Perjury action requested in Army graft testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Justice Dept. will be asked to consider perjury action against Maj. Gen. Carl C. Turner for his testimony before a Senate Investigations subcommittee, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., announced Wednesday.

"Perjury was committed in these hearings," Ribicoff said as he outlined several direct conflicts in testimony of Turner, the Army's former provost general, and top-ranking police officials of Chicago and Kansas City.

Turner testified he received hundreds of confiscated firearms from the two departments with the understanding that they were for his own use and he could dispose of them as he saw fit.

The Kansas City and Chicago police chiefs denied Turner's account and said they would never have given him the guns if they knew he intended to sell some of them.

Ribicoff also said he will call Gen. Harold K. Johnson, former Army Chief of Staff, to the witness stand to clear up Turner's account of a 1967 investigation into the affairs of William O. Wooldridge, then sergeant major of the Army.

Turner testified earlier Wednesday he never white-washed a criminal probe of Wooldridge.

Turner, who said his decisions in the Wooldridge case were just a few of thousands he had to make, testified he had complete confidence that a background investigation would not have uncovered any wrongdoing by Wooldridge.

He attributed to Army jealousy all allegations that Wooldridge was a leader in a conspiracy of sergeants to loot the non-commissioned officers clubs they ran. "My decision to remove Wooldridge's name from an investigation at Ft. Benning, Ga., was just and based on the best interest of the Army," Turner testified.

Turner told the subcommittee he was not prepared to refute testimony of subordinates when he served as provost marshal general. But he said he does not agree with all their conclusions.

The subordinates testified that Turner did nothing when they told him they had strong indications that a group of senior sergeants suspected of stealing club funds in Augsburg, Germany were under suspicion for similar illegal activities at Ft. Benning.

Earlier, three Kansas City police officers said they would not have released confiscated weapons to Turner had they known he intended to sell them for private profit.

Scott asks cease-fire; Pentagon rejects idea

WASHINGTON (AP)--Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott, R. Penn., proposed Wednesday that the United States unilaterally proclaim a cease-fire in Vietnam, but the Pentagon rejected the idea.

Secretary of Defense, Melvin Laird declared Defense Dept. opposition unless the North Vietnamese agreed in advance to stop shooting, too.

Laird said the Pentagon does not believe a cease-fire, without some assurance the enemy would observe it, would be a successful approach.

Scott said he hopes President Nixon will set a date on which American forces will stop shooting unless attacked.

Scott, the administration's chief spokesman on the Senate floor, said he was not signaling any White House intention.

"This is not a trial balloon for the President," Scott said, "it's a personal hope."

But Scott's expression of that hope, for a course long advocated by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, was certain to heighten speculation that Nixon plans some such dramatic move in his Nov. 3 Vietnam report to the nation.

Scott said he was speculating himself. "I wouldn't think anything could happen of that kind before Nov. 3," he said.

Laird, who stipulated that he not be named, cautioned against speculation on what Nixon will say in his speech 10 days hence.

Both Scott and Mansfield said the administration's new battlefield policy of protective reaction represents a major step toward a cease-fire.

Under that policy, Mansfield said, U.S. troops fire only to forestall enemy attack.

"This is certainly a far cry from the tactics of maximum pressure, and search and destroy," Mansfield said, "and to me is an indication that the President is moving toward a cease-fire and stand-fast policy."

Laird first used the term "protective reaction" to describe authority U.S.

commanders have been given in conducting border area attacks as a means of defending their positions. He said, for example, that U.S. troops were allowed to move into the edge of Laos to ferret out the enemy while under heavy attack.

"That was protective reaction," Laird said. "It does not mean we are just going to stand still and be fired upon."

Said Scott:

"I think the time has come to move from protective reaction to an announcement that on a certain date, we will stop firing, and if we are not fired on, then a cease-fire will occur."

The Pennsylvania senator said that amounts to unilateral initiation of a cease-fire.

Council acts for legitimacy in government

A special session of the Academic Council Wednesday passed a motion making it mandatory for student representatives on major policy-making groups to be elected by the body of students they represent.

The motion presented by C. L. Winder of the Advisory Committee of the College of Social Science stated that since faculty members are elected to serve in the Academic Council and on major standing committees:

"The same principles should be followed in the case of students. In this way, students involved in governance would have legitimacy based on election."

The Advisory Committee said that it hoped such procedures would insure the possibility of alternative points of view being fully represented on the major policy-making committees.

In other action, the council voted against the adoption of the third recommendation from the Massey Report, which would have appointed the Educational Policies Committee to prepare a report to the council on whether credit would be given to students for participation in academic governance.

Erwin P. Bettinghouse, a member of the Massey committee, said that the "University is currently giving such credit in the College of Education, but I do think that this should be studied in depth."

The motion was defeated by the council on the basis that since such programs do exist now, individual colleges and departments could best decide if they wanted such a program.

The council will meet in special session until final action is taken on the Report on Student Participation in Academic Governance.

The next meeting of the council is scheduled for 3:15 p.m. Monday.

Paul reports he still lives despite rumor

LONDON (AP) -- "I am alive and well and unconcerned about the rumors of my death," Beatle Paul McCartney says. "But if I were dead, I would be the last to know."

At least, that's what the Beatles' business organization, Apple, said he said. The millionaire pop musician was on a motoring tour somewhere in England with his wife, two children and a dog and refused to let it be known where he could be found.

Apple said Wednesday that McCartney telephoned the denial of his demise to London Tuesday night.

"Paul refuses to say anything more than that," said Derek Taylor, Apple's chief spokesman. "Even if he appeared in public just to deny rumors, it wouldn't do any good. If people want to believe he's dead, then they'll believe it -- the truth is not as all persuasive."

Great Issues presents Abernathy lecture Friday

Ralph Abernathy, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) will give a Great Issues lecture at 3 p.m. Friday in the MSU Auditorium.

Brian Grabert of the ASMSU Great Issues committee, said that sometime before Friday the House of Representatives and Senate are expected to be presented with a resolution commending Abernathy for his contribution to the civil rights movement.

If the legislature approves the resolution, Rep. Jackie Vaughn, D-Detroit, will present Abernathy with the commendation at the lecture, Grabert said.

Abernathy worked closely with the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., organizing the SCLC in 1957, and in several civil rights campaigns, including the Montgomery bus boycott, voter registration drives and sit-ins.

Abernathy and Dr. King were jailed together 17 times for various charges of civil disobedience.

Abernathy is presently the pastor of the West Hunter Street Baptist Church in Atlanta. His major project since assuming the SCLC presidency was the Poor People's campaign in Washington, D.C.

Nixon's foreign aid bid meets House opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The House Foreign Affairs Committee appears poised to chop a hefty first chunk off President Nixon's initial bid for $2.6 billion in foreign aid.

Just what figure the committee will come up with in its version of the annual authorization bill hasn't been firmed up yet, but members have talked about a range from $1.9 billion to $2.2 billion.

And there are indications more rough water and deeper cuts lie ahead for the always embattled global assistance program which Congress slashed below $2 billion in 1968--the lowest figure since the program started.

The unit has held 26 days of hearings and has worked behind closed doors for 15 other sessions to draw up its version of the program for the year that started last July 1.

Chairman Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., has set his sights on winding up the drafting Thursday but may not be able to meet that goal.

The authorization bill, which sets spending ceilings for the stormy program wound up at the $1.97-billion level last year after a hectic ride through Congress which slashed President Lyndon B. Johnson's request by about $1 billion.

