The congressional stand on busing finally will be decided in that conference since the House did include three stiff antibusing amendments when it passed the legislation last November.

The Senate did put into the bill a compromise amendment offered by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana and Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania in an attempt to head off more stringent curbs.

Kleindienst to testify on fund charge

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Judiciary Committee will take sworn testimony Thursday from Deputy Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst and others on allegations that the Justice Dept. dropped an antitrust case after the defendant pledged funds to help finance the Republican National Convention.

Specifically, the panel will examine reports by columnist Jack Anderson that the antitrust action against International Telephone & Telegraph Co., was dropped after an ITT subsidiary pledged $400,000 for the GOP convention next August in San Diego, Calif.

Kleindienst, whose nomination to succeed Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell already has been unanimously approved by the committee, requested the unusual hearing, Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., told a reporter Wednesday.

Other witnesses, Eastland said, will be Anderson, Richard W. McLaren, former head of the Justice Department's Antitrust Division and now a federal judge in Illinois, and a representative of ITT, a giant Kleindienst met Tuesday night in the office of Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, a Judiciary Committee member, with Eastland and Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., the ranking minority member of the committee.

Rise in campus race tension seen News Analysis

Top University officials privately admitted this week that racial polarization and tension on campus might be on the increase partially because of controversy growing out of charges of discrimination against blacks in the Big Ten athletic Administrators say they perceive a black white polarization among students, faculty and staff that could lead to violence if current emotionalism is not cooled. Overall, most officials characterize the tolerance of formerly silent whites to the point white militarism may develop. One significant manifestation of the racial tension was the decision to move up the time of the MSU home basketball game with the University of Michigan to 2 p.m. Saturday. The time change is an attempt to prevent any racial incidents and will be repeated for the remaining home games.

Furthermore, staff in residence halls report: informally that the number of individual white - black confrontations among students has increased in the past several weeks. Unfortunately, there is no accurate index of the racial atmosphere on campus, and most generalizations result from the compilation of scattered personal assessments and observations of concerned students and staff.

While no one person or source can pass valid judgment on the state of race relations at MSU, the current concern of President Wharton's staff with the issue indicates that the mood on campus merits top level attention and possible steps at rectification. The problem with resolving the racial tension, as one vice president put it, "lies with the basic nature of man and mankind's historic inability to control the emotion, violence, and hatred of other Residence hall management points out that all racial incidents in halls in the past three weeks have involved individuals. While no major organized racial confrontation has occured to date, many staff members fear that white demands in reaction to black demands might provoke trouble. One such white demand is a Jewish student request for Jewish cultural rooms for that group similar to black cultural rooms in the halls.

The tension on campus is attributed to many different events and actions.

Ironically, it appears that the Jan. 25 violence at the University of Minnesota basketball in Minneapolis game with Ohio State University is one root of the presently potential racial violence at MSU.

In the Minnesota - Ohio State game, three white Ohio State basketball players were hospitalized as a result of attacks on the playing court near the end of the game by black players on the losing Minnesota team. After a subsequent investigation, Big Ten commissioner Wayne Duke suspended two black Minnesota players. Duke's suspension, which was supported last Friday by a vote of the Big Ten athletic directors, enraged certain sectors of the black community at MSU.

The blacks maintain basically that the Big Ten is a white racist conference and that blacks are not represented adequately

Green will address meet of Big Ten reps

Robert Green, director of the Center for Urban Affairs, has been invited to address the joint group of faculty representatives and athletic directors of the Big Ten conference at 4 p. m. Tuesday.

The announcement was made Wednesday by John A. Fuzak, chairman of the MSU Athletic Council and faculty representative to the Big Ten. Green will attend the meeting as a point of privilege being extended to MSU at Fuzak's request.

Edwin H. Kady, chairman of the Big Ten agenda and rules committee, said Green was invited personally and may bring along one undergraduate student athlete if he wishes. Green will address the 20 representatives from other Big Ten colleges at the Sheraton - O'Hare in Rosemont, Ill., outside Chicago. The invitation arises from charges of racial discrimination in the Big Ten raised by Green, Joseph McMillan, director of Equal Opportunity Program, and Thomas Gunning, asst. director of minority counseling, at a Feb. 10 press conference.

