Nixon to withdraw 150,000 troops

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon told the nation Monday night he plans to withdraw 150,000 additional U.S. troops from South Vietnam by May 1971 — and might order further withdrawals if there were progress on the negotiating front.

In a live television-radio address from the Western White House here, Nixon said: "The decision I have announced tonight means that we finally have in sight the just peace we are seeking. We can now say with confidence that pacification is succeeding. We can say with confidence that the South Vietnamese can develop the capability for their own defense. We can say with confidence that all American combat forces can and will be withdrawn. While the 150,000 withdrawal goal was triple any previous pullout figure, it will be stretched over a much longer time span. However, a White House official who declined to be identified by name said the new withdrawal target would mean the return to the United States of uniformed men at approximately the same rate as in recent months.

By May 1971, the official said, the authorized U.S. troop ceiling in South Vietnam would stand at 284,000, compared with a peak of 549,500 early in 1969.

Nixon said: "The timing and pace of these new withdrawals within the overall schedule will be determined by our best judgment of the current military and diplomatic situation."

The anonymous official emphasized, however, that the 150,000 target is irreversible under any foreseeable circumstances.

The chief executive said his decision "has the approval of the government of South Vietnam" but he did not claim it fully satisfied U.S. commanders in the field or the joint chiefs of staff. He merely said that the field commanders had been consulted.

While promising that "we shall withdraw more than 150,000 over the next year if we make progress on the negotiating front," Nixon said he "must report with regret that no progress has taken place" in the quest for a negotiated settlement.

The chief executive told his audience that the United States government has noted with interest a statement last week by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob Malik "concerning a possible new Geneva conference on Indochina."

The President said: "We do not yet know the full implications of this statement" but declared it was in the spirit of letters Nixon wrote on April 7 to all nations — including Communist China — which signed the 1962 Geneva Accord. In those letters, disclosed for the first time, the President urged "consultations and observance of the accords."

Nixon dealt only briefly with the touchy military situations in Laos and Cambodia, merely stating that thousands of Communist troops are on the offensive in those countries in violation of the Geneva agreements.

Stating that some risks were involved in undertaking the new round of U.S. troop withdrawals, Nixon cited events in Cambodia and Laos and added: "Men and supplies continue to pour down the Ho Chi Minh trail; and in the past two weeks the Communists have stepped up their attacks upon allied forces in South Vietnam.

"However, despite this new enemy activity, there has been an overall decline in enemy force level in South Vietnam since December."

Also on the hopeful side, Nixon noted that American combat deaths in the first three months of 1970 dropped to the lowest level for that period in five years.

And he claimed significant advances in the South Vietnamese pacification program and progress in upgrading the Saigon Army on a scale that "has substantially exceeded our original expectations."

At another point, the President said, "America has never been defeated in our proud 190-year history and we shall not be defeated in Vietnam."

Carswell's in the ring; plans Senate campaign

MIAMI (AP) — Judge G. Harrold Carswell announced Monday he will run for the U.S. Senate, which two weeks ago rejected his nomination as an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

attended by Carswell, his wife Virginia, Gov. Claude Kirk and U.S. Sen. Ed Gurney, R-Fla., and other top party leaders.

Osborne, who entered the Senate race several months ago, said he was withdrawing in favor of the Tallahassee judge.

Carswell said he had just resigned from the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals to seek the seat being vacated by retiring U.S. Sen. Spessard Holland, a Democrat.

"The Republican party today offers the best chance for the conservative government that our people want," Carswell told the packed news conference at a Miami hotel.

Carswell and his party left the conference immediately after the brief announcement.

On April 8, the U.S. Senate voted 51-45 against Carswell's nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Environmental teach-ins rooted in 'U' past

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

Ecological concern is not new to MSU. Almost 100 years ago a rather remarkable chemistry professor named Robert Clark Kedzie pleaded for the equivalent of today's environmental teach-in.

He called them sanitary conventions and they were aimed at attacking the problems of ecology, pollution and population.

As the first president of the State Board of Health, Kedzie's slogan was "Resist the beginnings of Evil," hoping to control problems before they became too big to handle.

"The subject of pollution of streams by sewage is a question of great importance to public health," Kedzie said in 1878, "but it is one that must be considered and acted before sewer systems become technically beyond control on account of the large outlay of money necessary to effect a change."

"The inertia of cities and corporations on such subjects, when any radical change involves the throwing away of large sums already invested and the expenditure of still larger funds on new systems, and all for so intangible and impersonal a matter as the public health, will prove an impassable barrier to changes in the future," he said.

Addressing himself to the problem of financing, Kedzie said a true economy will freely expend money to secure health because "nothing is so economical as health and nothing so wasteful as sickness."

Kedzie pointed out that the problem of pollution of rivers by sewage was being ignored.

"Detroit adopted a sewer system by which the sewage of a whole city was poured into the Detroit River. When anything was said about the contamination of the river water and that this water would become unfit for use by those living on the banks of the river below the city, the reply was ready that it was impossible to pollute such a mass of water by any amount of sewage."

He added that "a similar trouble may yet vex the people of Lansing." Sewage from Jackson State Prison was being poured into the Grand River, which flows from Jackson to Lansing.

Kedzie also mentioned that problems of pollution would continue to get worse with the increasing population.

His first practical program for improving the environment was a sanitary survey organized by the State Board of Health.

His survey demanded consideration of how the water supply, forest growth, drainage, temperature, rainfall and other factors effect health and disease.

The statistics gathered were made public immediately, for Kedzie knew the work of the State Board of Health never reached the mass of people and so the board could not enlist their aid.

"The sanitary conventions will thus react upon the public," he said, "setting many persons at work in different localities in the promotion of sanitary reforms."

Like ecologists today, Kedzie feared that people disregarded the dangers as something for the distant future to worry about.

But Kedzie did not just speak about problems. He acted.

Surveying the land in Michigan and providing its chemical analysis to farmers, Kedzie made the first systematic attempt to bring services of the college to farmers who could not or would not come to the college.

He proposed the school conduct farm institutes in Michigan's rural communities, and proved to the people that professors were concerned with practical matters and not just books.

In 1871, when terrific forest fires were endangering much of the state, Kedzie led his students on a gallant fight against the blaze that was threatening the campus from the northwest.

Ahead of his time in other areas, Kedzie once exhibited a few ounces of aluminum and predicted that someday it would be used extensively. Electricity was first used to light the chemistry laboratory in 1894 when Kedzie installed an Olds engine to turn a dynamo.

In one area, however, Kedzie remained unprogressive: Women's Liberation.

"In carrying out any sanitary reform we need and must have the aid of the women of our state," he said. But he added a qualification.