Then the actual appropriations to finance foreign aid dipped even further, winding up at $1,755,600,000.

In his final budget, Johnson asked Congress last January to authorize $2,725,800,000 for the current fiscal year. Nixon trimmed this back to $2.6 billion.

The administration's proposal would include $2.2 billion for U.S. economic assistance to developing countries, $375 million for military aid and $75 million to help start a new public corporation

(please turn to page 10)

The New York Stock Exchange reported its biggest gain in heavy trading in six months, despite the 11.1 point increase in the cost of living index since the start of 1968. The new trend is based on hopes of a Vietnam pullout and government restraints on inflation.

INFANT MSU

A far cry from 1969's expansive University

By ROSANNE BAIME
State News Staff Writer

Any present Spartans venturing back to the MSU campus in 1857 -- then the brand-new home of Michigan Agricultural College (MAC) -- would find a lot of things changed. Or not yet changed.

Cowles House, for example, would not be in the middle of West Circle. Instead, there were three faculty houses for five professors and an "assistant" listed as the college's academic staff.

Where Old College Field is now was the University brickyard, where the bricks that built the University were made.

But anyone on their way out to the present site of Wells Hall would be in trouble. Instead of finding a lecture in Math 113, he would end up in the middle of a war council, for in 1857 the south banks of the Red Cedar housed an Indian encampment.

And 1857 was MAC's first year of business as America's first land-grant college. Milton Baron, director of campus park and planning, said that a lot of things have changed in East Lansing since the school first opened.

"The campus, as it was considered then, was 677 acres," Baron said.

"Most of it was wooded area, with a lot of marshland. Beal Botanical Gardens was a stream which has since gone underground, and there was a pond where the parking lot behind Morrill Hall is now located."

Campus buildings were few. In addition to the faculty buildings were a dormitory, a classroom building, a barn where Olds Hall is now standing and a couple of unidentified cabins.

The rest was trees.

The 63 students attending MAC that year had a hard journey getting there, Baron observed. Modern transportation was not available to facilitate travel and the railroad just did not stop here, yet. The only way students could get to campus was to ride over plank roads where Michigan Avenue and East Grand River Blvd. now run.

Plank roads, Baron explained, were practical means for clearing out forests. Cut the trees down, split the logs, lay them side-by-side with the rounded sides up and add a little earth fill.

Not exactly the best surface in the modern world, especially for long rides in a buckboard wagon.

Pope Paul criticizes bishops' plan for reform

VATICAN CITY (AP)—While the world bishops' synod moved toward recommending sweeping reforms in the use of papal power, Pope Paul VI said Wednesday he would accept only moderate and gradual change in the Roman Catholic Church.

The Pope criticized what he called a "hurried need for revision" and said the church cannot be "changed at will." He said the crisis in the church boiled down to a "lack of confidence-confidence in the church as it is."

While the Pope spoke at his weekly general audience in St. Peter's Basilica, the synod in a hall of the adjoining Apostolic Palace heard new requests that the pontiff seek the advice of his bishops more often.

Belgian Cardinal Leo Suenens, an advocate of church reform, said one of the Pope's recent decrees contained "some incorrect sentences from the doctrinal point of view."

The cardinal also brought up before the synod a suggestion that bishops, as well as cardinals, be allowed to elect popes.

Pope Paul's remarks apparently were intended to warn against expecting radical and immediate reforms to come out of the synod or out of the general ferment in the church.

In Wednesday's session, the 146-member synod assigned a special commission to draw up specific proposals for applying the doctrine of collegiality, or sharing by bishops, in papal decision making.

A key proposal that already has won nine subcommissions' majority support asks the Pope to consult with all bishops before issuing major rulings. Pope Paul's encyclicals on birth control and on priestly celibacy were cited by synod members as cases in which he should have sought advice beyond the Roman Curia.

Another proposal asks the Pope to convoke a synod at least every two years on an agenda prepared through consultation with the bishops.

These and all other recommendations which may be included in the final document of the 12-day-old synod must be approved by Pope Paul to become effective.

Speaking to the general audience, Pope Paul acknowledged that the synod was aimed at "decentralizing" hierarchical power now vested in the Holy See. But he warned that hasty change in the church would lead to "corrosive self-criticism and even self-injury."

The crux of synod's tentative proposals is a shift in influence on the Pope from the conservative Roman curia to the bishops in the field.

One of Wednesday's speakers at the synod, Patriarch Maxim Hakim of Antioch, suggested the Pope should create a 20-member new body of special advisers, a kind of crown council, to include bishops from around the world.

Brandt's new government delays revaluation decision

BONN, Germany (AP)—West Germany's new government under Social Democrat

Chancellor Willy Brandt was sworn into office Wednesday and quickly got down to work.

First task of Brandt's coalition of Social Democrats and Free Democrats was to round off the staffing of 15 ministries by assigning a parliamentary secretary to assist each Cabinet minister.

Meeting in the Chancellery, the minister did not touch on one of the key issues facing the new government -- upward revaluation of the German mark.

Some experts reckon on an upward shift of between 6.5 and 8 per cent to bring the German currency up to its true value.

The Brandt Cabinet, which replaced the old coalition of Christian Democrats and Social Democrats under Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger, also named some top officials.

Conrad Ahlers was given the post of chief government spokesman. Former journalist Ahlers had been deputy to Guenter Diehl, head of the federal press office under Kiesinger.

Presenting the new Cabinet minister, President Gustav Heinemann noted that it was the first time in almost 40 years Social Democrats were in charge of a German government.

Most West German newspapers remarked that in spite of its narrow majority of 12 Parliamentary votes, the Brandt government was not likely to be brought down.

The papers also agreed that Brandt's elevation spelled the final end of the Adenauer era of postwar reconstruction.

The late Konrad Adenauer launched the federal republic in 1949, and until Brandt took office Tuesday, Adenauer's and Kiesinger's Christian Democrats had dominated the government.

The Christian Democratic press service pledged that the Christian Democrats are ready to cooperate in foreign policy "if Brandt keeps his word to maintain the continuity of foreign policy conducted to date."

Arrangements made for Washington march

Anyone interested in attending the Nov. 15 "March Against Death" in Washington, D.C., may sign up for transportation at the New Community office, 326 Student Services Bldg., or call 355-8266.

Students who plan to drive to Washington are urged to contact that number to arrange car pools.

Cost of the bus trip will be $20. The bus will leave Friday night and return Saturday evening.

An art sale will be held Saturday and Sunday in the Union Lounge, sponsored by the Student Faculty Coalition to End the War in Vietnam, to raise money for the march.

Funds from the sale of paintings, sculpture, drawings, prints, ceramics, jewelry and possibly photographs will be used to help defray the cost of transportation to Washington.

To donate works to the sale, contact Arline De Blase, 351-4654 before Friday.

PURITAN INSIGHT

Religion lectures close

By CARL P. OLSON
State News Staff Writer

A lecture series, aimed at giving MSU's American Thought and Language students a better understanding of the Puritan religion, concludes tonight.

The series, "The Enigma of Puritanism," is sponsored by the University Reformed Church of East Lansing and the Geneva

Club of the Christian Reformed Church.

John Gerstner, professor of church history at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, lectures in the series. His first lecture, "The Essence of Puritan Religion," Tuesday evening at Akers and Wonders Halls, attracted more than 300 students.

