Gunfire kills four students at Kent

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Four students were shot to death and 11 other persons wounded, four seriously in a confrontation Sunday with Ohio National Guardsmen at Kent State University. A state official said the shooting started when a rooftop sniper opened fire on the guardsmen.

The university, with an enrollment of 20,000, was closed and the town sealed off by police and Guardsmen.

Gov. James A. Rhodes called on the FBI for help in probing the disorders.

The gunfire broke out as Guardsmen opened an anti-war rally on the campus.

Adm. Gen. S.T. Del Corso said Guardsmen were forced to open fire on their attackers.

Regrettably but unavoidably several individuals were killed and a number of others were wounded," he said in a statement.

In Washington, President Nixon issued a statement about the incident.

This should remind us all once again that when dissent turns to violence it is a tragedy," the President said.

"It is my hope that this tragic and unfortunate incident will strengthen the determination of all the nation's campuses, administrators, faculty and students alike, to stand firmly for the right which exists in this country of peaceful dissent and just as strongly against the resort to violence as a means of such expression."

The White House said there was a possibility of a Justice Dept. investigation. As to possible federal intervention, the White House said that would only come at the request of Gov. Rhodes.

The shooting came after Guardsmen moved in with tear gas to disperse a rock-throwing crowd of 400 to 400 students in the Commons area near the football practice field.

"A lot of people felt their lives were in danger," said Brig. Gen. Robert Canterbury, who was on the scene, "which in fact was the case and the military man always has the option to fire if he feels his life is in danger."

"He has the right to protect himself."

Del Corso said tear gas was used several times in attempts to disperse the crowd.

"The guard expended its entire supply of tear gas and when it did, the mob started to move forward to encircle the Guardsmen," Del Corso said. "At the same time, a sniper opened fire against the Guardsmen from a nearby rooftop. All Guardsmen were hit by rocks and bricks."

"Guardsmen facing almost certain injury and death were forced to open fire on the attackers."

University President Robert I. White asked all students, faculty and staff members to go home "as quickly as possible."

Twelve persons, including two Guardsmen, were hospitalized in Ravenna and Akron. One Guardsman was described as suffering from shock. The university said the four persons killed — two girls and two boys — were students.

Hospital officials identified three of the dead as William Schneider, Jeffrey Miller and Allison Krause. The fourth person was an unidentified girl.

Miller, 20, was from Plainview, N.Y., and the Krause girl, 19, from Pittsburgh, Pa.

'U' aides, park residents weigh campground's fate

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

After issuing a statement Monday afternoon asking residents of the people's park to "voluntarily end their camping," Milton B. Dickerson, vice president for student affairs, and Robert Perrin, vice president for University relations, sat with students in the park to discuss the University's position.

In the statement, issued about 3 p.m. Monday, the University listed three possible alternatives to preserve the spirit of the park:

- continuation of the recreational activities on the present site, without camping or cooking.

- development of more permanent facilities for recreational and "rap" activities at the present site or one more acceptable to all students.

- development of a permanent site for student camping.

Although no conclusions were drawn from the meeting of Dickerson and Perrin with the residents of the park, the vice presidents left the next move up to the students.

Dickerson said that if, after discussions among themselves Monday night, the people of the park wanted to meet with the administration, they "would be happy to meet."

The administration has set no deadline for the moving and has made no statement as to what will happen if the park residents do not move. Since then many students have set up tents and declared the park their permanent residence. There are now 103 tents dotting the area.

In its statement Monday, the administration said the park's inhabitants have "generally conducted themselves with decency and friendliness."

Violations of ordinances against camping and cooking fires on campus were overlooked in view of the orderliness of the park and because in hopes that those involved would disband after a few days, the statement said.

However, the park has caused numerous problems which prompted the administration to request the residents to leave.

Some of the problems involved are: — brief toleration of violation of the ordinances cannot be extended to the point of permanent abdication of

$27.4 million approved for medical facilities

BY DIANNE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

An estimated $27.4 million in federal funds has been approved and recommended to support construction of MSU's second life sciences building and proposed teaching hospital.

Actual receipt of the grant will depend on the availability of federal funds and the number of other schools that have applied for them, according to Robert D. Schuetz, Associate Director of the Institute of Biology and Medicine.

"There is no definite commitment as to the time," Schuetz said, "but from our previous experience, when approved we ultimately get the funds."

In addition to the availability of federal funds, matching funds from state and private sources will be required.

If approved on both the state and federal level by this summer, architectural drawings could be completed in about one year. Construction itself would require three years, making 1974 the earliest possible completion date.

Schuetz expressed little optimism that both federal and state funds would be available that soon, however.

"Hopefully we will know in July," he said. "Then the assurance of matching funds will involve the state legislature."

The $27.4 million already approved includes $2.5 million to be used for part of the construction of a University power

SENATE

Abortion vote due today

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

The Michigan Senate is expected to take final vote on abortion reform today, with proponents optimistic that it will pass.

Sen. N. Lorraine Beebe, whose Health, Social Services and Retirement Committee has the bill to be voted on, predicted that the vote would be for the legislation, more than is needed for passage.

Before the vote is taken, however, discussion will continue on a four-part package of bills submitted by Sen. John McCauley, D-Wyandotte, that would repeal Michigan's abortion laws.

Those bills are considered "too liberal" and given little chance for approval.

Sen. Beebe, R-Deerborn, said the committee bill before the Senate is "one of the best in the nation."

It is what the people of Michigan want.

One of the bill's controversial provisions, a 90-day residency requirement and a maximum pregnancy term of 90 days, were included at the request of persons appearing at several hearings her committee conducted around the state.

If McCauley's measures fail, Sen. Basis Brown, D-Highland Park, is expected to continue his fight to remove the clauses.

He has called them "unworkable and unenforceable," contending it is impossible to determine the exact day pregnancy began or to prove when a woman entered the state.

A spokesman at the Office of the Attorney General said the residency clause would probably mean 90 consecutive days.

This would mean that a coed from out of state would lose her residency if she went home for a holiday or term break, thus interrupting her residency.

If the bill passes the Senate, it faces a tougher obstacle in the House, where Speaker William A. Ryan, D-Detroit, has indicated he would like a Supreme Court decision on the matter.

"Eventually the House will act on it and probably this year. However I don't know if the House will want to act speedily on it," he said.

Ryan noted that the upper chamber has been considering the matter for two years and is entering its second week trying to arrive at the final bill.

Profs attempt to prove department injustice

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

At least the third time in recent years a decision of a University department to reappoint certain untenured faculty members is being challenged.

Miss R. Van Tassel and Bertram G. Murray Jr. brought their appeal to the Michigan Employment Relations Commission charging MSU with discrimination against them for engaging in concerted action to improve working conditions.

Miss Van Tassel, 30, and Murray, 36, as well as several colleagues testified at the hearing to being active in a movement to change the natural science course and to eliminate the common final examination.

In their testimony, Miss Van Tassel, Murray and other faculty members said they appealed to Emanuel Hackel, chairman of the Dept. of Natural Science; Edward A. Carlin, dean of University College; and former President Walter Adams concerning conditions in the department.

The appeal to the employment relations commission is based on the Public Employment Relations Act which protects the rights of "public employees to organize together or to form, join or assist in labor organizations, and to engage in lawful concerted activities for the purpose of collective negotiation or bargaining or other mutual aid and protection."

Both Miss Van Tassel and Murray were notified in February by Hackel that they charged the University through Hackel with unlawful acts to interfere with, restrain or coerce public employees in the exercise of these rights.

Miss Van Tassel and Murray also allege that Hackel discriminated against them in hiring and conditions of employment in order to discourage membership in a labor organization.

Hackel, both in his formal answer to the charges and in testimony at the hearing, denied all charges.

Both Miss Van Tassel and Murray were notified in February by Hackel that they were not being recommended for reappointment following expiration of their three-year contracts on Aug. 31, 1971.

Hackel's decision was based on the recommendation of the Dept. Advisory Committee. The matter was first considered by the Ad Hoc Committee of Tenured Faculty on Reappointment for 1971. No reasons for the decision were offered to either Miss Van Tassel or Murray.

In a letter to Hackel immediately following her notification, Miss Van Tassel requested reasons for the decision.

"No reasons were given in the letter for the decision," she wrote. "You can appreciate how important it is to me to know how and why this decision was reached. Upon re-examining my record of teaching, research and public service, I fail to understand why I was not considered fit for reappointment."

"Unless I know what they (the reasons) are, it will be difficult for me to plan my career so as to maximize my contribution to the profession both as a teacher and as a scholar," she concluded.