In a related move, Jack A. Breslin, executive vice president, said he would issue a response to the demands of black athletes after a meeting with the athletes at

Drive launched for vote on ASMSU constitution

By BECKIE HANES State News Staff Writer

Some ASMSU board members launched a widespread petition drive Wednesday to place the revamped constitution on the March 9 referendum along with the proposed amendment to abolish the student tax and charges for ASMSU services.

ASMSU chairman Harold Buckner had hoped to have the board take action on the new constitution at Tuesday's meeting. The constitution was being passed around and a motion begun, but the meeting died for lack of a quorum when three members walked out.

The new constitution can come before the student body in a referendum with either 10 per cent of full - time undergraduate student body signing or have action taken by two - thirds of the

Since Mark Jaeger, Homes - Hubbard district representative, was unable to finish the motion, several board members expressed interest in circulating peititons with the proposed constitution, seeking signatures for a referendum.

"This was the seventh time out of eight meetings this term that meetings have died for lack of a quorum. When the board members don't want to take a stand on something, they take off and go home," Buckner said Wednesday.

"This is a symptom of something bad when the board can't even attempt a compromise. They can't even listen to a question, much less both sides of an argument," he added.

Buckner decided to resort to a petition drive because he felt the issue should still be put before the student body. He said the new constitution is an alternative to something that isn't working, referring to the representation structure of the

COVERS SECURITY DEPOSITS

Rep introduces rent bill

By JOANNA FIRESTONE State News Staff Writer

Rep. Earl E. Nelson, D Lansing, introduced a long awaited bill in the Michigan House Tuesday that would require landlords to pay tenants interest on security deposits.

The bill is the result of the recommendations made by the Special Committee on Rental Deposits which was appointed by House Speaker William A. Ryan, D - Detroit, in March 1971 to investigate the problems mandatory security deposits.

"After studying the problems surrounding rental security deposits for nearly one year and conducting public hearings throughout the state, we have come to the conclusion that legislative action must be taken due to the unscrupulous activities of both landlords and tenants," Nelson, chairman of the Committee, said.

He said landlords have been deducting from security deposits for imaginary damages while tenants have not been paying their last month's rent for fear of not regaining th

Departments involving students

Although Rowe indicated that the swing districts will probably lean more toward the Republicans, Busfield said they will tend to be more unpredictable with the majority running either way.

In all, only seven changes were made in the Republican proposal, which Rowe said served to reduce the partisan effects and increase the contiguity of the districts. Other four districts will be left wide Among these student districts the county prosecuter, clerk and members of the commission are

EDITORIALS Student government: a chance to live again

Student government has ground to a standstill during the past two years under the student board district representative system. Both on and off - campus, cliques and special interest groups have been able to stampede the polling places to receive disproportionate representation. Blacks have been a powerful voting bloc for the past two years while the freaks and the Greeks have respectively dominated the off - campus representative slots. The result has been chaotic.

The cause of the present situation lies in the geographic selection process for board members. A number of on and off campus groups have been able to send out their masses to vote for certain candidates, negating the votes other students place for candidates unaligned to any particular interest group. Given the present structure, this is certain to continue. Only the identity of the special interest groups involved may change.

A means has been devised to correct this situation. A new ASMSU constitution has been developed which would have student board members elected from the colleges, with major governing group heads filling up the rest of the seats. The board chairman would cease to be a voting member of the board, except in the case of a tie vote. The chairman would further assume the duties of the present cabinet director, a post that would be eliminated along with board vice chairmanship. There would only be one other officer in ASMSU, the comptroller, who would be selected through petitioning by the board.

The benefits would be multifold. By making the majority of the board members college representatives, special interest groups would have a much harder time dominating the board. They could no longer work geographical proximity to advantage. The board would thus become more representative of general student interests, if the elections of college reps to Academic Council is a fair indication. Seemingly only those who get involved with the affairs of their colleges would be elected under this system, meaning that the student board members of the future would have some background in the workings of the University. New board members in the past have usually had to start out cold in this

"By changing its structure, ASMSU has at least a chance of overcoming the current petty personal and group power tripping which has brought the past board to a standstill. The present district representative system must be abandoned."

............. respect. The use of college reps, further, may rededicate the student board towards academic issues which have been completely neglected in the past.