Gerstner put forth the foundation of Puritan thought and outlined the history of the religious movement which swept England and the Eastern United States in the 16th, 17th and 18th Centuries.

Tonight's conclusion will be "The Impact of Calvinism on Democracy" at 7 p.m. in Akers Hall and 9 p.m. in Wonders Hall Kiva.

Mark Twain, Gerstner said, may of had an answer for the Puritan thought when he said, "It's not the things you don't understand that bother you, it's the things you understand . . ."

International News

Prince Souvanna Phouma of Laos said Wednesday he has a "tacit agreement" with the United States that Washington will provide aid to defend Laotian independence, neutrality and territorial integrity.

But the Laotian premier denied that the United States has "infantry" in Laos, adding "there are only Laotian soldiers getting themselves killed, not American soldiers."

Souvanna Phouma said in an interview that the United States "is only doing its duty by giving us satisfaction." He just arrived in Paris from Washington on a mission to obtain an increase in American aid.

The basis for U.S. aid to Laos, he said, was an unwritten agreement made at the U.S. embassy in Vientiane in 1964 after the Soviet Union had refused to supply his troops with further munitions.

New fighting raged on old battlefields in the central highlands and around Tay Ninh City, U.S. Command spokesmen said Wednesday.

There was no pattern in the string of fights to indicate a new enemy offensive, but both areas—scenes of some of the war's major battles—had been relatively quiet during the past four months.

United States and government troops killed 75 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong, while suffering one killed and four wounded, the spokesman said.

Four bombs exploded in residential Haifa, Israel, Wednesday killing one Israeli civilian and wounding 12 in the worst day of terror the port city has known since the 1948-49 Arab-Israeli war.

A seven-month-old baby girl was trapped under masonry for 40 minutes before being rescued and treated.

Three bombs exploded in the early morning, and the fourth went off about evening.

With a warning that the people of Chile will not tolerate military coups, President Eduardo Frei said Wednesday the country's crisis had been overcome and that rebel soldiers would be tried by military tribunals.

Frei told his people during a broadcast speech that the country would remain under a "state of siege" until normality returns. He said he had ordered a full investigation into the gunfire wounding of 14 civilians Tuesday night.

The president made no mention that he had bowed to at least one of the demands made by the rebels, headed by Gen. Roberto Viaux, who surrendered at daybreak and is under house arrest.

National News

It cost nearly a nickel more a pound to bring home the bacon last month and other price hikes added fuel to the nation's worst inflation in some 20 years, the government said Wednesday.

Living costs rose one-half of 1 per cent in September, pushing the Federal Consumer Price Index to 129.3. That means it cost $12.93 last month for the goods and services that cost $10 ten years ago.

Bacon led the parade of food price hikes, climbing from 90.9 cents to 95.8 cents a pound, the Labor Dept. said. Grocery prices on the average remained unchanged instead of showing the usual September drop, and higher restaurant charges boosted over-all food prices one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Michigan News

Northern Michigan University presented Care Wednesday with a check for $1,324.30, the amount the school saved as a result of many students not eating on the day of the Vietnam War Moratorium.

Leo Van Tassel, vice president of business and finance at the university, said the money "represents the amount donated by students living in residence halls who did not eat during the lunch or dinner hours a week ago today."

He said 3,300 students participated in the demonstration by missing at least one meal that day.

The Michigan Civil Rights Commission Tuesday accused General Motors Corp.'s central office in Detroit of unlawfully discriminating against two black women who were denied employment.

The commission said Mrs. Willie I. Frazier of Highland Park and Mrs. Beverly J. Harris, Detroit, were denied employment because of their race. The charges ask that GM pay both women the sum of money they would have earned if they had been hired in January 1966, less any wages they might have earned on other jobs since they applied at GM.

A hearing was to be scheduled.

ASMSU requests silent tribute

By WHIT SIBLEY
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Board passed a motion Tuesday evening asking MSU Athletic Director Biggie Munn to authorize a moment of silence before the playing of the National Anthem at the Nov. 15, MSU-Minnesota football game.

The motion requested that the audience "be asked to observe a moment of silent tribute to those Americans who have been asked to sacrifice their lives in the Vietnam conflict, and to engage in silent prayer for peace in Southeast Asia and across the globe."

The motion was passed unanimously by all voting members present. Pan-Hellenic Council Representative, Ann Konde was absent.

In further action, the board voted to offer its mimeographing, silk-screening and office services to the Student Faculty Coalition to End the War Now, in connection with the Coalition's Nov. 14 plans for the march on Washington.

Chuck Stockwell, the coalition representative who appeared before the board, reported that the coalition has currently reserved 10 buses for the trip to Washington and is trying to get 10 more.

He said that if the coalition receives confirmation of the 20 buses, there will be transportation facilities for 400 people. The cost of a round trip ticket will be $25.

He said that the buses will leave MSU Friday, Nov. 14, between 5 and 7 p.m. and will arrive in Washington Saturday, Nov. 15 at 9 a.m. The return trip will begin Saturday evening.

A motion for official financial support of the coalition will be studied for another week and decided at next Tuesday's meeting.

The board also allocated up to $50 to the New Community Gas Co-Op program plan to reduce the cost of driving by leasing a gas station and selling gas at a 6 cent per gallon discount. The New Community will sell memberships to those who are interested in the project, at an estimated cost of $6.

Employees will be hired from the co-op membership.

The allocated money will be used for a publicity campaign and for office work.

Board vice chairman Chuck Mostov later presented ASMSU's "Gold Star Award" to Rep. Phillip O. Pittenger for his "well-timed administrative house cleaning."

The award, which is given in the same vein as Rowan and Martin's "Fickle Finger of Fate" award, was given in reference to Pittenger's firing of Mike O'Laughlin, Pontiac senior, from his asst. postmaster's position. O'Laughlin said he was fired because of his participation in last week's Vietnam moratorium march.

Cabinet president Paul Graf announced that he had heard there was ticket scalping in connection with the "Blood, Sweat and Tears" concert. It was suggested that, in the future, a limit should be set to the number of tickets each person could purchase.

Senior member-at-large Allen Mintzer, suggested a four-ticket purchase limit for upcoming programs.

The board voted to divide Pop Entertainment profits as follows:

—Whenever the Special Projects Reserve Fund balance is below $15,000, 80 per cent of the profit shall go to the reserve fund and 20 per cent to the ASMSU Loan Fund.

—When the Reserve Fund balance is $15,000, 80 per cent of the profit shall go to the General Fund and 20 per cent to the Loan Fund.

—When the Reserve Fund balance is $15,000 and the loan fund balance is of sufficient size to cover student loans, as determined by the ASMSU Board, all profits shall go to the General Fund.

The rationale behind the proposal was to increase the amount in the student loan fund.

FIVE TV CALLS

Mystery killer talks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man who identified himself as Zodiac, mystery killer of five persons in the San Francisco Bay area, telephoned a television talk show Wednesday and demanded to speak with one of the participants, attorney Melvin Belli.

"I'll kill" he told the show's host, Jim Dunbar, on KGO-TV's morning feature, unless he could talk with Belli.

He made five telephone calls, each heard live by the television audience between 7 and 8 a.m. He also called San Francisco police at 2 a.m., saying he wanted to speak to Belli or another well-known attorney, F. Lee Bailey.

In all the "talk show" calls, the man talked with Dunbar and Belli. In the fourth call, at 7:33 a.m., the man described bad headaches he said he was suffering.

