Gagged Panther disrupts trial for second consecutive day

CHICAGO (AP) — Black Panther leader Bobby G. Seale, strapped to a chair and gagged for a second day, overcame these restraints Thursday and twice interrupted his trial.

Seale, one of eight men being tried on charges of conspiring to incite rioting during last year's Democratic National Convention, once slipped off his gag and shouted obscenities at Judge Julius J. Hoffman.

The second time he mumbled muffled sounds through the tightly wound cloth while the judge was addressing the U.S. District Court jury.

The first interruption was quelled by U.S. marshals who immediately pinned Seale and dragged him to an adjacent room. Jerry Rubin, a codefendant, shouted: "The marshal just hit Bobby in the mouth with his elbow."

Seale screamed that that the marshals were kicking him and he called the judge a "rotten low life, lying fascist dog."

Newsmen sitting less than a foot from Seale said they did not see any blows struck.

William M. Kinstler, a defense lawyer, said during the ruckus: "Your Honor, when are we going to stop this medieval torture... I am utterly ashamed at this moment to be an American lawyer."

"You should be," Judge Hoffman replied.

After a recess, Leonard I. Weinglass, another defense lawyer, asked the judge to poll the jury of 10 women and 2 men to determine if the disturbances affect them.

Thomas A. Foran, U.S. district attorney, called Weinglass' motion "gross misconduct." Weinglass began a reply and in the middle of his argument Richard M. Schultz, an asst. to Foran, leaped up and began yelling at Weinglass.

Throughout the arguments, Seale continued his muffled shouts.

Judge Hoffman denied the motion to poll the jurors because he said the form of the motion was bad. Weinglass asked if he could rephrase the motion. "No," Judge Hoffman said.

Judge Hoffman was instructing members to disregard the incidents in the courtroom, but Seale continued shouting through the gag. A marshal placed his hand over Seale's face and he was again taken out of the room. His gag again came off and he shouted as he was carried through the door, "He's (the judge) a liar!"

Simultaneously, Rennard C. "Rennie" Davis, a co-defendant, stood and told the jurors that while they were out of the courtroom the marshals had struck Seale.

Judge Hoffman then suggested a recess until the afternoon session, but the prosecution asked to continue. Seale was returned to the courtroom, this time so gagged that he could not move his lower jaw.

The judge then ordered a recess for the remainder of the morning session, about an hour earlier than usual. "There are aspects of this case I want to consider before I resume this trial," he said.

Judge Hoffman ordered Seale bound and gagged Wednesday after he repeatedly interrupted the court with demands that he be allowed to defend himself.

He contends he fired Junstler as his lawyer but Hoffman has refused to recognize this.

Two other defendants, Thomas E. Hayden, 30, and Abbott "Abbie" Hoffman, 31, also made several remarks to spectators and in the presence of the jury.

At least three of the defendants, and sometimes all, have refused to stand when Judge Hoffman entered or left the courtroom. Each time the judge has noted for the record which defendants failed to stand.

Other defendants are David T. Dellinger, 54, John R. Froines, 31, and Lee Weiner, 31.

The eight men are specifically charged with conspiring to cross state lines with the intent to cause rioting. If convicted, each could be sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison and fined $20,000.

Seale is the only defendant not free on bail. He is held each night in the Cook County Chicago Jail on a fugitive warrant from New Haven, Conn., where he is charged with murdering another Panther.

HIGH COURT RULES

Secret hearing ordered for Kopechne inquest

BOSTON (AP) — The long-delayed inquest into Mary Jo Kopechne's death must be held in secret, with the press and public barred, the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

The court also ruled that witnesses at the inquest — including Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, in whose car Miss Kopechne died — may be accompanied and advised by counsel, but it denied a request from Kennedy's lawyers that they be given the privilege of cross-examination.

The court also denied a request from Kennedy's lawyers that Edgartown District Court Judge James A. Boyle be disqualified from presiding at the proceeding.

The decision leaves to Boyle the matter of rescheduling the inquest. It was to have started Sept. 3 in Edgartown, but was postponed Sept. 2 when Kennedy's lawyers took their requests to the state Supreme Court.

Reached at his home on Martha's Vineyard, Boyle said he would have no comment on the decision until he has time to read it fully.

He added that he would set a new date for the inquest only after his study of the decision is complete.

Boyle must issue a report after the inquest in which he determines the legal — as opposed to the medical — cause of death. The report may or may not lead to further legal action.

Kennedy was flying from Washington to Boston when the state Supreme Court's decision was announced.

He talked briefly with newsmen upon his arrival here, saying he thought it would be "improper for me to comment before I have had a chance to see the decision."

"As I understand it," he said, "the decision was made while I was en route and I, of course, haven't had a chance to read it. I am satisfied the court acted expeditiously, and I hope the proceedings will be held soon."

In its decision, which was unanimous and spanned 17 typed pages, the state high court said it ordered the inquest held secretly to protect the integrity, the investigatory character and the effectiveness of the inquest.

TRUSTEES TO ACT

School of Osteopathy decision expected soon

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

The MSU Board of Trustees will probably act to accept or reject the state-supported School of Osteopathy Nov. 21.

According to board chairman Don Stevens, D-Okemos, the trustees will act favorably if conditions specified in September for acceptance of the school are met.

These conditions include cooperation from the osteopathic profession, additional funds for building and faculty, standards and rights of the school to be equal to all other colleges within the university and an understanding that the University regards adequate funding of its existing College of Human Medicine as its first priority.

The State Board of Education offered the school to MSU Wednesday after legislation passed Aug. 5 required that they assign the school to either the University of Michigan, Wayne State University or MSU by Nov. 3.

Acting President Adams said Thursday the terms and conditions of the board of trustees will have to be met "because MSU is an autonomous institution and the State Board of Education can't tell us we have to accept the school."

Stevens said the board of education has indicated recognition of their conditions, however and they are generally in agreement with them.

If the terms are not met precisely as stated, according to trustee Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing, the board may still be open to "re negotiate."

Martin said he feels fairly sure there will be a School of Osteopathy at MSU.

Trustee Kenneth W. Thompson, R-East Lansing, said he was "delighted" that MSU was selected as the site for the school and termed it a great opportunity for the University.

Since much of the teaching will be common to both the School of Osteopathy and College of Medicine and the legislature has provided the for School of Osteopathy to have a separate dean Thompson does not feel there will be any conflict between the two schools.

Members of the osteopathic profession must accept MSU in return, however, before incorporation of the School of Osteopathy can begin.

leader and sponsor of the bill, said Oakland and two branch campuses of the University of Michigan (U-M) are too expensive for the state to run as affiliates.

"It's like trying to run a jetliner operation with only two passengers," Montgomery said.

The two U-M branches-at Flint and Dearborn—would also be made autonomous under the Montgomery bill.

Wednesday the State Board of Education announced support of the move for Oakland's independence.

Oakland Chancellor Woodward Varner asked the board of trustees two weeks ago to consider a separation of Oakland and MSU.

A committee, consisting of board of trustees' Chairman Don Stevens, D-Okemos; Vice-Chairman Frank Merriman, R-DeKerville; University attorney Leland Carr; Executive Vice-President Jack Breslin; and Varner, was established to investigate the proposal.

To affect Oakland's autonomy the trustees must resolve their willingness to establish Oakland's independence and the legislature must pass a bill enabling the action.

The trustees' committee on Oakland has not yet met, but has requested Carr to investigate the legal aspects of the severance. The committee is to report to the trustees in December.

"I've always said that when it was better for Oakland to be independent, I would support it," Stevens said Thursday.

"I can't imagine that the legislature would oppose it," he said, "but I think the board of education's approval will be persuasive."

Oakland is a growing, established institution and autonomy would add to its prestige, he said.

If Oakland becomes autonomous, it will have its own governing board appointed for eight-year terms by the governor.

MOTIVES QUESTIONED

House OK's draft plan; Senate delays ruling

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon's draft lottery plan was passed by the House Thursday and sent to the Senate, where leaders say it likely will not even be considered this year.

The House approved the plan to draft 19-year-olds first under a random selection system after defeating, 265 to 159, an effort to open the bill up for wholesale revision of the draft.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said he did not believe the lottery plan would be taken up because Senate rules cannot prevent wholesale draft revision.

Critics with proposals ranging from a whole new draft law to repeal of the draft except in time of declared war tried to defeat a proposed rule prohibiting "not germane" amendments — meaning any other draft reform proposals—to the lottery bill.

House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford told the House it would be the height of irresponsibility to "open the entire Selective Service Act from one end to the other" particularly after Chairman L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., of the House Armed Services Committee had promised a full review of the draft act next year.

The House vote had been delayed from Wednesday night.

GOP leader hits reform bills

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken's educational reform package is facing opposition by members of his own party, as well as the Democrats.

Richard Durant, chairman of the 14th District Republican Committee of Detroit, said at a news conference Thursday that he is urging legislators to defeat all parts of the Republican governor's program.

In a four-page letter to every member of the Michigan Legislature, Durant charged that the governor's program is "socialistic" and "would make the state's problems worse instead of solving them."

"The governor's program will violate the principle of local control over local education and will sharply limit the freedom of choice of the citizens of Michigan," Durant said.

The last page of the letter to the members of the legislature made several proposals for increasing freedom of choice for parents, and introducing "competition" into our educational system.

Durant proposed, instead, that parents be allowed to send their children to either public or private schools "and be able to deduct from state and local school tax bills, the tuition up to the amount the government would have to pay per child." Milliken's plan to channel $25 million to assist non-public schools next year "eliminates or makes meaningless present freedom to choose," Durant said.

"Michigan citizens have the right to choose and send their children to a non-public school, presumably chosen because it is not under state control and hence can teach a different orientation or by different standards," he added.

"Under Milliken's plan, private and parochial schools would be subjected to the same evaluation, accountability and quality controls as public schools," he said.

He explained that the governor's plan is socialistic because it contradicts the American idea that only divided power allows the individual citizen to remain free.

"The Governor's Commission attempts to go in a good direction by bad methods," he explained, "and these will result in making a poor situation worse."

If the state reviews the estimated operating budget of local districts and allocates the funds needed, "it will mean a statewide teachers' strike instead of scattered local strikes," he said.

