing have a number of possible causes and solutions. The onomatopoeic technical name for teeth grinding is bruxism. It occurs both during waking and sleeping. Most of the time, it is a sign of tension or anxiety. This does not mean that it is a serious symptom, and is found in a great number of people. Perhaps you have been under more pressure since coming to MSU. On the other hand, roommates, running around with tape recorders at 5 a.m. are enough to make a nervous wreck of anyone.

Consultation with a dentist leads to several suggestions. It is possible that you have developed a condition called occlusal interference, which means your teeth aren't meeting like they should. This can cause bruxism and can be determined by a skilled dentist by means of taking impressions of your bite.

If your bite is normal, my dentist friend suggested that a plastic gadget could be fitted over your teeth when you go to sleep. It would not disturb you unless you started to grind your teeth. This usually abolishes the condition painlessly. The condition should be corrected, as loose teeth can result.

In his unsophisticated days, this dentist was plagued with a roommate afflicted as you are. The fellow slept in an upper bunk and was cured of his bruxomania when the dentist booted him in the rear everytime he'd be awakened.

The sleep talking falls into the same category of minor indications of leading a hectic life. If there are other indicators of anxiety that cause you concern, talking them over with a professional person might help.

What is the least expensive way for a graduate student's wife to obtain good obstetrical care in the East Lansing area? How much would it cost? How about care for the baby once it is born?

The best way of providing inexpensive good obstetrical care is by having effective medical insurance. A rough estimate of hospitalization for a normal delivery in this area runs around $400 to $500. This does not count the obstetrician's fee, which varies and is usually in excess of $250. The obstetrical clinics in this city are set up, by and large, to care for people of extremely limited financial means who are usually receiving some form of local or state financial assistance. Many obstetricians are quite happy to lower their fee and make the hospitalization as inexpensive as possible for student families.

Do not hesitate to inform a doctor when you are of limited financial means.

Babies are relatively inexpensive to care for after they're born. The new parents are seduced into buying innumerable extra items and all sorts of expensive things by the bombardment of sales people and

A hidden identity won't smear Adams

Somewhere on this campus breathes a gutless wonder who does not like Walter Adams.

I don't know who he is. He rides through news media on a mount of secrecy and innuendo. He is masked, unknown. Journalists know him as the "High Campus Source" (HCS).

He claims fame through the recent "revelation" of stale information that Adams bought some stock from Bobby Baker in 1959.

Constructing his character is difficult on the sketchy information available. But as a public service, I make the attempt.

Like hula hoops and white socks, HCS is 10 years behind the times. In his blatant attempt to smear Adams, he burrows deep into the past to find facts, which he then distorts and misinterprets to his own advantage.

The little-written evidence of HCS indicates that he has a tiny mind. His rationale is a bit warped. It says: Walter

The rationale (of High Campus Source) is a bit warped. It says: Walter Adams bought stock from Bobby Baker in 1959; Baker got into trouble in 1964--therefore, Adams probably won't be MSU president in 1969. It's frightening to know that HCS is alive, well and running loose on campus. Someday he may have to make a responsible decision.

Adams bought stock from Bobby Baker in 1959; Baker got into trouble in 1964--therefore, Adams probably won't be MSU president in 1969.

It's frightening to know that HCS is alive, well and running loose on campus. Someday he may have to make a responsible decision. And evidence of his logic indicates he is prone to run away on occasion.

HCS is a coward. He lurks behind the honor of a reporter in keeping sources secret on request. He travels outside the academic community to leak information he hopes will damage Adams. He does not debate the issue before his peers.

If HCS prefers a candidate other than Adams, that is his decision. He doesn't have to agree with over 900 faculty members and 15,000 students.

However, his knife-in-the-back maneuvers are in a stratum beneath vote-buying. Instead of promoting his choice for president, he attempts to shoot down Adams, the only "non-candidate" that can produce tangible evidence of significant student-faculty support.

Despite his under-handedness, HCS may have provided Adams boosters with a valuable service: they now know that those who prefer another candidate are scraping the bottom of the oil' tactics barrel. HCS thinks that one bungled attempt to smear Adams will offset his campus support. He is wrong.

Too bad, HCS. If the "leak" wasn't such an obvious sham, it might have worked. If you really have the "goods" on Adams or a good word for another candidate, I'll be in my office till 6 p.m. today.

I doubt if you show.

Is it possible for a girl to get an infection when she has been fingered by a guy? If so, what would the symptoms be? Also, what is the treatment necessary to clear up the infection.

In the woman, the urethra (the tube leading from the urinary bladder to the extra corporeal world) is very short. Some women are particularly prone to urinary tract infections from such manipulations as you describe, or from very vigorous sexual intercourse. The symptoms of a urinary tract infection are: painful or burning urination, occurring frequently, often with general symptoms of illness and fever. The treatment calls for antibiotics administered by a physician according to the nature of the infection.

Prevention requires an understanding of the anatomy of the area and a change in sexual technique. The urethra does not contain pleasure producing sensory nerve endings, and should not be one of those areas manipulated during sexual play. Your doctor should be able to advise you, or you might refer to a book I have recommended before: "A Doctor Speaks on Sexual Expression in Marriage," by Donald W. Hastings, M.D., Bantam Books, 1967.

Fuzzy five invade ASMSU

By WHIT SIBLEY
State News Staff Writer

Things grow in the summertime. Crops do. Kids do. And this summer, some ASMSU hair did.

Board Chairman Tom Samet; vice chairman Chuck Mostov; senior member-at-large Harry Chancey; sophomore member-at-large Mike Shore; and general member-at-large Trevor Hall all grew varying amounts of facial fuzz over the hot months and arrived here in September to give ASMSU a new look... or at least a different one.

Reason for the new growth varied from hair to hair.

Samet said he grew his mustache to "prove to his public that he had reached puberty."

Mostov took a very philosophical outlook and said he grew his "because it was there to be grown."

Chancey said he did not purposely grow a beard, but simply stopped shaving.

Shore, being, at least, honest, said that he grew his beard "to hide my face." He said that he has a "rolly-polly face" that looks better with half of it covered with hair.

Hall said he did it because he did not want to shave any more.

The fuzzy five then commented on the far-reaching effects of their new hair.

"I don't know if it's done anything for me other than to convince me that I've reached puberty," Samet confessed.

"I have to admit that this mustache has made it difficult for me to blow my nose and eat ice cream cones," Mostov complained.

"This thing has had a great deal to do with my socialistic attitude toward humanistic anarchy," Chancey mumbled.

"But I refuse to comment further on that tricky subject."

"I lost a job because of this thing. Also, I dated a girl who was allergic to it and her face broke out in hives," Shore mused.

Hall said that he is not sure if his growth has had any far-reaching effects yet, so he chose to withhold comment.

Samet reported that the only adverse reaction to his upper lip came from the MSU Athletic Dept.

"But they are all bald, so we know it's merely envy," he said.

Mostov grumbled that he did not really want to talk about beards at all.

"I want to become a professional baseball player," he said, bouncing a pine cone off his office wall. "Actually, I would like to be a pro quarterback, but I don't have a big enough pine cone."

Shore said he was happy because he was saving so much money on razor blades, shaving cream, band aides and styptic pencils.

"And if you let your mustache hang down far enough, you don't have to worry about brushing your teeth," he quipped.

Chancey said that he was actually checking a State News report of last year that said the average man scraped 27 feet of beard off his face in a lifetime.

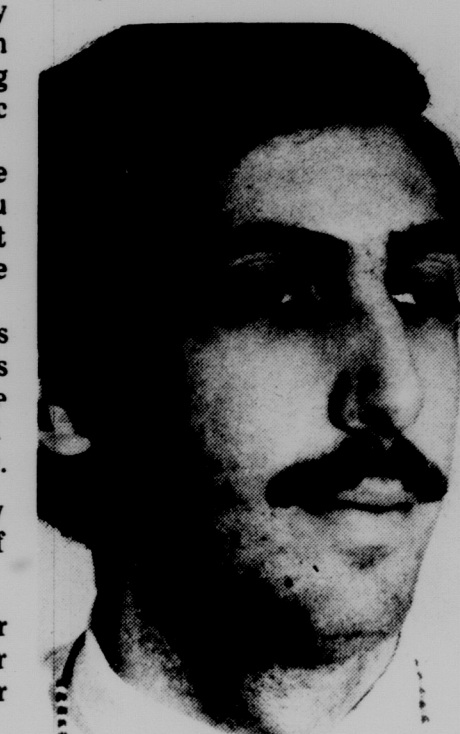

"I'm working on it," Chancey said. "I already have a couple of inches."

