REACTS TO BUDGET PLAN

Wharton laments lack of action on law school

By MICHAEL FOX State News Staff Writer

President Wharton reacted to Gov. Milliken's recommendations for the 1972 -73 state budget by welcoming increased medical funding for MSU and lamenting the governor's inaction on a University law

Milliken, in his budget recommendations for the 1972 - 73 fiscal year delivered to the legislature Wednesday, earmarked $1.2 million of the proposed $73.1 million MSU general fund appropriation towards the MSU medical schools. The governor's total recommendation for MSU, including Cooperative Extension Service and the Agricultural Experiment Station, comes to $84,943,000.

In a statement issued Wednesday, Wharton welcomed state funding for the MSU medical school expansion and for programs for educationally and economically disadvantaged students. At the same time, however, Wharton suggested that the Michigan Legislature bypass the governor and tack an appropriation for an MSU law school onto the governor's budget

Milliken recommended that $500,000 be appropriated to the College of Human Medicine, $200,000 for the College of Osteopathic Medicine and $494,000 to pay for off - the - campus costs of training doctors in hospitals. A related expense of $100,000 to operate Fee Hall, a residence hall converted to a medical facility, was recommended by Milliken.

Milliken did not pass on in his recommendation to the legislature the University's request for $503,000 to this proposal, and we hope that body will initiate planning for an MSU law school which would open in 1974.

Referring to the medical programs, Wharton said, "This is welcome news . . . Their continued development is contingent upon meaningful state fiscal support.

"Also, it was particularly disappointing to hear that the governor's budget is again silent on our request for a law school. This is the second consecutive year that there has been no gubernatorial response to our well-documented proposal to bring legal education to mid - Michigan.

"We know of the legislature's interest in initiate the necessary action to bring it to reality," Wharton said.

Wharton noted in his comments that the governor's $73.1 million recommendation for the general fund is an increase of $7.8 million compared to the $24 million general fund increase sought by MSU. He added that "we nevertheless appreciate the proposed increase as a sincere effort on the part of the governor, given all the facets of the state's fiscal situation.

"We were also pleased with the recommendation of $900,000 for programs (Please turn to page 11)

Legislators skeptical about 1972-73 budget

By RANDY GARTON State News Staff Writer

State legislators were for the most part skeptical Wednesday that the 1972-73 budget could be balanced without an increase in taxes.

"This budget is based on a very rosy economic picture," Sen. Harry A. DeMaso, R-Battle Creek, said. DeMaso said that the one year 50 per cent hike in personal and other taxes passed in 1971 would undoubtedly have to be extended.

"The governor's message is also based on the expectation that we're going to add more jobs," he added."In my town of Battle Creek, unemployment is now up to 7 per cent."

DeMaso said that the prospect of increased jobs in the auto industry was not based on fact. He quoted Henry Ford, saying that the industry could increase production without hiring more people.

"The increased profit picture isn't tnere," he said. In his prepared budget message, Milliken said the $224.4 million increase in this year's budget should be covered by the revenue from the increased state income tax which went into effect Aug. 1. Though this was meant at the time to be a one year measure, Republicans and Democrats alike agree that an extension of the tax increase will probably be necessary.

Criticism of the governor's budget expectations came also from Sen. Coleman A. Young, D-Detroit.

"This is just a rerun of last year" the Democratic floor leader said. "The governor lulls people with a sense of complacency and comfort and then we have to shock them with a tax increase later on."

Referring to Milliken's effort to have the property tax to support public schools declared unconstitutional, Young said that if the state wins that court suit, income tax would go up again.

"We might get up to a flat rate of 10 per cent," he said

WASHINGTON (AP) - Women's lib may be getting ahead - at least aboard

American - flag ships. The head, or shipboard bathroom facility, for women crew members is to be the same one that male crew members now use exclusively.

The U.S. Coast Guard is proposing that women be allowed to share and share alike because it has found that segregating the bathrooms causes discrimination against women in crew selection - and it's just too difficult to add more heads aboard ship.