On Feb. 27, seven of Miss Van Tassel's colleagues appealed to the department's Faculty Affairs Committee urging the ad hoc committee to reconsider the decision not to reappoint Miss Van Tassel.

The seven petitioners were Michel Kamrin, James E. Trosko, John A. Mullins, Robert A. McDaniel, Leonard Isaacs, Donald J. Weinschank and Patricia S. Ireton.

The Faculty Affairs Committee denied the plea for lack of "substantive or procedural grounds" for requesting reconsideration of the appointment.

Miss Van Tassel and Murray attempted to show that individuals active in reform movements in the department were discriminated against in terms of research grants, committee assignments and mid-year salary increases.

ASMSU issues statement condemning destruction

By JACQUI MILLER
State News Staff Writer

ASMSU made public Monday a statement on the campus disturbances which followed the rally protesting ROTC Friday afternoon. The board passed the statement in a special session called Saturday night by Harold Buckner, board chairman. The statement reads: "Whereas, the Student Board of the Associated Students of Michigan State University is the governing body of the students of Michigan State University and, Whereas, the violent acts of destruction which occurred the night of May 1, 1970, pose a serious threat to the ongoing nature of this University, and,

Whereas, serious and costly damage to University facilities does affect each student of this university, We do hereby condemn the actions of those few students.

We do, however, sympathize with the frustrations felt by the students regarding the Vietnam War and ROTC.

We do recognize that last year a survey of the students showed that:

— 48.1 per cent did support ROTC with its current academic standing.

— 17.3 per cent did support ROTC but with no credit.

— 16.5 per cent did support ROTC but with courses from military science having no credit, but other course work in other departments for credit.

— 13.6 per cent wanted ROTC abolished.

We also recognize that changes have occurred in the ROTC structure, and realize that these changes may or may not have met the expectations of many students on the Michigan State University campus.

In order to ascertain current opinion on this matter, ASMSU will conduct an extensive survey to determine the true views of the majority of MSU students so that appropriate representation of these views may be made to the University community."

The statement was passed by a 12-1 vote during the session.

Buckner said the student board is working to assure students that there are channels through which their opinions on ROTC can be voiced and that district representatives are working to find out what these opinions are.

He said ASMSU will not make an official position on ROTC itself until the survey of the student body is completed.

"If the majority of the students are in favor of abolishing ROTC," Buckner said, "then we will work toward abolishing it."

Buckner said no complaints were raised at the meeting as to the manner in which campus police handled the demonstrators.

Buckner also was asked about the situation at the people's park, but he said the student board has not issued any statement since the resolution passed two weeks ago. That resolution recognized the existence of the park and offered it the board's moral support.

"We won't take any further stand," Buckner pointed out, "until definite action is taken by the administration."

Protests sweep colleges

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A continuing wave of antiwar demonstrations, focusing on U.S. involvement in Cambodia, swept many of the nation's colleges Monday and turned into tragedy at one school.

Four persons were killed and 11 injured at Kent State University in Ohio when National Guardsmen clashed with student militants.

Hundreds of students at other colleges boycotted classes and plans were announced for student-faculty strikes Tuesday and Wednesday.

It was school as usual, however, on a number of campuses. A sampling showed all was reported quiet at Arizona State, New Mexico's six biggest colleges, and schools in Utah, Idaho, and North and South Dakota among others around the country.

President Nixon's decision to send troops into Cambodia won support from the Washington branch of the conservative Young Americans for Freedom which urged the United States to "take all means necessary to achieve a military victory."

The presidents of 30 colleges and universities signed a telegram urging the President to bring a rapid end to American military involvement in Southeast Asia and seeking an immediate meeting with him.

The telegram, drafted and released by James M. Hester, president of New York University, said, in part, "We implore you to consider the incalculable dangers of an unprecedented alienation of America's youth and to take immediate action to demonstrate unequivocally your determination to end the war quickly."

National Guardsmen with bayonets fixed to unloaded rifles moved onto the University of Maryland campus Monday night to enforce a curfew after police repeatedly used riot gas to break up student disorders.

About 500 guardsmen joined by police swept through the campus and the area half a mile around it shortly after an 8:30 p.m. curfew went into effect. The curfew was to until 6:30 a.m. today.

Gov. Marvin Mandel said it was imposed "to protect students and others not involved in the disorders." He said there had been some injuries and he was "not going to let this continue."

Editorials urging a class boycott appeared in many campus newspapers, with the Yale Daily News the only exception in the prestigious Ivy League.

Student strikes were reported underway at the University of Rhode Island, Rutgers, Drew and Farleigh Dickinson in New Jersey and at Princeton University where the boycott was reported 95 per cent effective.

At Columbia, 20 students marched outside the Journalism School building where the Pulitzer Prizes were to have been awarded.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dyan offered Egypt "an unconditional and unlimited cease-fire" Monday night.

"Our government is ready to re-establish an unconditional and unlimited cease-fire, even if this will enable Egypt to reorganize and put up surface-to-air missile sites," he told a student rally.

Dyan also called for increased U.S. participation in the conflict should Egypt reject the offer.

U.S. reconnaissance aircraft sighted a jungle hideout with about 500 buildings Monday about two miles inside Cambodia where American and South Vietnamese forces are searching for the headquarters of the Communist Command.

Two gunmen opened fire Monday on Israeli Embassy personnel in the capital of Paraguay, killing one secretary and seriously wounding another.

First reports said the men were members of the Al Fatah Arab guerrilla organization, but this could not be confirmed.

Despite the American attack into Cambodia, North Vietnam will attend Wednesday's session of the Paris peace talks, Hanoi's chief negotiator said Monday night. But he said that whether the talks continue beyond that "depends on the American attitude."

National News

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee Monday reluctantly accepted President Nixon's invitation to a White House briefing on Cambodia. Then it accused him of waging "a constitutionally unauthorized, presidential war in Indochina."

The stock market dipped Monday to its biggest loss in more than six years as Soviet Russia and Red China denounced the United States for sending combat troops into Cambodia.

The Dow Jones industrial average plummeted to 19.07 points to a closing low of 714.56. This was the biggest drop since the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

The drop all but ended hopes that the market would pull out of its long-term slump, according to Wall Street analysts.

Postmaster General Winton M. Blount said Monday in Detroit the Nixon administration was "well along in the task of restoring a society shaken and shattered by discord and violence."

"We have an administration which has begun the long, hard task of restoring in the people of this nation the faith that their destiny lies truly in their hands," Blount said at a luncheon of the Economic Club of Detroit.

Blount said civil disobedience was fine in the past "in a nation without a vast communications network, without technology, without transportation, without any of the opportunities for such a doctrine to work its natural mischief."

"I think we're going to survive the youth revolution — after all, we created it," he said.

The Jackson County Prosecutor soon will release a statement saying a business associate who hanged himself in jail was a prime suspect in the December 4 slaying of black publisher Charles C. Cade.

Prosecutor Bruce A. Barton said Monday the statement will say either that the Cade case is closed or that the investigation is continuing. It will be released in the near future.

Barton said Donald E. Phillips, 39, Kalamazoo, who was the publisher of the Kalamazoo Ledger, will be named in the statement.

Phillips hanged himself in the Genesee County Jail April 28 while he was being held there on a charge of holding up a bank for $12,000.

Cade was publisher of the Jackson Blazer and part owner of the Ledger.

Campus News

The recent push for heavy black enrollments on the nation's campuses may hurt many all-black colleges, according to the dean of Fisk University.

"Some of our best students now are going to Michigan, Harvard and Yale, and so is support from the black community," says Dean Stanley Smith, academic administrator at Fisk, one of the nation's largest black universities.

"As a result, many previously all-black schools will be forced to close down or consolidate," he said at a weekend seminar sponsored by Midwestern Regional Alumni of the Nashville, Tenn., University.

U.S. calls temporary halt to recent N. Viet bombings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department publicly called at least a temporary halt Monday to a series of recent heavy air attacks it said were directed against North Vietnamese missile and anti-aircraft batteries and associated supply complexes.

The Pentagon announcement terminating the attacks — coupled with a warning they might be resumed — appeared designed to allay fears that the United States was resuming a major and general bombing campaign against the North.

The move came almost as Soviet Premier Kosygin deplored, in an unusual Moscow press conference, the raids over North Vietnam as well as U.S. offensive operations in Cambodia.

"By launching the war in Cambodia and resuming large-scale barbarous bombings of populated localities in North Vietnam, President Nixon actually nullifies the decision of his predecessor, President Johnson, on the termination from November 1969, of all air bombings and other actions involving the use of force against North Vietnam," Kosygin said.

