

A day to end the Vietnam war

A coffin. Postmarked Vietnam. Maybe it was a relative, or a friend, or a classmate, or just an acquaintance.

Maybe personal tragedy and involvement weren't required. Maybe it was just raw figures - over 44,000 Americans dead in Vietnam, along with 93,000 Saigon soldiers, supposedly 546,000 NLF and an estimated two million civilians dead - that turned you off.

Perhaps you sat down and rationally looked at such a war in "modern" society and it just didn't fit. Maybe you looked over the "long, hot summers" in this country, and it did fit - too closely for your comfort.

Perhaps you are black, and fighting against the Vietnamese and for America is a low blow. What awaits you here? Equality, democracy? Maybe.

Perhaps you favor the North Vietnamese government and, for that reason, think America should get the hell out.

Then again, you could just be sick and tired of inflation. It's eating at us all, well, most of us. The rich get richer, and Vietnam's slowly getting annihilated.

Whatever your reason...

End the war in Vietnam NOW. Today is the day to end the war. Wednesday, Oct. 15. And if they don't end it today, America will visit Washington, D.C. Nov. 15 to finish the task - we hope.

It's the biggest demonstration to ever hit this country. You don't have to worry about missing class; that has been taken care of. Nothing drastic is involved.

We just want you to attend the teach-in, speeches, rally and march, and think about it all. The exercise won't hurt you.

The moratorium is not the workings of "shaggy-haired flaming radicals" who are all commies and thus should all be shot. The moratorium is the workings of thousands of Americans who have asked themselves WHY Vietnam exists, for what purpose, to the benefit of whom and how it can be ended. For one reason or another, they have concluded that the war in Vietnam (at least any role in that conflict for America) must, absolutely must, cease now.

It is not a matter of getting out gradually, so as to save face, or getting out by blasting North Vietnam out of existence, so our illustrious President won't have to be the first President to lose a war. It is a war in which there are no winners, only plenty dead. Our face has already been smeared in blood worldwide, whether that blood was from Vietnam or our own streets.

This is an exercise in freedom of speech and expression. You gotta yell it loud for our highest officials to hear it. There's no need for violence; there's enough of that in Vietnam and our inner cities now. Democracy - we merely want you to take an active role; just being present will do.

Will you help end the bloodshed? Today.

Nation observes Viet moratorium

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer

Across the great length and breadth of the nation, the stage was set Tuesday for Vietnam Moratorium Day, a protest by Americans who oppose the war.

Others, however, are expected to fly flags in support of U.S. policy in Vietnam - a counterdemonstration by what one spokesman called America's "silent majority."

House members planning an all night session with speeches in support of the Vietnam moratorium survived an early attempt Tuesday evening to shut them off.

A motion to adjourn the House, offered before a single war protestor had a chance to speak, was defeated 210 to 99. Other attempts to block the session were expected later in the evening.

Leaders and backers of the moratorium have called for a nonviolent disruption of the ordinary daily routine, and law enforcement officials have expressed no great outward concern. Some cities called extra police to duty, but mainly to handle traffic.

"The moratorium is as committed against violence as it is against the Vietnam war," said Rep. Allard K. Lowenstein, D-N.Y., a congressional backer of the demonstrations.

President Nixon has said he will not allow his course in Vietnam or Paris "to be swayed by those who demonstrate."

In South Vietnam, President Nguyen Van Thieu said he believed the majority of Americans back the allied war effort. But he added: "I think it is very normal that in a free and democratic country... people can express their thinking in any way."

In support of the moratorium, rallies are planned in New York, Boston and Washington, where 17 Senators and 47 congressmen have expressed support for nonviolent demonstrations.

Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, has called congressional supporters of the moratorium "self-appointed emissaries of Hanoi who want to make it appear the House of Representatives is on the side of Hanoi."

He called sponsors of the demonstration, which originated among student groups, "Communists and anarchists who want to bring down the government of the United States."

There will be antiwar candlelight parades from the United Nations Bldg. to St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, and similar processions at the University of Alabama, Georgetown University, the University of Delaware, the University of Buffalo and Syracuse University, among others.

The widow of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. is expected to lead thousands of marchers on a candlelight parade around the White House.

Acting President Adams, left, Provost John Cantlon, center, and Dale Hathaway, chairman and professor of Agricultural Economics, met with the Academic Council Tuesday to review the Massey Report, which is common reference for the Ad Hoc Committee on Student Participation in Academic Government. The group, which met in the Con Con Room of the International Center, accepted and amended the preamble to the report.

Hershey doubts feasibility of volunteer armed forces

WASHINGTON (AP)-Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, indicated Tuesday he doubts the United States could raise an all-volunteer military force of more than a million men.

Hershey told a panel at an Army association meeting that a major requirement for an all-volunteer force is "to get the world peaceful enough" so the United States could get along with force of about that size.

Currently, there are more than 3.4 million Americans in uniform.

Hershey, who will be replaced next February, said a second requirement for an all-volunteer force which the Nixon Administration has set as a goal is to "find new ways of getting people to live up to their responsibilities."

Hershey avoided any controversial statements and alluded to his replacement only indirectly when he said with a wry grin that, "I've read quite a bit lately about age."

The 76-year-old draft director has been under fire, in part by some who claim he is too old and too rigid to continue to head the draft system.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., another panel member, contended that the way to induce men to volunteer for military careers is to "eliminate the negative economic factor and bring them up to the level of other walks of life."

Schweiker is the sponsor of legislation aimed at promoting an all-volunteer force principally by raising the income of service men.

"We believe a person should be able to earn as much in the Army after he graduates from high school as he would in a civilian job," Schweiker said.

He proposed also that certain other benefits should be provided, and possibly some sort of plan to finance college education for the children of service men.

Bradley H. Paterson Jr., former executive director of the National Advisory Commission on Selective Service, said that without the draft the armed forces are likely to suffer in both quality and numbers.

Massey preamble OK'd by Academic Council

By DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

The Academic Council Tuesday took an initial look at the Massey Report and, after an hour long debate, agreed to accept an amended preamble of the document.

The commonly called Massey Report is from the Ad Hoc Committee on Student Participation on Academic Government, which was appointed by the Academic Council almost a year ago.

The two-sentence preamble was cut in half and the remaining part was altered by six words and two commas, as submitted by Thomas Greer, professor of humanities and member of the council.

Five standing faculty committees reviewed the Massey Report before the Academic Council.

Floyd Parker of the Educational Policies Committee said that the committee in general agreed with the spirit of the report but were "not in agreement with any number of parts of the report."