Current regulations for passenger, cargo, oceanographic and other miscellaneous vessels require female crew members to have toilet and wash facilities in separate spaces from those of male members.

The Coast Guard is taking public comment until Feb. 18 and will issue its ruling a month after that.

A spokesman for the National Maritime Union in New York City said some ship companies use the bathroom restriction rule to hire primarily all . male crews

MSU foreign projects face ecology issue

By NANCY PARSONS State News Staff Writer

the main concerns of international programs at MSU de will be the issue of ecology on a worldwide as well dic level, Ralph Smuckler, dean of International Studies ms, said Wednesday.

der said that ecology is international by nature because blem that every area of the world must face.

environmental concern represents a major shift in of the programs that had been mainly concerned with al and research projects in the past.

we learn here at the University in areas like agriculture, and population control must be carried over to in all parts of the world. . . and this is the main area we ncentrating on," Smuckler said.

the environmental issue, topics to be given emphasis in uture by MSU's international programs are the problems of distributing the knowledge of a country to masses of its people, the problems of expanding national unity in groups of people of different ethnic or racial backgrounds and the issues directly related to international conflict resolution.

"If we can really tackie the ecology issue in the next few years and even just get a start on the other issues, we will be doing just about all that we can," Smuckler said.

Recent debates in Washington about reorganizing the country's foreign aid programs has caused the department to do some re - evaluating of programs and funding.

Smuckler said that one of the major revisions that many hope will come about is the separation of the military and economic assistance for foreign countries. "Aid for International Development (AID) has made all the necessary arrangements for the split internally and it seems that everyone wants the action to take place but the House. They still have the ideas that AID's purpose is to fight Communism," Smuckler explained.

The dean expects little effect from the proposed revisions except for an increase in consolidation of the programs and perhaps a reduction of our faculty in other countries.

"On the short run, I don't foresee any affect on our AID programs because there is already enough money in the pipeline to continue for some time . . . Projects are even being renewed on a year - to - year basis. We have agricultural economics research in Africa that has just received an initial grant for planning and unless there are drastic cuts, these will not be affected," Smuckler International study programs both here and abroad where the exchange of students for degree programs are on a one - to - one basis will not be affected by any revisions Congress may make.

"International studies is very expensive so we are limited in areas for research and faculty - student exchanges to where the money is available," Smuckler noted.

When asked about the role international politics plays in determining areas where projects will be organized, Smuckler explained that his department is aware of political conflicts between participating countries but that they don't affect the study programs to a great degree.

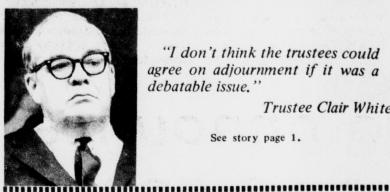

"Ours is an educational purpose and just that, not political. We don't go to the State Dept. for approval for any of our projects.'

"We do take our time to be sensitive to problems that may result because of politics and we tread slowly and cautiously in such areas. We must be sensitive to dramatic accusations because we have been attacked from both directions from time to time,' Smuckler admitted.

One of the things the dean hopes to see in the next few years is an educational exchange with mainland China.

"We've had no opportunities to work on the mainland because no visas were being given. Maybe in the next few years MSU projects will be allowed in," Smuckler said.

"I don't think the trustees could agree on adjournment if it was a debatable issue."

Board rejects contract

The Washington Pay Board Wednesday in Washington rejected an initial attempt to approve all of an AFL -CIO United Transportation Union contract covering 140,000 trainmen, board sources said.

The union has refused to put the contract into effect unless the board approves it without changing any of its terms, including work - rules changes desired by the railroads and a 42 per cent pay raise spread over three

The sources said some members felt that the board should approve the contract only through next April 1, as it did earlier for a similar agreement covering railroad signalmen.

Property tax overruled

A Superior Court judge struck down Wednesday in Jersey City, N.J. the use of property taxes to finance New Jersey public schools, ruling that unequal tax rates brought about inferior education in poorer neighborhoods.

Judge Theodore I. Botter ruled that the disparity was in violation of the constitutional right of equal protection under the law.

