NEW ERA OF UNCERTAINTY

Nasser dies of massive heart attack

CAIRO (AP) — Gamal Abdel Nasser died of a heart attack Monday night, and his passing pushed the Middle East into a new era of uncertainty.

The Egyptian president was 52. He was a postal clerk's son who went into the army, led the campaign that overturned Egypt's corrupt monarchy, and then became the leading spokesman of the Arab world. For a generation he was that violent world's shining hero despite his setbacks at the hands of Israel.

His death came as he and other Arab leaders were struggling to deal with the backlash of Jordan's war, and amid American-inspired efforts to bring about an agreement to end the state of war that has existed in the Middle East for more than 20 years.

President Nixon, receiving the news aboard the USS Saratoga in the Mediterranean, called it a "tragic loss." He said all nations, "particularly those in the Middle East," would renew their efforts to calm passions and work for a lasting peace.

Nixon's current diplomacy is closely related to the security of the Mediterranean and the Middle East situation in general.

Cairo radio announced that Anwar Sadat, Nasser's vice president, was becoming provisional president.

Sadat's succession, an automatic constitutional move, was announced by Najib Hussein, speaker of the Arab Socialist Union, after a joint meeting of this party and in the Cabinet.

Hussein said the provisional presidency, in accord with the constitution, will last 60 days. During this period the party will meet to elect a new president by a two-thirds majority.

"Nasser was struck by a massive and severe heart attack after returning to his home and after finishing the last ceremonies of the Arab summit meeting," Sadat said in a somber, sorrowful tone.

Sadat lacks the stature to speak with a commanding voice to the bulk of the 100 million Arabs, and he of course lacks the reputation Nasser enjoyed in the so-called nonaligned "third world."

Some diplomats believe Sadat may be less inclined to moderation but they said it was extremely difficult to assess the impact of Nasser's death immediately.

Once Nasser was a leading exponent of driving Israelis into the sea. In recent weeks he seemed more moderate, supporting the idea that negotiations on the over-all crisis might be possible. This stand had threatened to tarnish his image among the most militant of the Arabs.

Now complexity is added to an already complicated picture. The Arab leaders at summit sessions had worked out hastily an agreement which was supposed to settle the Jordanian violence while leaving unresolved the basic conflict between the Jordanian army and the Palestinian guerrillas. A truce commission has been appointed, but its authority has been couched in ambiguous phrases. Such an agreement could be far more difficult to carry out now.

Nasser's passing had to be considered a blow, too, to those who placed hopes in the current ceasefire arrangements and the American peace plan formula. Only Nasser seemed strong enough to convince militant Arabs that negotiations would be advisable. King Hussein of Jordan joined him in agreeing to indirect talks with Israel under U.N. auspices, but Hussein's strength is now in doubt.

Sadat's announcement said Nasser died "while standing in the field of struggle for the unity of the Arab world."

"His memory will remain immortal in the conscience of the Arab world," the vice president said.

Cairo radio said official mourning would be observed for three days, with all government offices, schools and departments closed. Popular mourning will last 40 days.

An announcer gave this version of how the Egyptian president died:

"At 3:30 p.m. Nasser was seeing the Kuwait ruler off at the airport when he felt dizzy and began perspiring profusely.

"He was taken to his house at Manshiet el Bakry Cairo suburb. Doctors were immediately called in. They diagnosed a severe heart attack as a result of a coronary thrombosis.

"Doctors tried to relieve him, using all possible means including a heart beat regulator. But God's will was supreme and Nasser passed away at 6:15 p.m."

That was 10:15 a.m. local time. The announcement was made several hours later.

Nasser was opposed by conservative Arab governments and rulers who distrusted his "Arab socialism," and at times by the more extreme Socialists of Syria and Iraq. Among Arab masses, however, he had no equal. Only Nasser, in fact, could have had the strength to defy militant Arab opinion and accept the American proposal for a negotiations formula in the Middle East.

He saw his Egyptian forces routed in disgrace by Israel's Sinai campaign of the 1956 Suez crisis. He led his own and other Arab troops into a calamitous defeat at the hands of the Israelis in the 1967 war and was so crushed then that he offered to resign. Crowds poured into Cairo's streets shouting his name, and he withdrew the resignation.

From the time of the over-throw of King Farouk's corrupt monarchy in 1952, Nasser was the guiding hand behind what he called Egypt's continuing revolution. He was one of the group of young officers, including Anwar Sadat, who plotted the king's overthrow and then pulled strings that manipulated the new figurehead leader, Mohammed Naguib.

When the time came for Nasser to come into the open as the claimant to the leadership of Egypt, Naguib was easily removed and the real leader of the revolution stepped into his place.

Arab force supervises Jordan truce

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An Arab peace force moved into Jordan on Monday to supervise a truce that appeared shaky at best.

Palestinian guerrilla broadcasts assailed the agreement worked out hastily in Cairo on Sunday to end the civil war that swept the desert kingdom for 11 days. This indicated that some factions of the guerrilla organization were in disagreement with Yasir Arafat, the moderate guerrilla chieftain who signed the agreement along with King Hussein.

Iraq appeared dissatisfied with the 14-point pact and Israel called it another setback for the Middle East peace talks, now stalled in New York.

One guerrilla broadcast claimed the Jordanian army ignored a cease-fire order and shelled guerrillas in the town of Ajlun, about 20 miles south of Irbid in northern Jordan.

The Arab peace force of 100 officers from Egypt, Sudan, Saudi Arabia, Tunisia and Kuwait, arrived in Amman in two convoys and immediately set up truce observation posts in the capital. Shooting stopped there at dawn and inhabitants poured into the streets in desperate searches for food and water.

Before embarking on their tour of Amman the truce officers held their first conference in the bullet-riddled Intercontinental Hotel, where they have been billeted.

Premier Bahi Ladgham of Tunisia also arrived in Amman to head a truce commission made up of a guerrilla envoy and a representative of King Hussein. The commission's task is to implement the 14 points of the Cairo agreement.

Dispatches from Amman reported no early effort by either side to abide by the terms of the Cairo pact. Under those terms, the Jordanian army was to withdraw to regular barracks and the guerrillas were to give up their positions in Amman to take up posts better suited to carry out their fight against Israel. There also was no sign of a release of guerrilla prisoners.

Now the Israelis view the Arab peace pact with misgivings. Gideon Rafael, director general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry, told newsmen in Jerusalem Israel takes a dim view of a clause of the agreement which lends the support of Arab Nations to the guerrillas' plan to crush Israel. Rafael said it was not a good sign for the New York talks that Jordan and Egypt had signed the pact with that clause in it.

President meets Pope

President Nixon and Pope Paul VI met in Vatican City Monday in the Pontiff's studio. Nixon pledged American efforts for peace during his visit to Italy before departing by helicopter for the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea.

Nixon inspects U.S. 6th Fleet

ROME (AP) — President Nixon flew to an American aircraft carrier Monday night and began a 24-hour inspection of U.S. 6th Fleet units sailing off Italy's Mediterranean coast. He landed on the USS Saratoga directly from talks about peace with Italian leaders and Pope Paul VI in Rome.

Before his twilight departure by helicopter from St. Peter's Square, the President greeted 31 freed American hijack hostages en route home from their Jordan ordeal. He told them the United States had used power and restraint to gain their release.

Nixon received a tumultuous welcome from Romans shouting "Viva Nixon," during an unscheduled drive through the traffic-jammed city after his meeting with the Pope at the Vatican. The motorcade stopped several times and Nixon stepped out to shake hands with the crowds.