"When I make this statement do not hastily suppose that I add my voice to the crowd who are shrieking for women's rights. Do not suppose that I advocate any such change in the constitution of the State Board of Health as will place members of the female sex among our number. I do not suppose that the efficiency of the board or the success of our work would be promoted by such a change."

Appalled by the number of people dying from arsenic poisoning in his day, Kedzie wrote a book called "Shadows From the

Laird states limits on arms pact talks

NEW YORK (AP) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird declared Monday that the United States can go only so far toward fostering an arms limitation pact with Russia, in view of the Soviet Union's "increased weapon deployments."

"If the Soviet strategic offensive buildup continues, the risk to our nation will become too great to sustain without major offsetting actions," Laird said at the 70th annual meeting of The Associated Press, which each year marks the opening of Newspaper Week in New York.

In his speech, Laird said that deployment of MIRV and ABM missiles will give the Nixon administration time to pursue the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks — SALT — with Russia without initiating new nuclear weapons systems.

Critics have contended MIRV and the ABM system will only heat up the arms race. Laird replied that these weapons are essential if the United States is to preserve a nuclear force capable of deterring Russian attack.

"A clear strategic superiority on the part of the Soviet Union would affect our interests and our obligations throughout the world," Laird continued. "The United States has virtually been in neutral gear in the deployment of strategic offensive forces, while the Soviet Union has moved into high gear in both deployment and development of strategic nuclear weapons."

Wharton, voting highlight meeting

By DELORES MAJOR

The MSU chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP) will meet in Union Parlors B and C, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. President Wharton will address the group on "Faculty - Administration Relations."

Other items on the agenda include a comparison of faculty salaries among MSU colleges by Einer Hardin, professor of labor and industrial relations, and the voting of AAUP members on proposed amendments to the constitution of the MSU chapter of the AAUP.

The major proposed changes in the constitution include:

- declaring the advancement of "the economic status of the profession" as a goal of the MSU chapter.
- establishing an entirely elective and larger council to provide for broader representation and more democratic control by the membership.
- assuring the representation of both non-tenured and tenured members on the council through election procedures.
- increasing the term of office for AAUP officers from one to two years to permit them to initiate and follow through on major projects.
- electing members of the council for overlapping terms to assure continuity within the organization. This previously was assured by the automatic succession of vice president to president to council member.

Jack Steiber, president of the local chapter, said that, in effect, the members of the MSU AAUP are being offered a new constitution.

"The AAUP Executive Council has adopted these amendments but they must be approved by the members before they can be effected."

IN NIXON ADMINISTRATION

Blacks fill more top posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon put 64 per cent more non-whites in top jobs than President Lyndon B. Johnson did, but still can't shake off the "white only" label of his administration. Lack of a black Cabinet member seems a major factor in this situation.

An Associated Press survey shows that of 248 direct presidential appointments, 18 are held by non-whites under Nixon — seven more than under Johnson.

Some minority advocates seem unaware of the appointments, however, while others view them as too little and too late.

"There's no question about it," conceded Thaddeus Ware, a black aide in the White House. "The general feeling is that Nixon has not done anything in the way of appointing blacks. I guess that's a take-off from the fact that he has not appointed a black Cabinet secretary."

"The administration is now attempting greater visibility for these appointments. Previously we had given them rather low-key publicity."

The National Republican Congressional Committee, headed by Rep. Bob Wilson of California, recently published "Black Leadership in the Nixon Administration," a soft-sell brochure containing the names and pictures of 156 black federal employees at various official levels, with quotations from Nixon and Wilson.

It is aimed, Wilson said in an interview, "at anyone who got the wrong impression that the Nixon administration was not appointing blacks — and that includes a lot of Republicans, members of the House and Senate."

The idea was sparked, Wilson said, by a call from "someone at the White House." He declined to say who.

But Ware said his boss, White House aide Robert Brown, also a black had compiled just such a list to meet requests from black publishers.

"In fact," Ware added, "all of the names and pictures in the brochure are the same as the list Brown put together."

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., the only black in the Senate, gives Nixon high praise for recruiting blacks into government but declares it wasn't easy.

"He's been turned down quite a lot," a spokesman quoted Brooke. "There are some blacks who do not want to work in the Nixon administration."

Brooke himself turned down Nixon's offer of a Cabinet post as secretary of either Health, Education and Welfare or Housing and Urban Development. He preferred to keep his Senate seat.

The first black Cabinet officer — former HUD secretary Robert Weaver — had been appointed by Johnson, and Brooke concedes the symbolic importance of such an appointment.

The appointment of non-whites in sub-Cabinet jobs is a good thing, says John Morsell, asst. executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

Morsell said the actual duties and responsibilities of the appointees outweigh their number.

Wilson acknowledged his brochure was criticized by the Republican National Committee on similar grounds.

"They thought we ought to pick the upper-level appointments, just the top 20 or so," he said. But his group figured sheer numbers would be more impressive.

A look at the top 20 — or 18 — does disclose an effort to bolster non-white authority at high levels.

On the whole, non-white representation at the upper levels has risen from about 4.5 per cent under Johnson to some 7 per cent under Nixon.

Detroit Yeager enters Secretary of State race

State Rep. Weldon O. Yeager, R-Detroit, announced Monday he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Secretary of State.

Formerly the director of the Workmen's Compensation Bureau for four years, Yeager was elected to the Michigan House of Representatives in 1968.

"I have been communicating with party leaders for over a year and I am convinced that I have sufficient support committed to win in the convention," he said.

Yeager, the only Republican state representative from the city of Detroit, is seeking the post held for the past 16 years by Democrat James Hare.

Hare announced earlier this year he would not seek re-election.

"While much has been accomplished during Secretary Hare's time in office, I feel that much remains to be done," Yeager said. "I believe that the service of the Secretary of State's office to the public it serves can and must be improved through innovative practices and fresh, new ideas."

Yeager pledged a "strong, statewide campaign" to bring before the voters all the issues so that they will have good information upon which to make their decision.

"When elected, I will serve all the people," he said.

Yeager is expected to meet opposition for the nomination from State Sen. Emil Lickwood, R-St. Louis.

Ex-dictator declares self election winner

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A neck and neck race for the presidency of Colombia confronted this country Monday with its gravest political crisis in 20 years.

Ex-dictator Gustavo Rojas Pinilla, battling the official candidate, Misael Pastrana Borrero, vote for vote for the nation's top post, declared himself the winner before the official verdict was in.

Rojas warned that refusal of the government to name him victor might trigger disorders in Colombia.

