Inmates begin negotiations on demands in D.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rebellious prisoners at the District of Columbia jail late Wednesday afternoon dropped their demand for immediate release and began negotiating with authorities more than 12 hours after seizing a cellblock and taking at least 10 hostages.

Discussion began in the rotunda of the jail after authorities permitted relatives of the prisoners, inmates of nearby Lorton Prison, Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., and others to talk with the inmates in an effort to quell the disturbance.

One correctional officer was reported beaten by the inmates and was later treated, authorities said.

Julian Tepper, a local attorney known for his efforts in behalf of the prison inmates, described the changed mood of the dissidents after meeting with a group of about 15 perisoners inside the jail.

Tepper said the talks centered over what he described as inhuman conditions in the facility and the delays he said many inmates are experiencing in getting their cases

Tepper said also a judge was standing by to rule on any petition the prisoners might want to file.

The uprising broke out in the early morning hours in Cellblock 1 of the jail but by late afternoon approximately 150 of 180 inmates who took an active part in the disturbance had given themselves up.

Among the hostages was D.C. Corrections Commissioner Kenneth Hardy. He was reported to be at the negotiating table along with Chisholm; D.C. School Board Chairman Marion Barry; a parent of an inmate; and Pettey Green, a former convict who has established a local reputation for his efforts to help persons with criminal records.

Asked if the inmates had dropped their demand for immediate releases, in exchange for the hostages' lives, Tepper said, "We're talking about other things now."

Hardy was taken hostage before down when he and a local reporter entered the cellblock to talk with the prisoners.

There was no firmword on the number of hostages held by the inmates. Authorities said at least 10 and possibly 12 or 13 were confined in the cellblock at gunpoint.

Police continued to ring the jail near Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Southeast Washington. But the mood of the disturbance appeared to observers to have changed dramatically from the early morning when the rioting inmates demanded their immediate release.

Study finds legislature hides votes

By RAY ANDERSON State News Staff Writer

The Michigan legislature is denying the public its right to know how it votes, the Michigan Youth Politics Institute charged Wednesday upon release of a study of 93 major bills voted on during the 1971 - 72 session.

"It is so difficult and expensive for the public to obtain the voting records of state legislators that it becomes impossible to keep the legislators accountable," Michael Henley, researcher for the vote - study project, said. "With this study," Henley added, "voters will finally have access to this type of information."

The institute is a nonpartisan East Lansing - based organization whose aim is to increase voter awareness of Henley claimed that the difficulties his staff encountered in trying to obtain information for the study "amounts to a denial of access to the actual records of public officials."

By JOHN LINDSTROM State News Staff Writer

The College of Urban Development's undergraduate program should be fully operational by fall 1973, Robert L. Green, director of the Center for Urban affairs and acting dean of the college, said Tuesday. 'Work is progressing quite rapidly,' he said. "This college could well be the beginning of the urban land - grant thrust in this country."

If the undergraduate program opens in fall 1973, Green said, the first graduating class could be anytime from spring 1975 to spring 1977. The college was approved by the board of trustees last spring.

The structure committee has done most of the work on the college thus far. The committee is identifying the thrust of the college, Green said, and will report to President Wharton by the end of fall on the college's structure, extension possibilities and its incorporation of courses already offered in the University.

"As a member of the committee, I hope that the college's structure will be problem oriented," Green said. "I hope that the college will keep abreast of the problems in America.'

The college will include a Department of Race and Ethnic Studies and a Department of Urban and Metropolitan Studies.

"We need to teach young people how to cope with the day - to - day struggles of living in a rat - infested environment," he said. "We want our students to have a commitment to utilizing their skills."

India threatens project end

India is threatening to terminate a secret project in military communication, financed by the United States, unless Washington promises to remove its embargo on military sales to India.

The project originally was intended as a buffer against a possible Chinese attack on India.

One informed source said Wednesday that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has approved the the termination papers "for the convenience of the government of India." The papers will be served, the informant said, if at least oral assurance is not forthcoming.