He ruled on a suit brought by Harold J. Ruvoldt Jr., a Jersey City attorney, on behalf of school children from Jersey City, Plainfield, Paterson and East Orange, four urban centers in North Jersey.

AWOL soldier indicted

Ronald Kaufman, an AWOL soldier authorities are seeking for allegedly placing bombs in bank safety deposit boxes, was indicted Wednesday in New York by a federal grand jury on charges of trying to destroy three New York banks with delayed - ignition explosives.

Kaufman, had been indicted Tuesday in Chicago on 16 counts connected with placing bombs in three Chicago banks.

Bombs were similarly planted in three San Francisco banks. Authorities were alerted to the presence of all the bombs by letter two weeks ago.

Authorities say that Kaufman may have fled the country.

Salt labels must specify

The Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday in Washington it will order all table salt labels to specify whether the product contains iodide. Meanwhile, the agency will weigh a suggestion that all salt be required to contain the chemical which combats goiter.

The new regulations, which take effect in 18 months, will for the first time require noniodized salts containers to state: "This salt does not supply iodide, a necessary nutrient."

EDITORIALS AFR wholly ignored in Piton impoundment

Honors College Director Frank H. Blackington's impoundment of 3.500 copies of the latest issue of the Piton, an occasional Honors College publication, brings back not - so fond memories of the days when University administrators considered themselves sole arbitrators of what materials should be presented to the student body.

Blackington has decided that a picture of a ragged American flag inscribed with two four - letter fornicative verbs, along with some "questionable" terms in one of the publication's stories, are unsuitable for the eyes of the public.

By impounding the Piton, Blackington violated both the spirit and the letter of the Academic Freedom Report. Section 6.3.2 clearly states, "Administrative units of the University or of its colleges, institutes or departments, may authorize funds for and assume sponsorship of publications germane to that administrative unit . . . Full freedom of content and editorial policy is guaranteed to all such publications subject only to the advice and counsel of the administrator or administrative unit responsible." In addition, Section 1.5.07 holds "regulations relating to communication of ideas shall encourage the competition of ideas."

Exceeded

By blocking the distribution of the Piton. Blackington has clearly exceeded his role as adviser to the publication. For eight months the editors of the Piton worked with the Honors College staff in producing the latest issue of the magazine. Never in this time, the editors claim, did the Honors College staff ever express any restrictions concerning content or wording. All materials in the Piton were reviewed by James Anderson, asst. director Honors College. There should have been no surprises when the actual printed copy arrived on Blackington's doorstep. If Blackington had any misgivings about the content of the Piton he should have expressed them by informing the publication's staff before press time, not by impounding the magazine after it was printed.

By impounding the Piton, Blackington has committed a deed of no small consequence. He has implicitly stated through his action that he thinks he knows what ideas are "acceptable" for the Honors College to present to the University community. He has placed himself in the position that "publication and distribution of these materials under the sponsorship of the Honors College would not be in the best interest of the University or the Honors College." Actually, however, the censorship of the Piton has done far more harm to the University than the few profanities it contained could ever have done. Freedom

In a university environment, all ideas should be free to circulate. Student publications in particular should be allowed to develop points of view without interference from administrators. When such interference occurs, a student has been hindered from communicating what he thinks to other students. If the sponsoring agency decides to stop sponsoring a student publication because it does not like the direction of the editorial content, that is its perogative. However, the sponsoring agency does not have the right to censor the content of any given issue of that student publication.

Blackington has only one leg upon which to stand, a statement in the Academic Freedom Report which maintains "responsibility for all content, finance, distribution and staffing shall lie with the sponsoring agency, group organization." But while the article makes the sponsoring group ultimately responsible for the content, it does not in any way imply that the sponsor has the censorship powers prohibited by Section 6.3.2 of the Freedom Report.

This apparent inconsistency in the Academic Freedom Report should be clarified. Administrators and sponsoring agencies should not be responsible for the content of student publications - if there is any blame to be borne, it should be borne by the student editors alone. By the same token, administrators should be limited to the position of advisers and counselors, as specified by Section 6.3.2 – they should not be allowed to become censors.