Suddenly he said, "I'm going to kill them. I'm going to kill all those kids."

In a letter last week to the San Francisco Chronicle, the writer, identified as Zodiac by police handwriting experts, said he planned to make a busload of school children his next victims.

He said he would lay in wait, put a bullet through a bus tire, then pick off the children "as they come bouncing out."

The talk show started at 7 a.m. The first call from "Zodiac" came 10 minutes later, a brief garbled few words. He hung up.

The second call came at 7:20 a.m. The man asked Belli to meet him on the roof of the Fairmont Hotel on Nob Hill.

In a call before 8 a.m., the man told Belli and Dunbar, "I don't want to be hurt."

Both men told the caller he would be cared for, and Belli promised to represent the man as his attorney.

In one conversation, there was discussion of the gas chamber. Belli told the man "no one has gone to the gas chamber in years."

The state's last execution was April 1967.

Belli told the caller at 8:25 a.m. "You want to live, don't you? Well, this is your passport."

The man who called himself Zodiac spoke in a creaky, indistinct, drifting voice.

Police switchboards lit up with dozens of calls.

A police spokesman said: "People are furious . . . people are scared. Nine out of 10 said it was cooked up by somebody as a cheap publicity stunt."

He did not say if police thought it was Zodiac or if attempts were made to trace the calls.

Unravelling the mystery of our Laos involvement

Now that the American casualty figures have consistently declined in the Vietnam war zone, the picture becomes rosy. No, not exactly. According to a few sources, one of which is the New York Times, there is a war going on in Laos and Americans are involved and some have been killed.

To unravel the mystery of Laos, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., has convened a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which will meet for at least one week.

Certain for discussion is Nixon's statement that there are no American "combat troops" in Laos. This may turn out to be a slight understatement.

It has not been exactly heresy that the U.S. Air Force has its B-52s flying raids over the Ho Chi Minh trail in search of the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong. The trail, which originates from Hanoi, continues into Laos and has been used by the North Vietnamese as a food supply and munitions road into South Vietnam.

Reports by the Associated Press and the New York Times also indicate that the B-52s often make unscheduled appearances in other areas of Laos, principally in zones congested with North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao forces.

But in essence, B-52s do not mean "combat troops." To back the President in his contention, Prince Souvanna Phouma traveled to Washington and announced, to no one's surprise, that not one American soldier is present in Laos.

Even with the absence of American "combat troops" in Laos, the United States has broken the Geneva Agreement of 1962. The United States, through the use of cloak-and-dagger intrigues, is joined by North Vietnam and China in this frequently used ritual.

The U.S. involvement in Laos takes on an absurd dimension when one remembers that the United States had been a major co-sponsor of the 1962 agreement which placed Souvanna Phouma as the leader of the neutralist government. Through the past seven years, the CIA and the Agency for International Development (AID) have become enmeshed in the jungles of Laos and have been a source of support for the Souvanna Phouma government.

Looking over the other side of the fence, the North Vietnamese have had their own troubles. The Times has just reported that two leaders in the Royal Lao Army have asserted that North Vietnamese who refuse to answer questions are being tortured. This would, indeed, be embarrassing to the North Vietnamese who have claimed they have no troops in Laos. However, Hanoi leaves its captive forces in the lurch and shirks embarrassment by remaining mute.

The Laotian war is not a by-product of the Vietnamese struggle. The war has never ceased despite the creation of a neutralist regime which met the approval of both the United States and the Soviet Union. The Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese are in control of some areas in the southeastern portion of the small kingdom. Our interdiction efforts in Laos are aimed at ending that occupation.

The subcommittee headed by Symington has its work cut out. Symington has promised that the American people will be informed about our intrigues in Laos, but the hitch is found in his mention of "allowing for legitimate national security interests..." This phrase seems synonymous with government interference in information released to the public.

The findings of the subcommittee may hopefully speed up Nixon's withdrawal plans not only for Vietnam, but for Laos, too. And after Laos, he can begin work on Thailand, Cambodia...

Keeping abreast of the chauvinism issue

The newest word discovered by SDS is "chauvinism" and they really like it a lot—in fact, for want of oppressed classes to fight for, they have decided to undertake a full-blown campaign against "male chauvinism." We think that their argument may have some merit in terms of the oppression of the women of the world.

Consider the bra—the most true to form device of chauvinism that our culture has yet come up with. It should be obvious to anyone who gives the matter any examination that this garment represents an attempt to divide and conquer by the men of the world. We feel that it is the time for undoing this plot—the bra has been a hang-up of American womanhood much too long.

Despite the fact that it has become a foundation of our culture, the brassiere no longer has the snap it used to—though it is not lacking in support. In terms of a historical context, this fell garment is bound up with a sub-conscious attempt on the part of American males to shape and form their mates into niches that they find acceptable.

We feel that it is high time the feminine element of our population broke loose from the straps of male chauvinism and exercised their God-given right to just hang around. It is time to firm up the opposition. Further, it is important for men to remember that their petty drive to surmount women is already snapping back at them—with the rapid expansion in the field of ladies undergarments, a guy does not now know what he is up against.

STEVE ALLEN

No, I didn't watch the ballgame

EDITOR'S NOTE: One week ago Wednesday, State News intern Steve Allen, Louisville, Ky. freshman, got his first taste of college life. He, like numerous other freshmen, was involved in his first anti-war protest. The following is the text of a letter sent to his parents explaining his actions. We offer it as one example for other students who find themselves speechless when it comes to explaining their actions to their parents.

Dear Mom and Dad,
Guess what I did Wednesday?
No, I didn't watch the World Series.
And I didn't attend any classes, either.
I was in a demonstration. I marched with 8,000 other beautiful people, most of them MSU students, on the Michigan Capitol Bldg. We were not complaining about the dormitory cafeteria food service; it was an anti-war demonstration.
I did not smoke any pot.
I did not abuse any policemen.
I simply walked for an hour to show my support of the movement to end the Vietnam war. I finally decided that I, Steven Glen Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Allen, Louisville, Ky., born March 17, 1952, am thoroughly sickened by the senseless killing in Southeast Asia. What did I accomplish?
A hundred plus American men will be killed again this week. A few hundred more South Vietnamese soldiers. Not to mention 25,000 Viet Cong (according to the official Defense Dept. statistics). And, ah yes, quite a few civilians—people who did not ask for a war, but got it anyway.
The North Vietnamese will still accuse the United States of being guilty of every major atrocity committed in the last 25 years at next week's session of the Paris peace talks.
And 29,000 men will still be drafted in October.
No, I will be the first to admit that the Vietnam war will not come to an end as a direct result of what happened Wednesday. However, I do not think anyone really thought it would, but it was a beginning.
Wednesday we let the whole world know that 8,000 students were concerned enough to walk five miles to show their opposition to the Vietnamese war. Many of us, including myself, walked the five miles back and our feet hurt a little when it was all over. But a bullet hurts more; so does napalm.
The battlefield statistics need not be regurgitated. Our current military command seems more interested in officer's clubs and dreaming up casualty figures than attempting to bring the war to a satisfactory, military solution.
And at the conference table? As long as we keep withdrawing 25,000 men every fifth, Shrove Tuesday, do you really think the North Vietnamese are going to get serious? The answer is no.
The White House has finally realized that we cannot win the war and does not want any Americans around then the NLF flag is raised over Saigon. We are going to slowly withdraw, and as we cop-out, more men are going to die.
So why not do the big sell-out right now? Just swallow our pride a little and admit the United States is still not too big to admit it is wrong.
That is why I marched Wednesday.
The people in America have been silent too long about Vietnam. It is easy to sign a petition; it is a little harder to march a few miles to say "You're wrong, Dick."
Maybe U.S. policy is not made in the streets, but "King Richard" should keep in mind the fact that those who were in the streets today will be in the voting booth in 1972.
And right now, not many of them would pull the Republican lever.
Of course the moratorium was no panacea for all that is wrong in America today. If nothing else, though, it made some people think.