He asked that the report be referred back to committee.

William Sweetland, chairman of the Faculty Tenure Committee, said that his committee felt the Massey Report gave inappropriate power to students on faculty committees. He said they felt they were "much more appropriate at the college and departmental level than it is at the University level."

Chairman of the University Honors Programs, John P. Newman, said that his committee shared the fear that members of the Honors College may not be represented on committees.

Marvin D. Solomon, chairman of the

NEWS summary

A capsule summary of the day's events from our wire services.

"Those defeatists advocating unconditional United States troop withdrawals... are the dishonor of the free world because they accept capitulation."

—South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu

International News

Viet Cong activity has decreased in the Mekong Delta despite the withdrawal of 12,000 American fighting men from the area, U.S. Army sources reported Tuesday.

When it was announced that the U.S. 9th Infantry Division would be withdrawn, there was speculation that the enemy would launch a new round of attacks. But as of yet, the anticipated increase has not begun.

Shirley Temple Black, recently appointed to the U.S. delegation to the United Nations, admits some problems in living down her reputation as "little Shirley," but she is plunging ahead in the business of the United Nations.

The 41-year-old mother of three recently addressed the U.N. Social Committee on "Youth and National Development."

In her first major speech, Mrs. Black suggested that the age of majority be lowered from 21 to 18. This touched off a barrage of letters from people who thought the voting age should not be lowered.

"Apparently they misunderstood me," she said. "I meant lowering the age in every sense, from marriage to debts and taxes."

National News

Third party leader George C. Wallace, a presidential candidate last year, disclosed Tuesday in Montgomery Ala., that he plans a trip to Vietnam next month.

Although Wallace did not mention any specific goal for his trip other than "fact-finding," speculation is that he is keeping tabs on President Nixon's handling of the situation for possible campaign use in 1972.

The former Alabama governor did not confirm his plans to run again, but he did say he was keeping his third party movement alive and watching the Nixon Administration to see if the President follows through with his promises for dealing with the war and national problems.

An attempt to keep the House of Representatives in session all night long in support of the Vietnam moratorium stirred a storm of protest Tuesday by members who support President Nixon's war policy.

While some members of the legislative body called the moratorium "awfully close to subversion," Rep. Andrew Jacobs Jr., D-Ind., arose, his face red with suppressed anger.

"As one of the few members who have faced the Communist enemy as a combat infantryman, I resent having my patriotism impugned for saying that no more American lives should be sacrificed to protect a dictatorship from a dictatorship."

Jacobs was one of the sponsors of the all-night session.

The nation's biggest auto maker, General Motors, Tuesday denied charges that auto service and repair costs are excessive except in some cases where repairability is sacrificed for safety.

The spokesman for GM was testifying in Washington before the Senate antitrust subcommittee investigating the high cost of auto repairs.

Most of his remarks were directed at claims that American cars are constructed too delicately to withstand the minor collisions that account for well over three-fourths of all insurance claims.

He said GM engineers are working on methods to decrease collision damage by the use of better bumpers. But, he said, the best they can come up with is a bumper that protects an auto from any damage at all at speeds up to 2.8 miles per hour.

Michigan News

Chrysler Corp. has laid off nearly 500 white collar workers in the past two weeks in an economy program to offset higher costs, a Chrysler spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said "A few more may be laid off" but the cost-cutting program now is "almost complete."

The recently announced prices on 1970 models, with sticker prices up by an average of $107, are competitive, a recent corporation statement said, "but they do not cover all of our cost increases."

"While our dollar sales have been going up, our earnings are being squeezed," the statement said.

Polley's replacement quits post

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

The State Board of Education was dealt another blow Tuesday when the man it chose to replace Dr. Ira Polley abruptly resigned.

Robert M. Winger, the deputy superintendent of public instruction who last week was picked to temporarily run the Dept. of Education, said he would not run the department's functions after the close of business today.

"In the few days since Dr. Polley's resignation, there are already signs that within the department the morale and the will to push forward in education is lessening," he said.

"It is my fervent hope that the action of the board to name at least a well-qualified acting superintendent from among the department's many able civil service employees would be prompt and would brake this trend."

Winger was chosen by board members when Polley resigned following months of conflict between the board and the superintendent, and a permanent successor could not be agreed upon.

One of the foremost candidates for the post, John Porter, associate superintendent of the Bureau of Higher Education, removed himself from consideration Monday, reportedly because he did not have the unanimous support of the board.

In his resignation statement, Winger praised Polley, whose "courage and vigor in attempting to advance education in Michigan was without precedent, despite the fact he was finally forced to resign."

He said he had "served under four elected and one appointed superintendent of public instruction in my 26 years with the department. All of these have been highly qualified men, but none have worked under the adverse conditions faced by Dr. Polley."

"I can say without reservation that Dr. Polley provided more challenges, more inspiration and more examples of the relentless pursuit of excellency... than any other superintendent in my experience," Winger continued. The Board was to meet Tuesday evening to consider a replacement for Winger.

And while the continuing turmoil of the board seems only to reinforce Gov. Milliken's criticism of the board and his proposal to replace it with a single appointed director of education, the board's treasurer issued a plea for public support of the elected board concept.

James F. O'Neil said an elected board is "the best insurance of public control over public education."

O'Neil told a Northville Rotary Club audience Tuesday that the governor's proposal would "bury the responsibility for education in a bureaucracy that would be unresponsive and unaccountable to the public."

He quoted a recent statement by James Allen, U.S. commissioner on education, who said, "It is very important to have a body that can speak for education with as much independence as possible."

"If you don't have a commissioner with that independence, then education decisions tend to be made behind the scenes and for political reasons because the state education commissioner is not at liberty to criticize the state administration."

O'Neil said a state superintendent, without the checking action of a state board, could "impose sex education guidelines as well as other guidelines on the public schools" at his own decree.

He also agreed with a statement by the board's president, Peter Oppewall, when he said the board's problems are emphasized because it is "the most 'open to the public' board of education in the state."

The board is much more one

Milliken endorses peaceful protests

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken said that today's anti-war moratorium "should be viewed as an appeal to all parties to speed the end of combat."

In a statement issued at the Capitol, Milliken said, "I support the Oct. 15 anti-war moratorium day as a symbol of public desire for peace."

"I do, however, withhold support of those activities which undermine current efforts of the President to end the Vietnam war," he added.

He said he endorsed the objective to end the war, which is the "common objective of those who march in protest or in battle," as well as the President.