Pastrana, backed by the ruling National Front moved lightly ahead as the final results began coming in, but Rojas had held the lead most of the morning.

Rojas' strong showing in Sunday's election posed serious problems for the National Front coalition of Conservative and Liberals formed in 1957 to oust him as dictator and end the bitter dispute between the two parties.

Think of him as its mother.

Demonstrators plan Earth Day activities

By The Associated Press

Americans are preparing for Earth Day rallies, clean-ups, teach-ins and traffic bans amid warnings that the problems of pollution must not be forgotten after Wednesday's demonstrations are over.

Originally proposed by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., Earth Day has drawn support from ecologists, educators, politicians, students and ordinary citizens. Some environmental activists, however, are concerned that people will forget that the dirty environment is a continuing problem.

"We're hoping to survive April 22, Earth Day, and we're praying for April 23," said Gary Soucie, executive director of Friends of Earth in New York.

Dr. Kenneth E. F. Watt, professor of zoology at the University of California, told students at Swathmore College in Pennsylvania, "The history of movements like this is not very promising. We had great movements on civil rights and the Vietnamese war. The problems are still with us, but the movements have died away."

He added, however, that "about five years from now it will become increasingly clear... that what we ecologists are saying now is true, and then the political pressure for change will become inexorable."

Many colleges are sponsoring teach-ins, both for students and community residents.

"We hope that each participant, supplied with some of the facts about environmental problems in his own back yard, will commit himself to a program of action," said Frank Renshaw, chairman of a teach-in sponsored by five Cincinnati colleges.

Ohio University in Athens has scheduled speeches by 21 scientists and ecologists, an anti-pollution parade and a clean-up of the campus and the surrounding area.

Marches and rallies were held in Cleveland Monday, and a group of students from the Cooper School of Art strung banners over the main routes into town saying, "Welcome to the 5th dirtiest city."

Plane crash kills student and wife

An MSU graduate student and his wife were killed Sunday night in a plane crash near Fowler.

The Rev. Mr. Wallace D. Rehner, 36, and his wife Betty, 38, were passengers of a single-engine Piper 180 which crashed into an open field south of Fowler during a rain storm.

The Rev. Mr. Rehner was a graduate assistant for Learning Systems Institute and a missionary to Brazil, and was working on his Ph.D. at MSU. He was a resident of East Lansing.

Also killed in the accident was the pilot, Frank D. Tiffit, and his wife, Doris, of Alma.

Just prior to the accident, which occurred at 9:36 p.m., the pilot made radio contact with the control tower at Capital City Airport in Lansing, his destination. There was no indication of any problems at that time, sheriff's deputies said.

The Russians proposed that Ford Motor Co. build the world's largest truck factory in the Soviet Union, Henry Ford II said Monday.

Ford said the Soviets discussed the possibility of building a truck plant on the Kama River that will produce 150,000 vehicles with payloads as high as 40 tons.

At least six other companies in Europe and Japan have been approached by the Soviets to handle the Kama River project, but most have declined because of its size.

Alpha 66, a militant Cuban exile organization, said Monday it landed men on the beaches of Cuba in an effort to reach the mountains and start a guerrilla war in the same spot where Fidel Castro's revolution began.

A spokesman for the Miami-based group, involved in past raids on Cuba, said several invading forces had landed on Cuban shores in recent days.

The U.S. Command reported Monday the loss of five more Army helicopters to enemy gunners and field dispatches said a sixth was brought down late in the day.

Rep. Richard D. Bolling, D-Mo., has invited New York Mayor John V. Lindsay to join the Democratic party and become one of the contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972.

Bolling's invitation was contained in an article by him in the current issue of Look magazine.

Francis Gary Powers says information supplied by Lee Harvey Oswald, identified by the Warren Commission as the killer of President John F. Kennedy, may have made it possible for the Russians to shoot down his U2 spy plane in 1960.

Powers says that Oswald, a former Marine radar operator, had access to secret codes that would enable the Russians to locate the high flying U2s.

Michigan News

A strike by 700 of Detroit's 800 city nurses and medical technicians Monday forced two city hospitals and four inner city clinics to curtail medical services.

The nurses and technicians said they would provide only "minimal coverage" at all city health facilities to protest an impasse between theirs and the city's negotiators.

The dispute is over wages and fringe benefits. Registered nurses now receive a starting salary of $8,200, which increases to $9,700 after five years. They are demanding a starting salary of $10,000 and $11,500 after five years.

U.S. Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich., said Monday he will oppose the construction of a dam on Rogue River, which pours into Grand River near Grand Rapids because the plan is for recreational purposes.

"At a meeting in my office last Friday with top officials of the Army Corps of Engineers, it was confirmed that the Rogue River project is not being proposed as a flood control measure. The corps is recommending it only for recreational purposes and for the development of fish and wildlife," Ford said in a news release from Washington.

On the basis of such a proposal, I am vigorously opposed to the construction of a dam on Rogue River. We cannot by any means justify the inundation of 6,000 acres of land and the destruction of 300 homes to create another lake.

Campus News

A boycott of classes at Wayne State University's medical school Monday reduced attendance appreciably.

About 200 students gathered in the university center allroom for a teach-in on the dispute between the medical faculty and the parent university.

The dispute revolves around the March resignations of Ernest Gardner, dean of the medical school, and associate Deans Morton Levitt and Alexander J. Walt. The three submitted their resignations because they said, the university was not paying enough attention to the development of the medical school.

The university replied that it gave the school prime consideration both in its budget requests and in its attempts to improve the quality of education.

DISCUSSIONS URGED

'U' endorses Earth Day

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

Although classes have not been officially cancelled for Wednesday's environmental teach-in, faculty members have been urged to discuss environmental issues or to hold their classes at teach-in events.

According to a resolution introduced by E-QUAL at an Academic Council meeting earlier this month, the University officially recognized Wednesday as Earth Day.

"MSU reaffirms its commitment to a university-wide, interdisciplinary approach to environmental problems and expresses its concern for long-term environmental deterioration by declaring April 22 Earth Day on the MSU campus," the resolution approved by the council stated. The council urged instructors to "redirect their class discussions to environmental issues or reconvene classes for appropriate lectures or panels presented during the environmental teach-in."

Although the University has officially sanctioned Earth Day, teach-in planners have still had problems in arranging the week's activities.

Malcolm Taylor, teach-in co-chairman, noted Monday that a major difficulty in planning the teach-in has been obtaining appropriate space for events.

"We tried to handle most of the logistics from out of this office and we pretty soon found out it couldn't be done," Taylor said. "It's literally taken us four months to get acquainted with the machinery of the university."