A few thousand more people watched Wednesday's march from the windows and sidewalks of Michigan Avenue. Only one person showed openly his contempt of the cause that we were marching for. All of the others either made peace signs or smiled. The 8,000 in the street were not the only people in Lansing that opposed the war.

And what about the 8,000?
Mom and Dad, they were the most beautiful people in the world. There was no rowdiness. The police had nothing else to do but to direct traffic. Whoever had the idea of preparing 2,000 National Guardsmen was definitely out of touch with the people that marched. SDS did not march Wednesday; it was the citizens of the good old U.S.A. that were concerned enough about their country to tell it that it was wrong.

But now what?
Thursday was business as usual for some. For many of us, though, the same charisma that has been so characteristic of 1969 was in the air. Man had landed on the moon. The Mets had won the series. Why not bring the men home from Vietnam?
Nov. 14 we will march again. It will be much colder. It might even rain or snow. But, if 8,000 show up again, we will know that our Wednesday march was not an exercise in futility. Maybe the people in the sidewalks will be in the streets then.

Mandelstamm's expose amusing

To the Editor:

Anyone who has observed one of Allen Mandelstamm's television performances must have found (as I did) his "Point of View" article "exposing" the insidious details of the "Adams-Baker scandal" equally amusing. It seems especially fitting that the article appeared a day after Dr. Adams had re-confirmed his status as a non-candidate and, in the same issue, the announcement of Clifton Wharton as the new MSU president. Indeed, Mandelstamm and certain other members of the University community (including several trustees) who seemed to become increasingly panic-stricken as the Adams movement snowballed, could have, as it turned out, spared themselves the anxiety as well as all the time consumed pouring over those dusty congressional hearing records.

To the Editor:

In the Oct. 10 issue of the State News appeared an article by Bruce Fisher, State News reviewer. The subject of the article was the Mantovani concert of the previous Wednesday. In the fourth paragraph, Mr. Fisher mentions Mantovani's conducting style "from a technical standpoint." I wish to request that the State News publish some type of an article about Mr. Fisher and his qualifications to make a "technical" statement.

DON KOPRIVA

We help make this world interesting

Recently television showed how good it can be.

NBC presented a special 2½ hour show entitled "From Here to the Seventies."

It was not one of those wrap-up-the-decade shows that tries to tell the viewer where he is going or where he has been. Rather, NBC presented different crises in our society by spotlighting newsmen in different arenas which have been battlegrounds of what was once dubbed "The Soaring Sixties."

Places: Selma, Dallas, Glassboro, the Sea of Tranquility, Los Angeles, Memphis, Chicago, Watts, Arlington, Berkeley, Detroit, Saigon, London, Paris, Hanoi, Moscow, Houston and Cape Kennedy. Places. What do they mean to us now?

What influence will these names have on us? Actually, not much. But we are influenced by what happened in these places. Decisions involving the future of man have been made in these places.

The names are unimportant, and NBC brought that across to us; what matters is how we reacted to them.

Dead: Churchill, Tom Dooley, Kennedy, Kennedy, King, Dirksen, Marciana, Cooper, Monroe, Mansfield, Ike, Nehru, Mboya, Tshombe and Hammarskjöld. Dead. And many more.

They still influence us. The gap between death and life is not so distinct. We can hear them yet. We can remember what they said and did. We can remember those who sought a better world and why they wanted it. They are dead, but really we can say, "long may they live." In our hearts, in our inner being, they will not be dead. They will be memories; whether good or bad it matters not. We can treasure the memories and think of what they will mean when we close the door on the 1970's.

The living who come with us, leading us, driving us, urging us, begging us to accept the world we are bringing into the 1970's.

Nixon, McCarthy, Humphrey, Teddy, John Wayne, Dustin Hoffman, Paul Newman, Kosygin, Mitchell, Daley, Mansfield, Paul VI, Nasser, Spiro, Wallace, Hannah, Adams, Milliken, Romney, Ed Sullivan, Doris Day, Dellinger, Carmichael and Rudd.

They are the living and we will follow. We will spit at them. We will laugh and defile them. We will implore. They are the living and they mean something to us in some way. We will rush headlong into 1970.

We, the people of the world, the people of the United States, we will rush in like the fools we are where angels fear to tread. It is our world. It is constantly changing. We must accept that fact.

Yet we must also realize much of what is good with the world. We must reason. We must begin to know that there are two sides to any story.

NBC tried to give both sides. They told it as it happened. It was not a review, as such, but it made us think. It brought back memories. It brought back words.

"Ich bin ein Berliner."
"Ask not what your country can do..."
"To all of you there on the good earth..."

"The Eagle has landed."
"... was killed..."
"Mah fellow Americans..."
"We will bury you."

We cannot forget these things. We cannot forget the past, nor can we change it.

Much like the end to an ancient Irish verse, "May you die in Ireland," NBC thought it appropriate for narrator Paul Newman to mention an ancient Chinese curse:

"May you live in interesting times."
It doesn't sound like a curse at all, but rather like a benediction from the old world to the new.

Because every day the world is new; change is continual. We have no choice but to live in interesting times.

We help make them so.

keep them handy in case Dr. Adams becomes a candidate for governor or something.

Adams' backers commend Wharton

To the Editor:

The committee in charge of the circulation of the petition in support of Walter Adams wishes to express its appreciation to the board of trustees for following the established procedure of the Taylor report, by designating one of the candidates put forward by the All-University Search and Selection Committee.

Our support for Adams was never intended in any way to reflect the opinion that we did not support other candidates; only that the board should have the opportunity to consider the acting president among other candidates for the position. We never advocated that Adams should be selected without the AUSSC's recommendation.

We further believe that Clifton Wharton Jr. has all of the credentials necessary for the position of president of MSU; we wish him well and welcome him to our community of scholars, students and faculty alike.

Defense of academic freedom objective of AAUP members

By BETSY ROACH
State News Staff Writer

A common complaint of the student is that he wants representation and protection of his rights on campus. The university is, after all, his university.

But what about the faculty?

The faculty member, if he so chooses, may join the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP).

Jack Stieber, president of the MSU chapter of the AAUP and director of the School of Labor and Industrial Relations, said that this national organization has as its major objective the "defense of academic freedom."

Stieber placed campus AAUP membership at 400, out of a total of 2,000 faculty members. He said there are members from all the colleges and departments, although membership might be less among the younger faculty, who are newer in the profession.

He said that younger faculty may feel that they are less able to afford the membership dues or may not have had the opportunity to make up their minds with regard to becoming a member.

"The AAUP would be much more influential if it had more members," Stieber said.

Asked of the composition of the membership, Stieber said, "I think we have all groups." He said members range from very conservative to those who are members of the New University Conference (NUC), a faculty organization for those in favor of more rapid change.

He said that AAUP members do not usually vote in groups at meetings because faculty members tend to be individualists.