"It is absolutely imperative that efforts to end the war be continued, so that we can redirect our national energies to priority needs at home," the governor explained.

The responsibility for negotiating the peace lies with the President, he said, not with students, senators, congressmen, legislators or governors.

"No one of us should hinder the progress of negotiations. The other side will be gravely misdirected if it sees the moratorium only as supporting the notion that America will unilaterally and unconditionally withdraw from its commitments," he said.

"I believe, and I believe very deeply, that public officials at all levels of government should be sensitive to, and responsive to, peaceful dissent," the governor said. "It can be a source of national strength just as violent dissent, such as we have seen in Chicago, can be a source of shame," he concluded.

Last May 29, we published this editorial comment. Since then, over 8,000 more Americans from towns like Decatur and Lansing, Cincinnati and Brooklyn, have died in South Vietnam. The death toll today stands at over 43,500. Nothing's changed except the casualty figures. Let's work together for peace today. We're all we've got.

COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Reform scope broadened

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

The Michigan House of Representatives recently created a special committee on community colleges to bring this segment of the educational community within the scope of educational reform.

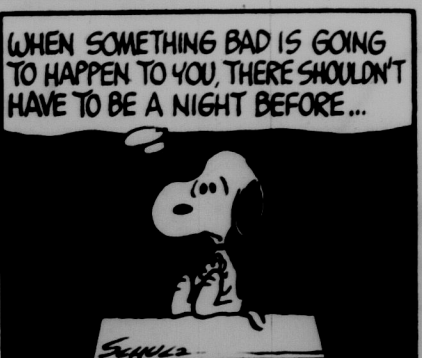

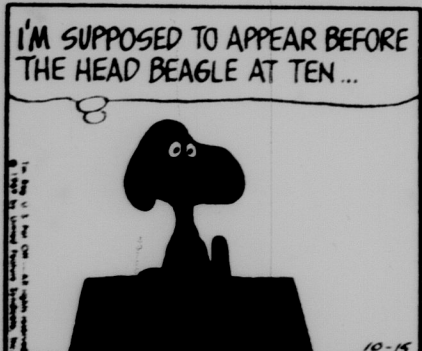

"The creation of the committee is an attempt to hitch community colleges onto the train of educational reform," House Speaker William A. Ryan, D-Detroit, said.

The Governor's Commission on Educational Reform neglected to include community colleges in its report, despite the fact that these institutions, like local school districts, depend upon an uncertain combination of local property taxes and state appropriations.

The committee is an outgrowth of efforts begun in 1965-66 by the chairman of the House Committee on Colleges and Universities, Rep. Vincent J. Pettipren, D-Westland, and Rep. George F. Montgomery, D-Detroit, chairman of the higher education subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee.

Since that time, community colleges have continued to grow haphazardly, and currently enroll more than 73,000 full-time students, at a cost of more than $40 million to the state.

"This study is a necessary prelude to the formulation and enactment of an overall plan to encourage the development of a sensible statewide system of community colleges to serve students in every area of the state," Montgomery, chairman of the newly established committee, explained.

"We intend to submit proposals for equitable and adequate financing and prudent construction of facilities in the hope of imposing order on the existing chaos," he added.

Montgomery expects the nine-man committee to complete its work within three months so that community college reform can be integrated into the governor's total educational reform program.

"By Jan. 14, we will have prepared not only a report including recommendations to the legislature, but also appropriate legislation to implement our recommendations," he said.

Blacks hesitant on moratorium

By KAREN FITZGERALD
State News Staff Writer

While a multitude of white war protesters has been vigorously preparing for the national moratorium against the war, the fact that 20 per cent of the casualties of that war are black has not escaped the awareness of black Americans.

"They're killing off our guys," Iris Samuels, Detroit junior, said, "and we feel the pressure."

Though not denouncing the moratorium, a majority of those interviewed have an alternate plan for opposing the war.

"The brothers," Roy Sign, a disc jockey in the East Campus Complex said, "should simply refuse to go to Vietnam."

While crediting the moratorium as a good way to "bring out the specifics of the war" and to enable more people "to think more objectively" about it, the Detroit resident and native of Mississippi considers it "idealistic" to expect significant results from talk, since so much has already passed.

While many black MSU students and area leaders do not oppose the moratorium, few seem enthusiastic about it. Three political figures optimistic about the protest are State Rep. Rosetta Ferguson, D-Detroit; Sen. Coleman A. Young, D-Detroit, and Rep. James Bradley, D-Detroit.

"Blacks protested for years but received little consideration," Mrs. Ferguson said. "Now that white kids are taking over, more attention is drawn and few are arrested."

"The moratorium will be good because with Americans protesting, the government will not be able to negotiate. The only way to end the war will be to withdraw U.S. troops, returning the conflict to a civil war," she said.

Young, an ardent opponent of the war, feels that the program will be effective in ending the war in that it may "be one of the biggest war protests this nation has known."

Though noting the "weakness in failing to include blacks in the planning," he opposes an all-black protest.

Bradley, while praising the move as a method of dramatizing the feelings of young people, also opposed an all-black protest because "its effectiveness would be minimized."

A joint protest, he added, "adds considerably more weight."

One whose opinion differs drastically from Bradley's is Mike Lotson, Savannah, Ga., freshman. He does not see the moratorium as "the great ending force that white kids see."

Blacks should have their own rally, he insisted, in order to be recognized as opposing the war.

A feeling among MSU students was expressed by Walter Thomas, Detroit sophomore. "Most blacks support it to an extent," the aid in Fee Hall said, "but really don't feel a part of it."

A black employee of MSU said that while the moratorium would be good to "bring people together in protest," it would not be effective, regardless of numbers. "They (government) know the public is against the war. They can tell that from the polls."

Rodney Watts, Glasboro, N.J. senior, doubts the success of such a program because "the total nation is not politically aware. Many would not respond to it because they are obsessed with the immediate dollar lost in a day away from work."

Clarence Wood, president of Lansing's Black Man's Social Club, a group of factory workers, agrees that he does not expect much participation by workers. Wood, a member of the Black Community United, which is affiliated with the Black Liberation Front, cites a lack of unity between black workers and the more aware students.

Two of the most vocal students in calling for total refusal of blacks to the draft as an alternative for a moratorium were Michele Lacey, Detroit senior, and Jason Lovette, Romulus senior.

Lovette supports the moratorium though he thinks it should go further. In mobilizing a large number of people, he feels that it will "point out the contradictions of the system being relevant to the public."