Buffalo clean results in mess

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Some city residents have begun cleaning up their areas for Earth Day on Wednesday, the result has been a mess, sanitation officials say.

Street Commissioner Carl A. Perla said piles of rubbish have been dumped onto gutters and curbs.

The problem, he said, is the city has no plans to move the rubbish to the city dump. The rubbish includes heavy wooden doors, discarded furniture and other items too big for normal pickups, he said.

E. Berliners honor Lenin

BERLIN (AP) — East German Communist leader Walter Ulbricht unveiled Sunday a giant red granite monument to Vladimir I. Lenin on an East Berlin square also bearing the Communist revolutionary's name.

The monument, 62 feet high, was erected to mark the 100th anniversary of Lenin's birthday next Wednesday.

He said that since E-EQUAL began reserving space for teach-in activities in October, space has been scarce. The Auditorium could only be reserved for today and part of Wednesday due to play rehearsals in Fairchild Theatre.

Taylor said approximately 30 rooms have been obtained for teach-in events. Some professors have agreed to cancel classes held in rooms needed for the teach-in, he noted.

In addition to continuing space problems, E-QUAL suffered a defeat Friday when the Board of Trustees refused to grant Garrett De Bell, editor of the "Environmental Handbook" and teach-in participant, permission to address the board about consumer advocate Ralph Nader's proposals in the 1970 General Motors Corp. (GM) proxy statement.

The board appointed a committee to investigate the issues involved in Nader's proposals to expand the GM board of directors to include three representatives in the public interest and to establish a shareholder's commission to determine the public impact of GM decisions.

Prep school concept only temporary answer

In the years just following World War II the universities of this nation, thanks to the public dedication of technology, gleefully assumed the mantle of social problem - solver. Twenty - odd years later this presumption has begun to backfire - the colleges cannot deliver and their credibility has, thereby, become severely strained.

Yet the public continues to believe that "college" is in some way the universal panacea. The latest episode in this unfortunate exercise of illogic concerns the matter of open admissions.

As a philosophical point and moral obligation the concept of open admissions to universities is totally defensible. It is important to remember, however, that we are speaking here of the right of all people to have an equal chance for admission to an institution of higher learning - and not the right to be admitted.

It has been argued that a college level education is essential for survival in this modern technological society, and that the value of a high school diploma has suffered from inflationary trends due to the expanding market of knowledge. This may very well be true, but if it is the fault lies with elementary and secondary schools for not keeping pace with the times - and it is at this level that change should be initiated. It is not the function of the universities as they are presently conceptualized to take up the educational slack created by non - viable lower institutions.

Granted, as conditions now exist in this country a strict application of the above interpretation of "open admissions" would result in de facto discrimination. Ghetto schools simply do not have the necessary funds and, hence, staff and materials to yield an adequate quality of education.

The answer to this quandary is not opening the doors of universities to all applicants regardless of qualifications. It is the responsibility of the state and national governments through the existing secondary education programs plus special projects to see that disadvantaged people are provided the chance to make up their educational deficiencies preparatory to entering college. The universities, despite their undesired mantle of problem - solver, do not have the ability - the manpower, the resources, - to undertake such a program, and therefore should not be so compelled.

The answer to insuring equality in the competition for admission to college is to upgrade the present quality of primary and secondary education. If a high school degree has inflated it is more because the high schools have not stayed abreast of the times rather than the expansion of the education market.

Granted, this sort of change cannot come overnight and, therefore, something must be done to bridge the education gap in the meantime. The idea of prep schools - whose sole function it will be to make up for the deficiencies of the regular school systems - seems to hold the answer. There is the manifest danger, however, that a continuing poor substitute for school reform. Our priorities in this regard must be kept definite.

It is our opinion that both sides of the "open admissions" issue have failed to sufficiently examine the true nature of the problem. Both sides, establishment and dissident, have attempted to pin the responsibility for the solution on institutions other than the ones at fault and, hence, have considerably clouded the issue. Change must come at the primary and secondary school levels and at the cost of many dollars. Any other action cannot be successful.

Civil Service guideline means double jeopardy

The almost universal prohibition against double jeopardy seems to have been lost on the Federal Civil Service Commission. Under a new ruling the commission may blacklist applicants for positions ranging from postman to foreign service officer who have been involved in violent campus disorders.

One of the primary hassles involved in this latest bureaucratic boondoggle is that the exact interpretation of the words "involved" and "violent" is rather vague. It is possible that a student could be charged with being "involved" simply because he had the misfortune to have been photographed in the crowd on his way to class. "Violence" by an extreme stretch of the imagination could be understood to mean an incident in which a single bottle was thrown against a wall.

The second disturbing thing about this new ruling is that its application could easily constitute what is functionally double or even triple jeopardy. A participant in a violent campus confrontation faces at the onset civil prosecution as well as possible expulsion from the university (providing he was a student in the first place - and now he can also be penalized by the Civil Service Commission. Our hypothetical, hapless individual trying to make his 10:20 (or, for that matter, exercising his constitutional right of dissent in a movement that, through no fault of his own, went sour) comes out taking a real beating in the deal.

A governmental agency has no right to administer justice unless specifically authorized by Congress. We believe the Civil Service Commission has clearly exceeded its authority, and the American Civil Liberties Union would do well to investigate this new ruling. This blatant disregard for due process under law cannot be taken lightly.

DAVE SHORT

The anti-war movement parade

"No Parking - PARADE - By Police Orders."

As one read the posted sign, while marching down Woodward Avenue in Detroit during the anti - war rally Wednesday, it brought forth all the basic emotions - sorrow, laughter, anger and frustration.

Parade. Parade. The sign was both ironic and classic. It may very well have foretold the stage which the student anti - war movement has reached in America.

The government and the majority of the American people have always looked upon the younger generation's rebellion against the Vietnam War as somewhat of a "parade." Both powers have reasoned that, despite the protest rallies, the War would go on and the young would continue to fight it.

In the past, the demonstrators involved in the anti - war movement had never regarded it in such terms.

It has always been the dream of the young that they would force an end to the War by their actions against it. After all, it was the young who helped dispose of Lyndon B. Johnson.

But the student anti - war movement has changed.

The War thrives onward, but the student anti - war movement seems to have lost its zeal and unity in opposing it. Vietnam has faded from the forefront to the rear in American society. (As one friend said, "You're going to the anti - war rally. Gee, I almost forgot about the War.")

The days of the massive, national anti - war demonstrations like that in Washington Nov. 15 have passed. In characteristic American style, one of the most promising experiments - the anti - war movement - of the young counterculture has crumbled because the desired results didn't appear quickly enough.