None of the five said that their growths had changed or represented any change in their political outlooks.

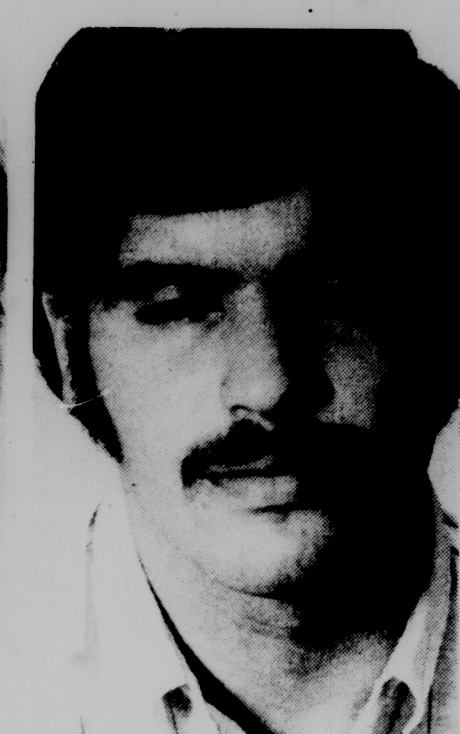

Samet said, in a moment of profound levity, that his mustache had made his

"perception of things a little funny."

With that peak in the world of poor puns, the interviews ended.

Motels' policy for students based on business interests

By MARION NOWAK
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing motels: do they indiscriminately admit just anyone? Or do they carefully screen out anyone who looks like a student?

Neither of these, according to several managers of area motels, is the case.

Each motel has a general policy regarding clientele; those policies vary in content, but not in intent.

The intent in each case is most emphatically to protect the business by preventing disturbances and fraud.

"It's a touchy subject," Dick Hoffman, manager of University Inn, said. "Motels intimate sex, and sex is illegal."

"We may be the only ones to declare that our policy is not to judge," Hoffman continued. "But we're also the only ones with a sheriff to see our rights are not abused."

"We do appreciate student revenue," Rick Hentschel, asst. manager at University Inn, added.

University Inn, which advertises itself as "the motel with a college education," has, in the past, employed a sheriff ("Not a rent-a-cop," Hoffman said.) to prevent disturbances "and see that people are here for the purpose they have said they were."

"We haven't run into any problems with students until quite recently," Hentschel reported. "The specific problem is of a single occupancies where the guy will get a single room and bring his girl in half an hour later."

Hentschel said the motel is not doing anything right now about this, although "we may take action soon."

"This (fraudulent occupancy) is illegal and, of course, is cheating us out of revenue," he said.

"Party-wise," however, University Inn management is quite happy with the student trade. Incident of theft, vandalism and rowdiness, Hentschel said, is very low.

In contrast to University Inn's lack of any specific guidelines, the Albert Pick Motor Hotel has a very definite policy, based largely on age.

No one under 18-years-old is admitted, and proof of age is required, according to Dieter Mueller, asst. manager of the Albert Pick.

"We have to be really careful here," Mueller said, "especially in a college town. Sometimes, especially on weekends, we have problems with students."

These problems generally seem to involve rowdiness. Motel policy, Mueller said, is to try to get nonpaying guests of paying customers to leave either after 10 p.m. or when they become rowdy.

The Inn America Motel, like University Inn, claims it has "no particular policy" in regard to students or those of student age. Its "no particular policy," however, is determined by two management rules.

"We reserve two rights," Olds Anderson, manager, said. "We require identification and we do not sell rooms under certain conditions."

Anderson did not define these conditions, saying only that they were, "the same as any hotel or motel."

"Students do fill our party rooms on weekends," he said. "We've never had any serious run-ins."

Pastor cites church's relevance

By JIM KETCHUM
State News Staff Writer

"The church isn't relevant in today's society."

"All churches are dull places."

"I can't make a binding commitment like that."

"What's in it for me, anyway?"

These are a few of the statements today's college students are making. They ask questions in what is seen by many of them as a cold, mechanized, impersonal world that preaches both individualism and conformity at the same time.

They see the "Establishment" saying don't rock the boat; just play along with the system and everything will be all right.

And, in the middle of all this stands the Christian church, which is seen by many as one more extension of the worn-out system of values. They see the businessman, for example, attending services on Sunday and proceeding to stab the customer and his competition in the back the next day.

They see, in short, the church as a perpetrator of the status quo that lets members absolve themselves of their consciences and proceeds to do nothing about the problems of today's society.

The church, they charge, is not relevant.

The Rev. George W. Gaiser, pastor of University Lutheran Church, sees it another way. He explains that, even in the time of Christ, the question of church relevancy was raised.

"Christ was relevant to his time, but the society was essentially antagonized and thusly turned off by Him," he says.

"The church works because God works through it and God is relevant; therefore, the church is relevant. This may sound like a circular argument until it is remembered that the church is the means by which God works on earth."

Citing the problem of drug addiction as an illustration of that point, the Rev. Gaiser maintains that users are trying to approximate someone they're not.

"Because God forgives and accepts us, there isn't any need to escape anywhere. We can be ourselves," he says, "and if that isn't relevancy, I don't know what is."

The Rev. Gaiser explained that Jesus got involved with the world in his time gets involved today and offers life now.

"Life is life only when lived in relationship to God through Christ," he said. "This, I believe, is the whole message, not just in His time but in ours as well."

In response to those who cite the turmoil in the world today as evidence of God's non-existence, the Rev. Gaiser pointed out that the blame can't be put on God.

"You see, God created this world and then turned the whole business over to man, who then proceeded to make things as they are. The first few chapters of Genesis tell us this."

"At a recent conference I attended, a man got up and asked us if we were trying to say that man is responsible to all the evil in the world and that God was responsible for all the good."

"We answered 'yes,'" he said.

In discussing the image of the church, the Rev. Gaiser said he believed that it is an improper one caused primarily by those who view it. He sees Christianity not as a somber, long-faced ordeal, but rather as a joyous experience.

He says that those who say they cannot make a binding commitment to God should realize that God made a binding commitment to man through Christ and that the commitment can be fulfilled anytime a person wants it.

"Youth is looking for community and yet wants to maintain a certain isolation from the society," he says. "True community comes through communion with God and mankind."

The Rev. Gaiser said he agrees with David Dickson, chairman of the Dept. of Language and Literature at Northern Michigan University, who says that this isolation, embodied specifically

United Community Chest launches 1970 campaign

The 1970 United Community Chest campaign will begin Oct. 15 with a program of live entertainment in the Lansing Civic Center. The goal for this year's campaign, which will continue through Nov. 13, is $2.05 million.

"Success of this 1970 Community Chest appeal," said General Campaign chairman, Walter F. Patenge, "is vitally important to every resident and every employer in Ingham, Clinton and Eaton counties, where the services of the Community Chest are offered."

The chief function of the 50-year-old cooperative organization of citizens and community service agencies is to help sustain services of 57 health, welfare and youth-oriented agencies. Funds are distributed according to a systematic procedure established by a citizen volunteer committee.

Last year more than 122,000 persons were served by Community Chest Agencies. Help is available to anyone in need of it in the three participating counties.

In commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the Lansing Community Chest, the theme of the 90-minute program this year will be "A Golden Evening." Free tickets to the event, which starts at 8 p.m., Oct. 15, may be obtained by calling 484-7766.

Bullough patching defense for OSU clash

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

Henry Bullough, MSU's defensive coordinator, is putting in some long hours at the office this week.

He has the unenviable task of trying to design a defense capable of stopping what many football observers call the finest offensive machine in the history of college football.

W. Woodrow Hayes built the machine, and its trade name is Ohio State. In two games, the awesome Buckeyes have scored 107 points and are averaging over 500 yards in total offense. Some teams don't do that much damage in a season.

"They are a great offensive football team," Bullough said. "Our biggest problem will be stopping their quarterback, Rex Kern. He's the best ball-handler in football. It's just plain hard to find the football when he has it."