With regard to tenure, Stieber said, "We believe that tenure is desirable." He said that if a faculty member is to teach freely, he may say unpopular things. "If we are to permit them to function as good teachers, we should protect them in this way. There should be, however, some safeguards," he said.

James R. Anderson, humanities instructor and asst. director of the Honors College, said that in cases of controversial teachers who have not been published much, the AAUP does not help very much.

"I think it's been strong on issues involving academic freedom for people at or near tenure. It doesn't really come to grips with the publish-or-perish issue," he said.

He said that the AAUP has been more concerned with the economic position of faculty than with academic freedom.

Anderson said universities tend to filter out controversial teachers before they reach tenure, often using as a reason that the faculty members did not publish enough.

Anderson, a member of both the AAUP and the NUC, does not have tenure.

He said that the AAUP has not faced serious political questions, and, as a consequence, newer, more radical faculty organizations are being created.

Anderson said that there has been a failure on the part of AAUP to define academic freedom broadly enough. "The universities have provided much of the hardware and rationalizations of a domineering foreign policy," he said.

He added that in this way faculty members have been restricted in their criticisms of American foreign policy.

"The AAUP, by its silence, has helped the universities to become an arm of U.S. foreign policy," Anderson said.

He said there exists an "American version" of truth and freedom. "Truth is not always what a particular nation decides," he said.

Anderson said it is "difficult to find solidly critical and interpretive courses on American foreign policy. Try to get critical courses on American foreign policy out of the MSU Political Science Dept."

Anderson said MSU's chapter of the AAUP is beginning to show "a kind of concern and awakening that was not there in years past," although it seems to be "following rather than leading."

James B. McKee, professor of sociology, said the MSU chapter of the AAUP addresses itself to the major issues of concern.

"Sure, it could be more powerful," he said.

McKee said the AAUP needs more members and should be attractive to a wider range of faculty.

"I'm not now a member," he said. Though he has not been active in the local chapter, McKee was a national member before coming to MSU but has let his membership lapse.

He described the active members of the AAUP as being faculty members who feel strongly about academic rights and other issues of concern to the organization.

"The AAUP is not the only element in faculty politics," McKee said.

He mentioned the NUC, which he said consists largely of faculty members who are younger and more radical.

He said faculty liberals are found most in humanities and the social sciences.

McKee also said more faculty are conservative than most people realize.

John J. Masterson, associate professor of mathematics, said he was a member of the AAUP's executive council for two years and had thought the AAUP was moving in the right direction with regard to such issues as academic freedom.

He mentioned the election for AAUP president for this academic year, during which Stieber was opposed by Charles Larowe, professor of economics. "I very favorably to the election of Dr. Larowe," he said.

"I am no longer convinced that the AAUP is moving in the direction I would hope," Masterson said.

Referring to this year's president and vice president, he said, "I find both of them somewhat conservative."

Masterson said the AAUP does not represent younger faculty as much as it should.

No longer a member of the AAUP, Masterson is a member of the NUC. He is also a member of the Academic Council.

He said the AAUP had looked as if it were beginning to address itself to such serious campus issues as racism on campus, the University and its involvement in the war machine and the University as a social force in general.

"There is an attitude on the part of the faculty in general that treats these things as clichés rather than realistic problems," Masterson said.

Masterson described himself as one of the more conservative members of the NUC.

Faculty Politics:

What do YOUR instructors do after class?

CONSERVATIVE AMBIGUITY

By LINDA LEWIS
State News Staff Writer

Faculty labeling difficult

About the only thing that can be pinned down about conservatism among faculty members at MSU is its ambiguity.

Problems in isolating a conservative or reactionary element in the faculty stem from a built-in aversion to labels, which seem to be a part of academic culture and the inconsistent pattern one person's viewpoints form when applied to separate issues.

Pointing out the "difficult task of defining" conservatism among faculty, T. Clinton Cobb, asst. to the dean of the College of Education, said, "I don't know if I could tell a liberal from a conservative. These terms are hard to make any sense out of when you get down to individuals."

Cobb, who is faculty sponsor of the Young Republicans on campus, said that he did not consider himself either a conservative or a liberal.

"You'd have a hard time putting most faculty members in one camp or the other," he added.

Because they realize the misleading quality inherent in static labels, most faculty members are reluctant to tag colleagues as being conservative.

"So many labels are relative to time, place and issues," Clinton S. Burhans, associate professor of English, commented. "I'd be wary of any faculty members who would single out any other faculty members and label them as conservative."

Most faculty members agree that the Colleges of Arts and Letters and Natural Science tend to be liberal, whereas agriculture and engineering are more conservative.

"This is an essentially conservative faculty. They have always tended to vote Republican," Russell Nye, distinguished professor of English, said.

"However," he continued, "the political leanings of professors are getting increasingly harder to pin down because so many faculty members are relatively new to the campus."

Nye estimated that 60 per cent of the faculty have been at MSU five years or less.

Frank Pinner, professor of political science, noted, "I suppose that the campus atmosphere favors the label 'liberal,' but the general tendency here is not to rock the boat."

Victor Noll, retired professor of education who was on the faculty for 31 years, remarked that there always have been conservatives on the faculty but that they have never established any type of organization. "I do consider myself a conservative, but I have never belonged to an organization so labeled," he said.

Because he voluntarily classifies himself as a conservative, perhaps Noll's views on academic issues reflect the trend of conservative thought on campus.

Noll is definitely against student involvement in the process of appointing faculty members. He also questions the value of student participation in determining tenure.

"Tenure is a touchy area because there are so many factors involved," he said. "Students, typically, don't have the opportunity to be aware of all these factors, and they lack the necessary background and insights."

"I think that the students should have the opportunity to present evaluations of their instructors," he continued, "but the final decision has got to be with the department head and the professor's peers. Students are here today and gone tomorrow."

According to Noll, the function of the University is "to produce educated, useful, productive citizens who will function in a democracy. The University is inevitably involved in society, and its functions are teaching, research and service in the role of a land-grant college."

Robert Ebel, professor of education, who concedes, "I suppose I might be ranked a little right of center although I have never considered myself very conservative," agrees with Noll on the disadvantages students have in the area of appointment and tenure of faculty members.

"There are just some built-in handicaps that are hard to overcome," he said. "Another serious problem is that of making student representatives really represent student opinion."

Ebel, who is a member of the All-University Search and Selection Committee (AUSSC), admitted that student participation in that group was valuable. He said also that he would favor adequate student representation on tenure committees if the students could be properly informed and would have the time to spend.

One educator has said that the academic community has a reputation for its liberal stands on political issues and its rigid conservatism on anything affecting the structure in which its members work, but faculty members at MSU defy attempts to fit them into such a simplistic mold.

Trying to describe the attitudes of his colleagues, John Robinson, instructor in English, commented, "In one sense we're all conservative -- unless we teach culture only in its present form, we're trying to preserve the past."

Issues align interest groups among faculty

By DENISE FORTNER
State News Staff Writer

Hardly any college campus now kindling any kind of world awareness is without factions and interest groups.

Although the most vocal of the University factions are radical students, that oft-forgotten group of the University--the faculty--is not without varying interest groups.

Faculty groups vary as drastically as do student groups.

Acting President Adams said that there are several reasons for factions in the faculty, "some of which obviously overlap."

One grouping is by colleges, Adams said. "On many issues, the different colleges can come to an agreement, but on other issues opposition occurs," Adams said.