The student anti - war movement has now dissolved into a series of small, local and shortlived demonstrations. And with the coming of small, local demonstrations, the potential for a parade - like atmosphere has heightened.

About 5,000 to 10,000 demonstrators marched in Detroit last week. Many of the demonstrators came to the rally because they had a cause. But a lot of people came along just for the walk.

Several demonstrators made the trek from Wayne State University to Kennedy Square on roller skates. A few others dribbled basketballs, walked their dogs, snapped pictures or ran along side the marchers.

Protest signs - part of the creativity of the New Left - were in abundance. "We're Falling Through A Hole In Our Flag," "Bozo Says War Is A No-No," "Thou Shall Not Kill - (signed) God," "Trout Fishing In America Now," "Try Peace, It Won't Hurt," "Mother Goose Is A Pig," "Save Roger Priest," "Our Sons Die While GM Front, religious organizations and welfare groups all handed out their literature.

Some used the demonstration as a front for their destructive instincts. An American flag was burned, bus windows were broken, traffic was stifled and bottles were thrown at cops as the speeches continued.

The rally lasted about three hours. Yet, an hour after it was over, Kennedy Square was empty. As I looked at the debris scattered throughout the Square, an earlier quote from a Wayne State University groundskeeper crossed my mind.

"What is war and peace? It's paper and crap, that's what it is," he said while looking at what remained after pre - rally activities had ended there.

If the anti - war movement continues like it is now, then it is definitely regressing. We can blame the Administration, the media and the silent majority for the loss of zeal and unity in the student anti - war movement. But the real fault lies in our inability to grasp what has happened and in our inability to follow through.

Upon marching to Kennedy Square, the demonstrators passed a street sign which read "Canada - Bridge - Keep Right." Laughter and several jokes followed. But,

Eats the Profit Pie," "War is Where Peace Should Be."

Yet, few people noticed or cared about the sign - "Win the War, Kill the Commies" - that one marcher carried. The sign didn't fit in during a peace protest, but neither did many of the things that happened that day.

The Detroit Committee to End the War Now had gathered a varied group of speakers for the rally. But few people listened. To them, the speakers weren't saying anything that they hadn't heard before.

Many of the demonstrators were content to smoke marijuana, walk around, antagonize the police, watch other people or just talk to friends.

"We could make this alive if we had a couple bombs," one demonstrator said to another.

"We could make this alive if you'd shut up and listen to the man," came the subtle reply.

Throughout the speeches, representatives of different causes took advantage of the assembled crowd to do some recruiting. Members of anti - pollution groups, the Gay Liberation

Canada, with its 40,000 to 60,000 American draft dodgers and deserters, may be the scene of one of the last thoroughly committed anti - war movements today.

Few demonstrators took speaker Norman Oliver, Student Mobilization Committee chairman at Wayne State, seriously when he said, "The day may come when we won't be able to talk like this or march like this. It will be heads that are getting busted."

Few could foresee a day when they wouldn't be able to march, gather collectively, sound their rhetoric and then leave. To them, the rally was a kind of parade; and everything is a kind of parade. They could not see the danger of it all and the stakes that were at hand.

There is a memorable movie called "The Faces of War" that comes to mind. As the movie cameraman zooms in on crowds of people cheering as their young men march off to war, on the faces of the dead and the innocent and on the faces of a defeated army being marched through a fallen city the commentator distinctly repeats one sentence.

"Everyone loves a parade."

"There's so much crime in our streets these days . . ."

OUR READERS' MIND

Library ridiculously understaffed

To the Editor:

Last Monday the State News published an article about budget allocations for the library. This was discussed by the University Library Committee, which, for some reason or other has only one librarian, the Director, as a member.

This is unfortunate, because the article makes it clear that the Committee has very little idea of how bad the situation is in the library. Dr. Chapin is quoted as saying that we have a "woefully inadequate staff in many areas." As a catalog librarian speaking for my own department, I would change the expression to "ridiculously inadequate." It is not merely a matter of getting more librarians, because I and most of those I know spend perhaps 80% of our time doing clerical work. (This is of course, a waste of funds.)

We need more clerks, not more librarians. Be that as it may, there is a large personnel gap. Because of this, we work all day with shelves of backlog around us. In addition, there is a dark and dusty room in the basement stuffed with unprocessed books and periodicals, many of which are out of date by the time they get to the shelves, perhaps five years hence. Needless to say, they are for practical purposes inaccessible to the user during all this time. It is not true, as the public seems to think, that books can be put on the shelf as soon as they are received. Processing and cataloging take a formidable amount of time and paperwork. We don't even have enough people to keep up with current stuff, much less the backlog.

To the Editor:

Washington, D.C. is the last colony in the United States: it is governed without the consent of its citizens; it is taxed without representation. A nationwide petition drive requesting representation in Congress for District of Columbia citizens will be conducted from April 15 to April 22.

Congress enacts all laws concerning D.C.

Keeping this in mind, it should be clear why I am my coworkers found the following statement by Mr. Robert J. Morris rather insane: "The least horrible thing would be to work with the immediate staff, the most horrible: to fall behind with acquisitions."

You can increase acquisitions and make the library's statistics look pretty, but you will not be helping the user, because many of these materials may never become available to him. You must either increase our staff to handle the amount of material you think we should be receiving, or else cut back on acquisitions to a level the present staff can realistically handle. Perhaps a tour of the backwaters of the library is in order for the members of the Library Committee to convince them that speak the truth.

and levies the federal and local taxes paid by D.C. residents. Yet D.C. residents do not have any representation in Congress; they can vote only for President and for the local school board. Only citizens all over the U.S. can correct this injustice; citizens of Washington, D.C. cannot do this alone. To give D.C. citizens representation in Congress will require a constitutional amendment, approved by a two - thirds vote in both houses of Congress and ratified by three - fourths of the states. Amendments for congressional representation have never passed both houses of Congress. However, present supporters of D.C. representation include President Nixon and Senators Hart and Griffin.

From April 15 - 22, a nationwide petition drive will be conducted by the League of Women Voters and other organizations. Petitions gathered by local leagues will be sent to the National LWV's office for presentation to Congress on May 6. The petition reads: "We citizens of the United States, believing that all citizens should elect their representatives to the body which makes their laws, petition the Congress to propose a constitutional amendment to provide full voting representation in Congress for the citizens of the District of Columbia."

Any U.S. citizen may sign or circulate a petition. During the drive there will be opportunities for concerned citizens to sign a petition at several sites in this area. For more information, call me at 355-2918.