"The system is jive. When all these people call for an end to the war and it continues, the nation and world will see how unresponsive the system is."

An Army veteran who, "at 18 was a 'Negro' and accepted the lies about fighting for freedom," Lovette says he would now refuse the draft.

"The only way this war will end is for mothers to keep their sons, and for men, especially black men, to refuse to go."

Lacey echoes Lovette's thoughts but adds "The 'dudes' should say 'we ain't going,' but must consider which is worse—to fight in the jungle of the Nam or to fight in the jungle of American courts."

the same assignment?
Neither do we.

That's why we have a two-year Rotation Program for graduating engineers who would prefer to explore several technical areas. And that's why many of our areas are organized by function—rather than by project.

At Hughes, you might work on spacecraft, communications satellites and/or tactical missiles during your first two years.

All you need is an EE, ME or Physics degree and talent.

If you qualify, we'll arrange for you to work on several different assignments...and you can help pick them.

You may select specialized jobs, or broad systems-type jobs. Or you can choose not to change assignments if you'd rather develop in-depth skills in one area.

Either way, we think you'll like the Hughes approach.

It means you'll become more versatile in a shorter time. (And your salary will show it.)

MSU's fraternity mascots run from rocks to unicorns

By CARL P. OLSON
State News Staff Writer

Count them! There are 13 dogs, two cats, one rock and (believe it or not) the Theta Xi's said their mascot was a unicorn.

Tabulations indicate that half of MSU's 36 fraternities have mascots. Sororities, due to house standards, are not allowed to keep animals.

The rock is the property of Phi Kappa Psi men, who say, "It doesn't cost anything to feed, license or keep up."

The men of Phi Kappa Psi may have a point, since the fraternities owning dogs spend between $30 and $300 a year on their mascots for food and veterinarian costs.

St. Bernards, the famous Swiss booze-toters, are the favorite mascots at four fraternities. Tapper, the 1-year-old Bernard of the Theta Chi's, was killed by a car during fall rush.

The mother of Tapper, Dutchess II, is owned by the DU's. She has had three litters. The ATO's, with Robin Hood, and Sheba, owned by the Fiji's, round out the St. Bernard count. The Phi Delt's house two English bulldogs, appropriately named Brandy and Duke.

The 1-year-old Alaskan Malamute, Kahlua, is the mascot of Delta Sigma Phi fraternity. Kahlua makes a big point out of eating-garnishing a 25-pound bag of chow and 4 pounds of rations a week.

Collies are harbored by both Triangle, with Jay Omega, and BC, of the Phi Kappa Psi's. The Theta Delta Chi's give a home to a mitt named Triton.

A new addition to the Beta Theta Pi house this fall was Hydrant, a dalmatian puppy. He is now going through the process of being trained and disciplined, but still attends house functions.

Even with one eye, the Tau Delta Chi's mongrel, named Studley, is a ball of fire. "Truth is, he's out most of the day looking for his other eye," a Tau Delt said.

Besides their duties as the keeper of the MSU mascot, "Sparty," the Sig Eps have adopted a mongrel they call Ralph.

One of those lovable Basset hounds is looked after by the Phi Taus. The hound's name is Archie.

Sam, or Sammite, is the notorious Great Dane belonging to Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. "Sam is a roamer and there isn't an inch of East Lansing he hasn't covered," a Lambda Chi emphatically said.

Unique are the Psi U's, who last year were the owners of a goat, a raccoon and a goose. "It seems we have some humanitarians among us," a Psi U said. "They see a lonely animal and the house becomes an orphanage."

The fraternities that do not have dogs or other mascots claim the housemothers object to a pet, the brothers object to it as being a hassle or the house feels that they could not financially support the friends of mankind.

A dog's life

Fraternity mascots attract a lot of attention when they are taken for their daily strolls through East Lansing and the campus. Sam, left, the Great Dane of Lambda Chi, takes on a dejected look when all the brothers are off to class; while Duke and Brandy, right, mascots of Phi Delta, amuse themselves with a canine version of frisbee.

4-H plans program to aid urban areas

By LINDA KNIBBS
State News Staff Writer

The Ingham County Extension Office has introduced a new 4-H program for MSU students interested in helping urban children learn the values and skills offered through 4-H.

The theme of the program is to change the emphasis of 4-H from farm life to urban life. Project areas available include electrical science, sewing, photography, woodworking, cooking and conservation.

"The program will involve projects and activities geared to city life," student co-ordinator Bernard E. Polega said.

The program has two student co-ordinators: Polega, Bad Axe senior, and Christine Assessor, Grosse Pointe Woods senior. They are responsible for organizing activities and co-ordinating the volunteers. The program director is Richard Brown, Ingham County 4-H youth extension agent.

"We are trying to recruit MSU students as leaders to work in projects that interest them," Polega said. "This program is new and is very flexible. Leaders can structure their own activities."

Base programs are established in seven areas: Reo Road project, Downtown Lansing 4-H Club, Northside Drop-In Center, Tower Gardens in East Lansing, Cristo Rey, Pleasant View School Area and Holt Elliot Elementary School.

Youngsters involved will be from lower middle class homes. Their ages will range from 8 to 12 years.

"Volunteers can work one to two hours a week in the afternoons or evenings," Polega said. "Our program is planned so leaders can organize their own activity and hours."

All equipment will be available for any project the leaders wish to start. Transportation will be provided through the MSU Volunteer Bureau.

"Although this is sponsored by 4-H, we won't necessarily be involved in the traditional 4-H activities," Polega said. "Community achievement is stressed, not competition."

Any MSU student interested in helping children is urged to sign up for this program at the Volunteer Bureau Office, 26 Student Services Bldg., by Friday.

ROMEO AND JULIET

By MAJA
State News Reviewer

The Stuttgart Ballet arrived at MSU Monday in style and en masse. One hundred and fifty members of the touring company -- ranging from ballerinas to electricians to a small symphony orchestra -- plus mountains of costumes, scenarios, musical instruments and other theatre necessities were suddenly crowded into the Auditorium in preparation for what was to become one of the best productions this campus has ever seen.

Now, the Auditorium of our fine University has five dressing rooms and one chorus room, which can cause rather crowded conditions with a group this size. So the gentlemen were asked to do their dressing on stage and the ladies were relegated to Fairchild Theatre -- and the orchestra to a classroom. There were other problems too: what on earth do you do with enough wigs to fill two good-sized rooms?