"It will mean control over what is taught and how it is taught, it will mean a deadening conformity and it frankly envisions that those local schools which have striven for excellence will be down-graded by the lower standards of the rest," Durant said.

Cigarette tax hike needed to help support reform bill

By ED HUTCHISON
State News Staff Writer

Michigan's chief executive said Thursday that he "remains hopeful" that legislation will surface from committees to help pay for his proposed educational reform package.

Gov. Milliken told newsmen that he has not given up on a proposed hike of five cents on each package of cigarettes.

The increase in the tax which, if passed, would amount to a total of 12 cents on each package of cigarettes, is estimated to yield $18 million the first six months in effect and $45 million in the next fiscal year.

Milliken asked for the increase to help pay for the overhaul of the state's educational system.

"I've discussed with Sen. DeMaso (R-Battle Creek, and chairman of the senate's taxation committee) all the bills before his committee. I urged careful consideration and am hopeful they'll be reported out."

The governor said he has received no information that if the tax is increased a subsequent increase in bootlegging would follow.

Critics have said an increase could lead to an illegal flow of untaxed cigarettes into Michigan.

Milliken said it wouldn't "bother" him if the state had to stamp cigarette packages to assure the tax was being paid.

The recent Supreme Court decision ordering the desegregation of schools was praised by Milliken.

"I'm pleased to see the Supreme Court reach the decision it did. The President wants integration, but it's a matter of how to proceed."

"We have to move quickly, decisively and sometimes unpleasantly," Milliken said. Milliken noted that although a family can legally move to an area where a better education is possible, economically such a move may not be possible:

"The greatest hope lies in the pattern of improving education inequality. This can be done through better housing, job training and employment that will make it economically possible to move."

NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

U.S. physicist awarded

STOCKHOLM (AP)—The 1969 Nobel Prize in Physics was awarded Thursday to Murray Gell-Mann of the California Institute of Technology, giving the United States two of the three Nobel Prizes in science for 1969.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Science cited Gell-Mann for his "contributions and discoveries concerning the classification of elementary particles and their interactions."

Reached at his Pasadena, Calif., home by telephone, Gell-Mann, 40, said, "I was sort of hoping for" the Nobel honor, then added, "but I was not really expecting it." The award carries a cash prize of $72,800. "Gell-Mann has produced fundamental work in nearly all domains of his field" the Swedish Academy said, "and his contributions have in many cases been of decisive importance for further development. This is particularly true of his discoveries concerning the classification of the elementary particles and their interactions." Gell-Mann did his undergraduate work at Yale, received his Ph.D. in physics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1951, and did research and teaching at Princeton and Chicago before going to Caltech 14 years ago.

McMillan called the incident "unforgivable." "It's a bad thing when people can't live out their different lifestyles without harassment," he said.

The other administrators were not available for comment Thursday afternoon.

West German Chancellor Willy Brandt agreed Thursday that his government would pay over $2 million to victims of the Nazis in Czechoslovakia during World War II.

The money is to be used to compensate Czech citizens whom the Nazis used in concentration camps for medical experiments.

The agreement was signed in Bonn by delegations from the treasuries of both nations.

With what was officially called moderate fighting in Vietnam last week, 102 Americans were killed, 24 more than during the week before. The U.S. Command in Saigon also listed 287 Vietnamese losses, 24 less than the week before, and 2,303 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed, an increase of 400.

National News

Plans were announced Thursday for Veterans' Day "freedom rally" at the Washington Monument to permit "the silent majority" to voice its views on Vietnam.

But the sponsors, including the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said the Nov. 11 gathering will not be a counter-demonstration to the get out of Vietnam now rally's scheduled for Nov. 13-15.

However, an organizer of the gathering said, "We would be flattered" if the antiwar groups demonstrate against it.

Sen John J. Williams, R-Del., said Thursday that federal land valued at more than $2 million was given to a group of Texans in the last days of the Johnson administration.

Williams, calling for an investigation into the grant, said the three Texans used the land to construct a nursing home. He also said Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare loans paid the total construction bill, meaning that the promoters put none of their own money into the project.

A little-known American oil company has asked the White House to exempt it from already-riddled oil import laws so it can import Iranian oil with Iran using the money to buy U.S. goods, including arms.

When the Shah of Iran was in Washington last week, he discussed with President Nixon an oil-for-arms agreement. The Shah was told the matter would be considered.

The American company Planet Oil and Mineral Corp. of Dallas, Tex., would import 200,000 barrels a day and deposit payments in American banks. Iran would use this credit to purchase consumer and military goods.

The State Court of Appeals has confirmed the conviction of a Detroit man for "ogling" a teenage girl.

Oman Wilson Jr. has appealed the original conviction that he "did improperly and wrongfully ogle annoy, follow and pursue a 14-year-old girl in 1967 on the public streets of the city."

The girl testified Wilson invited her to "come into the car, baby" while he was stopped at a red light. After a line-up, Wilson was convicted and sentenced to 15 days in jail, one year's probation and a $150 fine.

Louis Corwin, a 38-year-old Cassopolis farmer charged with manslaughter in the fatal shooting of a teenager during a pumpkin patch raid, was released from the Cass County Jail Thursday afternoon after he posted a $1,000 bond.

The victim of the shooting was Steve Cook, 16, of Decatur. According to sheriff's officers, Cook and three companions raided the patch on Corwin's farm Wednesday night.

Corwin told officers that he fired a warning shot in the air and that bullet hit the youth who was piling into the truck with his companions.

Cook was struck in the chest by the rifle bullet and pronounced dead on arrival at Lee Memorial Hospital in Dowagiac. Corwin was described by his neighbors as a "respectable person." The farm is located on M-40, North of Dowagiac.

Campus News

Despite its name, St. Thomas Aquinas College in Sparkill, N.Y., is an all-girl school. That is it was an all-girl school until a large number of males began to apply for admission.

Because of that, said Sister Mary Lucille, president of the Roman Catholic school, the institution is immediately going co-educational.

The school now has an enrollment of 625 girls. It is expected that the new policy will increase enrollment to about 1,000.

U.S. asks for closed peace talks

PARIS (AP) — The United States proposed Thursday that the Vietnam peace talks be restricted to the four principal delegates and a few advisers in a new closed-sessions attempt to break the deadlock.

Hanoi and the Viet Cong turned down the bid at the 40th session of the talks. Both sides agreed that no progress has been made in the Paris discussions and each blamed the other for the failure.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, calling for "a new approach to break out of this sterile situation and promote serious negotiations," proposed that the four chief delegates meet next Tuesday in a restricted session accompanied by no more than three advisers each.

Lodge said there would be "no public release of the record" of what was said at restricted meetings, "but we could agree on exactly what would be said to the press after each session."

The U.S. delegation spokesman denied that the Nov. 4 date was related to President Nixon's Nov. 3 speech on Vietnam. He said the date was picked because it allowed ample time for delegations to prepare.

Lodge has complained frequently that the sessions in their present form turn into propaganda exercises. Formal speeches are read and then released for world consumption and little else happens. He considers this virtually a public meeting.

His aim is to cut down the present attendance by the four delegations from 15 or so members each to just a few, and to control by agreement what is disclosed publicly.

Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, chief of the Viet Cong's Provisional

Revolutionary Government (PRG) delegation, immediately denounced the Lodge proposal as a "maneuver" to avoid direct talks with the PRG, to "legalize" the Saigon regime, and to "conceal U.S. machinations to continue and intensify the war of aggression."

She said she was ready for private talks with the U.S. delegation "today or tomorrow" on the basis of the PRG's 10-point program, that calls for the unconditional withdrawal of all U.S. and other foreign allied troops and the establishment of a provisional coalition government in South Vietnam.

Lodge repeated President Nixon's May 14 proposals for mutual withdrawals of all non-South Vietnamese troops under international supervision.

"If you have an alternative timetable for mutual withdrawal," Lodge told Thuy, "we are prepared to consider it."

Thuy repeated Hanoi's claim that the question of mutual withdrawal was "absurd." He said the United States sought to cause confusion "between the aggressor, the United States, and the fighter against aggression, the Vietnamese people."

Lodge, again emphasizing U.S. frustration, as he did last week, when he refused to deliver his formal statement, told the North Vietnam and PRG delegates that in the previous 39 sessions they had done nothing "but demand unilateral actions by us and engage in vituperative language." In all this time you have allowed agreement only on the shape of the table.

BLACK PROTEST

Vassar building occupied

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — A band of black women students at exclusive Vassar College peacefully seized the administration building early today and said the occupation would continue until black demands were met.

"We have stopped the school," a spokesman for the student Afro-American Society declared. The spokesmen said there were 59 black students at the school with a student body of 1,600. More than half the blacks occupied the building, she said.

The blacks said the building was occupied because the school administration has not responded to demands for a black studies program and separate black housing.

The takeover came at 3:25 a.m. The girls walked through the front door of the building and asked the night watchman and switchboard operator to leave. They then locked the door.

The occupation came after a peaceful demonstration Saturday by the Afro-American Society, at which time society president, Claudia Thomas, said a request was made to speak to Vassar President Alan Simpson.

Miss Thomas said Simpson made no reply to the request. She said the girls burned a pig in effigy and then ended the demonstration, making no attempt to enter the building.

Vassar officials were not available immediately but there were reports of a meeting under way.

Pro-Arab guerillas attack Lebanese mountain town

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Arab guerrillas blasted the mountain fortress town of Rashaya with rockets and mortars Thursday and then tried to storm the Lebanese army stronghold but were driven back, military spokesmen said.

Army officers reported that the guerrillas charged up the rocky slopes leading to Rashaya's fortress, screaming "Allah! Allah!" and firing wildly. Most of their shots went into the air, the officers said, but the heavy shelling that preceded the attack wounded four Lebanese soldiers, three of them seriously.

Hundreds of families fled the border areas as the battle grew more savage.

The guerrillas tried also to overrun a Lebanese air force base at Klayat. Street fighting flared anew in the guerrilla-entrenched port city of Tripoli.

The battle for Rashaya, which has been under attack for three days, could prove a decisive factor in the conflict between the guerrillas, who want freedom to use the country as a base for anti-Israeli raids, and the government, which fears Israeli reprisals.