Start bus ads

To the Editor:

Obviously increasing costs have always plagued transportation, especially mass transportation. Witness the increase of 100% of the cost of a fare for the New York City bus and subway system in the last four years. However, bus companies do not provide additional revenue. Perhaps the MSU bus system could take a lesson from the New York City buses, which are covered inside and out with advertising. Besides the monies from ads, they lend color to the otherwise dreary vehicles.

Somehow, as I read the State News, I doubt the buses would show a lack of willing advertisers.

With such a realistic and proven success I find it hard to understand why the buses haven't inaugurated advertising long ago.

'U' enjoys Saturday soul show

The Motown Temptations captivated a sell-out audience Saturday at Jenison Fieldhouse with selections from their greatest recording hits.

Rhythmic steps and gestures, perfectly blended voices and a lot of soul earned these professional showmen a standing ovation from the Spartan crowd.

Included on the program of soul entertainment was the Watts 103rd Street Rhythm Band, The Posse and Yvonne Fair.

Poor acoustics in Jenison blurred song lyrics and detracted from an otherwise thoroughly professional performance.

NOT WHAT ONE EXPECTS

Orchesis concert dazzles mind

By BILL HOLSTEIN
State News Reviewer

What would you expect to find at a modern dance concert? Probably not what I found

Sunday at "Orchesis in Concert" at Fairchild Theatre.

I walked in the door and in the foyer saw a group of kids bouncing on a truck innertube — screaming and having a grand time. This is modern dance?

There were other dancers running and jumping among the audience as well as several contorting dancers on stage. As yet, there was no music. The screaming and frolicking dancers ended up in the Auditorium running up and down the aisles. Crazy.

But I wish it would have lasted longer. Apparently, I had just witnessed "Theatre Dimensions and Form Repertoire."

In general, the concert was excellent except for a few spots that needed polishing. "Zye-Nin" needed work because all the dancers were not precise in their unison movements and there was a good deal of shuffling. For the most part, those pieces that did not require unison movement were better than those with Ed Sullivanish choreography.

If I were to pick a favorite, it would be "Seascapes," simply because of the emotional and sensual impact. The narrator recited poems ("The Owl and the Pussycat," for example) in which there was some rationality. But then someone would scream and the electronic music would explode and I was lost again. It was a unique feeling.

The finale was "You're All Invited to Ricco's Party." The dancers did what came naturally to bongo beating and soon had enticed dozens of viewers up to the stage to dance to the music. Thanks, Ricco. It was a great party.

Armageddon blends message and music

By TOM BOWERS
State News Staff Writer

For several weeks I had read the promotion promising top quality music and a thought-provoking message. Friday night, the Armageddon provided precisely what was promised.

The group of five men and three women presented an excellent concert. And without hesitation or embarrassment they stated in words and song what they have found to be an answer to human problems.

Armageddon's music, which included a number of current popular tunes, could be favorably compared to that of many big-name groups. The blend and harmony of voices and instruments in nearly every song was superb.

The women of the group performed a version of "I'll Never Fall in Love Again" which impressed me as being at least as good as the Dionne Warwick original.

Kathy McEvers sang "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" with such command of voice and depth of feeling that I wondered why she wasn't cutting records in Los Angeles instead of touring the country under the banner of Campus Crusade for Christ.

In fact, the Armageddon as a group are good enough to get rich if they chose to follow the usual routes to pop music fame. But instead, they're singing for Campus Crusade for Christ and earning a living allowance.

It is that paradox — even more than their music — that made the Armageddon worth hearing. Simon and Garfunkel, Peter, Paul and Mary, and a host of others have made famous songs that ask the deep questions of life, songs that express human loneliness and cry out for meaning in the human experience.

The songs are popular because they ask exactly what most of us are asking, when we get honest with ourselves.

The Armageddon pose the same problems, ask the same questions and then have the audacity to offer an answer. In this day when asking relevant questions is popular but offering definitive answers is not in style, the Armageddon's audacity is refreshing.

The members of the Armageddon say that a personal encounter with Jesus Christ has given them genuine meaning in their lives. They disclaim organized religion as the answer. They actually believe that Jesus Christ is a sort of spirit — person alive today who is ready and able to relate to human beings.

They say, and offer their own experience as proof, that a person who accepts a relationship with Jesus Christ will find the pieces of life's puzzle fitting together, will find a growing inner peace, and discover that intangible something for which everyone is searching.

The promotion promised good music with a message. Few of the 800 people in the audience left the concert disappointed.

Batsmen try to shake slump; U-D here today

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

MSU will attempt to shake a three-game losing streak and hitting slump when it meets the University of Detroit in a doubleheader at 2 p.m. today at Kobs Field.

The Spartans broke fast from the starting gate this season, winning 13 times and tying twice in their first 17 games. But Spartan bats, which had carried the team in the early going, were muffled in the second game of last Wednesday's Eastern Michigan doubleheader and in both games against Central Michigan last Saturday.

MSU has collected just two runs and nine hits in those three games, and despite strong pitching performances from Larry Ike, Phil Fulton and Rick Krueger, have dropped all three games. The Spartan's team batting average, which had been hovering near the .300 figure, has dropped all the way to .279.

"It has been a combination of good pitching against us and some poor hitting on our part that has knocked us into this little slump," A.S.T. Coach Frank Pellerin said. "Up at Central Saturday the combination of a poor hitting background and some very cold weather held the hitting down for both teams."

Central Michigan managed just nine hits in the two games against MSU, while the Spartans had six. The hitters on the two teams went down on strikes 36 times in the pair of games.

"Our hitters should come out of this thing all right," Pellerin said. "They hit too good for too many games this season for them to stay in a slump very long. Anyway we're not going to face too many pitchers who were as strong as the pair of pitchers that Central threw at us Saturday."

"It was no disgrace losing to Central twice. They have a real good team and could hold their own against any Big Ten team."

The Spartans will be facing some more good hurling today against U-D. The Titans have leaned strongly on their pitching staff as they rolled to 13 wins in their first 15 games.

Righthanders Dave Frezza, with a 1-1 mark, and Rick Zamon, 2-0 for the season, are scheduled to pitch against MSU. Centerfielder Harry Renko leads the U-D hitters with a .484, while powerful first baseman Greg Tolston is second at .340.

Spartan Coach Danny Litwhiler has decided to give freshman Rob Clancy his second start of the year in the nightcap after Kirk Maas pitches the opener.

Clancy has been MSU's relief ace this season with a 0.82 ERA. He's made nine appearances, but has pitched only 11 and one-third innings.

"We won't necessarily keep Rob in the starting rotation if he does well against U-D," Pellerin said. "We just wanted to give him some work, since he hasn't pitched a lot of innings. He's going to be an important man for us once the Big Ten season starts and we want to have him sharp."