In another Washington development in the Indochinese crisis the Senate Foreign Relations Committee agreed reluctantly to join the House Foreign Affairs Committee in a White House briefing by President Nixon on the Cambodian situation.

But the Senate panel insisted anew that it expects the chief executive to meet privately with it later — an insistence greeted coolly by House members.

Meanwhile, the committee contended Nixon is waging "a constitutionally unauthorized, presidential war in Indochina." This comment was contained in a report advocating repeal of the Aug. 10, 1964, Gulf of Tonkin resolution which became the main basis for U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

The Pentagon said air missions against three North Vietnamese areas were authorized in Washington as protective reaction measures to safeguard unarmed American reconnaissance planes flying over North Vietnam.

"These reconnaissance missions are essential to the security of our forces in South Vietnam," Daniel Z. Henkin, the Pentagon's chief spokesman said. "This fact was made clear to the North Vietnamese at the time the bombing was halted in 1968."

Soviets, Chinese hit U.S. for Cambodian invasion

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei N. Kosygin declared Monday the United States has created a "new hotbed of war" in Cambodia and appealed for action to stop it.

He announced the Soviet Union will re-examine its military aid commitments to North Vietnam as a result of the U.S. and South Vietnamese incursions into Cambodia in an attempt to blot out Communist command sanctuaries.

At the same time, the Red Chinese government issued a statement calling U.S. intervention in Cambodia a provocation against China as well as Southeast Asia and the world. It said China will serve as a "great rear" for the fight against the Americans and South Vietnamese.

Kosygin also suggested that U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation talks under way now in Vienna could be jeopardized. In answer to a question, he said such talks can only be conducted on a basis of mutual trust.

"But when treaties are flouted, when elementary standards of international law are violated... this does not increase trust — the trust without which it is difficult to conduct negotiations," Kosygin indicated it would be impossible to call a Geneva conference on the Indochina situation.

Asked about a Geneva conference, he replied: "We feel this is a time not for conference but for action to stop the aggression, now that it has started."

Red China's statement, broadcast by Radio Peking, said U.S. troop movements into Cambodia are "frantic provocations" against the Chinese people and pledged all-out support and assistance to the Indochinese people's struggle against the United States until complete victory.

The answer to student dissent becomes death

At Kent State University this past week an anti-war rally turned into a war. In the wake of four shooting deaths and scores of injuries Kent State President Robert I. White closed the university and asked everyone to go home "as quickly as possible." This request is now a little after the fact — it should have been issued four days ago to the Ohio National Guard.

There is no good reason that the relatively sedate student body of Kent State should have suddenly gone wild — except that it is not every day the President of the United States takes his 200 million constituents one step closer to Armageddon. There is no reason why there should have been armed troops on a straight midwestern campus — save that the gleeful repression that occurred at Ohio State University a few days before had put state authorities in the habit of over-reacting.

So far, four students — two men and two women it appears — have been killed by National Guard bullets and many more have been wounded by guns, bayonets, clubs and gas. Officials say that many of the shootings occurred when retreating troops turned and fired upon a mob of student harassers. Probably the students were harassing the Guardsmen, but since when is this grounds for summary execution? There is a good chance that neither side in this latest exercise in oblivion would have been quite so emotional had it not been for the vents at Ohio State University. The scenario there was simple. A non-violent student group presented a list of "demands" including provisions for increased black enrollment and the abolition of ROTC. The administration, with hardly a moment's consideration, issued a flat non-negotiable "no". In the absence of any sort of reasonable dialogue the students felt the necessity to engage in non-violent civil disobedience to make their point known. The authorities reacted with violent repression and the battle was joined.

Certainly this lesson was not lost on the dissident elements at Kent State. The powers that be had made it abundantly clear that they would rather answer any challenge with clubs than communication. The student body at Kent State, therefore, simply cut out the middleman and went straight to confrontation — and the establishment went straight to shooting.

We do not in any way condone the destruction of public or private property or the assault of public officials, but we have grave doubts about the future of a system that is so paranoid that it allows dissent to manifest only through destructive channels — and understands murder to be the only answer.

Anti-war offices close; U.S. escalates war

The Vietnam Moratorium Committee closed its Washington office April 20, two days before Earth Day and 10 days before the first U.S. ground troops invaded Cambodia.

The organizers of the moratorium committee were about $100,000 in debt. In a "Dear Friend" letter, the organizers said that "although nearly one million people demonstrated their opposition to the current policies, there is little prospect of immediate change in the Administration's policy in Vietnam."

The letter also noted that the drama and national attention that characterized the autumn never returned. Beyond the fact that the organizers are personally responsible for all the debts they incurred, people had differing opinions on why the office closed its doors.

The committee itself expressed the idea that no one was listening, that they had done everything they could to demand immediate withdrawal and, obviously, we are not withdrawing from Southeast Asia. Others thought that the committee had partially achieved its goals with Nixon's pledge of gradual withdrawal of troops.

Of course, regional and local moratorium organizations are supposed to remain active, and the committee plans to continue mailing a newsletter to those who worked with them in the past.

The national attention focused on the Oct. 15 and Nov. 15 marches was transferred to plans for Earth Day

April 22. Maybe people were tired of accomplishing nothing and here was a national interest that everyone could immediately identify with — "If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem (of pollution)."

So now we have something else to march about, something else to expend our national energies on and everyone can help. If a million people couldn't attract the President's attention — what could?

National interests are like fashions — some were bored with the mini, so designers created the maxi. And some senator created Earth Day to raise a little national interest — a few marches, a few teach-ins, a lot of promises. But by the time anyone heeds the call we'll have found another reason for marching to the Capitol.

The committee was afraid of outliving its usefulness, like the old soldiers who never die or the outdated laws (kite flying in Washington, D.C.) that are never repealed. They said that people worked for peace because of the conviction they shared, not because of a committee name or composition.

Meanwhile, back in Cambodia the U.S. is killing a few more Viet Cong. The Viet Cong are shooting down a few more U.S. helicopters and the apathetic Cambodians pack up their belongings and carry them on their back to someplace where the fighting isn't.

Pesticide cost more than value

I will write no more of public spraying on the MSU campus or in the community at large. I have obtained a couple of pamphlets, issued by the MSU Cooperative Extension Service. They are titled "Casual Home - Invading Pests" and "Kitchen Pests." Since I enjoy both a home and a kitchen, I thought both pamphlets would be useful.

Of the kitchen pests, cockroaches of many varieties are the most potentially annoying. Some are suspected disease carriers, although the suspicion remains unproven. In the reading I have done beyond the MSU pamphlet, I found that most kitchen pests can be controlled — if not frightened, starved out — by careful cleaning of cupboards and corners, by frequent vacuuming and by the storage of all non-refrigerated food in airtight jars.

It is, of course, possible to take these precautions and still see cockroaches running about at night. And many of us are less than showplace housekeepers.

I have compared the suspected dangers of cockroaches with the known and suspected dangers of the pesticides used to control them. Again, I am perplexed.

I have been conditioned to fear insects more than insecticides, yet the evidence points to vaguely defined, possible dangers of most insects, with the few exceptions of toxin-carrying insects. And the evidence points to disturbing, sometimes irreversible, damage to individuals and their genetic legacy, resulting from the use and misuse of pesticides.

It is possible to control insect pests with insect non-pests. Lady beetles "do not damage food, clothing or household furnishings, although their presence is unwanted...They should not be destroyed unless it is absolutely necessary."

The Snout and Strawberry Root Weevils do not, apparently, do any damage in the home. In spite of this, we are urged to control them with a mixture of chlordane, dieldrin and lindane. If you do not recognize the names of these poisons, look them up. All are potentially fatal to man.

Another suggested treatment is to use "a good fly spray" — this despite the harmful effects of almost anything that is sprayed into the air of confined quarters. After listing several poisons, the pamphlet states that "perhaps the best approach is to gather them up with a vacuum cleaner." I wonder how many people read past the list of poisons to that sentence.

House centipedes "are useful since they eat insects and spiders." But I am terrified of centipedes! "Millipedes are normally harmless." But millipedes offend me...I can't stand seeing them!

see a bit of crabgrass or some weeds on otherwise - glorious lawn, than relinquish my delight in being physically close to nature.

The MSU pamphlets contain warnings. Some of the warnings follow:

"Inside buildings apply chlordane, lindane, dieldrin and most malathion formulations to small areas only. Do not apply to entire rooms or buildings. Do not spray with a malathion formulation."

"Avoid using any material in this folder around food or where children can get to them." (Doesn't that eliminate most of the places where the stuff is used?)