Blackington has set a dangerous precedent by impounding the Piton, a precedent that other administrators must not be allowed to follow. Blackington would do well to release the Piton now instead of being forced to do so by a University judiciary. Honors College students should be able to decide for themselves whether its content is Hint of things tocome?

Last Thursday a lot of sounds came down at Brody Auditorium. In many ways, the formation of a coalition of 14 black student organizations amid cries of ",stop white agression" and "carry on the struggle" was reminiscent of the days of Black Power two years ago.

The resemblance is primarily superficial. Fiery rhetoric is prerequisite to meetings of the Brody genre. Beneath the sound and the fury of the speakers, however, was a good deal of profound introspection and concrete resolve and an indication of the direction of student activism in the next few years.

Blacks at this University have become the first group to perceive that control of the student government albeit unfettered by University manipulation, is a cul de sac. The Student Board controls nothing and the various power factions of ASMSU wax fat and lazy while the faculty and administration continue to do the actual governing.

A revival of student power with a new focus, an academic process politically - oriented, is necessary if the students of this University are ever to escape their role as educational Huns. In the late '60s Black Power previewed the widespread awakening of the collective student mind. It could easily happen that way again.

Five years ago at the height of the Big Snow of '67 I swore a solemn oath promising to forthwithly remove myself once again to the friendly, steaming swamps of Florida should I ever encounter a day when the mercury did not exceed

They don't hold up very well under pressure. Very few people manage to "keep their word" with any degree of regularity. Sometimes we default through no fault of our own. Sometimes you just can't know that all the Viet Cong in the world are hiding out on the Plain of Jars.

More often, though, we blow our promises because of plain old Bunkerian meatheadedness. Maybe Tricky Dick really did figure he could cure the economy in four years with rewarmed early '60s Liberal ploys. And maybe he was just putting us on.

Motivation isn't really important - only the fact that we perpetuate the ideal of a system that is for the most part unworkable.

Consider your childhood. Remember all that stuff that Captain Mac used to lay down on your head every day at 5:30 on Channel 38? You know like: Davey Crockett always kept his word." All your early socialization is oriented toward the single unrealistic ideal of oathmanship.

It isn't necessary. In a hypothetical system you should be able to get along quite well by simply telling the truth and interacting as you go along.

OCC: little trust for Halstead

To the Editor: Off Campus Council (OCC) has been actively lobbying on both the state and local levels for legislation and ordinances which would bring to an end the unethical practices of landlords who misuse rental security deposits. Until tenant protection laws are written and enacted, however, the best protection for the wary tenant is to know the reputation of his prospective landlord, and assure himself that the landlord is honest and acting in good faith

In its fall term advertising campaign, Halstead Management promised that students who rent one of their apartments would have their security deposits returned personally at the time of checkout. apartment complex managed by Halstead Management). The four students had rented the apartment on a three month lease which expired December 15, 1971. After cleaning the apartment for two days prior to their checkout, the tenants expected that their entire deposit would be returned immediately, as promised. The agent from Halstead who examined the apartment told the tenants that the office had run out of checks, and that their deposit would be returned by mail "as soon as possible." Needing the money ($90 each), the tenants said they would return in several hours, allowing Halstead ample time to obtain more checks from the bank. When they returned, they were told that no checks would be written "until the first of the year." One of the tenants finally received the deposit via mail January 10, 1972, nearly a month after it was expected.

Women making progress in 'S' athletic competition

By KRISTEN KELCH State News Sports Writer

Men's varsity basketball receives a considerable amount of attention on this campus, while according to Jean Anderson, asst. professor of health, physical education, recreation, and women's basketball coach, her team has received little or no publicity or recognition concerning its activities.

Through interviews with other women coaches, this complaint does appear to be common.

Approximately 135 MSU women participate in seven varsity sports. These include field hockey, swimming, volleyball, basketball, tennis, softball and gymnastics.