"We are going to need a great performance ball-handling wise from our scouting team quarterback this week to get ready for Kern."

"Ohio State just doesn't make any mistakes. There is no one back you can key on. Jim Otis, Larry Zelina, Hondo Hayden, John Brockington..."

Bullough will have his work cut out for him this week after the MSU defense was thoroughly mauled by Notre Dame -- a team that had the pre-game reputation of "good defense, no offense."

"Notre Dame just came after us and beat us soundly," he said. "We were out-hustled. You could say that their offensive people just out-coached our defensive people. We obviously didn't have a good game plan."

Defensively, several Spartans are hobbling the practice field in sweat-soaked suits. End Wilt Martin and tackle Ron Curl and Ron Joseph have ankle injuries, but should be ready to go by Saturday.

"There are always more injuries when you lose," Bullough said. "I think the defense's pride is injured more than anything else."

"We look upon this game with Ohio State as a personal challenge. We're going to try to win back the prestige we lost last week at Notre Dame."

Bullough, who has the reputation of being a tough disciplinarian who hates to lose, said he will be working the defense extra hard this week.

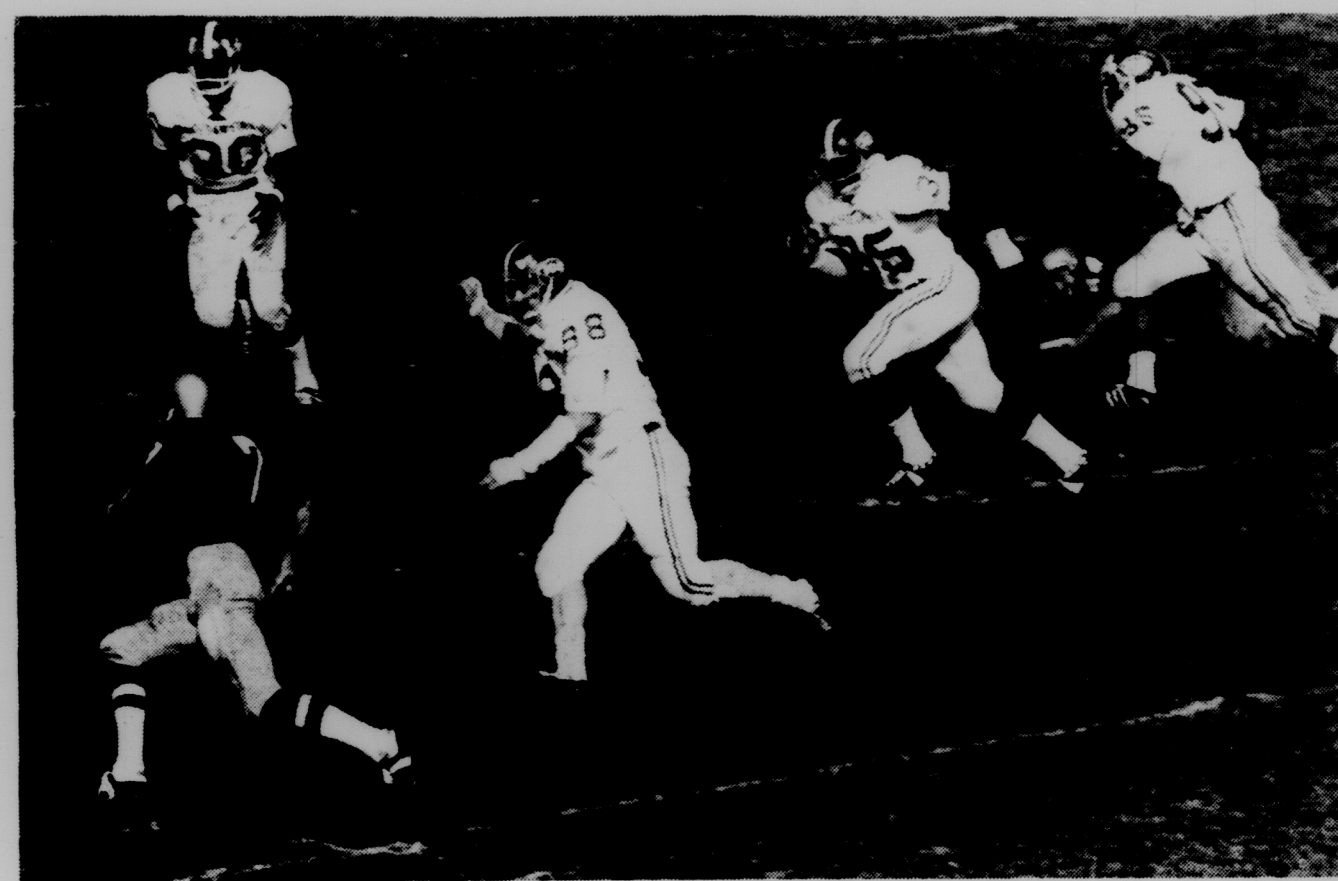

"Sure, we are going to work them harder. You always work harder when you lose. I just hope we learned something last week, otherwise what's the good of losing," he said.

No one is more aware of Ohio State's devastating offense than Bullough, but he feels it's fortunate the Spartans are playing a team of the Buckeye's caliber.

"I think it's better for us to be playing a team like Ohio State this week after losing," he said. "It's better than playing any easy game. We can't afford to relax."

"We'll be ready to play. We'd better be. I think the MSU fans will be in for a lot better show this Saturday."

Trouble for the Spartans

MSU's defense, which had its hand full against Notre Dame's scrambling quarterback Joe Theismann, will be in for more of the same against Ohio State's Rex Kern Saturday. Here, Rich Saul (88), Brad McLee (35), Don Law (95) and Clifton Hardy (30) chase Theismann (7).

Spartan booters ready for bout with Ball State

By PAM BOYCE
State News Sports Writer

Will Saturday's 1-1 tie affect the morale of the Spartan soccer team and their performance against Ball State this afternoon?

Not at all, says Head Coach Gene Kenney. In commenting on his Spartan booters near miss against Air Force in Colorado this weekend, Kenney was extremely enthusiastic about his players' morale.

"I'm very proud of them," the coach commented. "They are really ready to go now. Even under extreme situations in Colorado, the players kept their mouths shut and pulled together as a team."

The extreme conditions Kenney refers to include 20 m.p.h. winds, four inches of snow that fell prior to the game and kept on coming and 32 degree weather. For the first time this season, the booters met a team which gave their defense a run for their money, and Kenney is especially proud of junior goalie Les Lucas' performance.

"It was the only game he's really been tested in, and he came through real well," Kenney said. The lone goal which Air Force scored fell into the Spartans' net after Lucas was knocked out of the air by an Air Force player. Referees failed to call the foul, however.

Arno Wittig, Ball State's new head soccer coach, will definitely have his hands full today when his Cardinals, 1-1 this season, meet the Spartans in Muncie, Ind.

Wittig has records of last year's 12-0 loss to MSU to show him the type of competition the Spartans present. That whitewash of the Cardinals was only one of eight losses Ball State suffered last season, while winning one game and tying another.

The Cardinals edged out DePauw University in their season opener, 4-3.

OSU QB ONE OF BEST

Kern's magic a test for 'S'

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

Depending on which of his fans you are listening to, he's known as King Rex, King Kern and Ramblin' Rex.

More than just Ohio State football observers will insist that "best college quarterback in the country" is his correct title.

But whatever they call him, all football fans will have to agree that Rex Kern is the No. 1 quarterback on Ohio State's No. 1-ranked football team, and, more than anyone else, he supplies the fuel for the Buckeyes' powerful offensive machine.

MSU Coach Duffy Daugherty, whose Spartans meet Ohio State in Columbus Saturday, is quite lavish in his praise of this talented junior.

"Kern does more things better than any quarterback we've ever faced," Daugherty said recently. Indeed, Kern's all-around abilities would seem to constitute the ideal collegiate quarterback.

He's a very effective leader, runs as well as any quarterback in the nation, passes with precision from in the pocket or on the run and executes very well.

But Kern's most flamboyant and, perhaps unmatched, talent is the remarkable deception in his ball-handling.