The warm reception in the streets was in stark contrast with intense, hit-and-miss battles between police and leftist youths that plagued the city for the second successive day.

Rioting leftist students overturned cars and market stalls in one square, and threw a fire bomb at a police car in another. More than 200 youths were taken into custody. Similar battles flared in Naples, where Nixon will land Tuesday night to continue his five-nation European tour.

Nixon encountered one anti-U.S. act as his motorcade sped to the Vatican. Youthful hordes of leaflets on the hood of his limousine. Seven leaflets were arrested.

Nixon's 22-hour stop in Rome, which spokesmen called a "working visit," drew acclaim and fewer disorders than his visit here 18 months ago.

Nixon conferred with Italian government leaders all morning on ways to achieve peace in the Mediterranean, and his theme was that the United States intended to maintain its strength in the area as a lever for peace.

A strong allied presence in the Mediterranean and Europe, he told Italian President Giuseppe Saragat in a luncheon toast, can lead to a new "era of negotiations."

Earlier, Nixon helicoptered to a secluded government villa for two hours of talks with Premier Emilio Colombo and leaders of the center-left government that is America's main ally in the Mediterranean.

Colombo told Nixon that Italy had full faith in America's actions for peace, especially in the Mediterranean.

His last official act in Rome was an 80-minute meeting with Pope Paul VI in the Vatican. A communique said the two discussed efforts for world peace, particularly in the Middle East. A joint communique said the Middle East situation "runs the risk of disappointing the hopes raised by the ceasefire and the prospect of a possible negotiation."

Nixon assured the Pope that America would support efforts for peace, and praised the pontiff for his "spiritual power."

After dropping off the First Lady, who will remain in Rome while Nixon is with the 6th Fleet, the President drove back to the Vatican.

LA FIRES EASE

Giant blaze threatens San Diego outskirts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles area's siege of devastating brush fires eased Monday but a monster blaze — biggest in California history — crackled at the outskirts of populous San Diego.

It destroyed at least 170 homes in cutting a 30-mile 160,000-acre black swath through mountains east of San Diego, fanned by hot winds. There was no control in sight.

"The winds suddenly raced down off the hill, snapping branches from surrounding trees," said Glenn Napierkie of suburban Mt. Helix near El Cajon.

"Suddenly there was fire everywhere. We leaped into our cars, some of us still in night clothes. We raced through smoke and flames and at times thought we were caught."

Temperatures were in the 100-degree range in most areas of Southern California, with fierce gusts of hot winds near mountain areas.

But despite the unfavorable weather, officials in Los Angeles were optimistic about checking a massive blaze that since Friday has charred 107,000 acres and destroyed 161 homes in hills west of the city. Winds dropped in the hard-hit Malibu area, where new damage had been feared. The blaze was a combination of several smaller ones that, whipped for a time by gusts of hurricane force, burned together.

Flames licked to the edges of several small communities inland from San Diego, California's third largest city with a population of 675,000. Residents in brushy areas were evacuated, as were those in many smaller mountain communities.

Some 2,000 firefighters from California and six other states manned lines. Everyone had praise for the firefighters.

"They were there with raw, red eyes and almost on fire," one man said. "They had not slept for hours but they saved my property."

In the Los Angeles area, where thousands had been evacuated and three persons were fatally burned, officials blamed arsonists for some blazes. Four men were arrested over the weekend for investigation of arson.

In Ventura County, north of Los Angeles, firemen predicted containment soon of a rash of blazes that charred 68,000 acres and destroyed 29 homes.

California fires

This map locates the areas of southern California ravaged by fire. Ventura, Los Angeles and San Diego counties were declared a disaster area by California's Gov. Ronald Reagan. Cities suffering from the major inferno are: Bakersfield, Palmdale, Fillmore, Newhall, Santa Barbara, Simi, Malibu and Puente Hills. The Cleveland National Forest is also threatened.

International News

Fighting subsided Monday throughout Indochina and American military and civilian chiefs of the war zone met in Saigon to assess the over-all situation.

Two developments, both involving Cambodia, were disclosed for the first time:

1. The United States is using helicopters — as well as planes — for reconnaissance missions over Cambodia.
2. The Cambodian high command conceded that Vietnamese Communists had set up some effective Cambodian militia and village governments which are opposed to the Phnom Penh regime.

Communist East Germany convicted a young American of agitation against the state and sentenced him to seven years imprisonment, informed sources confirmed here today.

The sentence was considered unusually high for the alleged offense. One source declared: "There has been no parallel to this in recent years."

The father of Mark Huessey, 21, Jericho, Vt., a student, said he had been told by authorities in contact with Mark's East German lawyer that the youth was charged with "provocations inimical to the state." Huessey said his son is alleged to have remarked "If the Soviet Union withdrew from East Germany, the East German government would collapse."

Rioting crowds in the Protestant Shankill Road district of Belfast stoned troops, overturned cars for barricades and set some of them on fire today.

The new outburst of violence followed a weekend of trouble in which the number of civilians injured has been put as high as 200. Ninety-nine British soldiers and police were hurt, several of them seriously.

The outburst was the biggest in recent weeks in terms of numbers taking part, although rubber bullets and nausea gas used by troops have resulted in less reports of serious injury.

National News

A white policeman was shot to death and his partner seriously wounded early Monday in a predominantly black area of Cleveland that has been pressing the city for more police protection.

Killed was Joseph Tracz, 26, and wounded was Fred Fulton, 29.

Police said the assailants were black and that they fled on foot.

The officers had stopped a speeding car that had run a traffic light. Police said Fulton told them that as he and Tracz approached the car the man on the passenger side got out and opened fire with a .45-caliber automatic.

Michigan News

The United Auto Workers and General Motors, embroiled in a two-week-old strike that already has cost about $2 billion, centered their main work Monday on settling local plant issues — a necessary prelude to a national contract.

Agreements have been reached so far at eight of 155 local bargaining units in the United States. No settlements have been reached so far at seven Canadian local plants.

Main table negotiations continued on non-economic issues at the GM headquarters here but without settlement of local issues first, national settlement would mean little in getting UAW members back to work and resuming auto production.

Campus News

President Nixon has written college presidents and other education officials asking them to convey to students the views of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover on campus trouble.

The President, in forwarding Hoover's recent "open letter to college students," called it "a cogent and enlightening analysis" of the techniques used by extremists "as they attempt to trick college students into support of lawlessness, disruption and violence."

Students began fall quarter classes quietly today at Kent State University under the slogan "Power to the Peaceful," — theme of a student government sponsored "Think Week."

"Think Week," a series of student-led discussions, is aimed at informing students on how they can work to bring about change within the existing framework of government and school administration, a Kent spokesman said.

The program also includes the appearance of some outside speakers including Sargent Shriver, former U.S. Ambassador to France, and U.S. Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex.

A torchlight parade and memorial service was scheduled at 8 p.m. in memory of the students who were killed during the confrontation with Ohio National Guardsmen.

Suspect in holdup arrested in Boston

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — William A. Gilday, 41, sought in the holdup - slaying of a Boston police officer was arrested today after a chase of about a hundred miles. Gilday was pursued in a station wagon in which he held two hostages at gunpoint. Police said the hostages were unharmed.