"DO NOT ALLOW CHILDREN TO INGEST INSECTICIDE TREATED GRASS UNTIL THREE DAYS AFTER APPLYING." Fine. Remember the experience I told you about? How can the individual citizen allow his children on treated grass if the grass is treated WITHOUT WARNING to the city? Again, I begin to be confused.

"Avoid breathing sprays or dusts. Handkerchief fitted to the face will be

War can continue without ROTC

To the Editor:

This letter is directed to the MSU Committee Against ROTC.

To quote from your little notice passed around Friday advertising the anti-ROTC May Day rally, "We demand the abolition of ROTC because we think it is essential to the continuance of the war in Southeast Asia." Very true. Abolishing ROTC would help continue the war in Southeast Asia.

Aside from the poor grammar, there are other absurdities in your flyer which seem to give substance to the idea that the MSU Committee Against ROTC in a non-thinking group who blindly plunges onto the anti-ROTC bandwagon.

For example, take the part of your notice entitled FOR EXAMPLE: First, "Over 50 per cent of Army officers on active duty are ROTC graduates." Okay. If ROTC is abolished or not, the Army will still train officers, and they will still fill their quotas. It stands to reason that an officer graduating from MSU where he has been exposed to an anti-war intellectualism on campus will tend to be more anti-war in his own ideal than an officer who has graduated from the Citadel, VMI or West Point where the cadets are given all sorts of pro-Vietnam propaganda.

Second, "of six commanding officers in Vietnam, five are ROTC graduates." If they weren't ROTC graduates does that mean that we wouldn't be in Vietnam today and there wouldn't be as many officers there as are now ordered by the Pentagon?

Third, "In 1968, 85 per cent of the incoming officers were ROTC graduates." The Army will fill its quota for officers ROTC or not ROTC. The 85 per cent figure seems to indicate that the way to army reform is through ROTC reform, not abolishment.

Fourth, "It costs the government only one-tenth as much to produce an ROTC officer at MSU as at West Point." Fine. If ROTC is abolished it will cost the Army 10 times as much to train officers. Result: increased defense spending which has already skyrocketed to ridiculous amounts.

The last supposition, "ROTC graduates in the Army, National Guard and reserves also lead troops to suppress Black Rebellions in this country," is the most debasing piece of inflammatory propaganda yet. The real Black Rebellion in this country is the one to change the white man's mind from a racially biased type thinking to the idea that all men are individually equal regardless of race or color. There is progress being made here as evidenced by the attitudes of the young and by increased opportunity for minority groups to advance their social environment. (Ten years ago what chance would Dr.

Wharton have had to be elected president of MSU because of racial bias? Against violence between ROTC - led troops and rioters tends to alienate the whites and retard progress. National Guard intervention is not suppression; it's a reaction.

Lastly, if you want a banner to wave why not try to reform ROTC to what there would be more civilian control to the program, thus eventually creating a more civilian controlled military. Playing child-like games such as burning buildings and throwing temper tantrums will only hurt your cause and lengthen the amount of time it will take to create world peace.

Disgraceful warfare

To the Editor:

The other night on TV I saw the faces of the innocent — mainly children and elderly — pained and bewildered, helplessly staring at the invading army tramping through their village.

Meanwhile, in the corridors of power, in the editorial commentary of our mighty communication industries, and in the sophisticated discourse in the groves of academia, we still hear the same old excuses and rationalizations — we must have trust in our President; he has more information than we do; victory is just around the corner; this one more offensive will do the trick; etc., etc.

I fail to understand how people can rationalize continuing the war for even one more day and wasting even one more life. There can be no excuse of ignorance or of having to act precipitously as in a sudden new emergency. It's an old war, and thoroughly documented by hundreds of observers in thousands of articles and books. We are not fighting for democracy in Indo-China — no government we ever "supported" was ever remotely democratic and never will be. We aren't fighting for our own self-interest against "communism". This war is doing great damage to our country while the major Communist powers have been hurt very little by it.

So it seems that the reason we are in it that we don't know how to get out. Or more specifically, we don't know how to get out "with honor." However, an excellent editorial in the Detroit Free Press of May 2 points out that, to the contrary, the war and, in particular, the invasion of Cambodia "stains our nation's honor."

So we continue. We continue an immoral and self-destructive war. Exactly who is running things now — a days is not completely clear. When you write a letter to the President about the war you get an answer from the Pentagon. Apparently our elected senators and congressmen who are constitutionally charged with some responsibility in these matters are practically impotent.

Throughout the land there is little enthusiasm for and considerable weariness of the war. There would probably be little objection if it would stop tomorrow. Yet there is some mysterious force that continues and escalates it. Sen. Kennedy says it's madness. Bertrand Russell says that 10 years ago. What will history say 10 years hence about our Asian adventure and about the free American people who supported it, or simply accepted it without question?

ROTC only a means

To the Editor:

It is my personal belief that the action taken Friday by individuals opposed to ROTC on the MSU campus was not and should not be categorized as just another unruly mob action directed toward the destruction of property. It is unfortunate that the "silent majority" will view the action taken as just that: the senseless destruction of property by a mob of troublemakers.

Spaces where windows were being filled in with questions. The first question is always, "Why?" If those who were involved in the demonstration cannot or tragically do not provide answers to the question, it will be answered by somebody else — the answer fabricated by the "silent majority" will be incorrect, but it will be accepted as the truth.

The action taken against ROTC at MSU and across the United States cannot be viewed as an end in itself. On campus ROTC is an innocuous thing; it has very little influence on the lives of students in general, and it contributes little or nothing to thought and education. Therefore, it is not surprising that most students usually don't take any action against ROTC. The motivation, the purpose, the result of protest against ROTC Friday, has to have deeper meaning than the crude contribution of an instant air-conditioning system to Demonstration Hall.

ROTC was hit at Demonstration Hall because it was there! ROTC suddenly became the focal point of emotion. The emotion was expressed, not denied, by a few people...beautiful people who care enough about life to get involved in it and to openly express their feelings about it. They aren't docile sheep that, without resistance, are led to slaughter, nor are they willing to slash bones bare for flags. They are beautiful human beings who care. They are not "bums." I was in the Navy once; I lived with the "bums"...if George Orwell could only hear President Nixon call them "heroes!"

Our intervention into Cambodia has become a reality. It was that terrible realization that led the call from "Abolish ROTC" to "SMASH ROTC!!" Cambodia is a reality today, and the carnage continues! Please people, feel something, say something, do something!

ROTC wasn't the reason for breaking windows. ROTC is only a very small part of the reason.

Blacks define goals at meet

By JACKIE BORDEN
State News Staff Writer

Integration as a concept in the black struggle was officially declared dead at the second annual conference of the African Heritage Assn. Fifteen hundred delegates from all over the country, 85 of which were from MSU, decided that the liberation of black nations is the only realistic goal of black people.

The conference held at Howard University in Washington, D.C., focused on some of the following issues: The African cultural heritage and the new perspectives on the history of African people, black studies and the struggle for black education, redefining the economic problems and potentials of African peoples and new Africanism as seen in political perspective.

Student workshops were held following the discussions so that solutions offered could be geared to their particular situations.

The conference was highlighted by an Ujamaa Festival which included outstanding black poets, dancers, singers and musicians. Conference delegates responded positively to the problems of the landless black nation living within the boundaries of the U.S. as well as all other third-world peoples. The outcome was the emergence of constructive criticism of the black struggle and workable suggestions to achieve liberation.

The conference was not a repetitious event. Perhaps for the first time anywhere the finest black minds in all areas of interaction and human experience "came together" and produced a new perspective for the black struggle.

Most delegates said they felt that black studies programs on university campuses attempt to educate whites about the reasons behind black power and its political implications. They exist, too, to fill the void that is a result of the miseducation of blacks, delegates said. Most importantly, they said, black studies coupled with knowledge of economics and politics provide blacks with some of the tools needed to achieve liberation.

Politics, economics and black history were the three main areas stressed at the conference.

The conference was born out of the need for understanding and power among third-world people who up to now have been oppressed. It is the beginning of what the delegates say they believe to be a new world where black power is a fact.

Black delegation charges 'sabotage' in bus trip delay

By BARNEY YOUNG
State News Staff Writer

Black students began to talk of sabotage as they sat in their Indian Trails coach and waited for a tire to be repaired.

The students were part of the MSU delegation enroute to the second annual African Heritage Studies Assn. (AHS) conference held in Washington, D.C., May 1-3.

News Background

Two reasons were cited by delegates as possibilities for sabotage of the trip.