Built atop a mountain in eastern Lebanon near the Syrian border, the town overlooks a vital supply route that runs from Syria through Lebanon to guerrilla bases in the south, within striking distance of Israel.

No one ever mentions the present bloodbath

If we pull out of Vietnam, will there be a bloodbath? This, above all, is the paramount question in the minds of many rational Americans. The ramifications of such an occurrence would be devastating. Nixon and the United States would be discredited in the eyes of the world, and the guilt of the American people would transcend all previous moral considerations either pro or con.

There is reasonable cause to give this genocide theory some thought. It is a foregone conclusion that the present Saigon regime is simply incapable of standing on its own two feet without American support. If our troops leave then the Thieu government will surely fall either to the Communists or any number of dissident and opportunist elements in South Vietnam or more probably, a combination of both.

Regardless of who steps into the resultant power vacuum, the Communists will undoubtedly be in a position where they could carry out a good deal of retribution if they so chose—and after 20 years of fighting their hatred for the A.R.U.N. cannot be small. Further, the Viet Cong have certainly proven themselves capable of mass carnage as the 3,000 citizens of Hue who were killed during the Tet offensive can attest to.

There are, however, higher level considerations which quite likely may override any desire on the part of the North Vietnam for a bloody reckoning. The Communists have for too long played the self-righteous "good guy" role to dash it to bits in a bloodbath without raising the ire of much, if not all the rest of the world.

This would be ruinous to any hopes the Communists have of building a unified Vietnam. It is of the utmost necessity to them that they obtain international trade concessions and economic support to rebuild their severely crippled economy. Unrepressed carnage would, in effect, isolate them from the mainstream of world commerce. In fact it is quite possible that in the process they would lose one of their two major supporters, the Soviet Union, who would undoubtedly be severely embarrassed by any post-withdrawal barbarism.

A further factor in this consideration is that it will be necessary for the North Vietnamese to obtain the support of the people and, especially, the middle- and lower level leadership of the South if they wish to make a pragmatic attempt at reunification. Granted, they could set up a police state, but this is an exceedingly difficult institution to maintain and, again, world opinion would be decisively hostile.

It is our contention that the promise of long range gains will quell any desire the Communists might have for the dubious pleasure of rubbing out their long-time antagonists. There will quite probably be some outbreaks of hostility upon American withdrawal—if for no other reason than the Viet Cong are simply not the super-cohesive, well-oiled political and military machine that many hawks assume them to be—but these will probably not be major and will be quickly controlled by Hanoi.

And, after all, we have been supporting a bloodbath in Vietnam for quite some time. It is a little more than ironic that the same people who worry so extensively about a post-American bloodbath are much the same people who are not bothered by the bloodbath in which we are already engaged.

Stopping those immoral, repulsive ticket scalpers

One of the oldest tricks on the books for making a fast buck is to buy up a commodity in demand and then re-sell it at a profit. This term, some brilliant-minded business cronies caught on to the game and are playing it with Pop Entertainment tickets.

Without expounding on what a degenerate, immoral character one would have to be to participate in such corrupt business, suffice it to say that now some method must be found of putting an end to the little game.

Because of the difficulty in apprehending ticket scalpers, a preventive measure is sought. Suggestions range from limiting ticket sales to MSU students, to stamping I.D.'s after buying tickets, to limiting ticket sales to four per customer, to selling tickets for only one week prior to performance.

We believe, however, that a better method might be to brand the forehead of every student who buys a ticket and limiting sales to one per customer. This would surely put a quick stop to the nonsense.

Because of the inconvenience caused by this method, perhaps an alternative would be better.

The best approach might be to limit ticket sales to only four per customer, and to sell tickets for only one week prior to the concert.

The major reservation the Pop Entertainment Committee had with limiting sales to one week was the fear that ticket sales might fall off since people would have less access to tickets. Despite the success of this fall's concerts, the fact remains that in the past, Pop Entertainment has lost big bucks. Any move which might curtail ticket sales could be disastrous.

So it seems that the only change to be made for the Dionne Warwick concert is that a limit of four per customer will be placed on tickets. And although this means that a potential scalper could still acquire at least 12 tickets by going to all three different sales windows, at least he will have a more difficult time in pursuing his immoral past time. It is little more than a gesture, but coupled with the intense guilt feelings that scalpers must undergo, perhaps the behavior can be curtailed.

DAVE SHORT

Reflections on Detroit cops

Once you've been in inner-city Detroit, the center of the city's major crimes, the things that you have seen there can never be completely forgotten.

The 30 prostitutes, "Blind Pig" parlors, homosexuals anxiously staring out windows of "dive" apartment houses. Alcoholics. The transvestites.

The "Murphy" men. Neurotic old men and women crying in back alleys and dimly lighted streets. Con men. The hatred and the hurt in the eyes of both the very young and the very old.

And the cops. You can never forget the cops because they represent the barrier that protects you from total crime or destruction in the inner-city. They do what most of us would never or could never do.

Being a cop in Detroit isn't an easy job. The city has a history of poor police-community relations. As one officer once put it, "Most people here, they hate your ass."

Detroit is still a racially torn city. Most of the blacks, heavily-populated in the inner-city, have a hard time identifying with the police department's predominantly white officers.

Outgoing Mayor Jerome Cavanaugh's recent pronouncement that "all policemen who work in the city must live in the city" hasn't helped matters. Cavanaugh wanted to encourage better police-community relations and to encourage more blacks to join the police force.

But many policemen prefer to work in the city but live in the suburbs; and the blacks haven't exactly knocked down the recruiting door.

Blacks in a big city like Detroit can't be blamed for not wanting to join the police force, though. A black cop in Detroit is most likely viewed as an "Uncle Tom" or "Whitely's Friend."

The courts and their rulings have hurt law enforcement in Detroit, according to many police officers. The police say that the courts have overlooked the rights of society in favor of the rights of the individual in deciding recent cases.

Indeed, the Supreme Court has made the police walk a tight-rope in carrying out law enforcement. One mistake by a patrolman during a preliminary arrest can throw a criminal case out of court, regardless of the suspect's guilt.

Potential danger and death constantly encircle a cop in a big city like Detroit. And there is no easy training ground for rookie cops there. A cop quickly has to develop a method for handling himself and the incidents that he encounters.

And quite often, the difference between the right method and the wrong method of police work in a big city is a bullet in the head or the stomach.

You can never forget the cops because they represent the barrier that protects you from total crime or destruction in the inner-city. They do what most of us would never or could never do.

In the past 10 months, five policemen have been killed in Detroit while acting in the line of duty.

It is not surprising that five policemen could be killed there in so little of time. With the amount of crime and the number of city-wide problems in Detroit, there easily could have been more killings.

But the tragedy of the Detroit police killings is that some of them did not have to happen at all.

Police work involves making split-second decisions without taking time to weigh the alternatives to the matter. A cop learns to react by instinct to situations that eventually may mean life or death.

If a cop makes the wrong decision or has the wrong instincts, he may pay for it with his life. Every cop knows that and learns to live by it.

In a police killing that received nationwide attention last March, Detroit patrolman Michael Czapki was shot seven times outside the New Bethel Baptist Church when he was confronted by a group of 10 or 12 armed men.

Czapki made two mistakes that led to his death. After seeing that the group members were armed, he didn't call for other police aid. His other mistake came when he decided to get out of his patrol car and walk towards the group. Czapki was gunned down without getting his gun out of the sling.

In the latest police killing in Detroit, Patrolman Paul Begin was shot in the head last Saturday night while taking an apprehended man and woman to police headquarters.

The shooting occurred shortly after Begin and fellow officer William Skibo had pulled over the couple's car for speeding. The man was caught and handcuffed after he tried to flee from the scene.

But the officers did not handcuff the woman or check her for a concealed weapon. Nor did either one of the patrolmen sit in the back seat with the suspects, as is the usual procedure.

Moments later, the woman shot and killed Begin and wounded Skibo.

A police killing in a big city always make police-community relations tense for a while afterwards. The police became more cautious in their actions and methods after a police killing; and the people in the community watch the police closer, too. Cops, understandably, don't like to see other cops get killed. Among other things, they fear that if one guy gets away with shooting a cop, another guy will try it, too.

But cops know what they are in for when they join the police force. If they don't like it, they eventually leave the force in one way or another.

OUR READERS' MIND

Glad infantile thoughts get public airing

To the Editor:

I am prompted to write concerning your "ammunition legislation" editorial in Wednesday's (Oct. 22) paper.

It really irks me to see the thoughts expressed in the second paragraph. I would like to know who the single person is who presumably researched this paragraph, or the whole article, for that matter. In truth, the "original plan" for the registration of firearms was neatly carried out anyway by total federal registration during the sale of any and all firearms bought from dealers. I resent your referring to the bill passed by Congress as a "compromise" when, in fact, total registration of all firearms and ammunition was effected Jan. 1, 1969!

I only wish the matter would be brought into public hearings so the bill could be passed without all the paranoid newspaper editors' blabberings. What a relief that would be!

As an example of your mentality, you now dredge up the names of JFK, Dr. King and Sen. Kennedy as "living" proof gun registration would have saved their lives. As your kind constantly expounds, "but if only one life were saved, it would be worth it!" or "have we already forgotten?"

That's really rich where you say the registration of ammunition requires only a "couple of minutes." It may be true for the purchases, but you should see what the seller has to keep in the way of records! And then you have the nerve to mention Ted Kennedy in an article ostensibly espousing "law and order." I can just see what would happen to you or to me if we failed to report immediately a dead girl in our submerged car.

Oh no, not again! In paragraph seven, "... but if it aids law enforcement agencies in solving only a few cases, then it has proven its worth." What logic! My wish has come true: The State News editors have at last revealed their mental workings publicly. How embarrassing for them!

And now, wonder of all wonders, right here on our stage (paragraph eight) a lesson in psychology: "The gun is a crutch for insecurity and feelings of inadequacy." The following things are also crutches for the same feelings: cars, money, power, editorships on college newspapers, knives and rolling pins. In the same paragraph you say you can't see how any "basic freedoms" are violated. It is interesting to note that the majority of states interpreted the "right to bear arms" in the Constitution as meaning individual rights.