Gilday was reported captured on Mass. Route 122 near the junction with the Massachusetts Turnpike just south of Worcester. Gilday was believed armed with a revolver, rifle and shotgun. It was not determined immediately if any shots were fired in the chase and capture. Police fired at least 30 rounds at Gilday last Friday in a wild chase and gun battle in which Gilday slightly wounded a Lowell police officer, grazing his forehead with a bullet fired from a speeding car.

One man was arrested last week in connection with the slaying - holdup, which police have linked to a radical campus group, a charge disputed by an area college president. A third suspect, Stanley R. Bond, was arrested Sunday at Grand Junction, Colo., when he attempted to take an airliner to Denver. FBI agents there said Bond was armed when arrested. Two other suspects — both young women — are sought in connection with the holdup - slaying.

Police said Gilday had commandeered the car and held the hostages at gunpoint all day Sunday in a residential neighborhood of Haverhill in the northeastern part of the state, the area where the search by 800 police officers had concentrated during the weekend.

Police identified the hostages as Thomas Haberdeau, 22, and his 21-year-old sister, residents of Haverhill. The father of the hostages identified Gilday from a picture.

Police in Haverhill said the two had been held hostage all day Sunday. The girl managed to call her parents today and say she was "somewhere near Boston" before a voice said "shut up" and she could say no more.

Bond was captured at Grand Junction airport Sunday after Sheriff's office received an anonymous tip that he had boarded the plane.

Racial balance in Ferndale hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal hearing examiner ruled Monday Ferndale, Mich., is running an illegally segregated school system. It was the first such ruling against a northern school district.

The decision by Horace H. Robbins, hearing examiner for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), can be appealed to a HEW reviewing authority and then to HEW Secretary Elliott L. Richardson.

Should the order become final, Ferndale, a Detroit suburb, would lose $275,000 a year in federal school aid funds.

In his ruling, Robbins said Ferndale deliberately segregated black elementary school children in the U.S. Grant School which was built in 1926, following racial disturbances at an integrated elementary school.

Ferndale has an integrated high school, an integrated junior high school and 10 elementary schools. Altogether, the district has 7,203 white students, 817 black students and 78 members of other minorities. Of the 396 black elementary students, Robbins said, all but 31 attend the Grant School. It has no white students, he said, and few white teachers.

The inaccessibility of the border regions was one of two reasons cited by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) for the withdrawal of a Fulbright-Hayes fellowship awarded to Sharma during spring term, 1969. The HEW withdrawal of the grant followed political criticism of the grant by state representative Phillip O. Pittenger, R-Lansing, and Congressman Charles E. Chamberlain, R-Mich.

Pittenger, who objected to the grant on the grounds that Sharma appeared to him as "anti-establishment," is now running for the state Senate from the district which includes MSU. Chamberlain's district also includes MSU.

The second reason cited by HEW for the grant withdrawal was that Sharma failed to meet the "continuing employment aspect of technical eligibility."

A copy of the list of qualifications required of all Fulbright-Hayes applicants issued by HEW's Office of Education does not mention such a requirement.

Sharma completes study

Levin opposes amendment

By JEFF SHELTER
State News Staff Writer

Democratic candidate for Governor Sander Levin, in a controversial move, said Monday "cannot support" a proposed antiparochial amendment to the state constitution that will appear on the November election ballot.

Levin, who fought against parochialism in the Michigan state, reaffirmed his position to aiding nonpublic schools but said he "consistently supported the use of public money to provide auxiliary services at nonpublic schools."

Levin said he supports the use of public money for auxiliary programs, including visiting teacher services, programs for mentally handicapped and emotionally disturbed children, counseling for physically handicapped children, remedial reading and health service.

The proposed constitutional amendment would not only prohibit parochialism, Levin said, it would also prohibit most auxiliary services at nonpublic schools.

Levin will appear on the ballot as a result of a massive petition drive that gathered about 300,000 signatures, states that "no public monies or property shall be appropriated or paid, to nonpublic schools."

Levin's running mate, Livonia Mayor Edward McNamara, has also voiced his opposition to the proposed amendment. McNamara has said he supports parochialism.

Last week acting Superintendent of Public

Instruction John Porter released an analysis of the "potential results" of the amendment if it becomes law.

Porter said the amendment would require a cut-off of funds for all existing auxiliary programs at nonpublic schools. Levin said Porter's analysis "grossly exaggerates" the effects of the proposed amendment.

"Such claims do a disservice to rational discussion of the constitutional amendment,"

Levin said. "It will be difficult enough to carry on a rational discussion of aid to nonpublic schools without the use by any public official or interest group of gross exaggerations that intimidate rather than inform the electorate."

In a related matter, James F. O'Neill, State Board of Education treasurer, accused Atty. General Frank Kelley of "incompetency" in failing to state an opinion on the legal interpretation of the proposed antiparochial amendment.

"Our superintendent (Porter) believed it was his responsibility to answer the governor's request, which he did after being advised by your attorney general's office," O'Neill wrote to Kelley.

"However, many people are questioning the procedure as well as the propriety of the superintendent's opinion because he is not the legal authority — you are."

MSU cheerleading squad reorganizes in club form

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

The MSU cheerleading squad will reorganize its efforts this season, but under the label of a club. An "orientation and skill" clinic will be held from 7-9 p.m. tonight in the Sports Arena of the Men's IM Bldg. Interested students, both male and female, may attend the meeting. Applications will be available at the clinic.

The clinic will be conducted by the nine returning members of last year's squad, and basically will be the demonstration of skills and techniques employed by the cheerleaders, Frank Beaman, intramural director, said. Tryouts will be plotted in accordance with student interest and participation in the clinic, Beaman added.

Last year during winter term, Pauline Hess, then director of the MSU cheerleading squad, was charged by the Black Liberation Front (BLF) with "discrimination and racism" against black cheerleaders Celeste Moy and Lynn Weaver. Miss Moy and Miss Weaver were said to have been excluded from some meetings and profit-making modeling contracts by Miss Hess.

President Wharton, Executive Vice - President Jack Breslin, Athletic Director Biggie Munn, and the 18 cheerleaders met to discuss the charges against Miss Hess. Following the meeting, the cheerleaders voted to discontinue cheering because they felt "an injustice had been done to their coach."

Three of the members resigned permanently, while the remaining fifteen chose to resign temporarily.

Miss Hess resigned as director of cheerleaders, a post which she had held for the past 16 years, and no successor was named.

Over the summer, Munn and Breslin decided that the cheerleading unit could best function as a club. Beaman is serving as the club's faculty advisor.

"The cheerleaders are a team, always have been a team, and will continue to work towards a varsity letter," Beaman said.

Now, the students will have more say in how the club is run, striving for changes and improvement in establishing first year groundwork as a club, Beaman said. Also, the club will set the number of cheerleaders on the active unit. Sixteen, eight men and eight women, is the tentative figure, though it is subject to change.

The tryouts act as an added burden to the nine current members who must practice for the upcoming games and tutor prospective members.

Court releases picnicker

By JAMES SHELTON

An East Lansing man arrested Sunday afternoon at a picnic on Ransom Road in Eaton County was arraigned that afternoon in the 56th District Court in Charlotte before Judge Kenneth A. Jensen.

Harold H. Nies, 24, of 102 1/2 W. 1st St., was arrested at 1 p.m. Sunday by Eaton County Sheriff's deputies on the charge of causing contention and a disturbance by refusing to leave the picnic grounds.

According to Ruth Wolcott, court clerk, Nies pleaded innocent and was released after arraignment on $100 bail. Mrs. Wolcott said trial has not been set, and no jury was requested.