The first was that the AHS conference on Pan-Africanism was the largest in the country this year. The second reason was that the delegation was carrying to the conference a proposal which called for "the total condemnation of the scandalous and notorious actions of the governments of the U.S.A., Britain, Trinidad and Tobago with regards to their recent activities in Trinidad and Tobago."

Mainia Kenyatti, Kenya graduate student, said, "We feel that the breakdown of the bus was done deliberately. It was a sadistic act of sabotage of our trip. We were late for the first session of the conference."

Kenyatti went on to add, "the only way we can stop this stupid imperialistic motive of the enemy is for us African people to be able to control our political, economical, social and academic life of our communities and our nation."

One of two buses chartered by the students had a tire rip as it traveled on I-96 approximately 20 miles outside of East Lansing.

The driver was able to drive to a trucking weigh station and call for assistance.

After waiting for approximately one hour and 30 minutes a repair crew arrived, but without tools to change the wheel having the damaged tire.

The two-man repair crew reported that they thought the tire had been changed (though power tools were required for the repair), and were just bringing the bus another spare wheel.

It was at this time that the talk of sabotage reached its height. It was night, and the travelers were still 20 miles outside of East Lansing.

Richard Thomas, Detroit graduate student, remarked, "This shows us that black people must have their own means of transportation, communication and everything else. Right now 'the man' can stop us whenever he wants."

The bus was driven to nearby Fowlerville where a private mechanic changed the wheel.

More and more the students spoke of sabotage.

James Siebert Lecture

James criticizes press

By JEFF SHELTER
State News Staff Writer

Overemphasis of objective reporting has made the American press part of a dangerous propaganda machine," Howard James, Pulitzer Prize winning journalist, said Monday.

James, Midwest Bureau Chief of the Christian Science Monitor, gave the second annual S. Siebert Lecture to students and faculty of the College of Communication Arts.

Discovering truth takes a lot of effort," James said. "It's time. And the press is too busy printing garbage to do

James criticized editors and publishers who shirk investigative duties to avoid controversies and loss of revenue.

"Some newspapers have the moral courage of a family of field mice," he said. "It is sad that I can go into almost any city in America and very quickly dig up exclusive material that has never been touched by the local papers."

He told of newspapers "white-washing" and ignoring incidents of brutality in juvenile institutions in Indiana, Delaware and South Carolina. He was banned from Indiana's institutions, he said, after he publicized what he termed their poor conditions and "evidence of brutality."

"The local papers did a superficial job of reporting this," he said, "all in the name of objectivity, but little happened."

"In investigative reporting — or muckraking or reforming if you prefer — the press must grab a story like a pup with an old slipper and worry it until we see results," he said. "Few papers will do this. Little wonder we have so many problems in our society when the press fails to live up to its responsibility under the Bill of Rights."

James criticized Vice President

Agnew for his attacks of the press. He said it was "ironic" that after Agnew's name became a household word due to press coverage, he would "turn on it" and "frighten" some segments of the media.

"Yet we must let the vice president have his say," he said. "He has, I hope, performed a useful service. It is good for the press to look at itself. Hopefully, we will not tuck tail and run but rather stand firm and begin to live up to our constitutional obligation."

The press should not be destructive, James said, and "tear down with no effort to replace the evils found with something better."

"I see this as an important function of the press," he said. "We must not only criticize, but we must search the nation and the world for better answers."

He said he disagreed with "upset citizens who want only sunshine and toilet water," in the news.

"Pretending the bad news isn't there won't change conditions," he said.

Subcommittee presents suggestions on GM stock

By DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

The subcommittee of the Business Affairs Committee designated to provide recommendations to the MSU Board of Trustees on the voting of nearly 6,000 shares of General Motors stock owned by the University, will submit its recommendations to President Wharton today.

The subcommittee held an open hearing Monday in the Board Room, but the response was so small, drawing only three people, that the committee decided to hold a closed hearing today.

The council's deliberations were closed, and their recommendations will be made by the president's Office. Even H. Terry of the University Business Office said the University owns more than 6,000 shares of GM stock but is not eligible to vote with close to 6,000 shares.

The subcommittee has been charged to make recommendations on five issues GM stockholders will be voting on.

The issues include a vote on the selection of accounting firms to handle the audits for GM, limiting the maximum salary for GM executives to $375,000 yearly, establishing a committee of corporate responsibility, enlarging the Board of Directors to 26 members and authorizing cumulative voting within the corporation.

Terry explained that the University's GM stock is managed by the Ann Arbor Trust Co. and that previously the University has instructed the trust company to vote in the interests of the University.

Robert Little, chairman of the Business Affairs Committee, said the committee has basically three courses that they can offer the board of trustees.

"We can recommend that the board of trustees direct the trust company to vote for the issues, against the issues or to refrain from voting altogether," he said. Jeff Thompson, West Chester, Pa., sophomore, told the committee he felt the University has a responsibility to vote in favor of the issues.

"The University is going to have to make some sort of stand now," Thompson said. "In the past it has not hurt the University to remain aloof from problems of this sort, but it can't do that any longer."

The committee's recommendations will be presented to Wharton this afternoon.

'Loving' probes routine life within middle-class society

"Loving" is a film of two ordinary middle-aged, middle-class adults and the frustrations they experience in the routine of their daily life together.

Hence, "Loving," thematically, is a rarity.

It contains no heroes and no real villains, only recognizable human beings. It confronts no great social issues except marital stagnation and passive—but not necessarily regretful—acceptance of changeless routine, double-standard morality and incessant role playing.

What happens in "Loving" is never controversial, hardly exciting and basically just everyday situations presented honestly and objectively.

In fact, on the surface, "Loving" may seem a rather uneventful and insignificant melodrama that lacks plot development and resolution. On closer examination, however, one realizes it is much more than this. "Loving" is a low-keyed and calmly perceptive work. It succeeds within its own purposeful limitations to become an absorbing and thought-provoking glimpse at middle-class society. It probes middle-class social demands and peculiarities deftly and focuses on its characters with intelligence and even respect.

In the end, it produces absolutely no conclusions. It concerns itself entirely with showing lifelike situations. Its subdued distinction lies in its refusal to arrive at a static conclusion or a clear cut analysis of its subject matter.

Such a conclusion would be highly presumptuous, so director Irvin Kershner and screenwriter Don Devlin are smart enough not to make one. Instead they leave it to the audience to decide, allowing them to glean whatever they find worthwhile from the material presented. They don't direct or define what the audience should perceive. In other words, they compliment their audience.

George Segal plays a commercial artist and Eva Marie Saint, his trusting wife (who, in Hollywood, has played the trusting wife more often than Saint?). Segal feels cornered by the artistic compromises he must make for business reasons and the domestic compromises he must make for social reasons. His wife senses his discouragement but is unable to assist him because whenever she offers her help her husband views it as yet another interference with his independence.

In public, they smile; in private, silence or shouting prevails. They portray two people who co-exist with each other, tolerating the life they lead because they're not willing or independent enough to seek a new life or repair their present one.

"Loving" is worth seeing if you're prepared to appreciate restrained drama and subtle revelation. The acting is first rate, and the direction and writing is admirably life size.

Showing with "Loving" is "A Day With the Boys," a devastating short subject that alone is worth the price of admission. It is a surprising work with a nostalgic, glowing surface appearance that obscures, until its abrupt ending, a chilling theme. The camerawork by Laszlo Kovacs (the photographer of "Easy Rider") is a composition of rare beauty, and the pacing by director Clu Gulager is masterful.

To describe its storyline would be to spoil its effect. All that I will say is the impact of the end is equivalent to the end shock of "Easy Rider" magnified twice. "A Day With the Boys" is one of the finest, most powerful short subjects I have viewed in years.

Loving pair

Eva Marie Saint and George Segal play a discontented married couple in "Loving," a low-keyed but admirable look at middle-class society and recognizable human beings.

WITH SOLO ALBUM

McCartney shows he's alive, well

By RAY WALSH
State News Reviewer

Paul McCartney has proven that he is alive and well with the release of his first solo album on Apple Records. Called "McCartney," the new album is one that clearly indicates McCartney's superior artistic talents as songwriter, musician and vocalist.

As if to deny the rumor of his death which was popular last year, the inside of the double-fold record features McCartney in various bearded and unbearded poses, doing everything from picking his nose to playing his guitar.

"McCartney" was released the week following McCartney's announcement that the Beatles were breaking apart to pursue solo careers and seemed to emphasize the Beatles were through playing together. Only one of the songs on the album has ever been released in America before; "Teddy Boy" appeared on the bootleg "Kum Back" album in a much longer and unedited version. The song basically tells a story relating to the problems of raising a son and the boy's reaction to his mother's remarriage.