Antibusing bill stalled

A two-thirds majority was required to put the Senate's antifilibuster rule into effect and as was the case Tuesday, the move fell 10 votes short.

High court to rule on life

Justice Potter Stewart declared Wednesday that the Supreme Court will have to uphold the state antiabortion laws if it decides that an unborn child is a person with constitutional rights.

But Stewart added that up to now a fetus has never been considered to be a person.

Should the high court veer from past thinking and grant constitutional rights to unborn children, the justice added, then state laws which allow abortion freely would have to be viewed as "grossly unconstitutional," allowing the killing of people.

Ex-senators honored

The Senate passed a resolution Wednesday naming its two office buildings in honor of deceased senators.

The old senate office building authorized in 1904 was designated the Richard Brevard Russell Office Building in honor of the Georgia Democrat who died Jan. 21, 1971.

The new Senate office building, authorized in 1948, was named for Everett McKinley Dirksen, Illinois Republican, who served 16 years in the House and nearly 19 years in the Senate before his death Sept. 7, 1969.

His body was found Tuesday floating in the river near a small rock island, only about 150 feet below his home.

After lengthy discussion was correct, but a conflict it was decided to table the report until the next council meeting. If the student unit ultimately endorses the recommendations, they would have to be passed by the Academic Council, the Academic Senate and the board of trustees before becoming part of the Bylaws for Academic Governance. The other hot issue discussed at the meeting was the election of the student member to the Steering Committee.

According to the bylaws, the student members of the Academic Council - in effect the Elected Student Council - are to choose from among their group one representative to serve on the Steering Committee for a one - year term.

Clyde Best, the student elected to that office in January, claimed his term would not end until Dec. 31 and any attempt to replace him would violate the bylaws.

Wharton pointed out Best arose because a change in the bylaws last spring indicates all terms of office are to coincide with the academic year, with a student's term running from Sept. 1 to Aug. 31. The problem was resolved when the student council passed a resolution stating that an election would be held in late December and that the representative elected would serve until the end of June.

The resolution also states that in the future the election will be held during spring term.

FBI links guard with buggingcase

(C) 1972 WASHINGTON STAR-NEWS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11 - A former congressional investigator was employed by Watergate bugging suspect and by the security frim guarding the building which houses the Democratic National Committee, the FBI says.

Louis James Russell, 54, has told FBI agents he was across the street from the Watergate a few hours before his boss, James McCord, then the chief security adviser for the Nixon campaign, and four others were arrested inside the Democratic headquarters.

Russell, chief investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee when Richard Nixon was a member two decades ago, said he was having a late-night snack at a Howard Johnson's restaurant because he had a "sentimental" attachment to the place. Russell said he once went with a girl who used the Watergate beauty salon.

"We often ate lunch there at the Howard Johnson's," Russell said, "and I went back that night to think about the good times

In an interview last night, Russell said FBI agents have "tried to get me to say I was a lookout that night, but I don't know anything about what McCord was doing in the Watergate." (McCord allegedly used a room on the fourth floor of the motel to monitor bugging devices on the phones at Democratic headquarters.)

Russell said FBI agents told him "they didn't believe my story." However, Russell said, he was never called before a grand

He worked for the General Security Services Co., whose clients include the Watergate office building. F. Kelly Chamberlain, chief of the guard force, said Russell did private investigations for the firm, but had no responsibility for Watergate security.

Chamberlain said Russell worked for General Security for about a year before leaving last April.

Russell first went to work part-time for McCord last February, running security checks on personnel hired by the Nixon Re-Election Committee.

Russell told the Star-News Tuesday the personnel apparently had been hired without being checked. His job was to run background investigations on employes already on the payroll because there was a theft problem at Nixon campaign headquarters.

Political units may feel office space squeeze

The groups likely to be refused office space this year by the ASMSU space allocations committee are temporary, political groups.

Ed Grafton, chairman of the space allocations committee, said that these groups will only be active until the election in November and ASMSU does not want the offices vacated then.