Several hours later the Stuttgart Ballet appeared to a filled house with a finesse that belied the backstage squeeze. Magnificent, splendid, enthralling; these words and many more would still seem an inadequate description. From the grace of Susanne Hanke to the exquisite costuming, the production was delightful.

In recent years the English, the Russians and the Danes have presented the story of Romeo and Juliet, and each has been highly acclaimed. The presentation of the Stuttgart Ballet, however, outranks them all. John Cranko's choreography lends an appealingly human touch to the time-honored classic, with emphasis on personal tragedy and humorous sidetraps. He embroiders a work of grace and beauty on Prokofiev's music and embellishes it with a pomp and splendor of costuming and production that rivals sixteenth century Verona.

Heinz Claus delivers a touching performance as Romeo, his dancing an incredible combination of precision and fluidity. To the role of Juliet, Susanne Hanke brings all the freshness of a young girl in love and the control of a fine dancer. They are at their best in the pas de deux rendering Romeo's departure at sunrise. Jan Stripling (Tybalt) and Egon Madson (Mercutio) can hardly be overlooked, for their performances are equally fine, and demonstrate a wide scope of abilities both as dancers and as actors.

"Romeo and Juliet" gains a new dimension in this sensitive interpretation. Those who missed the performance may consider themselves unlucky, indeed.

Soviets launch satellite as Soyuz 6, 7, 8 rendezvous

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union launched an unmanned satellite into space Tuesday as two of its three manned orbiting spacecrafts maneuvered to a rendezvous.

There had been speculation that the Soviets would launch an unmanned satellite to serve as the basis of an orbiting space station to be put together by cosmonauts from three Soyuz spacecrafts.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said the unmanned satellite--called Interkosmos 1--contained scientific instruments from East Germany, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union--the first such internationally equipped Soviet Sputnik.

Tass did not say whether the unmanned craft was directly connected with the seven cosmonauts orbiting aboard the three Soviet spacecrafts.

Tass said Interkosmos 1 was launched in the Soviet Union "under a cooperation program of socialist Communist countries."

The name Interkosmos was a new one for the Soviet space program. Its Cosmos series of earth satellites has been used for many missions ranging from weather watching to military reconnaissance.

Tass announced the unmanned launching shortly after reporting that the manned ships Soyuz 7 and Soyuz 8, launched Sunday and Monday, respectively, "have carried out an approach toward each other." Tass made no mention of any docking.

There was a scarcity of official information from which to get an indication of the Soyuz trio's real mission. Tass offered a few progress reports giving the number of orbits and generalities about work on board.

"Joint experiments have been started simultaneously in different points of the near-earth outer space. Their results will provide an opportunity to obtain a fuller notion about the processes under study," the official Soviet news agency Tass said in one dispatch.

Moscow television, blank throughout the daytime, gave a brief taped program from Soyuz 6 in the early evening. This showed the two-man crew looking into the camera and grinning broadly. There was no sound from space.

Alumni Chapel

for peace prayers

All interested students may meet at 10:45 a.m. today in the basement of the Alumni Chapel to pray for people involved in the Vietnam war and to pray for peace.

"We will pray for people serving in Vietnam," Debbie Sirotkin, Oak Park senior, said. "We will also pray for people who make decisions."

"The meeting will continue on a 'come and go' basis into the early afternoon."

Black fraternity rejects IFC plea for unity

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

The black fraternity that withdrew from Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) last week has no plans to return to the council, Charles Dillard, Alpha Phi Alpha president, said Tuesday.

Dillard said his fraternity will not return to IFC despite the urging of IFC President Ted Dziak to reconsider the withdrawal.

In a statement sent Monday to the four black fraternities on campus, Dziak said, in part: "We want you to stay within Inter-Fraternity Council. Black and white together we must reevaluate our goals and directions. We must open our minds and unite."

Dillard said Dziak's statement was "well taken." But he said his fraternity never got anything out of membership in IFC.

"We paid our dues and never got anything from it," he said.

He added that IFC is "geared to those who want to keep themselves void of the political and social issues of the times." Dillard said Alpha Phi Alpha is developing an organization under the office of ASMSU's vice president for black affairs which will be more "relevant" than IFC.

At the time of Alpha Phi Alpha's withdrawal, Dillard described IFC as "dysfunctional to our interests" and containing members whose "policies and practices are overtly racist."

Dillard said the new organization will be "geared to more broader activities than normal social activities and will facilitate communication between all black student groups on campus."

In another statement issued

Monday, Dziak urged the white fraternities to "begin to take a leadership role on this campus and across the nation."

Dillard said Dziak's statement to the white fraternities was also "well taken."

"I hope this can give them (the white fraternities) some motivation to take part and get out of their ivory tower world. There's too much of a 'party mentality' and too much socializing," Dillard said.

Dziak said he would like to meet with Alpha Phi Alpha to discuss the withdrawal.

"I told him (Dillard) that, if possible, we'd like to get together and talk to them," he said.

He added that he has received no word from the other three black fraternities about withdrawing from IFC.

Ann Konde, president of Pan Hellenic Council, said she has not heard anything from the black sororities about withdrawing from Pan Hel.

STUDENT GRIPES

As they were and ever shall be

By JEAN MALONE

Many MSU students are supporting an anti-war moratorium and their candidate for University president and, in so doing, they are no different than their predecessors. According to "Michigan State: The First Hundred Years", a book by Madison Kuhn, professor of history, MSU students have supported many movements through the years.

In 1927, a writer on The Student, a Michigan State College paper, said that "the element of compulsion makes the (military training) course objectionable from the point of view of educational policy, and indefensible from the point of view of ethics." Sound familiar? The merits of early enlistment were somberly discussed when the Civil War broke out. The school, as well as the state, was strongly anti-slavery. Many joined the Union Army before the term ended.

Criticism of instructors has always been a student perogative. In 1881, Sam Johnson, a farmer-legislator-instructor, was harassed so much that he had to step down from teaching. His agriculture class, which emphasized practicality over scientific principles, did not meet with student approval. Students also wanted to choose the minister for Sunday chapel. They petitioned for a Universalist minister, but were refused because he was not a Christian.

Then, as now, fees were a matter of contention. The College Speculum, Michigan Agricultural College student paper, was started to protest the practices of a steward who failed to enter receipts and used canned instead of plentiful garden vegetables, thereby raising the cost of residence hall living. The steward was dismissed after an investigation by the state board.