Paul's most popular song and his best on the album is "Maybe I'm Amazed," which will probably come out as a single shortly. Although his voice seems strained at times during the number, his guitar work sparkles, and he's accompanied by his wife, Linda, on the harmonies.

"Every Night" sounds very similar musically to "You Never Gave Me Your Money" on the Beatles' "Abbey Road" album and expresses McCartney's desire to stay with his loved ones.

Four instrumentals also appear on the album, including "Valentine Day" and "Hot as Sun Glasses." When speeded up to 45 rpm, "Mamma Mia America" and "Singalong Junk" are really amazing fast-paced numbers that exaggerate the expert instrumentation.

The latter song is redone as a vocal cut on side one, coming just before the pleasing "Man We Was Lonely" (which uses Linda McCartney again on harmonies). "Lovely Linda" lasts only 40 seconds and consists lyrically of the title, a few la-la-las, and "with the lovely flowers in her hair." It was probably only thrown into the album as a laughing filler, as is indicated by the giggles at the close of the song.

"McCartney," Paul McCartney's first album, is a baker's dozen of songs designed to please Beatles fans. It's a good buy for those who enjoy both rock and easy listening music.

Batsmen travel to Notre Dame

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

After splitting the Big Ten series with Michigan over the weekend, the MSU baseball team will have their hands full in an attempt to get back into contention for the Big Ten championship. The Spartans' league record now stands at 2-4, a full five games behind the leader, Ohio State. The Buckeyes are undefeated in eight Big Ten games.

The most crucial series of the year for the Spartans will take place this Friday as the first place Ohio State team comes to Kobs Field for a doubleheader. "I think we can give Ohio State a run for it," Asst. Coach Frank Pellerin said. "We're at a point now where the kids are getting to be fairly experienced. With some thirty games under our belt, there's no reason we can't finish strong."

In addition to the Ohio State twinbill, there also will be a home doubleheader against Indiana Saturday.

The Spartans have a comparatively light week of non-league competition before they resume Big Ten action. MSU travels down to Notre Dame today for a single nine-inning game against the Irish. This will be the only Spartan action this week until Ohio State comes to town.

The Spartans will throw basically the same line-up against the Irish that Coach Danny Litwiler has been using in recent games. There may be one minor alteration, however, at shortstop. Litwiler may start freshman Steve Cerez in place of senior George Petroff.

Cerez is hitting .273 for the year, having appeared in 18 games this year. The Springfield, Mass., native started in the second game of doubleheader Saturday against Michigan, lacing a triple in three at bats and driving in two runs.

On the mound for the Spartans will be one of three possible starters: Dave Bewley, Kirk Maas, or Bob Clancy.

"Bewley has looked good in the freshman games," Pellerin said. "Pitching Bewley would give him some experience, and prepare him for next year."

On their spring trip, the Spartans faced Notre Dame in two contests, both as part of the Miami Twin Hurricane Classic. The Spartan batsmen won both games, the first by a score of 11-3 and the second, 12-11.

Rich Kreuger was credited with the victory in the first game, as Spartan bats boomed for five runs in the first inning, knocking out the Irish starter.

The second match was considerably closer, with Clancy gaining the win after Notre Dame scored three runs in the ninth inning of the slugfest, setting the stage for a dramatic Spartan victory. Steve Cerez hit a pinch hit single to drive in Elliot Moore for the winning run in the game's final frame.

The game in South Bend is part of a home-and-home series with the Irish, in which Notre Dame visits East Lansing next Tuesday.

JEFF ELLIOTT

No. 1 vs. No. 1 in

Green-White Game

One of the big reasons for all the football optimism during the summer and early fall last year came about after the annual Green and White Game in which the Greens lambasted the Whites (made up of mostly underclassmen and inexperienced players), 82-0. Anybody seeing or hearing that score would naturally be enthused about the future. But that's where fans, coaches and writers went wrong. The fact is the white squad was that good—not that the green squad was that good.

This year if the score is 82-0, former Defensive Coach Henry Bullough made a wise choice in getting out while the going was good, as Daugherty has decided to run the No. 1 offense against the No. 1 defense for the spring wind-up game.

"It'll be a better game from a fan's viewpoint," Daugherty said. "They'll see the best players at the same time, and it should make the game a little more even. We've stayed away from this set-up in the past for fear of injury to key players. But this hasn't always held true as several players were hurt in last year's game."

Proceeds of the game will again be donated to the Martin Luther King Scholarship Fund, a fund set up last year under the direction of former Spartan all-American Gene Washington and Clint Jones. Many outstanding professional athletes were present at last year's game, signing autographs before, during the half, and after the game. The same format is expected to follow this year with many of the top professional names being invited, including Joe Namath and O. J. Simpson.

But that game is still two weeks off, and the MSU coaching staff is currently focusing their thoughts on high school players. Daugherty and his eight-man staff will split up today and head in eight different directions in pursuit of some of the best high school players in the nation. Wednesday is the day the players can sign their national letter of intent which commits them to that school next fall.

Spartan coaches have their eye on 28 outstanding prep players around the country, including 17 in Michigan. Two players whom they are sure to get are Mike Holt, a halfback from Henry Ford and Bill Peters, a big lineman from Cass Tech. Both men graduated from high school in January and are already attending MSU. Holt is a member of the Spartan's mile relay team this spring.

One player whom the Spartans won't get, however, is Tom Divine, a highly sought-after all-around athlete from Jackson Lumen Christi. Divine has already picked Notre Dame as his choice, the same school that his brother attended.

If they get everybody that has verbally committed themselves to MSU, it could be a great recruiting year by the football coaches. As indications are the other MSU sports won't be doing much recruiting after this year due to a cutback in athletic funds.

The biggest rival for the in-state players will come from Michigan. The two schools stage an annual battle to get the best from the state to attend their school. In recent years the Wolverines appear to have held an edge, but the trend could be turning. Players do not just look at the athletic accomplishments and success of the school year before—they look at the academic school and the atmosphere which surrounds it.

The best thing the coaches are hoping for is that the demonstrations that took place 45 miles down the road a few weeks back as compared to the ones that took place on campus Friday, will result in an MSU win off the field.

BUTCHEE CHASES WASHINGTON

No. 2 sprinter tries harder

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

Running No. 2 in the Spartan sprint derby can be hard enough, but when there's virtually no chance to become No. 1, the job becomes that much tougher.

LaRue Butchee, a sophomore product of Detroit Murray Wright High School, is now in his second year of running behind fellow sophomore Herb Washington, but he's never complained about playing "second fiddle" to Herb.

"It was a tough situation for LaRue when he came to MSU," sprint Coach Jim Bibbs said.

"He had run only during his senior year in high school and then came here and found himself running behind Herb and in competition with a lot of other great sprinters. But he's adjusted tremendously."

Butchee never achieved the notoriety in high school of Washington, but he performed well enough in the sprints as a senior to earn a trip to the state meet at East Lansing, where he took eighth in the 220, well back of the winner, Washington.

Butchee's progress has been amazing, Bibbs said, because he never really had time to get adjusted to track in high school and had to learn much about it last year. In learning last year, Butchee had the benefit of both a former sprint star in Bibbs and an apt fellow pupil in Washington. This situation has certainly helped both Washington and Butchee.

"I believe no sprinter will be really great without a good backup man behind him. LaRue knows that he can't be as good as Herb, but he is good enough to keep Herb on his toes, so Herb can't let up because LaRue will be there pushing him," Bibbs said.

In last Saturday's triangular at the Spartan track, both Washington and Butchee finished ahead of defending Big Ten 220 champ Larry Highbaugh in the one-eighth of a mile race.

The pride and joy of the Spartan sprinters is the 440-yard relay quartet, which clocked an early 41.3 at Drake and promises to be MSU's best ever, since three of the runners, Washington, Butchee and Al Henderson, are sophomores while No. 4 man Mike Holt is a freshman.

"LaRue has been leading off on the 440 relay, but from now on we think we'll run Washington first, then Butchee, Holt and Henderson," Bibbs said.

"Butchee's been very valuable to the relay thus far," Bibbs said. "He's been facing the best runners in the country just about every time he's run, and he hasn't been scared off. I'm high on him."

While Indiana's aces, Goodrich and Highbaugh, Ohio State's Jerry Hill and Jim Harris, Michigan's Gene Brown and Washington all prepare for the Big Ten meet next week, Butchee is getting ready, too.

His chances of placing in the 100 or 220 are slim, through no fault of his own but because the Big Ten has assembled the greatest group of sprinters ever seen in these parts.