Petitions will also be refused from groups which do not serve the campus exclusively, Grafton said. Grafton said that Residence Halls Assn.

(RHA) is the only student group which is certain to retain its office each year. All other groups including those which presently occupy offices must petition the committee.

There are 25 offices in the Student Services Building which the committee will allocate. Grafton said that normally at least 50 groups request offices. He emphasized that ASMSU will attempt this year to search for office space in other parts of the campus if there is an overload of petitioning groups.

Petitioning for office space will end Friday. Petitions may be obtained at 334 Student Services Bldg.

Little can be done about this and rightfully so. They had been election, but changes can be made for the future to avoid unnecessary delays. There are at least two alternative solutions.

> The first would be an honest attempt among all federal, state and local officials at greater cooperation. When discrepancies exist between federal and state registration requirements, state officials should be responsible for informing local officials of those varying regulations, since state officials are in the best position to know of the variations.

The second suggestion would be simpler in the long run. Michigan could bring its own residency requirements into line with federal guidelines to cut down on confusion. Most states conform to the federal 30 - day residency requirement for voting registration; Michigan sets the fifth Friday before the election as the voter registration deadline. Coordination between state and federal regulations would speed the voting process for future elections.

Voter registration is a necessary tool in the voting process. It should never be obstacle for citizens expressing regard higher education. their opinions at the polls on Election Day.

POINT OF VIEW

McGovern--our last chance

By PAUL PRATT Bay City sophomore

I am in vehement disagreement with Michael Fox's article in Friday's State News ("Personal tools for peace outweigh political means").

In my opinion, he fails to distinguish a utopian world without war from an immediate end to the Indochina war. He is correct to state that peace (in the first sense) will not result from the election of any politician, nor will it come without a profound change in the nationalistic viewpoints of most of the world's people. However, used in the second sense (an end to the Indochina war), I believe peace is possible, and that it is only delayed further by calls such as Fox's to desert the political process and carry on business as usual.

How, may I ask, is an end to the war brought closer by "example and education" on the part of the store clerk, who may well be selling the products of a conglomerate intimately involved in the U.S. war effort; on the part of the banker, who may be helping the conglomerate invest its war profits; or the factory worker, who may be building its war products?

A personal commitment to peace, thoughtfully expressed, may be useful to spur consciousness, just as the demonstrations were. Neither, however, will initiate the actions which are necessary to end both the carnage we are inflicting on the area suffering.

These actions include stopping the bombing, pulling all the troops out of Indochina, and ceasing to supply weapons for Thieu and his brother generals in Laos and Cambodia; and they can be ordered by the President or Congress. To suggest that since these two branches haven't taken the necessary steps to peace, they are therefore incapable of doing so, is unthinking to say the least.

It is true that Congress, as a body, has generally seemed as warlike as the president, but accounts of debates on antiwar legislation reveal that such legislation has usually been defeated not on the basis of prowar feeling, but always deserving of unstinting supporting foreign affairs. "Don't tie President's hands" is not an inher prowar slogan; and I do not bein that Congress would reverse docile precedent in order to e (over the President's veto) resumption of the bombing re-escalation of the war after President ordered it stopped.

The same applies to the de budget; should Congress develop superhawk mood, the President w still be likely to retain the upper he by refusing to spend the limit authorization or by appropriations in excess of what wanted.

The problem then is not one congenital inability on the part of President to end the war, but one having the wrong person in position. Obtaining a President will order a complete end to the military role in Indochina will only done through political action. course, the election of Sen. Gen. McGovern as President is no panao It is, nevertheless, the only hope of Indochinese for avoidance of f more years' terror from the skies.

They will not care if McGovern elected for the wrong reason apparent personality" as Fox puts But without the active support those who say they are for peace, won't win at all.

That, in final analysis, is w irritates me so much about For article. The complacen above-the-battle stance he takes wor directly against the only chance have to halt the violence barbarism of the Indochina war. " may never be this close again."