Today, students question the University, its purpose and its goals. Many think courses are irrelevant and academic appointments are made for political reasons. An editor of The Student in 1927 wrote that the college was a "place where governors practiced economy to cover the graft at other points, where students waited four years while acquiring an educational veneer, where football and military training were overemphasized and where the college presidency is a bait for party electioneers."

Ten reported thefts on campus over the past week resulted in losses totaling more than $600 dollars, according to University police.

Early lapses make Duffy's plans obsolete

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

Being a college football coach can often times be the most frustrating, nerve-racking career a man can possibly undertake. Consider the case of Duffy Daugherty. Last week he and his staff spent up to 14 hours a day trying to find a vulnerable spot in Ohio State's armor.

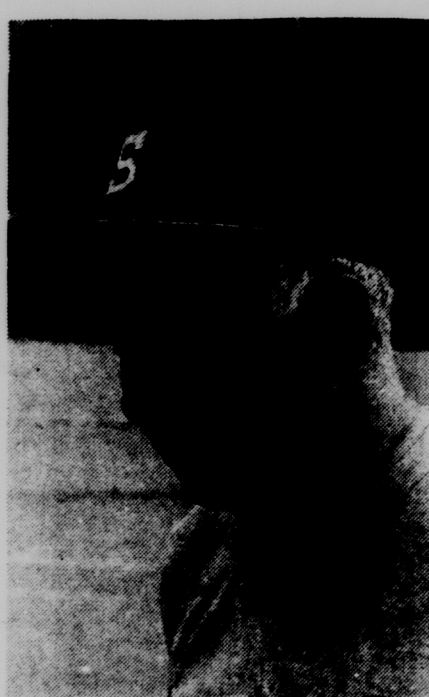

They spent countless hours viewing the Buckeye's game films and their own. The films were torn apart and pieced together time after time as Duffy and his staff tried to find a weakness in the opponent and tried to mastermind a game plan that would lead to victory.

After all those hours, the work was done and the Spartans had a plan of attack.

But nine minutes after the opening kickoff—following a pass interception, a fumble and a punt return—Daugherty glanced at the scoreboard and his team was 20 points down. Now they had to throw out the game plan and play the most demanding kind of football known to man—catch-up.

"We just are not a catch-up kind of football team," Daugherty said. "We don't have a Mike Phipps or a Chuck Hixson who can get three touchdowns back quickly."

The result: Ohio State knocked the stuffings out of the Spartans, 54-21.

Duffy Daugherty

"I don't think Ohio State is that much better than us," he argued. "If we played them 10 times, I doubt that they would beat us by that margin."

"Our kids didn't push the panic button, they played hard until the end. The kids, I think, are puzzled by the last two games. They never thought anyone could score like that on us. They are determined to make up for it."

"We haven't thrown in the sponge yet and written this off as a bad season," Duffy says with a hint of optimism.

Even though the Spartans have been less than impressive in their first four contests—owning a rather non-distinctive 2-2 mark thus far—they are still in the running for a trip to the Rose Bowl. In the next four weeks, the Spartans play the four major contenders who are in the running for the Number 2 spot in the conference and a trip to Pasadena. The Buckeyes, far and away the class of the league, are ineligible for the trip because they went a year ago.

In order, MSU plays Michigan, Iowa, Indiana and Purdue. Of these teams, Indiana seems to be in the most advantageous position. The Hoosiers do not play Ohio State or Michigan and have already notched a win over always dangerous Minnesota. Hoosier Coach John Pont must bow daily toward the Big Ten scheduler and give thanks for a non-suicidal schedule.

There are as many explanations offered for the Spartan's dismal showing so far as there are critics. Everyone places the blame on a different thing.

Some blame the coaches, some blame the quarterback Bill Triplett, some say it's the injury jinx and others say the Spartans just are not as good as they were cracked up to be by the preseason prophets.

By way of comparison, this season in their first four games, MSU has surrendered 122 points (over 30 a game). Last year at this point in the schedule, they had given up but 48.

No matter what way you cut it—those extra 74 points do make a difference.

The Spartans can't afford another complete lapse this weekend against Michigan, or that eternally optimistic Irishman may give up reviewing films altogether.

Spartan Notes—As the weeks wear on and the turnovers mount, Duffy Daugherty's half-in-jest comment about his triple option offense sounds more credible.

"Actually, it's a quadruple option, the way we run it," he smiled. "Sometimes we hand it off, sometimes we pitch it out, sometimes we pass and sometimes we just let it lie there on the ground."

The latest edition of Football News features Harry Devold's Top 50. Think the Spartan's look bad to you in the stands? Devold ranks MSU No. 31—seven spots behind Dartmouth (?) and just under Toledo (?). Let's have a little mercy, fellas.

OSU No. 1--who else?

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ohio State, continuing to annihilate all opposition, retained its No. 1 ranking in college football Monday, recording a near-perfect 347 points from the United Press International 35-member Board of Coaches.

The Buckeyes were named first on 33 ballots, second on one and third on another to easily out-distance second place Texas, which received the remaining two first place votes and amassed 292 points.

Southern California retained its No. 3 ranking and Penn State held on for No. 4. Missouri vaulted past Arkansas for the No. 5 spot. Tennessee advanced to No. 7 and UCLA, Louisiana State and Notre Dame rounded out the top 10.

Oklahoma fell to 11th, followed by fast-rising Wyoming and Florida. Georgia and Michigan tied for 14th, and Kansas State placed 16th. California and Auburn were deadlocked for 17th and four teams—Purdue, Mississippi, Stanford and Colorado—tied for 19th.

The top-ranked Buckeyes boosted their record to 3-0 by trouncing MSU, 54-21. Texas bounced back from a 14-0 deficit to down arch-rival Oklahoma, ranked eighth last week, 27-17, and Southern Cal needed a last minute field goal from Ron Ayala to down Stanford, 26-24, the fourth victory without defeat for both Texas and Southern Cal.

Lightning red

A torrential rain storm punctuated by lightning flashes and thunder claps struck MSU's grid camp in the middle of practice.

Head Coach Duffy Daugherty watched the pyrotechnics for a bit and then observed to bystanders.

"If this ever happens during a game, I've got a job for my assistant coaches. They're to form a big circle around me and hold up lightning rods."

MET'S miracle worker

Met centerfielder Tommie Agee makes the first of two brilliant catches that robbed Baltimore of at least five runs. Here, he victimized the O's Elrod Hendricks with this back-hand grab in the second inning. AP Wirephoto

Agee stars in Met victory

NEW YORK (UPI) — Centerfielder Tommie Agee led off the third game of the World Series with a homer and then electrified the celebrity-studded crowd with two of the greatest clutch catches in Series history Tuesday as the New York Mets amazed the Baltimore Orioles, 5-0.