But as Bibbs mentioned, Butchee won't have excuses if he doesn't make it to the finals, because he will just be moving as fast as he can. And he just might beat one of the "great ones," just as he topped two-time Big Ten 60 champ Stan Gay of Purdue in the Spartans' first outdoor meet.

Purdue coach goes to pros

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Purdue defensive backfield football Coach Brunie Miller resigned Tuesday to accept a similar position with the San Francisco 49ers.

Miller, 42, has been at Purdue since 1965 and previously was on staffs at Wyoming and Iowa State. He has coached eight players who gained consensus all-America ratings.

Unbeaten Ohio State now leads Big 10 baseball race

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ohio State leads the Big Ten baseball conference with a solid 8-0 record, followed by Wisconsin which boasts a 5-1 record.

Ohio stayed on top by defeating Iowa twice Saturday, 3-1 and 8-0, with pitchers Gene Rogers and Ed Reeves on the mound.

The Buckeyes surged into the conference lead by sweeping a doubleheader from defending champion Minnesota Friday at Columbus.

OSU scored four times in the last of the seventh to take a 11-10 win in the opener and broke a 6-6 tie with a run in the seventh to win the nightcap and gain command of the league race.

Ohio State will meet MSU at East Lansing and Michigan at Ann Arbor in doubleheaders this weekend.

Wisconsin suffered its first setback in nine games at the hands of the Purdue Boilermakers, but the Badgers bounced back during the second game of a doubleheader. Purdue won, 2-1 and Wisconsin, 8-1.

Defending champion Minnesota stayed in third place with a 6-2 mark after defeating Indiana in a Saturday, 4-0 and 5-4.

Illinois, Iowa and Purdue share third place in the conference with 4-4 records. Illinois won twice over Northwestern, which remains at the bottom of the league. Northwestern batters got only six hits as they went down 4-0 and 8-1.

Cross state rivals Michigan and MSU each stand at 2-4 in the conference after Michigan's Saturday win over the Spartans, 3-2.

KEEP IT CLEAN

Once upon a time in a far-away land a young man began to announce the discovery of a marvelous new kind of soap. People were skeptical at first, but they soon found that this new soap made everyone clean and happy and, because it was so powerful, it got rid of stains that had been around for years.

Because it worked so well, women found that they had more time to spend with their husbands and children. Marriages got better, people were happier, and everybody admired the young man who discovered the soap. The young man refused to charge for the soap and gave it away to all who wanted it. This bothered some rich people, but the poor people loved it. The manufacturers of rival brands of soap became very angry because their business was being hurt badly.

Soon the young man had followers who were traveling all over the country, giving away the new soap to all who wanted it. The new soap was an almost instant success. Thousands became great fans of the new soap, and they formed small groups to spread its use. The other soap manufacturers became desperate and tried to get the young man to charge for his soap, but he refused. He said that it wouldn't be fair to the poor people, and, besides, "it didn't cost me anything—my father gave it to me."

When the soap manufacturers found that this strategy wouldn't work, they started a smear campaign against the young man and his followers and their soap. They said the soap made laundry too easy—that you should have to work harder to get things clean. They said that the young man and his followers were immoral and that they had been seen in the company of the dirtiest people in the world. These plans didn't work because the people kept saying "it works and you can't beat the price."

So finally the rival soap manufacturers plotted to kill the young man. They paid an informer to betray him and then arrested him. They paid witnesses to perjure themselves in court, and finally they were able to have him convicted and executed. The soap manufacturers were certain that this would take care of their problem, but to their dismay the young man's followers continued to distribute the soap. Persecution didn't work either, for the followers kept spreading to new areas and kept giving away soap.

Finally the manufacturers decided to try the policy of "if you can't beat them, join them." So they analyzed the young man's soap and came up with a very clever substitute, which looked the same but didn't work. They used the same name for their soap that the young man had used and organized a promotion campaign to corner the market. Because of their organization and advertising, they made great progress and even got many of the followers of the young man to join them for a time.

Soon, however, they started to charge for the soap, and, because their distributors had largely replaced the young man's followers, most people had to buy the soap now—and the substitute really didn't work! Many, however, read of the experience of the early users of the soap and tried to discover where they could get it for free. Several of them were successful, and down through the centuries there was always a group who distributed the true soap for free.

After many years the soap manufacturers decided that they needed a publicity gag to stir up interest in their soap, so they started Soap Campaigns to go back to the homeland of the young man to try to recover the original bucket in which he had first made the soap. Mighty armies were raised because the home land of the young man was now in the hands of some people who didn't believe in soap of any kind. These Soap Campaigns resulted in wars and the deaths of thousands of people and much destruction and heartache. Many campaigns, including children's campaigns, were organized. Many true followers of the young man protested against these campaigns, but they were killed for their efforts. Finally the Soap Campaigns ceased, but they did stir up a lot of interest and sell a lot of soap.

Several centuries later, when soap sales lagged again, the manufacturers decided to use force to make people buy their soap. They started an intricate system of spies to tell on people who didn't use the right soap and they used a group of zealous torturers called the Investigation to try people suspected of not using the manufacturers' soap. Many people were killed by the Investigation for using the young man's soap, and some for using no soap at all.

Well, hundreds of years have gone by now, and the young man's true soap, is still available free, and people are still getting clean and being happy. And there are those who try to peddle a similar but inferior kind of soap for profit and power. There are some these days who say that you can't get clean, but that soap is a good thing and everybody ought to have a little, but not go overboard. Others worship books that are the original soap, and still others have the young man's true soap, and have found that only through its power can they become clean.

FIRST PLACE ON LINE

'S' netters battle unbeaten U-M

By JOHN VIGES
State News Sports Writer

The best chance for MSU's team to discover if it is championship caliber comes at 3 p.m. in Ann Arbor, when the Spartans face defending champion Michigan.

beat them, and we have a good chance to do it," Drobac said. "But if we lose we can still get them in the big one next week, the conference tournament."

Drobac said he knows the Wolverines will give his team all they can handle as they try to hang on to the top spot. The Wolves are used to being in first place; they captured the championship the last two years, and they don't want to lose it to their cross state rival.

Seeking the best possible line-up for the crucial MSU match Wolverine Coach Brian Eisner intends to return veteran Mark Conti the No. 1 position after a three-week layoff caused by an injured knee.

"We've been priming Mark for a return this week," Eisner said. "Although still bothered by his knee he wanted to be ready for MSU and Miami of Florida when we play Wednesday. Conti will be playing doubles for certain and singles if he feels he can make it."

Conti, last year's Big Ten champion at No. 4 singles and No. 2 doubles, played in the first two conference matches of this year but has been absent from the line-up since that time.

His replacement, Jon Hainline, has left many opposite coaches wondering whether Conti was needed. Playing solid tennis at both the top and second position, Hainline has lost only one match in conference play. Another returnee from last year's squad that annihilated every team in sight, the Wolverine captain will be one of the favorites in the Big Ten tournament whether he plays No. 1 or 2.

The rest of Michigan's squad is equally tough. Senior Dan McLaughlin, playing at No. 6 singles, is another Big Ten champion and a standout in doubles as well as singles. Joel Ross is unbeaten at the No. 3 spot; Bruce DeBoer is also unscathed at the fourth position. Ramon Almonte has also been playing excellent tennis for the Wolverines.

Drobac will counter the powerful Michigan team with the same line-up that easily handled Wayne State, Iowa and Minnesota as MSU seeks to end the Wolves' 10-game win streak.

Dusty Rhoads and Tom Gray occupy the top two spots for the Spartans plus the No. 1 doubles. Gray is without a loss in conference play and Rhoads has played much better than his 2-4 record would indicate.

Mike Madura continues to lead the Spartans in wins with a perfect 8-0 mark. The sophomore from Evanston, Ill., will receive his first strong test at the No. 3 position when he battles Ross.

Winning style

Mike Madura reaches for a shot as he goes to the net in MSU's match against Iowa. Madura has played at both the No. 5 and No. 3 positions and is undefeated with an 8-0 mark. Madura and MSU face their sternest test of the year today at Michigan. State News photo by Don Gerstner

24 teams enter 'S' tourney, MSU golfers favored to win

By OLG OLSON
State News Sports Writer

The highly-touted MSU golf team will make its only home appearance of the season this day and Saturday when they play the 36-hole Spartan Invitational at Forest Akers Golf course.

Twenty-four teams, the majority of them representatives of Michigan colleges or universities, have entered the Spartans' fifth annual tournament, which unofficially starts Thursday with a practice round.