Political ads make debut

It seems to me that the men in charge of making up advertising campaigns for our presidential candidates could do just as well if they would take the TV commercials that are now on the air and paraphrase them for their own use.

For example, I could see Pat Nixon cooking a steak over a campfire. She says to the audience, "I've been First Lady for almost four years and yet I feel younger now than when Dick first took the job as President. That's because I exercise, get eight hours sleep, eat right and take iron for my blood. Dick treats me better now then he did when I used to wear a cloth coat."

Just then we see Richard Nixon walking toward Pat. He's dressed in a plaid wool shirt and blue jeans. He comes behind her and kisses her on the neck. Then he says to the camera, "My wife, I think I'll keep her."

Another one could show Sen. McGovern and his wife in their home.

McGovern says, "I don't feel like going out and campaigning today. I just seem so sluggish and tired these days."

Eleanor looks at him and asks, "Is it uhh... irregularity?"

McGovern nods his head sheepishly. "I have just the thing for it." She

Agnew says, "But I use a deodorant."

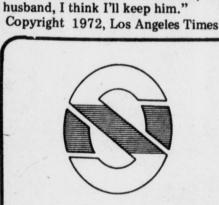

"Yes," says Arnie, holding up a can. "but maybe you need a dry one that lasts all day. When you're out campaigning, most deodorants won't give you 24-hour protection." Agnew takes the can from Arnie.

We cut to Agnew on a college campus. A group of kids, all with beards and wearing beads, are crowded around and they're laughing. "We want Spiro! Queen

To the Editor: Open letter to the Homecoming Queen Selection Committee: We were asked to contribute to this university's general preparation for homecoming, by the selection of a woman of our floor to vie for the title of queen. A vote was taken and the unanimous decision was a boycott of a practice that we consider to be a highly sexist institution. We feel that the women of MSU have a far greater role to play in today's society than the trite character of a beauty queen or, in a larger sense, an object of American opinion.

The boycott of the selection of a homecoming queen is only a small gesture and example of our feelings concerning the treatment of American women. We have been made to stand on an inactive pedestal of male opinion for too many years and we are proud to say that this day is slowly drawing to an end. Change of the system can be offered only through resisting the established rules, and we vehemently resist being exploited through such sexist male - oriented channels. We feel that the selection of a homecoming queen does not truly represent the women of MSU so we feel that we must oppose this action by a boycott of its principles.

Michigan called key to McGovern victory

By CRAIG GEHRING State News Staff Writer

Pierre Salinger, special adviser to Sen. George McGovern, stopped in Lansing Wednesday in a continuing effort by the Democratic nominee to win the Michigan vote in November.

Salinger's visit closely followed McGovern's own two-day swing in the state Monday and Tuesday and preceded the scheduled appearance of vice-presidential nominee, Sargent Shriver, on campus today.

Salinger told an audience of 200 gathered for a $10-a-plate luncheon fund-raiser, that McGovern will win in November and Michigan is a key state in the victory plans.

"Regardless of what the polls may say and regardless of what we may read in the press, George McGovern is going to be elected in November." Salinger told his audience.

Salinger discounted the national polls by saying they do not reflect the way the president is elected. He said the polls include states where McGovern is far behind but do not figure into the overall campaign

Salinger referred later in a press conference to a California poll which shows McGovern trailing President Nixon by only 4 per cent in that state.

Reformed Church and the American

Baptist Student Foundation helped

Ford and Bell will speak at the rally

He said the poll also indicated McGovern is leading in Los Angeles

Salinger indicated the California results are typical of McGovern's position in nearly all the states they consider important.

The former press secretary to John J. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson denied the Democrats are writing off the South to Nixon. "We are just being practical, that's all," he explained.

When pressed by newsmen about McGovern's chances in Michigan, Salinger said he was "optimistic." He added that while they would hope to win here, McGovern could still win if he fails to carry the electorate.

"The Detroit News polls showed we halved the margin in 17 days," Salinger said. "I am confident the next one will show him narrowing the gap even farther."