Rookie Gary Gentry, who hit a two-run double in the second inning, and Nolan Ryan stifled the Orioles on four hits, but the spectacular catches by Agee, with two on in the fourth and the bases loaded in the seventh, cut off at least five runs and saved the game.

The Mets now hold a 2-1 edge in the Series and have their two aces, Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman, ready to go in the fourth and fifth games of the series before their home fans at Shea Stadium today and Thursday. The Orioles will counter with Mike Cuellar and Dave McNally.

The game, the first series contest played in New York since 1964 and the first ever at Shea Stadium, attracted a sellout crowd of 56,335 on a gray, overcast afternoon.

With two on and two out in the fourth, Oriole catcher Ellie Hendricks hit a drive to deep left center that looked like it was going over Agee's head. But the fleet 27-year-old outfielder raced at top speed and reached out and snared the ball in the top of his glove's webbing at the 396-foot mark before hitting the wall.

That catch was memorable, but the second one was more fantastic. With the bases loaded and two out in the seventh, Paul Blair hit a shot to right center that would have normally cleared the bases.

Agee ran to the edge of the outfield grass and dove when he hit the outfield track in front of the fence. Skidding along the ground on his stomach, he kept his glove up and snagged the ball.

The Mets, who were 16-5 underdogs after losing the first game in Baltimore, now are playing the same kind of "incredible" ball they displayed all season.

Agee, who led the Mets in homers and RBI's with 26 and 76, hit Palmer's fourth pitch for a homer for his only hit in the series. He also walked twice in five trips in this game.

Gentry, who's 23 and had a 13-12 record during the regular season, came up with two on and two out in the second.

Gentry hit only .081 during the regular season and had knocked in only one run all season long. But he slammed Palmer's first pitch for a double that knocked in Jerry Grote, who had walked with two out, and Bud Harrelson, who singled.

Team spirit is decisive, claims Spartan booters

By PAM BOYCE
State News Sports Writer

Team spirit will play a major role in the MSU soccer team's game Friday, two returning lettermen claim.

In their next-to-the-last home appearance, the MSU booters must give an impressive performance in order to gain back the No. 1 national ranking which they held up until two weeks ago. Both Barry Tiemann and Ernie Tuchscherer say that the team's mental attitude will be all-important in the game with Akron, who last year broke the Spartan's 33-game unbeaten streak.

Although 5-0-1, the Spartans have not looked as sharp against opponents as their 6-0, 8-0 and 12-0 scores may indicate. Coach Gene Kenney has been disappointed in the numerous scoring opportunities his team has failed to capitalize on.

Tiemann and Tuchscherer, both seniors who were injured last year, say that team spirit has a lot to do with performance.

"We haven't had a really good game yet," Tiemann says. "It's mostly mental-not getting up for the games. We knew we had some easy games."

"We've been looking a little bit slow and lackadaisical," Tuchscherer admits. "The players have not been getting into the open. The players with the ball have not been helping each other out. The guys have not been pushing each other in practice."

The Spartans' captain, a 1967 All-America from Chicago, claims that from the looks of the team the past few days, things are definitely going to be different.

"With the enthusiasm we have now, everyone is going to see a completely different ball club on Friday," Tuchscherer claims. "The team spirit is really high. Everyone remembers last year's loss to Akron and they're looking forward to meeting them at home."

Tuchscherer says that although this week's game is preceding the big perennial battle with St. Louis next week, the team is not looking ahead.

"This is our first major test and we're ready for it," he says. "We've got to show we've got the material to be No. 1."

Tight end Jim Mandich gives U-M 'goal power'

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

It was early in the fourth quarter of the 1968 MSU-Michigan game.

MSU, seeking its fourth straight win, was protecting a 14-13 lead, but U-M had the ball. Quarterback Dennis Brown was scrambling and looking for a receiver when he spotted a tall, maize and blue figure near the sidelines.

Brown arched the ball toward Jim Mandich and the Wolverine tight end gathered it in and raced into the end zone to complete a 53-yard touchdown pass play that broke the Spartans' back as Michigan went on to record a 28-14 win.

The play is typical of Mandich's performances during his career at U-M. He's been breaking team's backs for three years now.

Mandich is starting at tight end for the third successive year at Michigan, and this season he'll likely be first string for another team — the All-American team.

Mandich has all the qualities of the ideal tight end. He's big and strong (6 foot 3 inches, 220 pounds), a fine receiver and, although it's often unnoticed by the fans, he's an excellent blocker.

For the last two years, Jack Clancy and then Ron Johnson captured most of the attention of U-M football followers. This season, quarterback Don Moorhead and halfback Glen Doughty have been the headline grabbers, but Mandich has been as potent an offensive weapon as any of them over these three years.

Mandich was a prep All-American at Solon, Ohio, and was heralded as a future collegiate All-American before he played a game in a U-M uniform.

As a sophomore, Mandich caught 26 passes for 256 yards, while Clancy was U-M's primary receiver.

Last season, Mandich became the No. 1 target for the Michigan quarterbacks, catching 43 passes for 576 yards and three touchdowns. His performance earned him All-Big Ten honors. In three games this season, Mandich has already hauled in 20 passes, covering 262 yards and accounting for two touchdowns.

Mandich, who has unusual quickness for his size, had his best pass-receiving day in a U-M uniform last Saturday as the Wolverines upset Purdue, 31-20. The U-M star caught 10 passes for 156 yards and earned Midwest Lineman of the Week honors.

Seven of the catches came in the first quarter as Michigan built up a 14-0 lead.

"He's a very reliable receiver," Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler said after the game.

"Several of the passes he caught, he wasn't the primary receiver on," Schembechler added.

Mandich will have left his mark in the U-M record book when he departs the Michigan campus this June for a probable pro career.

He already is second on the Wolverine's all-time reception list with 89 career pass catches.

Mandich's 1,094 yards gained puts him in third place in that category in Wolverine history.

Pistons lose player as Army takes Mix

DETROIT (UPI)—The forward-poor Detroit Pistons found themselves minus one more Monday when they learned rookie Steve Mix has been ordered to report for four and one-half months of active duty in the Army reserves beginning Thursday. The hefty 6-foot-7 Mix shattered nearly all scoring and rebounding records at Toledo University and, despite being a fifth draft choice, had won himself a job during training camp.