Present board members have balked at the proposed new constitution. The reason is simple most of the board is composed of interest group members who stand to lose their power base should the college representative system be adopted. Currently a petition drive is underway to force the new constitution to a vote, should these vested interests continue, as in the past, to fail to compromise. That a petition drive is needed to put the new constitution before the students indicates how little the present board is concerned with student interests.

To appease these special interests groups, five voting seats on the proposed new student board have been reserved for the heads of major governing groups, a provision which needs to be eliminated from the proposed constitution. There is no rationale for continuing the present double representation system of the board, other than the fact that the major governing group heads could provide some continuity with past boards should the college representative system be adopted. This same continuity would be provided by giving these officers ex officio status on the board. In fact, considering the performance of the past board, it could be questioned whether any continuity is desired.

With this single change the constitution should be passed. By changing its structure, ASMSU has at least a chance of overcoming the current petty personal and group power tripping which has brought the past board to a standstill. The present district representative system must be abandoned. The college representative system presents at least some new hope for student government, a structure which at the present serves no useful purpose in the University.

Antisexism legislation boon to college women

The movement to end sex discrimination in public colleges and universities has gained more momentum. The Senate has voted to deny federal funds to higher education institutions which discriminate against women. The Senate ban covers sex bias in student admissions as well as faculty staffing.

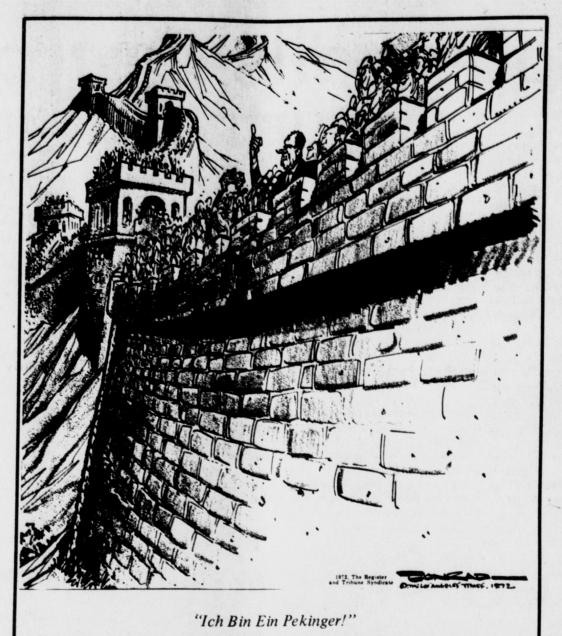

The Senate provision is in the form of an amendment to the pending higher education bill. It will not cover those traditionally male or female institutions which have admitted only one sex since their founding. Universities recently gone coed will have seven years to complete the transition without loss of federal funds.

Women have traditionally been discriminated against in admission to both undergraduate and graduate schools, scholarship awards, faculty hiring and promotion and salary. Sen. birch Bayh, D-Ind. sponsor of the amendment, said that on the average, women receive less scholarship and loan money then men do. According to Bayh, men average $760 in financial aid annually while women receive an average of $518.

Bayh's contentions are further reinforced by the fact that females on the average receive higher undergraduate grades than do their male counterparts, but receive significantly fewer admissions to graduate school.

While the Bayh amendment alone will not put an end to the practice of making women second-class citizens overnight, it certainly represents a step in the right direction. Perhaps if universities foresee a loss of monetary funds, they will be prompted to stop their outdated, outmoded and outright senseless practices.

POINT OF VIEW

Time to tackle the bookstores

By WILLIAM C. HAYS Lansing senior

The major sources of textbooks for MSU students are two bookstores, Campus and Student, both of which are located off campus, on Grand River Avenue, and the MSU Bookstore, located in the basement of the International Center. There are other sources, such as Gibson's Tom Sawyer's Book Raft, and the student - operated book exchanges, but the above three stores are our principal sources of textbooks. These stores apparently engage in little or no price competition between themselves and the buyer faces an identical pricing policy at every store. Each store has essentially a guaranteed share of a substantial market, and is under little or no pressure to change its practices. In short, they are content to sit back and wolf down their share of the cake, and wouldn't dream of rocking the boat. A recent State News article showed how these stores divide up new book orders in certain courses, and it is reasonable to assume that this market split extends into other areas, too.