Whether he's faking a handoff to one ball carrier and giving to another, pulling the ball out of a runner's stomach and keeping it himself or faking a fake when handing off to the intended ball-carrier, Kern exhibits an assortment of tricks as elaborate and mystifying as Houdini's.

Kern's deceptive antics will leave spectators puzzled, opponents discouraged and TV cameramen embarrassed as they inevitably and often end up following the wrong ballcarrier.

For those who judge quarterbacks solely upon their statistical achievements, Kern would qualify for anybody's All-American team.

Despite sitting on the bench for much of the final halves of the Buck's first two games, Kern has totaled 438 yards total offense.

As a runner, he's averaged almost eight yards per carry with 230 yards on 30 rushes. Passing-wise, Kern has completed 18 of 31 for 238 yards.

Last season, Kern missed parts of several games and missed one, entirely due to injuries, but still managed to gain 499 yards rushing and 871 yards passing, completing 57 per cent of his passing attempts.

If Kern has any flaw it would be his inability to stay healthy for any great length of time, but he can play even when hurting. Kern was fully healthy for only two of Ohio State's 10 games last year.

OSU still Number One; 16 teams in Top 20

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ohio State is still the best of a dwindling list of major college powerhouses.

The powerful Buckeyes, defending national champions, received 33 first place votes and 346 points from the 35-member United Press International Board of Coaches today to rank as the nation's no. 1 college football team for the third consecutive week.

Ohio State heads a listing of only 16 colleges receiving votes from the coaches.

Mighty Texas moved into the No. 2 position and Southern California jumped to third, with 264 and 228 points respectively. Penn State, ranked second last week, slipped to fourth, while Arkansas, the third ranked team a week ago, fell to fifth.

Missouri, fresh off an upset of Michigan, vaulted from ninth to sixth while Georgia maintained its No. 7 ranking. Oklahoma slipped to eighth, Purdue fell to ninth and UCLA held on to No. 10.

Tennessee was ranked 11th, followed by Florida, Louisiana State and Notre Dame, reappearing in the balloting after a week's absence.

Alabama captured the No. 15 ranking with Wyoming the No. 16 and final team listed as voting was bunched among a select group.

Ohio State boosted its record to 2-0 with a 41-4 romp past Washington while Texas blasted Navy 56-17 for its third victory without a defeat. Southern California, which captured the only two first place votes not awarded to Ohio State, advanced to a 3-0 mark by defeating Oregon State 31-7, while Penn State, now 3-0, edged Kansas State, 19th last week, 17-14.

Arkansas downed Texas Christian, 24-6, while Missouri upset Michigan, the No. 11 team last week, 40-17.

Head Start researchers aid children

By DENISE FORTNER
State News Staff Writer

Head Start is a start in the right direction.

What is Head Start?

Call it the last stanza of the Young Blood's song. . . "Come on people, smile on your brother, everybody get together and love one another. Right now."

Or call it a nationwide effort to give pre-school children from economically and culturally disadvantaged backgrounds (and their families) the education, medical care and social services they need.

MSU's Head Start Research and Development Center, one of five national research centers, is doing research on curriculum for Head Start, teaching programs, Robert Boger, director of the MSU Head Start Center, said.

Another major thrust of the program is the attention and classification training program which is a study of the way a child thinks and classifies objects.

Another basic area of study is parent training.

"There is a movement to involve parents more. It is the concept that parents are teachers too," Boger said.

The center is also focusing on the study of the socialization process.

Experimental groups of children from different social and economic backgrounds are set up to observe the interactions of the children. One aspect of study evolving from the observation of the patterns occurring in leadership roles.

"Out of the study of socialization we hope to build some content to enable Head Start teachers to aid interaction within their groups," Boger said.

NEW YORK (AP) -- An invisible tackle has taken on an entire college football team of husky young men and knocked them out of action for the rest of the season.

This tackle is a virus, so tiny that thousands could sit on the head of a pin. It causes infectious hepatitis, a disease that strikes the liver, causing jaundice, nausea, weakness and other symptoms.

Researchers have not yet been able to isolate or identify the virus, in order to produce a vaccine against it, as has been done with polio, measles, and other diseases.

FOOTBALL SEASON ENDED

Hepatitis strikes

Last weekend, the virus of infectious hepatitis was found to have sickened all 75 players of the Holy Cross College football team, plus seven coaches, four managers, and trainer and the director of sports information—a total of 88 persons. The school canceled its remaining football schedule.

An outbreak of such size is remarkable, says Dr. Saul Krugman, professor and chairman of the department of pediatrics at New York University Medical Center, who has long been active in hepatitis research.

"You rarely hear about this kind of incident in this country, with its sanitation standards," he said. Outbreaks that fell any large numbers of people usually are caused by contamination of water or food.

A water fountain on the football practice field may have been the source of the disease, Dr. Leonard Morse, head of the communicable disease department of St. Vincent Hospital in Worcester, Mass., said Tuesday. Blood tests Monday showed that all 88 persons had been infected with the virus.

The causative agent in infectious hepatitis is considered to be a virus, with an incubation period of some two weeks to 30 days, Dr. Krugman said. Like typhoid fever, it is thought to be spread from intestinal contaminations of food or water.

Another form of the disease, serum hepatitis, is also believed to be caused by a virus. Serum hepatitis has a much longer incubation period.

Complete rest is the main treatment for hepatitis. People usually recover in six to eight weeks, but relapses can occur if they become too active too soon. Severe infections or severe relapses can be fatal. Serum hepatitis can be more serious than the infectious type, particularly when it afflicts older persons.

The chance that other students could catch hepatitis from the football players is rather remote, Dr. Krugman says. Intimate contact is necessary for it to spread from person to person.

Recital series to present first of programs

The Arts and Letters Recital Series will open its season with a performance by John Wiles, baritone, and Joseph Evans, pianist, at 8:15 p.m. Oct. 12 in the Music Auditorium.

Wiles will present vocal compositions by German composers from early baroque through contemporary periods. He will be accompanied by Evans.

This season the series will present five programs: the Melos Ensemble—Nov. 14; violinist Walter Verdehr and pianist Ralph Votapek Nov. 14; the Netherlands Chamber Choir Feb. 8; and the New York String Sextet April 10.

Season tickets are available from the MSU Union ticket office or the Music Dept. office for $5.

Individual tickets will be available at the door at $3. Students with identification may purchase tickets for $1.

'Gay Deceivers'--a real drag

There is almost nothing good about the motion picture "The Gay Deceivers," playing at the Spartan Twin West Theatre. It isn't funny, it isn't entertaining and it is in blatantly poor taste.

Two young men seek to avoid military conscription by playing homosexual roles at the draft board. They insist on seeing the Army psychiatrist together, and when they are initially deemed fit for service, they hold each other's hands in joy at the thought of "all those men." They are ultimately rejected, but told that they will be further investigated.

One is engaged, the other is quite the swinger, and both are neighborhood. Their problems in keeping up the pretense constitute most of the plot, if one can call such an unbelievable story a plot.

In terms of production, it's a terrible film. The script puts some of the most wretched lines into the mouths of some of the most wretched actors ever seen. Photography is without merit, as is the incoherent construction and editing.

very, very heterosexual. In order to continue fooling the Army, they move into a cottage in an exclusively homosexual

Perhaps the film's greatest fault is its treatment of the homosexual. Every one is played swish to the ultimate, stereotyped all the way. Such roles never even begin to be humorous; instead, they are degrading and insulting to anyone with a grain of intelligence. After that wears off, however, it's just boring. Watching a cast fly across the screen for two hours is not very exciting.

You almost have to see this film to believe how bad it is. But you'll do better if you fight any urges to see "The Gay Deceivers." Stay home and read a good book instead.

Do you think a bright young engineer should spend his most imaginative years on the same assignment?

Neither do we.

That's why we have a two-year Rotation Program for graduating engineers who would prefer to explore several technical areas. And that's why many of our areas are organized by function—rather than by project.

At Hughes, you might work on spacecraft, communications satellites and/or tactical missiles during your first two years.

All you need is an EE, ME or Physics degree and talent.

If you qualify, we'll arrange for you to work on several different assignments...and you can help pick them.

You may select specialized jobs, or broad systems-type jobs. Or you can choose not to change assignments if you'd rather develop in-depth skills in one area.

Either way, we think you'll like the Hughes approach.