The arrest took place at a picnic in a privately owned field between Ransom and Michigan roads in Eaton County. The picnic was a fund-raiser sponsored by a Lansing restaurant.

Residents on Ransom Road notified the Eaton County Sheriff's Dept. Sunday morning that 15 or 20 cars were blocking the road. Four police cars were dispatched at 11 a.m. to instruct the owners of the cars to remove their vehicles.

An officer in charge of the operation said most people were very cooperative. By 3 p.m., the officer said, the area was free of police and picnickers. Nies' arrest was the only reported incident.

The picnic was originally scheduled for a location on Abbott Road about two miles north of the MSU campus.

Sgt. Richard J. Murray of the East Lansing Police Dept. said police received questions and complaints from neighbors around the scheduled picnic spot prior to the event.

Murray said East Lansing police contacted the owner of the property. The land owner reported she had never been contacted by the group for permission to use her property.

East Lansing police then contacted the organizer of the picnic, Murray continued, and in an ensuing meeting with police and city officials, the organizer voluntarily offered to cancel the affair.

In a conversation with the organizer Saturday night Murray said he learned of the decision to relocate the picnic to the Eaton County area.

It was erroneously reported in Monday's State News that an injunction was filed Friday against the group by the East Lansing Police Dept. Murray explained Monday no injunction was issued and the group relocated voluntarily.

The group had permission from the owner to use the property on Ransom Road Sunday.

Strike gained only uneasy calm

By DAVE SHORT
State News Staff Writer

An uneasy calm blankets MSU and most of the country's other universities today in the four-month wake of last spring's nationwide student uprisings.

But forecasts of future student turmoil like that which rocked 760 universities and colleges and closed over 300 of them last May abound among American educational experts.

Predictions of a "doomsday" fall on the nation's college campuses are not unfounded. Despite an apparent lull in the action, the conditions that caused last spring's student outbreak have changed little if any.

The war in Vietnam still rages on, and United States participation there is in its ninth year. The Senate defeated a proposal for a volunteer army in late August, so the much-hated Selective Service System is still in effect.

And legislative attempts by the Senate to force President Nixon into a timetable withdrawal of U.S. troops in Southeast Asia and to limit United States actions there have largely failed.

Despite Nixon's claim, made during his Kansas State speech earlier in the month, that the national government wasn't the cause of last spring's student uprising, his own Presidential Commission on Campus Unrest criticized him Saturday for his role in the matter.

The commission also chided Nixon for not taking any major steps to alleviate the causes of student unrest. Commission Chairman William Scranton, the former Republican governor of Pennsylvania, said (after releasing the commission's report), "Since the episodes of last spring, there has not been the kind of leadership needed to bring about the kind of reconciliation that we're talking about."

But President Nixon has indicated that he is disdainful of the commission's findings. As Detroit Free Press writer Robert

S. Boyd put it, "An unwanted baby was left at the White House doorstep Saturday. The report of the President's Commission on Campus Unrest was received by its progenitor without ceremony or visible enthusiasm."

The Commission on Campus Unrest's findings weren't the first condemnations of Nixon's handling of the college youth by Presidential appointees. Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel blasted Nixon last spring for not looking at young seriously enough.

The President's special adviser on campus unrest, Vanderbilt University Chancellor Alexander Heard, warned Nixon that he had better pay heed to the views of the college students. Sol Linowitz, the chairman of Nixon's Special Commission on Campus Tensions, also cited the President and, even more Vice president Spiro Agnew as the reasons why moderate students turned radical.

The administration has also made it clear that it plans to use student dissent and campus violence as major law and order issues on the 1970 campaign trail. Both Nixon and Agnew appear ready to sacrifice student-administrative communications in return for a Republican gain on the legislative rolls.

"The name of the political game here (Chicago) is pin the hippies' hair on a liberal. If that doesn't work, loop the Weatherman's noose around his neck and accuse him of being a 'radical liberal' who's being financed by 'ultra-left' groups. It's supposed to do the trick," writer Paul Wieck commented on the Illinois Senate race between Democrat Adlai Stevenson III and incumbent Republican Senator Ralph Smith.

The Administration has indicated that the universities had better take care of the campus unrest and violence issue before the government is forced to enter the picture.

An idea of the pressure which the government plans to use in forcing the universities to handle the campus dissent issue came recently when Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird said the administration is considering dropping military and all other types of federal aid grants for university research as a result of the attacks on university military research centers.

Despite political gains that Nixon may make in Washington, his present course could succeed in again alienating and inducing the college students to act this fall as they did during last May's uprisings.

Air pollution endangers fruit, vegetable gardens

Air pollution is threatening some gardens, as well as commercial orchards and vegetable fields, an MSU horticulturist said recently. John Carew, professor and chairman of the Dept. of Horticulture, said home gardeners may notice that vegetables planted near heavy traffic sometimes appear sickly. This is frequently due to gaseous pollutants from auto and industrial sources, Carew explained, citing several national surveys.

"Even commercial fruit and vegetable operations 'out in the country' are no longer safe from the effects of air pollution," Carew said. "Increased levels of air pollutants affect plants far from the source of pollution."

Air pollution is killing trees several miles from Los Angeles. It is also reducing yields of commercial vegetable growers in New Jersey, according to the horticulturist.

Temperature inversions trap polluted air near the ground, Carew explained. This mass of pollutants may be carried along the ground many miles from the source, he said.

"No area of the world is now free of air pollutants," Carew emphasized.

"Gaseous pollutants from the Chicago-Gary area could have an increasingly adverse effect on southwestern Michigan fruit and vegetable production."

"Losses due to air pollution affect both the consumer and the producer, in the form of poorer quality produce, decreased supply and higher prices."

The amount of gaseous pollutants released into the air must be reduced before air pollution causes significant reductions in our nation's food supply, Carew warned.

"At the same time, scientists must increase research to develop plant varieties tolerant of pollution," he said.

Tax law utilized in 'U' fund drive

An All-University Development Fund Campaign will utilize a Michigan tax law making it possible for MSU employees to use contributions to the University as tax deductions.

Contributions to institutions of higher learning in Michigan which are permitted as deductions in arriving at taxable income under the U.S. Internal Revenue code will generally qualify for credit against the donor's Michigan income tax.

The law provides that if an employee contributes $100 to MSU, for example he generally can receive a $50 tax credit on his state income tax plus another $28 in federal tax deductions for charitable contributions.

Thus, the $100 donation would cost the donor $22. Using the law as a guideline, Emery G. Foster, vice president for MSU's business operations is heading a 10-man committee that is organizing the voluntary fund raising campaign among the 8,000 employees of the University.

Money raised by this All-University Development Fund Campaign will be used for Distinguished Faculty Awards, Distinguished Scholarship Awards, Ralph Young Scholarship Fund, acquisitions for the library, Kresge Art Center and the museum, faculty seminars, Abrams Planetarium and campus beautification.

Prof picked to head national study group

Myles G. Boylan, director of MSU's School of Urban Planning and Landscape Architecture, has been selected to lead a national study of curricula standards by the American Society of Landscape Architects.

As chairman of the society's committee on Education Policies and Planning, Boylan will examine the relationship of landscape architecture to present society and help determine how that relationship can best be reflected in educational programs.

The committee will primarily study the society's current accreditation policies to see if they meet today's specific problems and those of the future.

Boylan explains that greater emphasis should be placed on variety and flexibility in new accreditation policies to allow schools to meet certain standards yet give them latitude in deciding on their own directions.