The only ones really hurt by such a system are us, their customers; yet I have not seen a realistic attempt on our part to change the situation. Therefore, I would like to offer the Students purchasing textbooks for spring term should go first to a target bookstore, say, for example, the Campus Book Store. Students could write down the prices for each book, and then take their list to another store and compare prices. If the target bookstore's prices are not substantially lower, they should make their purchases at some store other than the target store. Conversely, if the target store's prices are lower, they should return to it to make their purchases.

I hope that the above does not sound as if I am suggesting a boycott of the Campus Book Store; I am not. I am merely suggesting a method by which the students of MSU can inform these bookstores that they no longer have an automatic slice of the market, and that if they refuse to compete with each other that we have the power to drive them out of business, one by one. In short, they will have to engage in the unfamiliar capitalistic practice known as price competition if they intend to sell us their

Furthermore, I am proposing that this drive be coordinated by ASMSU. This would be an opportunity for them to show the community that they can provide valuable services, and not just empty promises such as a proposed wholesale record store. For a number of reasons, this spring term would be a good time to enact this proposal. The weather will be warm enough that competitive shopping will not be a burden, and our freshmen have had two terms of experience with the stores. We have enough time to organize it, if we start now.

Perhaps a short sketch of the economic operation of the stores would be in order here. Retail prices are set by textbook manufacturers to give the stores a 20 per cent profit over book costs on new textbooks. The comparable margin on used textbooks is 30 per cent, although I have heard rumors that all textbooks are not repurchased at the advertised 50 per cent rate. Their overhead costs are a nominal 23 per cent of gross sales, so that on paper the stores are doing so badly that I can't imagine how they are staying in business.

They have their own proposal for lowering textbook prices, of course. They shift the blame back to certain professors who refuse to use a textbook for any length of time, thereby depriving their students of available used texts and resale outlets. The worst offenders are apparently the sociology, political science and philosophy departments, who refuse to teach out of any book that isn't current. The bookstores praise the hard science departments, such as mathematics and physics. This is offset by the fact that texts for such courses are higher in price initially, and are usually kept by students rather than resold.

In conclusion, I would like to emphasize that this is only a proposal, but it is one that can work if we get together on it now. I invite comments or criticism on it, but urge that we don't just sit on our hands and do nothing this time.

Rock concerts facing numerous limitations

To the Editor:

The ASMSU Pop Entertainment Committee appreciates feedback concerning its operations. Our office is always open for those who wish to come in and rap and learn where we are at and the various complexities with which we are confronted. For example, Mr. Richard Rexroad in his letter to the editor "Cosmic Entertainment," Feb. 22, 1972, appears to express concern that the music emphasis of a Jethro Tull, Byrds, James Gang, Grateful Dead (though he also includes other varying styles of music, Judy Collins, Sly, and the Guess Who) has not been represented this year and in this we agree.

Unfortunately, Pop Entertainment Committee or any other student group for that matter does not have unlimited dates from which to construct its yearly program - usually three dates in the fall, two to three in the winter, and three or four in the spring term averaging approximately nine dates per year. This provides little flexibility to book groups. We have placed firm bids for Traffic, Faces, Emerson, Lake and Palmer, Alice Cooper, etc. and wanted to engage the Airplane, but found they wouldn't be touring until fall. All the previous - named groups have toured year but were uanable to fit our spec dates into their plans. We had the by under contract and Columbia Records them to record during the time they to appear here. King, The 5th Dimension, Ike Tina Turner with Detroit, and Go Lightfoot have satisfied a large par these diverse tastes. With the exception Ike and Tina, these last five shows have sold out. However, we do recognize certain areas of music have been w neglected. Certainly hard rock and concerts need to be scheduled as so groups can appear on campus.

Incidently, credit for Al appearance here should go to the Marching Band.

Revitalize Social Sci, Ed

The College of Education and the College of Social Science are the two largest colleges in the University. Between them, over 30 per cent of all students, or nearly one out of every three are enrolled.

What are these two giants of degree programs, each with over 6,000 students, and where are they going? To compare them:

• The College of Education is large, it has spacious offices in a building that was completed in 1958 for the college to meet the needs of the '50s, needs that in contrast to most enterprizes, are smaller now than they were then.

A coffee lounge graces the fifth floor and the feeling is one of spaciousness which brings ease and a sense of importance to those visiting. And yet, there rings an emptiness in the vast corridors of Erickson Hall, a loss of direction plagues the college.