Your ninth paragraph really is one of the most gross generalizations that has ever been printed. The first sentence makes a statement about "people" I have never personally known or heard of publicly. I have never heard anyone who wanted "law and order" oppose gun control. When you say "it is highly irrational to assume that the government will ever attempt to strip the American people of their firearms," it is evident that you have never read any of the "Congressional Record" "expoundings" along this line. If you wish, I will send you dozens of speeches by Congressmen pushing for total abolition of private gun ownership. There are also a couple of unregistered national lobbies pushing for no private ownership of firearms.

The last paragraph is really distorted! The majority of armed crime takes place in urban areas. The majority of armed crime in urban areas takes place in the ghetto. Why the "middle-class" wouldn't want gun control is beyond me.

I would like to say, in conclusion, that I am glad your infantile thinkings get publicly aired, but I am saddened to think of the vast public audience you can reach and preach your distortions to!

By BRUCE FISHER
State News Reviewer

In the Oct. 23 issue of the State News appeared a letter from Thomas Maksimchuk, Homer sophomore. Mr. Maksimchuk claims he was "very disappointed" with my 10/10 review of the Mantovani concert.

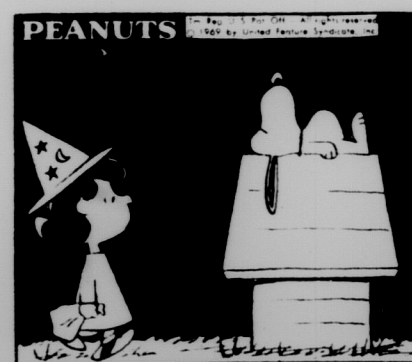

To me, Mr. Maksimchuk, and readers of reviews in general, a critic has three prime objectives: first, he must present his opinions with honesty, as well as candor; second, he must be read; and third, he must generate some measurable reaction in his readers, be that reaction favorable or unfavorable. My Mantovani review supplied the first objective, and Mr. Maksimchuk took care of the other two. My objectives have been met as a reviewer and I am delighted.

As for "qualifications," I have been observing conductors for what I feel is a "qualifying" length of time. I have been conducted for the past nine years in musical organizations, including eight Pennsylvania state musical festivals which were conducted by numerous highly qualified directors. I am now in my second year in State Singers, and my position as music reviewer for the State News has enabled me to observe the techniques of some of the world's finest conductors. To list more qualifications—and I could—would be sheer pretention, as if the above listing which Mr. Maksimchuk's letter requested isn't. Although I hardly consider myself an expert in the field of conducting, I do consider myself qualified to make a statement on a "technical" basis. I doubt that even Clive Barnes, theater critic for the N.Y. Times, considers himself capable of writing a top-notch Broadway show—but review them, he does.

One unfavorable review isn't going to keep Mantovani away from MSU. Hopefully he realizes the responsibilities of a reviewer as being someone who expresses a single opinion and speaks for no one but himself, in the literal sense of the phrase. To paraphrase Lincoln, sir, you can please all of the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the time, but you can't please all of the people all of the time.

And I might add, it isn't worth it to try.

ASMSU blasts senator's attack on blacks

By WHIT SIBLEY
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Board resolved Tuesday evening to introduce a letter to the Michigan Senate in reference to statements made Oct. 23 by Sen. John T. Bowman, D-Roseville, concerning last week's Holden Hall incident.

The board specifically deprecates the "language, irresponsibility and the total disregard for the personal feelings of black students at MSU by Bowman's resolution and public statements."

Bowman was reported in the Oct. 23 Senate Journal as saying that while he was driving to Lansing, he heard on the radio that once again there were problems at MSU "in the form of the old tactics used by hoodlums back in the days of Nazi Germany, in the form of so-called Black Liberation Front (BLF) walking into a cafeteria at MSU and forcing the white students to leave under the threat of violence and, in at least one instance, using violence."

He further said that he did not think that the citizens of the State of Michigan could any longer tolerate "this absurd and complete nonsense."

In an official resolution, Bowman asked that those students who had occupied

Holden Hall be dismissed from school and the proper charges be preferred against them.

His original resolution, which made reference to "black hoodlums" and "black bums" was toned down to read "black students."

The student board will present its letter to the Senate at 8 p.m. Monday and is in the process of arranging for those who support the move to be bused to the Capitol that evening.

The board voted to take this action at the request of Rodney Watts, political liaison to the BLF, who appeared before the board and asked that it let it be known that MSU students do not condone actions like those displayed by Bowman.

In other action, the board released $1,000 of already budgeted money to the ASMSU Office for Black Affairs for the purchase of 1,500 copies per week of the West Side News to be distributed to MSU black students over the next nine-month period. Part of each issue will be devoted to MSU black students, and will be written largely by them to gain experience in newspaper production.

Stan McClinton, vice president for black affairs, asked that the board look into the possibilities of a black member-at-large.

"If one of the 1,500 to 1,600 black students were to come in and look at the board during one of its meetings, he would see no blacks," McClinton said. "This could be an embarrassing situation."

The board's policy committee will study the matter of student representation and will give a report in the near future.

The board voted to utilize the necessary amount of its professional consultation fund to retain a lawyer to study the legal implications of changing Olin Health Center's policies concerning the dispersing of birth control pills, in the event that all other voluntary sources are exhausted.

The board voted to drop the requirement that all all-University mixers be registered because the registration "serves no useful purpose, has failed in the objectives for which it was intended, is unenforceable and is a nuisance to those who attempt to comply with it."

The policy was established originally to prevent the holding of more than two all-University mixers on one night. Actually, there are often many mixers held on the same night, with few of them registered as all-University mixers. The majority are open to anyone who wishes to attend because student I.D.'s are rarely checked.

A motion in absentia from board Vice Chairman Chuck Mostov asking that Nov. 14 classes be made optional, alternative meetings be arranged and University facilities for discussion and debate be made available was passed and will be sent to the Academic Council for final approval.

It was announced that a fund drive for the Listening Ear, a crisis intervention center, will be held Wednesday. Volunteers are needed to help with the drive and any interested persons should contact the Crisis Intervention Center.

General member-at-large Gary Klinisky and Gina Schack, Miami Fla. junior, were appointed as student representatives to the Distinguished Faculty Selection Committee.

Student Board Comptroller Beryl Simonson was appointed student representative to the University Business Affairs Committee.

Applications for positions on the Joint Downtown Redevelopment Committee (JDRC), are available at the ASMSU office on the third floor, Student Services Bldg.

The JDRC was formed by the Greater East Lansing Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the City of East Lansing to plan and implement the redevelopment of the East Lansing central business district.

The State News came under attack for its new "It's What's Happening" policy which requires a $1 fee for each item submitted, and that items be submitted at the State News

Classified Ad Dept. by noon prior to the date of intended publication.

The service is currently free; the policy becomes effective Saturday.

IMMORAL BASIS

Modern election strategy aimed at avoiding issues

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

Political candidates should use the communications media "morally and candidly" in election campaigns, Zolten Ferency, former state Democratic party chairman, said Thursday.

Ferency, the 1966 Democratic gubernatorial nominee said he does not object to candidates using advertising agencies, the mass media and modern marketing techniques in campaigns, as long as issues are not avoided.

"As soon as the American people realize what's being done by modern political campaign techniques, these techniques will no longer be of value," he said.

"I'm not opposed to using the communication media," he added. "I'm just suggesting that we use them morally and candidly."

Ferency criticized Hubert Humphrey and President Nixon for failing to deal with the major issues of race, foreign policy and poverty during the 1968 presidential campaign.

"There have been no in-depth presentations by candidates for major political offices since the 1950s," he said. "We deserve to have information."

Ferency said candidates like Nelson Rockefeller, Ronald Reagan and even Nixon were elected more by skillful public relations firms than on the basis of their positions on the issues.

"I think we're presenting candidates on an immoral basis today," Ferency said. "We're destroying the concept of government by consent of the governed."

He said candidates who appeal to citizens on the emotional level will "destroy honest pursuits, hopes and dreams."

"Politicians have an obligation to avoid this kind of campaigning. The best way to attack it is to expose it," he said.

"We're not going to cure this problem by allowing it to continue," he added.

Ferency said universities turning out professional journalists, public relations men and marketing analysts should train them to be "moral, truthful and honest" in their professions.

"We've got to begin to trust each other, and those of us who recognize the abuse of professional expertise must point that out to the abused," he said.

"The American people," he continued, "are not stupid or herdbound. If they can be shown that they've been 'had', then somehow or other they can be 'unhad'."

Ferency said he will make the question of campaign strategies an issue in any campaign in which he participates. He added that he hasn't yet decided whether he will seek the 1970 Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Church finds itself among targets of criticism

By LINDA WHELPLEY

Today no societal institution escapes criticism, including the church.

This criticism takes many forms, including protests demonstrations and both serious and satirical writing. One such religious satirist, the Rev. Charles Merrill Smith pastor of the First Congregationalist Church has leveled criticism in his book, "How to Be a Bishop Without Being Religious" and "When the Saints Go Marching Out."

The Rev. Smith has said that he uses light satire because if it is too heavy it fails.

Although only one local minister who was interviewed had read Smith's books many commented on satire and results of criticizing the church.

The Rev. Alden B. Burns, pastor of the University United Methodist Church, said he enjoyed "How to Be a Bishop" because the "idiosyncrasies of ecclesiastical life" were well portrayed.

The Rev. Mr. Burns like the other clergymen interviewed, said he believes there is a place for humor in the church, if it is constructive.

"Delicious satire of the church is needed," The Rev. William A. Eddy, of All Saints Episcopal Church, said. "The church is like any other institution. It should take its work seriously, but not its own life."

The Rev. E. Eugene Williams, pastor of East Lansing Trinity Church, said that he believes it is necessary to criticize the church, but it is also necessary to help make it strong.

All the clergymen also agree that results of constant criticism may be devastating to the future of the church.

"Young talented church leaders are leaving the church as an institution because it has been flagellated just too much," The Rev. Mr. Williams explained.

"They are tired of being criticized with no relief in sight."

"These ministers then get involved in the social gospel, with peace causes and racial issues," explained The Rev. Keith I. Pohl, also of the University United Methodist Church. "They at least feel they are doing something that will bear fruits."

The ministers offered many varying solutions to the problems of the church. One minister said that youth could help strengthen the church because of their energy and enthusiasm. Another explained that the faithful people of the church will act positively and are already doing so.