So come on girls, to the Meridian Mall tomorrow night at 7:00 p.m. You may win some fantastic prizes.

MERIDIAN MALL

'U' houses MUCIA offices

By DAVID BASSET
State News Staff Writer

The Midwest Universities Consortium for International Activities (MUCIA) has moved its headquarters from the University of Illinois to MSU. MUCIA was formed in 1964 when the University of Illinois, Indiana University, the University of Wisconsin and MSU joined to work in the area of international activities. In the fall of 1969, the University of Minnesota was elected as the group's fifth member.

Operating from its new offices in the Center for International Programs, MUCIA institutions strive to improve the bonds between themselves and institutions in other parts of the world.

MUCIA received a $3.5 million, five-year grant from the Ford Foundation in 1964. The consortium is still using this money, as well as additional funds from the Agency for International Development (AID).

George Axinn, MUCIA executive director and former asst. dean of international programs, said MUCIA is attempting to establish a mutual cooperation union among institutions of higher education. "One of the major objectives of MUCIA," Axinn explained, "is to establish a worldwide network of higher education institutions with functional working relationships. These would then have the capacity to transcend temporary international animosities."

"Through such a system of relationships," he continued, "countries would still be able to exchange data, publications, research findings and materials—even in times of trouble. This, in itself, would foster better understanding and world peace." Axinn said that in the coming decade an increased emphasis will be placed on these linkages because partnership and cooperation need to replace tutelage in the relationship of American universities with institutions of developing countries.

"The universities and research establishments in the developing nations have grown in quality, complexity and self-confidence," he said. "Their connection with a combination of American institutions enables them to draw upon a larger group of high-quality specialists."

Over the last six years, MUCIA has pooled its resources in four major overseas assistance projects currently in operation. These projects include:

• A basic science exchange program with LaMolin (the Agrarian University) in Lima, Peru.

• The National Institute of Development Administration in Bangkok. Involved in this program are teaching, training and research programs in the various fields of development administration, including public administration, business administration and development economics.

• A Korean education project which provides consultants to the South Korean government for its long-range educational planning agencies.

• An Indonesian agricultural education program to assist that nation in further developing its agricultural colleges.

In addition to these international activities, MUCIA also facilitates the pooling of resources in the United States. Through the group's efforts, a student may study at another member institution, conduct research overseas and still receive a degree from his home university.

Another MUCIA project is in the area of library acquisitions. Through the group, a specialist in one area of study will visit each member institution, determine the need for additional materials in that area, and then travel to the country with which the area is concerned on a book-buying mission for all member institutions.

MSU's liaison officer to MUCIA is Richard Niehoff, asst. dean of international programs. Members of MUCIA's board of directors include Ralph Smuckler, dean of international programs, and Milton Muelder, vice-president for research development and dean of the School of Advanced Graduate Studies.

Council now taking fellowship requests

Applications for postdoctoral and graduate fellowships for study in mathematics; physical, medical and biological sciences; engineering; certain social sciences; and history and/or philosophy of science are now being accepted by the National Research Council.

Applications can be made by college seniors, graduate students working in a degree program and individuals wishing to do postdoctoral work. All applicants must be citizens of the United States, and will be judged only on the basis of ability.

Further information and application materials may be obtained from the Fellowship office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C., 20418.

The deadline for applications for graduate fellowships in Nov. 30, and for regular postdoctoral fellowships, Dec. 7.

Also to be awarded in March are the Danforth Graduate Fellowships for seniors or recent graduates of accredited colleges in the United States who have serious interest in college teaching as a career and who plan to study for a Ph.D.

Information may be obtained from Frank H. Blackington III, director of the Honors College. The Danforth Foundation does not accept direct applications for the fellowships.

Upheaval, violence mark Nigeria's 10-year history

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — With much rejoicing, Nigeria celebrates this week its first decade as an independent nation. The last 10 years have not been happy ones, but this country is potentially the richest in Africa and things are looking up.

On Oct. 1, 1960, the sovereign state of Nigeria promised to become a vindication of British colonialism, a working democracy in turbulent black Africa.

But there were three submerged nations within Nigeria — the largely Moslem North, the Yoruba West and the predominantly Ibo East. They jockeyed for political position, dividing and allying with each other, ripping apart the fragile sense of national unity.

Ruthless alliance
A ruthless alliance of the North with a faction of the West turned elections into a joke. By 1965 law and order had collapsed in the divided West and threatened to do so elsewhere.

On Jan. 15, 1966, a handful of mainly Ibo officers ended the era of civilian politics by assassinating the federal prime minister and the Northern and Western regional prime ministers. The young officers' coup was quashed, but the army took over Nigeria.

Coup followed coup. On July 29, 1966, junior officers from the North murdered Maj. Gen. Johnson Aguiyi-Ironsi, the Ibo who had emerged on top of the first coup. Massacres of Ibo officers and of thousands of Ibos in the North followed — a prelude to the ensuing civil war.

Biafra defeated
The 2½-year attempt of Eastern Nigeria to secede from Nigeria as a new nation called Biafra was finally defeated last January. That left a legacy of suspicion and economic destruction in parts of the East.

The war has meant dislocation and poverty for many. The East Central State, which contains the Ibo core of conquered Biafra, is moving beyond the crisis of hunger but has 20 per cent unemployment plus a shortage of money and an inevitable postwar malaise.

For the victors the war has been a tonic. Top civil servants who ran the country while the army fought feel they passed an acid test: they kept bureaucracies operating and the economy in decent health.

Similarly, the military feels buoyed by its ultimate triumph, even if won with important help from Britain, the Soviet Union and Egypt.

Sound economy
Bolstering the government's mood of self-confidence is the economy, remarkably undisturbed by the war. Traditional exports like peanuts, cocoa, cotton and palm oil products have kept up their prewar levels. The key to Nigeria's new hard-cash prosperity is oil, however.

One million barrels of highly prized, low-sulphur crude are produced daily. Since the war's end the government's oil revenues have jumped, from $78 million last year to an estimated $280 million this year.

Still divided
Instead of four, Nigeria today has 12 states. The hope is that proliferation will force people to develop more localized loyalties and prevent the "big brother" politics that characterized 1966 affairs. And a strong federal government will be able to dominate the smaller states, the argument.

Yet Nigeria remains a divided society, an amalgam of Islamic, desert cultures of the North and the animist and Christian peoples of the tropics.

Nigerians speak some 20 languages and dialects. English is the official language, but Hausa is also broadcast in others. A decade is hardly enough time for all these peoples to come to think of themselves as a nation.

Elections set for district reps

Special elections will be held Oct. 15 to select new ASMSU district representatives in the Akers - Fee and Mason - Abbott - Van Hoosen district.

Petitions for the two district representative posts are available outside 307 Student Services Bldg. Petitioning will continue until Oct. 9.

Donald Moore, the former Akers - Fee representative, died in an auto accident Sept. 14. Ted McClendon, the Mason - Abbott - Van Hoosen representative, resigned the same day.

State Showstoppers seek new members

Auditions for the State Showstoppers, a MSU professional performing group, will be at 7 p.m. Sunday and Monday in 103 of the Music Practice Bldg.

Gordon Mehling, a graduate student in music and director of the group said each student should prepare two selections showing his versatility in singing, dancing and acting. An accompanist will be present at all auditions, but the contestant may bring his own if he wishes.

About twenty members will be chosen. The groups rehearse once a week and special rehearsals for individual and specialty numbers are required. Members of last year's cast averaged $5.15 per performance.