• In contrast, the offices of the College of Social Science are scattered across the campus where ever a spare room can be found. Usually small and overcrowded. through these offices the college attempts to define itself and struggles not to buckle under the pressure of too many students and too few resources.

A proposal has been made to build a new building to house the college, but it is not on this year's priority list, nor is it likely to be on any new list until the legislature decides to spend more on the construction of academic units.

 The goal of the College of Education in earlier years was merely to grind out teachers fast enough to fill the expanding classrooms of Michigan. We now produce fully one - half of the teachers that will be needed this year.

New directions? Experiments?

These are some attempts to change, and further emphasis is placed on quality rather than quantity and new means of evaluation and screening.

Better teachers? Who knows.

The college is branching out in all directions, trying to meet different deeds through different programs and new and ever more revolutionary techniques. Doesn't this indicate they are in

As Walter Adams, distinguished

professor of economics, said last week, 'We don't even know what makes kids

If they could discover that, they could solve many of their problems and offer a blueprint for education. Unfortunately, the emphasis seems to be on how to make kids learn rather than on what will make them

With an emphasis on quality, the College of Social Science is trying to avoid the mistakes that education has made. Because of its phenomenal growth it has already placed quotas on all of the "professional" degree granting programs in the college to insure that the quality of education students receive will make them attractive to employers.

 An area where the two colleges share a similarity is in the area of job placement for its graduates. Employment figures would seem to indicate that both are having a relatively harder time placing their graduate than other segments of the University.

The Multidisciplinary Program, which compromises over half the students in social science, poses the greatest problem in this area. These programs allow the student wide latitude in choosing a college career and allow him to define his own educational goals. But they provide few solid employment goals.

One graduate adviser in the program said things are so bad on the job market for their graduates that the college sent a memo to the advisers telling them to urge their students to learn a trade such as carpentry, or any type of work in which they can use their hands. In effect, the college is education in becoming a diploma m useless degrees.

Complacency should not b hallmark of either college, neither afford it. Nor can any unit multiversity if it hopes to survive viable institution.

A return to the vibrancy and enthu of education during its wild grow needed. The College of Social Science avoid the stagnation.

Perhaps a tightening of the would help them to focus their obj and return a sense of purpose.

Further a restriction on nonprod degrees should be instituted so that seriously anticipating employ following college won't find then the seriously anticipating employ following college won't find then the seriously anticipating employed by the seriously anticipating employed by the serious and the se

Detroit is a dying city and no the grave, according to Milton Taylor, professor of economics and coauthor of a new study on Detroit's fiscal crisis.

The study called "Detroit: Agenda for Fiscal Survival" has just been published by the MSU Institute for Community Development and Services. The coauthor is Richard Willits, Charlotte graduate student in economics.

Taylor, an expert on taxation, studied Detroit's fiscal situation for two years. He said some people in Detroit are calling the study the "rotten apple" study because of the cover design depicting Detroit as the rotten core of an apple. Taylor gave a copy of the study to Detroit Mayor Roman Gribbs last week. He said he thinks Gribbs is ignoring the city's real problems.

"Gribbs won't admit these agent actually solicits illegal problems. He thinks he's turned the corner. That's because he's running for office again," Taylor

EPC to develop report about proposed college

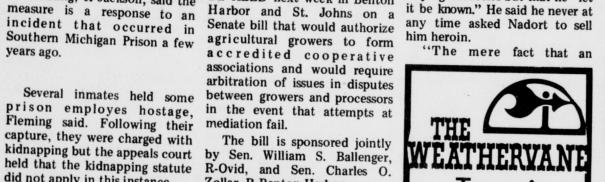

The Educational Policies Committee (EPC) will meet today to develop a set of recommendations for the provost on the proposed College of Urban Development and Social Change.

The meeting is not open to the public. Lester Manderscheid, EPC chairman, said the committee will begin meeting at 10 a.m. and hopes to complete work on the recommendations by 5 p.m.

The report is scheduled to go to the Academic Council Tuesday as an information item, Manderscheid said. If editing and reproduction of the report are not finished by Tuesday, the committee will report to the council on its progress, he added.