In a recent interview, volleyball coach Carol Davis, asst. professor health, physical education, recreation, talked about her team.

As with all women's sports at MSU, the volleyball team is not in any particular league. "We schedule games as best we can," Ms. Davis said, "according to the ability of both teams." "Generally, we don't schedule out - of - state competition because there's enough competition in Michigan," she continued.

At present, the volleyball record stands at 7 - 2, not including a Class B state championship title won last weekend at Western Michigan University.

Eight women make up the varsity gymnastics team at MSU. Last year, they placed first in class two at the midwest regional tournament held at Ohio State. This year, they will compete in class one.

Because of the limited number of schools which sponsor gymnastics for women, Dana Vail, gymnastics coach at MSU has had to go out of state to find comparable competition for her team. In addition to some Michigan colleges, she has scheduled meets at Kent State and Bowling Green.

Although the women's basketball record was 5 - 10 last season, Ms. Anderson said she believes that this year's team will be a vast improvement over past years. Presently, the team is preparing to host the women's state basketball tournament, March 3 and 4.

A common area of discussion among women coaches is money. According to Dana Vail, money is the biggest obstacle facing her team. "There's no money for uniforms, and we can't travel very far," Ms. Vail said. As the team improves, she continued, "we have to do more traveling to meet the better competition."

Who sponsors the women's varsity sports? According to Gale E. Mikles, of the physical education and recreation department, it's intercollegiate athletics.

"It's a twilight operation, Mikles said, "we have been subsidizing about eight teams off and on, but we're not on an authorized budget by the University."

In spite of little recognition and lack of money, most of the women coaches feel optimistic about the future of women's sports.

"There has been a move," Ms. Davis said, "to get more highly competitive opportunities available for college students, including women."

Fencers start home season

The Spartan fencers hold their first home meet against Cornell at 7:30 tonight, then face Milwaukee Tech and Lake Superior State at 10 a.m. on Saturday. Both meets will be held in the Men's IM Bldg.

Coach Charles Schmitter said that "Cornell will be tough, very tough." Cornell had a 13 - 11 record last season, and thus far are 3 - 3, its biggest victory coming over Oberlin, 23 - 4

Ben Mintz, Cornell sports information director, said Wednesday that the team has good potential in all weapons, but no real overall strength in any one weapon. Schmitter has said that Cornell "must be balanced, or they wouldn't be beating teams like Army and North Carolina State."

Not much is known about the potentials of either Milwaukee Tech of Lake Superior State. While Milwaukee was tough last season, losing to the Spartans only by one point, 14 - 13, it has only three returning lettermen.

As for Lake Superior State, Schmitter said that since there is little competition around, the team has a tough time developing. Schmitter has decided to make only minor changes in his starters. Jon Moss is a possible third starter in epee, based on his 6 - 0 performance at Culver City. In sabre, David Tomlinson may move from third starter to reserve, making Jim Osetek the third man.

Milkovich faces national champ

By GARY SCHARRER State News Sports Writer

In athletic competition, it generally isn't too convincing to that a particular team or some certain individual is unbeat But when Oklahoma State brings its talent - loaded wret squad to MSU Saturday night, the Cowboys will place a wreton the mats who is unequalled in his weight class and a challeto the unbeatable definition.

He is undefeated, 126 - pounder Yoshiro Fujito.

Since transferring from the University of Japan to Oklah.

State and wrestling for the Orange and Black last year, Fujito won 35 consecutive matches and many without much effort. Hachinohe, Japan senior won the national championship season, and at the NCAA meet Fujito routed a string opponents as if competing in exhibition matches. His was against the country's elite 126 - pounders were 11 - 2, 12 - 2, 2, 14 - 2 and a 13 - 2 victory in the championship match.

The tiny Japanese star so supremely ruled his weight class in his 28 matches: last year, he scored six pins, and in his decisions he held opponents to two points or less, 18 times. "He's just an extremely coordinated athlete, "MSU of Grady Peninger said in explaining Fujito's success. "Ownerstlers are better at different things. He has very good by and that is probably his greatest asset."