Material for the Showstoppers' programs is drawn mainly from musical comedy, although the group performs everything from opera to folk and rock.

KILLY LIVES. See Jean-Claude Killy in person Fri., Oct. 9, at Jensen Fieldhouse. Save $1.00 when you purchase your tickets with your United 12-21 card. You must also show card for admission.

The Showstoppers have entertained for banquets, conventions, high school and community groups and television show. This year's program includes a cabaret, a barbershop quartet and a rhythm set.

Magazine re to hold meeting

A representative from Mademoiselle magazine will be campus at 7 p.m. today in W. Hall to discuss the making of a magazine.

The presentation is in connection with the magazine's annual College Competition contest. Girls interested in writing, advertising and other aspects of magazine work given an opportunity to become Mademoiselle guest editors for a summer.

Girls interested in how magazine runs and in entering contest are asked to attend film will be shown.

Kresge gallery exhibits prints

MSU's Kresge Art Center will open the new season with an exhibit of contemporary prints from the Winston collection beginning Saturday running through Oct. 25. Reception for the public, will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the gallery.

The exhibit consists of 100 prints including works from the "Adamic Series" by Anni Albers, works by Karel Appel, Alexander Calder, Patrick Gifford, Jasper Johns, and Roy Lichtenstein.

On several occasions," Paul Kresge, gallery director, said,

"MSU has had the privilege of borrowing works from the Winston Collection. Mrs. Barnett Malbin (the former Mrs. Harry L. Winston) has not only been an avid and astute collector," Love said, "but, what is more important to those without the means to make such a collection, she has always been eager to share it with others."

"She has always been a gracious hostess to graduate art students from MSU," he said. The nucleus of the collection, futurist works by early 20th century artists such as Boccioni and Severini, usually remains intact in her Birmingham home so that it is available to students. But, Love said, Mrs. Malbin has many other related works, such as an extensive collection of prints and posters, which often go out on loan.

In addition to the contemporary prints, works from MSU's permanent collection will be displayed.

Twenty-three African pieces from the Harry and Freda Schaeffer Collection will be shown. Love noted that this addition considerably broadens the African holdings in MSU's permanent collection.

Too late

ALDRICH FILM

'Too Late the Hero' offers same tired old war themes

The last really exciting war adventure film was "The Guns of Navarone" and that was made in 1961. Since then the adventure fan has had to settle for a dreary succession of action epics, the best of which might generously be termed respectable facsimiles.

Like the western, there's not much a filmmaker can do with the well worn genre of the war adventure. But it can't be too much to ask for a glimmer of originality, a slight rearrangement of clichés and an occasional plot twist to supplement the blood and the danger and the noise.

Or can it? "Too Late the Hero," the new war film from Robert Aldrich ("The Dirty Dozen," "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?"), doesn't live up to even one's minimal hopes. It is yet another film about a small group of men who undertake a perilous mission into enemy territory with little chance of survival.

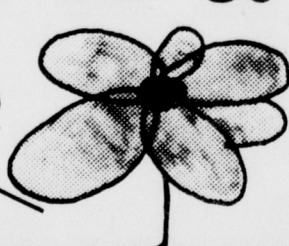

Set on an island in the South Pacific in 1943, "Too Late the Hero" is memorable only in its entrapment of two relatively fine actors — Cliff Robertson and technicolor and on the wide screen. Films like "Too Late the Hero" set out to display the senselessness of war and the dubious rewards of heroism, but they end up communicating only the senselessness of filmmakers who insist on doing the same tired things over and over again.

Michael's is Art.

That's better than being called Sue.

Michael Caine — in the routine business of stalking an enemy — infested jungle, bickering with fellow soldiers and struggling to stay alive.

Aldrich has never been famous for his restraint, and "Too Late the Hero" is not likely to alter his image. It's all gutsy, bloody action with any number of grisly moments to satisfy those who crave their bloodletting in

SCHOOL CHIEF SAYS

Schools compared to jails

NEW YORK (AP) — There was a time when "Three By Ringhetti," which opened last week at off-Broadway's Janis Theater, would have rated avant garde drama. Now it's rather wistfully out of date.

Author Lawrence Ferlinghetti founded the prehippie "beat generation" along with Jack Kerouac and Allen Ginsberg. His reaction upon symbolic, realistic and anguished aspects of survival seem naive in the light of more recent era.

"Three Thousand Red Ants," which opens the long night's

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — This city's new school chief thinks too many classrooms are oversized jail cells and teachers spend too much time acting as jailers.

That's one of the reasons for student rebellion, according to Thomas A. Shaheen. The surprising thing is that more do not rebel, he added in an interview recently.

"Our schools are organized on a semiprison approach, on crime and punishment and cops and robbers techniques," he said.

"We have lack of trust — sign-in and sign-out slips, detention systems, wardens and jailers, fear of escape, regimentation, limited opportunities for choice, barricaded or locked toilet rooms, cell-like classrooms."

Shaheen, 57, is beginning his first year as superintendent of the 90,000-student San Francisco public school system after five years as schools chief in Rockford, Ill.

One of his first plans is to abolish requiring students to sign in and sign out of schools.

"The sign-in system, he said, should not apply to all students when only one out of 30 students violates the rules.

The school buildings themselves need some radical changes too, he added.

"We need to knock down some walls in some of our older school buildings," he said.

"Generally, school buildings across the country have a cell-like structure. The typical classroom is rectangular and has one door and a few windows. It's a large-scale prison cell."

Shaheen said classrooms should be larger, combining several classes in different parts of larger rooms, allowing students to move about with more freedom.

"But the overriding thing, regardless of the structure of the building, is the attitude of the staff and community toward young people," he added.

They need to be treated with respect, and with regard for their basic rights, he said.

There are lots of games at MSU. (The reader should freely substitute "bags," "concerns," "interests," etc. for "games.") The fight for grades game. The preparation for life game. The social life game. The student government game.

At Psi U we don't have study tables, lectures on how to get ahead in business, or mandatory parties. We're willing to let IFC go its own apologetic way as long as we are free to do as we like.

We don't knock studying, partying, or working in student organizations. These activities are just as valid, but no more, than Psi U's function of providing a good place to live. For us "a good place to live" is a house that reminds visitors of a castle, a cohesive yet tolerant group of friends, communal living responsibilities. Most important, Psi U is an integrative force which can change "outside activities" into parts of an individual's whole.

People struggle in Jordan

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — In a shattered street thick with the litter of war, thousands of hungry men, women and children clamor and fight and claw for food.

Like voracious ants, they swarm over a convoy of relief trucks, struggling for sacks of flour.

These are people — Jordanians and Palestinians alike — grown accustomed to violent death and the din of battle. A volley of warning shots is ignored by them. As they punch, back and chop their way towards the load of flour, the surging crowd kicks up a cloud of dust around the savage, violent scene.

Bent double beneath his load, a man stumbles away with a sack on his back. His family, eyes wild and fists clenched, prepares to beat off anyone trying to snatch it from him.

On Jebel Hussein, one of the seven hills of Amman, this was the ugly aftermath of civil war.

For 11 days, Jordanian soldiers battled in the streets with Palestinian guerrillas. For the moment, the fighting was over and the people emerged from their cellars to seek the necessities of life. They need food and, even more, they need water.

Two women fight hysterically for possession of a bulging sack tugging at each end until it bursts. Then they scoop up handfuls of flour from the dusty ground.

Everyone is white with flour, like fancy - dress ghosts.