The board of trustees is expected to discuss the college at its March 17 meeting.

would require the federal government to initiate an income maintenance program in tax. He considers this idea

The second aspect requires changing the state's tax sharing formula to favor the core cities. One suggestion offered in the study is distribution of taxes inversely according to per capita income. Areas with more poor people would receive greater shares of the tax money.

Increased state aid would allow necessary improvement of education and other city services, Taylor said.

Finally he advocates an end to "exploitation" of Detroit by the suburbs. He said the city income tax rate should be changed so that nonresidents pay 1 per cent instead of the current 1/2 per cent. Residents now pay 2 per cent.

At the same time that he advocates this program, Taylor said he is doubtful the reforms will be enacted or that they can really save the city.

"I'm pessimistic. Detroit doesn't have the votes. Suburbia controls state government and it also controls the Congress. They don't have the votes on any level of government," he said. But Taylor said he believes the reform is essential even if it cannot ultimately solve Detroit's problems.

"You can't abandon a million and a half people. I want to prevent Detroit from becoming an even worse jungle than it is. But I don't think anything can really be done to save Detroit," he said. The study is available from the Institute for Community Development and Services in Kellogg Center.

IN HOUSE PANEL DEBATE

Antibusing move blasted charged Wednesday.

Commission on Civil Rights, The committee is in the third day of hearings, which may last several weeks, on antibusing amendments sponsored by Lent and other congressmen. Hearings were begun after

Rep. Norman S. Lent, R -

Lent, a first term congressman whose political reputation is largely based on antibusing activities in the New York Senate, gathered 146 of the 218 signatures on a discharge petition necessary to bring the amendment before the House without consideration by the committee.

Lent's amendment reads: "Section 1 - No public school children shall, because of his race, creed or color, be assigned Lent admits the bill has "very little chance" of being reported out of committee. He has publicly charged that the hearings on the bill have been a "farce and a charade." This comment drew angry response from committee members.

Were the bill to pass the House, Senate leaders have made it clear they would oppose any antibusing constitutional amendment.

If such a constitutional amendment were to ever receive two - thirds support of both houses, it would require ratification from three - fourths of the states.

In his testimony, Lent said court ordered busing, which is "making a complete shambles of the nation's public school system," must be countered by a constitutional amendment outlaw, for purpos because courts have ignored integregation: pairing of segregated sch rememdy.

"If it was wrong in 1954 to assign a black child to a Cellar noted that amendment would el race conscious remedies desegregate schools. "If you are going to eli as the individual rights children who would have bused," Lent replied. Hesburgh testified adoption of Lent's ame "would be a major backward in the quest fo rights for all Americans." Hesburgh said amendment would no strike at busing, but wou inferior quality, tr provisions for minority d and redrawing of atte lines "no matter how Indiana's five time Olympic gold medal winner Mark Spitz (left) was named Wednesday as winner of the Sullivan Award as the top amateur athlete of the nation.

Five finals this evening highlight the first day of competition at the Big Ten Swimming and Diving Championships in the Men's IM pool. Tonight's session, which gets underway at 7:30 p.m., features the finals of the 500-freestyle, 200-individual medley, 50-freestyle, one meter springboard diving and the 400-medley relay. Time trials for each event except the relay will take place during this afternoon's session, which begins at 1 p.m., though the diving preliminaries and semifinals are scheduled for a 2 p.m. starting time.

Meet favorite Indiana will have the defending champs in four of the five events, as Mart Spitz, Gary Hall and John Kinsella will all see action.

Spitz will be making his first appearance since he was named the 1971 recipient of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy Tuesday given to the nation's outstanding amateur athlete by the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU).

It marked the second straight year that an IU swimmer has won the award as Kinsella was honored by the AAU in 1970.

Spitz is the defending champ in the 50-freestyle, and he also currently holds the Big Ten record of :20.83 in that event.

Purdue's Steve Stasukaitus is back after placing fourth last season as are Ohio State's Jim Beahren (fifth) and another Indiana tanker, sixth place

Hoosier teamate Bill Baird (third) returns as do Wisconsin's Rawdon Peterson and Michigan's Ray McCullough, who also placed in the top six and will challenge Kinsella.

Defending champ Hall leads a large contingent of returning Hoosier swimmers in the 200-individual medley. Hall will be joined by Mike Stamm (second), Larry Barbiere (third), and Pat O'Conner (fifth).