"I don't believe that anybody is unbeatable, though," Pen added. "Our coach at Oklahoma State had a saying — 'there never a horse that couldn't be rode and there never was at that couldn't be throwed.'"

Fujito would be a good bet to become OSU's 13th two. NCAA individual champion. He was a two - time national school champion at Japan's Kogyo High School. And it was time Olympic gold medalist YoJiro Uetake who brought Fujito OSU. Uetake was a three - time NCAA champion for Cowboys and a friend of Fujito.

Freshman Pat Milkovich will draw the Spartan assignment.

tangle with Fujito. Milkovich's credentials include two Ohios prep championships, an upset over Northwestern's Big champion Mark Massery (31 - 3 last year) at the Midland Tom last month and a 6 - 2 record in the early season. Milkomissed last week's meets because of a flu.

Loraine Beebe, a member of the National Women's Political Caucus, spoke to the meeting of the 6th District Women's Caucus Tuesday to emphasize the importance of Lansing's unique position to promote women politically in 1972.

The Lansing district meeting was held to begin affiliating women with what Ms. Beebe termed a "tremendously

"Michigan is on the move with a current pace other states have found hard to match," said the former state senator. She added that this district is explosive and potentially able to hit hard in the political arena.

Ms. Beebe told her listeners she found the background for the movement currently dubbed "women's liberation," very disturbing.

"Women have been programed talented group, close to the since the very moment the legislature, having a better doctor says, 'madam, you have a

The governor's budget recommendation allows about $5 million for 6.5 per cent pay raises for MSU employes. Furthermore, it included a 2.5 per cent inflation factor of $575,000 to pay for nonsalary University expenses.

Actually, the governor's recommendations for fiscal 1972 - 73 are a $10.3 million increase over this year's appropriation when the 1971 - 72 base is reduced by the January 2 per cent cutback in state appropriations. Most appropriation comparisons with the current fiscal year, however, use the precutback statistics.

One University administration spokesman estimated that the on campus. governor's recommendation assumes an increase of revenue coming into the University of about $765,000. This assumed revenue increase could be compensated by a mechanism such as an increase in out - state

"The adoption of the 19th Amendment in the 1920s was achieved out of this movement, then the depression struck. Suddenly education was only deemed timely for males, and all available jobs went to the men,"

The plight of the working woman during that era was described by Ms. Beebe as "deplorable." Working women were fired, even if they were supporting a family or if their husband was out of work.

"Following World War II women fell under the auspices of the 'feminine mystique' of living to function for someone else. "There's a clause in the social security laws that makes a woman's maternity leave an "interruption of continued service" in working for a company, thereby denying her a full pension at retirement," she explained.

"Men don't see the seriousness of this issue or of the abortion issue, and they laugh at you in legislature," she said.

According to her, the abortion question currently tabled in the House forces involuntary servitude on a woman by punishing her for sexual involvement and absolving the male of his responsibility.

"This issue has brought the whole seriousness of women's rights out in the open. As long as men don't take women seriously, there is no fear of women as equal competitors."

"How can a country efficiently function by ignoring half of its total population? This is a morally wrong, unjust danger that must be fought head - on in the political arena," she emphasized.

She described the male philosophy as subjecting women to subhuman roles by using evasive kindness. The main course of change must come within the political process.

"It isn't going to be easy. They are not going to invite women to hold delegate seats in the legislature. We are going to have to fight, and fight hard, on all levels - district, state and national," she stated.

2 courses in Evening College set

MSU students or their spouses may still enroll in two Evening College courses at reduced fees.

The courses which begin today deal with science fiction and with Communist China. Student tuition for each of the six-session courses is $8. Students must enroll at the Kellogg Center registration desk in advance of the class.

"China Faces the World," a discussion of China's foreign policy and foreign relations, the Sino-Soviet rift and the current Sino-American detente, will be taught by Lawrence Battistini, professor of social science.

"The Literature of Imagination: Preparing Man for an Unknown Future," which will deal with science fiction as a valid literary form, will be taught by David Anderson and Michael Jones, graduate students in English.