Some of the inter-disciplinary conflicts can be attributed to the "old versus the new" or the "insiders versus the new-comers." When a new college is organized, unless there has been growth, the money for that department will have to come from another college. This will naturally set up some kind of resentment between the old and newer colleges, Adams said.

The "generation gap" is also the reason for the split between the older and younger faculty members. This change is reflected in different attitudes toward changes in their particular colleges, i.e. curriculum change.

"The younger faculty tend to identify more closely with graduates and undergraduates. But this varies and there are many exceptions," Adams said.

Other faculty groupings are the organizations like the Black Faculty Organization, New University Conference and the AAUP, which play an active part in University government, the acting president said.

"There are others, however, who feel that the faculty should just teach and leave the administering to the administrators," he said.

The fourth category Adams mentioned includes the ad hoc groups which "spring up on campus over a particular issue."

"They usually are loose-knit organizations which disband as soon as the issue is resolved," he said.

Adams mentioned the ad hoc group which was organized over the Sharma incident and the ad hoc group which was formed to get someone appointed to the permanent position of president as examples.

The influence of a particular faction, Adams said, depends on the issue.

"A group can have fantastic influence. It can force an administration to its knees, and on other issues it can be a complete failure. Part of the effectiveness depends on the leadership and selecting a right issue that commands more support than the mere membership of the organization. You need outsiders to make things go," Adams said.

NUC seeks new areas of educational freedom

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer

New University Conference (NUC)--a new way of education, a new way of governing, a new way of living.

"Our vision is a university in which scientific research rebounds to the benefit and enlightenment of mankind," an NUC brochure explains.

"We believe that social scientists should reject alliance with power and devote not only their sentiments but also their professional skills to the liberation struggles being waged here and abroad."

Revolution is the cornerstone of NUC, a cornerstone laid by participants in the civil rights movement, the student power movement and the peace movement.

In the preamble to its constitution, NUC avows itself to be an "organization of radicals who work in, around, and in spite of institutions of higher education."

"We join all those committed to struggle politically to create a new, American form of socialism and to replace an educational and social system that is an instrument of class, sexual and racial oppression with one that belongs to the people."

At the present time, NUC is one of the prime motivating groups involved in the movement at MSU to end the war in Vietnam. Since its birth in March 1968, NUC has been the most significant aggregation of professors, graduate students and professional employees attempting to propagate radicalism at this University.

Gunter Pfaff, an employee at the Instructional Media Center and a charter member of the MSU chapter of NUC, views his group as one which is striving to create a classless, warless society free of racial and sexual discrimination.

Pfaff said that one of the reasons NUC was formed was to make all people free in mind and body, in theory and reality, and to end the imperialism of the United States.

"People have to speak up," Pfaff said, "or we are going to have a fascist country, if we don't already have one."

Perhaps the most widely publicized activity on this campus which NUC has been involved in was the controversy actuated by the University's refusal to rehire Bertram Garskof, associate professor in psychology last winter.

Garskof, an SDS and Black Panther sympathizer and NUC member, failed to receive a tenured position as the result of what he termed his political affiliations.

Clarence Winder, dean of the College of Social Science, denied Garskof's charges, replying instead, that Garskof had had his tenure withheld as the result of certain academic deficiencies.

Commenting on the Garskof situation and NUC's reaction to it, Pfaff said that Garskof might still be at this University had NUC been a stronger, more cohesive group.

Pfaff said that Garskof was not the only radical faculty member, but he was the most obvious.

"Garskof stuck out like a sore thumb in a very uptight department," Pfaff said, in speaking of the clannishness of the MSU College of Social Science.

Organic learning, a concept which Garskof tried to initiate at MSU, correlates closely with the NUC philosophy of freedom and revolution.

This theory implies that the student brings something valuable to a university classroom which can be verbalized in the form of a question. By implementing this system in the form of discussion, as opposed to lectures, a situation will hopefully develop which will produce a dynamic transfer of knowledge between individuals. It is just such a transfer which NUC feels is necessary if a worthwhile America is ever to develop.

Men of N. Wonders to act against MSU Bookstore

The North Wonders General Council passed a resolution Tuesday night to take action against the MSU Bookstore in the International Center.

The resolution states the men of Wonders are opposed to the irregular, monopolistic practices of the bookstore and the overpricing of new and old books.

"We hope through this resolution to bring attention to the problem," Harold Buckner, sophomore, president of North Wonders, said.

The resolution was raised after the council saw no action taken since the original complaint was brought up.

Buckner is going to present the resolution to the Men's Halls Association (MHA). "From MHA, we hope the issue will be brought back to ASMSU and action taken," Buckner said.

If action does not follow the resolution various residence halls and groups will get together and act, according to Buckner.

Spartan harriers romp over CMU

Despite the absence of their two best runners and another regular, the Spartans' cross country team swept to its third win in four meets this year with a perfect winning score of 15-50 over Central Michigan Wednesday.

Kim Hartman, Ken Leonowitz and Chuck Starkey all missed the meet. Starkey's absence was due to an injury.

Coach Jim Gibbard went with his underclassmen, as all 10 of the Spartan runners were either freshmen or sophomores.

Dave Dieters captured individual honors, winning in a time of 23:28.2. Six seconds behind Dieters was Randy Kilpatrick, with Ralph Zoppa, finishing one second later.

Clocked just over 26 minutes were three more Spartans, Warren Krueger, Tom Swanson, and Pete Rieff. Rounding out the Spartan finishers were Tom Silva and Mark Maxwell in 7th and 8th places, and Bryan Kent and Barney Young in 10th and 11th.

Central Michigan's best effort came from George Geisenhauer, who wound up 9th with a time of 26:44.

The Spartan harriers are now idle until this Saturday when they play host at the Spartan Invitational. Four schools besides MSU will compete—Central Michigan, Eastern Michigan, Western Michigan and the University of Michigan.

Rich Saul

SPORTS

Rich Saul lifts 'S' defense

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

When Rich Saul injured his knee last season against Ohio State, many people doubted he could regain enough mobility to return to full-time defensive duty this season.

But someone forgot to tell him about it. Through hard work and a rigorous knee exercise program, Saul's knee is again strong and he is back on defense. After seeing limited action in the first three MSU games this year, Duffy Daugherty started him at end against Ohio State in an attempt to shore up his front line. The Spartans were not containing the opposing quarterbacks and, as a result, were getting burned on the scoreboard.

Saul responded to his first start in over a year by dumping elusive Buckeye quarterback Rex Kern three times for losses. Last week he got to Michigan's quarterback Don Moorhead twice for 23 yards in losses.

Saul started as a sophomore at defensive end but was moved to linebacker last year. He convinced enough people of his linebacking skills to make honorable mention All-America, despite missing half the season.

The 6-foot-3, 231-pound senior from Butler, Pa., is the first to admit he'd rather play linebacker, but he realizes he can help the team more at end.

"Playing is the big thing," he said. "I'd rather play linebacker because you don't get as many good sticks in at end. But I'll play anywhere to help the team."

"Defensive end is about the toughest position to play on the field, especially with everybody running the triple option. You've got to keep the quarterback from getting outside the end, you've got to contain him. And you've always got three or four backs coming out of the backfield trying to block you," Saul said.

Saul said the transition from linebacker to end is a difficult one.

"As a linebacker, I watched the flow of the offensive backs," he said, "but now I have to key off the line."

"It took most of the Ohio State game to make the adjustment, but I'm still adjusting now."