It means you'll become more versatile in a shorter time.

High-pressure sell still popular

Congratulations! You have just been selected as the second-prize winner in the great, all-new "Grab-Your-Money-and-Run" Contest, which allows you $195 off on a $900 iron lung.

This is a fictitious example of one of the many "come-ons" used by high-pressure salesmen and sales-through-the-mail companies across the nation. The prospective buyer should beware of a deal that looks too good to be true, it usually is.

"Most people are flattered by the idea that they have been chosen to get something for nothing," Carl Mertz, of the Greater Lansing Chamber of Commerce, said.

First in a series.

"They sign up for free vacations and other so-called 'give-aways' at fairs and home and boat shows, and all they get is their names on the mailing list of some company that changes its name every few months."

He said that some cookware salesmen are another concern of the Chamber of Commerce.

"They usually have good merchandise," he said, but they do not tell the buyer about all of the interest and special-handling charges that are tacked onto the price of the items."

Most of the people that get involved with these salesmen only look at the small monthly rates, he said. They do not realize the same products could be purchased at a lower price in a local store.

The actual interest and service charge start at 18 per cent for most of these door-to-door sales. Walter C. Jones, a recent MSU graduate from Grand Rapids was caught by a firm that is working the Lansing area. He answered an advertisement for a part-time helper for night work.

When the interviewer arrived at his home, Jones was persuaded to buy a 10-part fire alarm for his apartment. The purchase was required to get the job.

After the interviewer-salesman left his apartment, Jones realized he had just agreed to pay for the $300 fire alarm over a 36-month period at a total cost, including interest, of more than $400.

"I didn't think it could happen to me," Jones said. "I thought I had good sales resistance, but this guy was too smooth and I needed a job."

Other companies use endorsement letters to help present their products, Mertz said. If the buyer sees these letters, he should get suspicious right away.

"Often the addresses on the letters of these supposedly-satisfied customers are box numbers and cannot be traced to check their validity," he said.

Newlyweds and senior citizens are the prime targets of many of these businesses. These two groups are more easily reached because their names are carried in the local newspaper for such events as retirements, engagements and weddings.

Mertz said another of the

"come-ons" currently popular in the nation is the "free film" give-away. This is, in fact, free film, but the person who uses the film is required to have the film processed by the distributor. It usually costs the same as regular processing plus the film, and the handling time is longer.

One promotion advertised free famous-brand film. The purchaser who received the film was surprised to discover that that was just what he got, a roll of free "Famous Brand" film.

Georgetown to eye law students at MSU

Georgetown University, Washington, D.C., will interview prospective law students at MSU.

John White, asst. dean of the Georgetown Law Center, will be at the Placement Bureau at 1:30 Friday. Students wishing information on the school should make an appointment with the Placement Bureau before Friday.

Georgetown is strategically located and offers students opportunities for jobs in government.

Georgetown has not recruited on the MSU campus prior to this year due to the small number of graduates choosing Georgetown. Georgetown requires a high score on law boards before an applicant is considered.

The majority of MSU graduates have gone to Notre Dame Law School, according to Ethelbert Thomas, Asst. Dean in the College of Social Science.

ORIENTAL EXHIBIT

Museum salvages culture

Just as animals become extinct, cultures die off or become rare. The 17th Century Oriental culture has died for the most part, but the current MSU

Museum exhibit, "Treasures of the Orient," preserves some of the artistic heritage of Japan and China with items ranging from cricket cages to emperors' robes.

Shelves of colored teapots and symbolically embroidered appliques give the observer a feeling for the artistic side of the Oriental past. Emperors' robes and ladies' shoes depict dress of the time, while other objects help one visualize certain holiday celebrations.

Currently housing the Oriental exhibit, the main lobby showcase changes periodically, according to the availability of loaned exhibits.

Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. All exhibits are open to the public at no charge.

Newlyweds and senior citizens are the prime targets of many of these businesses.

These two groups are more easily reached because their names are carried in the local newspaper for such events as retirements, engagements and weddings.

PRESIDENT BECOMES MARTYR

Hanoi uses Ho's memory

SAIGON (AP) — A month after his death, the frail figure of Ho Chi Minh dominates North Vietnam as strongly as ever.

The ruling Communist party Politburo appears well on the way to creating a "personality cult" around Ho even stronger than the mystical aura fostered while he was alive.

The tightly controlled newspapers and radio have been jammed with exhortations in the name of the dead leader who founded North Vietnam's Communist party and dominated political thought for half a century.

The unceasing use of Ho's revered name by the Hanoi regime does not surprise the group of South Vietnamese and American Hanoi watchers in Saigon. The volubility of the campaign, however, is viewed by some as a clear indication that Ho's death bed plea for unity has slowed the internal party power struggle that many view as inevitable.

This, in turn, means there is little chance at present for any significant change in Hanoi's tough line on the war and the peace talks in Paris.

"It is business as usual up there," one expert said. "They are using Ho's death, probably with some success, to alleviate their domestic problems. We haven't seen any change in their over-all plans."

The most strident use of Ho's memory is in the "patriotic emulation program" announced by the ruling Politburo last Saturday over Hanoi radio. The campaign will run until the end of this year under the latest party slogan, "turn grief into revolutionary action."

Urging indoctrination and propaganda meetings at every social and governmental level, the Politburo said:

"It is a duty for all our party and people to closely unite around our party Central Committee, to resolutely carry out President Ho's will, to persist in and accelerate the anti-United States national salvation resistance to liberate the South, defend the North and proceed toward national reunification."

In all these exhortations, the Central Committee has been stressed while names of individual members are mentioned infrequently.

Of the two men most frequently mentioned to come to supreme power—party secretary Le Duan and theoretician Truong Chinh—the pro-Moscow Le Duan seems to get the most notice. However, experts see no significance in this at the moment. On the contrary, they feel the Politburo has closed ranks and that collective leadership will continue for quite some time.

This was an absolute necessity recognized by Ho in his much publicized last testament and accepted for the moment by the Politburo.

With little modesty, the Politburo noted last Saturday that "the party Central Executive Committee is composed of comrades who are united, clear-sighted, loyal and devoted to our people's revolutionary work."

Then they spelled out a long list of instructions for party cadres to achieve practical results as "the best way to remember and to show our profound gratitude to our beloved and venerated President Ho."

Experts in Saigon feel that the powerful campaign using Ho's name is dictated both out of genuine regard for him and by the known problems facing the regime.

One analyst noted that North Vietnam already was suffering from lagging morale and lowered industrial and agricultural production at the time of Ho's death Sept. 3. In addition, an epidemic of dengue fever has disrupted government services in Hanoi and floods and other troubles have threatened the rice crop in some areas.

These problems, plus the largely unknown psychological cost of continuing the war, have been a continuing thorn to the Hanoi regime.

Rockefeller's pledge brings needed rail improvement

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller said Tuesday it is all official now, the Long Island Rail Road (LIRR) is the nation's finest commuter line. But few commuters agreed with him fully.

Most commuters interviewed by newsmen conceded that things had indeed improved, but few were found who would describe the LIRR as the nation's finest.

"We're in a helluva lot better condition," a railroad spokesman said over the weekend, while admitting that still more months of catch-up work lie ahead.

As for the governor's promise, a source at LIRR headquarters said it might have been an overstatement, "but it certainly got everybody off their butts around here."

The LIRR and the Republican governor's pledge may well be issues if Rockefeller seeks a fourth term next year.

The answer to the railroad's limited comeback lies in some shiny new electric cars and in what is described as the LIRR's improved labor relations.

When Rockefeller made his promise, the LIRR was in the midst of its bleakest period, running trains without enough cars, canceling trains, jamming furious commuters into cars so tightly it was often impossible to push aboard, even into the vestibules.

The LIRR, the nation's busiest commuter line, says it provides more than a quarter of a million rides each week day. This breaks down into 90,000 commuters going to and from work for 180,000 rides and another 80,000 "casual riders" during the day.

On one dark day, the line had about 300 electric cars out of service. On the average, the railroad was running 160 cars and 16,000 seats short of what it needed to provide full service.

This forced the LIRR to cancel 20 to 25 trains a day. In recent days, there have been few cancellations, and on some days, none.

"We have eliminated that shortage," the LIRR said. There actually was a surplus of electric cars, 37, last Friday morning.