The Rev. Roger Palms of the American Baptist Student Foundation said, "I am the best critic of my own group, because I'm working from within to improve it."

The church, like various other institutions, finds it hard to applaud itself thus making it difficult to dispel most criticism.

The Rev. Mr. Eddy, explaining the difficulty said: "The extremists make the most noise; the middle people just live the Christian life which is not sensational. Faith, hope and charity are hard to see. And just how do you report religion and the Christian life?"

The Rev. Edward Lammert of St. John's Catholic Parish said that when criticizing the Bible and the saints, as Smith did in his last book, consideration of the culture and time in which the Bible was written is imperative.

"Get into the writer's mind and see what he was trying to do," he said. "He wrote what he knew about."

The Rev. Mr. Pohl recalling the Old Testament prophets said "Those prophets were critical of the Old Testament church...more critical than the modern prophets."

Pope gives 2-year extension to simplified Mass deadline

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul VI gave a two-year extension Thursday on the deadline for Roman Catholics to start using a new, simplified Mass that has been assailed by two conservative Italian cardinals as bordering on heresy.

The new mass offers many prayers long familiar to Catholics and includes part of the Lord's Prayer, with the ending used by Protestants. It was to go into effect Nov. 30 of this year, or as soon thereafter as the Latin documents could be satisfactorily translated into local languages.

The Pope's decision caused surprise among American Catholic experts in Washington, D.C., who have been preparing the English-language version of the new Mass for introduction early next year.

"I haven't a clue what it's all about," said the Rev. Gerald Sigler, executive director of the International Committee on English in the Liturgy, which has been coordinating common text for all the English-speaking countries.

"Everything has been geared to rush production," he said. "The American bishops may be able to go ahead with interim materials."

The pontiff's order delaying the use of the new Mass until Nov. 28, 1971 said the purpose is to allow bishops around the world more time to put the service into their national languages.

The order, issued through the Vatican's Congregation for Divine Worship, confirmed the validity of the reform but allows some elderly priests to continue saying Mass in the old way even after the new deadline. It said elderly priests who can be excused are those "who perhaps experience special difficulty adjusting themselves" to the new reform.

The two cardinals who criticized the new Mass in an unprecedented public protest are Alfredo Cardinal Ottaviani, 79, and Antonio Cardinal Bacci, 84.

Both disclosed on Wednesday that they had asked Pope Paul to repeal the new Mass, which they called "outrageous." The Pope's order delaying, but not abandoning the changes, was regarded as a rejection of their appeal.

Cardinals Bacci and Ottaviani said the new Mass represented "an impressive estrangement from the Roman Catholic theology on the Holy Mass."

They said it was "a clear attack on dogma...such as to please in many points the most avant-garde Protestants."

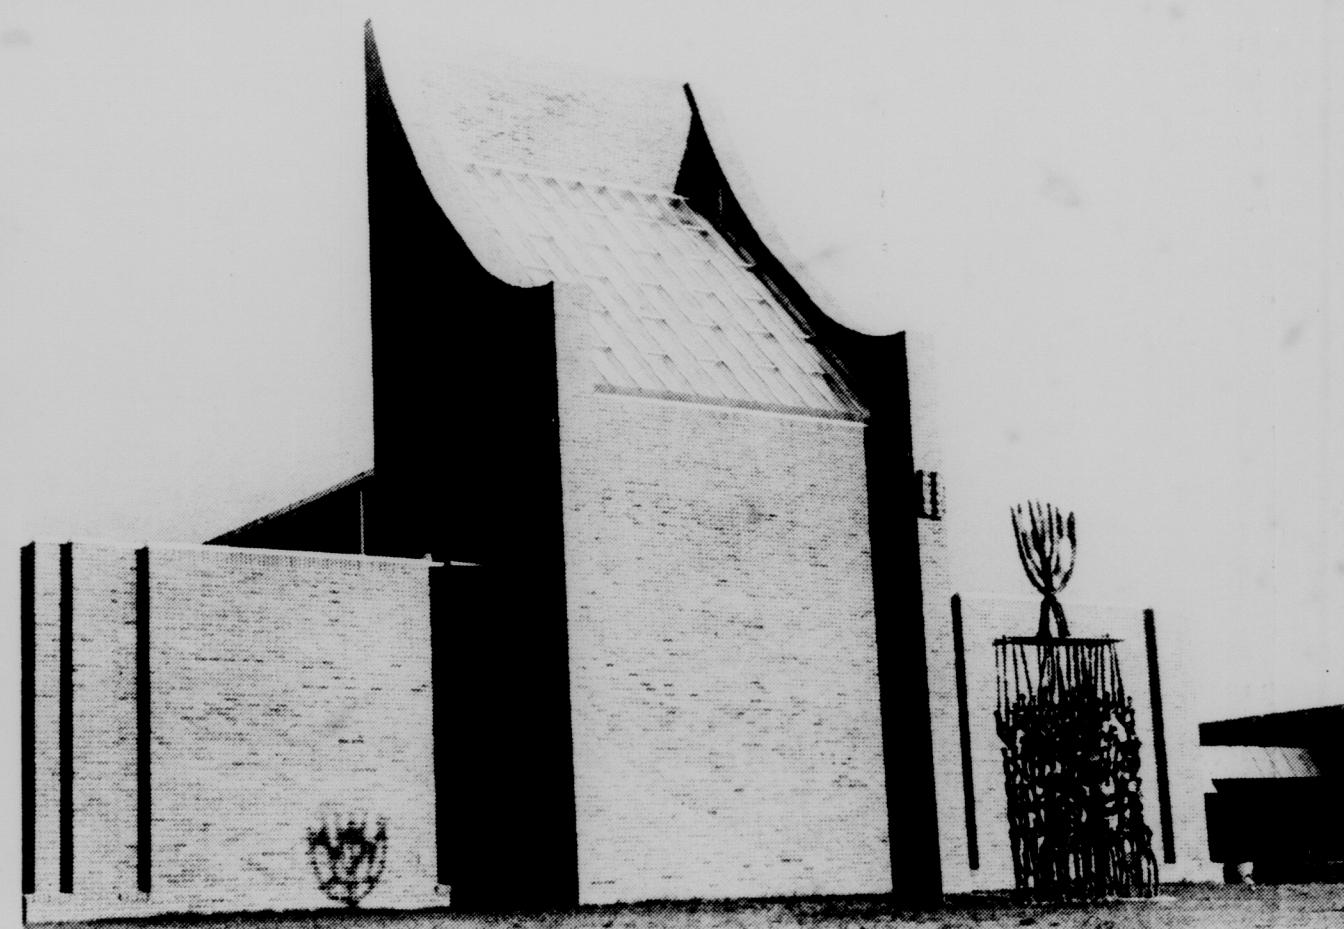

The postponement did not come as a surprise, since it was known many national bishops' conferences were experiencing delays in the difficult work of translating the Latin form of the new Mass into modern tongues.

The Pope's order cited this as one of "number of serious difficulties" in putting the reform into effect by the Nov. 30 date.

As another, it recognized "the problems of readjustment to the changes among clergy and the faithful."

It said the Latin text of the order of the Mass may be used from Nov. 30, and the Latin text of the Roman Missal may be used as soon as it is published.

But the bishops' conferences will establish the day to use the vernacular texts of both the order of the Mass and the Missal, it said, specifying that these dates must be no later than Nov. 28, 1971.

SCAPEGOATS FOR RIGHTISTS

War end threatens Jewry

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — The president of Brandeis University said Wednesday that American Jews will be threatened after the Vietnam war by frustrated rightists seeking a scapegoat for lack of a victory.

"Western history has a favorite—the Jew," said Morris B. Abram. His remarks came in a prepared address to 3,000 persons at a hotel banquet climaxing the Union of American Hebrew Congregations (UAHC) general assembly.

The central organization of Reform Judaism, liberal in the world view, has opposed the war for some time. A few hours before the Abram speech the UAHC adopted resolutions asking an immediate cease-fire in Vietnam and supporting selective conscientious objection.

"The post-Vietnam period will hold a very real threat for American Jewry—this time a danger from the right" said Abram.

The head of the Jewish-supported nonsectarian university at Waltham, Mass., called the Kennedys and Senators Eugene McCarthy, William Fulbright, George McGovern and Charles Goodell

"the national leaders of the political movement to end the Vietnam war, and the objective history of the times will so record these facts."

"However," he added, a popular and distorted version of this history may well ignore these names and focus instead upon others: the Lowensteins, the Javits, the Goldbergs."

Abrams, U.S. representative to the U.N. Human Rights Commission from 1965 until he went to Brandeis in 1968, said modern history "indicates the Jew has found security only in the moderate climate of liberal democracy."

Abram said the United States "is listing dangerously to the right."

"The Jew is never really safe in either a right-wing or a left-wing society. Although he may prosper temporarily in either, he lives always at the lip of a precipice."

'GREAT ISSUES'

Abortion reform
aired for class

By DOLLAY MAJOR
State News Staff Writer
and
JAMES JAJICH

Michigan Supreme Court Justice John P. Dethmers and a senator's executive asst. discussed Michigan abortion laws with a Great Issues class Wednesday in Erikson Hall.

Janice Marquie, executive administrative asst. to state Sen. Gilbert E. Bursley, R-Ann Arbor, was present to explain reforms in Michigan's abortion law.

Bursley currently has an abortion reform bill on the Senate floor. The Bursley bill would allow accredited hospitals to perform abortions in cases where the mother's health is in danger, pregnancy resulting from rape and in cases where the child would be born with mental or physical defects.

Another bill by Sen. John E. McCauley, D-Wyondotte, has also been introduced to the legislature and would leave the decision of whether to have an abortion strictly between the woman and her doctor.

"This is not a party issue," Mrs. Marquie said. "The need for reform in abortion is so great that it can't evolve into one."

She said that the abortion laws in Michigan, on the books since 1831, were originally put there to protect the woman's life, but that modern medical technology has made abortions safer than an appendectomy.

Mrs. Marquie estimated that "roughly a million to a million and a half abortions are performed a year."

"Last year, there were 15,000 requests for abortions from Michigan alone," she said.