Salinger also said that what he termed "the greatest level of activity for a Democratic candidate in 20 years," is being missed by the national

"This activity has to have an impact on Election Day," Salinger predicted. To the delight of his partisan audience, the long-time campaigner ripped into the Nixon administration. He said the Republicans are carrying out "an abominable snow job" on the American public.

Salinger attacked those who have labeled McGovern a radical. He said McGovern "is talking about the same American vurtues the Democratic party has always stood for."

Recalling that Nixon labeled John Kennedy a radical in 1960, Salinger remarked, "There is no way anyone can run against Richard Nixon without being labeled a radical."

Salinger ridiculed those administration officals, who in his words, "Say you can't vote for George McGovern because he is wobbly on the

Ed Shuttlesworth

MSU-'M' clash features a battle of top fullbacks

State News Sports Writer

Football is a game of inches. Sometimes they come in big bunches like when Michigan fullback Ed Shuttlesworth carries the ball. Sometimes they come in small bunches like when MSU fullback Arnold Morgado carries the ball.

Of course the degree of inches gained is determined by the different philosophies of the offense of the two teams. Michigan runs from the power-I and can afford to shove Shuttlesworth into the line with the pigskin from 20 to 30 times per game. MSU runs from the wishbone set and the fullback is a secondary ball carrier, used only to keep the defense off balance.

Michigan likes to grind out the yardage, punching the ball into the line and eating up as much of the clock as possible. Shuttlesworth fits into Bo Schembechler's offense nicely, thank you, for he punches into that line and keeps punching into it. He has carried for 390 yards in the Wolverines' four games thus far and has lugged the football 74 times. He is averaging over five per carry though his longest bolt from scrimmage has only been 21 yards.

Last year, Shuttlesworth gained 877 yards on the ground but was only second on the team, taking runner - up honors to Bill Taylor and his 1,350 yards. Many people felt that everyone was keying on Taylor and Shuttlesworth was picking up a lot of coat tail yardage. But he is supplying his won threats this season and though he keys the entire offense, a defense can't concentrate solely on stopping him to stop Michigan.

"Michigan has great halfback speed to complement Shuttlesworth's power," coach Duffy Daugherty said. "You've got to respect that speed and also the potential that Franklin has on the option play. These guys make it a little easier for Shuttlesworth to maneuver.'

Morgado lacks the brutal force that Shuttlesworth confronts the defenses with, but is more than adequate with his speed. Morgado just last week was installed as the starting Spartan fullback after impressive final quarter performance against Georgia Tech and Southern California. He responded with over 50 yards against Notre Dame in his initial varsity start.

"We didn't get a real good look at Morgado during the spring drills because of a pulled hamstring," offensive backfield coach Gordie Serr said.

In limited action over the first three games of the season and with his one start last week, Morgado is presently second in total offense on the team and is averaging 4.9 yards per carry, tops on the team.

May, hoping to sidestep the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals' refusal to consider an appeal of a segregation ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Stephen J. Roth in Detroit.

Roth had ruled in September 1971, that Detroit schools, two-thirds were segregated actions and inaction by Court of Appeals in including the Detroit Board of Education.

Kelley appealed that ruling to the appellate court, but was refused a review of the case Feb. 23 because Roth had not issued a final order ready for appeal under federal court rules.

That decision led to Kelley's appeal to the high court in May. Kelley wanted Supreme Court to reverse the appeals court decision and hear an immediate review of the Detroit case. So the Supreme Court was considering Kelley's five-month-old appeal when it ruled Tuesday, and several significant things have happened in the case since

Roth set up a special panel to draw up a remedy for the segregation which he found, and the panel decided upon a massive busing plan involving Detroit and 52 suburban school districts.

For the sake of appeals, Roth declared the findings

KALAZAMOO - Sen. George McGovern, national polls say, is losing support among college students, but those from Western Michigan University might find that hard to believe. About 10,000 of the college's 21,000 students squeezed their way into the university fieldhouse Tuesday to hear the South Dakota senator. Many sat in cliff-like suspension overhanging the balcony.