Nation observes moratorium

members throughout the nation to fly flags in what one spokesman called "a silent counteraction against the Vietnam moratorium observance and in support of the President in the Parispeace talks."

The Jewish War Veterans announced that organization would take no part in the moratorium observance.

Names of war dead will be read at Trinity Church, at the head of Wall Street, where brokers, traders and financiers are expected to take part in a noon memorial service. Names also will be read in Geneseo, Oneonta and Rochester, N.Y., and in Denver and at the University of South Carolina.

Demonstrators among 4,278 students at St. Mary's University in San Antonio, Tex., plan a minute of silence to honor the Vietnam war dead. A tree-planting will highlight the moratorium at York College in New York City.

A spokesman for the John Birch Society, said: "We feel the moratorium is an act of treason and do not plan to give the people behind it any additional attention by staging any demonstrations or activities of our own. We feel our activity over the last few months and years has had enough impact to neutralize this sorrowful event."

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller planned to spend the day at his

New York office, taking no part in the moratorium. However, he has said he upholds the rights of dissent by individuals.

However, Mayor John V. Lindsay has proclaimed Wednesday a day of observance in New York City, with all flags on city buildings to be flown at half-staff. He urged churches to toll their bells hourly. City Hall was to be draped in black and violet bunting.

One of Lindsay's opponents in the mayoral race, Democrat Mario Procaccino, did not directly denounce the proclamation, but renewed his charge that Lindsay was trying to use the war as a cover for his own failures in solving city problems.

The other opponent, Republican State Sen. John Marchi, did denounce the proclamation and also criticized Procaccino's earlier statement that the war was a "colossal mistake."

Students were expected to stay away from high schools and colleges in many areas of the nation for the day. New York City's 900 public schools will be open, but moratorium backers expect many students to be absent. A city-wide rally of high school students is scheduled for 1 p.m. on the Central Park Mall.

Cancellation of classes was ordered at the University of Hawaii, and the Young Americans For Freedom failed in a federal court effort to reverse the decision.

Officials in Pittsburgh said any students demonstrating in public school buildings there will face suspension for up to three days, as

SYNOD OF BISHOPS

Cardinals describe papacy as 'absolute monarchy'

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope

Paul VI listened silently Tuesday

as one leading liberal cardinal described the papacy as an "absolute monarchy" and another called for the pontiff to consult more with his bishops.

Other prelates at the Roman Catholic synod of bishops jumped to the Pope's defense.

Pope Paul called the 146

bishops to the two-week assembly to discuss collegiality, the sharing of authority between the Pope and his bishops.

Joseph Leo Cardinal Suenens

of Belgium, one of the Church's leading liberal spokesmen, charged that the synod agenda,

prepared under the Pope's direction, "extols the primacy of the Roman pontiff in such a way as to make bishops look like courtiers.

"Some insist too much on the aspect of primacy," the cardinal said. "It is a serious fact that this theology, which can be called theology of absolute monarchy, is the only one which lays beneath the articles which daily appear in l'Osservatore

Romano, the Vatican

newspaper."

Justin Cardinal Darmajuwono

of Indonesia warned that if the Pope does not consult intimately with his bishops, "I am afraid what happened after the encyclical 'Humanae Vitae' will happen again." He was referring to the dispute and open disobedience that rocked the Church year after Pope Paul banned the use of artificial birth control.

Cardinal Darmajuwono said:

"Many lay Catholics and all the priests know that many bishops have not accepted fully the doctrine which lay at the basis of the encyclical."

But Archbishop Raymond

Tchidimbo of Guinea replied that "only the lack of information or bad faith" could lead one to say that the pontiff issues encyclicals without consulting bishops and priests.

Echoing African prelates who spoke Monday, the archbishop said only a strong papacy can protect bishops in underdeveloped countries from what would be "spiritual imperialism" of national hierarchies in industrialized countries.

Syria-based Patriarch Maximos

Cardinal Hakim of Antioch said the Church should revert to the early times of Christianity when

"only the most important decisions were taken by the Roman pontiff." The general rule was to leave decisions up to local bishops, he said. The patriarch called for a

"restoration of the rights of the bishops, who were the original title-holders of them."

Meanwhile, half a mile from where the prelates spoke, a

"shadow synod" of 200 rebel

European priests proposed replacing the Pope-appointed

Curia --the Vatican's administrative organ--with an organization patterned after the United Nations.

Cardinals should be abolished, the rebel priests said, and all bishops should elect the Pope for fixed terms. They suggested that the Pope's office be similar to that of a U.N.

secretary-general.

Terence Cardinal Cooke of New York, before departing for a synod of bishops in Rome, asked that the city's Catholics make Wednesday a day of special prayers for peace. The executive board of the National Federation of Priests' Council urged Roman Catholic clergy throughout the nation to support the moratorium.

Support came also from leaders of the 2.5 million-member United Church of Christ, who called upon President Nixon to "listen carefully to these voices."

Moratorium Day services will be conducted by three rabbis at Temple Emanu-El in New York, the largest Jewish house of worship in the world.

The Episcopal bishop of Puerto Rico, the Rt. Rev. Francisco Reu Froylan, announced he was joining a group of seminary students and teachers there to observe the moratorium.

American students at Loyola University in Rome planned a boycott of classes and a moratorium fast, and a group of students of the American College in Paris said they would deliver an antiwar petition to the American Embassy there.

A U.S. Embassy official in London said a polite note had been received from a small group of students at the American High School in the British capital, asking permission to deliver an antiwar petition. They were invited to do so.

Collins moves closer to coed murder trial

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — John Norman Collins moved closer to trial Tuesday for the murder of a pretty coed after a judge denied defense motions to throw out arrest and search warrants as illegal. The rulings came after dramatic testimony from the arresting officer that five other girls turned down motorcycle rides from Collins just before the victim, Karen Sue Beineman, allegedly hopped on his bike and rode to her death.

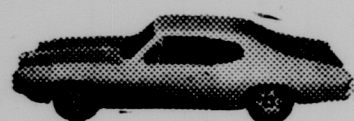

Collins, a 22-year-old senior at Eastern Michigan University in nearby Ypsilanti, is accused of strangling Miss Beineman July 23 at the home of his uncle, a State Police officer, while the family was away on vacation.

Circuit Judge John W. Conlin ruled there was "reasonable cause" for the arrest and the issuance of the search warrants.

Conlin set Oct. 22 for the next hearing, at which time chief Defense Attorney Richard W. Ryan is expected to ask that a trial site be picked far removed from the Ann Arbor - Ypsilanti area.