She said the ideal step would be to repeal the current abortion laws on Michigan's lawbooks, enabling physicians to perform the abortions in hospitals.

"This would leave it up to the physician, he could perform the abortion if he wanted to."

She said that most of the opposition to the two abortion bills before the legislature is from the Catholic Church.

"It's almost entirely the Catholic Church. We get a letter or a pamphlet or a newspaper clipping about every two weeks that opposes abortion."

She said this is a case of one group imposing its morality on others.

She added that some religious organizations have given their support to the bills before the legislature, and she named the Michigan Council of Churches and the Unitarian church which has organized a counseling service for problem pregnancies.

In a recent statewide poll, 77 per cent of the population was in favor of abolishing the present abortion law, Mrs. Marquie said.

'U' ROTC organizations
begin selection of sponsors

By CYNTHIA NEAL
State News Staff Writer

Cadets representing various ROTC organizations met 32 women nominated by residence halls and sororities Wednesday evening as the first stage in the selection of the Army ROTC corps sponsors.

The groups selecting sponsors this year include the cadet honorary battalion, cadet battalion, Pershing Rifles, Scabbard and Blade, Ranger I and Spartan Guard.

Pershing Rifles is a national ROTC honorary for basic-freshman and sophomore-cadets, while Scabbard and Blade serves the same function for advanced cadets.

Spartan Guard is an exhibition drill team open to ROTC cadets and students not enrolled in the program. Ranger I is also open for cadets and other persons interested in mountaineering, skiing, special field trips and counter-guerilla activities.

The women nominated for sponsors select two activities which they would like to sponsor. From their preferences, the men will select five for each group and meet with candidates again before making their final selections in November.

Edward Sever, cadet commandant, referred to the sponsors as "an outside influence" to be incorporated with the military. He added that they would like to include the sponsors in planning social functions, programs and activities.

"Your capacity as a corps sponsor will be limited only by what you want to do," Sever told them.

The selection process is being handled somewhat differently this year. The nominees are given a chance to decide which group they would like to sponsor.

In the past, they were questioned individually before the group of cadets and judged on their responses with no choice as to which activity they preferred.

Besides the revised selection process, the cadet groups are emphasizing increased participation by their sponsors, a traditional part of the ROTC extracurricular program at MSU.

Lt. Col. Eldon Clark, associate professor of military science and one of the speakers for the evening, addressed the group on the history of ROTC at MSU. He traced its evolution from the 1861 Plowboy Guard, through the beginning of the ROTC program, four wars, various curriculum changes and the ROTC Revitalization Act.

Clark noted how the university influence has become increasingly stronger in a discipline traditionally dominated by the Defense Dept. "Without university concern or college leadership, the military in the United States could conceivably evolve into a fascist or military dictatorship," he said.

Chemistry
petition due
for USAC

The Undergraduate Student Advisory Committee (USAC) for the Chemistry Dept. is accepting petitions for membership from interested students in all majors for the school year. Petitions must be in today.

The USAC was formed to advance student involvement in the Chemistry Dept.

To petition for the committee, a student should write a letter indicating why he would like to on the committee, his major, year in college and information about his academic background.

Petitions should be delivered or mailed to the committee in care of the Chemistry Dept. Office, 320 Chemistry Bldg.

For further information, contact Paul Herstein at 315 Abbot Hall, 355-6365.

POLICE CAUTION

Lock up for Homecoming

Due to the large number of visitors expected on campus over Homecoming weekend, the Dept. of Public Safety (DPS) asks students to take extra precautions to protect their belongings from theft.

Leaving rooms unlocked for Homecoming guests may also be an invitation for thieves, according to the DPS.

Theft losses this week rose to more than $2,330, well over last week's total, according to University police.

Shirley McGinnis, 372 E. Fee Hall, reported Tuesday that a tape recorder worth $80 was taken from her room.

Linda Grundy, 906 S. Hubbard Hall reported a watch valued at $75 taken from her room Monday.

Gerald Trudell reported $62 in cash taken Tuesday from his room at 264 W. Shaw Hall.

A jacket valued at $27, belonging to David Purol, 219 W. Shaw Hall, was taken from his room Tuesday afternoon.

An oil painting valued at $700 belonging to Clinton McChesney of Williamston was taken Wednesday from the first floor of Kresge Art Center.

Paul Buonodoni, 1673 Boulevard Dr., Okemos, reported a coronet worth $250 and a tire worth $29 taken from his car while it was parked in the Auditorium lot Monday.

Ernest Reynolds, 331 W. Saginaw, reported a wheel and jack taken from his car Monday.

MHA, WIC OK plans for east campus I.M.

MHA and WIC gave their support Tuesday to a resolution for a new multipurpose coed sports facility for the benefit of east complex students.

The resolution, initiated by the Holmes Hall Legislature, proposes construction of a sports complex which would include matted rooms for wrestling, indoor facilities for swimming, basketball and paddleball, as well as outdoor tennis courts.

The present intramural buildings, completed in 1958 and designed for the use of only 20,000 students, were outdated five years later according to Harris F. Beeman, intramural director.

"It's a half hour walk for students in residence halls like Fee and Akers," Beeman said. "Wet hair from showers is unhealthy when a student is exposed to the cold for so long."

Athletic claimmen representing east complex are distributing petitions in their residence halls supporting the resolution.

The Sunday concert story

By DOLLY MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

To some people, happiness is a free concert on a Sunday afternoon. To Al Shugart, the happiness is providing concerts for people.

Tall, blond and a victim of the hippie syndrome, Shugart is one of eight organizers for the weekly concerts provided free for the public every Sunday afternoon.

As Shugart tells it, he became involved simply by attending one of the concerts five weeks ago.

"One Sunday they just announced that they needed help, and a friend turned to me and asked me if I wanted to work on it. I said 'yeah.' That was five weeks ago."

Since that time, Shugart has spent more hours on the phone arranging concerts than some students spend in academic pursuits.

"Well, I figure that last week I put in a good 20 hours—if not more—probably more."

Sunday he starts making arrangements for the concert at 10:30 a.m. and isn't through until long after the concert is over. He usually starts home at 8:30 p.m.

During the week, it's a marathon in organization, contacting the bands, selling them on the idea of giving a concert without pay, hearing the bands, putting together a program, having posters made, putting up the posters and making last-minute arrangements.

"We're pretty self-sufficient," Shugart said. "We even make our own signs now. We used to have them made, but we've gotten pretty good at it ourselves."

Adviser to the group is Bruce Forche, the man who started the concerts this summer.

"The concerts have been quite a success. In the beginning we drew a few hundred people, but only two weeks ago we had a record crowd of 3,000," Forche said.

He said that the summer left him quite a master at fast-talking bands into playing for free.

"They were mostly my friends, and I talked them into doing it for the publicity."

Forche said that like most people, he had trouble explaining the philosophy behind the weekly free concerts.

"The idea is just to get people together to enjoy themselves. It's not a political thing; it's peace and love and things like that. We're all getting together."

He said that when he first formulated the plan for the concerts, area police officials were skeptical at the idea of a group of young people getting together. But, Forche said,

"There's never been any hassle with the police. They don't bother us."

How successful are the concerts?

"The kids are really digging it," Forche said.

With the onset of winter, the group received formal recognition as a University organization and has obtained the indoor facilities of the MSU Judging Pavilion, across from the International Center.

Members of the group include Debbie Benedict, Bob Farmer, Linda Daum, Brandt Caudill, Steve Seven, Greg Winterhalter and Jan Riemer.

Miss Riemer describes herself as the quarterback for the group. She said that current plans include building a stage for the Sunday afternoon performances in the Judging Pavilion.

Miss Riemer said that because finances are low, the group is thinking of taking up a collection during the concerts to pay for the stage and a few outstanding debts. She got involved in working for the Sunday concerts at the same time Shugart did, and said she would stick with the organization.

"I do it mainly because it's so rewarding. We've actually only been thanked once by Bruce (Forche), but it's great to see the people enjoy themselves and really digging the music."

"The bands are always eager to play, too," she said. "They will come right up to us at the concerts and ask if they can play for us."

Shugart said that the Sunday free concerts will continue as long as the group can afford it.

"We pay for it out of our own pockets, money for the posters and the food usually runs about $15 to $20 a week—if we don't run into trouble."

The food consists of apples and candy that is passed among the people who come to the concert.

The week's concert will feature the Sand, Mission and Tom and Linda Dufelmeier.

'U' radio stations meet varied tastes

By LORAIN ANDERSON

A number of radio stations on campus, which differ not only in programming techniques but also in management offer varying listening opportunities for diverse interests.

The two main broadcast stations are WKAR, an AM-FM station, and WMSN, a campus-only network. Both are non-commercial stations but that is where similarities end.

WKAR AM-FM is a part of Continuing Education and is financed by the University. It is licensed by the Federal Communications Commission as a non-commercial station and must follow FCC regulations. It sends signals covering approximately 80 to 90 per cent of Michigan. For this reason, its programming techniques differ greatly from those of the campus stations.

"We're trying to change the 'educational broadcast' misnomer to 'public broadcasting,'" Steve Meuche, program director of WKAR, said. "We're not an instructional station."

The FM broadcast is devoted to find arts. Eighty per cent of the programming is music—classical, blues and jazz. Recorded lectures from speakers on campus are also offered.

The AM broadcast is mainly an information station with large blocks of time for news and public affairs. Both AM and FM are affiliated with the National Education Radio Network which offers programs about public affairs, authors and symphonies.

"We never purposely ignore students," Meuche said, "but we are a regional station with a varied audience."

"Forum," one program designed especially for student interest is offered on Sunday nights. A guest from the University answers questions from a student panel for the first half hour. Listeners may phone in questions they would like answered the second half hour.

WKAR is not student-operated. Twenty-two full-time employees and 26 part-time student employees work there.

MSN network differs from WKAR in that it broadcasts only to residence halls. The student network stations are WBRS in the Brody Complex, WEAK serving Wilson and Wonders, WKME in Shaw WMKD in McDowell and WFEE in Fee.

WFEE started last spring and will soon become a part of the network. Dorm stations must operate one year before obtaining membership. WMSN, located in the Student Services Building, is the central station and serves all the residence halls, not covered by the other stations. WMSN originates many of the programs used by its affiliated stations. All the separate stations have a chance to work together with WMSN in creating the programs.