Time and again they interrupted McGovern's 30-minute speech with cheers and applause, making it the most enthusiastic reception of his latest 2-day swing through the Motor State.

As McGovern stepped up to the podium, a dozen centrally located students hoisted up pro-Nixon signs, provoking thunderous boos from the crowd. But the boos turned into laughter when McGovern pleaded:

"We ought to welcome them because it's obvious they're never going to see their candidate. He's still in the White House resting comfortably on his Gallup polls.

The laughter increased when a number of pro-McGovern signs went up, reading "Don't Let Dick Screw Us Again," "Thieu's Thru" and Nixon's often repeated words of Oct. 9, 1968: "Those who have had a chance for four years and could not produce peace should not be given another chance."

BLASTS NIXON ATTITUDE

Jane Hart criticizes political chauvinism

State News Staff Writer

In an interview with the tokenism. State News Wednesday, Jane Hart, wife of Michigan Democratic Sen. Philip Hart, blasted President Nixon's attitude towards women.

"We need a President who does not categorize a woman as a servant and has been "thoroughly (who does not) welcome encouraging" in her political cabinet member's wives as endeavors. Besides 'the women who hold the hands of the men,' " Hart, who was on campus to income taxes until "we stop publicly endorse Sen. George McGovern, said.

Though he is unable to estimate the cost of the refurbishing, Peters hopes the steam system will provide winter heat for another five years. The steam system, installed in 1946, was designed to last only 10 years and is now in bad shape, Howard A. Smith, maintenance superintendent, said.

syndrome affected him. In 1960, he decided to publish a book that would take 10 years to complete. During those years of preparation, Larrowe said, he felt pressured to publish chapters from the book to make sure that he would receive salary increases.

He said in the 10 years of preparation, his salary "fell slightly behind" because his book had not been published.

According to Larrowe, personal bias and opinions of department heads also play a role in advancement.

"The determining of salary gains is arbitrary and decided not so much with publications but personal bias," he said.

This is the standard response from faculty interviewed. But department heads or deans interviewed usually answer differently.

Ziegler told a White House briefing he did not believe Kissinger "has been in touch with French officials" about the incident because "the State Department is handling this."

When Kissinger arrived in Paris last weekend for what developed as the most extensive talks ever with the North Vietnamese, he was accompanied by Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., who returned last Wednesday from consultations with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu. This fueled speculation - never flatly denied by the White House - that the sessions were centering on the make - up of a coalition Saigon government.

chairman of the Dept. of Humanities, believes teaching receives greater emphasis in rewarding faculty. "We evaluate faculty by three things: teaching ability first, service to the department in curricular development or committees, and activities of a scholar, which include publishing." Thompson denies personal favoritism or bias comes into the faculty evaluation system.

"The department chairman bends over backwards to avoid personal opinion," Thompson said.

Edward Carlin, dean of University College, says teaching is the top quality considered in faculty advancement. But because the only way one professor can evaluate another's teaching is through hearsay, some personal judgments are used in evaluating.

Carlin emphasizes the point, though, that his personal opinion is not the sole means of deciding. The department chairman, and advisory committee offer their opinions and with these evaluations plus student evaluations and faculty feedback, the decision is made.

"This process offers a fairly reasonable assessment of the faculty member,"

Both Thompson and be less pressure to do so. He plays in the public sphere. publish or not. The faculty member tends to disagree with the department head on publishing or perish. Many feel there should be a de emphasis on the publishing role with teaching getting most attention.

William Derman, asst. professor of anthropology, said he feels the present evaluation system is a farce, because teaching is just as important as publishing. He said publishing as an evaluation is deceiving.

"Anyone can publish anything," Derman said. "The quality of it doesn't matter because it's number of publications that count."

He agrees student evaluations are useful but not in the "present formats." The present form, he says, does not really evaluate an instructor's necessary qualities.