Labor troubles had cut deeply into the production of repaired and inspected cars and the new electric cars, when first introduced, proved a disaster as brakes jammed and other vital parts malfunctioned.

An agreement was worked out among all the parties, and work was undertaken to "de-bug" the new cars and speed work on older cars. The line is gradually trying to junk 400 cars built before 1930.

The key to this, according to Hank Boerner, head of LIRR public relations, is that the railroad was able to overcome internal "animosities" between management and the unions "Not by making deals, as some have said, but by treating the union people as human beings."

"In the recent past," Boerner said, "there was anything but harmony." He credited the change to a new president, Walter L. Schlager, who took over the $50,000-a-year job when his predecessor, Frank Aikman, retired July 28 under attack from all sides.

Boerner said the question of whether the LIRR is providing the finest service in the country is "academic from the point of view of the guy traveling from New York to Huntington."

"He can't judge the quality of the Chicago railroad," Boerner said, "he doesn't give a damn. All he wants is to get home comfortably and on time."

Officials eye state-owned Capital City Airport

By BETSY ROACH
State News Staff Writer

Local and state officials are optimistic about a proposal to put Michigan-owned Capital City Airport in the hands of a local board.

The board would consist of representatives from Clinton, Ingham and Eaton counties, and the City of Lansing. The state director of aeronautics would represent the State of Michigan.

Before the plan can be presented to the State Legislature, it must be approved by the Lansing City Council and the Boards of Supervisors of the three counties involved.

Lansing Councilman Roger

May said there has been no significant local opposition to the proposal. "There seems to be general agreement at this point," he said.

He said that a meeting last week at City Hall was the first time representatives of Lansing and the three counties had gotten together to plan for the local authority.

He added that if the authority were formed, problems facing it would include the need for additional facilities for the terminal building and the need for "satellite" airports, which would serve various area communities.

He said that a question to be considered would be whether to levy a one-mill tax for the airport on the taxpayers of the three counties, which would bring in $1.3 million from the tri-county area.

Sen. Garland Lane, D-Flint, member of a joint House-Senate committee which is conducting a study on the airport, said the airport has been running in the black for the past two years.

He said that aside from an airport at Houghton Lake, which is leased from the state, Capital City Airport is Michigan's only state-owned airport. It has been state-owned since its establishment in 1946.

"I think we have something," he said in reference to the proposal. "I don't think it is totally acceptable to me," he added. He said he would prefer that the airport were leased to the local government so that the arrangement could be dissolved if found unsatisfactory.

He stated one of his main concerns is the question of how beneficial the proposal will be for the state government and MSU.

Sen. Lane said the University and the state government should generate the greatest amount of air travel for the airport.

He said that expansion of the public area and the administration building would be among the first airport improvements if the authority were to be formed. He added that the authority would also be open to new members.

James D. Ramsey, director of the Michigan Aeronautics

Commission, said the authority would be responsible for any new airports. He said that area "satellite" airports would relieve air traffic and suggested that an airport serving the Okemos area would also benefit MSU.

Ramsey said that he had no figures on student use of the airport, but that "it would be a significant percentage. MSU would be one of the major users."

"We are now faced with very critical space problems at the terminal building," he said.

He said that the airport has "an excellent physical plant" which compares very well with other airports in the state "at the moment," but newer types of aircraft might go elsewhere if they could not be accommodated at Capital City Airport.

Ramsey said that the airfield is owned and operated by the state, but the terminal building, though state-owned, is operated by a board which includes Lansing authorities.

He said that this unique situation is "not a very good one", because two different bodies are governing the airport and the finances "are in two different pockets."

HEW head criticizes FDA for cyclamate controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary Robert H. Finch roundly criticized a unit of his own Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) Tuesday for its handling of safety questions about the widely-used artificial sweetener cyclamate.

"I am not at all satisfied with the present situation there," Finch said. "I think it's just inevitable that we're going to have some rather substantial reorganization of procedures and personnel in the Food and Drug Administration."

The secretary was particularly critical of what he termed varying FDA assessments of possible health hazards associated with cyclamate use.

He singled out a recent FDA experiment, widely reported on national television, demonstrating a 15 per cent incidence of birth defects after cyclamate injection into chicken eggs.

"Some have been overzealous saying 'Sure, this may not be final or conclusive...but we still ought to run up the flag and sound the bugle,'" he said.

"And others have gone too far the other way."

Finch mentioned no names. But he was apparently referring to Dr. Jacqueline Verrett, the FDA scientist who conducted the chick experiment, and to FDA Commissioner Herbert L. Ley, Jr.

Dr. Verrett has been quoted as advising pregnant women to exercise care with cyclamates unless and until all doubts are removed.

Dr. Ley has emphasized that the findings are tentative from the cyclamate studies on animals. Also, he said, the effect of the drug on a lower animal is not always the same as on man.

Another FDA experiment, first reported almost a year ago, found breakages of genetic material after cyclamate was injected into rats. Similar chromosome breaks are associated with birth defects and cancer.

A panel of the nongovernment National Academy of Sciences reported last December there were no grounds for "serious suspicion" about cyclamates. But it recommended maximum intake levels for adults and children.

The sweetener, used by an estimated 175 million Americans, is found in diet foods and diet drinks, as well as in frozen desserts, children's vitamins, bacon, canned fruits and many other non-diet foods. The cyclamate industry is approaching $300 million in annual sales, FDA officials estimate.

The agency asked the National Academy last week to do a hurry-up, 30-day reassessment of cyclamates. "We need that note of urgency," Finch said.

Finch said he is not yet satisfied that the chick study was rigorous enough to rule out the possibility of false findings about cyclamate effects.

Drivers lose billions in shoddy repair work

WASHINGTON (AP) — American motorists are spending billions of dollars a year needlessly because their automobiles are too delicate to withstand minor collisions, Senate investigators were told Monday.

"The answer is simply to make vehicles less delicate to these low-speed crashes, and the fact is that it is practical and can be achieved and it's time everyone understood this," said William Haddon Jr.

Haddon, former director of the Bureau of Highway Safety in the Dept. of Transportation, singled out for particular blame ineffective bumpers and such accessories as hideaway headlights. Haddon said the latter not only are costly to repair, but have a "butcher cleaver" construction that causes many pedestrian injuries.

Haddon, who now heads the private Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, testified as the Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee reopened hearings on the cost of auto repairs. It seeks an answer to the auto owner's perennial question: Am I getting good repairs at a fair price?

Earlier sessions last year and in April of this year produced sensational testimony of poor workmanship, padded bills and charges that auto firms purposely designed their products so that repair costs would be high.

Subcommittee Chairman Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., said at the outset of the new hearings that studies on the adequacy of repairs "range from a low of only 1 per cent being done satisfactorily to a high of 66 per cent."

"Accepting the highest figure," said Hart, "we have one-third of all repairs being unsatisfactory. The loss to consumers runs into the billions, without giving a dollar amount to the frustration and inconvenience."

Saying that the subcommittee had been told 50 per cent of all autos have defects, Hart suggested licensing of auto repair facilities and a national system of licensing mechanics.

Hart said also there has been a 64 per cent rise in the price of auto parts over the past decade and the subcommittee will try to find out what caused it.

Second woman in 'U' history invades male ROTC course

By CYNTHIA NEAL
State News Staff Writer

The masculine fortress of Army ROTC has been infiltrated by the feminine sex. The infiltrator, however, is not a seductive lady spy, but a prospective WAC lieutenant.

Sandra Sue Foley, Manitou Beach senior, is auditing Military Science 320, an advanced ROTC course. Miss Foley is the second woman in ROTC history at MSU to cross enemy lines into one of the few remaining male strongholds.

Roberta Soden preceded her in 1966 when she audited another ROTC course, map reading.

"I checked into the new Army ROTC curriculum here at MSU and found that it was a great deal more interesting and challenging than I expected," Miss Foley said. "The officers in Demonstration Hall were very helpful and cooperative and agreed to let me audit the course. I'm sure it will be valuable to me now and later."