Spartan defensive coordinator Henry Bullough has praise for Saul's play at end.

"Rich gives an all-out effort on every play," he said. "He hasn't played the spot in two years, but he's doing real well. It's all coming back to him in a hurry." Daugherty agrees with Bullough's assessment of the Spartan co-captain, who's twin brother Ron is an offensive guard.

"Rich is so technically sound, he doesn't make many mistakes," Duffy said. His only regret about the Sauls is that they're not triplets.

Rigney ready to sign as Twins' manager

MINNEAPOLIS—St. Paul (UPI)—Minnesota Twins owner Calvin Griffith waited Wednesday for new manager-designate Bill Rigney to arrive at a settlement with the California Angels.

Griffith said Monday night he and Rigney had agreed to terms for a one-year contract for Rigney to manage the Twins in 1970.

Rigney would replace Billy Martin, fired last week by Griffith after leading the Twins to the American League Western Division crown in his first year as manager.

"I was looking for a man with experience," Griffith said. "I understand that Rigney is very good at handling players. That's what I wanted most."

Booters seek to stop 'the St. Louis tie'

"Bitter" best describes the rivalry between the MSU and St. Louis soccer teams, and action will be intense when two of the nation's top collegiate powers meet at 1:30 Saturday.

The past four clashes between the Spartans and the Billikens have ended in frustration. In 1967 the two teams battled to 0-0 and 3-3 ties following a 1-1 deadlock in '66. Last year ended up in a 0-0 standoff.

St. Louis is only one of two schools to hold a winning edge over the MSU booters, defeating them in eight games and losing one. Five games have ended in ties.

The last time MSU was able to beat the Bill's was in 1963 when three second period goals and one in the third clinched a 4-3 victory for the Spartans.

The Billikens, ranked third in the nation behind San Jose State and MSU, tote an impressive 6-0 record into Saturday's game. Among their victims are the University of Berlin, (Germany), (3-1), Florissant Valley (2-0), Northern Illinois (8-0), Rockhurst (6-1), Quincy College (2-1), and Alumni (2-1).

Under Coach Harry Keough the Billiken booters have amassed a 27-4-3 record and have an all-time mark of 122-14-8.

Leading the Bill's attack is right halfback Al Trost, who has five goals and three assists for seven points this season. Jim Leeker, inside right, and John Pisani, center forward, are close behind with seven points apiece. Leeker has four goals and three assists while Pisani has two goals and five assists.

Don Coppel, St. Louis goalie, has allowed only four goals in his six appearances, making 21 saves.

SCIENTIFICALLY WEIGHTED BELT
for men and women

If you lack the time or will power for regularly scheduled exercises, don't despair... here is your answer. Just wrap a Tone-O-Matic around your waist and go about your business, pleasure or favorite sport. Now the belt does the work, causing saggy stomach muscles to resist the weight and firm up in the process. Firm toned-up muscles replace flab and usually result in inches off the waist line. All you have to do is wear it... no fuss... no strain... you are exercising in your own everyday movements. Wear it either under or over your clothing.

It's wonderful for the ladies too. Wear the Tone-O-Matic during your regular activities of housework, gardening, shopping or just walking around. Double the effectiveness of sports or regular exercise sessions. It works while you play... all you have to do is wear it.

Made of textured vinyl with separated pockets of miniature lead pellets. Modern Velcro "can't slip" fasteners make it easy to put on and take off, and allow for 5 inches adjustment as your waistline varies.
Men's belts are 10-pound, black in 3 sizes—Small (31" - 35"), Medium (35" - 39") and Large (39" - 44").
Women's belts are 8-pound, white in two sizes—Extra Small (25" - 30") and Small (30" - 34").

Apple and U.S. news media have been flooded with telephone calls, cables and letters about rumors in the United States that McCartney has been dead for years.

"They are all ridiculous," Apple said.

"It's a lot of nonsense," said fellow Beatle John Lennon.

The rumors are too stupid to bother denying, said George Harrison, another member of the famed quartet.

Beatle drummer Ringo Starr could not be reached for comment.

The rumors claim the Beatles have been dropping clues since 1966 about McCartney's supposed death. A disk jockey for a Detroit radio station claimed to have assembled numerous clues.

A record-spinner in New York was pulled off the air for recounting the rumors that brought a flood of telephone calls from fans and jammed the radio station's switchboard.

Dallas and Austin, Tex., reported the rumors were rampant there, and Minneapolis news media were swamped with fans' queries.

Most of the clues supposedly appeared on Beatles album jackets.

The cover of the Beatles' "Magical Mystery Tour" album is supposed to reveal a phone number in London, which, when dialed, answers: "Paul McCartney is dead."

The number is 231-7436. No such number exists on the London telephone exchange.

Another supposed hint was the license number of a car in the picture on the cover of "Abbey Road," the group's latest album.

The license plate was said to bear the characters "28 IF," interpreted by some to mean that if McCartney were alive, he would be 28-years-old.

McCartney was born June 18, 1942, which makes him 27 -- not 28 -- and the license plate is "28 IF" with the 1 a figure, not a letter.

Iain MacMillan, the photographer who took the picture for the album, said the car "just happened to be standing there. It had been left by some on holiday -- nobody with any connection with the Beatles -- and a policeman tried to move it away for us, but he couldn't."

In the same photo, McCartney's feet are bare, which to some is another sign of death.

"It was a hot day," said MacMillan, "and he just took his shoes off and left them on the sidewalk. It didn't seem symbolic to me."

On the cover of "Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," the Beatles are wearing uniforms, and McCartney has an emblem on the sleeve saying "OPD," which some interpret to mean "officially pronounced dead."

The uniforms, complete with the badge on McCartney's sleeve, were rented from a costume shop, worn for the picture and returned.

The KLH 9

Stereophonic Electrostatic Loudspeakers

WHERE?

at HI-FI BUYS— of course

THE KLH MODEL NINE is a stereophonic electrostatic loudspeaker system consisting of two complete full-range assemblies with built-in power supplies and step-up transformers.

In the Model Nine, our objective was to produce the finest sound reproducer possible -- without regard to cost or to the limitations of program material or associated equipment.

The Speaker's virtually weightless diaphragm is suspended between two charged plates that alternately attract and repel the diaphragm according to the polarity of the audio signal applied to the plates. The force pushing the diaphragm from one side is always directly proportional to the force pulling it from other, and is uniform along the entire surface of the diaphragm. The combination of accurate motion and the lack of mass and inertia in the diaphragm provides a precision unapproached by other basic loudspeaker designs.

The special qualities of the Model Nine unquestionably call for the prospective buyer to form his own judgments on the basis of actual performance rather than any recommendation, however authoritative. To this test, we offer the Model Nine with full confidence that it will satisfy the most critical listener. Come see and hear Friday and Saturday during our Amplifier Clinic.

Foreign aid opposition

designed to promote private investment abroad.

But one of the fights will come on the proposed Overseas Private Investment Corporation which opponents view as setting up another administrative layer to carry on an existing program.

The committee already has voted to double-to $100 million-funds set aside for birth control programs designed to help meet a world population explosion.

This action did not add anything to the bill's total, only ear-marked the specific spending.

In other actions, the panel has:

--Approved an additional $100 million in military aid for South Korea over the next two years. A certain classified proportion of the requested $375 million in military aid also would go to South Korea.

--Approved $40 million over a five-year period to help build a model desalting plant in Israel.