Fraternities debate retention of traditional housemother

By ROGER L. TREMBLAY

Hamlet may have been the first to say, "To be or not to be," but MSU Greek men are presently contemplating that question in respect to retaining the traditional housemother.

Fraternities on many university campuses no longer believe that housemothers are an essential part in the functioning of a well run house, and many are dismissing their female advisers.

Although many fraternities at MSU continue to have a housemother living in the house, 19 of the 33 fraternities on campus have hired graduate students as advisers to take over the duties of the housemother.

Three areas are considered when the houses are forced to choose between a housemother or a graduate student adviser. The economic factor involved.

--The availability of talented and qualified women candidates.

--The preference of the brothers who desire a housemother.

The houses on campus that cannot afford housemothers are the smaller ones where the issue is simply not being able to afford the salary. Since a graduate student would live in the house for much less pay, the choice is a matter of expediency.

All women who apply for housemother's jobs are interviewed by Edwin Reuling, fraternity advisor, and carefully screened by the prospective Greek unit. In the last five years, there has been a definite decrease in the number of qualified applicants. Last year, out of more than 30 applicants, Reuling was able to personally recommend only four.

Therefore, not enough qualified women are available to fill the vacancies when housemothers retire.

The preference of the brothers who live in the house seeking a housemother is perhaps the most critical consideration and also the one that brings the most comment. An increasing number of fraternity members do not feel that the female advisor is a worthwhile asset to the house.

Even the housemothers, who are confronted by the new trend, feel that because the University is becoming more liberal, their duties have been reduced to the point where their function may be more appropriately handled by a graduate advisor.

However almost half of the houses at MSU feel that having a housemother is still essential. Donald B. Elliott, Saginaw senior and member of Lambda Chi Alpha, said that he feels housemothers are on the way out, but this trend is not here to stay.

"Fraternities who have decided that having a graduate advisor is better than a housemother will soon have to re-evaluate their situation and return to having a housemother to keep order and maintain a decorum within the house that a male student adviser is incapable of doing because of his proximity to the peer group," Elliott said.

"The fraternity house is like a magnified household and the need for a woman in that situation will not come to an end," Mrs. Ruth C. Sussex, Theta Chi housemother said "and in order to do so, the housemother must change with the times."

Reuling said that because of the classification of supervised off-campus housing given to fraternities they must continue to have supervision if they wish to remain in sanction with the University.

"The question remains whether or not fraternities will retain the traditional structure or take a more progressive attitude towards their supervision, possibly asking for no supervision at all," Reuling said.

French love song hits U.S. after storming Europe

By RAY WALSH
State News Staff Writer

How can a record become a bestseller without being played on radio stations?

A controversial new record by British model Jane Birkin and French composer Serge Gainsbourg has done just that, taking Europe by storm the last few weeks.

Recently the top best-selling song in England, France, Holland and Denmark, "Je T'Aime... Moi Non Plus" was promoted through heavy play in discotheques, boutiques and clubs, and has just been released in America.

Considered obscene by "Establishment" standards, the record is a breath takingly beautiful song that consists of five verses of vocals, coupled with ardent sound effects of sighing and panting.

Sung entirely in French, its title roughly translates as "I Love You... Me -- Not Anymore" and is accompanied by smooth musical instrumentation similar to Paul Mauriat's.

Criticism can be made of Miss Birkin's voice quality (it often breaks), but it is pretty apparent that the song wasn't released to demonstrate her vocal abilities.

The French lyrics of the song don't have to be translated to enjoy the song, the ecstatic breathing and groaning make it every evident that these are words that are spoken (sung?) while making love.

The song's lyrics have also been raising controversy, however, especially when Jane whispers in French, "You are the wave, I am naked before you / you go, you go and you come / between my loins... and I receive you."

According to Ron Oberman, publicity director for Mercury Records in Chicago, Italian police raided their office in Milan and confiscated all the copies that they could get their hands on.

It's also been banned from airplay and sales in Sweden, a liberal country where such things are rare, if not unheard of.

In the Lansing-East Lansing area, only WVIC has been playing the song. This week it reached their playlists as a "hitbound," and night-time disc jockey Jack Hines called it "the most sensual song that I've heard."

Disc jockeys at WILS and WMSN replied to phone calls by saying that it was not on their playlists, while WJIM's programming director Tom Jones said that he had never heard of it and that they weren't playing it as of yet.

'Johnny Cash Show' returning; same live country, folk, pop

Because of success as an ABC summer replacement, the "Johnny Cash Show" will return to the air in January.

The show, beginning in January, will be virtually the same as the summer show, featuring Cash before live audiences at the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, Tenn., backed up by a variety of performers representing current moods of country, folk and pop music.

'Medium Cool' tries fiction-reality fusion

With "Medium Cool," award-winning cameraman Haskell Wexler has attempted one of the most ambitious film projects in recent years.

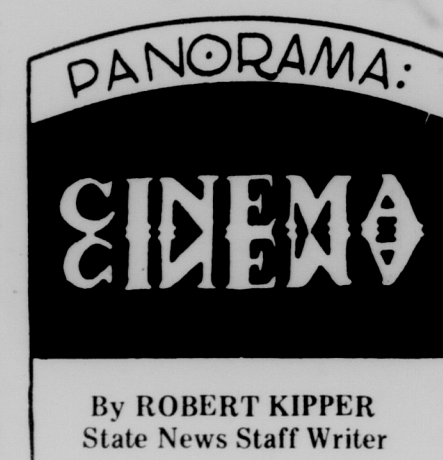

He has set out to combine fiction and reality into one cohesive film, mixing actors with real people and fictional narrative with real events.

Wexler has, in essence, sought to free the commercial film from the restrictions of a constructed set and scripted actors and tell a fictional story against the unique backdrop of actual events, filmed as they happened.

In the end, despite Wexler's determined efforts, fiction and reality remain separate entities that work against each other and the film's sense of unity as well.

To understand why these elements remain unbalanced, we merely have to examine what sort of fictional story and what sort of real events Wexler chose to combine.

His narrative deals with a love affair between a television cameraman and a displaced Southern woman who is

By ROBERT KIPPER
State News Staff Writer

attempting to raise her son in an alien urban ghetto without the aid of a father.

His real events cover a wide spectrum of American problems from black hostility to student unrest to an underprivileged child quietly yearning for a decent education. The events are climaxed by the tumultuous events surrounding the 1968 Democratic Convention. (How Wexler and associates recorded the Chicago riot, personally getting tear gassed and pushed around by the police, is a story in itself.)

The task of channeling our interest between the real aspects and the fictional ones was clearly beyond Wexler's control.

Wexler's decision to attempt to do so was unfortunate since his documentary footage possessed a power and urgency to more than qualify it to stand on its own. His camera eye is so perceptive in its searching so complete in its capturing the temper of a restless and changing nation, it doesn't require the assistance of a mechanical plot to warrant our attention.

As the film continues to divide its time and energy between fact and fiction, we sense that Wexler has attempted to accomplish too much in one film. Besides filming "Medium Cool," Wexler wrote, directed and co-produced it.

His chief mistake, however, was not in overestimating his talents but in refusing to narrow the scope of his film and in failing to realize the importance of doing so.

He tries to comment about as many of America's social and political ills as possible and ends up without a definitive statement regarding any one problem.

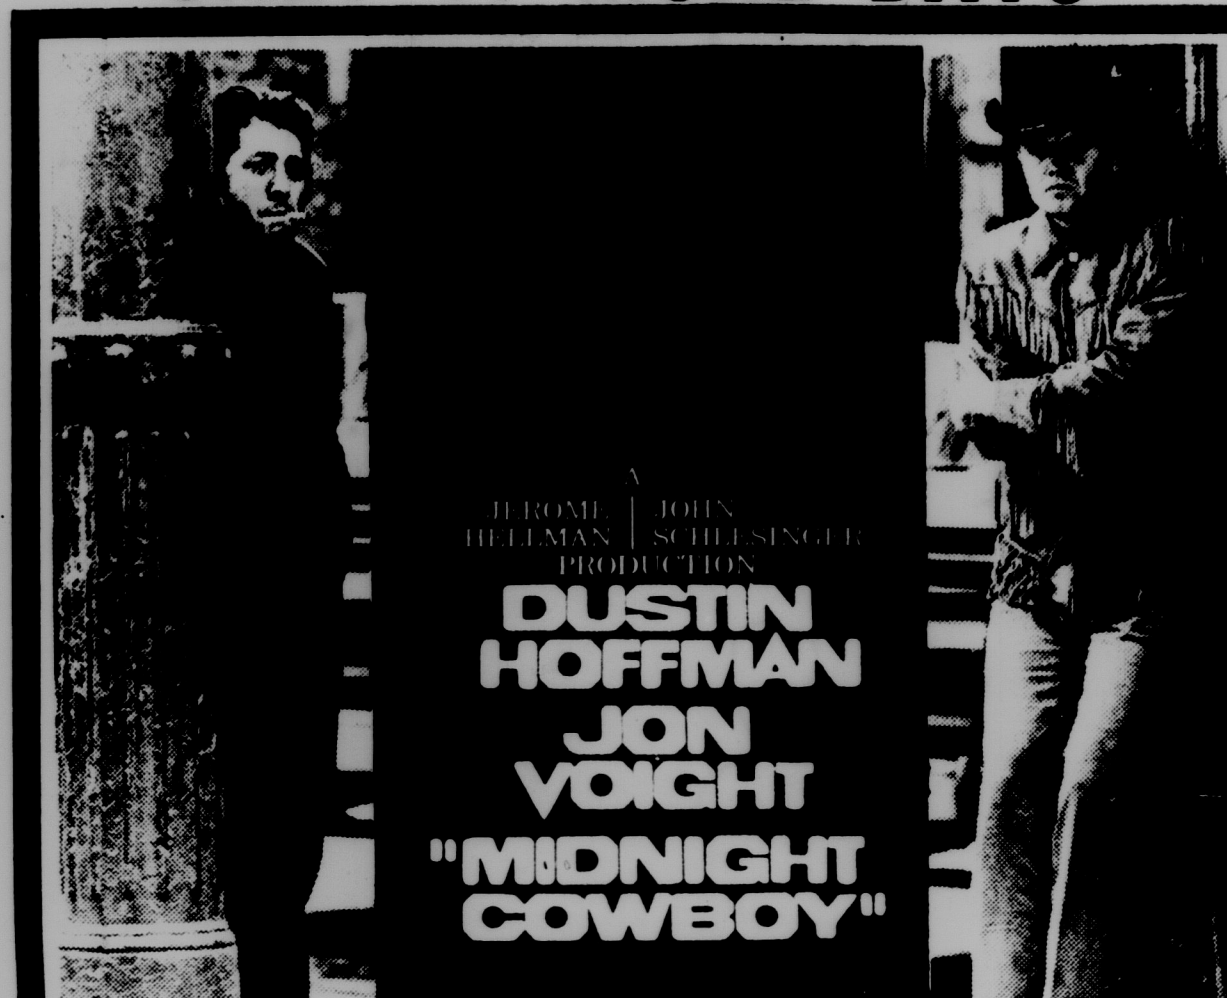

What Wexler has provided is a series of perceptive glimpses of America's personal and national sorrows. "Medium Cool" then, stands as a collective reminder that our country is in trouble and direly in need of reform.