The big food trucks came from the Israeli - occupied west bank of the Jordan River. But no one on Jebel Hussein questioned the source of aid.

Holding plastic buckets in outstretched arms, Arab children line the streets pleading for "maya, maya" — water, water.

A fire department tanker drives up and hundreds surge around. Troops are powerless to control them or get them into an orderly line. The water goes to the strongest.

The crowds struggle among a tangle of broken power and telephone lines. Buckled street lamps bow their heads to the ground.

King Hussein Street, running along the ridge of Jebel Hussein, is a scene of devastation. Barely a house or a shop remains undamaged. The thick stone walls are pock - marked by machine - gun fire and gouged by artillery. Many homes are burned and destroyed. On a corner stands the charred and blackened shell of a gas station that burned like a torch for two days.

In the roadway, unaccountably, lies a new pair of child's shoes. No one picks them up.

How many people died here? It is impossible to say with any accuracy. The army claims very few. The guerrillas say thousands.

Capt. Sayal Mohamed of the 4th Division Armored Corps, 1st Royal Guard Brigade, told newsmen how his troops had fought yard by yard along King Hussein Street.

"Every window was dangerous," he said. "We had to blast them out house by house. They hit us with everything they had — rockets, grenades.

"We lost 25 dead and 30 wounded along this street and I suppose we killed about 100 guerrillas."

Mohamed claimed his troops uncovered huge guerrilla ammunition dumps, one of them underneath a mosque, enough to keep the guerrillas fighting for three months.

He reported his unit encountered about 50 Syrians fighting with the guerrillas in the Jebel Hussein area.

Mohamed, a small, dark, wiry man in his late 30s, a Bedouin from the Crusader city of Al Karak south of Amman, claimed the King Hussein Refugee Camp was shelled only briefly, and then only its outskirts. The camp lies in a vast hollow north by Jebel Hussein and is the home of some 35,000 Palestinians. Newsmen have not been permitted into the camp.

He said the camp was surrounded by troops and armor and then search and destroy patrols went in after six days to seek out any guerrillas who might remain. There were very few, he said.

"We found their uniforms and their weapons and their boots, but not the guerrillas," the captain added.

"But we captured their registers and we know now who is a guerrilla and who is not."

Tough Jordanian commandos in red berets lounge in their trucks and in the battered houses, cradling their automatic rifles like toys. Huge recoilless rifles point their snouts toward guerrilla - held territory. Parked just off the road is a commando jeep with a flower at each corner. Like all the vehicles, it carries a portrait of King Hussein.

"He is our god," says Mohamed. "We love Jordan and we are ready to die for it, every corner of it. But the Fedayeen turn their guns against us and call us traitors."

Like Mohamed, most army officers who fought on Jebel Hussein, was unhappy with the cease - fire that brought that battle to an end four days ago.

"I know my soldiers are good soldiers," Mohamed said. "If they would give us permission we could clean out the city and there would be no more Fedayeen left in Amman. We should cut this problem out by its roots. As it is, we shall have the problem all over again."

DOCTORS, TEACHERS DISAGREE

Parents hail probe of drug use

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman's plans to investigate the use of amphetamine drugs to quiet overactive school children has drawn support from parents but criticism from some doctors and teachers.

Rep. Cornelius E. Gallagher, D-N.J., opens hearings today as chairman of a House privacy subcommittee. His aim is to find whether the drugs are being confined to their medically recognized use in treating brain-damaged children or whether normal, bright youngsters are being drugged to keep them from fidgeting.

"Before this grows into the millions, I think we ought to have a look at it," Gallagher said. He heads the House privacy subcommittee holding the hearings.

Gallagher's concern is with amphetamine - class drugs prescribed by doctors for such disorders as hyperkinesis, the problem - child syndrome.

Gallagher said administration of the drugs usually is suggested by the child's school.

He said instances have been reported where the parents' consent was in effect coerced by threats to bar the child from regular classes and other cases of "implied consent" by ignorant parents.

"We have no intention of invading the confidential relations between parents, pediatricians and children," Gallagher told a reporter. "But we are concerned with statements by persons prominent in educational organizations that the use of the drugs will greatly increase in the next few years.

Gallagher's mail has been mixed.

"No representative of Congress should have the audacity to state that children are being drugged just to keep them quiet," writes an Ohio osteopath. He calls the drugs a godsend for treating problem children.

A New Jersey man said he and his wife had refused to allow their 7 - year - old daughter to be treated with the drugs despite pressure from the school physician. "She was annoyed with me and told me that soon my little girl would start to masturbate as a result of all this extra energy. She made me feel as though I was a stupid, neglectful parent . . . It's no wonder we have so much drug abuse, when even schools are pushing it on first - graders."

An Ohio woman wrote that she tutored two brain - damaged children being treated with drugs. A third - grade boy who had been receiving Cs and Fs improved his marks in five subjects, and a girl who had been receiving Cs and Ds despite an above - average IQ also improved in nearly all subjects. "As I see it, Mr. Gallagher, this is a physical problem medical science has tackled and found help."

Another tutor, a college student from California, said children called hyperactive by teachers seemed just energetic to him. One such boy had begun drug treatment. "There is a real question in my mind now as to whether he may be described as 'well - behaved' or 'sleepy.'"

A woman in Hawaii said her 7 - year - old son had received drugs for a learning disability. They made him "sedate" and his marks improved, but he experienced brief headaches, blurry vision, stomach ache, brief anxiety. The woman said her doctor told her the symptoms were not side - effects of the drugs, but they disappeared after the school year ended and drug treatment was suspended.

A California woman said her son was treated with Dexedrine in the first grade. "I found out what it was I threw it out." She said the child was bright and had learned to tell time at the age of 3 by going around the house from clock to clock. "They don't have to sit still to learn."

Another California woman said her eighth - grade son refused to take a tranquilizer prescribed for him. "He said it indicated to the other students and teachers that something was wrong with him mentally."

CIBA Pharmaceutical Co., which manufactures one of the drugs, gives these symptoms for hyperkinesis, or minimal brain dysfunction.

"He seems in perpetual motion. In constant, purposeless activity. He's aggressive, destructive. Easily frustrated."

Can't concentrate. He's bright, yet does poorly in school. He wants friends, yet companions shun him. His behavior makes him nearly unbearable to parents, teachers and playmates."

Gallagher has been investigating the problem informally for four months since reports surfaced that 3,000 to 6,000 school children in Omaha, Neb., were being given drugs.

Court grants delay for trial

The trial for 10 persons arrested on May 19 and charged with trespassing on University property at the Union has been adjourned until 9:30 a.m. Wednesday at East Lansing Municipal Court, Mrs. Verna Hodge, court clerk, said.

The trial was originally scheduled for Monday morning but was postponed at the request of the defense attorney, she said. Judge William K. Harmon will be presiding.

Admissions group opens public hearing

The second of four public hearings of the Presidential Commission on Admissions and Student Body Composition will be conducted today in Marquette.

The commission will hold sessions from 10-12 a.m. and 1-4 p.m. in the Holiday Inn in Marquette. As of Monday afternoon, only two definite local speakers were scheduled for the hearing, but other prospective speakers were being contacted by Commission Chairman Ira Polley.

The first public hearing was in Detroit Sept. 23. Future hearings are slated for Grand Rapids Oct. 13 or 14 and for East Lansing Oct. 19.

Party's over, MSU sets sights on No. 3 Irish

By JEFF ELLIOTT
State News Sports Writer

Duffy Daugherty and his Spartans are through celebrating Saturday's 38-14 victory over Washington State as the team coaches went to work to figure out how to stop a potent Notre Dame offense that comes out of the gate this week.