Officials at Forest Akers, located south of Mt. Hope Road on Harrison Road, announced the 18-hole course will be closed to the public Thursday through Saturday. Reservations will be taken, however, for play on the nine-hole course.

MSU Link Coach Bruce Fossum said he hoped "everyone who would normally be playing at Forest Akers on Friday and Saturday and anyone who's interested would come out and watch the tournament."

"The field of 24 teams features some fine college golfers," Fossum said, "and with some good weather it should be a tremendous tournament."

Joining the Spartans in the largest of Michigan's college golf tournaments are the University of Michigan (U-M) and Central Michigan, Western Michigan, Eastern Michigan, Northern Michigan and Wayne State universities.

Other state colleges include Kalamazoo, Hillsdale, Alma, Ferris State, Aquinas, Northwood Institute, Oakland University, Saginaw Valley, Grand Valley State and the Detroit School of Business.

The entries are rounded out by out-of-state representatives Marshall, Kent State, Ball State, Northern Illinois, Miami of Ohio and the University of Toledo.

A new champion is a certainty for this year's tournament as the University of Indiana is not returning to defend its championship. Others not returning from last year's competitors are Purdue, Notre Dame and Ohio State University, which all finished in the top five.

The Spartans, who are rated the pre-tournament favorites, will be out to tame the rolling fairways and greens of Forest Akers and win their first Spartan Invitational title. MSU was fourth last year.

Fossum said that "the team will be fired up for the tournament and should respond on the home course before a hopefully large partisan following."

"This is the only time we'll be at home," Fossum said, "and I'm hoping that students and golf enthusiasts will come out to see one of the best Spartan teams compete against a strong field of opposition."

The first 18 holes of play will begin at 8 Friday morning. It will be followed by the 18-hole finale on Saturday with the competitors teeing off at 8 a.m., paired according to their Friday scores.

"The top medalists on Friday will tee-off later on Saturday," Fossum said, "this will give the galleries a chance to see the top performers during the afternoon."

BLUES VS. BRUINS TONIGHT

Rookie goalie set to start

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Rookie Ernie Wakely tonight will have the job of preventing the Boston Bruins from making a runaway of the Stanley Cup Finals.

Wakely will be in goal for the St. Louis Blues in the second game of the finals, and the Blues must win if they are to have any chance of taking the cup.

St. Louis goalie Jacques Plante was lost indefinitely when he suffered a concussion in the second period of Sunday's first game. Plante was hit in the forehead by a shot from Fred Stanfield and was knocked unconscious. He remained in Jewish Hospital.

The score was tied at 1-1 when Plante was injured, but the Bruins scored five goals against Wakely to win, 6-1.

The Blues announced Monday that Glenn Hall would be the St. Louis goalie Tuesday night, but Blues' Coach Scotty Bowman apparently changed his mind and named Wakely.

Bowman also said he would continue "with some refinements" his strategy of shadowing Bobby Orr.

The Blues kept a man-to-man defense on Orr throughout the first game and tried to keep the puck away from the Bruins' superstar. Jim Roberts, Tim Ecclestone and Terry Crisp drew the assignments for covering Orr.

Bowman said, "Roberts was on him more because he was doing a good job on him, but Orr is on the ice half of the time, and Roberts alone can't be chasing him for half the game."

"Somebody has to be covering Orr, and I'm glad to do it," Roberts said. "I'm sure Bobby will come up with something different."

Roberts, who scored the only St. Louis goal in the first game, discounted the theory that he could be in a position to handle the puck more because he was with Orr.

"I don't think they're going to pass to him when there's a man on him all the time," Roberts said.

The third and fourth games of the series will be in Boston Thursday night and Sunday afternoon, and the Bruins will have virtually clinched the cup for the first time in 20 years if they win tonight in St. Louis.

People's park fate

responsibility. — there are indications that the camp may be a temporary haven for non-students.

— the physical situation of the park makes sanitation a problem despite the general neatness of inhabitants.

— there have been complaints from parents, students, trustees and legislators. As the park is located on state property, the University must effect reasonable rules to provide "the maximum use and enjoyment for all the public."

The University ordinance prohibiting camping on University property stipulates that areas can be designated for camping temporarily.

Dickerson suggested that the University name some other area on campus — for instance, an area in the field across the street from the Vet Clinic — as a camping grounds for all students.

Reaction to his proposal was mixed. While some residents expressed willingness to move "if you have to show the legislature that you still have control over us," others said they wanted to stay in the Wells-Erickson area.

Gunfire at Kent

freshman student at Kent, was killed.

"I just can't talk about it," Krause said. "We just heard from the hospital."

"I don't know where the first shot was from," said Canterbury. He said he was with guardsmen but heard no order to fire.

"They started pelting everyone with bullets," said Mary Hagan, a student who witnessed the shooting. She said some students fell and others remained standing. They shouted that the shots were blanks, she said.

Miss Hagan said she heard one guardsman issue a ceasefire order which halted the firing.

Telephone communication to the campus was cut off.

Officials at Robinson Memorial Hospital in Ravenna said a student identified as Ronald McKenzie, 21, of Richboro, Pa., was in serious condition with gunshot wounds in the neck and jaw. Three other students identified only as Joe Lewis, John Clearly and Dean Mohler were listed in critical condition with unspecified injuries at St. Thomas Hospital in Akron.

Kent Mayor Leroy Satron and Gen. Canterbury issued a "proclamation of civil emergency" in the city. The imposed an 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew on the town and campus and prohibited use of vehicles at Kent during curfew hours except by residents going to and from work.

Medical facilities

plant addition to provide heat and electricity for the new buildings. This leaves $24.9 million to be applied to construction of the buildings alone.

The estimated total cost for the two buildings is $58.2 million, excluding power plant considerations. Of this amount the state has been asked to appropriate $23.4 million over a four-year period.

The state money, combined with the $24.9 million in federal support, would still leave a balance of $9.9 million, which MSU would have to seek from private sources.

President Wharton announced that all figures pertaining to the construction are estimated by the architect's preliminary drawings and take into consideration the likelihood of increased costs by 1971.

According to Wharton, the two new buildings would enable MSU to develop a full health sciences program and thereby increase the supply of physicians, nurses and other health professionals currently in short supply.

They would also permit MSU to explore new ways of improving the quality and availability of health care and to modify spiraling health costs, he said.

With the proposed facilities, MSU would be able to enroll medical school classes up to 100 students each. The hospital would house 342 beds.

"This is relatively small for the size of the projected medical school," Wharton said, "because considerable emphasis would be on out-patient care and because medical students would receive only one-third to one-half of their clinical training there."

"The health facilities we are planning would complement the community-based training by exposing students to the kinds of innovative and advanced concepts in health care that university medical centers are known for," Wharton added. The new buildings are to be located on the south campus adjacent to Life Sciences I, which is to be completed by 1971.

Discrimination

Natural Science and now in Justin Morrill College, testified Friday that although he will be receiving a Teacher-Scholar Award for 1970, he did not receive a mid-year raise. Trosko worked with Miss Van Tassell and Murray to effect changes in the department.

Teacher-Scholar Awards are given each year to four faculty members at the assistant professor or instructor level. Mid-year salary increases, approved by department chairmen, were intended for younger faculty members who showed excellence in undergraduate teaching.

If the Michigan Employment Relations Commission trial examiner accepts the assumption that committees like the Dept. Advisory Committee and the Ad Hoc Committee of Tenured Faculty are labor organizations, the chances of Miss Van Tassell and Murray getting a favorable ruling are enhanced.

Trial examiner James P. Kurtz ruled at the hearing that it was not necessary to know the exact procedures followed in the departmental committees in order to determine if Hackel dominated the committees. Any supervisory person sitting on an employees' organization is presumed to dominate the organization, he said.

Domination of a labor organization by management personnel is illegal according to the Public Employment Relations Act.

The trial examiner's recommendations on the case, expected in late summer, will not be based on the qualifications of either Miss Van Tassell or Murray for teaching, research, or public service. The decision will be based only on whether the charging parties proved Hackel discriminated against them in the exercise of their rights under the Public Employment Relations Act.

The University of Minnesota Hospitals is no Garden of Eden, but we're a teaching hospital with a lot going for nurses who pick us.

We've instituted programs which have improved patient care and added depth and flexibility to our nursing positions.

For instance, we have nurse clinicians in several clinical areas and we're experimenting with a concept called the primary nurse. We're encouraging staff nurses to become expert in areas like kidney dialysis, coronary and pediatric intensive care, and the care of transplant patients.

Now that you're ready to branch out, send us this coupon and we'll send you more information.