Clancy is replacing Larry Ike in the starting rotation for this twinbill. Ike, also a freshman, is 4-1 in five appearances.

Volleyball club wins tournament

The MSU volleyball club won 11 of 12 matches to capture first place in a Midwest Intercollegiate Volleyball Association tournament Sunday at Toledo University.

The Spartan netmen dropped the opening match to Purdue and then reeled off 11 straight wins in route to the title. MSU played the entire tournament with only six men, no others were able to make the trip. Members of the championship squad, which will play this weekend in a tourney at Purdue, are coach Tom Kienyzyk, Ken Hodas, Skip Brown, Tom Drenth, Pete Johnson and Mark Fotenakes.

Pat Miller

Kalmbach swimmer's MVP

Senior freestyler Mike Kalmbach has been picked by his swim teammates as the Spartans' most valuable performer for the season recently concluded.

It was the second straight season the Sylvania, Ohio, native had been chosen. This year the MSU co-captain was second in the Big Ten 50-yard freestyle and fifth in the league's 100-yard freestyle.

The MSU co-captain was sixth and fifth nationally in the same events.

Co-captain Bruce Richards, Tacoma, Wash., senior was given the Varsity Senior Scholarship Award. He placed in three events in the Big Ten meet.

Sophomore John Thuermer, MSU's top distance swimmer in his first varsity season, was cited for having the top classroom average among all freshmen last year.

JOSEPH, MILLER DON'T REPORT

2 'S' regulars sit out spring drills

By JEFF ELLIOTT
State News Sports Editor

MSU will likely open its 1970 season without the services of two men who saw considerable action with last year's squad. Ron Joseph, a hulking 270-300 pound (depending upon the time of year) defensive tackle, and Pat Miller, the team's leading punter last year, have not taken part in spring drills and neither are likely to see any action this fall.

MSU head Coach Duffy Daugherty has a standing policy that anyone who misses two consecutive unexcused days of practice is off the squad. The Spartans begin their second week of spring drills today.

Losing Joseph leaves a big gap in the defensive line. The junior lineman started most of last year when he could keep his weight down. But this year, he's ballooned up to the 300 pound mark, some 40 pounds over the weight Daugherty wants him to play at.

"We had prescribed weights for the linemen and linebackers that we wanted them to meet when they reported for spring drills," Daugherty said. "I told Ron back in December that I wanted him to report for spring drills at 260 pounds. Just before Christmas break I talked to him and he said he weighed 275, but since then I understand he's been going up instead of down."

Daugherty hit it right on the button. Joseph's weight is currently hovering at 297 pounds, and is not exactly distributed solidly over his 6-3 frame. Joseph, however, claims Daugherty didn't give him a fair shake like he did a couple other players.

"I wasn't the only one not to meet weight," Joseph said Monday. "He (Daugherty) switched a couple of linebackers to linemen so they could begin practice on time, as they hadn't met their weight either. When I reported to the first day of practice last Tuesday, there was a padlock on my locker. So I figured the coach didn't want me to play."

Daugherty, who has not been in touch with Joseph in over a month, denied the possibility that it was a personal problem between him and Joseph.

"I have nothing against Ron at all," Duffy said. "I'd do anything to help him but this was one problem he had to conquer himself. I can't very well let him back on the squad if he hasn't met his weight which I required."

Daugherty all but shut the door on Joseph's not taking part in spring drills but coming out in the fall, claiming he'd be too far behind the rest of the players in the fall.

Windsor drops 'S' ruggers, 5-0

Excessive penalties cost the MSU Rugby Club a victory Sunday as it lost to the Windsor Borders, 5-0.

Forwards Jeff Sundstrom and Gary Pillette led the Spartan pack's domination of scrimmage and line-out play. But numerous off-side calls stalled MSU's attack on the rain-slogged Windsor field.

Chilling temperatures and intermittent rain contributed to a scoreless first half. Windsor scored a try midway through the final period following a fumbled Spartan pass near the MSU goal. The ensuing conversion completed the scoring.

John Harvey's leadership and ball-handling inspired the Spartan backs to an aggressive second-half attack. But all too often, field conditions thwarted MSU's breakaway speed.

Normally an inside center, Harvey filled in capably for the injured regular fly-halfback. His dazzling 40-yard run, late in the game, almost put MSU on the scoreboard. He was caught from behind 15 yards from the Windsor goal.

Now 1-3, the Spartans open their home schedule Saturday with a doubleheader against Kent State. The first game begins at 2 p.m. at Old College Field.

The club is now recruiting a second team and invites all students and faculty interested to join the club. Practices are held at 4 p.m., Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, at Old College Field.

Subpoenas threaten reporters

By ESTELLA CHAMBERS
State News Staff Writer

Newspaper and magazine reporters are currently involved in a struggle that affects a newsman's information sources and the inflow of a newspaper's information to governmental agencies lacking a newspaper's access to sources. The result has been an outbreak of subpoenas for journalists' notes.

The case involving New York Times reporter Earl Caldwell is the most infamous of the present day cases. Caldwell was ordered to produce his notes and tape-recorded interviews on the Black Panther Party which date back to January of last year. Caldwell has refused to turn over his notes and tape recordings and is supported in his stand by the New York Times.

The possibility of the same situation at a local level is feasible.

Jim Crate, editor-in-chief of the State News said that black reporters on campus would definitely be in the same position as Caldwell is in should any major upheaval develop among the black students.

"I believe that should any major unrest develop among the black students, the black reporters would be subpoenaed because of their special access to information involving the black student body."

Crate said that there were two alternatives open to a newspaper that might alleviate some of the pressure put on the reporter.

"For one thing, we can eliminate the by-line given to the writer of the story. This is the most effective means without resorting to physical confrontation."

He added that although this method releases the reporter from direct and immediate responsibility, it places more pressure on the editor and makes any decision concerning the release of notes and information an editorial decision.

Crate said the time element can also be advantageous for the reporter.

Between the time the subpoena is served and the time that the trial takes place, the reporter can destroy the notes, he said.

In referring to his release to the police of pictures of the recent disturbance on Grand River Ave., Crate said the pictures were turned over to the police in order to find the assailants of Michael Beasley, a State News photographer who had been roughed up during the disturbance.

Barney Young, a State News staff writer, said he always destroys his notes after an interview to avoid putting himself in the position that Caldwell is in.

"I would tell them that because my memory was short I could give them an idea of what was in my notes, but this idea would be based upon my interpretation of what was in the notes," Young said.