Daugherty was lavish with his praise for Ara Parseghian's "red-ranked" squad. "This is probably one of the best Notre Dame squads they've had in several years," Daugherty remarked. "I doubt that there's a team in the Big Ten that could match their personnel. Ohio State possibly has as much ability but Notre Dame is a powerful team. They simply overpowered their first two opponents, Northwestern and Purdue."

"I feel a little subdued today," Daugherty said before the luncheon.

"I just came from watching the Notre Dame-Purdue game films, and I've never seen a Big Ten team so dominated. What really worries me is that Purdue has a big defense, with several of their linemen weighing better than 270 pounds. Yet the Notre Dame line handled them with ease."

"I don't know where all of Notre Dame's big linemen came from," Daugherty quipped, "but it sure wasn't from St. Mary's."

The Irish will bring into East Lansing one of the best passing combinations in the country. The Joe Theismann to Tom Gatewood combo has been successful 19 times in two games, good for 303 yards and three touchdowns. Daugherty compared Gatewood to Purdue's former great star, LeRoy Keyes. "He's similar to Keyes," Duffy said. "One play he'll line up as the split end and the next he'll be a flanker or a tight end. They'll throw him the screen pass or hit him long. He used to be a halfback so he's got great speed."

"A lot of teams have played him deep and have given him the short pass because of fear of the touchdown bomb. Yet once he gets that short pass, he's been picking up 10-15 yards after the catch."

Trying to forget about the Irish for a bit, Daugherty said he was pleased with certain aspects of the Spartans' game against Washington State.

"Our pass defense looked a lot better this week, especially in the second half," the Spartans head man said. "Our offense line also showed improvement from the previous week. But both areas will have to come up with extra good efforts against Notre Dame."

Daugherty signaled out Brad Van Pelt and junior defensive tackle Duane McLaughlin for their good work on defense. McLaughlin is a big 6-4, 235 pounder who will probably be in the Spartans' starting lineup Saturday battling Notre Dame's powerful linemen.

Linebacker Cal Fox, who was credited with 17 tackles in Saturday's game, was named Midwest Lineman of the Week by United Press International (UPI). The Battle Creek native who leads the Spartans in tackles with 30, suffered a knee injury in the first half of the WSU game, but X-rays taken Monday proved negative. Team physician Dr. Jarrett, said the senior linebacker should be at full strength for the Notre Dame battle.

While the experts probably won't give MSU much of a chance of beating the Irish, Daugherty said he and the squad will be going into the game with a positive attitude.

"We've never entered a game we didn't feel we couldn't win," he said. "I'm certainly pleased and encouraged with the attitude of this year's squad. They feel they can beat anybody now, including Notre Dame, and you can be sure I'm not going to try and convince them any different."

SPARTAN GOAL LINES: Sophomore punter Dick Salani was punting for the first time Saturday since his high school days in Hancock... Tight end Billy Jo DuPree had the most jarring block in Saturday's game when he cut down Washington State defensive captain Pat Messenger. Messenger was forced to leave the game but later returned and was the Cougars' leading tackler with 14... Washington State scored their touchdown with 2:04 left in the game. In the remaining time they ran 12 plays while the Spartans ran four. That's an average of one play every eight seconds... A total of 56 Spartans got into Saturday's game.

Running wild

MSU's exciting flanker Eric Allen gains big yardage on this play against Washington State Saturday. Spartans Steve Kough (33) and Ken Alderson (41) are his blockers. Allen was awarded the game ball for his performance against WSU.

A liberated football

This was a common scene in Saturday's MSU-Washington State game as Spartan runners were separated from the football seven times. Here, an unidentified Cougar grabs the arms of Spartan flanker Bill Triplett and liberates the football. Eric Allen is the Spartan on the ground.

TEXAS SECOND IN POLL

Buckeyes regain No. 1

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's too early to say that Woody Hayes and Darrel Royal couldn't book a game between their respective schools this year. The result of such a game would give the top football coaches a cut indication of who is the college team in the country Ohio State or Texas.

It stands now, the Buckeyes of Ohio State are No. 1. But barely. Ohio State, which crushed A&M, 56-13, in its season opener last Saturday, polled 17 place votes to 16 for Texas, winner over Texas Tech, 38-0, to gain the top spot. The Buckeyes were awarded 317 votes while Texas received 301. UPI's 35-man board of selectors had a tough time deciding who would be no. 1. The teams are awarded on a 5-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis for form first to 10th places. The Buckeyes jumped from 10th place into third with 223 votes by virtue of its 48-0 victory over arch-rival Purdue.

The Boilermakers, 16th last week, dropped out of the top 20 along with Missouri, Houston, Tennessee, Florida and Washington.

Southern California, which along with Notre Dame received the only other first place votes, moved up a notch into fourth with 215 points while Stanford, another west coast power, fell from fourth to fifth with 207 points. USC shut out Iowa, 48-0, while Stanford was less impressive in defeating Oregon, 33-10.

Nebraska (170) went from eighth to sixth and Colorado (122) skyrocketed from 16th to seventh as the Buffaloes pulled the upset of the week by shocking Penn State, 41-13, to break the Nittany Lions' unbeaten streak at 31. Penn State tailsplinned to 17th place. Rounding out the top 10 were Mississippi (116), Michigan (83) and Air Force (70), which surprised a highly rated Missouri Team, 37-14. Completing the top 20 were Auburn, Arkansas, UCLA, Oklahoma, Arizona State, Georgia Tech, Penn State, West Virginia, Alabama and San Diego State.

The Buckeyes, displaying the same crunching ground game that is characteristic of all Hayes' teams, outmuscled the previously unbeaten Addies from the opening whistle.

However, Texas, which held the no. 1 spot last week, had trouble getting started against Texas Tech and it wasn't until the second half that Royal got his defending national champions going.

Big Red wins opener, and Detroit 8-5 loss

The MSU Rugby Club opened its season Saturday with an win over the Detroit Cobras at College Field.

Corey scored the first try of the season midway through the first half on a short pass after a Detroit fumble. John Kicked the conversion to MSU its 5-0 halftime margin.

The Cobras stormed back from intermission with a long scoring run and conversion which tied the score. Neither team could mount another scoring threat until the closing minutes of the game when Ron Bacon, rejoining the MSU club after a two-year absence, scored from 30 yards out to provide the Spartan's winning margin.

Big Red is writing a book. But it doesn't answer.

PLANNING TO TAKE OCTOBER 17th or DECEMBER 19th LSAT

CLASSES FOR THE OCTOBER 17, 1970 LAW SCHOOL ADMISSION TEST REVIEW COURSE BEGIN THE LAST WEEK OF SEPTEMBER — AT THE TIMES AND PLACES LISTED BELOW.

REGISTER NOW

Times & places for Classes for the December 19, 1970 Exam provided on request

The LSAT Review Course can improve your score significantly. Familiarity with the LSAT can and should improve the second of two scores. Admission Officers realize this fact and give second exam less weight. The LSAT Review Course is designed to place you in the same position as if you had taken the exam several times. It will thoroughly and completely familiarize you with the LSAT so that you can score higher without having a previous score recorded. If you have previously taken the LSAT and plan to take it again, the course will help you to see your areas of weakness and learn from your own mistakes.

Promotes confidence and lessens tension. Avoid such pitfalls as reading into questions, making false assumptions and second guessing.