Miss Foley is in the WAC

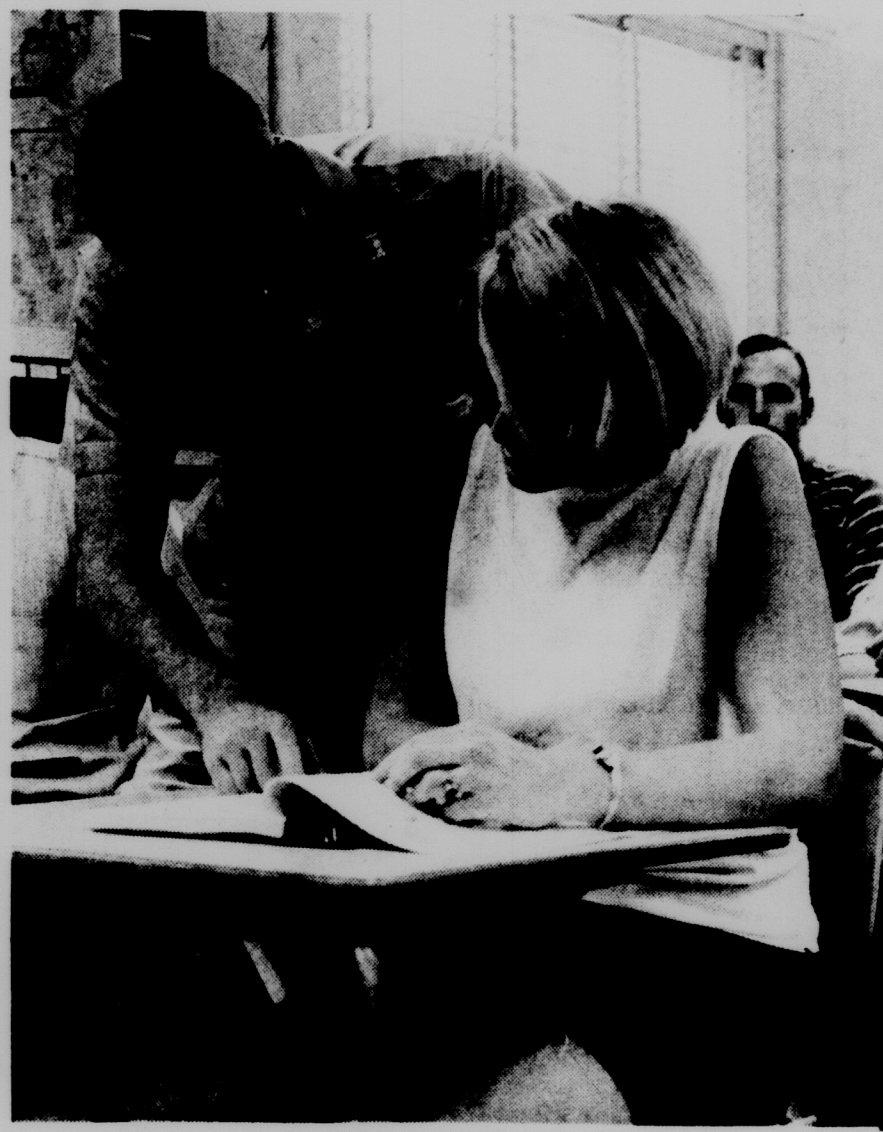

student officer program which, upon graduation, will give her a second lieutenant's commission. Her assignment preferences are intelligence or psychological warfare, but she said there is no guarantee that she will get either one.

"I wanted to find a way to keep in touch with the Army and at the same time learn how the military operates," she explained. "Army ROTC is the best way for me to do both."

As a multidisciplinary social science major, Miss Foley wants a career that lets her work with people.

Jean P. Burner, professor of military science at MSU, is not at all apprehensive about this feminine touch to his department.

"We want people to know about our program. Our new curriculum is tailor-made for MSU and if a young lady like Miss Foley sincerely wants to find out more about the military, we're happy to have her participate as a student," Burner said. "She definitely stimulates her all-male classmates."

Battle tactics

Sandra Foley, the second woman to enter the MSU ROTC program in its history, receives help in her course work from Bill Williams, a senior in ROTC. Because she is the only woman now in the program, Miss Foley hopes that one of the battles she doesn't have to worry about is that of the sexes.

Student uncowed after bucolic day

By MARION NOWAK
State News Staff Writer

Contrary to popular belief, MSU is not a place where professors stomp around in greenjeans with hay in their teeth, saying things like "That ther Spinoza sure was a nice feller," or "I'll whup the bejesus out of you dem kids."

Nor do MSU coeds proceed to class on all fours, lowing. Still, mindful of the agrarian stigma that anyone even remotely connected with MSU must operate under forever, I figured I really couldn't graduate from MSU without milking a cow. Ah, the total pastoral experience.

And last week I finally milked one.

Or one-third of one. Along with two similarly pastoral-minded friends, I spent an hour at dairy research one day on what may prove to be the Ultimate Adventure of the term.

(The cow, named Violet, of course, is not available for comment.)

Anyone can milk a cow at dairy research. Just get there any day at milking time, which, for some reason, is 3 p.m. (instead of sunrise and sunset). Bring your own stool and bucket. We didn't. Although we managed to borrow a bucket, the three of us had to maintain a sort of hopping crouch around Violet.

"How do you work this thing?" we inquired of a nice man who was engaged with some milking machines.

He showed us how. Then we had a quarrel over who should try first. The quarrel was solved when all three of us grouped around Violet with the nice man to have a go at it.

"Here. You pinch it at the top, push up and then squeeze down," he explained. We all looked uncomfortable. Poor sore Violet.

All the cows are kept in training yokes to condition them to standing relatively still. A few inches over their shoulders hangs a sawtoothed piece of metal that serves the same end, carrying a mild electric shock.

In all, Violet produced 7½ pounds of milk. Suddenly we were faced with a novel problem: what can you do with 7½ pounds of milk? Especially when you can't run away with the bucket.

"Let's make this a total experience," Mike decided. So, of course, we had to go off to the barns where breeding bulls are kept to see the other half of this aspect of the pastoral life.

The entire area where bulls are located has a distinctly rugged, almost TV-western atmosphere. The first thing we saw was a no admittance isolation barn, and another barn with limited admittance (Danger! New Bulls!).

In the barns, the bulls — at least the size of tanks — are chained up. When we walked through the first barn, they all started snorting and otherwise over-reacting.

I got so interested I went back to the car.

Such an experience. We liked the whole thing so much, however, that next week we're going again. And we're even doing down to the sheep barns and the horse barns.

The Pastoral life...

U. S. acknowledges low-level radar hole

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon today acknowledged that the ability to detect approach of airplanes from Communist Cuba at low levels is "somewhat limited."

"We have known for some time that our low-level radar capability is somewhat limited," Jerry Friedheim, deputy assistant secretary of defense, told newsmen.

"To plug this deficiency," Friedheim said, "The United States normally flies an EC121 radar picket plane between Cuba and the Florida coast."

He said, however, that no such picket plane was aloft on Sunday when the MIG 17 jet to Homestead Airforce Base, south of Miami.

The Pentagon said Monday that the pilot, Lt. Eduardo Guerra Jimenez, evaded U.S. radar almost until landing by flying at altitudes of only 30 to 40 feet.

Friedheim said, "I find no review in progress" when asked about published reports of a hasty review by the United States of its air defense procedures in the wake of a MIG 17 landing at Homestead.

Asked if the Pentagon is concerned over the situation, Friedheim replied, "We are always concerned when our air space is penetrated."

Friedheim turned aside a reporter's question about the security of President Nixon, who was at his Florida White House near Miami when the Cuban pilot landed.

"We don't discuss security arrangements for the President," the Pentagon spokesman said.

He noted that the Army maintains Hawk missile batteries in that general area to defend against low-level attacks. Hawks have been in eastern Florida since the Cuban missile crisis late in 1962.

Friedheim said penetration of the U.S. radar screen "is not a frequent occurrence." A Cuban aircraft twin-engine transport carrying flyers to bring the MIG back to Cuba landed at Homestead this morning under escort of two U.S. F104 interceptors.

Friedheim indicated there was pre-arrangement and that the F104s contacted the Soviet built transport plane some 32 minutes before the transport landed.

Air strip closes, claimed liability

MSU has closed its "flying farmer" landing strip just west of Farm Lane and north of Mt. Hoe Road.

The University opened the strip in 1953. Since then, it has had irregular and light use by a few faculty members, students and flying farmers.