He said that as a black person

Committeemen restore funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a surprise turnabout, the House Armed Services Committee Thursday restored $152 million for a third nuclear aircraft carrier and tentatively approved a military procurement authorization totaling $20.24 billion.

Chairman L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., said a final vote will not be taken until a study ordered by Congress to justify the carrier is completed.

and a journalist, he must uphold the confidence that is placed in him as a black person reporting the affairs of his people.

Jeanne Saddler, Black Affairs editor for the State News said the reporter's decision to reveal his notes should definitely be his own.

"The job of the reporter is to inform the public, not to act as an undercover agent for the government. I think that if the black reporter were forced to reveal his notes, we would become a sort of big brother force for the government. We would be used to further suppress and harass the black community," Miss Saddler said.

Charles Demery, WJIM broadcast journalist, agrees with Miss Saddler in that the revealing of background information involves a decision on the part of the reporter.

A broadcast journalist cannot function if his sources are limited. A reporter's notes must be sacred if he wants any confidence in the information that the sources give him, Demery said.

The future relationship that is supposed to exist between the reporter, his notes and the subpoena will depend, to a great degree, on the position that the reporter takes, and not so much the position that defense or prosecution want the notes to take.

PANTHER CONNECTIONS

Clark awaiting inquiry

By MATTIE GARRETT
State News Staff Writer

The Justice Dept. has not yet made any apparent move to investigate a black New York attorney, Leroy Clark, as requested by Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan. Dole asked the department to look into Clark's connection with the Black Panthers beyond his duties as defense attorney.

Clark, whose testimony against Harrold Carswell was considered particularly damaging by administration forces, commented on Dole's request Monday.

He said it was "very irresponsible of the senator" to make the request.

Clark was among those who said Carswell displayed open hostility toward civil rights lawyers.

He stated Monday that Carswell is simply a bad judge. He has been appealed eight times in four years and reversed seven out of the eight.

About his relationship with the Panthers, Clark said, "No I'm not a member." He was brought in for defense on a writ of habeas corpus and is representing the Panthers as a member of the National Conference of Black Lawyers for the Defense of Radicals.

The group of 13 men and women he represented are on trial for allegedly having explosives and other weapons in the Bronx zoo. The trial, which resumed last week, was originally suspended because of disorderly conduct by the defendants.

Clark expressed strong disagreement with President Nixon's handling of the Supreme Court. He said "the controversy was very unfortunate. The kind of thing that shouldn't happen."

He also said, "When you put up unqualified candidates you run the risk of having them knocked down."

On Nixon's choice to avoid judges from the South who have conservative tendencies, Clark said, "Nixon's actions are inflammatory and they are being used to avoid selecting any good judges from the South."

Clark, 33, is a 1962 graduate of Columbia University and is now asst. professor of law at New York University.

High court denies welfare cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled Monday that welfare payments to dependent children cannot be cut merely because a man is living in the house. And it ruled demonstrators cannot be arrested simply because they anger onlookers.

In a 6-2 ruling the court said California may not scale down welfare payments to dependent children on the assumption that a man living in the household provides financial support.

By unanimous decision the court reversed the conviction of six war protesters, saying it appeared they may have been convicted "simply because they advocated unpopular ideas."

In a third major development in a very busy day, the justices agreed to decide whether juveniles are entitled to the same jury-trial rights guaranteed adults.

The California welfare decision reversed a three-judge federal panel in San Francisco, but was returned in such a way as to allow California to try to square its regulations with those of the federal government.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice Hugo L. Black dissented, saying the issues involved do not belong in the courts at this stage. They said also the federal government has no constitutional power to force states to adopt a particular welfare program.

The California regulations scaled down payments when a stepfather or another man lived regularly in the house. The lower court upheld this and struck down a regulation by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that said income of a man living in the house could not be considered unless he was legally obligated to support the child.

The majority decision, given by Justice William O. Douglas, revived the HEW regulation, noting that especially in the absence of a marriage tie there is a lesser likelihood that the man is making financial contributions.

The court set aside the convictions of six persons arrested during an antiwar demonstration March 28, 1966, in front of an Army recruiting station in Baltimore.

The protesters were arrested after they had been ejected from the recruiting station and were sitting on a sidewalk. They were accused of refusing to move on after police felt the bystanders were becoming hostile.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr., said in the court's opinion that there was conflicting evidence as to whether the six were sitting on the sidewalk to obstruct traffic or had landed there when they were thrown out of the recruiting station.

The court agreed to hear the appeal of 46 youngsters arrested during demonstrations in Hyde County, N.C., in the fall of 1968 and placed on probation after trial without a jury.

Lawyers for the children said they should be given the same right to jury trial granted adults in a 1968 Supreme Court ruling extending the jury right to state courts.

Astronauts describe Apollo 13 explosion

SAPCE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The three Apollo 13 astronauts sat before tape recorders Monday and described for space experts the details of their voyage. In Washington, a team was being formed to investigate the spacecraft explosion that endangered the astronauts and prevented a moon landing.

Astronauts James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W. Haise Jr., and John L. Swigert Jr. started debriefing with space experts and the tape recorders in the Manned Spacecraft Center at 8 a.m. Monday.

They began their story from a point before an oxygen tank ruptured a week ago Monday night blowing out a 12-foot side of their spacecraft's service module, crippling the command ship and causing a reduction in vital supplies.

The spacemen will tell the world what happened, answering questions about how the drama unfolded, at a televised news conference at 7:30 p.m., EST, Tuesday.

A mission evaluation team of 150 experts examined photographs and radio data, searching for clues to the accident. The photographs, view of the Apollo service module taken by the astronauts, showed a gaping hole left in the side of the service module.

The cells themselves could plainly be seen in the photographs, but the pictures released were too fuzzy to determine if they had been damaged. A jumble of material could be seen on side the exposed bay. James A. McDivitt, Apollo 13 program manager, identified this as insulation.

McDivitt said preliminary data indicated oxygen tank No. 1 exploded when pressure inside it reached 1,002 pounds per square inch far below the pressure the tank is designed to contain.

Officials have said that the cause of the Apollo 13 explosion must be found before other Apollo spacecraft will be cleared for flights to the moon.

Board approves hike in Van Hoosen rates

An increase in rates for Van Hoosen apartments has been approved by the MSU Board of Trustees.

The current cost of a four-girl apartment in the all-girl University housing is $176 per term. Beginning summer term the rates will be increased $10 per term.

"Air-conditioning renovations have necessitated the increase," George VanBuren, Van Hoosen manager, said.

A rising cost of living will make it necessary to carry the increase into fall term, according to VanBuren.

The apartments provide two four and six-man rooms for upper class women students.