Hawkins said he favors publishing as one means of evaluation but there should

The 65 - page study includes a description of 93 bills, the date they were acted on, the individual vote of a nonpartisan service for interested each legislator and the total vote.

The bills are broken down into 16 broad categories, including drugs, youth, women, civil rights, ecology, education and consumer affairs.

The study also includes the current status of these bills, though some study's coverage ends with the summer

Henley emphasized that the study is constituents. He likened it to a small Ralph Nader report and said the study will provide the voter with a more accurate measuring stick to judge the competence of his legislators. Henley said copies of the study have been given to newspapers, libraries and education institutes. It is available to the public for $10.

Included in the study are the voting records of Rep. Jim Brown, R -Okemos, and Sen. Philip Pittenger, R -Lansing. Both legislators' districts include East Lansing.

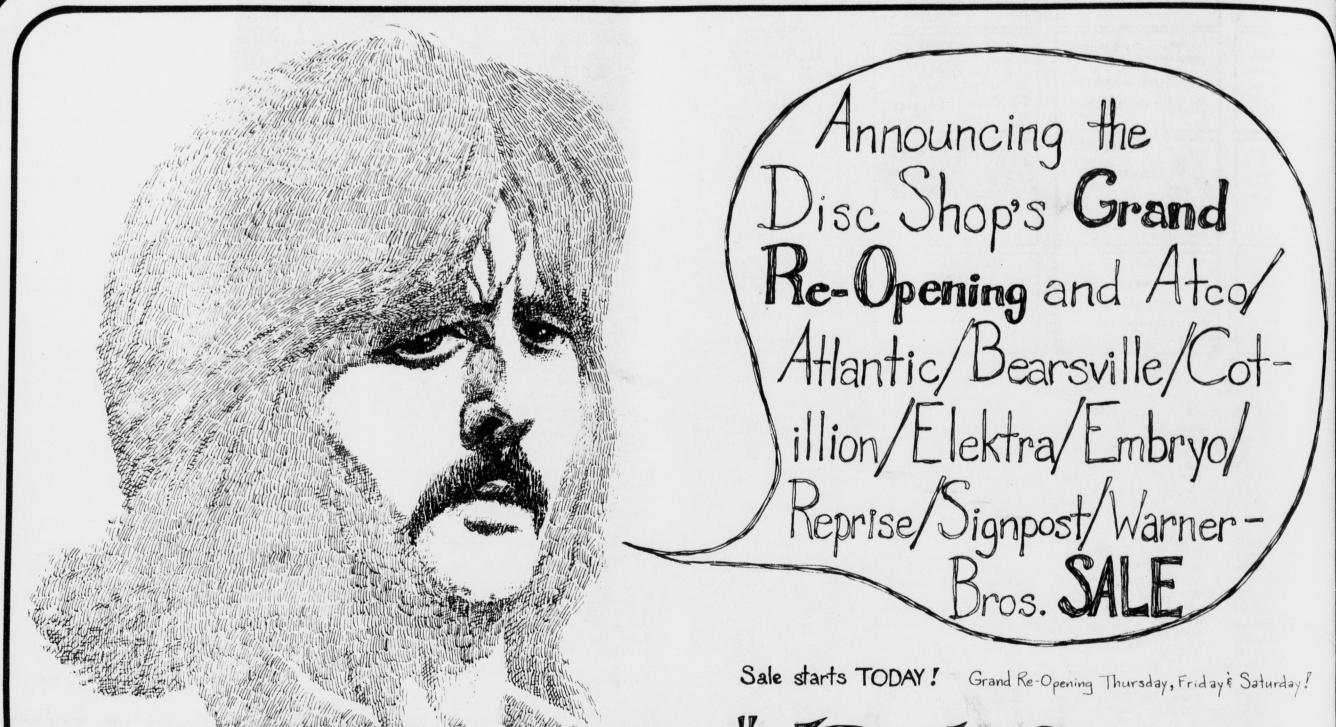

Brown is not running for re election this year and Pittenger's term does not run out until 1974.