The Michigan Aeronautics Commission told the University that it would cost several thousands of dollars to bring the strip up to minimum standards.

George McIntyre, director of the Cooperative Extension Service, said the strip was officially abandoned Sept. 1.

Since 1953, Spartan Village, with 1,536 apartments, the Michigan Dept. of Agriculture Laboratory and the Manly Miles Bldg. have been built to the west in the flight pattern of the strip. A 1,500-car parking lot crowds the strip on its southern edge. Thus, McIntyre said, the landing strip now poses a danger and a liability to the University.

FEE HALL APARTMENTS

'U' tries new landlord role

By SHARON STEWART
State News Staff Writer

Off-campus apartments, meet your competition — wall-to-wall carpeting with air conditioning, all utilities, draperies, linen exchange service, pillows, refrigerator, stove, garbage disposal, dinnerware, basic cooking utensils and all essential furniture in Fee Hall.

The idea was first conceived in a report, "Improving Undergraduate Education at MSU" and was enlivened at the prospect of a four-year medical school. The proposed school will be located in proximity to Fee Hall and will create a need for apartments.

One-, two- and four-bedroom apartments are available. Rates range from $180 to $390 a term. The price depends on the number of square feet in the apartment and the number of people. Payments can be made on a deferred plan.

If cooking is less than familiar, a board contract is available for 20 meals per week at $210 per term, per person.

The majority of the 46 apartments are finished, except for minor problems in obtaining dishes and other items from the companies.

Apartment dwellers fall under the same regulations as dorm dwellers, but are not under a R.A.

"Let's face it, students don't want to be around anyone who is constantly saying, 'that's a no no,'" R. J. LHuiller, manager of Fee Hall said.

In entering the apartment business, the "University" is forced to adopt the same philosophy and to be content with some of the things that apartments are forced to cope with. A $75 deposit is requested by the hall.

A portion of the deposit is applied to the damage deposit all residence hall residents must pay.

"What the apartment dwellers do, is their business until the apartment reverts back to the University," LHuiller said.

Occupants have access to telephones on the center system found throughout campus.

Non-Fee Hall residents and freshmen are discriminated against when applying for apartments. "Since the apartments are only an experiment, we feel safer having residents who are familiar with the rules of Fee," LHuiller said.

Having been in operation for only two weeks, the major measure of its success has to be, "Sorry, no vacancies."

Volunteer Bureau offers chance for social action

Students, faculty and staff are invited to join the MSU Volunteer Action Effort which includes those opportunities listed below and others.

Contact: MSU Volunteer Bureau, 26 Student Services Bldg., 353-4402. Interviews for Volunteer Bureau are held from 9-11:30 a.m., and 2-4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday.

BOYS TRAINING SCHOOL: Give a last chance a chance. Counsel, tutor, teach arts and crafts to youth of this school. Volunteers are needed for one-to-one relationships.

PINE LODGE HALFWAY HOUSE: Tutors are needed for a pilot program designed to prepare youth of the home for GED testing.

MICHIGAN SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND: Volunteers are needed to supervise recreational and academic experience for MSU students. Team up one-to-one with a youth that "sees the world from another vantage."

WEST SIDE ACTION CENTER: Big Brothers and Sisters are needed to provide and establish relationships with youngsters ages 6-15. Tutors are needed to academically help elementary, junior and senior high students and persons interested in passing the GED test. The Welfare Rights Organizations need volunteers to assist in their community organization efforts. How would you like to help organize and print a weekly center newsletter?

VFW NATIONAL HOME-EATON RAPIDS: Big Sisters and Big Brothers are needed for the youngsters at this home. Recreational, academic and social involvement is available.

EMERGENCY SERVICE CORPS: Coeds, make this immediate assistance program available to meet family tragedies and short term child care needs.

READERS TO THE BLIND: Readers are needed for blind MSU students. Time and place to be arranged.

ELDERLY WIDOWED HOMEOWNER: Needs someone to help wash outside windows and make minor putty repairs.

CAMPUS COMMUNITY COMMISSION: CCC; Help out in a Lansing elementary school, keep kids off the streets, advise an interest club, teach crafts on Saturday, adult education and teen programs, too.

INGHAM COUNTY JAIL: Help make detention time as academically profitable as possible. Tutors are needed to work individually with a man. A librarian is needed to act as liaison with community sources to obtain texts. A typist is needed to help prepare reproducible materials used in the education program.

ST. VINCENT HOME FOR

CHILDREN: Provide that extra care that an emotionally adjusting kid needs. A smile, a chat, a tear, it's all part of a mutual sharing experience.

CAMP HIGHFIELDS: Socially adjusting boys need you to help them develop and beat the influence of the pace. Be a pal, tutor or dance teacher. Projectionist urgently needed.

NORTHSIDE ACTION CENTER: Tutors needed for education program that meets from 7 to 10 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday. Children's Club meets from 9 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. Supervisors for recreational activities needed. Community Organization aides needed to assist staff in neighborhood organization. Afternoons and Saturdays, involving data collection, compiling and general organization work and assisting in field work. A housing project provides an opportunity for volunteers to get involved in tenant organization etc. Ladies Club assistant needed from 1 to 3 p.m. Wednesday to assist with arts and crafts activities.

LANSING SCHOOL DISTRICT: Volunteers needed to work with and supervise pre-school youngsters while their mothers attend classes on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday for two hours.

PLEASANT VIEW-FROH PROJECT: Volunteers are needed to work with neighborhood youth kindergarten thru grade three. 3:30-5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. You may provide tutoring assistance, supervise recreational programs, organize senior citizen groups or just develop meaningful relationships with community people.

BIG BROTHERS AND BIG SISTERS: Be a surrogate. Help a lad without a dad, or a girl who doesn't have a mother

Off to see the wizard

Coeds interested in sorority life attended several rush parties this fall. Each night they found the houses set atone to a particular theme based on their skit for the evening. Rushees witnessed a

"Wizard of Oz"-like production at this party. This is the first year MSU sororities have rushed at the beginning of fall term.

"I suspect that what is really behind the domino theory is that any number of these corrupt and unpopular regimes would be overthrown if the United States would withdraw military support from them.

"But they're anti-communist, and anybody who's anti-communist gets support from the United States," Battastine said. "Mussolini's only problem was that he was born at the wrong time."

Riddle then expressed the BLF's attitude toward the war. He said that blacks are concerned for a number of reasons:

--The number of blacks over there.

--Because "we're told, 'Kill, niggers, kill.'"

--Because "our resources are being wiped out over there."

Riddle also expressed concern for the lack of equal opportunity for education and housing in the United States for black veterans.

"Every time we see another contradiction of Americanism, as blacks, we shake our heads. We think that we have to build a nation like the NLF has been trying to do in Vietnam," Riddle said. "We're engaged in the same kind of struggle."

Anthropological films scheduled

4-Butte-1, the first presentation in a series of anthropological films scheduled this term, will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Thursday on the second floor MSU Museum auditorium. Other films scheduled this term include "The Hunters," Oct. 23, and "Nanook of the North," Dec. 4.

A discussion is scheduled following each film. There is no admission charge.

Senate's Democratic majority. He bought it with a check made out to Baker.

In 1964, when Baker was being investigated for using his influence to get MGIC favored treatment, the names of all stockholders were introduced to the Senate Committee. Adams' name was one of those mentioned.

"The only guy whose actions were questioned was Baker," Adams said Tuesday.

"As for my role in the stock transaction, there was never any allegation of improper, unlawful, unethical or questionable conduct on my part," he said. "At the time (1959), Mr. Baker was a widely known and highly respected official of the United States Senate."

"As an economist, I made a serious error in judgment," Adams said. "I settled for a profit of $2,000 when I should have waited a few more months and made $76,000. This, indeed, is embarrassing."

Adams considers the "revival of this bit of stale news" an indication of "just how desperate some people are about my non-candidacy for MSU president."

"I really don't want to dignify this thing with extensive discussion," he said. "If some people think they can get some mileage out of the revival of this bit of stale news that has no significance whatsoever, they're free to do so. I consider it a reflection on them, not on me."

"There were no charges brought against me during the Senate investigations," Adams said. "If they want to make those charges, I will answer them. However, I will not answer an anonymous, dark-alley type of sluttish attack."