The film provides no solutions and is rarely specific enough to suggest any. Its service to us is primarily that of the cameraman who captures everything his shutter can contain without openly interpreting his camera's findings.

Robert Forster, as the cameraman, Verna Bloom, as the Southern mother and Harold Blankenship, as her son, do amazingly well considering their awkward roles. They are flanked by an admirable cast of professional and non-professional actors, many of whom were unaware that a movie camera was recording their actions.

It's ridiculous to talk about whether or not "Medium Cool" is worth seeing. Of course it is. Any film as ambitious and purposeful as "Medium Cool" is infinitely worth seeing, in spite of its imperfections in design.

Award-winning film poses view of human compassion

By MAJA
State News Reviewer

There are 12 children and 8 staff members living in House 2 at Warrendale. Twenty years ago, these youngsters would have been called "possessed;" today we term them emotionally disturbed.

They are not brain-damaged children or mentally retarded; they are simply unable to cope with emotions such as love, hate, fear and anger in the "normal" way. The staff members replace their parents in an attempt to help these kids become acceptable to society outside the institution: a job that requires a lot of love, patience and physical strength.

Done in the cinema verite style, "Warrendale" was originally produced for the Canadian television network. When it was completed, however, the network refused to show it, largely because one little boy persists in saying "bullshit."

So, instead, it became a film, and won both the International Film Critics' Prize at the 1967 Cannes Film Festival and the grand prize for best feature film at Expo 67, and was an invited entry at the 1967 New York and San Francisco film festivals. In short, it has an impressive slate of credentials.

In making the film, King spent five weeks at Warrendale without ever shooting a foot of film. Then another five weeks were spent accumulating some 40 hours of film, which in turn were edited down to the present length.

In the course of "Warrendale," we meet Tony, a rather precocious young gentleman of about 10 years who has a tendency to flavor his vocabulary; Carol, a bottle-fed 15-year-old; Irene, whose dominating emotion is bitterness toward everyone, including herself; and nine others. We become acquainted with the staff, notably Terry Adler and Walter Gunn, whose entire lives rotate around the children.

King takes the audience into the happy hours of their lives, and into the distraught ones, when physical force -- not drugs or straight jackets, as in other institutions -- is used to control the youngsters during a tantrum, to allow them free expression of their feelings, rather than to kill any feelings off.

The holding method which Warrendale uses brings to the children a sense of being cared about, and also prevents them from hurting themselves or others.

When the children are told of the death of the cook, a beloved member of the House, mass hysteria breaks out and the counselors have their hands full -- two or three are sometimes required to hold one child -- to convince the kids that they are not responsible. It is certainly impressive to see those children who do not explode help their less controlled comrades.

"Warrendale" is not, however, a documentary of a technique or a study of psychological torment. It is a human -- a deeply moving -- story of confused children and those who help them. It is, indeed, sad that, largely due to controversy over this film, Warrendale no longer exists in its presented form.

'BS&T' defy classification'

Tradition tries again as the campus community prepares for another Homecoming weekend. The central activity is of course, the football game with Indiana Saturday. At 3 this afternoon, 30 floats will make their way around campus giving the student body a closer look at this year's Homecoming queen.

The Homecoming committee has joined forces with ASMSU's Popular Entertainment series to bring Blood, Sweat & Tears to Jenison for Saturday's finale. Blood, Sweat & Tears is one of those groups which defies classification. They blend jazz, rock and blues with rare musical professionalism.

The group features a five piece brass section in addition to the usual rhythm section of drum, keyboard instruments and guitars. Their latest album, "Blood, Sweat & Tears," has been awarded a Gold Record, as have their single hits "You've Made Me So Very Happy," "Spinning Wheel," and "And When I Die."

Los Angeles Times critic Digby

Diehl described the group as "a powerhouse musical aggregation solidly in the rock idiom"; Saturday Review says "The usual rhythm section of drum, keyboard instruments and guitars. Their latest album, "Blood, Sweat & Tears," has been awarded a Gold Record, as have their single hits "You've Made Me So Very Happy," "Spinning Wheel," and "And When I Die."

Kopechne inquest

To insure the secrecy provision, the court ordered the transcript of the inquest impounded indefinitely. But it also insisted on the transcript's eventual publication.

"All facts concerning the inquiry must eventually be published," the court said, "and at the earliest possible time, consistent with fairness to all parties."

The court took special care to emphasize that its guidelines were to apply to all future inquests in Massachusetts -- not just to the Kopechne inquest.

"Few inquests may be likely to arouse public interest as this one has," the court noted.

But it added: "We shall not make any special rules for a particular case. The proposed inquest and all inquests hereafter shall proceed in compliance with the general principles herein specified."

The court also rejected the contention of Kennedy's lawyers that the inquest was of an accusatory nature.

"We think that the inquest proceedings are not accusatory and that they should be regarded as investigatory," the court said.

Nevertheless, if the proceedings are public, the activities of the news media may be such as to make it difficult, if not impossible, for a long time to insure to a defendant a fair trial in any criminal proceedings which may follow the inquest.

"The risk of prejudice in possible later proceedings from pretrial publicity remains," the court added.

The court left all other aspects of the inquest to the discretion of the presiding judge.

Kennedy's car plunged off a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island, off the Massachusetts coast, July 18. Although the senator escaped relatively unharmed, Miss Kopechne was trapped inside.

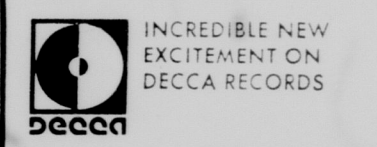

A medical examiner ruled her death an accidental drowning. The body was buried in Pennsylvania without an autopsy.

Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis, in whose jurisdiction the accident occurred, currently is seeking to have Judge Bernard C. Brominski in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., authorize exhumation of the body for an autopsy. The judge has not yet issued a ruling.

Nixon pledges help in desegregation act

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon pledged Thursday he will use the government's leadership resources to overcome "problems" raised by the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision.

But neither the White House nor the Justice Dept. would say whether this meant government civil rights lawyers would press for vigorous enforcement and wide application of the ruling that called for an end to delay. The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, which won the case over the government's opposition, began to move ahead on its own while awaiting a concrete response from the government to its plea for cooperation.

"I don't know what they are going to do," Jack Greenberg, the Fund's director-counsel, told an interviewer.

But Greenberg said Fund lawyers were mapping strategy to start applying the principle of Wednesday night's decision in a Mississippi case to pending school desegregation cases throughout the south and in parts of the north.

Nixon's statement emphasized the view that "practical and human problems" are involved. He went on: "With all of us working together in full respect for the law, I am confident we can overcome these problems.

"I intend to use the leadership resources of the executive branch of government to assist in every possible way of doing so."

The government, in a historic break with civil rights forces, had proposed delay in the desegregation of 33 Mississippi school districts.

The administration contended more time was needed to "validate" plans the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare had proposed and later withdrawn, and that it did not have "the bodies and the people" to enforce an "instant integration" order.

The Fund appealed to the Supreme Court on its own and obtained the ground-breaking decision that ordered an end to delay in the desegregation of public schools.

Fund lawyers met Thursday afternoon in mid-Manhattan to plan legal moves outside the Mississippi districts.

The first order of business was to fly copies of the Mississippi desegregation plans to the U.S. Circuit Court in New Orleans, which is charged with immediate implementation of the decision.

The Supreme Court instructed the Circuit Court to use part or all of the plans, or to make modifications, so long as the result was "a totally unitary school system for all eligible pupils without regard to race or color."

Greenberg said the session with Fund lawyers, including veteran attorneys Norman Chackin and Norman Amaker, was designed "to start applying the principle of the Supreme Court decision to other pending cases."

He said the Justice Dept. "ought to be doing that in its own cases."

Greenberg said the ruling could apply to more than 200 pending cases, including such northern cities as Denver.

Immediately after announcement of the decision Greenberg had urged the Justice Dept. to "come into the cases on our side and not oppose the hopes of Negro school children, as they did in the Mississippi cases."

In Jackson, Miss., meanwhile, A. F. Summer, the state's attorney general, said he expected the circuit court to put desegregation plans into effect immediately in Mississippi.

"It says now and we think it means now," Summer said in discussing the Supreme Court decision at a news conference.

The attorney general remarked also: "What is a unitary system? We've been trying to find that out for a long, long time. There is no school districts that has not followed an order of the court."

"They order a unitary system. They don't tell us what it is, but they say do it."

FUNDS FOR EDUCATION

New sales tax proposed

A state representative proposed a constitutional amendment Thursday that would increase the sales tax on all items except food and drugs by two cents.

George A. Prescott, R-Tawas City, said the increase would yield an additional $200 million for education.

"I feel this approach to raising needed revenue to finance education is necessary, because we can eliminate the burdensome taxing of the basic necessities of food and drugs and still provide new revenue," he said.

This would be the fairest way to go in the interest of low income groups and senior citizens, Prescott said.

"If new money is needed, I think we should let the people help decide how it should be raised," he said, meaning a popular vote on the issue.

Prescott said he hopes the proposed amendment can be placed on the ballot for the general election in November 1970.
